(i) TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS.—All functions and assets of the Vietnam Education Foundation are transferred to the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the Department of State. The Assistant Secretary for Educational and Cultural Affairs may hire personnel who were employed by the Vietnam Education Foundation on the date before the date of the enactment of this Act, and such other personnel as may be necessary to support the Foundation, in accordance with part III of title 5, United States Code.

(j) SUPPORT FOR INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT IN VIETNAM.—

(1) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of State, acting through the Assistant Secretary for Educational and Cultural Affairs, is authorized to award 1 or more grants to institutions of higher education (as defined in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001(a))), which shall be used to implement graduate-level academic and public policy management leadership programs in Vietnam. Such programs shall—

(A) support Vietnam’s equitable and sustainable socioeconomic development;

(B) feature both teaching and research components;

(C) promote the development of institutional capacity in Vietnam;

(D) operate according to core principles of good governance; and

(E) enjoy autonomy from the Vietnamese government.

(2) APPLICATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Each institution of higher education desiring the grant under this section shall submit an application to the Secretary of State at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Secretary may reasonably require.

(B) COMPETITIVE BASIS.—Each grant authorized under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis.

(3) SOURCE OF GRANT FUNDS.—The Secretary of State may use funds made available to the Vietnam Education Foundation under section 207(c) of the Vietnam Education Foundation Act of 2000 (22 U.S.C. 2452 note) for the grant awarded under this section.

(k) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section and the amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date that is 90 days after the date of the enactment of this section.

Subtitle C—Consular Services and Related Matters

SEC. 231. PERMANENT AUTHORITY TO ASSESS PASSPORT SURCHARGE.

Section 1 of the Passport Act of June 4, 1920 (22 U.S.C. 214; chapter 223, 41 Stat. 750), is amended by—

- (1) striking subsection (b)(2); and
- (2) redesignating subsection (b)(3) as subsection (b)(2).

SEC. 232. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING ADDITIONAL CONSULAR SERVICES IN MOLDOVA.

It is the sense of Congress that in light of serious problems with human trafficking as well as the exceptionally high volume of applications by citizens of Moldova to the United States Summer Work Travel program, the Secretary of State should make every effort to enhance consular services at the United States embassy in Chisinau, Moldova, including considering assigning an additional consular officer to such post, and providing enhanced anti-trafficking training, especially related to student exchange visas and other vulnerable categories of visa applicants.

SEC. 233. REFORMING REFUGEE PROCESSING.

(a) WORLDWIDE PROCESSING PRIORITY SYSTEM.—

(1) EMBASSY REFERRALS.—The Secretary of State shall expand training of United States embassy and consular personnel to ensure that appropriate United States embassies and consulates are equipped and enabled to refer to the United States refugee admissions program aliens in urgent need of resettlement.

(2) NGO REFERRALS.—The Secretary shall expand training of, and communication with, nongovernmental organizations that provide assistance to displaced and persecuted persons to enable such organizations to refer to the United States refugee admissions program aliens in urgent need of resettlement.

(b) REFORM OF THE REFUGEE CONSULTATION PROCESS.—Section 207 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1157) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2), by adding at the end the following new sentence: “In the event that a fiscal year begins without such determination having been made, there is authorized to be admitted in the first quarter of such fiscal year 25 percent of the number of refugees fixed by the President in the previous fiscal year’s determination, and any refugees admitted under this sentence shall be counted toward the President’s determination when it is made.”; and

(2) in subsection (e), in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking “discussions in person” and inserting “discussions in person, to be commenced not later than June 1 of each year.”.

(c) FAMILY REUNIFICATION.—

(1) MULTIPLE FORMS OF RELIEF.—Applicants for admission as refugees shall be permitted to simultaneously pursue admission under any other visa categories for which such applicants may be eligible.

(2) SEPARATED CHILDREN.—In the case of a child under the age of 18 who has been separated from the birth or adoptive parents of such child and who is living under the care of an alien who has been approved for admission to the United States as a refugee, such child shall be, if it is in the best interest of such child to be placed with such alien in the United States, admitted as a refugee provided such child is otherwise admissible as described in section 207(c)(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1157(c)(3)).

(3) CHILDREN OF REFUGEE SPOUSES.—For the purposes of sections 207(c)(2)(A) and 208(b)(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1157(c)(2)(A) and 1158(b)(3)), if a refugee or asylee spouse proves that such spouse is the biological or adoptive parent of a child, such child shall be eligible to accompany or follow to join such parent.

(d) ERMA ACCOUNT.—Section 2 of the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962 (22 U.S.C. 2601) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking “President” and inserting “Secretary of State”; and

(B) in paragraph (2), in the second sentence—

(i) by striking “to the President”; and

(ii) by striking “$100,000,000” and inserting “$200,000,000”; and

(2) in subsection (d), by striking “President” and inserting “Secretary of State”.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section, including the amendments made by this section.

(2) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section may be construed to reduce funds or services for other refugee assistance or resettlement.

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section, and the amendments made by this section, shall take effect on the first day of the first fiscal year that begins after the date of the enactment of this section.

SEC. 234. ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND CULTURAL AWARENESS TRAINING FOR APPROVED REFUGEE APPLICANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State shall establish overseas refugee training programs to provide English as a second language, cultural orientation, and work orientation training for refugees who have been approved for admission to the United States before their departure for the United States.

(b) DESIGN AND IMPLEMENTATION.—In designing and implementing the pilot training programs referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary shall consult with or utilize both—

(1) nongovernmental or international organizations with direct ties to the United States refugee resettlement program; and

(2) nongovernmental or international organizations with appropriate expertise in developing curriculum and teaching English as a second language.

(c) IMPACT ON PROCESSING TIMES.—The Secretary shall ensure that such training programs occur within current processing times and do not unduly delay the departure for the United States of refugees who have been approved for admission to the United States.

(d) TIMELINE FOR IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) INITIAL IMPLEMENTATION.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall ensure that such training programs are operating in at least three refugee processing regions.

(2) ADDITIONAL IMPLEMENTATION.—Not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall notify the appropriate congressional committees that such training programs are operating in five refugee processing regions.

(e) GAO REPORT.—Not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study on the implementation of this section, including an assessment of the quality of English as a second language curriculum and instruction, the benefits of the orientation and English as a second language training program to refugees, and recommendations on whether such programs should be continued, broadened, or modified, and shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the findings of such study.

(f) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to require that a refugee participate in such a training program as a precondition for the admission to the United States of such refugee.

SEC. 235. IRAQI REFUGEES AND INTERNALLY DISPLACED PERSONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President shall develop and implement policies and strategies to address the protection, resettlement, and assistance needs of Iraqi refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs), foster long-term solutions for stabilizing the lives of such refugees and IDPs, monitor the development and implementation of assistance strategies to countries in the Middle East that are hosting refugees from Iraq, encourage the Government of Iraq to actively engage the problem of displaced persons and refugees and monitor the Government of Iraq’s resolution of the problem, and ensure that budget requests to Congress are sufficient to meet an appropriate United States contribution to the needs of Iraqi refugees, IDPs within Iraq, and other refugees in Iraq.

(b) INTERAGENCY PROCESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall establish an interagency working group to carry out the goals of subsection (a) by facilitating interagency coordination to develop and implement policies to address the needs of Iraqi refugees and IDPs.

(2) COMPOSITION.—The interagency working group shall consist of appropriate high-ranking officials from the National Security Council, the Department of State, the Department of Homeland Security, the United States Agency for International Development, and such other agencies as the President may determine.

(3) ROLE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.—The Secretary of State shall serve as principal liaison with the Government of Iraq, its neighboring refugee hosting countries, and the international community to solicit and direct bilateral and multilateral contributions to address the needs of Iraqi refugees, IDPs, and returned refugees as well as with nongovernmental organizations working for and on behalf of displaced Iraqis.

(c) INCREASE IN REFUGEE PROCESSING CAPACITY.—The Secretary of State should, subject to the availability of appropriations for such purpose, seek to substantially increase the resources available to support the processing of such applicants in Iraq.

(d) HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE.—The United States should seek to ensure that—

(1) other countries make contributions to the United Nations High Commissioner on Refugees (UNHCR) and to other international organizations assisting Iraqi refugees and IDPs;

(2) the United States continues to make contributions that are sufficient to fund not less than 50 percent of the amount requested by the UNHCR and such other international organizations in each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011; and

(3) the Government of Iraq makes significant contributions to UNHCR and to other international organizations assisting Iraqi refugees and IDPs.

(e) STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING ENCOURAGING VOLUNTARY RETURNS.—It shall be the policy of the United States to encourage Iraqi refugees to return to Iraq only when conditions permit safe, sustainable returns on a voluntary basis with the coordination of the UNHCR and the Government of Iraq.

(f) INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION.—The Secretary of State shall work with the international community, including governments hosting the refugees, international organizations, nongovernmental organizations, and donors, to develop a long-term, comprehensive international strategy for assistance and solutions for Iraqi refugees and IDPs, and to provide—

(1) a comprehensive assessment of the needs of Iraqi refugees and IDPs, and the needs of the populations that host such refugees and IDPs;

(2) assistance to international organizations assisting IDPs and vulnerable persons in Iraq and Iraqi refugees in neighboring countries, including through resettlement;

(3) assistance to international organizations and other relevant entities, including such organizations and entities providing psychosocial services and cash assistance, and such organizations and entities facilitating voluntary returns of displaced persons;

(4) technical assistance to the Government of Iraq to establish better systems for meeting the needs of Iraqi IDPs and refugees, and to other government entities, international organizations, or nongovernmental organizations developing legal frameworks and systems to resolve land and housing claim disputes, including restitution;

(5) enhanced residency protections and opportunities for Iraqi refugees to work legally; and

(6) increased transparency on behalf of host governments, international organizations, and nongovernmental organizations that receive assistance for Iraqi refugees and IDPs.

(g) ENHANCED ACCOUNTING.—To better assess the benefits of United States assistance to Iraqi refugees and IDPs, the Secretary of State, in coordination with the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development, as appropriate, shall—

(1) develop performance measures to fully assess and report progress in achieving United States goals and objectives for Iraqi refugees and IDPs; and

(2) track and report funding apportioned, obligated, and expended for Iraqi refugee programs in Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, and the other host countries, to the extent practicable.

(h) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter through 2011, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the implementation of this section. Such report shall include—

(1) information concerning assistance and funding to host countries and international organizations and nongovernmental organizations;

(2) information concerning measures taken by the United States to increase its capabilities to process Iraqi refugees for resettlement, especially from inside Iraq;

(3) an evaluation of the effectiveness of measures implemented by agencies of the Government of Iraq to assist Iraqi refugees, IDPs, and other vulnerable persons and to facilitate the safe and voluntary return of refugees;

(4) an accounting of past expenditures and a report on plans for expenditures by the Government of Iraq on Iraqi refugees and IDPs; and

(5) information gathered in fulfillment of subsection (g).

(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 104, there is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 236. VIDEOCONFERENCE INTERVIEWS.

(a) PILOT PROGRAM.—The Secretary of State may develop and conduct a two-year pilot program for the processing of tourist visas using secure remote videoconferencing technology as a method for conducting visa interviews of applicants.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than one year after initiating the pilot program under subsection (a) and again not later than three months after the conclusion of the two-year period referred to in such subsection, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on such pilot program. Each such report shall assess the efficacy of using secure remote videoconferencing technology as a method for conducting visa interviews of applicants and include recommendations on whether or not the pilot program should be continued, broadened, or modified.

SEC. 237. TIBET.

(a) TIBET NEGOTIATIONS.—Section 613(a) of the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002 (Public Law 107-228; 22 U.S.C. 6901 note) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by inserting before the period at the end the following: “and should coordinate with other governments in multilateral efforts toward this goal”;

(2) by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

“(2) POLICY COORDINATION.—The President shall direct the National Security Council to ensure that, in accordance with this Act, United States policy on Tibet is coordinated and communicated with all Executive Branch agencies in contact with the Government of China.”

(b) BILATERAL ASSISTANCE.—Section 616 of the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

“(d) UNITED STATE ASSISTANCE.—The President shall provide grants to nongovernmental organizations to support sustainable economic development, cultural and historical preservation, health care, education, and environmental sustainability projects for Tibetan communities in the Tibet Autonomous Region and in other Tibetan communities in China, in accordance with the principles specified in subsection (e) and subject to the review and approval of the Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues under section 621(d).”

(c) SPECIAL COORDINATOR FOR TIBETAN ISSUES.—Section 621 of the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002 is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)—

(A) in paragraph (5), by striking “and” at the end;

(B) by redesignating paragraph (6) as paragraph (7); and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

“(6) review and approve all projects carried out pursuant to section 616(d); and”;

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(e) PERSONNEL.—The Secretary shall assign dedicated personnel to the Office of the Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues sufficient to assist in the management of the responsibilities of this section and section 616(d).”

(d) DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION RELATING TO TIBET.—

(1) UNITED STATES EMBASSY IN BEIJING.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State is authorized to establish a Tibet Section within the United States Embassy in Beijing, People’s Republic of China, for the purposes of following political, economic, and social developments inside Tibet, including Tibetan areas of Qinghai, Sichuan, Gansu, and Yunnan provinces, until such time as a United States consulate in Tibet is established. Such Tibet Section shall have the primary responsibility for reporting on human rights issues in Tibet and shall work in close cooperation with the Office of the Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues. The chief of such Tibet Section should be of senior rank.

(B) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 101, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to carry out this paragraph.

(2) IN TIBET.—Section 618 of the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002 is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 618. ESTABLISHMENT OF A UNITED STATES CONSULATE IN LHASA, TIBET.

“The Secretary shall seek to establish a United States consulate in Lhasa, Tibet, to provide services to United States citizens traveling to Tibet and to monitor political, economic, and cultural developments in Tibet, including Tibetan areas of Qinghai, Sichuan, Gansu, and Yunnan provinces.”

(e) RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION IN TIBET.—Section 620(b) of the Tibetan Policy Act of 2002 is amended by adding before the period at the end the following: “, including the reincarnation system of Tibetan Buddhism”.

SEC. 238. PROCESSING OF CERTAIN VISA APPLICATIONS.

(a) POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the Department of State to process immigrant visa applications of immediate relatives of United States citizens and nonimmigrant k-1 visa applications of fiances of United States citizens within 30 days of the receipt of all necessary documents from the applicant and the Department of Homeland Security. In the case of a visa application where the sponsor of such applicant is a relative other than an immediate relative, it should be the policy of the Department of State to process such an application within 60 days of the receipt of all necessary documents from the applicant and the Department of Homeland Security.

(b) REVIEW BY HEAD OF CONSULAR SECTION.—For any visa application described in subsection (a), it shall be the policy of the Department of State to require the head of the consular section (or designee) of any United States diplomatic or consular post to review any such application that exceeds the applicable time period specified in such subsection by more than five days, and, as appropriate, provide for expedited processing of such application.

Subtitle D—Strengthening Arms Control and Nonproliferation Activities at the Department of State

SEC. 241. FINDINGS AND SENSE OF CONGRESS ON THE NEED TO STRENGTHEN UNITED STATES ARMS CONTROL AND NON-PROLIFERATION CAPABILITIES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) International security relies upon collective security arrangements and alliances, as unilateral actions by one country, no matter how powerful, are insufficient to cope effectively with security threats.

(2) In the same manner, collective arrangements, conventions, and alliances devoted to halting the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, their means of production and delivery, frequently institutionalized within multilateral treaties and conventions, are critical to effective collective global action.

(3) In order to safeguard and advance United States national security, the Department of State must have the structural and human resources necessary to lead and participate in all international negotiations, conventions, organizations, arrangements, and implementation fora in the field of nonproliferation and arms control.

(4) North Korea and Iran present fundamental challenges to the global nonproliferation regime, challenges that can only be met by active, committed, and long-term multilateral engagement, participation, and leadership by the United States.

(5) Further, the United States has outlined an ambitious agenda in arms control and nonproliferation for the coming years, including—

(A) the conclusion of a strategic arms reduction treaty with Russia that preserves the benefits of the expiring START I treaty and makes further reductions in the total number of nuclear warheads in both countries, consistent with their national security needs;

(B) United States ratification of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT), considered a foundational treaty by the global nonproliferation community for further advances toward greater stability and the reduction of role of nuclear weapons;

(C) the creation of a Fissile Material Cutoff Treaty (FMCT) to reduce the rate of production and ultimately halt the production of militarily-useful fissile material for nuclear weapons;

(D) the securing of vulnerable nuclear material worldwide that could be stolen and utilized by terrorist groups and rogue countries for nuclear and radiological weapons;

(E) the reinvigoration of the Treaty on the Nonproliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), the cornerstone of the global nuclear nonproliferation regime, especially at the 2010 Review Conference;

(F) the expansion and greater development of the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI) and the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism into durable international institutions;

(G) the disruption and prevention of nuclear black markets;

(H) the convening of a Global Summit on Nuclear Security;

(I) strengthening the infrastructure and technical and financial resources available to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and its international nuclear safeguards system; and

(J) engaging multiple international conventions and negotiations on restriction on conventional arms of various types.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of State should immediately develop a plan to strengthen the capabilities of the Department of State to lead and participate effectively in all international negotiations and implementation fora in the field of nonproliferation and arms control, especially to increase the human, organizational, and financial resources available to the Undersecretary of State for Arms Control and International Security;

(2) such plan should—

(A) focus especially on the recruitment and professional development of civilian and Foreign Service officers in the areas of arms control and nonproliferation within the Department of State, especially to increase the number of personnel assigned to arms control and nonproliferation and enhance recruitment of technical specialists, as well as provide for the long-term sustainability of personnel and resources; and

(B) identify measures to make service in arms control and nonproliferation offices, bureaus, and in foreign postings an attractive path for further promotion within the Foreign Service; and

(3) the Secretary of State should regularly keep Congress informed as to the measures taken to strengthen the arms control and nonproliferation capabilities of the Department of State, including what additional legal authority or appropriations are required.

SEC. 242. AUTHORIZATION OF ADDITIONAL ARMS CONTROL AND NONPROLIFERATION POSITIONS.

Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 101, $3,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for an additional 25 positions at the Department of State for arms control and nonproliferation functions over the number of such positions in existence as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 243. ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

Section 401(d) of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (Public Law 87-297; 22 U.S.C. 2581) is amended, in the first proviso, by striking “the President” and inserting “the Secretary of State”.

SEC. 244. ADDITIONAL FLEXIBILITY FOR RIGHTSIZING ARMS CONTROL AND NONPROLIFERATION FUNCTIONS.

(a) REPEAL.—Section 1112 of the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donovan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001 (Public Law 106-113) is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in section 2(b) of such Act is amended by striking the item relating to section 1112.

SEC. 245. ARMS CONTROL AND NONPROLIFERATION ROTATION PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State (in this section referred to as the “Secretary”), in consultation with the heads of other Federal departments and agencies that are involved in United States arms control and nonproliferation activities, shall establish the Arms Control and Nonproliferation Rotation Program (in this section referred to as the “Rotation Program”) for employees of the Department of State (in this section referred to as the “Department”) and such other Federal departments and agencies. The Rotation Program shall use applicable best practices, including those prescribed by the Chief Human Capital Officers Council. Employees of the Department and any other Federal department or agency participating in the Rotation Program may be detailed among the Department or such department or agency on a non-reimbursable basis.

(2) GOALS.—The Rotation Program shall—

(A) be established in accordance with the human capital strategic plan of the Department;

(B) provide midlevel Foreign Service officers and employees of the Department, and employees of other Federal departments and agencies concerned with arms control and nonproliferation responsibilities the opportunity to broaden their knowledge through exposure to other areas of the Department and such other Federal departments and agencies;

(C) expand the knowledge base of the Department by providing for rotational assignments of employees to such other Federal departments and agencies;

(D) build professional relationships and contacts among the employees in such other Federal departments and agencies;

(E) invigorate the Department’s arms control and nonproliferation workforce with professionally rewarding opportunities; and

(F) incorporate human capital strategic plans and activities of the Department, and address critical human capital deficiencies, professional development, recruitment and retention efforts, and succession planning within the Federal workforce of the Department.

(3) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Secretary shall—

(A) provide oversight of the establishment and implementation of the Rotation Program;

(B) establish a framework that supports the goals of the Rotation Program and promotes cross disciplinary rotational opportunities;

(C) establish eligibility for employees of other Federal departments and agencies concerned with national security responsibilities to participate in the Rotation Program and select participants from such employees who apply;

(D) establish incentives for such employees to participate in the Rotation Program, including promotions and employment preferences;

(E) ensure that the Rotation Program provides professional education and training;

(F) ensure that the Rotation Program develops qualified employees and future leaders with broad based experience throughout the Department; and

(G) provide for greater interaction among employees in such Federal departments and agencies, including the Agency.

(4) ALLOWANCES, PRIVILEGES, AND BENEFITS.—All allowances, privileges, rights, seniority, and other benefits of employees participating in the Rotation Program shall be preserved.

(5) REPORTING.—Not later than one year after the date of the establishment of the Rotation Program, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the status of the Rotation Program, including a description of the Rotation Program, the number of individuals participating, and how the Rotation Program is used in succession planning and leadership development.

SEC. 246. ARMS CONTROL AND NONPROLIFERATION SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State (in this section referred to as the “Secretary”) shall establish a scholarship program (to be known as the “Arms Control and Nonproliferation Scholarship Program”) to award scholarships for the purpose of recruiting and preparing students for civilian careers in the fields of nonproliferation, arms control, and international security to meet the critical needs of the Department of State (in this section referred to as the “Department”).

(2) SELECTION OF RECIPIENTS.—

(A) MERIT AND AGENCY NEEDS.—Individuals shall be selected to receive scholarships under this section through a competitive process primarily on the basis of academic merit and the arms control and nonproliferation needs of the Department.

(B) DEMONSTRATED COMMITMENT.—Individuals selected under this section shall have a demonstrated interest in public service and a commitment to the field of study for which the scholarship is awarded.

(3) CONTRACTUAL AGREEMENTS.—In order to carry out the scholarship program, the Secretary shall enter into contractual agreements with individuals selected under paragraph (2) pursuant to which such individuals agree to serve as full-time employees of the Department, for a period to be determined by the Secretary, not to exceed six years, in arms control and nonproliferation positions needed by the Department and for which the individuals are qualified, in exchange for receiving a scholarship.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Except as provided in subsection (f), in order to be eligible to participate in the scholarship program, an individual shall be enrolled or accepted for enrollment as a full-time student at an institution of higher education and be pursuing or intend to pursue undergraduate or graduate education in an academic field or discipline specified in the list made available under subsection (d) and be a United States citizen.

(c) APPLICATION.—An individual seeking a scholarship under this section shall submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information, agreements, or assurances as the Secretary may require.

(d) PROGRAMS AND FIELDS OF STUDY.—The Secretary shall make publicly available a list of academic programs and fields of study for which scholarships under this section may be awarded.

(e) SCHOLARSHIPS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award a scholarship under this section for an academic year if the individual applying for the scholarship has submitted to the Secretary, as part of the application required under subsection (c), a proposed academic program leading to a degree in a program or field of study specified on the list made available under subsection (d).

(2) LIMITATION ON YEARS.—An individual may not receive a scholarship under this section for more than four academic years, unless the Secretary grants a waiver.

(3) STUDENT RESPONSIBILITIES.—Scholarship recipients shall maintain satisfactory academic progress.

(4) AMOUNT.—The dollar amount of a scholarship awarded under this section for an academic year shall be determined under regulations issued by the Secretary, but shall in no case exceed the cost of tuition, fees, and other authorized expenses as determined by the Secretary.

(5) USE OF SCHOLARSHIPS.—A scholarship awarded under this section may be expended for tuition, fees, and other authorized expenses as established by the Secretary by regulation.

(6) PAYMENT TO INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION.—The Secretary may enter into a contractual agreement with an institution of higher education under which the amounts provided for a scholarship under this section for tuition, fees, and other authorized expenses are paid directly to the institution with respect to which such scholarship is awarded.

(f) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION FOR CURRENT EMPLOYEES.—Notwithstanding subsection (b), up to five percent of the scholarships awarded under this section may be set aside for individuals who are Federal employees on the date of the enactment of this Act to enhance the education of such employees in areas of critical arms control or nonproliferation needs of the Department, for undergraduate or graduate education under the scholarship on a full-time or part-time basis.

(g) REPAYMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A scholarship recipient who fails to maintain a high level of academic standing, as defined by the Secretary who is dismissed for disciplinary reasons from the educational institution such recipient is attending, or who voluntarily terminates academic training before graduation from the educational program for which the scholarship was awarded shall be in breach of the contractual agreement under subsection (a)(3) and, in lieu of any service obligation arising under such agreement, shall be liable to the United States for repayment within one year after the date of such default of all scholarship funds paid to such recipient and to the institution of higher education on the behalf of such recipient under such agreement. The repayment period may be extended by the Secretary if the Secretary determines such to be necessary, as established by regulation.

(2) LIABILITY.—A scholarship recipient who, for any reason, fails to begin or complete the service obligation under the contractual agreement under subsection (a)(3) after completion of academic training, or fails to comply with the terms and conditions of deferment established by the Secretary under paragraph (1), shall be in breach of such contractual agreement and shall be liable to the United States for an amount equal to—

(A) the total amount of the scholarship received by such recipient under this section; and

(B) the interest on such amounts which would be payable if at the time the scholarship was received such scholarship was a loan bearing interest at the maximum legally prevailing rate.

(h) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe regulations necessary to carry out this section.

(i) INSTITUTION OF HIGHER EDUCATION DEFINED.—In this section, the term “institution of higher education” has the meaning given such term under section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001).

(j) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 101, such sums as may be necessary are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section.

SEC. 247. SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may establish a Scientific Advisory Committee (in this section referred to as the “Committee”) of not to exceed ten members, not fewer than eight of whom shall be scientists.

(2) APPOINTMENT.—If the Committee is established in accordance with paragraph (1), the members of the Committee shall be appointed by the President, as follows:

(A) One member, who shall be a person of special scientific distinction, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, as Chairman of the Committee.

(B) Nine other members shall be appointed by the President.

(3) MEETINGS.—If the Committee is established in accordance with paragraph (1), the Committee shall meet not less often than twice per year.

(b) FUNCTION.—If the Committee is established in accordance with subsection (a)(1), the Committee shall advise the President, the Secretary of State, and the Undersecretary for Arms Control and International Security regarding scientific, technical, and policy matters affecting arms control and nonproliferation.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES.—If the Committee is established in accordance with subsection (a)(1), the members of the Committee may receive reimbursement of expenses only in accordance with the provisions applicable to the reimbursement of experts and consultants under section 401(d) of the Arms Control and Disarmament Act (Public Law 87–297; 22 U.S.C. 2581(d)).

(d) SCIENTIST DEFINED.—In this section, the term “scientist” means an individual who has a demonstrated knowledge and technical expertise with respect to arms control, nonproliferation, and disarmament matters and who has distinguished himself or herself in any of the fields of physics, chemistry, mathematics, biology, or engineering, including weapons engineering.

TITLE III—ORGANIZATION AND PERSONNEL AUTHORITIES

Subtitle A—Towards Modernizing the Department of State

SEC. 301. TOWARDS A MORE MODERN AND EXPEDITIONARY FOREIGN SERVICE.

(a) TARGETED EXPANSION OF FOREIGN SERVICE.—The Secretary of State shall expand the Foreign Service to—

(1) fill vacancies, particularly those vacancies overseas that are critical to key United States foreign policy and national security interests, and, in particular, to prevent crises before they emerge;

(2) increase the capacity of the Department of State to assign and deploy Foreign Service officers and other personnel to prevent, mitigate, and respond to international crises and instability in foreign countries that threaten key United States foreign policy and national security interests; and

(3) ensure that before being assigned to assignments requiring new or improved skills, members of the Foreign Service, other than foreign national employees and consular agents (as such terms are defined in section 103 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3903)), as appropriate, receive language, security, area, and other training that is necessary to successfully execute their responsibilities and to enable such members to obtain advanced and other education that will increase the capacity of the Foreign Service to complete its mission.

(b) AUTHORIZED INCREASES.—

(1) AT THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.—The Secretary of State is authorized to hire an additional 750 members of the Foreign Service (above attrition) in fiscal year 2010 over the number of such members employed as of September 30, 2009, and an additional 750 members of the Foreign Service (above attrition) in fiscal year 2011 over the number of such members employed as of September 30, 2010.

(2) AT USAID.—The Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development is authorized to hire an additional 350 members of the Foreign Service (above attrition) in fiscal year 2010 over the number of such members employed as of September 30, 2009, and an additional 350 members of the Foreign Service (above attrition) in fiscal year 2011 over the number of such members employed as of September 30, 2010.

(3) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as limiting the authority of the Secretary of State or the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development to hire personnel.

(c) EXPANSION OF FUNCTIONS OF THE FOREIGN SERVICE.—Section 104 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3904) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

“(2) work actively to prevent, mitigate, and respond in a timely manner to international crises and instability in foreign countries that threaten the key United States foreign policy and national security interests.”.

(d) WORLDWIDE AVAILABILITY.—Section 301(b) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3941(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting “(1)” before “The Secretary”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), at the time of entry into the Service, each member of the Service shall be available to be assigned worldwide.

“(B) With respect to the medical eligibility of any applicant for appointment as a Foreign Service officer candidate, the Secretary of State shall determine such availability through appropriate medical examinations. If based on such examinations the Secretary determines that such applicant is ineligible to be assigned worldwide, the Secretary may waive the worldwide availability requirement under subparagraph (A) if the Secretary determines that such waiver is required to fulfill a compelling Service need. The Secretary shall establish an internal administrative review process for medical ineligibility determinations.

“(C) The Secretary may also waive or reduce the worldwide availability requirement under subparagraph (A) if the Secretary determines, in the Secretary’s discretion, that such waiver or reduction is warranted.”.

(e) RECRUITING CANDIDATES WHO HAVE EXPERIENCE IN UNSTABLE SITUATIONS.—Section 301 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3941), as amended by section 212(c) of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(f) EXPERIENCE IN UNSTABLE SITUATIONS.—The fact that an applicant for appointment as a Foreign Service officer candidate has the experience of working in situations where public order has been undermined by instability, or where there is no civil authority that can effectively provide public safety, may be considered an affirmative factor in making such appointments.”.

(f) TRAINING.—Section 708 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 4028) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

“(c) The Secretary of State shall ensure that members of the Service, other than foreign national employees and consular agents, as appropriate, receive training on methods for conflict mitigation and resolution and on the necessary skills to be able to function successfully where public order has been undermined by instability or where there is no civil authority that can effectively provide public safety.

“(d) The Secretary of State shall ensure that members of the Service, other than foreign national employees and consular agents, as appropriate, have opportunities during their careers to obtain advanced education and training in academic and other relevant institutions in the United States and abroad to increase the capacity of the Service to fulfill its mission.”

SEC. 302. QUADRENNIAL REVIEW OF DIPLOMACY AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF NATIONAL STRATEGY ON DIPLOMACY AND DEVELOPMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than December 1, 2010, the President shall develop and transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a national strategy on United States diplomacy and development. The strategy shall include the following:

(A) An identification of key objectives and missions for United States foreign policy and foreign assistance policies and programs, including a clear statement on United States objectives for development assistance.

(B) A description of the roles of civilian agencies and mechanisms for implementing such strategy, including interagency coordination.

(C) The requirements for overseas infrastructure necessary to carry out such strategy.

(D) Plans to adapt such agencies and mechanisms to changing circumstances and the role of international institutions in such strategy.

(E) Budget requirements to carry out such strategy.

(F) Other elements of United States foreign policy and foreign assistance policies and programs with a view toward determining and expressing the strategy of the United States and establishing a diplomacy and development program for the next ten years.

(2) RELATIONSHIP TO NATIONAL SECURITY STRATEGY.—The strategy described in paragraph (1) shall be consistent with any National Security Strategy prescribed by the President pursuant to section 108 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a) that has been issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) REVIEW REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Beginning in 2013, the President shall every four years, during a year following a year evenly divisible by four, conduct a comprehensive examination (to be known as a “Quadrennial Review of Diplomacy and Development”) of the national strategy for United States diplomacy and development described in subsection (a).

(2) KEY ELEMENTS OF REVIEW.—The review described in paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A review of all elements of the strategy described in subsection (a), consistent with the most recent National Security Strategy prescribed by the President pursuant to section 108 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a) that has been issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) A review of the roles and responsibilities of Federal departments and agencies in carrying out the strategy described in subsection (a) and the mechanisms for cooperation between such departments and agencies, including the coordination of such departments and agencies and the relationship between the principal offices of such departments and agencies and offices defining sufficient capacity, resources, overseas infrastructure, budget plan, and other elements of United States diplomacy and development of the United States that would be required to have a high level of confidence that the United States can successfully execute the full range of missions called for in such strategy.

(C) Identifying the budget plan that would be required to provide sufficient resources to execute successfully the full range of missions called for in the strategy described in subsection (a) at a high level of success and any additional resources required to achieve such a level of success.

(D) Making recommendations that are not constrained to comply with the budget submitted to Congress by the President pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(3) INTERAGENCY COORDINATION AND CONSULTATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Each Quadrennial Review of Diplomacy and Development shall take into account the views of the Secretary of State, the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Treasury, the United States Trade Representative, and the head of any other relevant agency.

(B) DELEGATION.—If the President delegates the requirements of this section, the head of the Federal department or agency to whom such delegation is made shall consult with each official specified in subparagraph (A).

(c) CONSULTATION WITH OUTSIDE STAKEHOLDERS.—In developing the strategy required under subsection (a) and conducting the review required under subsection (b), the President shall consult with private businesses, non-governmental organizations involved in diplomacy and development, and experts at academic institutions or institutions involved in the study of foreign policy or development matters.

(d) QRDD AND CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—

(1) CONSULTATION.—In developing the strategy required under subsection (a) and conducting the review required under subsection (b), the President shall consult with the appropriate congressional committees.

(2) REPORT.—The President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on each Quadrennial Review of Diplomacy and Development. The report shall be submitted in the year following the year in which such a Quadrennial Review is conducted, but not later than the date on which the President submits the budget for the next fiscal year to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code. The report shall include the following:

(A) The results of such a Quadrennial Review, including a comprehensive discussion of the national strategy for United States foreign policy and foreign assistance policies and programs, the roles and responsibilities of and strategic guidance for civilian agencies and mechanisms in implementing such strategy, the requirements for overseas infrastructure necessary to carry out such strategy, plans to adapt such agencies and mechanisms to changing circumstances, and the role of international institutions in such strategy.

(B) The assumed or defined objectives and missions that inform the national strategy for United States foreign policy and foreign assistance policies and programs.

(C) The threats to the assumed or defined objectives and missions of the United States that were examined for the purposes of such a Quadrennial Review.

(D) The assumptions used in such a Quadrennial Review, including assumptions relating to—

(i) the capacity of United States diplomatic and development personnel to respond to such threats;

(ii) the cooperation and capacity of allies, other friendly countries, and international institutions in addressing such threats;

(iii) levels of engagement in operations other than war and smaller-scale contingencies and withdrawal from such operations and contingencies; and

(iv) the intensity, duration, and military and political end-states of conflicts and smaller-scale contingencies that arise in the diplomatic and development context.

(E) The anticipated roles and missions of the reserve components available to civilian agencies, including capabilities and resources necessary to assure that such reserve components can capably discharge such roles and missions.

(F) The extent to which diplomatic and development personnel need to be shifted to different regions to carry out the national strategy under subsection (a).

(G) Any other matter the Secretary considers appropriate.

(e) INDEPENDENT PANEL ASSESSMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than six months before the date on which the report on a Quadrennial Review of Diplomacy and Development is to be transmitted under subsection (d), the President shall establish a panel to conduct an assessment of such a Quadrennial Review.

(2) REPORT ON ASSESSMENT.—Not later than three months after the date on which the report on such a Quadrennial Review is transmitted under subsection (d), the panel established under paragraph (1) shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees an assessment of such a Quadrennial Review, including an assessment of the recommendations of such a Quadrennial Review, the stated and implied assumptions incorporated in such a Quadrennial Review, and the vulnerabilities of the strategy underlying such a Quadrennial Review.

(f) EXCLUSION.—Any provision in this section relating to budgets or budget plans shall not be construed to require any information on any program that is funded from accounts within budget function 050 (National Defense).

SEC. 303. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE LESSONS LEARNED CENTER.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of State, in consultation with the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), is authorized to establish in the Department of State and under the authority of the Undersecretary for Management a Lessons Learned Center (referred to in this section as the “LLC”) which will serve as a central organization for collection, analysis, archiving, and dissemination of observations, best practices, and lessons learned by, from, and to Foreign Service officers and support personnel in the Department of State and USAID.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the LLC is to increase, enhance, and sustain the ability of the Department of State and USAID to effectively carry out their missions by devising a system for the collection, analysis, archiving, and dissemination of lessons learned, improving information sharing and learning capacity, and enabling, encouraging, and rewarding critical, innovative analysis.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the status of efforts to establish the LLC. The report shall include recommendations—

(1) concerning the regulation and structure of the LLC, including—

(A) how to encourage service in the LLC;

(B) how to provide for the necessary academic freedom to provide innovative, critical analysis;

(C) how to ensure that the staffing of the LLC is a mix of senior and junior staff of the Foreign Service and civil service in the Department of State and USAID;

(D) the anticipated expenditures associated with the establishment of the LLC under subsection (a); and

(E) physical structure of the LLC; and

(2) for any legislation necessary to establish the LLC.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) ACADEMIC FREEDOM.—The term “academic freedom” means the capability, capacity, and authorization to produce analysis and evaluation without concern for retaliation or other negative impact on the observer’s career.

(2) LESSONS LEARNED.—The term “lessons learned” means information resulting from evaluation or observation of negotiations, operations, exercises, training events, or other processes and experiences, particularly any corrective measures or innovative techniques, that produced an improved performance or increased capability.

SEC. 304. LOCALLY EMPLOYED STAFF COMPENSATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) United States diplomatic and consular missions worldwide retain over 51,000 locally employed staff under local compensation plans (LCP’s) in about 170 overseas missions.

(2) The locally employed staff is the backbone of diplomatic operations, providing management, programmatic, security, maintenance, custodial, and other services wherever the Department of State has established an overseas post.

(3) Foreign Service and other United States officers who rotate in-and-out of such missions every two to three years are highly dependent on the local employees to bring them up to speed and make sure that the work of any such mission does not falter in transitions during rotations.

(4) As the number of positions at such missions designated for United States officers that are not filled continues to increase, locally employed staff are called upon to assume many of the responsibilities that United States staff have carried in the past.

(5) Based on a survey conducted by the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) Department of State, the United States is failing to provide a competitive compensation package for locally employed staff that is commensurate with their experience, technical skills, and responsibilities.

(6) The Department of State OIG survey data show that the United States Government is providing salary increases that are approximately 60 percent of what is the prevailing practice of the local labor market.

(7) The Department of State OIG has found numerous cases in which such missions are losing staff to other employers. The OIG has also found numerous cases where it is difficult to replace employees who left to take other jobs, particularly in countries with low unemployment rates.

(b) POLICY REVIEW.—The Secretary of State shall direct a policy review to assess the adequacy of locally employed staff compensation. In carrying out such policy review the Secretary shall consider the recommendations of the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of State, including the following:

(1) The Bureau of Human Resources, in coordination with the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, should hire an outside contractor with international experience to perform an organizational review of the Compensation Management Division of the Office of Overseas Employment to advise on the organization of the compensation management division and on how many analysts are required to handle the compensation management responsibilities, and to recommend training and certifications the analysts should obtain.

(2) The Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, in coordination with the Bureau of Human Resources and the Bureau of Resource Management, should ensure that the working group on locally employed staff compensation reviews the connectivity between the activities of the Office of Overseas Employment and the Office of State Programs, Operations and Budget in the Bureau of Resource Management, and makes and distributes written, documented determinations as to the data used by the two offices to make estimates of locally employed staff compensation adjustments, the timing of these activities, and the responsibility each office has for tracking implementation of locally employed staff compensation adjustments.

(3) The Bureau of Human Resources, in coordination with the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, should implement a locally employed staff compensation review process whereby the Office of Overseas Employment in the Bureau of Human Resources reviews and adjust each post’s salary schedule every five years based on a recent salary survey. During the intervening years, the Department should authorize cost-of-living (or inflation) adjustments based on reliable inflation data.

(4) The Bureau of Human Resources, in coordination with the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, should implement a systematic process of providing comprehensive information to diplomatic and consular missions, Department of State offices, and agency headquarters on periodic salary survey reviews, including comprehensive salary survey analysis, explanations of salary survey changes, and if appropriate, copies of the off-the-shelf surveys for the host country. This approach should be documented and made a part of the periodic process.

(5) The Bureau of Human Resources, in coordination with the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, the regional bureaus, and the Bureau of Resource Management, should establish, maintain, and monitor a database that tracks information related to locally employed staff compensation and adjustments, including budgetary resources, salary level ceilings calculated by the Office of Overseas Employment, salary levels requested by post, salary levels implemented, dates for these activities, and calculations of whether the Department is meeting prevailing practice. This database should replace the current practice of communicating salary review information by cable.

(6) The Bureau of Human Resources, in coordination with the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation, should evaluate the possibility of using different pay setting data establishing different pay scales for blue-collar positions and for professional level positions, and should issue and distribute a written report on the findings and the possibility of implementing the findings.

(7) The Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation should ensure that the working group on locally employed staff compensation considers the possibility of including members from other United States Government agencies that employ locally employed staff. Whether this recommendation is implemented or not, the Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation should document the decision in writing, and distribute the decision widely in the Department of State and to other agencies that employ locally employed staff.

(8) The Office of Management, Policy, Rightsizing and Innovation should ensure that the working group on locally employed staff compensation considers the possibility of centralizing decision making for locally employed staff salary increases, and, whether such is eventually implemented or not, make a determination as to its value, document the decision in writing, and distribute the decision widely in the Department of State.

(9) The Bureau of Human Resources, in cooperation with Resource Management International Cooperative Administrative Support Services, should establish a senior level inter-agency locally employed staff board of governors to set overall locally employed staff policy.

(10) The Bureau of Human Resources should send the cable announcing the proposed salary increases for locally employed staff to the attention of both the chief of mission and the management officer.

(11) The Bureau of Human Resources should request a list of position titles and grades from all positions with exception rate ranges and details on the exception rate range adjustments in the 2010 Locally Employed Staff Compensation Questionnaire.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate committees a report on the implementation of this section, including a review of efforts to implement the recommendations of the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of State specified in subsection (b).

Subtitle B—Foreign Service Pay Equity and Death Gratuity

SEC. 311. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Foreign Service Overseas Pay Equity Act of 2009”.

SEC. 312. OVERSEAS COMPARABILITY PAY ADJUSTMENT.

(a) OVERSEAS COMPARABILITY PAY ADJUSTMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 4 of title 1 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3961 and following) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 415. OVERSEAS COMPARABILITY PAY ADJUSTMENT.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—A member of the Service who is designated class 1 or below for purposes of section 403 and whose official duty station is neither in the continental United States nor in a non-foreign area shall receive, in accordance with the phase-in schedule set forth in subsection (c), a locality-based comparability payment (stated as a percentage) equal to the locality-based comparability payment (stated as a percentage) that would be provided under section 5304 of title 5, United States Code, if such member’s official duty station were in the District of Columbia.

“(b) TREATMENT AS BASIC PAY.—The amount of any locality-based comparability payment which is payable to a member of the Service by virtue of this section—

“(1) shall be considered to be part of the basic pay of such member—

“(A) for the same purposes as provided for under section 5304(c)(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code; and

“(B) for purposes of chapter 8; and

“(2) shall be subject to any limitations on pay applicable to locality-based comparability payments under section 5304 of title 5, United States Code.

“(c) PHASE-IN.—The locality-based comparability payment payable to a member of the Service under this section shall—

“(1) beginning on the first day of the first pay period that is 90 days after the date of the enactment of this subsection, be equal to 33.33 percent of the payment which would otherwise apply under subsection (a);

“(2) beginning on the first day of the first pay period in April 2010, be equal to 66.67 percent of the payment which would otherwise apply under subsection (a); and

“(3) beginning on the first day of the first pay period in fiscal year 2011 and each subsequent fiscal year, be equal to the payment determined under subsection (a).

“(d) NON-FOREIGN AREA DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘non-foreign area’ has the same meaning as is given such term in regulations carrying out section 5941 of title 5, United States Code.”.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents set forth in section 2 of such Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 414 the following:

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO THE FOREIGN SERVICE RETIREMENT SYSTEMS.—

(1) CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE FUND.—Effective as of the first pay period beginning on or after October 1, 2010, section 805(a) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 4045(a)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) in the first sentence, by striking “.75 percent” and inserting “.7 percent”; and

(ii) in the second sentence, by striking “The contribution by the employing agency” through “and shall be made” and inserting “An equal amount shall be contributed by the employing agency”;

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking “, plus an amount equal to .25 percent of basic pay”; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by striking “, plus an amount equal to .25 percent of basic pay”; and

(C) in paragraph (3), by striking all that follows “Code” and inserting a period.

(2) COMPUTATION OF ANNUITIES.—Section 806(a)(9) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 4046(a)(9)) is amended by striking “is outside the continental United States shall” and inserting “was outside the continental United States during the period beginning on December 29, 2002, and ending on the day before the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after October 1, 2011 (or during any portion thereof), shall, to the extent that such computation is based on the basic salary or basic pay of such member for such period (or portion thereof),”.

(3) ENTITLEMENT TO ANNUITY.—Section 855(a)(3) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 4071d(a)(3)) is amended—

(A) by striking “section 8414” and inserting “section 8415”; and

(B) by striking “is outside the continental United States shall” and inserting “was outside the continental United States during the period beginning on December 29, 2002, and ending on the day before the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after October 1, 2011 (or during any portion thereof), shall, to the extent that such computation is based on the basic salary or basic pay of such member for such period (or portion thereof),”.

(4) DEDUCTIONS AND WITHHOLDINGS FROM PAY.—Section 856(a)(2) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 4071e(a)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

“(2) The applicable percentage under this subsection shall be as follows:

“Percentage	Time Period
7.5	Before January 1, 1999.

7.9	January 1, 2000, to December 31, 2000.
7.55	January 11, 2003, to the day before the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after October 1, 2011.
7.5	Beginning on the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after October 1, 2011.”.

(c) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Not later than October 1, 2010, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees an assessment of all allowances provided to members of the Foreign Service under the Foreign Service Act of 1980 or under title 5, United States Code, and in particular, how such allowances have been or will be affected by the amendments to the Foreign Service Act of 1980 made by this Act.

SEC. 313. DEATH GRATUITY.

The first sentence of section 413(a) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3973(a)) is amended by striking “at the time of death” and inserting “at level II of the Executive Schedule under section 5313 of title 5, United States Code, at the time of death, except that for employees compensated under local compensation plans established under section 408, the amount shall be equal to the greater of 1 year’s salary at the time of death or 1 year’s salary at the highest step of the highest grade on the local compensation plan from which the employee was being paid at the time of death.”.

Subtitle C—Other Organization and Personnel Matters

SEC. 321. TRANSATLANTIC DIPLOMATIC FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

(a) FELLOWSHIP AUTHORIZED.—Chapter 5 of title I of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3981 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“SEC. 506. TRANSATLANTIC DIPLOMATIC FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to establish the Transatlantic Diplomatic Fellowship Program. Under the program, the Secretary may assign a member of the Service, for not more than one year, to a position with any designated country or designated entity that permits an employee to be assigned to a position with the Department.

“(b) SALARY AND BENEFITS.—The salary and benefits of a member of the Service shall be paid as described in subsection (b) of section 503 during a period in which such member is participating in the Transatlantic Diplomatic Fellowship Program. The salary and benefits of an employee of a designated country or designated entity participating in such program shall be paid by such country or entity during the period in which such employee is participating in the program.

“(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) The term ‘designated country’ means a member country of—

“(A) the North Atlantic Treaty Organization;

or

“(B) the European Union.

“(2) The term ‘designated entity’ means—

“(A) the North Atlantic Treaty Organization;

or

“(B) the European Union.

“(d) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to—

“(1) authorize the appointment as an officer or employee of the United States of—

“(A) an individual whose allegiance is to any country, government, or foreign or international entity other than to the United States; or

“(B) an individual who has not met the requirements of sections 3331, 3332, 3333, and 7311 of title 5, United States Code, and any other provision of law concerning eligibility for appointment as, and continuation of employment as, an officer or employee of the United States; or

“(2) authorize the Secretary to assign a member of the Service to a position with any foreign country whose laws, or foreign or international entity whose rules, require such member to give allegiance or loyalty to such country or entity while assigned to such position.”.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The Foreign Service Act of 1980 is amended—

(1) in section 503 (22 U.S.C. 3983)—

(A) in the section heading, by striking “AND” and inserting “FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS, OR”;

(2) in section 2, in the table of contents—

(A) by striking the item relating to section 503 and inserting the following new item:

“Sec. 503. Assignments to agencies, international organizations, foreign governments, or other bodies.”; and

(B) by adding after the item relating to section 505 the following new item:

“Sec. 506. Transatlantic diplomatic fellowship program.”.

SEC. 322. SECURITY OFFICERS EXCHANGE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title I of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3981 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 506 (as added by section 321(a) of this Act) the following new section:

“SEC. 507. SECURITY OFFICERS EXCHANGE PROGRAM.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to establish the Security Officers Exchange Program. Under the program, the Secretary may assign a member of the Service, for not more than a total of three years, to a position with any country or international organization designated by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (c) that permits an employee to be assigned to a position with the Department.

“(b) SALARY AND BENEFITS.—The salary and benefits of the members of the Service shall be paid as described in subsection (b) of section 503 during a period in which such officer is participating in the Security Officers Exchange Program. The salary and benefits of an employee of a designated country or international organization participating in such program shall be paid by such country or international organization during the period in which such employee is participating in the program.

“(c) DESIGNATION.—The Secretary may designate a country or international organization to participate in this program if the Secretary determines that such participation is in the national security interests of the United States.

“(d) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to—

“(1) authorize the appointment as an officer or employee of the United States of—

“(A) an individual whose allegiance is to any country, government, or foreign or international entity other than to the United States; or

“(B) an individual who has not met the requirements of sections 3331, 3332, 3333, and 7311 of title 5, United States Code, and any other provision of law concerning eligibility for appointment as, and continuation of employment as, an officer or employee of the United States; or

“(2) authorize the Secretary to assign a member of the Service to a position with any foreign country whose laws, or foreign or international entity whose rules, require such member to give allegiance or loyalty to such country or entity while assigned to such position.”.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 2 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 is amended, in the table of contents, by adding after the item relating to section 506 (as added by section 321(b)(2)(B) of this Act) the following new item:

“Sec. 507. Security officers exchange program.”.

SEC. 323. SUSPENSION OF FOREIGN SERVICE MEMBERS WITHOUT PAY.

(a) SUSPENSION.—Section 610 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 4010) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c)(1) In order to promote the efficiency of the Service, the Secretary may suspend a member of the Foreign Service without pay when the member’s security clearance is suspended or when there is reasonable cause to believe that the member has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed.

“(2) Any member of the Foreign Service for whom a suspension is proposed shall be entitled to—

“(A) written notice stating the specific reasons for the proposed suspension;

“(B) a reasonable time to respond orally and in writing to the proposed suspension;

“(C) representation by an attorney or other representative; and “(D) a final written decision, including the specific reasons for such decision, as soon as practicable.

“(3) Any member suspended under this section may file a grievance in accordance with the procedures applicable to grievances under chapter 11 of this title.

“(4) In the case of a grievance filed under paragraph (3)—

“(A) the review by the Foreign Service Grievance Board shall be limited to a determination of whether the provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2) have been fulfilled; and “(B) the Foreign Service Grievance Board may not exercise the authority provided under section 1106(8).

“(5) In this subsection:

“(A) The term ‘reasonable time’ means—

“(i) with respect to a member of the Foreign Service assigned to duty in the United States, 15 days after receiving notice of the proposed suspension; and “(ii) with respect to a member of the Foreign Service assigned to duty outside the United States, 30 days after receiving notice of the proposed suspension.

“(B) The term ‘suspend’ or ‘suspension’ means the placing of a member of the Foreign Service in a temporary status without duties and pay.”

(b) CONFORMING AND CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) AMENDMENT OF SECTION HEADING.—Such section, as amended by subsection (a) of this section, is further amended, in the section heading, by inserting “; SUSPENSION” before the period at the end.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The item relating to such section in the table of contents in section 2 of such Act is amended to read as follows: “Sec. 610. Separation for cause; suspension.”

(B) in paragraph (4), by striking “and” at the end;

(C) in paragraph (5), by striking the period at the end and inserting “; and”; and

(D) by adding after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

“(6) In exceptional circumstances where the Secretary determines the needs of the Service require the extension of a limited appointment (A), for a period of time not to exceed 12 months (provided such period of time does not permit additional review by the boards under section 306), or (B), for the minimum time needed to settle a grievance, claim, or complaint not otherwise provided for in this section.”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c) Non-career Foreign Service employees who have served five consecutive years under a limited appointment may be reappointed to a subsequent limited appointment provided there is a one year break in service between each appointment. The Secretary may in cases of special need waive the requirement for a one year break in service.”

SEC. 326. COMPENSATORY TIME OFF FOR TRAVEL.

Section 5550b of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c) The maximum amount of compensatory time off earned under this section may not exceed 104 hours during any leave year (as defined by regulations established by the Office of Personnel Management).”

SEC. 327. REEMPLOYMENT OF FOREIGN SERVICE ANNUITANTS.

(b) by striking paragraph (2); and

(c) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

SEC. 328. PERSONAL SERVICES CONTRACTORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to other authorities that may be available, the Secretary of State may establish a pilot program (in this section referred to as the “program”) for the purpose of hiring United States citizens or aliens as personal services contractors, for service in the United States, or for service both in the United States and abroad, to respond to new or emerging needs or to augment current services.

(b) CONDITIONS.—The Secretary is authorized to use the authority of subsection (a), subject to the following conditions:

(1) The Secretary determines that existing personnel resources are insufficient.

(2) The contract length, including options, may not exceed two years, unless the Secretary makes a finding that exceptional circumstances justify an extension of up to one additional year.

(3) Not more than a total of 200 United States citizens or aliens are employed at any one time as personal services contractors under this section.

(4) This authority may only be used to obtain specialized skills or experience or to respond to urgent needs.

(c) STATUS OF PERSONAL SERVICE CONTRACTORS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual hired as a personal service contractor pursuant to this section shall not, by virtue of such hiring, be considered to be an employee of the United States Government for purposes of any law administered by the Office of Personnel Management.

(2) APPLICABLE LAWS.—An individual hired as a personal service contractor pursuant to this section shall be covered, in the same manner as a similarly-situated employee, by—

(A) the Ethics in Government Act of 1978;

(B) section 27 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act; and

(C) chapter 73 of title 5, sections 201, 203, 205, 207, 208, and 209 of title 18, and section 1346 and chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code.

(3) EXCEPTION.—This subsection shall not affect the determination as to whether an individual hired as a personal service contractor pursuant to this section is an employee of the United States Government for purposes of any Federal law not specified in paragraphs (1) and (2).

(d) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority to award personal services contracts under the program authorized by this section shall terminate on September 30, 2011. A contract entered into prior to the termination date under this subsection may remain in effect until expiration.

SEC. 329. PROTECTION OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS.

(a) RESOURCES TO PROTECT INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS.—The Secretary of State shall ensure that the protection in foreign countries of the intellectual property rights of United States persons in other countries is a significant component of United States foreign policy in general and in relations with individual countries. The Secretary of State, in consultation with the Director General of the United States and Foreign Commercial Service and other agencies as appropriate, shall ensure that adequate resources are available at diplomatic missions in any country that is identified under section 182(a)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2242(a)(1)) to ensure—

(1) support for enforcement action against violations of the intellectual property rights of United States persons in such country; and

(2) cooperation with the host government to reform its applicable laws, regulations, practices, and agencies to enable that government to fulfill its international and bilateral obligations with respect to intellectual property rights.

(b) NEW APPOINTMENTS.—The Secretary of State, in consultation with the Director General of the United States and Foreign Commercial Service, shall appoint 10 intellectual property attachés to serve in United States embassies or other diplomatic missions. The 10 appointments shall be in addition to personnel serving, on the date of the enactment of this Act, in the capacity of intellectual property attachés from any department or agency of the United States at United States embassies or other diplomatic missions.

(c) PRIORITY ASSIGNMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), in designating the embassies or other missions to which attachés are assigned under subsection (b), the Secretary of State shall give priority to those countries where the activities of an attaché may be carried out with the greatest potential benefit to reducing counterfeit and pirated products in the United States market, to protecting the intellectual property rights of United States persons and their licensees, and to protecting the interests of United States persons otherwise harmed by violations of intellectual property rights in those countries.

(2) ASSIGNMENTS TO PRIORITY COUNTRIES.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Secretary of State shall consider assigning intellectual property attachés—

(A) to the countries that have been identified under section 182(a)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2242(a)(1)); and

(B) to the country where the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development has its headquarters.

(d) DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ATTACHÉS.—The intellectual property attachés appointed under subsection (b), as well as others serving as intellectual property attachés of any other department or agency of the United States, shall have the following responsibilities:

(1) To promote cooperation with foreign governments in the enforcement of intellectual property laws generally, and in the enforcement of laws against counterfeiting and piracy in particular.

(2) To assist United States persons holding intellectual property rights, and the licensees of such United States persons, in their efforts to combat counterfeiting and piracy of their products or works within the host country, including counterfeit or pirated goods exported from or transhipped through that country.

(3) To chair an intellectual property protection task force consisting of representatives from all other relevant sections or bureaus of the embassy or other mission.

(4) To coordinate with representatives of the embassies or missions of other countries in information sharing, private or public communications with the government of the host country, and other forms of cooperation for the purpose of improving enforcement against counterfeiting and piracy.

(5) As appropriate and in accordance with applicable laws and the diplomatic status of the attachés, to engage in public education efforts against counterfeiting and piracy in the host country.

(6) To coordinate training and technical assistance programs of the United States Government within the host country that are aimed at improving the enforcement of laws against counterfeiting and piracy.

(7) To identify and promote other means to more effectively combat counterfeiting and piracy activities under the jurisdiction of the host country.

(e) TRAINING.—The Secretary of State shall ensure that each attached appointed under subsection (b) is fully trained for the responsibilities of the position before assuming duties at the United States embassy or other mission in question.

(f) COORDINATION.—The activities of intellectual property attachés under this section shall be carried out in coordination with the United States Intellectual Property Enforcement Coordinator appointed under section 301 of the Prioritizing Resources and Organization for Intellectual Property Act of 2008 (15 U.S.C. 8111).

(g) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State shall submit to the Congress, not later than December 31 of each year, a report on the appointment, designation for assignment, and activities of all intellectual property attachés of any Federal department or agency who are serving at United States embassies or other diplomatic missions.

(2) CONTENTS.—Each report under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description of the progress, or lack thereof, in the preceding year regarding the resolution of general and specific intellectual property disputes in each country identified under section 182(a)(1) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2242(a)(1)), including any changes by the host government in applicable laws and regulations and their enforcement.

(B) An assessment of the obstacles preventing the host government of each country described in subparagraph (A) from implementing adequate measures to fulfill its international and bilateral obligations with respect to intellectual property rights.

(C) An assessment of the adequacy of the resources of the Department of State employed to carry out subparagraphs (A) and (B) and, if necessary, an assessment of the need for additional resources for such purposes.

(h) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) COUNTERFEITING; COUNTERFEIT GOODS.—

(A) COUNTERFEITING.—The term “counterfeiting” means activities related to production of or trafficking in goods, including packaging, that bear a spurious mark or designation that is identical to or substantially indistinguishable from a mark or designation protected under trademark laws or related legislation.

(B) COUNTERFEIT GOODS.—The term “counterfeit goods” means those goods described in subparagraph (A).

(2) INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY RIGHTS.—The term “intellectual property rights” means the rights of holders of copyrights, patents, trademarks, other forms of intellectual property, and trade secrets.

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(b) DEVELOPMENT OF METRICS TO EVALUATE EMPLOYMENT COMPOSITION.—The report required by subsection (a) shall also include a description of the following:

“(1) The ability of current recruitment, advancement, and retention practices to attract and maintain a diverse pool of qualified individuals in sufficient numbers throughout the Department, including in the Cooperative Education Program (also known as the ‘Student Career Experience Program’).

“(2) Efforts to develop a uniform definition, to be used throughout the Department, of diversity that is congruent with the core values and vision of the Department for the future workforce.

“(3) The existence of additional metrics and milestones for evaluating the diversity plans of the Department, including the Foreign Service and Senior Foreign Service, and for facilitating future evaluation and oversight.”.

(c) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—Each report required under section 324 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003, as amended by subsection (b) of this section, shall be made available to the public on the website of the Department of State not later than 15 days after the submission to Congress of each such report.

(d) GAO REVIEW.—The Comptroller General of the United States, in consultation with the appropriate congressional committees, shall conduct a review of the employment composition, recruitment, advancement, and retention policies of the Department of State for women and minority groups, including the information in the reports required under section 324 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003, as amended by subsection (b) of this section.

(e) ACQUISITION.—Section 324 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003, as amended by subsection (b) of this section, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(c) For the immediately preceding 12-month period for which the information referred to in subsection (a) is available—

“(1) the numbers and percentages of small, minority-owned, or disadvantaged businesses that provide goods and services to the Department as a result of contracts with the Department during such period;

“(2) the total number of such contracts;

“(3) the total dollar value of such contracts; and

“(4) and the percentage value represented by such contract proportionate to the total value of all contracts held by the Department.”.

(f) USE OF FUNDS.—The provisions of section 325 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003 shall apply to funds authorized to be appropriated under section 101 of this Act.

SEC. 331. CONTRACTING.

None of the funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act, for projects initiated after the date of the enactment of this Act, may be used by the Department of State to enter into any Federal contract unless such contract is entered into in accordance with title III of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 251 et seq.) and the Federal Acquisition Regulation, unless such contract is otherwise authorized by statute to be entered into without regard to such Act and regulation.

SEC. 332. LEGISLATIVE LIAISON OFFICE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

(a) REPORT ON IMPROVING EFFECTIVENESS OF DEPARTMENT OF STATE LEGISLATIVE LIAISON OFFICE.—Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate a report on the mission and effectiveness of the existing Department of State legislative liaison office.

(b) REPORT CONSIDERATIONS.—The report required by subsection (a) shall consider—

(1) whether the legislative liaison office has sufficient resources necessary to communicate to Members of Congress, committees, and their staffs the goals and missions of the Department of State;

(2) whether current space within the office buildings of the House of Representatives as well as requested space within the office buildings of the Senate is sufficient to meet the mission of the legislative liaison office;

(3) whether current representational allowances are sufficient to allow the legislative liaison office to meet its mission; and

(4) the feasibility of increasing personnel numbers in the legislative liaison office, including senior Foreign Service Officers.

SEC. 333. DISCRIMINATION RELATED TO SEXUAL ORIENTATION.

(a) TRACKING VIOLENCE OR CRIMINALIZATION RELATED TO SEXUAL ORIENTATION.—The Assistant Secretary for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor shall designate a Bureau-based officer or officers who shall be responsible for tracking violence, criminalization, and restrictions on the enjoyment of fundamental freedoms, consistent with United States law, in foreign countries based on actual or perceived sexual orientation and gender identity.

(b) INTERNATIONAL EFFORTS TO REVISE LAWS CRIMINALIZING HOMOSEXUALITY.—In keeping with the Administration's endorsement of efforts by the United Nations to decriminalize homosexuality in member states, the Secretary of State shall work through appropriate United States Government employees at United States diplomatic and consular missions to encourage the governments of other countries to reform or repeal laws of such countries criminalizing homosexuality or consensual homosexual conduct, or restricting the enjoyment of fundamental freedoms, consistent with United States law, by homosexual individuals or organizations.

SEC. 334. OFFICE FOR GLOBAL WOMEN'S ISSUES.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established an Office for Global Women's Issues (in this section referred to as the “Office”) in the Office of the Secretary of State in the Department of State. The Office shall be headed by the Ambassador-at-Large (in this section referred to as the “Ambassador”), who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Ambassador shall report directly to the Secretary of State.

(b) PURPOSE.—The Office shall coordinate efforts of the United States Government regarding gender integration and women's empowerment in United States foreign policy.

(c) DUTIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Ambassador shall—

(A) coordinate and advise on activities, policies, programs, and funding relating to gender integration and women's empowerment internationally for all bureaus and offices of the Department of State and in the international programs of other United States Government departments and agencies;

(B) design, support, and as appropriate, implement, limited projects regarding women's empowerment internationally;

(C) actively promote and advance the full integration of gender analysis into the programs, structures, processes, and capacities of all bureaus and offices of the Department of State and in the international programs of other United States Government departments and agencies; and

(D) direct, as appropriate, United States Government resources to respond to needs for gender integration and women's empowerment in United States Government foreign policies and international programs.

(2) COORDINATING ROLE.—The Ambassador shall coordinate with the United States Agency for International Development and the Millennium Challenge Corporation on all policies, programs, and funding of such agencies relating to gender integration and women's empowerment.

(3) DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION.—Subject to the direction of the President and the Secretary of State, the Ambassador is authorized to represent the United States in matters relevant to the status of women internationally.

(d) REPORTING.—The heads of all bureaus and offices of the Department of State, as appropriate, shall evaluate and monitor all women's empowerment programs administered by such bureaus and offices and annually submit to the Ambassador a report on such programs and on policies and practices to integrate gender.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 101, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to carry out activities under this section.

TITLE IV—INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONSSubtitle A—International Leadership*SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “United States International Leadership Act of 2009”.

SEC. 402. PROMOTING ASSIGNMENTS TO INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) PROMOTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 603(b) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 4003) is amended, in the second sentence, by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, and should consider whether the member of the Service has served in a position whose primary responsibility is to formulate policy toward, or represent the United States at, an international organization, a multilateral institution, or a broad-based multilateral negotiation of an international instrument”.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply to members of the Foreign Service beginning on January 1, 2015.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF A MULTILATERAL DIPLOMACY CONE IN THE FOREIGN SERVICE.—

(1) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(A) The Department of State maintains a number of United States missions both within the United States and abroad that are dedicated to representing the United States to international organizations and multilateral institutions, including missions in New York, Brussels, Geneva, Rome, Montreal, Nairobi, Vienna, and Paris.

(B) In offices at the Harry S. Truman Building, the Department maintains a significant number of positions in bureaus that are either dedicated, or whose primary responsibility is, to represent the United States to such organizations and institutions or at multilateral negotiations.

(C) Given the large number of positions in the United States and abroad that are dedicated to multilateral diplomacy, the Department of State may be well served in developing persons with specialized skills necessary to become experts in this unique form of diplomacy.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report—

(A) evaluating whether a new cone should be established for the Foreign Service that concentrates on members of the Service who serve at international organizations and multilateral institutions or are primarily responsible for participation in broad-based multilateral negotiations of international instruments; and

(B) that provides alternative mechanisms for achieving the objective of developing a core group of United States diplomats and other Government employees who have expertise and broad experience in conducting multilateral diplomacy.

SEC. 403. IMPLEMENTATION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE ON MULTILATERAL NEGOTIATIONS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE.—The Secretary of State is authorized to establish, within the Bureau of International Organization Affairs, an Office on Multilateral Negotiations, to be headed by a Special Representative for Multilateral Negotiations (in this section referred to as the “Special Representative”).

(b) APPOINTMENT.—If the office referred to in subsection (a) is established, the Special Representative shall be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and shall have the rank of Ambassador-at-Large. At the discretion of the President another official at the Department may serve as the Special Representative. The President may direct that the Special Representative report to the Assistant Secretary for International Organization Affairs.

(c) STAFFING.—The Special Representative shall have a staff of Foreign Service and civil service officers skilled in multilateral diplomacy.

(d) DUTIES.—The Special Representative shall have the following responsibilities:

(1) IN GENERAL.—The primary responsibility of the Special Representative shall be to assist in the organization of, and preparation for, United States participation in multilateral negotiations, including the advocacy efforts undertaken by the Department of State and other United States agencies.

(2) ADVISORY ROLE.—The Special Representative shall advise the President and the Secretary of State, as appropriate, regarding advocacy at international organizations and multilateral institutions and negotiations and, in coordination with the Assistant Secretary for International Organization Affairs, shall make recommendations regarding—

(A) effective strategies and tactics to achieve United States policy objectives at multilateral negotiations;

(B) the need for and timing of high level intervention by the President, the Secretary of State, the Deputy Secretary of State, and other United States officials to secure support from key foreign government officials for the United States position at such organizations, institutions, and negotiations;

(C) the composition of United States delegations to multilateral negotiations; and

(D) liaison with Congress, international organizations, nongovernmental organizations, and the private sector on matters affecting multilateral negotiations.

(3) LEADERSHIP AND MEMBERSHIP OF INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.—The Special Representative, in coordination with the Assistant Secretary of International Organization Affairs, shall direct the efforts of the United States Government to reform the criteria for leadership and membership of international organizations.

(4) PARTICIPATION IN MULTILATERAL NEGOTIATIONS.—The Special Representative, or members of the Special Representative's staff, may, as required by the President or the Secretary of State, serve on a United States delegation to any multilateral negotiation.

SEC. 404. SYNCHRONIZATION OF UNITED STATES CONTRIBUTIONS TO INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a plan on the implementation of section 404 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act of 2003 (Public Law 107-228; relating to a resumption by the United States of the payment of its full contributions to certain international organizations at the beginning of each calendar year).

SEC. 405. UNITED STATES ARREARAGES TO THE UNITED NATIONS.

In addition to amounts otherwise available for the payment of Assessed Contributions to International Organizations and Contributions for International Peacekeeping Activities, there is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to pay all United States arrearages in payments to the United Nations recognized by the United States.

Subtitle B—General Provisions

SEC. 411. ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) multilateral diplomacy in the context of the Americas has suffered considerably in the past decade, to the direct detriment of the national interest of the United States in the region;

(2) given the recent proliferation of multilateral groupings in the Americas region in which the United States is not a member, it is imperative to focus on and promote United States diplomatic efforts in the Organization of American States (OAS), where the United States is a founding member and whose central tenets include democratic values considered vital for this region;

(3) it is critical for the United States to immediately re-establish its unique leadership voice in this region and specifically in the OAS setting; and

(4) an effective way to help achieve this short term objective is to establish a fund to promote multilateral interests of the United States in the region.

(b) MULTILATERAL FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby established in the Department of State a Fund to Promote Multilateralism in the Americas (referred to in this section as the “Fund”).

(2) ACTIVITIES SUPPORTED.—The Fund shall support activities that promote the multilateral interests of the United States in the Americas region, including—

(A) United States diplomatic activities within and related to the OAS;

(B) voluntary contributions to entities and organs of the OAS to carry out programs and activities that support the interests of the United States;

(C) outreach and cultural activities;

(D) conferences; and

(E) general advocacy for United States interests.

(c) ADMINISTRATION.—The Fund shall be administered by the United States Mission to the Organization of American States, as directed by the United States Permanent Representative to the OAS, for use on matters that arise in the context of the OAS.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for the Administration of Foreign Affairs pursuant to section 101, there is authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 only to carry out this section.

SEC. 412. PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS CONTRIBUTIONS.

Section 404(b)(2)(B) of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1994 and 1995 (Public Law 103-236) (22 U.S.C. 287e note) is amended at the end by adding the following new clause:

“(vi) For assessments made during calendar years 2009, 2010, and 2011, 27.1 percent.”.

SEC. 413. PACIFIC ISLANDS FORUM.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of State should work with the Pacific Islands Forum to find appropriate affiliations for representatives of American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

SEC. 414. REVIEW OF ACTIVITIES OF INTERNATIONAL COMMISSIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act and two years thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the activities of each of the commissions specified in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 103.

(b) REPORT ELEMENTS.—The reports required under subsection (a) shall include information concerning the following:

(1) Amounts obligated and expended during the two previous fiscal years by each of such commissions.

(2) A description of the projects carried out during such years by each of such commissions and a description of the management and implementation of such projects, including the use of private contractors.

(3) Projects anticipated during the next two fiscal years related to the activities of each of such commissions because of obligations that the United States has entered into based on any treaty between the United States and another country.

(c) SUBMISSION OF THE REPORTS.—The reports may be combined with the annual budget justification submitted by the President in accordance with section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 415. ENHANCING NUCLEAR SAFEGUARDS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, done at Washington, London, and Moscow July 1, 1968, and entered into force March 5, 1970 (commonly known as the “Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty” or “NPT”) and the safeguards system of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) are indispensable to international peace and security.

(2) Congress has long supported efforts aimed at effective and efficient assurances of nuclear fuel supply, the strengthening of IAEA safeguards, and assistance to the developing world for nuclear and non-nuclear energy sources, as embodied in the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978 (22 U.S.C. 3201 et seq.).

(3) According to some experts, global energy demand will grow by 50 percent in the next 20 years, predominantly in the developing world.

(4) The Government Accountability Office (GAO) stated in testimony before Congress in September 2006 that “while IAEA is increasingly relying on the analytical skills of its staff to detect countries” undeclared nuclear activities, the agency is facing a looming human capital crisis.

(5) The Director General of the IAEA told the Board of Governors of the IAEA in March 2009 that the “deteriorating conditions in our laboratories, for example, threaten both our ability to deliver our programmed, as well as our independent analytical capability”.

(6) Considerable investment is needed for the IAEA's Safeguards Analytical Laboratory (SAL), to meet future IAEA requirements as its workload is growing, the laboratory's infrastructure is aging, and IAEA requirements have become more demanding, and while initial plans have been made for laboratory enhancement and are currently pending budgetary approval (sometime in 2009), the simple fact is that, as more countries implement IAEA safeguards, many more nuclear samples come to SAL for analysis.

(7) The existing funding, planning, and execution of IAEA safeguards is not sufficient to meet the predicted growth in the future of civilian nuclear power, and therefore any growth in civilian nuclear power must be evaluated against the challenges it poses to verification of the assurances of peace and security provided by the IAEA safeguards system.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for the refurbishment or possible replacement of the IAEA's Safeguards Analytical Laboratory.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate a report on the refurbishment or possible replacement of the IAEA's Safeguards Analytical Laboratory pursuant to subsection (b).

SEC. 416. IMPLEMENTATION OF RECOMMENDATIONS OF COMMISSION ON THE PREVENTION OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION PROLIFERATION AND TERRORISM.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to implement the following recommendations of the Report of the Commission on the Prevention of Weapons of Mass Destruction Proliferation and Terrorism regarding the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and nuclear safeguards reform:

(1) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General to consider establishing a safeguards user fee, whereby countries with inspected facilities would be assessed a fee to help defer the costs of IAEA inspections.

(2) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General and other interested parties to routinely (at least every two years) assess whether the IAEA can meet its own inspection goals, whether those goals afford timely warning of an ability to account for a bomb's worth of nuclear material, as required by United States law, and what corrective actions, if any, might help the IAEA to achieve its inspection goals. This assessment should also clarify those instances in which achieving the goals is not possible.

(3) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General to provide for the acquisition and implementation of near-real-time surveillance equipment at a number of sites where nuclear fuel rods are located and where such equipment must be installed so that the IAEA can establish the inspection continuity of the fresh and spent fuel rods and to install wide-area surveillance needed to monitor activities under the Additional Protocol.

(4) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General to promote much-needed transparency at suspect sites, to help deter transfers of nuclear fuel and nuclear weapons technology, and to encourage IAEA member states to maintain a registry of all foreign visitors at safeguarded sites. This registry should be made available to other IAEA members upon request.

(5) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General to establish a complete country-by-country inventory of nuclear materials that could be used to make nuclear bombs. The information should be shared, as appropriate, with individual IAEA member states and the public to ensure that it can be used effectively in developing the plan for IAEA safeguards. The IAEA should update the database regularly.

(6) The United States should work with the IAEA Director General to require that the transfer of all items on the Nuclear Suppliers Group dual-use and trigger lists be reported to the IAEA or relevant authority and assist in developing a system to process and analyze the information gathered, making unreported transfers illegal and subject to seizure.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on progress toward the implementation of this section.

SEC. 417. ASIA-PACIFIC ECONOMIC COOPERATION.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the United States' continued engagement in Asia must be a cornerstone of United States foreign policy in the 21st Century;

(2) the President must elevate the role of the United States in the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum (APEC) by ensuring that United States Government officials of the appropriate rank attend APEC activities; and

(3) increased participation by United States small businesses, particularly manufacturers, will add substantial benefit to APEC discussions and help strengthen the influence of the United States within APEC.

(b) SMALL BUSINESS DEFINED.—In this section, the term "small business" shall have the meaning given the term "small business concern" in section 410(9) of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 (15 U.S.C. 694a(9)).

(c) UNITED STATES PARTICIPATION AT APEC.—

(1) DESIGNATION OF APEC COORDINATORS.—The President shall designate in appropriate departments and agencies an existing official of appropriate senior rank to serve as each such department's or agency's "APEC Coordinator".

(2) DUTIES OF APEC COORDINATORS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The APEC Coordinators of the appropriate departments and agencies designated in accordance with paragraph (1) shall, in consultation with the United States Ambassador to APEC, set department- and agency-wide guidelines for each such department's or agency's participation at APEC.

(B) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter, the Secretary of State, with input from each APEC Coordinator, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on efforts to enhance each department's and agency's participation at APEC.

(d) ENHANCING SMALL BUSINESS PARTICIPATION AT APEC.—

(1) DESIGNATION OF SMALL BUSINESS LIAISON.—The Secretary of State shall designate an existing officer within the Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs to serve as a "Small Business Liaison". Such designee shall be of the appropriate senior rank.

(2) DEPARTMENT OF STATE WEBSITE.—The Secretary of State shall post on the website of the Department of State a dedicated page for United States small businesses to facilitate direct communication between the United States Government and the business community concerning APEC.

(3) COORDINATION.—The Secretary of State shall coordinate with existing private sector partners and relevant business associations to promote participation by small businesses at APEC. The Secretary shall ensure that notices about meetings and briefings provided by United States APEC officials on APEC-related issues are posted on the website of the Department of State (in accordance with paragraph (2)) not later than 15 days before the dates of such meetings and briefings.

(e) REPORT ON HOSTING OF APEC 2011 IN THE UNITED STATES.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report detailing the mechanisms that are in place or are being considered for hosting the 2011 meeting of APEC in the United States, including an analysis of the estimated or projected costs associated with such meetings.

TITLE V—UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING

SEC. 501. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING.

The following amounts are authorized to be appropriated to carry out United States international broadcasting activities under the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948, the Radio Broadcasting to Cuba Act, the Television Broadcasting to Cuba Act, the United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994, and the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998, and to carry out other authorities in law consistent with such purposes:

(1) For "International Broadcasting Operations", $732,187,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2011.

(2) For "Broadcasting Capital Improvements", $13,263,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2011.

SEC. 502. PERSONAL SERVICES CONTRACTING PROGRAM.

(1) in the section heading, by striking "PILOT";

(2) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking "pilot"; and

(B) adding at the end the following new sentence: "An individual hired as a personal service contractor pursuant to this section shall not, by virtue of such hiring, be considered to be an employee of the United States Government for purposes of any law administered by the Office of Personnel Management.";

(3) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (4), by striking "60" and inserting "200"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) The annual salary rate for personal services contractors may not exceed the rate for level IV of the Executive Schedule.";

(4) in subsection (c), by striking "2009" and inserting "2011".

SEC. 503. RADIO FREE EUROPE/RADIO LIBERTY PAY PARITY.

Section 308(h)(1)(C) of the United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C. 6207(h)(1)(C)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "and one employee abroad" after "D.C.";

(2) by striking "III" and inserting "II"; and

(3) by striking "5314" and inserting "5313".

SEC. 504. EMPLOYMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL BROADCASTING.

Section 804(1) of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1474(1)) is amended by inserting after "suitably qualified United States citizens" the following: "(for purposes of this paragraph, the term 'suitably qualified United States citizens' means those United States citizen applicants who are equally or better qualified than non-United States citizen applicants)".

SEC. 505. DOMESTIC RELEASE OF THE VOICE OF AMERICA FILM ENTITLED "A FATEFUL HARVEST".

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 208 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1986 and 1987 (22 U.S.C. 1461-1a) and section 501(b) of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1461(b)), the Director of the International Broadcasting Bureau shall provide a master copy of the film entitled "A Fateful Harvest" to the Archivist of the United States for domestic release in accordance with subsection (b).

(b) DOMESTIC RELEASE.—Upon evidence that necessary United States rights and licenses have been secured by the person seeking domestic release of the film referred to in subsection (a), the Archivist shall—

(1) deposit the film in the National Archives of the United States; and

(2) make copies of the film available for purchase and public viewing within the United States.

SEC. 506. ESTABLISHING PERMANENT AUTHORITY FOR RADIO FREE ASIA.

Section 309 of the United States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C. 6208) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)(2), by striking "and shall further specify that funds to carry out the activities of Radio Free Asia may not be available after September 30, 2010";

(2) by striking subsection (f); and

(3) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsection (f) and (g), respectively.

TITLE VI—PEACE CORPS

SEC. 601. FINDINGS; STATEMENT OF POLICY.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) On October 14, 1960, then Senator John F. Kennedy addressed students on the steps of the University of Michigan Union to enlist their effort to make the world a better place by serving their country abroad.

(2) On March 1, 1961, then President John F. Kennedy signed an Executive Order establishing a Peace Corps that was "designed to permit our people to exercise more fully their responsibilities in the great common cause of world development".

(3) Since its establishment, the Peace Corps has been guided by its mission to promote world peace and friendship and has sought to fulfill the following three goals:

(A) To help the people of interested countries in meeting their needs for trained men and women.

(B) To promote a better understanding of Americans on the part of the peoples served.

(C) To help promote a better understanding of other peoples on the part of Americans.

(4) Over the last 48 years, nearly 200,000 Peace Corps volunteers have served in 139 countries.

(5) The Peace Corps is the world's premier international service organization dedicated to promoting sustainable grassroots development by working with host communities in the areas of agriculture, business development, education, the environment, health and HIV/AIDS, and youth.

(6) The Peace Corps remains committed to sending well trained and well supported Peace Corps volunteers overseas to promote peace, friendship, cross-cultural awareness, and mutual understanding between the United States and other countries. The Peace Corps has an impressive record of engendering good will through the service that American volunteers provide.

(7) Recognizing the Peace Corps' unique and effective role in promoting volunteer service by American citizens, President Obama and Vice President Biden announced their intent to double the size of Peace Corps in an expeditious and effective manner.

(8) Over 13,000 Americans applied in 2008 to volunteer their service to serve the world's poorest communities in the Peace Corps, a 16 percent increase over the nearly 11,000 applications received in 2007.

(9) Under current funding levels, the Peace Corps is able to provide new placements for only one-third of the American applicants seeking the opportunity to serve their country and the world. At the end of fiscal year 2008, there were nearly 8,000 Peace Corps volunteers serving in 76 countries around the world.

(b) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States to—

(1) double the number of Peace Corps volunteers and strengthen and improve the Peace Corps and its programs;

(2) improve the coordination of Peace Corps programs with development programs of other Federal departments and agencies, without diminishing the independence of the Peace Corps; and

(3) promote all types of volunteerism by Americans in the developing world.

SEC. 602. AMENDMENTS TO THE PEACE CORPS ACT.

(a) PEACE CORPS RESPONSE PROGRAM.—The Peace Corps Act (22 U.S.C. 2501 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 5 the following new section:

“SEC. 5A. PEACE CORPS RESPONSE PROGRAM.

“The Director of the Peace Corps is authorized to establish a special program that assigns returned Peace Corps volunteers or other volunteers to provide short-term development or other relief assistance or to otherwise be assigned or made available to any entity referred to in subsection (a)(1) of section 10. The term of such service shall be less than the term of service of a volunteer under section 5. Except to the extent determined necessary and appropriate by the Director, the program established under this section may not cause a diminution in the number or quality of projects or volunteers assigned to longer term assignments under section 5.”

(b) COORDINATION OF PEACE CORPS PROGRAMS.—Paragraph (2) of section 4(c) of the Peace Corps Act (22 U.S.C. 2503(c)) is amended to read as follows:

“(2) The Director of the Peace Corps shall, as appropriate and to the maximum extent practicable without diminishing any program or operational independence, work with the heads of Federal departments and agencies to identify synergies and avoid duplication of efforts with Peace Corps programs in the field and at headquarters.”

(c) READJUSTMENT ALLOWANCE.—Subsection (c) of section 5 of the Peace Corps Act (22 U.S.C. 2504(c)) is amended, in the first sentence, by striking “$125” and inserting “$225”.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 3(b)(1) of the Peace Corps Act (22 U.S.C. 2502(b)(1)) is amended by striking “$270,000,000” and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting the following: “$450,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2011.”

SEC. 603. REPORT.

(a) PEACE CORPS RESPONSE PROGRAM REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Peace Corps shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program developed under in accordance with section 5A of the Peace Corps Act (as added by section 602(a) of this Act), including information on the following:

(1) The achievements and challenges of the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program since its inception as the Peace Corps Crisis Corps in 1996.

(2) The goals, objectives, program areas, and growth projections for the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program from fiscal year 2010 through fiscal year 2011.

(3) The process and standards for selecting partner organizations and projects for the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program.

(4) The standards and requirements used to select volunteers for service under the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program.

(5) The measures used to evaluate projects of the Peace Corps Response Program or any similar program and the effectiveness of volunteers assigned to such Program or similar program at achieving identified objectives.

(b) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter, the Director of the Peace Corps shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on progress made in carrying out this title, including efforts to strengthen coordination between the Peace Corps and other Federal departments and agencies carrying out development assistance programs (as required under paragraph (2) of section 4(c) of the Peace Corps Act (22 U.S.C. 2503(c)), as amended by section 602(b) of this Act).

TITLE VII—SENATOR PAUL SIMON STUDY ABROAD FOUNDATION ACT OF 2009

SEC. 701. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Senator Paul Simon Study Abroad Foundation Act of 2009”.

SEC. 702. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) According to former President George W. Bush, “America’s leadership and national security rest on our commitment to educate and prepare our youth for active engagement in the international community.”

(2) According to former President William J. Clinton, “Today, the defense of United States interests, the effective management of global issues, and even an understanding of our Nation’s diversity require ever-greater contact with, and understanding of, people and cultures beyond our borders.”

(3) Congress authorized the establishment of the Commission on the Abraham Lincoln Study Abroad Fellowship Program pursuant to section 104 of the Miscellaneous Appropriations and Offsets Act, 2004 (division h of Public Law 108–199). Pursuant to its mandate, the Lincoln Commission has submitted to Congress and the President a report of its recommendations for greatly expanding the opportunity for students at institutions of higher education in the United States to study abroad, with special emphasis on studying in developing nations.

(4) According to the Lincoln Commission, “[s]tudy abroad is one of the major means of producing foreign language speakers and enhancing foreign language learning” and, for that reason, “is simply essential to the [N]ation’s security.”

(5) Studies consistently show that United States students score below their counterparts in other advanced countries on indicators of international knowledge. This lack of global literacy is a national liability in an age of global trade and business, global interdependence, and global terror.

(6) Americans believe that it is important for their children to learn other languages, study abroad, attend a college where they can interact with international students, learn about other countries and cultures, and generally be prepared for the global age.

(7) In today’s world, it is more important than ever for the United States to be a responsible, constructive leader that other countries are willing to follow. Such leadership cannot be sustained without an informed citizenry with significant knowledge and awareness of the world.

(8) Study abroad has proven to be a very effective means of imparting international and foreign language competency to students.

(9) In any given year, only approximately one percent of all students enrolled in United States institutions of higher education study abroad.

(10) Less than 10 percent of the students who graduate from United States institutions of higher education with bachelors degrees have studied abroad.

(11) Far more study abroad must take place in developing countries. Ninety-five percent of the world’s population growth over the next 50 years will occur outside of Europe, yet in the academic year 2004–2005, 60 percent of United States students studying abroad studied in Europe, and 45 percent studied in four countries—the United Kingdom, Italy, Spain, and France.

(12) The Final Report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States (the 9/11 Commission Report) recommended that the United States increase support for “scholarship, exchange, and library programs”. The 9/11 Public Discourse Project, successor to the 9/11 Commission, noted in its November 14, 2005, status report that this recommendation was “unfulfilled,” and stated that “[t]he U.S. should increase support for scholarship and exchange programs, our most powerful tool to shape attitudes over the course of a generation.” In its December 5, 2005, Final Report on the 9/11 Commission Recommendations, the 9/11 Public Discourse Project gave the government a grade of “D” for its implementation of this recommendation.

(13) Investing in a national study abroad program would help turn a grade of “D” into an “A” by equipping United States students to communicate United States values and way of life through the unique dialogue that takes place among citizens from around the world when individuals study abroad.

(14) An enhanced national study abroad program could help further the goals of other United States Government initiatives to promote educational, social, and political reform and the status of women in developing and reforming societies around the world, such as the Middle East Partnership Initiative.

(15) To complement such worthwhile Federal programs and initiatives as the Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship Program, the National Security Education Program, and the National Security Language Initiative, a broad-based undergraduate study abroad program is needed that will make many more study abroad opportunities accessible to all undergraduate students, regardless of their field of study, ethnicity, socio-economic status, or gender.

(16) To restore America’s standing in the world, President Barack Obama has said that he will call on our nation’s greatest resource, our people, to reach out to and engage with other nations.

SEC. 703. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are—

(1) to significantly enhance the global competitiveness and international knowledge base of the United States by ensuring that more United States students have the opportunity to acquire foreign language skills and international knowledge through significantly expanded study abroad;

(2) to enhance the foreign policy capacity of the United States by significantly expanding and diversifying the talent pool of individuals with non-traditional foreign language skills and cultural knowledge in the United States who are available for recruitment by United States foreign affairs agencies, legislative branch agencies, and nongovernmental organizations involved in foreign affairs activities;

(3) to ensure that an increasing portion of study abroad by United States students will take place in nontraditional study abroad destinations such as the People's Republic of China, countries of the Middle East region, and developing countries; and

(4) to create greater cultural understanding of the United States by exposing foreign students and their families to United States students in countries that have not traditionally hosted large numbers of United States students.

SEC. 704. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives; and

SEC. 705. ESTABLISHMENT AND MANAGEMENT OF THE SENATOR PAUL SIMON STUDY ABROAD FOUNDATION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established in the executive branch a corporation to be known as the “Senator Paul Simon Study Abroad Foundation” that shall be responsible for carrying out this title. The Foundation shall be a government corporation, as defined in section 103 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—The Foundation shall be governed by a Board of Directors in accordance with subsection (d).

(3) INTENT OF CONGRESS.—It is the intent of Congress in establishing the structure of the Foundation set forth in this subsection to create an entity that will administer a study abroad program that—

(A) serves the long-term foreign policy and national security needs of the United States; but

(B) operates independently of short-term political and foreign policy considerations.

(b) MANDATE OF FOUNDATION.—In administering the program referred to in subsection (a)(3), the Foundation shall—

(1) promote the objectives and purposes of this title;

(2) through responsive, flexible grant-making, promote access to study abroad opportunities by United States students at diverse institutions of higher education, including two-year institutions, minority-serving institutions, and institutions that serve nontraditional students;

(3) through creative grant-making, promote access to study abroad opportunities by diverse United States students, including minority students, students of limited financial means, and nontraditional students;

(4) solicit funds from the private sector to supplement funds made available under this title; and

(5) minimize administrative costs and maximize the availability of funds for grants under this title.

(c) CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be in the Foundation a Chief Executive Officer who shall be responsible for the management of the Foundation.

(2) APPOINTMENT.—The Chief Executive Officer shall be appointed by the Board and shall be a recognized leader in higher education, business, or foreign policy, chosen on the basis of a rigorous search.

(3) RELATIONSHIP TO BOARD.—The Chief Executive Officer shall report to and be under the direct authority of the Board.

(4) COMPENSATION AND RANK.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Chief Executive Officer shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

(B) AMENDMENT.—Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“Chief Executive Officer, Senator Paul Simon Study Abroad Foundation.”

(5) AUTHORITIES AND DUTIES.—The Chief Executive Officer shall be responsible for the management of the Foundation and shall exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the Foundation.

(6) AUTHORITY TO APPOINT OFFICERS.—In consultation and with approval of the Board, the Chief Executive Officer shall appoint all officers of the Foundation.

(d) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There shall be in the Foundation a Board of Directors.

(2) DUTIES.—The Board shall perform the functions specified to be carried out by the Board in this title and may prescribe, amend, and repeal by-laws, rules, regulations, and procedures governing the manner in which the business of the Foundation may be conducted and in which the powers granted to it by law may be exercised.

(3) MEMBERSHIP.—The Board shall consist of—

(A) the Secretary of State (or the Secretary's designee), the Secretary of Education (or the Secretary's designee), the Secretary of Defense (or the Secretary's designee), and the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development (or the Administrator's designee); and

(B) five other individuals with relevant experience in matters relating to study abroad (such as individuals who represent institutions of higher education, business organizations, foreign policy organizations, or other relevant organizations) who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of which—

(i) one individual shall be appointed from among a list of individuals submitted by the majority leader of the House of Representatives;

(ii) one individual shall be appointed from among a list of individuals submitted by the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(iii) one individual shall be appointed from among a list of individuals submitted by the majority leader of the Senate; and

(iv) one individual shall be appointed from among a list of individuals submitted by the minority leader of the Senate.

(4) CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—The Chief Executive Officer of the Foundation shall serve as a non-voting, ex-officio member of the Board.

(5) TERMS.—

(A) OFFICERS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—Each member of the Board described in paragraph (3)(A) shall serve for a term that is concurrent with the term of service of the individual's position as an officer within the other Federal department or agency.

(B) OTHER MEMBERS.—Each member of the Board described in paragraph (3)(B) shall be appointed for a term of three years and may be reappointed for one additional three-year term.

(C) VACANCIES.—A vacancy in the Board shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(6) CHAIRPERSON.—There shall be a Chairperson of the Board. The Secretary of State (or the Secretary's designee) shall serve as the Chairperson.

(7) QUORUM.—A majority of the members of the Board described in paragraph (3) shall constitute a quorum, which, except with respect to a meeting of the Board during the 135-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, shall include at least one member of the Board described in paragraph (3)(B).

(8) MEETINGS.—The Board shall meet at the call of the Chairperson.

(9) COMPENSATION.—

(A) OFFICERS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—A member of the Board described in paragraph (3)(A) may not receive additional pay, allowances, or benefits by reason of the member's service on the Board.

(ii) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each such member of the Board shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with applicable provisions under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code.

(B) OTHER MEMBERS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), a member of the Board described in paragraph (3)(B) while away from the member's home or regular place of business on necessary travel in the actual performance of duties as a member of the Board, shall be paid per diem, travel, and transportation expenses in the same manner as is provided under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code.

(ii) LIMITATION.—A member of the Board may not be paid compensation under clause (i) for more than 90 days in any calendar year.

SEC. 706. ESTABLISHMENT AND OPERATION OF PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PROGRAM.—There is hereby established a program, which shall—

(1) be administered by the Foundation; and
 (2) award grants to—
 (A) United States students for study abroad;
 (B) nongovernmental institutions that provide and promote study abroad opportunities for United States students, in consortium with institutions described in subparagraph (C); and
 (C) institutions of higher education, individually or in consortium, in order to accomplish the objectives set forth in subsection (b).

(b) OBJECTIVES.—The objectives of the program established under subsection (a) are that, within ten years of the date of the enactment of this Act—

(1) not less than 1,000,000 undergraduate United States students will study abroad annually for credit;

(2) the demographics of study-abroad participation will reflect the demographics of the United States undergraduate population, including students enrolled in community colleges, minority-serving institutions, and institutions serving large numbers of low-income and first-generation students; and

(3) an increasing portion of study abroad will take place in nontraditional study abroad destinations, with a substantial portion of such increases taking place in developing countries.

(c) MANDATE OF THE PROGRAM.—In order to accomplish the objectives set forth in subsection (b), the Foundation shall, in administering the program established under subsection (a), take fully into account the recommendations of the Commission on the Abraham Lincoln Study Abroad Fellowship Program (established pursuant to section 104 of the Miscellaneous Appropriations and Offsets Act, 2004 (division H of Public Law 108–199)).

(d) STRUCTURE OF GRANTS.—

(1) PROMOTING REFORM.—In accordance with the recommendations of the Commission on the Abraham Lincoln Study Abroad Fellowship Program, grants awarded under the program established under subsection (a) shall be structured to the maximum extent practicable to promote appropriate reforms in institutions of higher education in order to remove barriers to participation by students in study abroad.

(2) GRANTS TO INDIVIDUALS AND INSTITUTIONS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(A) the Foundation should award not more than 25 percent of the funds awarded as grants to individuals described in subparagraph (A) of subsection (a)(2) and not less than 75 percent of such funds to institutions described in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of such subsection; and

(B) the Foundation should ensure that not less than 85 percent of the amount awarded to such institutions is used to award scholarships to students.

(e) BALANCE OF LONG-TERM AND SHORT-TERM STUDY ABROAD PROGRAMS.—In administering the program established under subsection (a), the Foundation shall seek an appropriate balance between—

(1) longer-term study abroad programs, which maximize foreign-language learning and intercultural understanding; and

(2) shorter-term study abroad programs, which maximize the accessibility of study abroad to nontraditional students.

(f) QUALITY AND SAFETY IN STUDY ABROAD.—In administering the program established under subsection (a), the Foundation shall require that institutions receiving grants demonstrate that—

(1) the study abroad programs for which students receive grant funds are for academic credit; and

(2) the programs have established health and safety guidelines and procedures.

SEC. 707. ANNUAL REPORT.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than December 15, 2010, and each December 15 thereafter, the Foundation shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the implementation of this title during the prior fiscal year.

(b) CONTENTS.—The report required by subsection (a) shall include—

(1) the total financial resources available to the Foundation during the year, including appropriated funds, the value and source of any gifts or donations accepted pursuant to section 708(a)(6), and any other resources;

(2) a description of the Board's policy priorities for the year and the bases upon which grant proposals were solicited and awarded to institutions of higher education, nongovernmental institutions, and consortiums pursuant to sections 706(a)(2)(B) and 706(a)(2)(C);

(3) a list of grants made to institutions of higher education, nongovernmental institutions, and consortiums pursuant to sections 706(a)(2)(B) and 706(a)(2)(C) that includes the identity of the institutional recipient, the dollar amount, the estimated number of study abroad opportunities provided to United States students by each grant, the amount of the grant used by each institution for administrative expenses, and information on cost-sharing by each institution receiving a grant;

(4) a description of the bases upon which the Foundation made grants directly to United States students pursuant to section 706(a)(2)(A);

(5) the number and total dollar amount of grants made directly to United States students by the Foundation pursuant to section 706(a)(2)(A); and

(6) the total administrative and operating expenses of the Foundation for the year, as well as specific information on—

(A) the number of Foundation employees and the cost of compensation for Board members, Foundation employees, and personal service contractors;

(B) costs associated with securing the use of real property for carrying out the functions of the Foundation;

(C) total travel expenses incurred by Board members and Foundation employees in connection with Foundation activities; and

(D) total representational expenses.

SEC. 708. POWERS OF THE FOUNDATION; RELATED PROVISIONS.

(a) POWERS.—The Foundation—

(1) shall have perpetual succession unless dissolved by a law enacted after the date of the enactment of this Act;

(2) may adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

(3) may make and perform such contracts, grants, and other agreements with any person or government however designated and wherever situated, as may be necessary for carrying out the functions of the Foundation;

(4) may determine and prescribe the manner in which its obligations shall be incurred and its expenses allowed and paid, including expenses for representation;

(5) may lease, purchase, or otherwise acquire, improve, and use such real property wherever situated, as may be necessary for carrying out the functions of the Foundation;

(6) may accept cash gifts or donations of services or of property (real, personal, or mixed), tangible or intangible, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this title;

(7) may use the United States mails in the same manner and on the same conditions as the executive departments;

(8) may contract with individuals for personal services, who shall not be considered Federal employees for any provision of law administered by the Office of Personnel Management;

(9) may hire or obtain passenger motor vehicles; and

(10) shall have such other powers as may be necessary and incident to carrying out this title.

(b) PRINCIPAL OFFICE.—The Foundation shall maintain its principal office in the metropolitan area of Washington, District of Columbia.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF GOVERNMENT CORPORATION CONTROL ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Foundation shall be subject to chapter 91 of subtitle VI of title 31, United States Code, except that the Foundation shall not be authorized to issue obligations or offer obligations to the public.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 9101(3) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(S) the Senator Paul Simon Study Abroad Foundation.”.

(d) INSPECTOR GENERAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Inspector General of the Department of State shall serve as Inspector General of the Foundation, and, in acting in such capacity, may conduct reviews, investigations, and inspections of all aspects of the operations and activities of the Foundation.

(2) AUTHORITY OF THE BOARD.—In carrying out the responsibilities under this subsection, the Inspector General shall report to and be under the general supervision of the Board.

(3) REIMBURSEMENT AND AUTHORIZATION OF SERVICES.—

(A) REIMBURSEMENT.—The Foundation shall reimburse the Department of State for all expenses incurred by the Inspector General in connection with the Inspector General's responsibilities under this subsection.

(B) AUTHORIZATION FOR SERVICES.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated under section 711(a) for a fiscal year, up to $2,000,000 is authorized to be made available to the Inspector General of the Department of State to conduct reviews, investigations, and inspections of operations and activities of the Foundation.

SEC. 709. GENERAL PERSONNEL AUTHORITIES.

(a) DETAIL OF PERSONNEL.—Upon request of the Chief Executive Officer, the head of an agency may detail any employee of such agency to the Foundation on a reimbursable basis. Any employee so detailed remains, for the purpose of preserving such employee's allowances, privileges, rights, seniority, and other benefits, an employee of the agency from which detailed.

(b) REEMPLOYMENT RIGHTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An employee of an agency who is serving under a career or career conditional appointment (or the equivalent), and who, with the consent of the head of such agency, transfers to the Foundation, is entitled to be reemployed in such employee's former position or a position of like seniority, status, and pay in such agency, if such employee—

(A) is separated from the Foundation for any reason, other than misconduct, neglect of duty, or malfeasance; and

(B) applies for reemployment not later than 90 days after the date of separation from the Foundation.

(2) SPECIFIC RIGHTS.—An employee who satisfies paragraph (1) is entitled to be reemployed (in accordance with such paragraph) within 30 days after applying for reemployment and, on reemployment, is entitled to at least the rate of basic pay to which such employee would have been entitled had such employee never transferred.

(c) HIRING AUTHORITY.—Of persons employed by the Foundation, not to exceed 20 persons may be appointed, compensated, or removed without regard to the civil service laws and regulations.

(d) BASIC PAY.—The Chief Executive Officer may fix the rate of basic pay of employees of the Foundation without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 of title 5, United States Code (relating to the classification of positions), subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title (relating to General Schedule pay rates), except that no employee of the Foundation may receive a rate of basic pay that exceeds the rate for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of such title.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

(1) the term “agency” means an executive agency, as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code; and

(2) the term “detail” means the assignment or loan of an employee, without a change of position, from the agency by which such employee is employed to the Foundation.

SEC. 710. GAO REVIEW.

(a) REVIEW REQUIRED.—Not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall commence a review of the operations of the Foundation.

(b) CONTENT.—In conducting the review required under subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall analyze—

(1) whether the Foundation is organized and operating in a manner that will permit it to fulfill the purposes of this section, as set forth in section 603;

(2) the degree to which the Foundation is operating efficiently and in a manner consistent with the requirements of paragraphs (4) and (5) of section 605(b);

(3) whether grant-making by the Foundation is being undertaken in a manner consistent with subsections (d), (e), and (f) of section 606;

(4) the extent to which the Foundation is using best practices in the implementation of this Act and the administration of the program described in section 606; and

(5) other relevant matters, as determined by the Comptroller General, after consultation with the appropriate congressional committees.

(c) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General shall submit a report on the results of the review conducted under subsection (a) to the Secretary of State (in the capacity of the Secretary as Chairperson of the Board of the Foundation) and to the appropriate congressional committees.

SEC. 711. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $40,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and $80,000,000 for fiscal year 2011.

(2) AMOUNTS IN ADDITION TO OTHER AVAILABLE AMOUNTS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated by paragraph (1) are in addition to amounts authorized to be appropriated or otherwise made available for educational exchange programs, including the J. William Fulbright Educational Exchange Program and the Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarship Program, administered by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the Department of State.

(b) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Foundation may allocate or transfer to any agency of the United States Government any of the funds available for carrying out this Act. Such funds shall be available for obligation and expenditure for the purposes for which the funds were authorized, in accordance with authority granted in this Act or under authority governing the activities of the United States Government agency to which such funds are allocated or transferred.

(2) NOTIFICATION.—The Foundation shall notify the appropriate congressional committees not less than 15 days prior to an allocation or transfer of funds pursuant to paragraph (1).

TITLE VIII—EXPORT CONTROL REFORM AND SECURITY ASSISTANCE

Subtitle A—Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2009

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2009”.

SEC. 802. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) In a time of international terrorist threats and a dynamic global economic and security environment, United States policy with regard to export controls is in urgent need of a comprehensive review in order to ensure such controls are protecting the national security and foreign policy interests of the United States.

(2) In January 2007, the Government Accountability Office designated the effective identification and protection of critical technologies as a government-wide, high-risk area, warranting a strategic reexamination of existing programs, including programs relating to arms export controls.

(3) Federal Government agencies must review licenses for export of munitions in a thorough and timely manner to ensure that the United States is able to assist United States allies and to prevent nuclear and conventional weapons from getting into the hands of enemies of the United States.

(4) Both staffing and funding that relate to the Department of State’s arms export control responsibilities have not kept pace with the increased workload relating to such responsibilities, especially during the current decade.

(5) Outsourcing and off-shoring of defense production and the policy of many United States trading partners to require offsets for major sales of defense and aerospace articles present a potential threat to United States national security and economic well-being and serve to weaken the defense industrial base.

(6) Export control policies can have a negative impact on United States employment, non-proliferation goals, and the health of the defense industrial base, particularly when facilitating the overseas transfer of technology or production and other forms of outsourcing, such as offsets (direct and indirect), co-production, subcontracts, overseas investment and joint ventures in defense and commercial industries. Federal Government agencies must develop new and effective procedures for ensuring that export control systems address these problems and the threat they pose to national security.

(7) In the report to Congress required by the Conference Report (Report 109–272) accompanying the bill, H.R. 2862 (the Science, State, Justice, Commerce and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2006; Public Law 109–108), the Department of State concluded that—

(A) defense trade licensing has become much more complex in recent years as a consequence of the increasing globalization of the defense industry;

(B) the most important challenge to the Department of State’s licensing process has been the sheer growth in volume of applicants for licenses and agreements, without the corresponding increase in licensing officers; and

(C) the increase in licensing volume without a corresponding increase in trained and experienced personnel has resulted in delays and increased processing times.

(8) In 2006, the Department of State processed over three times as many licensing applications as the Department of Commerce with about a fifth of the staff of the Department of Commerce.

(9) On July 27, 2007, in testimony delivered to the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Nonproliferation and Trade of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives to examine the effectiveness of the United States export control regime, the Government Accountability Office found that—

(A) the United States Government needs to conduct assessments to determine its overall effectiveness in the area of arms export control; and

(B) the processing times of the Department of State doubled over the period from 2002 to 2006.

(10)(A) Allowing a continuation of the status quo in resources for defense trade licensing could ultimately harm the United States defense industrial base. The 2007 Institute for Defense Analysis report entitled “Export Controls and the U.S. Defense Industrial Base” found that the large backlog and long processing times by the Department of State for applications for licenses to export defense items led to an impairment of United States firms in some sectors to conduct global business relative to foreign competitors.

(B) Additionally, the report found that United States commercial firms have been reluctant to engage in research and development activities for the Department of Defense because this raises the future prospects that the products based on this research and development, even if intrinsically commercial, will be saddled by Department of State munitions controls due to the link to that research.

(11) According to the Department of State’s fiscal year 2008 budget justification to Congress, commercial exports licensed or approved under the Arms Export Control Act exceeded $30,000,000,000, with nearly eighty percent of these items exported to United States NATO allies and other major non-NATO allies.

(12) A Government Accountability Office report of October 9, 2001 (GAO–02–120), documented ambiguous export control jurisdiction affecting 25 percent of the items that the United States Government agreed to control as part of its commitments to the Missile Technology Control Regime. The United States Government has not clearly determined which department has jurisdiction over these items, which increases the risk that these items will fall into the wrong hands. During both the 108th, 109th, and 110th Congresses, the House of Representatives passed legislation mandating that the Administration clarify this issue.

(13) During 2007 and 2008, the management and staff of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State have, through extraordinary effort and dedication, eliminated the large backlog of open applications and have reduced average processing times for license applications; however, the Directorate remains understaffed and long delays remain for complicated cases.

SEC. 803. STRATEGIC REVIEW AND ASSESSMENT OF THE UNITED STATES EXPORT CONTROLS SYSTEM.

(a) REVIEW AND ASSESSMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2010, the President shall conduct a comprehensive and systematic review and assessment of the United States arms export controls system in the context of the national security interests and strategic foreign policy objectives of the United States.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The review and assessment required under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) determine the overall effectiveness of the United States arms export controls system in order to, where appropriate, strengthen controls, improve efficiency, and reduce unnecessary redundancies across Federal Government agencies, through administrative actions, including regulations, and to formulate legislative proposals for new authorities that are needed;

(B) develop processes to ensure better coordination of arms export control activities of the Department of State with activities of other departments and agencies of the United States that are responsible for enforcing United States arms export control laws;

(C) ensure that weapons-related nuclear technology, other technology related to weapons of mass destruction, and all items on the Missile Technology Control Regime Annex are subject to stringent control by the United States Government;

(D) determine the overall effect of arms export controls on counterterrorism, law enforcement, and infrastructure protection missions of the Department of Homeland Security;

(E) determine the effects of export controls policies and the practices of the export control agencies on the United States defense industrial base and United States employment in the industries affected by export controls;

(F) contain a detailed summary of known attempts by unauthorized end-users (such as international arms traffickers, foreign intelligence agencies, and foreign terrorist organizations) to acquire items on the United States Munitions List and related technical data, including—

(i) data on—

(I) commodities sought, such as M-4 rifles, night vision devices, F-14 spare parts;

(II) parties involved, such as the intended end-users, brokers, consignees, and shippers;

(III) attempted acquisition of technology and technical data critical to manufacture items on the United States Munitions List;

(IV) destination countries and transit countries;

(V) modes of transport;

(VI) trafficking methods, such as use of false documentation and front companies registered under flags of convenience;

(VII) whether the attempted illicit transfer was successful; and

(VIII) any administrative or criminal enforcement actions taken by the United States and any other government in relation to the attempted illicit transfer;

(ii) a thorough evaluation of the Blue Lantern Program, including the adequacy of current staffing and funding levels;

(iii) a detailed analysis of licensing exemptions and their successful exploitation by unauthorized end-users; and

(iv) an examination of the extent to which the increased tendency toward outsourcing and offshoring of defense production harm United States national security and weaken the defense industrial base, including direct and indirect impact on employment, and formulate policies to address these trends as well as the policy of some United States trading partners to require offsets for major sales of defense articles; and

(G) assess the extent to which export control policies and practices under the Arms Export Control Act promote the protection of basic human rights.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL BRIEFINGS.—The President shall provide periodic briefings to the appropriate congressional committees on the progress of the review and assessment conducted under subsection (a). The requirement to provide congressional briefings under this subsection shall terminate on the date on which the President transmits to the appropriate congressional committees the report required under subsection (c).

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate a report that contains the results of the review and assessment conducted under subsection (a). The report required by this subsection shall contain a certification that the requirement of subsection (a)(2)(C) has been met, or if the requirement has not been met, the reasons therefor.

The report required by this subsection shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may contain a classified annex, if necessary.

SEC. 804. PERFORMANCE GOALS FOR PROCESSING OF APPLICATIONS FOR LICENSES TO EXPORT ITEMS ON UNITED STATES MUNITIONS LIST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State, acting through the head of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State, shall establish and maintain the following goals:

(1) The processing time for review of each application for a license to export items on the United States Munitions List (other than a Manufacturing License Agreement) shall be not more than 60 days from the date of receipt of the application.

(2) The processing time for review of each application for a commodity jurisdiction determination shall be not more than 60 days from the date of receipt of the application.

(3) The total number of applications described in paragraph (1) that are unprocessed shall be not more than 7 percent of the total number of such applications submitted in the preceding calendar year.

(b) ADDITIONAL REVIEW.—(1) If an application described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) is not processed within the time period described in the respective paragraph of such subsection, then the Managing Director of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls or the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Defense Trade and Regional Security of the Department of State, as appropriate, shall review the status of the application to determine if further action is required to process the application.

(2) If an application described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) is not processed within 90 days from the date of receipt of the application, then the Assistant Secretary for Political-Military Affairs of the Department of State shall—

(A) review the status of the application to determine if further action is required to process the application; and

(B) submit to the appropriate congressional committees a notification of the review conducted under subparagraph (A), including a description of the application, the reason for delay in processing the application, and a proposal for further action to process the application.

(3) For each calendar year, the Managing Director of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls shall review not less than 2 percent of the total number of applications described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) to ensure that the processing of such applications, including decisions to approve, deny, or return without action, is consistent with both policy and regulatory requirements of the Department of State.

(c) STATEMENTS OF POLICY.—

(1) UNITED STATES ALLIES.—Congress states that—

(A) it shall be the policy of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, the processing time for review of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to export items that are not subject to the requirements of section 36 (b) or (c) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2776 (b) or (c)) to United States allies in direct support of combat operations or peacekeeping or humanitarian operations with United States Armed Forces is not more than 7 days from the date of receipt of the application; and

(B) it shall be the goal, as appropriate, of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, the processing time for review of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to export items that are not subject to the requirements of section 36

(b) or (c) of the Arms Export Control Act to government security agencies of United States NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, Israel, and, as appropriate, other major non-NATO allies for any purpose other than the purpose described in paragraph (1) is not more than 30 days from the date of receipt of the application.

(2) PRIORITY FOR APPLICATIONS FOR EXPORT OF U.S.-ORIGIN EQUIPMENT.—In meeting the goals established by this section, it shall be the policy of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State to prioritize the processing of applications for licenses and agreements necessary for the export of United States-origin equipment over applications for Manufacturing License Agreements.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2011, and December 31, 2012, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains a detailed description of—

(1)(A) the average processing time for and number of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to—

(i) United States NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, and Israel;

(ii) other major non-NATO allies; and

(iii) all other countries; and

(B) to the extent practicable, the average processing time for and number of applications described in subsection (b)(1) by item category;

(2) the average processing time for and number of applications described in subsection (a)(2);

(3) the average processing time for and number of applications for agreements described in part 124 of title 22, Code of Federal Regulations (relating to the International Traffic in Arms Regulations) (other than Manufacturing License Agreements));

(4) the average processing times for applications for Manufacturing License Agreements;

(5) any management decisions of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State that have been made in response to data contained in paragraphs (1) through (3); and

(6) any advances in technology that will allow the time-frames described in subsection (a)(1) to be substantially reduced.

(e) CONGRESSIONAL BRIEFINGS.—If, at the end of any month beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act, the total number of applications described in subsection (a)(1) that are unprocessed is more than 7 percent of the total number of such applications submitted in the preceding calendar year, then the Secretary of State, acting through the Under Secretary for Arms Control and International Security, the Assistant Secretary for Political-Military Affairs, or the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Defense Trade and Regional Security of the Department of State, as appropriate, shall brief the appropriate congressional committees on such matters and the corrective measures that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls will take to comply with the requirements of subsection (a).

(f) TRANSPARENCY OF COMMODITY JURISDICTION DETERMINATIONS.—

(1) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—Congress declares that the complete confidentiality surrounding several hundred commodity jurisdiction determinations made each year by the Department of State pursuant to the International Traffic in Arms Regulations is not necessary to protect legitimate proprietary interests of persons or their prices and customers, is not in the best security and foreign policy interests of the United States, is inconsistent with the need to ensure a level playing field for United States exporters, and detracts from United States efforts to promote greater transparency and responsibility by other countries in their export control systems.

(2) PUBLICATION ON INTERNET WEBSITE.—The Secretary of State shall—

(A) upon making a commodity jurisdiction determination referred to in paragraph (1) publish on the Internet website of the Department of State not later than 30 days after the date of the determination—

(i) the name of the manufacturer of the item;
(ii) a brief general description of the item;
(iii) the model or part number of the item; and
(iv) the United States Munitions List designation under which the item has been designated, except that—

(I) the name of the person or business organization that sought the commodity jurisdiction determination shall not be published if the person or business organization is not the manufacturer of the item; and

(II) the names of the customers, the price of the item, and any proprietary information relating to the item indicated by the person or business organization that sought the commodity jurisdiction determination shall not be published; and

(B) maintain on the Internet website of the Department of State an archive, that is accessible to the general public and other departments and agencies of the United States, of the information published under subparagraph (A).

(g) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the President or Congress from undertaking a thorough review of the national security and foreign policy implications of a proposed export of items on the United States Munitions List.

SEC. 805. REQUIREMENT TO ENSURE ADEQUATE STAFF AND RESOURCES FOR THE DIRECTORATE OF DEFENSE TRADE CONTROLS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of State shall ensure that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State has the necessary staff and resources to carry out this subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle.

(b) MINIMUM NUMBER OF LICENSING OFFICERS.—For fiscal year 2011 and each subsequent fiscal year, the Secretary of State shall ensure that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls has at least 1 licensing officer for every 1,250 applications for licenses and other authorizations to export items on the United States Munitions List by not later than the third quarter of such fiscal year, based on the number of licenses and other authorizations expected to be received during such fiscal year. The Secretary shall ensure that in meeting the requirement of this subsection, the performance of other functions of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls is maintained and adequate staff is provided for those functions.

(c) MINIMUM NUMBER OF STAFF FOR COMMODITY JURISDICTION DETERMINATIONS.—For each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2012, the Secretary of State shall ensure that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls has, to the extent practicable, not less than three individuals assigned to review applications for commodity jurisdiction determinations.

(d) ENFORCEMENT RESOURCES.—In accordance with section 127.4 of title 22, Code of Federal Regulations, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement is authorized to investigate violations of the International Traffic in Arms Regulations on behalf of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State. The Secretary of State shall ensure that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls has adequate staffing for enforcement of the International Traffic in Arms Regulations.

SEC. 806. AUDIT BY INSPECTOR GENERAL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

(a) AUDIT.—Not later than the end of each of the fiscal years 2011 and 2012, the Inspector General of the Department of State shall conduct an independent audit to determine the extent to which the Department of State is meeting the requirements of sections 804 and 805.

(b) REPORT.—The Inspector General shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains the result of each audit conducted under subsection (a).

(b) CONDUCT OF REVIEW.—In carrying out the review required under subsection (a), the Secretary of State shall review not less than 20 percent of the technologies and goods on the International Traffic in Arms Regulations and the United States Munitions List in each calendar year so that for the 5-year period beginning with calendar year 2010, and for each subsequent 5-year period, the International Traffic in Arms Regulations and the United States Munitions List will be reviewed in their entirety.

(c) REPORT.—The Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate an annual report on the results of the review carried out under this section.

SEC. 809. SPECIAL LICENSING AUTHORIZATION FOR CERTAIN EXPORTS TO NATO MEMBER STATES, AUSTRALIA, JAPAN, NEW ZEALAND, ISRAEL, AND SOUTH KOREA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 38 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2778) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(k) SPECIAL LICENSING AUTHORIZATION FOR CERTAIN EXPORTS TO NATO MEMBER STATES, AUSTRALIA, JAPAN, NEW ZEALAND, ISRAEL, AND SOUTH KOREA.—

“(1) AUTHORIZATION.—(A) The President may provide for special licensing authorization for exports of United States-manufactured spare and replacement parts or components listed in an application for such special licensing authorization in connection with defense items previously exported to NATO member states, Australia, Japan, New Zealand, Israel, and South Korea. A special licensing authorization issued pursuant to this clause shall be effective for a period not to exceed 5 years.

“(B) An authorization may be issued under subparagraph (A) only if the applicable government of the country described in subparagraph (A), acting through the applicant for the authorization, certifies that—“(i) the export of spare and replacement parts or components supports a defense item previously lawfully exported;

“(ii) the spare and replacement parts or components will be transferred to a defense agency of a country described in subparagraph (A) that is a previously approved end-user of the defense items and not to a distributor or a foreign consignee of such defense items;

“(iii) the spare and replacement parts or components will not be used to materially enhance, optimize, or otherwise modify or upgrade the capability of the defense items;

“(iv) the spare and replacement parts or components relate to a defense item that is owned, operated, and in the inventory of the armed forces of a country described in subparagraph (A);

“(v) the export of spare and replacement parts or components will be effected using the freight forwarder designated by the purchasing country’s diplomatic mission as responsible for handling transfers under chapter 2 of this Act as required under regulations; and

“(vi) the spare and replacement parts or components to be exported under the special licensing authorization are specifically identified in the application.

“(C) An authorization may not be issued under subparagraph (A) for purposes of establishing offshore procurement arrangements or producing defense articles offshore.

“(D)(i) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘United States-manufactured spare and replacement parts or components’ means spare and replacement parts or components—

“(I) with respect to which—

“(aa) United States-origin content costs constitute at least 85 percent of the total content costs;

“(bb) United States manufacturing costs constitute at least 85 percent of the total manufacturing costs; and

“(cc) foreign content, if any, is limited to content from countries eligible to receive exports of items on the United States Munitions List under the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (other than de minimis foreign content);

“(II) that were last substantially transformed in the United States; and

“(III) that are not—

“(aa) classified as significant military equipment; or

“(ii) For purposes of clause (i)(I) (aa) and (bb), the costs of non-United States-origin content shall be determined using the final price or final cost associated with the non-United States-origin content.

“(2) INAPPLICABILITY PROVISIONS.—(A) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply with respect to re-exports or re-transfers of spare and replacement parts or components and related services of defense items described in paragraph (1).

“(B) The congressional notification requirements contained in section 36(c) of this Act shall not apply with respect to an authorization issued under paragraph (1).”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The President shall issue regulations to implement amendments made by subsection (a) not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 810. AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION ON THE STATUS OF LICENSE APPLICATIONS UNDER CHAPTER 3 OF THE ARMS EXPORT CONTROL ACT.

Chapter 3 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2771 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 38 the following new section:

“SEC. 38A. AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION ON THE STATUS OF LICENSE APPLICATIONS UNDER THIS CHAPTER.

“(a) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of the Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2009, the President shall make available to persons who have pending license applications under this chapter and the committees of jurisdiction the ability to access electronically current information on the status of each license application required to be submitted under this chapter.

“(b) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The information referred to in subsection (a) shall be limited to the following:

“(1) The case number of the license application.

“(2) The date on which the license application is received by the Department of State and becomes an ‘open application’.

“(3) The date on which the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls makes a determination with respect to the license application or transmits it for interagency review, if required.

“(4) The date on which the interagency review process for the license application is completed, if such a review process is required.

“(5) The date on which the Department of State begins consultations with the congressional committees of jurisdiction with respect to the license application.

“(6) The date on which the license application is sent to the congressional committees of jurisdiction.”.

SEC. 811. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1)(A) the advice provided to the Secretary of State by the Defense Trade Advisory Group (DTAG) supports the regulation of defense trade and helps ensure that United States national security and foreign policy interests continue to be protected and advanced while helping to reduce unnecessary impediments to legitimate exports in order to support the defense requirements of United States friends and allies; and

(B) therefore, the Secretary of State should share significant planned rules and policy shifts with DTAG for comment; and vakia, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, and Ukraine.”.

(2) recognizing the constraints imposed on the Department of State by the nature of a voluntary organization such as DTAG, the Secretary of State is encouraged to ensure that members of DTAG are drawn from a representative cross-section of subject matter experts from the United States defense industry, relevant trade and labor associations, academic, and foundation personnel.

SEC. 848. SUPPORT TO ISRAEL FOR MISSILE DEFENSE.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF ASSISTANCE.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for co-development of joint ballistic missile, medium and short-range projectile defense projects with Israel, including—

(1) complete accelerated co-production of Arrow missiles;

(2) system development of the Israel Missile Defense Organization program to develop a short-range ballistic missile defense capability, David’s Sling weapon system, and integrate the weapon system with the ballistic missile defense system and force protection efforts of the United States; and

(3) research, development, and test and evaluation of the Iron Dome short-range projectile defense system.

(b) REPORT AND STRATEGY.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter in connection with the submission of congressional presentation materials for the foreign operations appropriations and defense appropriations budget request, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report regarding the activities authorized under subsection (a)(1).

(2) CLASSIFIED ANNEX.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form to the maximum extent practicable, but may include a classified annex, if necessary.

(3) DEFINITION OF APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—In this subsection, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives; and

(B) the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Armed Services in the Senate.

TITLE IX—ACTIONS TO ENHANCE THE MERIDA INITIATIVESubtitle A—General Provisions*SEC. 901. COORDINATOR OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ACTIVITIES TO IMPLEMENT THE MERIDA INITIATIVE.

(a) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—Congress declares that the Merida Initiative is a Department of State-led initiative which combines the programs of numerous United States Government departments and agencies and therefore requires a single individual to coordinate and track all Merida Initiative-related efforts government-wide to avoid duplication, coordinate messaging, and facilitate accountability to and communication with Congress.

(b) DESIGNATION OF HIGH-LEVEL COORDINATOR.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall designate, within the Department of State, a Coordinator of United States Government Activities to Implement the Merida Initiative (hereafter in this section referred to as the “Coordinator”) who shall be responsible for—

(A) designing and shaping an overall strategy for the Merida Initiative;

(B) ensuring program and policy coordination among United States Government departments and agencies in carrying out the Merida Initiative, including avoiding duplication among programs and ensuring that a consistent message emanates from the United States Government;

(C) ensuring that efforts of the United States Government are in full consonance with the efforts of the countries within the Merida Initiative;

(D) tracking, in coordination with the relevant officials of the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies, United States assistance programs that fulfill the goals of the Merida Initiative or are closely related to the goals of the Merida Initiative;

(E) to the extent possible, tracking information required under the second section 620J of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2378d) (as added by section 651 of division J of Public Law 110-161) with respect to countries participating in the Merida Initiative; and

(F) consulting with the Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security with respect to the activities of Federal, State, and local law enforcement authorities in the United States relating to the goals of the Merida Initiative, particularly along the United States-Mexico border.

(2) RANK AND STATUS OF THE COORDINATOR.—The Coordinator should have the rank and status of ambassador.

(3) COUNTRIES WITHIN THE MERIDA INITIATIVE DEFINED.—The term “countries within the Merida Initiative” means Belize, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, and Panama and includes Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

SEC. 902. ADDING THE CARIBBEAN TO THE MERIDA INITIATIVE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The illicit drug trade—which has taken a toll on the small countries of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) for many years—is now moving even more aggressively into these countries.

(2) A March 2007 joint report by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and the World Bank noted that murder rates in the Caribbean—at 30 per 100,000 population annually—are higher than for any other region of the world and have risen in recent years for many of the region’s countries. The report also argues that the strongest explanation for the high crime and violence rates in the Caribbean and their rise in recent years is drug trafficking.

(3) If the United States does not move quickly to provide Merida Initiative assistance to the CARICOM countries, the positive results of the Merida Initiative in Mexico and Central America will move the drug trade deeper into the Caribbean and multiply the already alarming rates of violence.

(b) CONSULTATIONS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State is authorized to consult with the countries of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) in preparation for their inclusion into the Merida Initiative.

(c) INCORPORATION OF CARICOM COUNTRIES INTO THE MERIDA INITIATIVE.—The President is authorized to incorporate the CARICOM countries into the Merida Initiative.

SEC. 903. MERIDA INITIATIVE MONITORING AND EVALUATION MECHANISM.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) IMPACT EVALUATION RESEARCH.—The term “impact evaluation research” means the application of research methods and statistical analysis to measure the extent to which change in a population-based outcome can be attributed to program intervention instead of other environmental factors.

(2) OPERATIONS RESEARCH.—The term “operations research” means the application of social science research methods, statistical analysis, and other appropriate scientific methods to judge, compare, and improve policies and program outcomes, from the earliest stages of defining and designing programs through their development and implementation, with the objective of the rapid dissemination of conclusions and concrete impact on programming.

(3) PROGRAM MONITORING.—The term “program monitoring” means the collection, analysis, and use of routine program data to determine how well a program is carried out and how much the program costs.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) to successfully support building the capacity of recipient countries’ civilian security institutions, enhance the rule of law in recipient countries, and ensure the protection of human rights, the President should establish a program to conduct impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring to ensure effectiveness of assistance provided under the Merida Initiative;

(2) long-term solutions to the security problems of Merida recipient countries depend on increasing the effectiveness and responsiveness of their civilian institutions, including their judicial system;

(3) a specific program of impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring, established at the inception of the program, is required to permit assessment of the operational effectiveness of the impact of United States assistance towards these goals; and

(4) the President, in developing performance measurement methods under the impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring, should consult with the appropriate congressional committees as well as the governments of Merida recipient countries.

(c) IMPACT EVALUATION RESEARCH, OPERATION RESEARCH, AND PROGRAM MONITORING OF ASSISTANCE.—The President shall establish and implement a program to assess the effectiveness of assistance provided under the Merida Initiative through impact evaluation research on a selected set of programmatic interventions, operations research in areas to ensure efficiency and effectiveness of program implementation, and monitoring to ensure timely and transparent delivery of assistance.

(d) REQUIREMENTS.—The program required under subsection (c) shall include—

(1) a delineation of key impact evaluation research and operations research questions for main components of assistance provided under the Merida Initiative;

(2) an identification of measurable performance goals for each of the main components of assistance provided under the Merida Initiative, to be expressed in an objective and quantifiable form at the inception of the program;

(3) the use of appropriate methods, based on rigorous social science tools, to measure program impact and operational efficiency; and

(4) adherence to a high standard of evidence in developing recommendations for adjustments to such assistance to enhance the impact of such assistance.

(e) CONSULTATION WITH CONGRESS.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall brief and consult with the appropriate congressional committees regarding the progress in establishing and implementing the program required under subsection (c).

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for the Merida Initiative, up to five percent of such amounts is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section.

(g) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section and not later than December 1 of each year thereafter, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report regarding programs and activities carried out under the Merida Initiative during the preceding fiscal year.

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The reports required under subsection (g) shall include the following:

(A) FINDINGS.—Findings related to the impact evaluation research, operation research, and program monitoring of assistance program established under subsection (c).

(B) COORDINATION.—Efforts of the United States Government to coordinate its activities, including—

(i) a description of all counternarcotics and organized crime assistance provided to Merida Initiative recipient countries in the previous fiscal year;

(ii) an assessment of how such assistance was coordinated; and

(iii) recommendations for improving coordination.

(C) TRANSFER OF EQUIPMENT.—A description of the transfer of equipment, including—

(i) a description of the progress of each recipient country toward the transfer of equipment, if any, from its armed forces to law enforcement agencies;

(ii) a list of agencies that have used air assets provided by the United States under the Merida Initiative to the government of each recipient country, and, to the extent possible, a detailed description of those agencies that have utilized such air assets, such as by a percentage breakdown of use by each agency; and

(iii) a description of training of law enforcement agencies to operate equipment, including air assets.

(D) HUMAN RIGHTS.—In accordance with sections 116(d) and 502B(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151n(d) and 2304(b)) and section 504 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2464), an assessment of the human rights impact of the equipment and training provided under the Merida Initiative, including—

(i) a list of accusations of serious human rights abuses committed by the armed forces and law enforcement agencies of recipient countries on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(ii) a description of efforts by the governments of Merida recipient countries to investigate and prosecute allegations of abuses of human rights committed by any agency of such recipient countries.

(E) EFFECTIVENESS OF EQUIPMENT.—An assessment of the long-term effectiveness of the equipment and maintenance packages and training provided to each recipient country’s security institutions.

(F) MEXICO PUBLIC SECURITY STRATEGY.—A description of Mexico’s development of a public security strategy, including—

(i) effectiveness of the Mexican Federal Registry of Police Personnel to vet police recruiting at the National, state, and municipal levels to prevent rehiring from one force to the next after dismissal for corruption and other reasons; and

(ii) an assessment of how the Merida Initiative complements and supports the Mexican Government’s own public security strategy.

(G) FLOW OF ILLEGAL ARMS.—A description and assessment of efforts to reduce the south-bound flow of illegal arms.

(H) USE OF CONTRACTORS.—A detailed description of contracts awarded to private companies to carry out provisions of the Merida Initiative, including—

(i) a description of the number of United States and foreign national civilian contractors awarded contracts;

(ii) a list of the total dollar value of the contracts; and

(iii) the purposes of the contracts.

(I) PHASE OUT OF LAW ENFORCEMENT ACTIVITIES.—A description of the progress of phasing out law enforcement activities of the armed forces of each recipient country.

(J) IMPACT ON BORDER VIOLENCE AND SECURITY.—A description of the impact that activities authorized under the Merida Initiative have had on violence against United States and Mexican border personnel and the extent to which these activities have increased the protection and security of the United States-Mexico border.

SEC. 904. MERIDA INITIATIVE DEFINED.

In this subtitle, the term “Merida Initiative” means the program announced by the United States and Mexico on October 22, 2007, to fight illicit narcotics trafficking and criminal organizations throughout the Western Hemisphere.

Subtitle B—Prevention of Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons

SEC. 911. TASK FORCE ON THE PREVENTION OF ILLICIT SMALL ARMS TRAFFICKING IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The President shall establish an inter-agency task force to be known as the “Task Force on the Prevention of Illicit Small Arms Trafficking in the Western Hemisphere” (in this section referred to as the “Task Force”).

(b) DUTIES.—The Task Force shall develop a strategy for the Federal Government to improve United States export controls on the illicit export of small arms and light weapons throughout the Western Hemisphere, including Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean, and South America. The Task Force shall—

(1) conduct a thorough review and analysis of the current regulation of exports of small arms and light weapons; and

(2) develop integrated Federal policies to better control exports of small arms and light weapons in a manner that furthers the foreign policy and national security interests of the United States within the Western Hemisphere.

(c) MEMBERSHIP.—The Task Force shall be composed of—

(1) the Secretary of State;

(2) the Attorney General;

(3) the Secretary of Homeland Security; and

(4) the heads of other Federal departments and agencies as appropriate.

(d) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary of State shall serve as the chairperson of the Task Force.

(e) MEETINGS.—The Task Force shall meet at the call of the chairperson or a majority of its members.

(f) ANNUAL REPORTS.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter until October 31, 2014, the chairperson of the Task Force shall submit to Congress and make available to the public a report that contains—

(1) a description of the activities of the Task Force during the preceding year; and

(2) the findings, strategies, recommendations, policies, and initiatives developed pursuant to the duties of the Task Force under subsection (b) during the preceding year.

SEC. 912. INCREASE IN PENALTIES FOR ILLICIT TRAFFICKING IN SMALL ARMS AND LIGHT WEAPONS TO COUNTRIES IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 38(c) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2778(c)), any person who willfully exports to a country in the Western Hemisphere any small arm or light weapon without a license in violation of the requirements of section 38 of such Act shall upon conviction be fined for each violation not less than $1,000,000 but not more than $3,000,000 and imprisoned for not more than twenty years, or both.

(b) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “small arm or light weapon” means any item listed in Category I(a), Category III (as it applies to Category I(a)), or grenades under Category IV(a) of the United States Munitions List (as contained in part 121 of title 22, Code of Federal Regulations (or successor regulations)) that requires a license for international export under this section.

SEC. 913. DEPARTMENT OF STATE REWARDS PROGRAM.

Section 36(b) of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 (22 U.S.C. 2708(b)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (4) through (7) as paragraphs (5) through (8), respectively;

(2) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

“(4) the arrest or conviction in any country of any individual for illegally exporting or attempting to export to Mexico any small arm or light weapon (as defined in section 912(b) of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011);”;

(3) in paragraphs (5) and (6) (as redesignated), by striking “paragraph (1), (2), or (3)” each place it appears and inserting “paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4)”.

SEC. 914. STATEMENT OF CONGRESS SUPPORTING UNITED STATES RATIFICATION OF CIFTA.

Congress supports the ratification by the United States of the Inter-American Convention Against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials.

TITLE X—REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

SEC. 1001. ASSESSMENT OF SPECIAL COURT FOR SIERRA LEONE.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees an assessment on the continuing needs of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, including an assessment of the following activities of the Special Court:

(1) Witness protection.

(2) Archival activities, including record-keeping associated with future legal work by the Special Court.

(3) The residual registrar’s capacity for enforcing Special Court sentences and maintaining relations with countries hosting imprisoned convicts of the Special Court, legal decisionmaking regarding future appeals, conditions of prisoner treatment, contempt proceedings, and financial matters relating to such activities.

(4) Transfer or maintenance of Special Court records to a permanent recordkeeping authority in Sierra Leone.

(5) Ongoing needs or programs for community outreach, for the purpose of reconciliation and healing, regarding the Special Court’s legal proceedings and decisions.

(6) Plans for the Special Court’s facilities in Sierra Leone and plans to use the Special Court, and expertise of its personnel, for further development of the legal profession and an independent and effective judiciary in Sierra Leone.

(7) Unresolved cases, or cases that were not prosecuted.

SEC. 1002. REPORT ON UNITED STATES CAPACITIES TO PREVENT GENOCIDE AND MASS ATROCITIES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The lack of an effective government-wide strategy and adequate capacities for preventing genocide and mass atrocities against civilians undermines the ability of the United States to contribute to the maintenance of global peace and security and protect vital United States interests.

(2) The December 2008 Report of the Genocide Prevention Task Force, co-chaired by former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and former Secretary of Defense William Cohen offers a valuable blueprint for strengthening United States capacities to help prevent genocide and mass atrocities.

(3) Specific training and staffing will enhance the diplomatic capacities of the Department of State to help prevent and respond to threats of genocide and mass atrocities.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report outlining specific plans for the development of a government-wide strategy and the strengthening of United States civilian capacities for preventing genocide and mass atrocities against civilians.

(2) CONTENT.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) An evaluation of current mechanisms for government-wide early warning, information-sharing, contingency planning, and coordination of effort to prevent and respond to situations of genocide, mass atrocities, and other mass violence.

(B) An assessment of current capacities within the Department of State, including specific staffing and training, for early warning, preventive diplomacy, and crisis response to help avert genocide and mass atrocities.

(C) An evaluation of United States foreign assistance programs and mechanisms directed toward the prevention of genocide and mass atrocities, including costs, challenges to implementation, and successes of such programs and mechanisms.

(D) An assessment of the feasibility, effectiveness, and potential costs of implementing key recommendations made by the Genocide Prevention Task Force, including the establishment of an Atrocities Prevention Committee within the National Security Council and increased annual and contingency funding for the prevention of genocide and mass atrocities.

(E) Recommendations to further strengthen United States capacities to help prevent genocide, mass atrocities, and other mass violence, including enhanced early warning mechanisms, strengthened diplomatic capacities of the Department of State, and improved use of United States foreign assistance.

SEC. 1003. REPORTS RELATING TO PROGRAMS TO ENCOURAGE GOOD GOVERNANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (C) of section 133(d)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2152c(d)(2)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, including, with respect to a country that produces or exports large amounts of natural resources such as petroleum or natural resources, the degree to which citizens of the country have access to information about government revenue from the extraction of such resources and credible reports of human rights abuses against individuals from civil society or the media seeking to monitor such extraction”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to reports required to be transmitted under section 133(d)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as so amended, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1004. REPORTS ON HONG KONG.

Section 301 of the United States-Hong Kong Policy Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-383; 22 U.S.C. 5731) is amended, in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking “and March 31, 2006” and inserting “March 31, 2006, and March 31, 2010, and March 31 of every subsequent year through 2020.”

SEC. 1005. DEMOCRACY IN GEORGIA.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the development and consolidation of effective democratic governance in Georgia, including free and fair electoral processes, respect for human rights and the rule of law, an independent media, an independent judiciary, a vibrant civil society, as well as transparency and accountability of the executive branch and legislative process, is critically important to Georgia's integration into Euro-Atlantic institutions, stability in the Caucasus region, and United States national security.

(b) REPORT ON DEMOCRACY IN GEORGIA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and not later than December 31 of each of the two fiscal years thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the programs, projects, and activities carried out in Georgia with United States foreign assistance following the August 2008 conflict with Russia.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall include information concerning the following:

(A) The amount of United States assistance obligated and expended for reconstruction activities for the prior fiscal year.

(B) A description of the programs funded by such assistance, including humanitarian aid, reconstruction of critical infrastructure, economic development, political and democratic development, and broadcasting.

(C) An evaluation of the impact of such programs, including their contribution to the consolidation of democracy in Georgia and efforts by the Government of Georgia to improve democratic governance.

(D) An analysis of the implementation of the United States-Georgia Charter on Strategic Partnership.

SEC. 1006. DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH ISRAEL.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should assist Israel in its efforts to establish diplomatic relations.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that includes the following information:

(1) Actions taken by representatives of the United States to encourage other countries to establish full diplomatic relations with Israel.

(2) Specific responses solicited and received by the Secretary from countries that do not maintain full diplomatic relations with Israel with respect to their attitudes toward and plans for entering into diplomatic relations with Israel.

(3) Other measures being undertaken, and measures that will be undertaken, by the United States to ensure and promote Israel's full participation in the world diplomatic community.

(c) FORM OF SUBMISSION.—The report required under subsection (b) may be submitted in classified or unclassified form, as the Secretary determines appropriate.

SEC. 1007. POLICE TRAINING REPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall, in coordination with the heads of relevant Federal departments and agencies, conduct a study and transmit to Congress a report on current overseas civilian police training in countries or regions that are at risk of, in, or are in transition from, conflict or civil strife.

(b) CONTENTS.—The report required under subsection (a) shall contain information on the following:

(1) The coordination, communication, program management, and policy implementation among the United States civilian police training programs in countries or regions that are at risk of, in, or are in transition from, conflict or civil strife.

(2) The number of private contractors conducting such training, and the quality and cost of such private contractors.

(3) An assessment of pre-training procedures for verification of police candidates to adequately assess their aptitude, professional skills, integrity, and other qualifications that are essential to law enforcement work.

(4) An analysis of the practice of using existing Federal police entities to provide civilian police training in countries or regions that are at risk of, in, or are in transition from, conflict or civil strife, along with the subject matter expertise that each such entity may provide to meet local needs in lieu of the use of private contractors.

(5) Provide recommendations, including recommendations related to required resources and actions, to maximize the effectiveness and inter-agency coordination and the adequate provision of civilian police training programs in countries or regions that are at risk of, in, or are in transition from, conflict or civil strife.

SEC. 1008. REPORTS ON HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE IN GAZA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and one year thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report detailing the humanitarian conditions and efficacy and obstacles to humanitarian and reconstruction assistance activities in Gaza.

(b) CONTENTS.—The reports required under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) An assessment of the level of access to basic necessities in Gaza, including food, fuel, water, sanitation, education, and healthcare.

(2) An assessment of the ability to successfully deliver and distribute humanitarian and reconstruction goods and supplies.

(3) A description of the efforts of the United States and its allies to facilitate the receipt and distribution of humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in Gaza.

(4) An assessment of the obstacles to the delivery of humanitarian and reconstruction assistance, including the activities and policies of Hamas and any organization designated as a foreign terrorist organization under section 219 of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

(5) Recommendations for actions the United States can take to best improve the level of access to basic necessities referred to in paragraph (1) and overcome obstacles described in paragraphs (2) through (4).

(6) An assessment of the policy prohibiting personnel of the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development from traveling to Gaza following the tragic roadside bombing in 2003. Such an assessment should consider and evaluate the prospects that such personnel might resume humanitarian assistance operations or commence monitoring functions relating to humanitarian aid distribution in Gaza in order to ascertain that United States foreign assistance is not misused in ways that benefit any organization designated as a foreign terrorist organization under section 219 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1189).

SEC. 1009. REPORT ON ACTIVITIES IN HAITI.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the following:

(1) HURRICANE EMERGENCY RECOVERY.—The status of activities in Haiti funded or authorized, in whole or in part, by the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) through assistance appropriated under the Consolidated Security, Disaster Assistance, and Continuing Appropriations Act, 2009.

(2) GENERAL ACTIVITIES.—A summary of activities funded or authorized, in whole or in part, by the Department of State and USAID in the previous 12-month period, how such activities supplement the work of the Government of Haiti to provide a safe and prosperous democracy for its citizens, and a timetable for when management and implementation of such activities will be turned over to the Government of Haiti or Haitian nationals.

(3) COORDINATION.—A description of how United States assistance is coordinated—

(A) among United States departments and agencies; and

(B) with other donors to Haiti, including programs through the United Nations, the Inter-American Development Bank, and the Organization of American States.

(4) BENCHMARKS.—A summary of short-term and long-term objectives for United States assistance to Haiti and metrics that will be used to identify, track, and manage the progress of United States activities in Haiti.

SEC. 1010. REPORT ON RELIGIOUS MINORITY COMMUNITIES IN THE MIDDLE EAST.

(a) INITIATIVE AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of State is authorized to undertake a focused initiative to monitor the status of and provide specific policy recommendations to protect vulnerable religious minorities throughout the Middle East region.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and one year thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the humanitarian conditions of religious minority communities in the Middle East and efficacy and obstacles to humanitarian assistance activities to help meet the basic needs of vulnerable persons affiliated with minority religions in the Middle East, and recommendations to mitigate adverse humanitarian circumstances facing such persons.

SEC. 1011. IRAN'S INFLUENCE IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:
(1) The 2008 Country Report on Terrorism states that "Iran and Venezuela continued weekly flights connecting Tehran and Damascus with Caracas. Passengers on these flights were reportedly subject to only cursory immigration and customs controls at Simon Bolivar International Airport in Caracas."

(2) The Governments of Venezuela and Iran have forged a close relationship.

(3) Iran has sought to strengthen ties with several countries in the Western Hemisphere in order to undermine United States foreign policy.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that includes actions taken by the Government of Iran and Hezbollah in the Western Hemisphere. A classified annex may be included, if necessary.

TITLE XI—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 1101. BILATERAL COMMISSION WITH NIGERIA.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President should establish a bilateral commission between the United States and Nigeria to support bilateral cooperation in the areas of—

(1) trade and development;
(2) economic integration;
(3) infrastructure planning, finance, development, and management;
(4) budget reform and public finance management;

(5) higher education, including applied research;

(6) energy;
(7) peace and security reform;
(8) rule of law;

(9) anti-corruption efforts, establishment of greater transparency, and electoral reform; and

(10) monitoring whether bilateral efforts undertaken between respective Federal, State, and local governments are achieving the goals set forth by the Governments of the United States and Nigeria.

(b) BILATERAL COMMISSION.—

(1) COMPOSITION.—If the President establishes the bilateral commission referred to in subsection (a), the commission should have an equal number of members representing the United States and Nigeria and appointed by the respective Presidents of each country. Members should include representatives of Federal, State, and local governments, the private sector, and civil society organizations.

(2) FUNCTIONS.—The commission should—

(A) work to establish a bilateral process that establishes the mission, goals, and objectives of a bilateral partnership and establish guidelines for accountability and rules to measure the effectiveness for any initiatives undertaken;

(B) monitor bilateral technical assistance and capacity building projects that are consistent with and further the mission, goals, and objectives established by the commission; and

(C) submit to the United States President, the United States Congress, the Nigerian President, and the Nigerian National Assembly a report on the amount of progress achieved on projects undertaken by the two governments to achieve bilaterally determined goals established by the commission.

(3) MONITORING OF PROJECTS.—The commission should select and monitor specific projects that involve an exchange of personnel between the Governments of the United States and Nigeria to determine whether technical assistance and capacity building are being used effectively and whether mutual benefit is being gained through the implementation of such bilateral projects.

(4) REVIEW AND REPORT.—The Secretary of State should review the work of the commission and annually submit to the President and Congress a report on whether progress has been made to meet the goals set forth by the commission and whether bilateral efforts have served the interest of United States and Nigerian bilateral relations.

(5) UNITED STATES CONTRIBUTIONS.—United States contributions to support the Commission should be financed through existing resources.

SEC. 1102. AUTHORITIES RELATING TO THE SOUTHERN AFRICA ENTERPRISE DEVELOPMENT FUND.

(a) USE OF PRIVATE VENTURE CAPITAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In order to maximize the effectiveness of the activities of the Southern Africa Enterprise Development Fund, the Fund may conduct public offerings or private placements for the purpose of soliciting and accepting private venture capital which may be used, separately or together with funds made available from the United States Government, for any lawful investment purpose that the Board of Directors of the Fund may determine in carrying out the activities of the Fund.

(2) DISTRIBUTION OF FINANCIAL RETURNS.—Financial returns on Fund investments that include a component of private venture capital may be distributed, at such times and in such amounts as the Board of Directors of the Fund may determine, to the investors of such capital.

(b) NONAPPLICABILITY OF OTHER LAWS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Funds made available from the United States Government to the Fund may be used for the purposes of the agreement between the United States Government and the Fund notwithstanding any other provision of law.

(2) SUPPORT FROM FEDERAL DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.—The heads of Federal departments and agencies may conduct programs and activities and provide services in support of the activities of the Fund notwithstanding any other provision of law.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “Southern Africa Enterprise Development Fund” or “Fund” includes—

(1) any successor or related entity to the Southern Africa Enterprise Development Fund that is approved the United States Government; and

(2) any organization, corporation, limited-liability partnership, foundation, or other corporate structure that receives, or is authorized by the United States Government to manage, any or all of the remaining funds or assets of the Southern Africa Enterprise Development Fund.

SEC. 1103. DIABETES TREATMENT AND PREVENTION FOR SAFE WATER AND SANITATION FOR PACIFIC ISLAND COUNTRIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated $500,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to establish a diabetes prevention and treatment program for Pacific Island countries and for safe water and sanitation.

(b) PACIFIC ISLAND COUNTRIES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “Pacific Island countries” means Fiji, Kiribati, the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, Nauru, Niue, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu, and Vanuatu.

SEC. 1104. STATELESSNESS.

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to increase global stability and security for the United States and the international community and decrease trafficking and discrimination by reducing the number of individuals who are de jure or de facto stateless and as a consequence are unable to avail themselves of their right to a nationality and its concomitant rights and obligations and are excluded from full participation in civil society.

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The right to a nationality is a foundation of human rights, and a deterrent to displacement and disaffection. The State is the primary vehicle through which individuals are guaranteed their inalienable rights and are made subject to the rule of law. Regional stability and security are undermined when individuals cannot avail themselves of their right to a nationality and its concomitant rights and obligations and are excluded from full participation in civil society.

(2) The right to a nationality and citizenship is therefore specifically protect in international declarations and treaties, including Article 15 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons, the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, Article 24 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and Article 9(2) of the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women.

(3) In the 21st century, the adverse effects of de jure or de facto statelessness still impact at least an estimated 11,000,000 million people worldwide, who are unable to avail themselves of the rights of free people everywhere to an effective nationality, to the rights to legal residence, to travel, to work in the formal economy or professions, to attend school, to access basic health services, to purchase or own property, to vote, or to hold elected office, and to enjoy the protection and security of a country.

(c) THE UNITED NATIONS.—

(1) POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States that the President and the Permanent Representative of the United States to the United Nations work with the international community to increase political and financial support for the work of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to prevent and resolve problems related to de jure and de facto statelessness, and to promote the rights of the de jure or de facto stateless, by taking these and other actions:

(A) Increasing the attention of the United Nations and the UNHCR to de jure and de facto statelessness and increasing its capacity to reduce statelessness around the world by coordinating the mainstreaming of de jure and de facto statelessness into all of the United Nations human rights work, in cooperation with all relevant United Nations agencies.

(B) Urging United Nations country teams in countries with significant de jure or de facto stateless populations to devote increasing attention and resources to undertake coordinated efforts by all United Nations offices, funds, and programs to bring about the full registration and documentation of all persons resident in the territory of each country, either as citizens or as individuals in need of international protection.

(C) Urging the creation of an Inter-Agency Task Force on Statelessness with representation from the UNHCR, the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), and other relevant United Nations agencies that will coordinate to increase agency awareness and information exchange on de jure and de facto statelessness to ensure a consistent and comprehensive approach to the identification of stateless groups and individuals and resolution of their status.

(D) Urging that nationality and de jure and de facto statelessness issues are addressed in all country reviews conducted by United Nations treaty bodies and relevant special mechanisms engaged in country visits, and pursuing creation of a standing mechanism within the United Nations to complement the work of the UNHCR in addressing issues of de jure and de facto statelessness that give rise to urgent human rights or security concerns.

(E) Urging the UNHCR to include nationality and statelessness in all country-specific and thematic monitoring, reporting, training, and protection activities, and across special procedures, and to designate at least one human rights officer to monitor, report, and coordinate the office's advocacy on nationality and de jure and de facto statelessness.

(F) Urging the United Nations to ensure that its work on trafficking includes measures to restore secure citizenship to trafficked women and girls, and to work with Member States to guarantee that national legislation gives women full and equal rights regarding citizenship.

(G) Urging the United Nations to increase its capacity to respond to the needs of de jure or de facto stateless individuals, particularly children, and to strengthen and expand the United Nations protection and assistance activities, particularly in field operations, to better respond to the wide range of protection and assistance needs of de jure or de facto stateless individuals.

(H) Urging the UNICEF to increase its efforts to encourage all Member States of the United Nations to permit full and easy access to birth registration for all children born in their territories, particularly in Member States in which there are displaced populations, and work with the UNHCR and Member States to ensure the issuance of birth certificates to all children born to refugees and displaced persons.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to be made available to improve the UNHCR's assistance to de jure or de facto stateless individuals. Such funds may be used to—

(A) protect the rights, meet emergency humanitarian needs, and provide assistance to de jure or de facto stateless groups and individuals;

(B) provide additional resources to—

(i) increase the number of protection officers;

(ii) increase the number of professional staff in the statelessness unit; and

(iii) train protection officers and United Nations country teams in the field to identify, reduce, protect, and prevent de jure and de facto statelessness;

(C) improve identification of de jure or de facto stateless groups and individuals by carrying out a comprehensive annual study of the scope of de jure and de facto statelessness worldwide, including causes of de jure and de facto statelessness and dissemination of best practices for remedying de jure and de facto statelessness; and

(D) increase the United Nations educational and technical assistance programs to prevent de jure and de facto statelessness, including outreach to Member States and their legislatures, with particular emphasis on those countries determined to have protracted de jure or de facto statelessness situations.

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS TO THE UNICEF.—There is authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to augment to the UNICEF's ability to aid countries with significant de jure or de facto stateless populations to bring about the full registration of all children born to de jure or de facto stateless parents.

(d) THE UNITED STATES.—

(1) FOREIGN POLICY.—Given the importance of obtaining and preserving nationality and the protection of a government, and of preventing the exploitation or trafficking of de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals, the President shall make the prevention and reduction of de jure or de facto statelessness an important goal of United States foreign policy and human rights efforts. Such efforts shall include—

(A) calling upon host countries to protect and assume responsibility for de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals;

(B) working with countries of origin to facilitate the resolution of problems faced by de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals;

(C) working with countries of origin and host countries to facilitate the resolution of disputes and conflicts that cause or result in the creation of de jure or de facto statelessness;

(D) encouraging host countries to afford de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals the full protection of the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and all relevant international conventions;

(E) directing the Secretary of State to provide assistance to countries to prevent and resolve situations of de jure or de facto statelessness and to prevent the trafficking or exploitation of de jure or de facto stateless individuals;

(F) directing the Office of Trafficking in Persons of the Department of State to continue to document and analyze the effects of statelessness on trafficking in persons, both as a cause of trafficking and as an obstacle to reaching and assisting trafficked persons; and

(G) encouraging and facilitating the work of nongovernmental organizations in the United States and abroad that provide legal and humanitarian support to de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals, to increase the access of de jure or de facto stateless groups or individuals to such organizations, and to encourage other governments to provide similar support and access.

(2) UNITED STATES ACTIVITIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Given the importance of preventing new instances of de jure or de facto statelessness and the trafficking of de jure or de facto stateless individuals, and of protecting the human rights of de jure or de facto stateless individuals, the President shall submit to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate a report that includes the following:

(i) A list of countries and territories with significant de jure or de facto stateless populations under their jurisdictions and the conditions and consequences of such de jure or de facto statelessness of such individuals.

(ii) United States international efforts to prevent further de jure or de facto statelessness and encourage the granting of full legal protection of the human rights of de jure or de facto stateless individuals.

(B) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States to comply with the principles and provisions of the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness to the fullest extent possible and to encourage other countries to do so as well.

(C) ACTIONS BY SECRETARY OF STATE.—

(i) INCREASE IN RESOURCES AND STAFF.—The Secretary of State shall permanently increase in the Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration in the Department of State the resources dedicated to and staff assigned to work toward the prevention and resolution of de jure and de facto statelessness and the protection of de jure or de facto stateless individuals.

(ii) COORDINATION.—To coordinate United States policies toward combating de jure and de facto statelessness, the Secretary of State shall establish an Interagency Working Group to Combat Statelessness. This working group should include representatives of the Bureau of Population, Refugees and Migration, the Bureau of International Organizations, the Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor, the Office of Trafficking in Persons of the Department of State, and the United States Agency for International Development, as well as representatives from relevant offices of the Department of Justice and relevant offices of the Department of Homeland Security.

(D) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

SEC. 1105. STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING THE ECUMENICAL PATRIARCHATE.

It shall be the policy of the United States to urge Turkey to—

(1) respect property rights and religious rights of the Ecumenical Patriarch;

(2) grant the Ecumenical Patriarchate appropriate international recognition and ecclesiastic succession; and

(3) grant the Ecumenical Patriarchate the right to train clergy of all nationalities, not just Turkish nationals.

SEC. 1106. LIMITATION ON ASSISTANCE FOR WEATHER COOPERATION ACTIVITIES TO COUNTRIES IN THE AMERICAS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should facilitate international cooperation on hurricane preparedness because—

(1) hundreds of millions of people in the Americas live in coastal communities and are susceptible to the immense risks posed by hurricanes;

(2) the need for hurricane tracking overflights and other weather cooperation activities to track and monitor hurricanes in the Americas is acute; and

(3) accurate hurricane forecasts can help prevent the loss of life and injury and reduce property loss and economic disruption.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the status of United States cooperation with other countries in the Americas on hurricane preparedness and other weather cooperation activities.

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) a list of countries in the Americas that do not cooperate with the United States on hurricane preparedness and other weather cooperation activities; and

(B) the status of any negotiations regarding hurricane preparedness and other weather cooperation activities between the United States and countries listed in subparagraph (A).

(c) LIMITATION ON ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary of State may not provide assistance for weather cooperation activities to countries listed in the report under subsection (b)(2)(A).

(d) WAIVER.—The Secretary of State may waive the limitation on assistance requirements under subsection (c) if the Secretary of State certifies to the appropriate congressional committees that the waiver is in the national interest of the United States.

SEC. 1107. STATEMENT OF CONGRESS REGARDING AFGHAN WOMEN.

Congress—

(1) supports the decision by President Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan to submit for review the Shi'ite Personal Status Law and strongly urges him not to publish such law on the grounds that such law violates the basic human rights of women and is inconsistent with the Constitution of Afghanistan;

(2) urges President Karzai, the Ministry of Justice, and other parties involved in reviewing the law to formally declare as unconstitutional the provisions of such law regarding marital rape and restrictions on women's freedom of movement;

(3) reiterates its strong sense that the provisions in such law which restrict the rights of women should be removed, and that an amended draft of the Shi'ite Personal Status Law should be submitted for parliamentary review;

(4) encourages the Secretary of State, the Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan, the Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women's Issues, and the United States Ambassador to Afghanistan to consider and address the status of women's rights and security in Afghanistan to ensure that such rights are not being eroded through unjust laws, policies, or institutions; and

(5) encourages the Government of Afghanistan to solicit information and advice from the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry for Women's Affairs, the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, and women-led nongovernmental organizations to ensure that current and future legislation and official policies protect and uphold the equal rights of women, including through national campaigns to lead public discourse on the importance of women's status and rights to the overall stability of Afghanistan.

SEC. 1108. GLOBAL PEACE OPERATIONS INITIATIVE PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Over 100,000 military and civilian personnel are engaged in 18 United Nations peacekeeping operations around the world. Peacekeeping operations are critical to maintaining a peaceful and stable international environment.

(2) The United States has a vital interest in ensuring that United Nations peacekeeping operations are successful. Countries undergoing conflict threaten the national and economic security of the United States, risk becoming safe havens for terrorist organizations, and often feature levels of human rights abuses and human deprivation that are an affront to the values of the American people.

(3) Over the years, United Nations peacekeeping has evolved to meet the demands of different conflicts and a changing political landscape. Today's peacekeeping mission is most often "multidimensional" and includes a wide variety of complex tasks such as civilian protection, helping to build sustainable institutions of governance, human rights monitoring, security sector reform, facilitating delivery of humanitarian relief and disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants.

(4) United Nations peacekeeping operations allow the United States to respond to global crises within a multilateral framework with costs shared among nations. A 2007 Government Accountability Office report found that in general a United States peacekeeping operation is likely to be “much more expensive” than a United Nations peacekeeping operation, regardless of location.

(5) In many missions due to vast swaths of terrain and limited infrastructure, ongoing low-intensity fighting, and the presence of “peace spoilers”, United Nations peacekeepers cannot carry out the complex tasks with which they are charged without critical enablers, and in particular air assets.

(6) The United Nations Secretary-General has repeatedly noted the deleterious impact of insufficient helicopters for peacekeeping missions in Darfur and the Democratic Republic of the Congo. History has shown that under-resourced peacekeeping troops are not only unable to carry out their mandates, they erode the credibility of the United Nations and are themselves likely to come under attack.

(7) Senate Resolution 432 and House Resolution 1351 of the 110th Congress—

(A) urged members of the international community, including the United States, that possessed the capability to provide tactical and utility helicopters needed for the United Nations-African Union Mission in Darfur (UNAMID) to do so as soon as possible; and

(B) urged the President to intervene personally by contacting other heads of state and asking them to contribute the aircraft and crews to the Darfur mission.

(8) The current framework of relying on member countries to provide air assets on a volunteer basis has not yielded sufficient results. The United Nations still faces a shortfall of over 50 helicopters for UNAMID, the Democratic Republic of Congo (MONUC), and the Republic of Chad (MINURCAT). A review of trend lines suggests that any new United Nations peacekeeping missions authorized within the next five to seven years would face similar shortfalls.

(9) Numerous studies and reports have determined that there is no global shortage of air assets. It is inexcusable to allow authorized United Nations peacekeeping missions to founder for the lack of critical mobility capabilities.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of assistance authorized by this section is to help protect civilians by training and equipping peacekeepers worldwide, to include financing the refurbishment of helicopters.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State is authorized to use amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section to provide funding to carry out and expand Global Peace Operations Initiative programs and activities. Such programs and activities shall include—

(A) training and equipping peacekeepers worldwide, with a particular focus on Africa;

(B) enhancing the capacity of regional and sub-regional organizations to plan, train for, manage, conduct, sustain and obtain lessons-learned from peace support operations;

(C) carrying out a clearinghouse function to exchange information and coordinate G-8 efforts to enhance peace operations;

(D) providing transportation and logistics support for deploying peacekeepers;

(E) developing a cached equipment program to procure and warehouse equipment for use in peace operations globally;

(F) providing support to the international Center of Excellence for Stability Police Units (COESPU) in Italy to increase the capabilities and interoperability of stability police to participate in peace operations;

(G) conducting sustainment and self-sufficiency activities in support of the objectives described in subparagraphs (A) through (F) with a focus on assisting partners to sustain proficiencies gained in training programs; and

(H) financing the refurbishment of helicopters in preparation for their deployment to United Nations peacekeeping operations or to regional peacekeeping operations which have been approved by the United Nations Security Council.

(2) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that failure on the part of the international community to take all steps necessary to deploy and maintain fully capacitated United Nations peacekeeping operations will result in continued loss of life and human suffering. Therefore, in carrying out this section, the Secretary of State should prioritize the refurbishment of helicopters with a goal of participating in the financing of no fewer than three helicopter refurbishments by the end of fiscal year 2011.

(3) SUPPORT FROM OTHER COUNTRIES.—In providing funding under paragraph (1), the Secretary of State shall to the greatest extent possible seek to leverage such funding with financing from other countries.

(d) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and one year thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the activities of the United States Government to carry out the provisions of this section.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) a description of the Global Peace Operations Initiative programs and activities undertaken, by country;

(B) a description of the funds obligated and expended in each country, by program and fiscal year;

(C) a description of the coordination of these efforts within the United States Government interagency process and with other nations along with any recommendations for improvements;

(D) a description of the GPOI's activities concerning the refurbishment of air assets for United Nations peacekeeping operations and regional peacekeeping operations that have been approved by the United Nations Security Council;

(E) data measuring the quality of the training and proficiency of the trainees program-wide;

(F) data on the training and deployment activities of graduates of the international Center of Excellence for Stability Police Units (COESPU) in their home countries;

(G) a description of vetting activities for all GPOI training to ensure that all individuals in composite units are vetted for human rights violations;

(H) data measuring the timeliness of equipment delivery and recommendations for improvement as appropriate; and

(I) description of how GPOI trainees and GPOI-provided equipment contribute to improved civilian protection in peace operations.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011 to carry out this section.

(f) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “Global Peace Operations Initiative” or “GPOI” means the program established by the Department of State to address major gaps in international peace operations support, including by building and maintaining capability, capacity, and effectiveness of peace operations.

SEC. 1109. FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the “Daniel Pearl Freedom of the Press Act of 2009”.

(b) INCLUSION OF ADDITIONAL INFORMATION RELATING TO FREEDOM OF THE PRESS WORLD-

WIDE IN ANNUAL COUNTRY REPORTS ON HUMAN RIGHTS PRACTICES.—The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended—

(1) in section 116(d) (22 U.S.C. 2151n(d)), as amended by section 333(c) of this Act—

(A) in paragraph (11), by striking “and” at the end; and

(B) in paragraph (12), by striking the period at the end and inserting “; and”; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(13) wherever applicable—

“(A) a description of the status of freedom of the press, including initiatives in favor of freedom of the press and efforts to improve or preserve, as appropriate, the independence of the media, together with an assessment of progress made as a result of those efforts;

“(B) an identification of countries in which there were violations of freedom of the press, including direct physical attacks, imprisonment, indirect sources of pressure, and censorship by governments, military, intelligence, or police forces, criminal groups, or armed extremist or rebel groups; and

“(C) in countries where there are particularly severe violations of freedom of the press—

“(i) whether government authorities of each such country participate in, facilitate, or condone such violations of the freedom of the press; and

“(ii) what steps the government of each such country has taken to preserve the safety and independence of the media, and to ensure the prosecution of those individuals who attack or murder journalists.”; and

(2) in section 502B (22 U.S.C. 2304), by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(1) a description of the status of freedom of the press, including initiatives in favor of freedom of the press and efforts to improve or preserve, as appropriate, the independence of the media, together with an assessment of progress made as a result of those efforts;

“(2) an identification of countries in which there were violations of freedom of the press, including direct physical attacks, imprisonment, indirect sources of pressure, and censorship by governments, military, intelligence, or police forces, criminal groups, or armed extremist or rebel groups; and

“(3) in countries where there are particularly severe violations of freedom of the press—

“(A) whether government authorities of each such country participate in, facilitate, or condone such violations of the freedom of the press; and

“(B) what steps the government of each such country has taken to preserve the safety and independence of the media, and to ensure the prosecution of those individuals who attack or murder journalists.”.

(c) FREEDOM OF THE PRESS GRANT PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State shall administer a grant program with the aim of promoting freedom of the press worldwide. The grant program shall be administered by the Department of State's Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor in consultation with the Undersecretary for Public Affairs and Public Diplomacy.

(2) AMOUNTS AND TIME.—Grants may be awarded to nonprofit and international organizations and may span multiple years, up to five years.

(3) PURPOSE.—Grant proposals should promote and broaden press freedoms by strengthening the independence of journalists and media organizations, promoting a legal framework for freedom of the press, or through providing regionally and culturally relevant training and professionalization of skills to meet international standards in both traditional and digital media.

(d) MEDIA ORGANIZATION DEFINED.—In this section, the term “media organization” means a group or organization that gathers and disseminates news and information to the public (through any medium of mass communication) in a foreign country in which the group or organization is located, except that the term does not include a group or organization that is primarily an agency or instrumentality of the government of such foreign country. The term includes an individual who is an agent or employee of such group or organization who acts within the scope of such agency or employment.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 1110. INFORMATION FOR COUNTRY COMMERCIAL GUIDES ON BUSINESS AND INVESTMENT CLIMATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director General of the Foreign Commercial Service, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Trade Promotion and the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic, Energy and Business Affairs, should ensure that the annual Country Commercial Guides for United States businesses include—

(1) detailed assessments concerning each foreign country in which acts of unfair business and investment practices or other actions that have resulted in poor business and investment climates were, in the opinion of the Director General of the Foreign Commercial Service, of major significance;

(2) all relevant information about such unfair business and investment practices or other actions during the preceding year by members of the business community, the judiciary, and the government of such country which may have impeded United States business or investment in such country, including the capacity for United States citizens to operate their businesses without fear of reprisals; and

(3) information on—

(A) the extent to which the government of such country is working to prevent unfair business and investment practices; and

(B) the extent of United States Government action to prevent unfair business and investment practices or other actions that harm United States business or investment interests in relevant cases in such country.

(b) ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS TO BE INCLUDED.—The information required under subsection (a) should, to the extent feasible, include—

(1) with respect to paragraph (1) of such subsection—

(A) a review of the efforts undertaken by each foreign country to promote a healthy business and investment climate that is also conducive to the United States business community and United States investors, including, as appropriate, steps taken in international fora;

(B) the response of the judicial and local arbitration systems of each such country that is the subject of such detailed assessment with respect to matters relating to the business and investment climates affecting United States citizens and entities, or that have, in the opinion of the Director General of the Foreign Commercial Service, a significant impact on United States business and investment efforts; and

(C) each such country’s access to the United States market;

(2) with respect to paragraph (2) of such subsection—

(A) any actions undertaken by the government of each foreign country that prevent United States citizens and businesses from receiving equitable treatment;

(B) actions taken by private businesses and citizens of each such country against members of the United States business community and United States investors;

(C) unfair decisions rendered by the legal systems of each such country that clearly benefit State and local corporations and industries; and

(D) unfair decisions rendered by local arbitration panels of each such country that do not exemplify objectivity and do not provide an equitable ground for United States citizens and businesses to address their disputes; and

(3) with respect to paragraph (3) of such subsection, actions taken by the United States Government to—

(A) promote the rule of law;

(B) prevent discriminatory treatment of United States citizens and businesses engaged in business or investment activities in each foreign country;

(C) allow United States goods to enter each such country without requiring a co-production agreement; and

(D) protect United States intellectual property rights.

(c) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out this section, the Director General of the Foreign Commercial Service shall consult with business leaders, union leaders, representatives of the judicial system of each foreign country described in subsection (a), and relevant nongovernmental organizations.

(d) BUSINESS AND INVESTMENT CLIMATE WARNINGS.—The Secretary of State, with the assistance of the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic, Energy and Business Affairs, as well as the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Trade Promotion and the Director General of the Foreign Commercial Service, shall establish a warning system that effectively alerts United States businesses and investors of—

(1) a significant deterioration in the business and investment climate in a foreign country, including discriminatory treatment of United States businesses; or

(2) a significant constraint on the ability of the United States Government to assist United States businesses and investors in a foreign country, such as to the closure of a United States diplomatic or consular mission, that is not explained in the most recent Country Commercial Guide for such country.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CO-PRODUCTION AGREEMENT.—The term “co-production agreement” means a United States Government or United States business working with a foreign government, foreign company, or an international organization to produce or manufacture an item.

(2) RULE OF LAW.—The term “rule of law” means the extent to which laws of a foreign country are publicly promulgated, equally enforced, independently adjudicated, and are consistent with international norms and standards.

(3) UNFAIR BUSINESS AND INVESTMENT PRACTICES.—The term “unfair business and investment practices” includes any of the following:

(A) Unlawful actions under international law or the law of the foreign country taken by the government of such country or by businesses, citizens, or other entities of such country that have resulted in lost assets, contracts, or otherwise contributed to an inhospitable business or investment climate.

(B) Discriminatory treatment of United States businesses, whether wholly or partially owned.

(C) Failure to protect intellectual property rights.

(D) Requiring a co-production agreement in order for goods from the United States to enter a foreign country.

SEC. 1111. INTERNATIONAL PROTECTION OF GIRLS BY PREVENTING CHILD MARRIAGE.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) child marriage is a violation of human rights and the prevention and elimination of child marriage should be a foreign policy goal of the United States;

(2) the practice of child marriage undermines United States investments in foreign assistance to promote education and skills building for girls, reduce maternal and child mortality, reduce maternal illness, halt the transmission of HIV/AIDS, prevent gender-based violence, and reduce poverty; and

(3) expanding educational opportunities for girls, economic opportunities for women, and reducing maternal and child mortality are critical to achieving the Millennium Development Goals and the global health and development objectives of the United States, including efforts to prevent HIV/AIDS.

(b) STRATEGY TO PREVENT CHILD MARRIAGE IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES.—

(1) STRATEGY REQUIRED.—The President, acting through the Secretary of State, shall establish a multi-year strategy to prevent child marriage in developing countries and promote the empowerment of girls at risk of child marriage in developing countries, including by addressing the unique needs, vulnerabilities, and potential of girls under 18 in developing countries.

(2) CONSULTATION.—In establishing the strategy required by paragraph (1), the President shall consult with Congress, relevant Federal departments and agencies, multilateral organizations, and representatives of civil society.

(3) ELEMENTS.—The strategy required by paragraph (1) shall—

(A) focus on areas in developing countries with high prevalence of child marriage; and

(B) encompass diplomatic initiatives between the United States and governments of developing countries, with attention to human rights, legal reforms and the rule of law, and programmatic initiatives in the areas of education, health, income generation, changing social norms, human rights, and democracy building.

(4) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to Congress a report that includes—

(A) the strategy required by paragraph (1);

(B) an assessment, including data disaggregated by age and gender to the extent possible, of current United States-funded efforts to specifically assist girls in developing countries; and

(C) examples of best practices or programs to prevent child marriage in developing countries that could be replicated.

(c) RESEARCH AND DATA COLLECTION.—The Secretary of State shall work with relevant Federal departments and agencies as part of their ongoing research and data collection activities, to—

(1) collect and make available data on the incidence of child marriage in countries that receive foreign or development assistance from the United States where the practice of child marriage is prevalent; and

(2) collect and make available data on the impact of the incidence of child marriage and the age at marriage on progress in meeting key development goals.

(d) DEPARTMENT OF STATE’S COUNTRY REPORTS ON HUMAN RIGHTS PRACTICES.—The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended—

(1) in section 116 (22 U.S.C. 2151n), by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g) The report required by subsection (d) shall include for each country in which child marriage is prevalent at rates at or above 40 percent in at least one sub-national region, a description of the status of the practice of child marriage in such country. In this subsection, the term ‘child marriage’ means the marriage of a girl or boy, not yet the minimum age for marriage stipulated in law in the country in which such girl or boy is a resident.”; and

(2) in section 502B (22 U.S.C. 2304), as amended by section 1109(b)(2) of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(j) The report required by subsection (b) shall include for each country in which child marriage is prevalent at rates at or above 40 percent in at least one sub-national region, a description of the status of the practice of child marriage in such country. In this subsection, the term ‘child marriage’ means the marriage of a girl or boy, not yet the minimum age for marriage stipulated in law in the country in which such girl or boy is a resident.”

(e) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term ‘child marriage’ means the marriage of a girl or boy, not yet the minimum age for marriage stipulated in law in the country in which the girl or boy is a resident.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 101 of this Act, there is authorized to be appropriated as such sums as necessary for fiscal years 2010 through 2011 to carry out this section and the amendments made by this section.

SEC. 1112. STATEMENT OF CONGRESS REGARDING RETURN OF PORTRAITS OF HOLOCAUST VICTIMS TO ARTIST DINA BABBITT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Dina Babbitt (formerly known as Dinah Gottliebova), a United States citizen, has requested the return of watercolor portraits she painted while suffering a 1½-year-long internment at the Auschwitz death camp during World War II.

(2) Dina Babbitt was ordered to paint the portraits by the infamous war criminal Dr. Josef Mengele.

(3) Dina Babbitt’s life, and her mother’s life, were spared only because she painted portraits of doomed inmates of Auschwitz-Birkenau, under orders from Dr. Josef Mengele.

(4) These paintings are currently in the possession of the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Museum.

(5) Dina Babbitt is the rightful owner of the artwork, because the paintings were produced by her own talented hands as she endured the unspeakable conditions that existed at the Auschwitz death camp.

(6) This continued injustice can be righted through cooperation between agencies of the United States and Poland.

(7) This issue was raised in the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003 (Public Law 107–228).

(b) STATEMENT OF CONGRESS.—Congress—

(1) continues to recognize the moral right of Dina Babbitt to obtain the artwork she created, and recognizes her courage in the face of the evils perpetrated by the Nazi command of the Auschwitz-Birkenau death camp, including the atrocities committed by Dr. Josef Mengele;

(2) urges the President to make all efforts necessary to retrieve the seven watercolor portraits Dina Babbitt painted, while suffering a 1½-year-long internment at the Auschwitz death camp, and return them to her;

(3) urges the Secretary of State to make immediate diplomatic efforts to facilitate the transfer of the seven original watercolors painted by Dina Babbitt from the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Museum to Dina Babbitt, their rightful owner;

(4) urges the Government of Poland to immediately facilitate the return to Dina Babbitt of the artwork painted by her that is now in the possession of the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Museum; and

(5) urges the officials of the Auschwitz-Birkenau State Museum to transfer the seven original paintings to Dina Babbitt as expeditiously as possible.

SEC. 1113. STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING SOMALIA.

(a) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States to—

(1) advance long-term stability and peace in Somalia;

(2) provide assistance to the government of Somalia and nongovernmental organizations, including Somali-led nongovernmental organizations, and particularly women’s groups, as appropriate;

(3) support efforts to establish democratic civil authorities and institutions in Somalia that reflect local and traditional structures, built on the rule of law and respect for human rights, and strengthen the security sector; and

(4) support reconciliation efforts in Somalia in order to ensure lasting peace.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President, acting through the Secretary of State, should develop a comprehensive policy in coordination with the international community and the government of Somalia that aligns humanitarian, development, economic, political, counterterrorism, anti-piracy, and regional strategies in order to bring about peace and stability in Somalia and the region.

Subtitle B—Sense of Congress Provisions

SEC. 1121. PROMOTING DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS IN BELARUS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Despite some modest improvements, notably the release of political prisoners, the Belarusian Government’s human rights and democracy record remains poor as governmental authorities continue to commit frequent serious abuses.

(2) Since 1996, President Alexander Lukashenka has consolidated his power over all institutions and undermined the rule of law through authoritarian means.

(3) Belarus restricts civil liberties, including freedoms of press, speech, assembly, association, and religion. Nongovernmental organizations and political parties are subject to harassment, fines, prosecution, and closure. The Belarusian Government maintains a virtual monopoly over the country’s information space.

(b) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States to—

(1) support the aspirations of the people of Belarus for democracy, human rights, and the rule of law;

(2) support the aspirations of the people of Belarus to preserve the independence and sovereignty of their country;

(3) seek and support the growth of democratic movements and institutions in Belarus as well as the development of a democratic political culture and civil society;

(4) seek and support the growth of an open market economy in Belarus through the development of entrepreneurship and protection of property rights; and

(5) remain open to re-evaluating United States policy toward Belarus, including existing sanctions, as warranted by demonstrable democratic and human rights progress made by the Belarusian Government.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the United States should furnish assistance to Belarus to the support democratic processes in that country, including—

(A) expanding and facilitating the development of independent print, radio, television, and internet broadcasting to and within Belarus;

(B) aiding the development of civil society through assistance to nongovernmental organizations promoting democracy and supporting human rights, including youth groups, entrepreneurs, and independent trade unions;

(C) supporting the work of human rights defenders;

(D) enhancing the development of democratic political parties;

(E) assisting the promotion of free, fair, and transparent electoral processes;

(F) enhancing international exchanges, including youth and student exchanges, as well as advanced professional training programs for leaders and members of the democratic forces in skill areas central to the development of civil society; and

(G) supporting educational initiatives such as the European Humanities University, a Belarusian university in exile based in Vilnius, Lithuania; and

(2) the United States should support radio, television, and internet broadcasting to the people of Belarus in languages spoken in Belarus, including broadcasting by Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty, European Radio for Belarus, and Belsat.

SEC. 1122. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON THE HUMANITARIAN SITUATION IN SRI LANKA.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) both the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) and the Government of Sri Lanka must abide by their commitments to respect human life and cease offensive operations;

(2) the United States Government remains deeply concerned about the current danger to civilian lives and the dire humanitarian situation created by the fighting in the Mullaittivu area in Sri Lanka;

(3) the United States should call upon the Government and military of Sri Lanka and the LTTE to allow a humanitarian pause sufficient for the tens of thousands of civilians in the conflict area to escape the fighting;

(4) both sides must respect the right of free movement of those civilian men, women and children trapped by the fighting;

(5) the LTTE must immediately allow civilians to depart;

(6) the LTTE should then lay down their arms to a neutral third party;

(7) the Government of Sri Lanka should allow the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) access to all sites where newly arrived displaced persons are being registered or being provided shelter, as well as to implement established international humanitarian standards in the camps for internally displaced persons;

(8) a durable and lasting peace will only be achieved through a political solution that addresses the legitimate aspirations of all Sri Lankan communities; and

(9) the Government of Sri Lanka should put forward a timely and credible proposal to engage its Tamil community who do not espouse violence or terrorism, and to develop power sharing arrangements so that lasting peace and reconciliation can be achieved.

SEC. 1123. WEST PAPUA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) West Papua was a former Dutch colony just as East Timor was a former Portuguese colony just as Indonesia was a former colony of the Netherlands.

(2) In 1949, the Dutch granted independence to Indonesia and retained West Papua.

(3) In 1950, the Dutch prepared West Papua for independence.

(4) However, Indonesia, upon achieving independence, demanded the entire archipelago including the Dutch holding of West Papua and the Portuguese controlled territory of East Timor.

(5) In 1962, the United States mediated an agreement between the Dutch and Indonesia. Under terms of the agreement, the Dutch were to leave West Papua and transfer sovereignty to the United Nations after which time a national election would be held to determine West Papua's political status. But almost immediately after this agreement was reached, Indonesia violated the terms of the transfer and took over the administration of West Papua from the United Nations.

(6) Indonesia then orchestrated an election that many regarded as a brutal military operation. In what became known as an "act of no-choice", 1,025 West Papua elders under heavy military surveillance were selected to vote on behalf of more than 800,000 West Papuans on the territory's political status. The United Nations Representative sent to observe the election process produced a report which outlined various and serious violations of the United Nations Charter. In spite of the report and in spite of testimonials from the press, the opposition of fifteen countries, and the cries of help from the Papuans themselves, West Papua was handed over to Indonesia in November 1969.

(7) Since this time, the Papuans have suffered blatant human rights abuses including extrajudicial executions, imprisonment, torture, environmental degradation, natural resource exploitation and commercial dominance of immigrant communities and it is now estimated that more than 100,000 West Papuans and 200,000 East Timorese died as a direct result of Indonesian rule especially during the administrations of military dictators Sukarno and Suharto.

(8) Today, the violence continues. In its 2004 Country Reports on Human Rights Practices the Department of State reports that Indonesia "security force members murdered, tortured, raped, beat and arbitrarily detained civilians and members of separatist movements especially in Papua".

(9) In response to international pressure, Indonesia has promised to initiate Special Autonomy for West Papua.

(10) Considering that East Timor achieved independence from Indonesia in 2002 by way of a United Nations sanctioned referendum, Special Autonomy may be an effort to further disenfranchise a people who differ racially from the majority of Indonesians.

(11) West Papuans are Melanesian and believed to be of African descent.

(b) REPORTS.—

(1) SECRETARY OF STATE.—For fiscal year 2010, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the 1969 Act of Free Choice, the current political status of West Papua, and the extent to which the Government of Indonesia has implemented and included the leadership and the people of West Papua in the development and administration of Special Autonomy.

(2) PRESIDENT.—For each of fiscal years 2010 and 2011, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains a description of the extent to which the Government of Indonesia has certified that it has halted human rights abuses in West Papua.

SEC. 1124. SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO SOVIET NUCLEAR TESTS AND KAZAKHSTAN'S COMMITMENT TO NONPROLIFERATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) In 1991, immediately after achieving independence, Kazakhstan closed and sealed the world's second largest nuclear test site in Semipalatinsk which had been inherited from the former Soviet Union and at which more than 500 nuclear tests had been conducted from 1949 to 1991.

(2) The cumulative power of explosions from those tests, conducted above ground, on the ground, and underground is believed to be equal to the power of 20,000 explosions of the type of bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945.

(3) More than 1,500,000 people in Kazakhstan suffered because of decades of Soviet nuclear weapons testing in the region.

(4) A horrifying array of disease will continue to destroy the lives of hundreds of thousands and their descendants for many generations to come as a result of these tests.

(5) Since its independence, Kazakhstan has constructed a stable and peaceful state, voluntarily disarmed the world's fourth largest nuclear arsenal, joined the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START), and within the frameworks of the Cooperative Threat Reduction program the government of Kazakhstan, in cooperation with the United States Government, conducted a very successful secret operation, code-named Project Sapphire, as a result of which 581 kilograms (1,278 pounds) of highly enriched uranium enough to produce 20–25 nuclear warheads were removed from Kazakhstan.

(6) Because of the successful cooperation between the Governments of the United States and Kazakhstan, the last lethal weapon was removed from Kazakhstan in April 1995.

(7) Kazakhstan, allegiant to its commitment to nonproliferation, in December 2004 signed with the United States an amendment to the bilateral agreement on the nonproliferation of weapons of mass destruction which will move the two nations towards a new level of cooperation in preventing the threat of bio-terrorism.

(8) By its actions, Kazakhstan has proven itself not only as a universally recognized leader and one of the key members in the nonproliferation process, but also as a reliable and consistent ally of the United States in reducing nuclear threats and preventing lethal weapons from being acquired by terrorist organizations such as Al-Qaeda.

(9) Recently Kazakhstan has also offered to host an international nuclear fuel bank where low-enriched uranium would be stored in accordance with the highest international standards for safety, security, and safeguards.

(10) The Norwegian Defence Research Establishment is also working with Kazakhstan to strengthen nuclear security and nonproliferation.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the people of Kazakhstan and its Government should be congratulated for their commitment to nonproliferation and their leadership in offering to host an international nuclear fuel bank; and

(2) the Secretary of State should work to establish a joint working group with the Governments of Kazakhstan and Norway to explore common challenges and opportunities on disarmament and non-proliferation, and to assist in assessing the environmental damage and health effects caused by Soviet nuclear testing in Semipalatinsk.

SEC. 1125. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON HOLOCAUST-ERA PROPERTY RESTITUTION AND COMPENSATION.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) countries in Central and Eastern Europe which have not already done so must return looted and confiscated properties to their rightful owners or, where restitution is not possible, pay equitable compensation, in accordance with principles of justice and in an expeditious manner that is transparent and fair;

(2) countries in Central and Eastern Europe must enact and implement appropriate restitution and compensation legislation to facilitate private, communal, and religious property restitution; and

(3) countries in Central and Eastern Europe must ensure that such restitution and compensation legislation establishes a simple, transparent, and timely process, so that such process results in a real benefit to those individuals who suffered from the unjust confiscation of their property.

SEC. 1126. EFFORTS TO SECURE THE FREEDOM OF GILAD SHALIT.

It is the sense of Congress that Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit, who has been held captive continuously since his illegal abduction by Gazan kidnappers in 2006, should be safely released at the earliest possible time and that, pending his release, the International Committee of the Red Cross should be granted full access to him, in accordance with international law and civilized values.

SEC. 1127. SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO SUDAN.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the United States should support efforts to find a stable and lasting peace in Sudan in the wake of a devastating conflict that led to a major humanitarian disaster and caused the deaths of hundreds of thousands, and continues to cause violence in Darfur and throughout Sudan;

(2) to achieve that peace, all parties must agree to uphold the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA);

(3) international partners should aim to widen acceptance of the Darfur Peace Agreement by all stakeholders;

(4) the United States should support efforts to prepare for the national elections and for the referendum;

(5) the United States should support efforts to develop a coordinated international strategy to support the rebuilding of Sudan, with a particular focus on key CPA benchmarks including policy toward the Three Areas, transitional justice, which would include prosecuting perpetrators of war crimes, oil revenue sharing, the census, the return of displaced Darfuris and other peoples to their homeland, and management of the armed forces; and

(6) United States policy toward Darfur should be fully integrated with United States policy toward the CPA, as full and lasting resolution to the Darfur crisis hinges on the resolution of a common set of national problems.

SEC. 1128. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON RESTRICTIONS ON RELIGIOUS FREEDOM IN VIETNAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The Secretary of State, under the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998 (22 U.S.C. 6401 et seq.) and authority delegated by the President, designates nations found guilty of "particularly severe violations of religious freedom" as "Countries of Particular Concern".

(2) In November 2006, the Secretary of State announced that the Socialist Republic of Vietnam was no longer designated as a "Country of Particular Concern".

(3) The Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam (UBCV), the Hoa Hao Buddhists, and the Cao Dai groups continue to face unwarranted abuses because of their attempts to organize independently of the Government of Vietnam, including the detention and imprisonment of individual members of these religious communities.

(4) Over the last 3 years, 18 Hoa Hao Buddhists have been arrested for distributing sacred texts or publicly protesting the religious restrictions placed on them by the Government of Vietnam, at least 12 remain in prison, including 4 sentenced in 2007 for staging a peaceful hunger strike.

(5) At least 15 individuals are being detained in long term house arrest for reasons relating to their faith, including the most venerable Thich Quang Do and most of the leadership of the UBCV.

(6) According to Human Rights Watch, "In April 2008 Montagnard Christian Y Ben Hdok was beaten to death while in police custody in Dak Lak after other Montagnards in his district tried to flee to Cambodia to seek political asylum."

(7) According to the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom 2009 Annual Report, religious freedom advocates and human rights defenders Nguyen Van Dai, Le Thi Cong

Nhan, and Fr. Thaddeus Nguyen Van Ly are in prison under Article 88 of the Criminal Code of Vietnam and Fr. Nguyen Van Loi is being held without official detention orders under house arrest.

(8) In February 2009, as many as 11 Montagnard Protestants were detained for refusing to join the officially recognized Southern Evangelical Church of Vietnam, and 2 still remain in prison.

(9) Since August 2008, the Government of Vietnam has arrested and sentenced at least eight individuals and beaten, tear-gassed, harassed, publicly slandered, and threatened Catholics engaged in peaceful activities seeking the return of Catholic Church properties confiscated by the Vietnamese Government after 1954 in Hanoi, including in the Thai Ha parish.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of State should place Vietnam on the list of “Countries of Particular Concern” for particularly severe violations of religious freedom; and

(2) the Government of Vietnam should lift restrictions on religious freedom and implement necessary legal and political reforms to protect religious freedom.

The CHAIR. No amendment to the committee amendment is in order except those printed in part C of House Report 111-143. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent of the amendment, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

SEC. 335. FOREIGN SERVICE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM.

(a) ADDITIONAL DEATH GRATUITY.—Section 413 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3973) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

“(d) In addition to a death gratuity payment under subsection (a), the Secretary or the head of the relevant United States Government agency is authorized to provide for payment to the surviving dependents of a Foreign Service employee or a Government executive branch employee, if such Foreign Service employee or Government executive branch employee is subject to the authority of the chief of mission pursuant to section 207, of an amount equal to a maximum of eight times the salary of such Foreign Service employee or Government executive branch employee if such Foreign Service employee or Government executive branch employee is killed as a result of an act of international terrorism. Such payment shall be accorded the same treatment as a payment made under subsection (a). For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘act of international terrorism’ has the meaning given such term in section 2331(1) of title 18, United States Code.”.

(b) CERTAIN SPECIFIC PAYMENTS.—Subject to the availability of appropriations specifically for the purpose specified in this subsection as provided in appropriations Acts enacted on or after October 1, 2007, and notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of State shall pay the maximum amount of payment under section 413(d) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (as amended by subsection a(2) of this section) to an individual described in such section 413(d) or to an individual who was otherwise serving at a United States diplomatic or consular mission abroad without a regular salary who was killed as a result of an act of international terrorism (as such term is defined in section 2331(1) of title 18, United States Code) that occurred between January 1, 1998, and the date of the enactment of this section, including the victims of the bombing of August 7, 1998, in Nairobi, Kenya. Such a payment shall be deemed to be a payment under section 413(d) of the Foreign Service Act of 1980, except that for purposes of this section, such payment shall, with respect to a United States citizen receiving payment under this section, be in an amount equal to ten times the salary specified in this section. For purposes of this section and section 413(d) of such Act, with respect to a United States citizen receiving payment under this section, the salary to be used for purposes of determining such payment shall be $94,000.

SEC. 1012. RECRUITMENT AND HIRING OF VETERANS AT THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE AND UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Building a more expeditionary and capable Department of State and United States Agency for International Development requires recruitment of personnel with experience working in unstable areas.

(2) Veterans of the Armed Forces have specialized experience gained from working under stressful circumstances in hostile, foreign environments or under difficult circumstances.

(3) The Foreign Service Act of 1980 states that “The fact that an applicant for appointment as a Foreign Service officer candidate is a veteran or disabled veteran shall be considered an affirmative factor in making such appointments.”.

(4) In 1998, Congress enacted the Veterans Employment Opportunities Act (VEOA), requiring that Federal agencies must allow preference eligibles and certain veterans to apply for positions announced under merit promotion procedures whenever an agency is recruiting from outside its own workforce.

(5) The annual report of the Office of Personnel Management on “The Employment of Veterans in the Federal Government” for fiscal year 2007, detailing the efforts by all agencies of the Federal Government to hire veterans, reported that 15.6 percent of all Department of State employees were veterans.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development should intensify their efforts to recruit more veterans, that those applicants who are entitled to five or ten point veterans preference have also served in the Armed Forces in areas of instability with specialties such as civil affairs, law enforcement, and assignments where they regularly performed other nation-building activities, and that this experience should be an additional affirmative factor in making appointments to serve in the Foreign Service.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State and the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development shall jointly submit to Congress a report on the efforts of the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development to improve the recruitment of veterans into their respective workforces.

SEC. 1114. MODERNIZATION AND STREAMLINING OF UNITED STATES FOREIGN ASSISTANCE.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Chapter 1 of part III of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2351 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 608 the following new section:

"SEC. 609. MONITORING AND EVALUATION OF UNITED STATES FOREIGN ASSISTANCE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State should develop and implement a rigorous system to monitor and evaluate the effectiveness and efficiency of United States foreign assistance. The system should include a method of coordinating the monitoring and evaluation activities of the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development with the monitoring and evaluation activities of other Federal departments and agencies carrying out United States foreign assistance programs, and when possible with other international bilateral and multilateral agencies and entities.

"(b) ELEMENTS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary, under the direction of the President, should ensure that the head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs—

"(1) establishes measurable performance goals, including gender-sensitive goals wherever possible, for such programs;

"(2) establishes criteria for selection of such programs to be subject to various evaluation methodologies, with particular emphasis on impact evaluation;

"(3) establishes an organization unit, or strengthens an existing unit, with adequate staff and funding to budget, plan, and conduct appropriate performance monitoring and improvement and evaluation activities with respect to such programs;

"(4) establishes a process for applying the lessons learned and findings from monitoring and evaluation activities, including impact evaluation research, into future budgeting, planning, programming, design and implementation of such programs; and

"(5) establishes a policy to publish all evaluation plans and reports relating to such programs.

"(c) ANNUAL EVALUATION PLANS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary, under the direction of the President, should ensure that the head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs develops an annual evaluation plan for such programs stating how the department or agency will implement this section.

"(2) CONSULTATION.—In preparing the evaluation plan, the head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs should consult with the heads of other appropriate Federal departments and agencies, governments of host countries, international and local non-governmental organizations, and other relevant stakeholders.

"(3) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs should submit to the appropriate congressional committees an evaluation plan consistent with this subsection.

"(d) CAPACITY BUILDING.—

"(1) FOR FEDERAL DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.—The Secretary, under the direction of the President and in consultation with the head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs, should take concrete steps to enhance the performance monitoring and improvement and evaluation capacity of each such Federal department and agency, subject to the availability of resources for such purposes, including by increasing and improving training and education opportunities, and by adopting best practices and up-to-date evaluation methodologies to provide the best evidence available for assessing the outcomes and impacts of such programs.

"(2) FOR RECIPIENT COUNTRIES.—The Secretary is authorized to provide assistance to increase the capacity of countries receiving United States foreign assistance to design and conduct performance monitoring and improvement and evaluation activities.

"(e) BUDGETARY PLANNING.—The head of each Federal department or agency carrying out United States foreign assistance programs should request in the annual budget of the department or agency a funding amount to conduct performance monitoring and improvement and evaluations of such programs, projects, or activities.

"(f) REPORT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this section, and in each of the two subsequent years, the Secretary shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on—

"(A) the use of funds to carry out evaluations under this section;

"(B) the status and findings of evaluations under this section; and

"(C) the use of findings and lessons learned from evaluations under this section, including actions taken in response to recommendations included in current and previous evaluations, such as the improvement or continuation of a program, project, or activity.

"(2) PUBLICATION.—The report shall also be made available on the Department of State's website.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In this section—

"(A) the term 'appropriate congressional committees' means the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate;

"(B) the term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of State; and

"(C) the term 'United States foreign assistance' means—

"(i) assistance authorized under this Act; and

"(ii) assistance authorized under any other provision of law that is classified under budget function 150 (International Affairs).

"(2) TERMS RELATING TO MONITORING AND EVALUATION.—In this section—

"(A) the term 'evaluation' means the systematic and objective determination and assessment of the design, implementation, and results of an on-going or completed program, project, or activity;

"(B) the term 'impact evaluation research' means the application of research methods and statistical analysis to measure the extent to which change in a population-based outcome or impact can be attributed to United States program, project, or activity intervention instead of other environmental factors, including change in political climate and other donor assistance;

"(C) the term 'impacts' means the positive and negative, direct and indirect, intended and unintended long-term effects produced by a program, project, or activity;

"(D) the term 'outcomes' means the likely or achieved immediate and intermediate effects of the outputs of a program, project, or activity;

"(E) the term 'outputs' means the products, capital, goods, and services that result from a program, project, or activity; and

"(F) the term 'performance monitoring and improvement' means a continuous process of collecting, analyzing, and using data to compare how well a program, project, or activity is being implemented against expected outputs and program costs and to make appropriate improvements accordingly.

"(h) FUNDING.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for each United States foreign assistance program for each of the fiscal years 2010 and 2011, not less than 5 percent of such amounts should be made available to carry out this section."

(b) REPEALS OF OBSOLETE AUTHORIZATIONS OF ASSISTANCE; CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) REPEALS.—The following provisions of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 are hereby repealed:

(A) Section 125 (22 U.S.C. 2151w; relating to general development assistance).

(B) Section 219 (22 U.S.C. 2179; relating to prototype desalting plant).

(C) Title V of chapter 2 of part I (22 U.S.C. 2201; relating to disadvantaged children in Asia).

(D) Section 466 (22 U.S.C. 2286; relating to debt-for-nature exchanges pilot program for sub-Saharan Africa).

(E) Sections 494, 495, and 495B through 495K (22 U.S.C. 2292c, 2292f, and 2292h through 2292q; relating to certain international disaster assistance authorities).

(F) Section 648 (22 U.S.C. 2407; relating to certain miscellaneous provisions).

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 135 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2152h) is amended by striking "section 135" and inserting "section 136".

SEC. 1115. GLOBAL HUNGER AND FOOD SECURITY.

(a) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States to reduce global hunger, advance nutrition, increase food security, and ensure that relevant Federal policies and programs—

(1) provide emergency response and direct support to vulnerable populations in times of need, whether provoked by natural disaster, conflict, or acute economic difficulties;

(2) increase resilience to and reduce, limit, or mitigate the impact of shocks on vulnerable populations, reducing the need for emergency interventions;

(3) increase and build the capacity of people and governments to sustainably feed themselves;

(4) ensure adequate access for all individuals, especially mothers and children, to the required calories and nutrients needed to live healthy lives;

(5) strengthen the ability of small-scale farmers, especially women, to sustain and increase their production and livelihoods; and

(6) incorporate sustainable and environmentally sound agricultural methods and practices.

(b) INITIATIVES.—It is the sense of Congress that initiatives developed to carry out subsection (a) should—

(1) be guided by a comprehensive strategy under Presidential leadership that integrates the policies and programs of all Federal agencies;

(2) be balanced and flexible to allow for programs that meet emergency needs and increased investments in longer-term programs;

(3) develop mechanisms that allow cash and commodity-based resources to be effectively combined;

(4) define clear targets, benchmarks, and indicators of success, including gender analysis, in order to monitor implementation, guarantee accountability, and determine whether beneficiaries achieve increased and sustainable food security;

(5) employ the full range of diplomatic resources and provide incentives to other countries to meet their obligations to reduce hunger and promote food security; and

(6) work within a framework of multilateral commitments.

(c) COMPREHENSIVE STRATEGY TO ADDRESS GLOBAL HUNGER AND FOOD SECURITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall direct the Secretary of State to develop and implement a comprehensive strategy to address global hunger and food security with respect to international programs and policies for—

(A) emergency response and management;

(B) safety nets, social protection, and disaster risk reduction;

(C) nutrition;

(D) market-based agriculture, the rehabilitation and expansion of rural agricultural infrastructure, and rural development;

(E) agricultural education, research and development, and extension services;

(F) government-to-government technical assistance programs;

(G) natural resource management, environmentally sound agriculture, and responses to the impact of climate change on agriculture and food production;

(H) monitoring and evaluation mechanisms; and

(I) provision of adequate and sustained resources, including multiyear funding, to ensure the scale and duration of programs required to carry out the United States commitment to alleviate global hunger and promote food security.

(2) COORDINATION WITH INTERNATIONAL GOALS.—In accordance with applicable law, the Secretary of State shall ensure that the comprehensive strategy described in paragraph (1) contributes to achieving the Millennium Development Goal of reducing global hunger by half not later than 2015 and to advancing the United Nations Comprehensive Framework for Action with respect to global hunger and food security, including supporting the United Nations, international agencies, governments, and other relevant organizations and entities in carrying out the Comprehensive Framework for Action.

(d) REPORTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State shall submit to the President and Congress, not later than March 31, 2010, and annually thereafter for the next two years, an annual report on the implementation of the comprehensive strategy to address global hunger and food security required under subsection (c), including an assessment of agency innovations, achievements, and failures to perform, and policy and budget recommendations for changes to agency operations, priorities, and funding.

(2) GAO.—Not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act and two years thereafter, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to Congress a report evaluating the design, implementation, and Federal Government coordination of a comprehensive strategy to address global hunger and food security required on subsection (c).

SEC. 1116. STATEMENT OF CONGRESS ON THE HUMANITARIAN SITUATION IN SRI LANKA.

Congress makes the following statements:

(1) the United States welcomes the end to the 26-year conflict in Sri Lanka between the Government of Sri Lanka and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam;

(2) a durable and lasting peace will only be achieved through a political solution that addresses the legitimate aspirations of all Sri Lankan communities, including the Tamils;

(3) the United States eagerly looks forward to the Government of Sri Lanka's putting forward a timely and credible proposal to engage its Tamil community and address the legitimate grievances of its Tamil citizens so that peace and reconciliation can be achieved and sustained;

(4) the United States supports the international community's call for full and immediate access to humanitarian relief agencies to camps for internally displaced persons, and remains deeply concerned about the plight of the thousands of civilians affected by the civil war;

(5) the United States expects the Government of Sri Lanka to abide by its commitments to allow access for representatives of the responsible international organizations throughout the screening and registration process for internally displaced persons; and

(6) the United States welcomes the Government of Sri Lanka's commitment to place the camps under civilian control and ensure that such camps meet international humanitarian standards, including the right to freedom of movement, as well as Sri Lanka's pledge to release camp residents, reunite them with separated family members and permit them to return to their homes at the earliest possible opportunity.

SEC. 1129. SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO THE MURDER OF UNITED STATES AIR FORCE RESERVE MAJOR KARL D. HOERIG AND THE NEED FOR PROMPT JUSTICE IN STATE OF OHIO V. CLAUDIA C. HOERIG.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) United States Air Force Reserve Major Karl D. Hoerig of Newton Falls, Ohio, was a United States citizen and soldier who admirably served his country for over 25 years and flew over 200 combat missions.

(2) The State of Ohio has charged Claudia C. Hoerig with aggravated murder in the case of State of Ohio v. Claudia C. Hoerig.

(3) The State of Ohio charges that Claudia C. Hoerig, Karl D. Hoerig's wife, allegedly purchased a .357 five-shot revolver, practiced shooting the weapon, and then shot Karl D. Hoerig three times, which led to his death on March 12, 2007.

(4) Claudia C. Hoerig fled to Brazil, and claims she is both a citizen of the United States and Brazil.

(5) Brazil's constitution forbids extradition of its nationals, but the United States and Brazil recognize and uphold a Treaty of Extradition signed in 1964.

(6) Law enforcement officials are vigorously pursuing State of Ohio v. Claudia C. Hoerig, the charge of aggravated murder is internationally recognized, and the punishment, which is not capital punishment, is internationally respected.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the alleged aggravated murder of United States Air Force Reserve Major Karl D. Hoerig is deserving of justice, and his family and friends deserve closure regarding the murder of their loved one;

(2) the United States Government should, as a priority matter, work with prosecutors in the State of Ohio, as well as facilitate cooperation with the Government of Brazil, in order to obtain justice in this tragic case; and

(3) a resolution of the case of State of Ohio v. Claudia Hoerig is important to maintain the traditionally close cooperation and friendship between the United States and Brazil.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and a Member opposed each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

My amendment makes a number of changes. Many of these are minor or technical amendments. Others address issues raised by other committees that have a jurisdictional interest in the bill. However, there are a number of other changes in my bill that are more substantive. For example, the amendment takes care of requests by Members that are generally unobjectionable even though substantive.

For example, the bill adds a provision that would allow the State Department's growing Civilian Response Corps to enhance its capability by drawing on locally employed staff who have significant expertise in unstable environments.

It includes provisions to assist in the compensation for victims of terrorism from the 1998 Nairobi bombing, drawing from a bill that we passed last year on a bipartisan basis and supported by Mr. JESSE JACKSON, Mr. ROY BLUNT, and our ranking member, ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN.

The amendment also updates language currently in the bill, welcoming the end of Sri Lanka's 26-year civil war between the government and the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. These are provisions pushed particularly by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCMAHON), a member of the committee. The United States, standing with the international community, eagerly looks forward to the government of Sri Lanka's putting forward a timely and credible proposal to engage its Tamil community and address the legitimate grievances of its Tamil citizens so that peace and reconciliation can be achieved and sustained. It also includes two requests by Republican members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, including an amendment by Mr. WILSON from South Carolina, who I agreed to work with during the markup at the committee. It also increases the amount of funds for the State Department Inspector General and the National Endowment For Democracy, as suggested by the minority in their views on the bill.

This continues my efforts to include sensible Republican ideas into H.R. 2410, even though I recognize that very few Republicans appear to be prepared to support the legislation at this time.

In addition, my amendment would also begin the process of modernizing our foreign assistance program by establishing a rigorous system to monitor and evaluate the effectiveness and efficiency of U.S. foreign assistance.

One of the greatest weaknesses of the current U.S. foreign aid program is that it lacks a clear set of goals and objectives, and there's no systematic plan for measuring results. Under my amendment, the Secretary of State would coordinate the monitoring and evaluation activities of the various agencies carrying out foreign aid activities, and would report to the Congress on the findings and lessons learned from such evaluations.

Finally, in recent days—and this is important—there has been significant concern expressed that a provision in the bill authorizing the Office of Global Women's Issues, an existing office at the State Department that focuses on issues like education for women and girls, political empowerment, and violence against women, somehow is a basis for promoting or lobbying for abortion. That is simply not true. The bill as reported out by the committee does not refer to abortion in any way, nor does the office work on abortion issues. That office is focused particularly on women in Iraq and in Afghanistan on the issues of education and political empowerment that I just mentioned.

To reassure my colleagues, however, I have included in my amendment the following new subsection:

“Nothing in this section, and in particular the duties of the office described in subsection (c)”—that is the Office of Global Women's Issues—“shall be construed as affecting in any way existing statutory prohibitions against abortion or existing statutory prohibitions on the use of funds to engage in any activity or effort to alter the laws or policies in effect in any foreign country concerning the circumstances under which abortion is permitted, regulated, or prohibited.”

This language makes it very clear that existing prohibitions on lobbying for or using funds to promote abortion—including the Helms amendment, the Leahy amendment and the Siljander amendment—remain in effect and will continue to apply to the actions of the office. I believe this confirms that the bill does not undermine current law in any way and will reassure my colleagues on this issue.

I think this manager's amendment is a good amendment. I urge all my colleagues to support it.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition.

The CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, at precisely the same time as President Barack Obama continues to assiduously assure Americans, including graduates at Notre Dame University last month, that he wants to reduce abortion at home and abroad, his administration is aggressively seeking to topple pro-life laws in sovereign nations, a clear, deeply troubling contradiction.

First Mr. Obama rescinded the Mexico City policy, a pro-life Reagan-era executive order, that ensured that the $500 million in population control funds appropriated by Congress each year only went to foreign nongovernmental organizations, family planning organizations, that did not promote, lobby or perform abortions as a method of family planning. As a result of Obama's new policy, pro-abortion organizations are now flush with cash and will continue to get hundreds of millions of dollars annually to push abortion around the world, all of it decoupled from pro-life safeguards.

I mentioned the Mexico City policy, which is not on the floor today, for context to underscore what is actually happening 24/7 in the Obama administration. Add to this the fact that the administration has stuffed pro-abortion activists, a literal who's-who from the abortion rights organizations, in key gatekeeper positions, and you get the idea and see that abortion is a serious undertaking by this administration. Even the gatekeeper, the woman—and a fine woman—who heads up the U.S. Agency For International Development, Wendy Sherman, used to be the director of EMILY's List. So every dollar of foreign aid goes through the person who used to be the director of EMILY's List.

Yet Obama's international abortion agenda is unpopular and getting increasingly unpopular with the American public. The Gallup Poll found that by a margin of 65 percent to 35 percent, Americans opposed his rescission of the Mexico City policy. And I would note parenthetically that the most recent Gallup Poll from May 15th indicates that Americans are clearly trending pro-life, with 51 percent calling themselves pro-life and 42 percent calling themselves pro-choice. America is changing. It is evolving in favor of life.

In late April, Mr. Chairman, we received our distinguished Secretary of State at the Foreign Affairs Committee and I raised some issues that concerned me with her. I noted that she had recently received the Margaret Sanger Award in Houston on March 27th, and then in her speech, which was on the U.S. Department of State's Web site, she quoted that she was “in awe of Margaret Sanger.” She said that “Margaret Sanger's life and leadership was one of the most transformational in the entire history of the human race and that Sanger's work both here and abroad was not done.”

I pointed out that Sanger's legacy was indeed transformational, but not for the better if one happens to be poor, disenfranchised, weak, disabled, a person of color, an unborn child, or among the many so-called undesirables, the disabled that Sanger would exclude and exterminate from the human race.

Sanger's prolific writings dripped with contempt for those she considered unfit to live. I have actually read many of Sanger's articles and books. She was an unapologetic eugenicist and a racist who said, “The most merciful thing a family does for one of its infant members is to kill it.”

She also said on another occasion, “Eugenics is one of the most adequate and thorough avenues to the issue of racial, political and social problems.”

In her book, “The Pivot of Civilization,” Sanger devoted an entire chapter which she entitled “The Cruelty of Charity.” Imagine that, a chapter, “The Cruelty of Charity,” explaining a shockingly inhumane case for the systematic denial of prenatal and maternal health care for poor pregnant women.

She said, and I quote in pertinent part, “Such benevolence is not merely superficial and nearsighted.” She said, “It conceals a stupid cruelty and leads to a deterioration in the human stock and the perpetuation of defectives, delinquents and dependents.”

So it is to me and many Members who are pro-life extraordinarily difficult to understand how anyone could be in awe of Margaret Sanger, a person who made no secret whatsoever of views that were antithetical to protecting fundamental human rights of the weakest and the most vulnerable, and to suggest that her work remains undone around the world, which the Secretary of State has done, is deeply troubling.

So I asked our Secretary of State, is the Obama administration seeking in any way to weaken or overturn pro-life laws and policies in African and Latin American countries, either directly or through multilateral organizations, including and especially the United Nations, the African Union, or the Organization of American States? And I also asked her, does the United States' definition of reproductive health include abortion?

Secretary of State Clinton was very clear, she was not ambiguous, and in a radical departure from President Bush said that the administration, the Obama administration, was entitled to advocate abortion anywhere in the world.

Secretary Clinton went on to unilaterally redefine the term "reproductive health" to include abortion, even though that definition isn't shared by the rest of the world, including and especially in countries in Latin America and in Africa. That is important, because the term "reproductive health" is found in numerous UN consensus documents and action plans and in the laws of countries worldwide.

On March 31st, for example, the UN Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for the Population, Refugee and Migration Bureau, told the UN that the U.S. Government seeks to achieve universal access to reproductive health and the promotion of reproductive rights. In light of the Secretary of State's statement, that clearly means universal access to abortion on demand.

By foisting abortion on the developing world via a new government Office on Global Women's Issues, the Obama administration is squandering America's political capital to enable the purveyors of death to descend upon nation after nation to promote their deadly wares.

Section 334 of the underlying legislation establishes an Office for Global Women's Issues, and I suggested that we limit it, that it not become a war room at the Department of State for the promotion of abortion. If so, the predictable consequences are more dead children and more wounded women.

Even Planned Parenthood's Guttmacher Institute has said that in most countries it is common, after abortion is legalized, for abortion to rise sharply for several years. Sharply. Contrary to what President Obama says about reduction, the numbers go up.

I would like to ask the distinguished chairman, you know I asked those questions of Secretary of State Clinton. Do you believe that such activity, promotion of abortion, is prohibited under current law as referenced by your amendment? Can this new office promote these kinds of activities?

Mr. BERMAN. They cannot. If the gentleman is yielding on his time to me, they cannot. You know, Abe Lincoln used to tell this story: If you call a tail a leg, how many legs does a sheep have? And the answer is four, because calling a tail a leg doesn't make it one.

No matter how many times the specter is raised, this office cannot do and has no intention and no plans of doing anything to promote abortions, coerce abortions, fund abortions or lobby for an abortion policy.

It is an office that is focused generally on the issues of women's political empowerment: should women have the right to vote, should they be able to run for office, are they treated as equal citizens under the law. It serves as a promoter of better education for women and girls and a series of causes that you are known for caring about. And it does not. It does not.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Reclaiming my time, on the issue of multilateral organizations like the Organization of American States, the African Union and others, the United Nations, what can the role of this new office be vis-a-vis the abortion issue and those multilateral organizations?

Mr. BERMAN. If the gentleman will continue to yield, my view is that that office cannot do through indirection, that is by going through some agency, anything that it is not allowed to do on its own. And it is not allowed to do the things that you are concerned about. And the purpose of the manager's amendment—

The CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey's 10 minutes has expired.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Will the gentleman yield 1 minute on his time?

Mr. BERMAN. I will yield more time to discuss this, if you want, but first I am going to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. RUPPERSBERGER), who has been waiting patiently. Then, if you want, we can come back to this.

Mr. RUPPERSBERGER. I rise in support of H.R. 2410 and thank you for yielding, Mr. Chairman.

As chairman of the Technical Tactical Subcommittee of the House Intelligence Committee, I support a provision relative to the International Traffic in Arms Regulations.

ITAR is a set of regulations that control the import and export of defense-related technology and services on the U.S. Munitions List. In 1998, all commercial satellite components were added to the list of restricted munitions exports with tougher licensing conditions. Our Intelligence TNT Subcommittee has investigated ITAR's effect on our satellite program, and it has clearly affected it in a negative way.

Before the 1998 restrictions went into effect, 73 percent of the world market for commercial satellites went to U.S. companies. By the year 2000, that figure had dropped to 27 percent. There are technologies on this ITAR list that don't need to be, and foreign companies are actually marketing their products as "ITAR-free." Our companies get weaker as theirs get stronger.

I approached Chairman BERMAN, who was also working on this issue with his committee. Section 826 of this bill grants the President the flexibility to remove simple, old, and widely available technology from the new Munitions List. Our most militarily-sensitive technology will remain.

I want to thank Chairman BERMAN and his staff for including this language. Please vote for H.R. 2410.

The CHAIR. The gentleman from California has 3½ minutes remaining.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield myself 2 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Let me just lay out this Office of Global Women's Issues. First of all, by law, by virtue of the Helms amendment and the Siljander amendment and the Leahy amendment, it cannot and, by practice, it does not and has no intention of serving as a vehicle for either abortion policy or coercive abortion.

What does it do? It is dedicated to ensuring that women around the world can realize their potential by fully participating in the political, economic and cultural lives of their societies.

Women around the globe, and the gentleman from New Jersey knows this, women are bought and sold like commodities and trafficked across international borders for sexual exploitation. Young children are married off to men old enough to be their grandfathers and have their education and childhood abruptly ended. Girls have their bodies mutilated in the name of culture or tradition, leading to complication in childbearing and lifelong pain and incontinence. Young women are slain by their own families for perceived and sometimes fictitious infractions, simply because they are viewed less as human beings and as symbols of human honor.

Women who become infected with HIV, often because of the infidelity of their spouses, are shunned, lose their livelihoods or do not have access to the medicines that could prolong their lives and prevent transmission of the virus to their children.

I say to the gentleman, these causes and these concerns that I have mentioned have always been at the forefront of the gentleman's own concerns, and to hold this entire bill and this office hostage to a desire to change abortion law I think is unfair.

I scrupulously avoided and the committee Democrats scrupulously avoided any effort to change that law in the other direction, and I think it is wrong to try to hijack this bill to hold it hostage for those purposes.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. ROS-LEHTINEN

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Ms. Ros-Lehtinen:

At the end of subtitle B of title IV, add the following:

SEC. 418. WITHHOLDING OF CONTRIBUTIONS EQUAL TO NUCLEAR TECHNICAL COOPERATION PROVIDED TO IRAN, SYRIA, SUDAN AND CUBA IN 2007.

The Secretary of State shall withhold $4,472,100 from the United States contribution for fiscal year 2010 to the regularly assessed budget of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Florida.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The prospect of an Iranian regime brandishing nuclear weapons is a nightmare scenario that we must stop if we are to avoid being forever threatened with destruction. But the problem, Mr. Chairman, is not confined to Iran. Following in its footsteps are countries such as Syria, whose clandestine nuclear weapons program is only now coming to light.

We and our allies must use the means at our disposal to prevent these and other rogue regimes from realizing their deadly ambitions. We have an opportunity today to cut off an important source of assistance to the nuclear programs of Iran, Syria and other regimes, the help provided by the International Atomic Energy Agency, the very organization charged with preventing nuclear proliferation.

The Government Accountability Office recently released a scathing report on the State Department's near total lack of oversight regarding the nuclear assistance that the IAEA provides to member states, especially to Iran, Syria, Cuba and Sudan.

The GAO report noted that from 1997 to the year 2007, the International Atomic Energy Agency's Technical Cooperation Program provided over $55 million to these state sponsors of terrorism, supposedly for "peaceful purposes." But as the GAO report notes, nuclear equipment, technology and expertise can be dual use, which means capable of serving a peaceful purpose, but also useful in contributing to nuclear weapons development.

The GAO report criticizes offices at the State Department for having little or no idea what these programs actually consist of, much less working to stop the most harmful among them.

Unfortunately, the bill before us contains no language that addresses this serious problem, despite its authorization of the administration's full request for over $100 million to be given to the IAEA.

The bill before us does not mandate that the State Department take immediate action to implement the recommendations of the GAO. It does not require our representatives at this Agency to do anything to prevent additional nuclear assistance from going to Iran, from going to Syria, other enemies of the United States. It does not even mention the problem, Mr. Chairman.

By contrast, an extensive section of H.R. 2475, an alternative Foreign Relations Authorization Act that I introduced earlier this year, was devoted to reform the United Nations, including addressing the specific problems of preventing the International Atomic Energy Agency nuclear assistance going to state sponsors of terrorism and countries in violation of their IAEA obligations. But none of that language was included in the bill that we are considering today. And that is why, Mr. Chairman, I'm offering this amendment.

What would this amendment do?

It would apply direct and unambiguous pressure on the International Atomic Energy Agency to halt its assistance to those countries of proliferation concern by withholding from the U.S. contribution almost $4.5 million.

Why that amount?

That is equal to the amount that the Agency spent on nuclear assistance to Iran, Syria, Cuba and Sudan in the year 2007, the most recent fiscal year for which figures are available.

Opponents of my amendment may counter that denying funds to the IAEA for any purpose will weaken its nonproliferation efforts. But let me be clear, Mr. Chairman: this amendment does not affect safeguards or inspections.

It is stunning to stand here and be forced to say that the International Atomic Energy Agency's technical nuclear assistance is adding to this threat; but it is, and we cannot let it continue.

Unfortunately, we cannot expect the cooperation of this Agency, the IAEA, in fixing this problem because the Agency's attitude was summed up by a senior official who, when pressed to explain the continuing assistance to Iran and other state sponsors of terrorism, even as they defy the Agency and the U.N. Security Council, stated that "there are no good countries and there are no bad countries."

Faced with this extraordinary situation, Mr. Chairman, our only option is to use our financial leverage to force the International Atomic Energy Agency to stop helping our enemies' nuclear weapons programs. The threat that we face from Iran and the multiplying nuclear powers around the world grow every day.

If we are to defend ourselves, we must use every leverage that we possess to stop this menace before it becomes a reality. My amendment is an opportunity to do just that.

I ask my colleagues for their support.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, could I ask if the gentlelady is finished.

Our side has the right to close. Then since I'll be the only speaker and I have the right to close—

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Absolutely, Mr. Chairman. If I could ask the chairman how much time I have left.

The Acting CHAIR (Mr. CAPUANO). Does the gentleman from California claim the time in opposition?

Mr. BERMAN. I do.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlelady has used all her time allotted. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume, up to 5 minutes.

I rise in opposition to the amendment. I share a lot of the ranking member's concerns, fundamentally, about the countries named in her amendment and about the issue of proliferation. But there are sort of three different levels on which I think her amendment raises serious doubts and causes me to want to oppose it.

The first is the assumption that withholding assessed contributions produces the actions we want. We've had test cases of this.

Wouldn't it have been great if the money we withheld from the U.N. population planning account had stopped coercive abortions in China?

Wouldn't it be great if the dues we are assessed to pay to the United Nations had resulted in the kinds of reforms that eliminated the questionable contact that the minority rightfully points to? There is a real challenge to this assumption that the withholding is what achieves the goal. We can wish it a lot, but it didn't always happen.

Secondly, there are some specific categories of programs here that are involved and should be mentioned because, in some cases, they make some sense. The technical assistance provided by IAEA is constructive and supportive of a number of humanitarian needs, such as the eradication of the tsetse fly in numerous African countries, the fruit fly in Panama, improving cancer diagnosis and treatment in Tanzania, Niger, Mali, Zambia and the Central African Republic, improvements in agriculture in groundwater tracing. These are the kinds of programs that are involved.

Once in a while there may be a project such as in Iran or Syria that may provide a small amount of useful experience in general nuclear science and radiology. But the most important part is to the extent that some of these programs are about enhancing safety.

The U.S. is totally free on the board to vote against those projects at the Board of Governors, and does so. The U.S. already denies extra budgetary funding for technical cooperation projects for state sponsors of terrorism, which the countries the gentlelady mentioned are.

However, the proposed amendment mandates the withholding, not of the voluntary contributions, not of the extra budgetary support, but of the U.S. regular dues to the IAEA.

So what does it do?

It hampers the Agency's primary function, which is the inspecting and safeguarding of nuclear material in foreign countries. This is cutting off your nose to spite your face.

The IAEA's technical assistance program is funded entirely from voluntary contributions. The program that, understandably, concerns the gentlelady is not from the assessed contributions. It's from the voluntary contributions. The amendment is not focused on the voluntary contributions. It's focused on the assessed contributions.

So what will we do? We'll end up cutting the funds that would otherwise be used by the IAEA to ensure that states are not diverting nuclear material from peaceful to military purposes—pretty serious concern—inspections that are in the direct national security interest of the United States. That's what we're cutting.

So that's why I think the amendment, not by its intention, and not even by its focus on these programs, we could live without those programs, but its focus on cutting the assessed dues to the most important functions for the United States of the IAEA makes no sense, and I urge a "no" vote.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Florida will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. POLIS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. POLIS. I have an amendment made in order by the rule, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. POLIS:

Page 26, line 21, insert "and, if practicable, made available over the internet" after "general public".

Page 27, line 7, insert before the period the following: "including making such films available over the internet, if practicable".

Page 27, line 16, insert "including online outreach," after "resource centers".

At the end of subtitle C of title III, insert the following:

SEC. 3. BROADENING EXPERIENCE WITHIN THE FOREIGN SERVICE.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State, acting through the Director of the Foreign Service, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a detailed plan to increase the career incentives provided to Foreign Service officers to serve in bureaus and offices of the Department of State not primarily focused on regional issues, including the Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor, the Bureau of Oceans and International Environmental and Scientific Affairs, and the Bureau of Population, Refugees and Migration. In formulating such plan, the Secretary shall consult with a broad range of active and retired Foreign Service officers and current and former officials of the Department to elicit proposals on how to promote non-regional assignments, and shall consider—

(1) requiring all Foreign Service officers to serve at least two years in a bureau or office of the Department not primarily focused on regional issues prior to joining the Senior Foreign Service; and

(2) changing the composition of Foreign Service selection boards to increase the participation of Department personnel with extensive experience in bureaus and offices of the Department not primarily focused on regional issues.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. POLIS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011.

I applaud and thank Chairman BERMAN and his staff for their hard work and their dedication to this important issue. This legislation truly represents a renewed emphasis on meaningful dialogue and strong diplomacy as it sets forth to increase our number of Foreign Service officers, grow our Peace Corps mission, develop new educational and cultural exchange programs, and expand our public diplomacy efforts.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment calls on the Department, as part of the public outreach and public diplomacy efforts, to make materials found in libraries, resource centers and film screenings available online to help showcase United States culture, society and values in history to as many individuals as possible. It also adds online outreach as an evaluation criteria for our public outreach efforts.

The Internet has made the world a smaller place, making it easier to share information globally in just a matter of seconds. It's imperative that we utilize the Internet as a means of public diplomacy and continue to explore the effectiveness of online outreach.

My amendment also tasks the State Department with diversifying the experience of Foreign Service officers. Through creative diplomacy and hard work in often harsh conditions, our Nation's top diplomatic corps make an enormous contribution to global peace and stability and to the way in which our Nation is viewed overseas. However, many of the best and brightest Foreign Service officers feel forced to focus exclusively on a region or country, frequently avoiding critical assignments in nonregional bureaus, to the detriment of those offices and causes. They aren't avoiding these assignments because they don't care about these issues without borders, like human rights, the environment or refugees issues, but rather because the State Department's promotion system strongly favors those Foreign Service officers who focus on country-specific or regional assignments.

My amendment is designed to correct this inequity and to pave the way for a more balanced and effective diplomatic corps. It requires that the Secretary of State, acting through the Director General of the Foreign Service, submit a detailed plan to Congress on how the Department will increase career incentives for Foreign Service officers to serve in bureaus and offices not primarily focused on regional issues.

We further ask that the Department consider requiring all Foreign Service officers to serve at least 2 years in a bureau or office that's not focused exclusively on a regional issue before joining the Senior Foreign Service.

The amendment also recommends that a composition of Foreign Service selection boards include the participation of Department personnel with extensive experience in nonregional assignments. I believe this amendment will help shake up the current system of promotion in the Foreign Service, and result in a stronger and better diplomatic corps that's able to apply lessons learned from throughout the globe with deep sector expertise when tackling issues such as human rights, the environment, population and refugees.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition, even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment by the gentleman from Colorado has three main components, none of which I find inherently objectionable.

Most significantly, it would require the State Department to report to Congress with a plan on providing appropriate career incentives for Foreign Service officers to serve in nonregional bureaus of the Department, such as the human rights and refugee-focused bureaus.

And, secondly, it would clarify that some of the new public diplomacy efforts required by the underlying bill also should make use of the Internet for online research. And even while some question the fiscal wisdom of the underlying provisions, these changes do not exacerbate those flaws. I do not intend to oppose this amendment.

I yield back.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. BERMAN of California.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I thank him for his excellent amendment. I strongly support it because it basically works to encourage the development of the fundamental skills of the Foreign Service.

It seeks to broaden the skill set of the Foreign Service by requiring this plan to increase career incentives provided to Foreign Service officers to serve in the bureaus and offices of the Department not primarily focused on regional issues, including the Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor, Bureau of Oceans and International Environment, and the Bureau of Population, Refugees and Migration.

It asks the Secretary to consider requiring all Foreign Service officers to serve at least 2 years in a bureau office of the Department not primarily focused on regional issues. And it takes a look at the whole issue of changing the composition of the Selection and Promotion Board to increase the participation of those Foreign Service officers with extensive experience in the non-regional bureaus. Very important. There was a tendency in the past that gets entrenched that the way you get ahead in the Foreign Service is you work in the regional bureaus, you work in the political or the economic aspect of that. And the result is that critical issues involving functional programs and these other bureaus are neglected. We want the best and the brightest in all these different areas, and we should look to remove any internal biases that disincentivize that activity.

I thank the gentleman.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Chairman, as the State Department attempts to restore its role as the face of the United States Government abroad, it is crucial that Congress provide our diplomats with the resources and the guidance they need to once again make American diplomacy a top priority.

This legislation is further strengthened by my amendment, which expands public outreach online and encourages the Foreign Service to promote a more diverse set of experiences for its officers, including its senior officers.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. POLIS).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. HUNTER

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 4 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 4 offered by Mr. HUNTER:
In section 911(c), redesignate paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (4) and (5).

In section 911(c), insert after paragraph (2) the following:

(3) the Secretary of Defense;

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself as much time as I may consume. And I broke the podium.

The amendment I am offering today to H.R. 2410, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, is straightforward. It simply adds the Secretary of Defense to the Task Force on Prevention of Illicit Small Arms Trafficking in the Western Hemisphere that is created under this legislation.

The stated purpose of this task force is to develop a strategy and integrated Federal policies to better control the export of small arms and light weapons in a manner that furthers the foreign policy and national security interests of the United States in the Western Hemisphere.

While this task force is comprised of the Secretaries of State and Homeland Security and the Attorney General, all of whom should be members of this task force, it does not include perhaps the most important player in global countertrafficking operations, the Secretary of Defense.

The Department of Defense plays an important role in U.S. security cooperation and assistance worldwide, particularly with governments and militaries throughout the Western Hemisphere. These relationships are critical to our efforts to promote peace and stability in our region of the world, and intelligence and operational support provided by our military are an integral part of this shared responsibility.

Given the Department of Defense's role as an interagency partner in countertrafficking and U.S. export control activities, it should not be excluded, I don't think, in any way from being a primary member of this task force. Whatever this task force puts forward in the way of policy recommendations will be closely evaluated by Congress as we work to address the serious problems of weapons trafficking in our hemisphere. It is important that these findings and recommendations fully represent the role and contributions of those departments primarily involved in combating arms trafficking, protecting U.S. security, and advancing our foreign policy objectives. And I would like to add, Mr. Chairman, that the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for the Western Hemisphere, Secretary Mora, agrees with this amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUNTER. Absolutely, I yield.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

While the gentleman may have broken the podium, his amendment does not break the task force; it improves it. The Secretary of Defense should be a member of that task force, and this amendment simply establishes that rather than leave it to the Secretary of State's discretion. That's fine with me.

I support the amendment and urge its adoption. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chair, I rise today in strong support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California—Mr. HUNTER—to a provision that I authored in this bill creating a Task Force on the Prevention of Illicit Small Arms Trafficking in the Western Hemisphere.

While recent media attention has focused on the high number of guns—some 90%—recovered from crime scenes in Mexico that are originally from the United States, this is not just a Mexico issue. In February, I led a congressional delegation to Mexico and Jamaica. In Jamaica, Prime Minister Golding told me that 90% of the guns recovered in Jamaica also originate in the U.S.

This provision requires the President to create an inter-agency task force—chaired by the Secretary of State—charged with developing a strategy for the federal government to coordinate efforts to reduce and prevent illegal firearms trafficking from the U.S. throughout the Western Hemisphere.

Currently, the U.S. government has no cohesive strategy to combat small arms trafficking in the Western Hemisphere. Since our inability to control firearms leaving the U.S. creates this problem in the first place, we must do more.

This provision helps us to view the illegal firearms trafficking issue holistically, rather than just focusing on one or two countries.

The October 2007 United States-Mexico Joint Statement announcing the Merida Initiative said that the U.S. would “intensify its efforts to address all aspects of drug trafficking . . . and continue to combat trafficking of weapons and bulk currency to Mexico.”

With this provision, we are not simply living up to our commitment to Mexico, but are also taking responsibility for our unfortunate contributions to drugs and violence throughout the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. HUNTER's amendment adds the Secretary of Defense to the task force which already includes the Secretary of State, the Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security. I believe this is a positive addition to my provision.

The presence of the Secretary of Defense on the task force will help address reports made that some firearms recovered in crime scenes in Mexico and elsewhere come from U.S. military arsenals. While I have seen no evidence to support such allegations, if this is in fact true, we must find out what happened to ensure that the practice ends immediately.

Mr. Chair, I thank Mr. HUNTER for offering this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. NADLER OF NEW YORK

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 5 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. NADLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk made in order by the rule.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 5 offered by Mr. NADLER of New York:

At the end of subtitle B of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING PENSION PAYMENTS OWED BY THE STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

It is the sense of Congress that the United States should continue working with the states of the former Soviet Union to come to an agreement whereby each state of the former Soviet Union would pay the tens of thousands of beneficiaries who have immigrated to the United States the pensions for which they are eligible and entitled.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of my amendment, which expresses the sense of Congress that we should continue working with the states of the former Soviet Union to see that immigrants from those states now in the United States are paid their government pensions that they earned while working in the former Soviet Union.

The United States has bilateral agreements with many of the nations to address cross-country government pension coverage. While these agreements can structure and coordinate such pension coverage in different ways, the important point is that under most circumstances government pensions are treated with reciprocity. In other words, with respect to countries with which we have arrangements, those countries pay the pensions that they earned while working in those countries to citizens of the United States who now live here. And by the same token, we pay Social Security to Americans who are now citizens of a foreign country if they earned the Social Security while working here.

We do not have such arrangements with any of the states of the former Soviet Union—with Russia, Ukraine, Belarus, and so forth. This is critically important because millions of people had no choice but to flee the repressive former Soviet Union in the 1970s, 1980s and 1990s. Several hundred thousand of these people now live in the United States and were forced to renounce their citizenship and their rights of citizenship in the Soviet Union in order to be allowed to leave. Thousands of these people live here, and in spite of having worked 30 or 40 years and earning pension rights in the states of the former Soviet Union, they do not receive pensions from any of the successor states.

So this amendment simply is a sense of the Congress urging the State Department to continue trying to negotiate such arrangements with the states of the former Soviet Union so that the former citizens of those countries who now are citizens of the United States and live here can receive the pensions they earned while living in Russia.

This should be a no-brainer. It simply urges the State Department to continue efforts to negotiate such arrangements with those states, as we have with many other states. I urge its adoption.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim time in opposition even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of Congressman NADLER's amendment, which, as he explained, expresses the sense of Congress that the United States should continue working with all former states of the Soviet Union to come to an agreement whereby each former state of the Soviet Union would pay the tens of thousands of beneficiaries who have emigrated to the United States the pensions for which they are eligible and entitled.

Over the past several decades, many of the tens of thousands of immigrants who had come to the U.S. from these former Soviet Union states had earlier earned pensions working in their former home countries; however, most often they have been unable to collect what is owed to them.

I support Congressman NADLER's amendment to work with the government of the former Soviet states to come to agreements whereby these states would pay the pensions to those entitled beneficiaries who have emigrated to the United States. It's the right thing to do. Further, Mr. Chairman, it would likely result in a lighter burden for U.S. taxpayers and the programs that their taxes fund to aid the elderly.

Mr. NADLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I now yield 1 minute to the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Mr. BERMAN.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I thank him for his amendment. I strongly support it.

A number of immigrants to the United States from the former Soviet Union worked for decades in the Soviet-run industries, contributed to the state's social security system, and expected to receive their rightful pensions when they reached the requisite age. For a variety of reasons beyond their control, they haven't received their pensions. And some of these workers were forced to renounce their citizenship when they moved to the United States.

As many of the former Soviet states refuse to pay pensions to those who are no longer citizens, these elderly individuals face a bureaucratic nightmare in seeking to reclaim their rights. This amendment expresses our sense of Congress that we should work with the former Soviet states to establish a workable system that enables the workers to claim pensions that are rightfully theirs. It is appropriate. It's right. And I support the amendment and urge its adoption.

Mr. NADLER of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the remaining time.

I simply want to thank the distinguished chairman of the committee, Mr. BERMAN, and the ranking member, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, for supporting this amendment. I know of no opposition. I urge everyone to vote for it. It is the fair and right thing to do, so I hope everyone will vote for it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MR. MCCAUL

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 6 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. MCCAUL. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 6 offered by Mr. MCCAUL:
At the end of subtitle A of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11. COMPREHENSIVE INTERAGENCY STRATEGY AND IMPLEMENTATION PLAN FOR SUDAN.

(a) STRATEGY AND PLAN.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall develop and transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a comprehensive interagency strategy and implementation plan, which may include a classified annex, to address the ongoing and inter-related crises in Sudan and advance United States national security and humanitarian interests in Sudan, which shall include the elements specified in subsection (c).

(b) ELEMENTS.—The comprehensive interagency strategy and implementation plan required under subsection (b) shall contain at least the following elements:

(1) Consistent with section 1127, a description of a comprehensive policy toward Sudan which balances United States interests in—

(A) resolving the conflict in Darfur;
(B) implementing the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) and promoting peace and stability in Southern Sudan;

(C) resolving long-standing conflicts in Abyei, Blue Nile, and Southern Kordofan;

(D) advancing respect for democracy, human rights, and religious freedom throughout the country;

(E) addressing internal and regional security; and

(F) combating Islamist extremism.

(2) Progress toward achieving the policy objectives specified in paragraph (1), including—

(A) facilitating the full deployment and freedom of movement of the hybrid United Nations-African Union Mission in Darfur;

(B) ensuring access and security for humanitarian organizations throughout the country including, as appropriate, those organizations that wrongfully have been expelled by the Sudanese regime;

(C) promoting reconciliation within and among disparate groups;

(D) advancing regional security and cooperation while eliminating cross-border support for armed insurgents;

(E) meeting the CPA benchmarks, including preparations for the conduct of national elections and referendum; and

(F) shutting down safe havens for extremists who pose a threat to the national security of the United States and its allies.

(3) A description of how United States assistance will be used to achieve the objectives of United States policy toward Sudan, including a financial plan and description of resources, programming, and management of United States foreign assistance to Sudan and the criteria used to determine their prioritization.

(4) An evaluation and description of additional measures that will be taken to advance United States policy, which may range from—

(A) application of multilateral sanctions by the United Nations or regional allies, or expansion of existing United States sanctions;

(B) imposition of a no-fly zone or other coercive measures; or

(C) rapprochement with the Sudanese regime or other diplomatic measures.

(5) A complete description of both the evaluation process for reviewing and adjusting the strategy and implementation as necessary, and measures of effectiveness for the implementation of the strategy.

(c) UPDATES OF STRATEGY.—The President shall transmit in writing to the appropriate congressional committees any updates of the comprehensive interagency strategy and implementation plan required under subsection (b), as necessary.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. MCCAUL) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MCCAUL. Mr. Chairman, as one of the Chairs of the Congressional Sudan Caucus, I am proud to offer this amendment to require the administration to, within 60 days, submit to Congress a comprehensive plan to address the ongoing atrocities in Sudan.

July 22, 2009, will mark the 5-year anniversary of the declaration by the United States Congress that the atrocities occurring in the Darfur region of Sudan constitute genocide. It was an historic resolution because it represented for the first time that Congress had made such a determination while the killings were actually taking place.

Today, innocent civilians in Darfur are still suffering from genocide directed by a callous regime determined to hang on to power at any cost. They are dying at the hands of the Janjaweed, also known as “the devil on horseback.”

The United States for years has been seeking to help find ways to ease the suffering in Darfur and find a lasting political solution to each of the inter-related crises in Sudan. We’ve passed resolutions, imposed economic and travel sanctions, frozen assets, and enabled divestment from companies linked to the Sudanese regime. The United States has led efforts at the United Nations and with bilateral partners to meet humanitarian needs while pressing for the full deployment of peacekeeping missions to help protect civilians.

In addition to supporting efforts to negotiate and implement the Darfur Peace Agreement, the United States also was at the forefront of efforts to resolve the conflict in southern Sudan, a conflict which has left over 2 million people dead and another 4 million displaced.

Today, there is universal acknowledgement that if the comprehensive peace agreement between the north and south fails, there can be little hope for Darfur. Unfortunately, the terms of this peace agreement have not yet been fully implemented, and observers consistently warn that it could fail at any time.

With the national elections due this year and reports of deadly conflict within and among various armed groups on the rise, the stakes could not be higher. During the presidential campaign, each of the candidates assured voters that Sudan would be a major priority for their administrations and spoke of robust actions that would need to be taken in order to resolve Sudan’s multiple conflicts.

While serving in the United States Senate, President Barack Obama called for oil sanctions and the imposition of a no-fly zone over Darfur. While working for the Brookings Institution, U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Susan Rice went so far as to call for military action against the Sudanese regime. But then on April 22, 2009, almost exactly 1 year after then-Senator Obama condemned the supposed efforts by the previous administration to normalize relations with Khartoum as a “reckless and cynical initiative,” his Special Envoy for Sudan, Scott Gration, announced, “The United States and Sudan want to be partners, and so we are looking for opportunities for us to build a stronger bilateral relationship.”

Obviously, this bold statement sent conflicting messages to observers and caused a great deal of confusion here in the Congress, where Sudan has such a high priority for Democrats and Republicans alike.

Implementing this comprehensive strategy will advance respect for democracy, human rights, and religious freedom throughout Sudan. It will address internal regional security while combating Islamic extremism. And by advancing regional security and cooperation, it will eliminate cross-border support for armed insurgents, and it will shut down safe havens for extremists who pose a threat to the national security of the United States and its allies.

During committee debate on an amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) regarding Sudan, it became clear that there is universal agreement on both sides of the aisle that the United States needs a coordinated, comprehensive strategy for Sudan which balances the United States’ imperatives in Darfur and in southern Sudan.

This amendment simply goes one step further by giving the current administration the opportunity to resolve any outstanding issues with regard to the United States’ policy towards Sudan by formulating such a strategy and reporting that strategy back to the United States Congress.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition even though I don’t oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman’s amendment encourages the administration to create a Comprehensive Interagency Strategy and Implementation Plan for Sudan. I have spoken with Mr. MCCAUL about his proposal and agree that developing a coherent approach to the situation in Sudan is critical. The United States must make every effort to address the ongoing and interrelated crises in Sudan. The U.S. should work towards a stable and lasting peace in a region that has seen so many tragedies in recent years.

I have no objection to this amendment, and I look forward to working with Mr. MCCAUL on this provision as the bill moves through the process.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCCAUL. Mr. Chairman, I urge support for this amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. FARR).

Mr. FARR. Thank you, Chairman BERMAN, and thank you, Ranking Member LEANA ROS-LEHTINEN.

I rise not on this amendment but just to make a comment on the Peace Corps because I was just thinking, as hearing about the amendment, that had we fulfilled John F. Kennedy's dream in the 1960s to have 100,000 Peace Corps volunteers serving overseas throughout the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s, 1990s, and this decade, we might have avoided the disaster in Sudan. And I want to commend the committee because on the 50th anniversary of the Peace Corps, which is in 2011, we have now only 6,000 volunteers serving in 78 countries, and the price tag of that is less than one weapons system. It's a drop in the bucket; $350 million for that incredible service that we are having from our country.

And what I want to commend the committee on and all of them is the strong support for strengthening U.S. diplomacy with a consistent new vision for a global engagement, and I think that's the global engagement that President Obama has promised this country and is now seeing delivered. And with that, this bill authorizes an increase in Peace Corps funding and will allow the Peace Corps to build to the point where we have 20 countries that are asking for Peace Corps volunteers.

We have about 12,000 people a year that volunteer to go in the Peace Corps, that sign up, and we can only take 4,000. That's all we can afford. So all of these 20 countries have been waiting in line and haven't been able to get attention to adding Peace Corps. And what's interesting is that, as I have sort of dealt with some other issues here, for example, on food hunger in sub-Saharan Africa, I just recently read a report by the Chicago Council on Global Affairs. It called for 300 to 600 new volunteers in sub-Saharan Africa to work on agriculture as a step toward America's reasserting global leadership in the fight against hunger and food insecurity. The point was that the only way you're going to really deliver that effort is by getting people who are going to live in the community, who are going to live on the ground and work with people in the fields, and the only organization we have that does that in the Federal Government is the U.S. Peace Corps.

I don't know if you saw it today, but what the committee did in strengthening this provision of the bill, the new Rwanda President, Paul Kagame, who is the President of the Republic of Rwanda, wrote a letter, and I will just paraphrase parts of his letter:

"We view the return of the Peace Corps as a significant event in Rwanda's recovery. These young men and women represent what is good about America. I have met former volunteers who have run major aid programs here, invested in our businesses, and I even count them among my friends and close advisors."

He goes on to say: "While some consider development mostly in terms of infusion of capital, budgets, and head counts, we in Rwanda place equal importance to relationships between peoples who have a passion to learn from one another, preparing the next generation of teachers, administrators, and CEOs to see the exchange of values and ideas as the way to build the competencies of our people and to create a prosperous nation."

"We will do this because we see that the only investment with the possibility of infinite returns is in our children, and because after a couple of years in Rwanda, working and learning with our people, these Peace Corps volunteers will be our sons and daughters, too."

There is no more loved organization in the world than the United States Peace Corps. And at this time when American image abroad has been suffering in many ways, it keeps growing in this particular service. So as a return Peace Corps volunteer, I am very thankful and delighted that this committee grew the Peace Corps to the demand out there in the world and among the Americans who want to serve. I want to thank you for that.

I will submit President Kagame's statement in the RECORD.

A DIFFERENT DISCUSSION ABOUT AID

The United States of America has just sent a small number of its sons and daughters as Peace Corps volunteers to serve as teachers and advisors in Rwanda. They have arrived to assist, and we appreciate that. We are aware that this comes against the backdrop of increasingly scarce resources, of budget discussions and campaign promises, and of tradeoffs between defense and domestic priorities like health care and infrastructure investments. All that said, I believe we need to have a different discussion concerning the potential for bilateral aid.

The Peace Corps have returned to our country after 15 years. They were evacuated in 1994 just a short time before Rwanda collapsed into a genocide that killed over one million people in three months. Things have improved a lot in recent years. There is peace and stability throughout the nation. We have a progressive constitution that is consensus-driven, provides for power sharing, embraces diversity, and promotes the participation of women, who now represent the majority in our parliament. Our economy grew by more than 11 percent last year, even as the world entered a recession. We have chosen high-end segments of the coffee and tea markets in which to compete, and attract the most demanding world travelers to our tourism experiences. This has enabled us to increase wages by over 20 percent each year over the last eight years—sustained by, among other things, investment in education, health and ICT.

We view the return of the Peace Corps as a significant event in Rwanda's recovery. These young men and women represent what is good about America; I have met former volunteers who have run major aid programs here, invested in our businesses, and I even count them among my friends and close advisors.

Peace Corps volunteers are well educated, optimistic, and keen to assist us as we continue to rebuild, but one must also recognize that we have much to offer them as well.

We will, for instance, show them our system of community justice, called Gacaca, where we integrated our need for nationwide reconciliation with our ancient tradition of clemency, and where violators are allowed to reassume their lives by proclaiming their crimes to their neighbors, and asking for forgiveness. We will present to them Rwanda's unique form of absolution, where the individuals who once exacted such harm on their neighbors and ran across national borders to hide from justice are being invited back to resume their farms and homes to live peacefully with those same families.

We will show your sons and daughters our civic tradition of Umuganda, where one day a month, citizens, including myself, congregate in the fields to weed, clean our streets, and build homes for the needy.

We will teach your children to prepare and enjoy our foods and speak our language. We will invite them to our weddings and funerals, and out into the communities to observe our traditions. We will teach them that in Africa, family is a broad and all-encompassing concept, and that an entire generation treats the next as its own children.

And we will have discussions in the restaurants, and debates in our staff rooms and classrooms where we will learn from one another: What is the nature of prosperity? Is it subsoil assets, location and sunshine, or is it based on human initiative, the productivity of our firms, the foresight of our entrepreneurs? What is a cohesive society, and how can we strengthen it? How can we improve tolerance and build a common vision between people who perceive differences in one another, increase civic engagement, interpersonal trust, and self-esteem? How does a nation recognize and develop the leaders of future generations? What is the relationship between humans and the earth? And how are we to meet our needs while revering the earth as the womb of humankind? These are the questions of our time.

While some consider development mostly in terms of infusion of capital, budgets and head counts, we in Rwanda place equal importance to relationships between peoples who have a passion to learn from one another, preparing the next generation of teachers, administrators and CEOs to see the exchange of values and ideas as the way to build the competencies of our people, and to create a prosperous nation.

We will do this because we see that the only investment with the possibility of infinite returns is in our children, and because after a couple of years in Rwanda, working and learning with our people, these Peace Corps volunteers will be our sons and daughters, too.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. MCCAUL).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MCCAUL. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. LARSEN OF WASHINGTON

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 7 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment made in order by the rule, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 7 offered by Mr. LARSEN of Washington:

At the end of subtitle A of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11. STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING CLIMATE CHANGE.

To protect American jobs, spur economic growth and promote a "Green Economy", it shall be the policy of the United States that, with respect to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the President, the Secretary of State and the Permanent Representative of the United States to the United Nations should prevent any weakening of, and ensure robust compliance with and enforcement of, existing international legal requirements as of the date of the enactment of this Act for the protection of intellectual property rights related to energy or environmental technology, including wind, solar, biomass, geothermal, hydro, landfill gas, natural gas, marine, trash combustion, fuel cell, hydrogen, micro-turbine, nuclear, clean coal, electric battery, alternative fuel, alternative refueling infrastructure, advanced vehicle, electric grid, or energy efficiency-related technologies.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. LARSEN) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment will protect intellectual property rights, or IPR, for American businesses by ensuring robust compliance with international legal IPR requirements and the enforcement of those requirements related to energy and environmental technologies.

Congressman KIRK from Illinois and I recently returned from China where we met both with Chinese leadership and American companies doing business in China. Among a number of issues that we heard on the trip, two were consistent during our meetings with the American businesses. First, there is a great deal of enthusiasm regarding the interest in energy and climate change cooperation between the U.S. and China. Second, however, is a concern that the intellectual property rights owned by those companies selling their clean-energy technologies in China and other parts of the world will not be protected, and the green jobs that could be created here at home will be lost.

According to the International Energy Agency, the world needs to invest $45 trillion in energy in the coming decades to cut in half greenhouse gas emissions by 2050. To meet that goal, clean technology innovation must increase by 100 to 1,000 percent. The global market for environmental products and services is projected to double from $1.37 trillion per year at present to $2.74 trillion by 2020. And according to the American Solar Energy Society, by 2003, industries with green collar jobs could provide up to 40 million American jobs and generate up to $4.53 trillion in annual revenue.

IPR protection gives companies the confidence to invest in critical research and development efforts to meet the growing demand for clean-energy technology. For this reason, Congressman KIRK and I have offered this amendment to H.R. 2410 to protect the IPR of these clean technologies and ensure these green jobs stay right here in the United States. It is critical that the investments that American companies are making in clean technology are protected. Protecting individual property rights will help us reward innovation instead of penalizing it.

I ask my colleagues to support this amendment to H.R. 2410.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my colleague MARSHA BLACKBURN.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. I want to thank the gentleman and also Representative LARSEN for allowing me to work with them on this to help ensure that our American innovators' intellectual property is protected as we move forward in this international community transition to green economics.

American innovators hold 50 percent of the world's patents granted between 2002 and 2008 in the clean-energy field, and I will note that Tennesseans alone hold 1 percent of those worldwide patents in the hybrid/electric vehicle market. It's serious business for our American patent holders. They have invested a lot of time, passion, effort, energy, and economic capital in developing these technologies. It is therefore incumbent upon us in Congress to protect what they have created.

The draft U.N. Framework Convention on Climate Change, for example, includes language supported by extreme carbon-emitting nations like India and China calling for a multilateral technology climate fund housed inside the U.N. This new fund would require noncommercial transfers of patent-protected technologies as a price for developing nations' participation in any new international agreement to reducing global emissions. These demands would lead to outright theft of our American intellectual property and indirectly benefit the world's most prominent CO₂ emitters.

Our amendment, which is supported by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Emergency Committee for American Trade, would protect American intellectual property rights and help block any patent transfer to a new multilateral fund. In the context of any international framework that deals with energy and environment technology, the amendment declares that it is official American policy to defend the rights of our creators.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the sponsor of the amendment for yielding.

It's really an excellent amendment. If we want to encourage the international cooperation that's needed in this area, I'm telling you you've got to ensure that the entrepreneurs and the innovators know that their cutting-edge breakthroughs and innovations are protected. This isn't even as much about fair return for the inventors as it is ensuring that people will keep innovating and researching and advancing the technologies because they know that ultimately they will be compensated. So it's a symbiotic relationship. The more we ensure and protect intellectual property, the more we will be able to do in achieving our very important goals with respect to the development and deployment of new energy and environmental technologies.

Last year, the United Nations reported that the global market for environmental technologies could double to $2.74 trillion by 2020 from the $1.37 trillion today because of growth in areas like energy-efficient technologies, sustainable transport systems, and water supply and efficiencies markets.

This is a very important amendment. Again, I think it is essential to the development and deployment of these new technologies, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. KIRK. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, on May 19, the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change released a draft negotiating text. The draft, in part, calls for the removal of “barriers to development and transfer of technologies from developed to developing country Parties arising from the intellectual property rights protection including compulsory licensing for specific patented technologies.”

The American people need to know that those were code words, like “compulsory licensing” and “technology transfer,” that really mean allowing other countries to steal the American patents, copyrights and trademarks for anything related to climate change, efficiency or energy under the draft climate change treaty.

If the United States agrees to a climate change treaty that allows developing countries to seize U.S. intellectual property in this area, economic consequences for green-collar jobs would be devastated. American inventors now hold 50 percent of the world’s patents on clean energy, 52 percent of the patents on fuel cells, nearly half of the world’s wind patents, 46 percent of the world’s solar patents, and 40 percent of the world’s patents in the hybrid-electric vehicle market.

By 2030, industries with green-collar jobs could provide up to 40 million American jobs, and they could generate up to $4.5 trillion in annual revenue; but none of that would happen if a climate change treaty specifically allowed compulsory licensing so that Chinese competitors, for example, or European opposition could simply steal the intellectual property of a key U.S. green-collar manufacturer.

Now, one leading American innovator told me, If we lose intellectual property rights, capital markets die.

This industry needs all of the innovation we can muster to deliver on what the world and on what the U.S. needs. Shorting that will guarantee no new investments or breakthroughs for green-collar jobs.

Now, this innovator was none other than Gregg Patterson, the CEO of PV Powered—America’s largest manufacturer of solar power inverter technology. Many of us remember this photo when then Presidential candidate, Senator Obama, visited Mr. Patterson last year, promising future green jobs and a green economy at his factory. Mr. Chairman, these jobs will not be created if we do not protect the intellectual property of American inventors and manufacturers. So far, the State Department has been very silent on this issue, but countries like China and India now put it at the top of their lists for negotiations in Copenhagen to “relax intellectual property rights.” That means to steal the innovations of Americans in green-collar areas.

This amendment lays down a marker. It says, if Copenhagen produces a treaty that allows the theft of U.S. intellectual property under compulsory licensing or under the weakening of IPR, the U.S. will not sign on.

Now, our Larsen-Kirk amendment is endorsed by the Solar Energy Industries Association, by the National Hydrogen Association, by the National Association of Manufacturers, and by the Chamber of Commerce.

I really want to thank Chairman BERMAN, Chairman WAXMAN, Ranking Member ROS-LEHTINEN, and Chairman RANGEL for supporting this very commonsense piece of legislation.

I yield back.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I just would again ask my colleagues to support this important amendment to H.R. 2410. I appreciate everyone’s support in making it happen and for bringing it to the floor today.

Mr. MARKEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chair, I rise in strong support of the Larsen-Kirk amendment, which will ensure that the intellectual property rights of American firms working to defeat the scourge of climate change will be protected.

We are now engaged in what could become the most difficult international negotiation in history: the painful and difficult construction of a binding, universal international agreement to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases in order to save the planet from a disastrous alteration of the climate. And here at home, we are racing to break our dependence on foreign oil and to create millions of new jobs all across the new energy economy. These two necessities, negotiating an international treaty to halt global warming and developing the new energy economy for the twenty-first century, are deeply interconnected.

The technological breakthroughs being created in American laboratories will not only lead our country into the renewable energy future, they will lead the whole world. And it is absolutely necessary that we do everything we can to encourage and enable our high-tech entrepreneurs to innovate. To do this, we must ensure that the intellectual property rights of these innovators are protected. The Larsen-Kirk amendment is a common-sense approach to this problem, and I commend both Members for their thoughtful amendment.

The Larsen-Kirk amendment will ensure that in the negotiation of an international climate change treaty, it will be the policy of the United States to prevent any weakening of, and ensure robust compliance with and enforcement of, existing legal protections of intellectual property rights as they relate to energy and environmental technologies. This amendment will help ensure that even as we work diligently to reduce global emissions, we are protecting the ability of American innovators to step up to the plate and deliver the technological breakthroughs which will lead this country in a new direction.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment, and to support the underlying bill, the State Department Authorization Act.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington (Mr. LARSEN).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. LARSEN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 8 OFFERED BY MR. SESSIONS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 8 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 8 offered by Mr. SESSIONS:

At the end of subtitle B of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11 — SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO ISRAEL’S RIGHT TO SELF-DEFENSE.

It is the sense of Congress that Israel has the inalienable right to defend itself in the face of an imminent nuclear or military threat from Iran, terrorist organizations, and the countries that harbor them.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of my amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act. My amendment would affirm the United States’ complete support for Israel’s absolute right to defend itself from an imminent military or nuclear threat from Iran, from terrorist organizations or from nations that harbor them.

Israel is currently being threatened on three fronts—by Hamas in the south, by Hezbollah in the north and by Iran. Iran provides financial and material support to both of these terrorist organizations. This threat culminated on May 20 when Iran successfully tested a surface-to-surface missile with a range of 1,500 miles. Iranian leaders continue to express their hatred for Israel, and they refuse to acknowledge its right to exist. Their incendiary words and actions are an existential threat to Israel and to the entire region.

No nation should be subjected to these continued threats. Israel has demonstrated tremendous restraint in the face of these dangers despite being continually questioned by some in the global community regarding its approach to dealing with these threats and terrorist attacks on its citizens.

Israel has been and remains one of the United States of America's strongest allies. Israel seeks only peace with its neighbors and a homeland secure for its people; but if an attack from Iran or from a terrorist organization becomes imminent, this Congress should declare that Israel, like the United States, should reserve for itself the inalienable right to defend itself and to protect its people.

I encourage my colleagues to demonstrate their strong support for Israel by supporting this amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition to this amendment, although I am not opposed to this amendment.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I don't know that we needed to say this, but I'm glad we are saying it. It goes almost without saying that any sovereign country has an inalienable right to defend itself in the face of an imminent nuclear or military attack or threat. Nothing in this amendment prohibits or constrains Israel or the United States from discussing the nature of a threat, the logic of the timing or the nature of the response. So I find this amendment a useful contribution. In a way, it states the obvious, but sometimes stating the obvious is worth doing. I plan to support the amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman, the chairman of the committee, Mr. BERMAN, for his words of support.

In fact, this Member sees the need to make sure that not only the people of Israel but the people of our country understand it should be the express purpose and policy of the United States of America to yield to other nations—yes, those we call dear friends—to make sure that they are very clear in understanding our support for them. They should reserve the same right that we do to protect this country. Notwithstanding that, we've had a change of administrations. Notwithstanding that, we've had many, many, many people who are supportive of Israel come and speak to me, personally, about just the question as it might occur:

Where does the United States stand in its support of Israel?

Today is a great day. Today is the bill that's very appropriate to make sure that we understand that the United States' support of Israel is strong and that we stand behind Israel and that we understand that it is they, Mr. Chairman, who are just miles away from imminent threat through missile attack. I believe it is the right thing to do.

I appreciate the gentleman's feedback. I hope we vote for this. I hope it's accepted.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim the remainder of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, my friend, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE).

Ms. LEE of California. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, for yielding.

Let me just rise to oppose this amendment and just very briefly say why.

Every country has a right under international law and under their own laws to defend their own sovereignty, their own country, to protect their country from attacks. Israel certainly has that right already, and it should exercise that right. We all recognize the security of Israel in terms of its being essential in any foreign policy that we develop as it relates to a peace process that is really so critical to the security of Israel.

I just have to say, with regard to this amendment, however, I am very reluctant to support it, and I'll just say why very briefly.

If you will remember, right after the horrific attacks of 9/11, we passed a resolution that I opposed, and I opposed it for many, many reasons, one of which was that the resolution was, in essence, a blank check to use force against any nation that harbored—and this is in this language here—terrorist organizations. I'll tell you that I believe that that casts a blank check once again in terms of allowing for an attack against any country. It could be Pakistan or any country which harbors terrorists, terrorists who may or may not be responsible for any unfortunate attacks.

So, for those reasons, I think this amendment is not necessary. Israel and other countries have a right and should defend themselves from any threat from Iran, from terrorist organizations or from any country. As to any country that harbors terrorists or those who want to do harm to Israel, to me, this provides for an opening, which, unfortunately, I did not believe was correct for our own country nor do I believe we should give that authority, or that rubber stamp, to any country to allow for an attack. It's just a broad blank check. For those reasons, I oppose this.

Mr. SESSIONS. I appreciate the gentleman, the chairman of the committee, Mr. BERMAN, and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE) for speaking today.

Mr. Chairman, we live in a dangerous world, and there are some of our friends and allies who live in, perhaps, a more dangerous neighborhood than we do here in the United States. I believe that this amendment is one we should support because it makes sure, unequivocally, that the world understands where the United States of America is in our support of not only a friendly nation but of a democracy, one of the few democracies in the region.

United States policy in the United States and in this House of Representatives should be to support it openly and to make sure the world understands, not where, Oh, I thought we had done that, and I know that's what both of my colleagues are saying. I thought we were there; we don't really need to do this. We need to do it. We need to do it. It's the right thing to do.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

□ 1500

Mr. BERMAN. I am pleased to yield the remainder of my time to the gentlelady from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY).

Ms. BERKLEY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I hope that I do not take the remainder of your time.

I am here to speak in strong support of this resolution. I think it's a very important one and one that needs to be stated in this legislation and stated far more often. The fact of the matter is that Iran poses an existential threat to the entire civilized world. It is as much a threat to the United States and Europe and the Arab countries in the region as it is to Israel. A nuclear Iran cannot be allowed to happen. The only difference is that the President of Iran, Ahmadinejad, has singled out Israel for particular hatred and contempt and has threatened to wipe Israel off the map.

We have learned after Adolf Hitler that when the leader of a country threatens to exterminate you or wipe you off the map, you ought to take them seriously. So you have a President of Iran that is desperately attempting and rapidly attempting to acquire nuclear capability, not necessarily for peaceful means but for military means and a threat to Israel to wipe it off the map.

I suggest to you that this is a very dangerous combination, and that is why this resolution is important. And I thank the gentleman very much for introducing this amendment. I urge all of my colleagues to support it.

Ms. LEE of California. Mr. Chair, I rise in opposition to the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. Chair, I want to be clear that I agree with the fundamental principle that every nation, including Israel, has the right to defend itself against an imminent military threat.

Unfortunately, this amendment goes far, far beyond that bedrock principle.

Nearly 8 years ago, I stood on this House floor and confronted a very similar issue. On that day, September 14, 2001, I voted against the authorization of use of United States force against Afghanistan because it granted the US a blank check to wage war any place and any time against any enemy. It went far beyond any authority granted for international war making.

Today this amendment raises the same issue and I am compelled to draw the same conclusion.

I was unable to support US government broad blank check power, in good conscience I am not able to support that type of excessive authority for any other nation.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Chair, I rise in support of this essential amendment, recognizing Israel's right to defend itself from an imminent nuclear or military threat from Iran and other countries and organizations.

As Iran forges ahead with its quest for a nuclear weapons capability, it is vital for Congress to recognize Israel's urgent need to deal with the looming threat of a nuclear-armed Iran.

Like all sovereign nations, Israel has not only a right, but moreover, an obligation, to ensure the safety and security of her citizens.

An imminent nuclear or military threat from Iran would certainly endanger her citizens, and that is why, in the strongest of terms, I support my colleague's vital amendment.

According to the U.N.'s nuclear watchdog, Iran has sped up its production of nuclear fuel and has increased its number of installed centrifuges to 7,200—more than enough to make fuel for two nuclear bombs per year.

If Iran possessed nuclear weapons, it could share this technology with terrorist groups to carry out attacks against both Israel and the United States.

Let me be very clear. A nuclear-armed Iran would certainly constitute an existential threat to Israel, but would not only threaten Israel. As the leading state sponsor of international terrorism, a nuclear-armed Iran would pose unacceptable threats to global security.

This rogue nation's possession of a nuclear weapon would likely lead to nuclear proliferation elsewhere in the region and around the globe, while fundamentally altering the strategic balance of the Middle East, and endangering U.S. national security interests.

Undoubtedly, now is the time for us all to stand together in support of Israel and global peace and security. I urge my colleagues to support this critical amendment, and pray that Iran suspends its nuclear program, and starts working towards peace instead of terror.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield back my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 9 OFFERED BY MRS. DAVIS OF CALIFORNIA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 9 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. I have an amendment made in order by the rule, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 9 offered by Mrs. DAVIS of California:

At the end of subtitle A of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11 . . . AUDIT REQUIREMENTS FOR THE INSPECTORS GENERAL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE, THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE, AND THE UNITED STATES AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT, AND THE SPECIAL INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR AFGHANISTAN RECONSTRUCTION.

(a) AUDIT REQUIREMENTS.—The Inspectors General of the Department of State, the Department of Defense, and the United States Agency for International Development, and the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction should address, as appropriate, in their auditing and assessment protocols for Afghanistan, the impact United States development assistance has on the social, economic, and political empowerment of Afghan women, including the extent to which such assistance helps to carry out the following:

(1) Section 103(a)(7) of the Afghan Freedom Support Act (Public Law 107-327).

(2) The goal expressed in section 102(4) of the Afghan Freedom Support Act (Public Law 107-327) to “help achieve a broad-based, multi-ethnic, gender-sensitive, and fully representative government in Afghanistan that is freely chosen by the people of Afghanistan and that respects the human rights of all Afghans, particularly women.”.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Inspectors General of the Department of State, the Department of Defense, and the United States Agency for International Development, and the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of this section.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522 the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to Mr. GRAYSON. We have a number of individuals who want to speak, and he's going to do that first.

Mr. GRAYSON. Mr. Chairman, I had the experience of going to Afghanistan a couple of years ago.

This bill has to do with whether we should try to keep track of our policies in Afghanistan on Afghan women. And when I went to Afghanistan 2 years ago before I was elected here to Congress, I saw some interesting things.

One thing is if you're on the street of Afghanistan, everywhere you look there are children—because hardly any of them are in school any time of the year—and as a result of that, you see more children on the streets of an Afghan city or town than you would almost anywhere else in the world. And I noticed something interesting about the girls. If you see an 8-year-old Afghan girl, she looks just like an 8-year-old boy dressed the same way, playing the same way with the same friends. If you see a 9-year-old Afghan girl, her arms are covered. If you see a 10-year-old Afghan girl, her arms and her head are covered. And you don't see 12-year-old Afghan girls or 13- or 14- or 15- or 16- or 17-year-old Afghan girls. They're just not there.

And if you look around the streets at the adults, you'll see maybe 10 men for every woman that you will see on the streets. And the reason for that is that in Afghanistan, women are forbidden to leave their homes unless they're accompanied by a husband, a brother, a father, or a son. And the women who do leave their homes in Afghanistan are covered head to toe. They can barely see you because their faces are covered and eyes covered with a grill like this so they can just barely see out. They're covered from head to toe, and all you can see of their bodies are their shoes, nothing else.

That is the life of women in Afghanistan. It is a living hell. And I think it's fitting and appropriate that we who have occupied the country militarily for years now should take a look at the effect of our policies on Afghan women. I'm very much in favor of this amendment because it's a matter of human rights.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentlelady from California and the gentleman from Florida.

With the fall of the Taliban, Afghan women came back from the brink. But the gains made since 2001 have been fragile. We recognize that any prospect of better lives for the women of Afghanistan and girls are inherently linked to the success of the development and reconstruction of their country.

Furthermore, we all desire greater levels of accountability, quality, and impact from foreign development assistance to Afghanistan, all aimed at creating the enabling environment necessary to sustain women's development successes, their security, and their basic rights.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment has that noble purpose. It would require the Inspectors General of the Department of State, the Department of Defense, the United States Agency for International Development, and the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction to include the impact that U.S. development assistance has on the social, economic, and political empowerment of Afghan women as part of their auditing and reporting requirements.

I support this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise to urge my colleagues to support this amendment offered by myself and Representative GRAYSON, which would direct the Inspectors General responsible for oversight in Afghanistan to include in their auditing and assessment protocols the impact U.S. development assistance has on the objectives of the Afghan Freedom Support Act of 2002 to advance political and human rights, health care education, training, security, and shelter for women and girls.

Mr. Chairman, I recently returned from a congressional visit to Kabul and Kandahar where we met with women from all walks of Afghan life. Unfortunately, the roles and experiences of women are not always considered in wartime or during stabilization and reconstruction operations.

These women want to contribute to the stabilization and reconstruction of their nation. That is what we heard from not just a few Afghan women who are in political or professional positions, but from the poorest women who simply want the ability to care for their families, access education and health care, and feel safe and secure in their communities. If we don't include women, we are ignoring 50 percent of the population that is eager and has the desire and capacity to be agents of change.

Ultimately, it is in the interests of the national security of the United States to prevent the emergence of a terrorist safe haven in Afghanistan. The kind of instability women in Afghanistan are submitted to has a direct and a negative correlation to their ability to help stabilize their communities.

The situation for women has been made worse by a lack of security, corruption in Kabul, and passage of oppressive measures such as the Shia personal status law. Every conversation that I have had with commanders there, including on our recent trip, assures me that the kind of gender apartheid that is occurring in Afghanistan undermines our national security. So we cannot sit idly by and do nothing about it if we are to stabilize this region and bring our troops home.

During a recent House Armed Services Committee hearing on the effectiveness of U.S. assistance and counterinsurgency operations, the GAO witness highlighted the importance of empowering women but noted that her agency had not focused on the advancement of women in Afghanistan. And she went on to state, "Investment in women is often a pivotal investment focus for returns on economic growth and economic development in countries." And I believe that, and I also believe that this is true for political growth as well.

In education, some say if you don't test it, you won't teach it. Well, without these metrics, we can't know how our aid is impacting our women. We are reshaping our commitment to the Afghan people in a way that fosters trust, promotes justice, and protects human rights. The protection of the rights of women and girls in Afghanistan and their full and equal participation in Afghan civil society is essential to Afghan national security as well as ours. And I urge my colleagues to reach out to the women of Afghanistan when they're traveling there, because we know that when you include them in your delegation conversations, they, too, can express their concerns to you. Even our male colleagues will have that opportunity with any number of women there.

I want to thank Mr. BERMAN for his support, and I urge the adoption of this amendment.

I yield back my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS). The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 10 OFFERED BY MS. GINNY BROWN-WAITE OF FLORIDA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 10 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 10 offered by Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida:
Strike section 505.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Florida.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Chairman, we have a problem. As every American in this Chamber knows, America is facing unprecedented trillion-dollar deficits, a ballooning national debt and steady-growing entitlement obligations. Yet, each and every time the House comes together to consider spending bills, evidence abounds that very few tough choices are being made.

As I'm sure my colleagues will readily agree, never in the history of Congress has there been a line item that at least one Member did not support. There has not been a single program that somebody didn't think was worthy of the taxpayer dollars. In a perfect world where the United States is flush with money, very few spending ideas don't hold some merit. But simply having merit does not mean the American people have enough money to pay for it, nor do they have enough money around to fund this.

It is not our job to come to Washington and put together a Middle East comprehensive and exhaustive list of worthy causes, Mr. Chairman. It is our job to make the tough choices. And that means denying resources to something that somebody somewhere thinks is a good idea.

Frankly, if, as a body, we are unable to recognize that spending taxpayer dollars for the domestic distribution of a documentary film in a foreign affairs bill is not what the taxpayers need most at this time, if this is truly a choice that's too hard for us to make, then I think we owe it to our constituents to take a good long look in the mirror and decide what we are here to do.

Some will probably point out that striking the authorization for this film is not important. Well, I would say to those colleagues it is important that we watch every single appropriation that comes before us. That is precisely what we are sent here to do.

And this amendment is not just about striking a provision to authorize funding for the distribution of a documentary film. If it were, I would take time to point out that this is a domestic distribution in a foreign affairs bill. I would also point out that laws have been on the books for 60 years that prohibit the executive branch from distributing government-sponsored information campaigns domestically.

I might even point out that the film is available already for every man, woman, and child in this country to see right now. I am not kidding. It is actually on YouTube, and yet we have this in the appropriations bill.

The point is, Mr. Chairman, that the American people, those who voted for us and those who voted against us, all of them expect more from this body. I offer this amendment to my colleagues not to point out an absurd provision in an irresponsible spending bill. I offer this amendment to make a point about all of the absurd provisions in all of the bloated bills that this House has recently considered. The American people deserve more than this.

I would point out to my colleagues they need to learn this is a voting card; it is not a credit card.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition to this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, this amendment, while I'm sure well-intended by the gentlelady, would strike a section of the bill waiving the ban against dissemination of public diplomacy materials within the United States to make the film, "A Fateful Harvest," available for public viewing.

Mr. Chairman, the Voice of America's Afghan service has produced this 52-minute documentary examining the narcotics industry in Afghanistan, including poppy growing, opium production, trafficking, law enforcement efforts, and the harmful health effects of drugs. It documents the challenges facing the Afghan Government as well as our own.

□ 1515

Financed by the Department of State's Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, the film has aired inside Afghanistan in Dari and Pashto. A low-resolution version of the film has been available on Voice of America's Web site and in six separate parts on YouTube.

Mr. Chair, Voice of America has received several requests for a clean copy of the documentary in its original high resolution and in one single piece for viewing at U.S. venues because of the film's educational value. Among those seeking access to this single clean copy are the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies Center on Politics and Foreign Relations and an Afghan students' group at the University of Virginia.

On the area of cost that my good friend on the other side pointed out, there is no cost. Any additional copies of the film will be made available for purchase, which would cover the cost of copying, however small it may be.

Mr. Chair, on many occasions during the history of USIA and the Broadcasting Board of Governors, Congress has passed legislation to waive the domestic dissemination ban, known colloquially as Smith-Mundt, to make a film available for public viewing in the United States. It is a simple matter with many precedents. This should be one of those occasions. And in reference to not having it done before, on three different occasions, Mr. Chair, three different authorizations, section 203 of the U.S. Information Agency FY 1990 and '91; section 204 in 1988 and '89; section 205 in FY97, different occasions when this has happened before. So with due respect for the lady from Florida, we certainly respect her; but we oppose the amendment.

Mr. Chair, I now recognize for 2 minutes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. KLEIN).

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise to oppose the gentlelady's amendment. I respectfully disagree that the purpose of today's bill is to do anything other than to improve the quality of the diplomatic efforts that our men and women around the world are doing. I think that this is exactly what the direction of this bill does, and I think it does it in the right, efficient way.

This particular amendment would disallow an important film called Fateful Harvest, a documentary that exposes the poppy trade that the Taliban has used to imprison the Afghan people, from broad distribution. It is true that current law forbids the Voice of America from releasing its products in the United States, and the original intention of that provision was that a U.S. Government agency should not be able to brainwash Americans or put things out there that would not be considered objective information. Further, domestic companies were concerned. They didn't want to have to compete with a not-for-profit government-funded entity. It does require an act of Congress to waive this law. But, let's be clear, Congress has waived this provision 100 times in the past number of years for domestic releases, including the award-winning "John F. Kennedy: Years of Lightning, Day of Drums" in 1965.

This particular movie, Fateful Harvest, is important for any American who's concerned about our national security. In a time when some Americans question the presence of American troops in Afghanistan, this film makes the case that American efforts help the Afghan people transition away from poppies to other agriculture helps in our fight against the Taliban. I personally saw the efforts that our men and women on the ground are doing in Afghanistan, when I was there a number of months ago, in trying to switch from poppies to pomegranates, to wheat and other products.

As we help Afghanistan transition their economy, we will undermine the Taliban. Most Americans cannot see this for themselves. That is why the release of this film is so important. I urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chair, in closing, I would just like to again urge defeat of this amendment, with all due respect. And I might add, I was on Voice of America yesterday morning. They are fine people. They do a fine service, and this is a great acclamation for them as well. We respectfully speak in opposition to the gentlelady's amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Florida will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 11 OFFERED BY MR. HOLT

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 11 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 11 offered by Mr. HOLT:

At the end of title X, add the following:

SEC. 10 . . . REPORT ON CHILD ABDUCTION.

Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to Congress a report containing recommendations for changes to the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction and related United States laws and regulations regarding international parental child abduction that would, if enacted, provide the United States additional legal tools to ensure compliance with the Hague Convention and facilitate the swift return of United States children wrongfully removed from the United States as a result of international parental child abduction, such as in the case of Sean Goldman of Tinton Falls, New Jersey.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I thank Chairman BERMAN for bringing this bill to the floor.

Simply stated, my amendment would require the Secretary of State to report to Congress within 60 days on potential changes in treaty language and related U.S. laws that would improve other countries' compliance with The Hague Convention on International Child Abduction. Let me briefly explain why this amendment is necessary. In force since 1980, The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction was created to ensure that if a child is wrongfully removed from his or her country of habitual residence by one parent against the will of the other parent, the aggrieved parent would have an internationally recognized means of recovering the abducted child. Unfortunately, one of my constituents has come face to face with the very real limitations of the current The Hague Convention in his efforts to recover his kidnapped son from Brazil, which, like the United States, is a signatory to The Hague Convention.

Mr. Chair, 5 years ago this month, Mr. David Goldman from central New Jersey began a long and painful odyssey to rescue his son from an international parental kidnapping. He had driven his wife and their 4-year-old son to the Newark Airport for a scheduled trip to visit her parents in Brazil. Mr. Goldman was to join them a few days later. But before he could, he received a phone call saying two things: His wife said their marriage was over; and if he ever wanted to see their son Sean again, he would have to sign over custody. To his credit, Mr. Goldman refused to be blackmailed. Instead, he began a long and relentless campaign to secure his son's release.

Despite the clear legitimacy of Mr. Goldman's claim, the case has crawled along in Brazil's courts, bouncing back and forth for years. Mr. Goldman's wife secured a divorce in Brazil and began a new relationship with a prominent lawyer. Unfortunately, Mr. Goldman's former wife died, a fact that Mr. Goldman learned only some time later because the family had concealed that from the Brazilian courts.

After my intercession and that of Mr. SMITH, and with the help of the State Department, Brazilian authorities moved to have the case once again sent to Brazil's federal courts to secure visitation rights for Mr. Goldman. That effort was successful. David Goldman was able to see his son for the first time in nearly 5 years, earlier this year. Now just this month, the Brazilian federal court in Rio ordered Sean returned to Mr. Goldman. But amazingly, a Brazilian political party filed a motion with the Brazilian Supreme Court asserting that Brazil's accession to The Hague Convention was unconstitutional.

I'm pleased that the Obama administration has filed a motion with the Brazilian Supreme Court seeking to have this frivolous motion dismissed, but we should do more. This outrageous delaying tactic, brought by an entity with no genuine standing in the case, has only underscored the need for the United States and other nations to examine potential changes to the convention necessary in order to prevent these kinds of cases from dragging on for years. The Hague Convention on parental child abduction should not be a justification for delay. I ask my colleagues to support my amendment so that we can receive, in a timely fashion, advice and recommendations from Secretary Clinton on measures that may be taken to help speed the resolution of cases like that of David and Sean Goldman.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition, even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chair, I rise in strong support of this amendment. I thank my friend and colleague for offering it.

Today David Goldman is once again back in Brazil. He is back at the Brazilian Supreme Court, which he and I visited together last February, trying to get the justice that the Brazilian courts keep delaying and denying. Today David Goldman is tenaciously trying to reclaim his son from a child abductor.

Mr. Chair, as many Members know, almost 5 years ago David Goldman's 9-year-old son Sean was abducted by his mother to Brazil. For 5 long years, David has sought relief in the Brazilian courts with the aid of an extraordinarily talented legal team and a local grassroots organization called Bring Sean Home. Mark DeAngelis runs that group, and I would encourage everyone to Google it. Go check it out. Look at the information that is contained in that Web site because it is truly remarkable what this grassroots organization has done to provide support for David, to lift his often discouraged spirits as he's gone through this Byzantine process in Brasilia and Rio de Janeiro.

It is particularly outrageous that since the death of Sean's mother, Sean has been illegally held by her second husband, a man by the name of Lins e Silva, a wealthy and very well-connected lawyer who, by the way, does family law. If ever there was a case of abusing family law, the David Goldman case is it. Lins e Silva refuses to return Sean to his father David, but, heedless of the damage he does to Sean, endlessly delays, obstructs and abuses the judicial system.

Last Tuesday, after a court had ordered the abductor, Lins e Silva, to turn Sean over for immediate return to the United States, within 48 hours a member of the Brazilian Supreme Court, responding to an appeal by a Brazilian political party, suspended that order. I have read Judge Pinto's return order—not all 82-pages, but the parts that were translated into English from Portuguese. It is a remarkable finding by a judge of a Brazilian Court. He talks about there not just being the first kidnapping by the mother, who sadly has passed away, but a second kidnapping, that occurred when a man who was not Sean's father took custody of a son that was not adoptable, and just grabbed him as if he was some kind of commodity. It is outrageous. That judge recognized that. He also acknowledged the extreme emotional and psychological harm that is being done to Sean Goldman each and every day. Court-appointed psychiatrists did an extensive battery of tests and reviews of Sean Goldman and found that the continued absence of David, the real father, has caused incredible emotional harm, which is compounded each and every day.

Mr. Chair, David, again, is now before the Supreme Court; and this political party is actually questioning the constitutionality of The Hague Convention itself and its applicability to the laws of Brazil. To me, that seems as if—and it is—that Sean is being taken hostage. If they want to review whether or not that signing of The Hague Convention comports with their own domestic laws and their constitution, do so. But don't take a 9-year-old American boy as hostage while you adjudicate that consideration.

Mr. Chair, we have to speak frankly about the situation in Brazil. I think this Congress has done so, as have our friends in the Senate, as has the White House. Generally speaking, the Brazilian judicial system enables international child abduction by Brazilian citizens. This is not an exaggeration. I invite you to read the State Department's April 2009 Report on Compliance with The Hague Convention. It just came out, just off the presses. The report documents in detail what it describes as patterns of noncompliance for Brazil, as well as for other countries. Brazilian courts, it notes, have a disturbing pattern of legitimizing abductions by claiming the abducted child has become "adapted to Brazilian culture." In other words, for many of Brazil's courts, if you abduct a child and manage to keep him or her in Brazil long enough, in defiance of The Hague Convention, he or she becomes yours.

And the administration of Brazilian President Lula connives at this outrage. It is complicit. It has done precious little to mitigate the damage being done to American children, especially David Goldman's son, Sean, in Brazil.

Again, I support this amendment strongly, and I urge my colleagues to stay tuned to this. We have to bring Sean home.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to recover any remaining time I have in order to yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOLT. May I ask the remaining time?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. HOLT. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT).

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, we strongly support the gentleman's amendment that would require the Secretary of State to make recommendations to Congress on the kinds of change needed to The Hague Convention on the civil aspects of international child abduction and, where applicable, to United States law.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of The Hague Convention is to ensure that in situations where a child was wrongfully removed from his or her country or habitual residence by one parent against the will of another parent, the aggrieved parent has an internationally recognized means of recovering his or her abducted child.

Unfortunately, many American families have come face to face with the very real limitations of the current

The Hague Convention and their efforts to recover parentally kidnapped children taken to other countries.

Such was the high profile case involving Mr. David Goldman of Tinton Falls, New Jersey, whose son Sean was kidnapped by Mr. Goldman's wife in 2004. This case has largely languished in Brazil's court since that time, despite the fact that Brazil is a partner with the United States in the Convention's enforcement. The legal process has only moved during periods of intense media attention and diplomatic activity on Mr. Goldman's behalf.

Changes to U.S. law and the Convention appear to be warranted to ensure that children can be quickly returned to their left-behind parents and their homes. This report will help us identify legal changes Congress can consider on behalf of the over 1,000 American children who are currently living in other countries as a result of a parental abduction.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is an important step in addressing a problem that will likely get worse in coming years in light of the growing number of transnational births and marriages. We must continue to use the legal tools at our disposal to prevent or resolve these childhood abduction cases.

I support the gentleman from New Jersey's amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 12 OFFERED BY MS. GINNY BROWN-WAITE OF FLORIDA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 12 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 12 offered by Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida:
Strike section 303.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Florida.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Chairman, just a few moments ago, I rose to point out what I believe is unnecessary spending. I suppose it is not a coincidence that I rise again to point out what I believe is another unnecessary spending item.

Section 303 of the Foreign Relations Act before us authorizes funding for the establishment of a Lessons Learned Center. If money were no object, I think it may be a fine thing to do. In fact, it is hard to imagine that anything produced by the center would not be used.

However, as you can imagine, many of my colleagues are wondering, why would anyone oppose this center? They might even point out that those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it.

Mr. Chairman, in some ways, my colleagues may be right. But what is essential is that we do learn from our mistakes, and that is precisely why the State Department's exam to become a Foreign Service officer is so rigorous. That is why the intelligence agencies seek the best and the brightest. And, frankly, Mr. Chairman, that is why the entire academic community going back thousands of years studies history.

Additionally, with 24-hour news events, we all become instantly knowledgeable. It is reviewed and reviewed. Anything that happens, has happened, gets reviewed ad nauseam. Section 303 is unnecessary precisely because learning lessons from history is so important and so widely acknowledged as being important that we already have tens of thousands of academies that do that every single day.

The proposed Lessons Learned Center has a great name, yet I think it will be simply one more example of spending money on things that we want and not limiting ourselves to those things that we need. Listen. Just listen. You can hear the giant sucking sound of Washington finding new and different ways to spend dollars; spend, spend.

I don't want to belabor the point, but Congress has already approved a $700 billion bailout package and an $800 billion stimulus package in just the last year alone. Meanwhile, our Medicare and Social Security trust funds that our constituents rely on will be exhausted sooner than we thought. And let me point out we are also fighting tough wars in two countries. And while my colleagues believe that a Lessons Learned Center might prevent such costly wars in the future, I would appeal to your intellect and your sense of fiduciary responsibility.

With all the massive charges already on the people's tab, the American taxpayer tab, and with spending at government agencies going up dramatically this year across the board, I ask my colleagues to make tough choices that the American people expect us to make.

All this portion of the bill does is create more government jobs. I urge adoption of this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition to this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, for the life of me, I cannot understand why the gentlelady's amendment seeks to cut what may be one of the most important processes that could take place, to learn how to do things better. I strongly oppose the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), the originator of this proposal.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in strong opposition to this amendment as well.

This provision is intended to improve the effectiveness of the State Department and USAID, to save taxpayer dollars, so that there is greater efficiency, improved capabilities, less waste, more bang for the buck, if you will. To do that, we have taken a page from the military.

Section 303 is modeled after Lessons Learned Centers in the armed services. These are mechanisms, if you will, which allow our men and women in uniform to learn from the successes and, as importantly, the mistakes of their colleagues. By cutting down on the need to reinvent the wheel, they have saved not just money, but they have saved lives.

But the State Department and USAID do not have a Lessons Learned Center, even though they, like the military, are spread across the globe with multiple missions. This results in waste, inefficiency, wasted energy, and, tragically, sometimes in the loss of lives of American Foreign Service personnel.

By the way, this is not just an intellectual exercise. With all due respect, I would suggest to my friend from Florida she read this book entitled "Hard Lessons." It is about the colossal waste in the reconstruction of Iraq. If we had a Lessons Learned Center, we could have saved billions of taxpayer dollars.

Read the book, my friends.

It is put out by the Special Inspector General for Iraq Reconstruction, Mr. Bowen, and it is a testimony about what happens if you do not have a tested blueprint with the expenditure of dollars overseas. It is a remarkable piece of work.

I want to make clear what this provision does. It begins the process of creating a Lessons Learned Center by authorizing its creation and requiring a report from the Department of State on how much it would cost to actually establish such a center. So it is only calling, at this moment, for a report, and that report, itself, will detail the cost.

I would be happy to work with the gentlewoman from Florida as this report is produced so that we can ensure that it details ways.

Please oppose this amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. KLEIN).

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. KLEIN of Florida. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise today to also oppose the gentlewoman's amendment. The underlying legislation contains commonsense provisions to ensure we are making the most use of our taxpayer funds in our diplomatic mission. There are a wide variety of opinions about how effective our diplomatic positions have been, and we appreciate the men and women in the diplomatic corps.

But we can do better in terms of, as the gentleman said, getting a better bang for our buck. Creating a Lessons Learned Center will allow the State Department and USAID to be more efficient in their spending and reduce duplicative efforts. We have already identified mountains of duplicative efforts.

This is part of a larger strategy in the legislation to ensure accountability in our diplomatic efforts and on behalf of our taxpayers. It also includes a quadrennial review of our national plan for U.S. diplomacy and development programs, just like the Defense Department does every 4 years.

This, to me, is exactly what we should be doing in this bill as we are beginning a new way of looking at our diplomatic efforts.

So, again, I appreciate the gentlewoman's effort, but I think this is fundamentally a crucial part of this piece of legislation. I urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE).

The amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. BISHOP OF NEW YORK

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 13 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. BISHOP of New York. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk, Amendment No. 13, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 13 offered by Mr. BISHOP of New York:

At the end of title X of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 1012. REPORT ON EFFECTS OF BUY AMERICA ACT WAIVERS UNDER THE PEPFAR PROGRAM.

(a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of the effects of the United States Agency for International Development's use of waivers under the Buy America Act for HIV test kits under the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR) program on—

(1) United States-based manufacturers; and
(2) availability of and access to HIV testing for at-risk populations in low-income countries

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study required under subsection (a).

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from New York (Mr. BISHOP) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BISHOP of New York. I want to start by thanking Chairman BERMAN for his leadership on this very important legislation.

My amendment is very straightforward. It directs the Government Accountability Office to study the effects of USAID's Buy America waiver on U.S.-based manufacturers seeking to provide the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, PEPFAR, with HIV test kits. The study will also examine the waiver's impact on the availability of HIV testing for at-risk populations in low-income countries. To be clear, this amendment does not propose any policy changes.

This study will help us to examine the use of waivers and determine if hardworking American manufacturers of HIV test kits are being undercut by foreign competitors. It is important for the U.S. to lend a hand in fighting this deadly epidemic, but we should do everything possible to preserve American jobs in the process, particularly when spending taxpayer dollars.

When PEPFAR was created in 2003, it was believed that American companies did not have sufficient capacity to manufacture or supply the program with quality HIV test kits. To fill that void, a waiver of the longstanding Buy America policy was extended so that USAID could immediately provide testing, counseling and treatment assistance to countries in most dire need of help. Foreign companies already producing HIV test kits and related products were able to step in and supply PEPFAR with the resources necessary to combat the spread of HIV/AIDS.

However, since 2003, American manufacturers have taken the initiative to play an active role in PEPFAR by developing high-quality HIV test kits that provide accurate results with minimal training. These products continue to be developed here in the U.S. with American hard work and ingenuity.

If more American companies are able to provide USAID products that meet the requirements of PEPFAR without reducing the effectiveness of the program, then perhaps we should rethink Buy America waivers for HIV testing.

When the requested study is complete, we should be able to draw conclusions on two important issues: One, whether or not the waiver puts American companies at a disadvantage when looking to supply their test kits to PEPFAR; and, two, if the Buy America waivers have an effect on access to HIV testing for at-risk populations in low-income countries.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and the underlying bill.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, although I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, the amendment by the gentleman from New York (Mr. BISHOP) requires a GAO report on the effects that waivers of the Buy America Act for the purchase of HIV test kits under the President's Emergency Plan for Aids Relief, PEPFAR, have had on American manufacturers.

PEPFAR, as we know, is one of the largest and most successful foreign assistance programs of our country, and it was reauthorized just last year for an astounding $48 billion over the next 5 years.

Expanding access for testing is a vital and core component of PEPFAR, both in terms of prevention and treatment. And in some cases, the purchase of test kits manufactured outside of the United States has been deemed a more cost-effective and efficient means by which to expand testing and access to testing.

Still, some have expressed concern about the impact that those waivers may be having on United States-based manufacturers and questioned whether the purchase of these test kits manufactured abroad really has increased access to testing. Thus, an evaluation of this nature may be an appropriate exercise, particularly as the PEPFAR program scales up to transition from an emergency program to a sustainable program. And I, therefore, support the gentleman in his amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BISHOP of New York. I yield the balance of my time to the chairman.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I simply join the sponsor of the amendment and the ranking member in support of the amendment.

Mr. BISHOP of New York. I thank the chairman for his support. I thank the ranking member for her support, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. BISHOP).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 14 OFFERED BY MS. MOORE OF WISCONSIN

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 14 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk and I request its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 14 offered by Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin:

In section 1107, redesignate paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (5) and (6), respectively.

In section 1107, insert after paragraph (3) the following:

(4) recognizes that actions limiting or suppressing the human rights of Afghan women and girls undermines the intent of the significant financial and training contributions that the United States and international community have provided to rebuild the country and to help establish institutions that protect and promote respect of basic and fundamental human rights to overcome the devastating damage to those rights from years of Taliban rule.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. MOORE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Wisconsin.

Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge a "yes" vote on my amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act. This is a time of unprecedented change in our outreach efforts to our global neighbors, and this authorization will help guide that path for the upcoming year and, therefore, I would like to really thank the committee for their hard work. And I would also like to thank my very good friend, Congresswoman MALONEY of New York, for being a leader and steadfast advocate for the women of Afghanistan.

It is just so difficult to express the hurdles that face Afghan women and girls. There are just few words to describe the abhorrent conditions that assault these women and girls on a daily basis, and there are few experiences in our own lives that compare to their constant struggle for survival and freedom.

Afghanistan has one of the highest rates of maternal mortality in the world. One in eight Afghan women die due to pregnancy-related complications every year. That's one woman every 30 minutes.

After years of brutal Taliban rule that allowed few rights for women, approximately 90 percent of their female population is illiterate.

There are over 50,000 widows in the country, many of whom lack substantive means to support themselves or their female children, who lack access to health care, to education, to employment, to shelter, and on and on.

The United States and international aid organizations have provided billions of dollars to rebuild the country and to promote the basic and fundamental human rights of the Afghan people.

More importantly, though, we have asked our own people to sacrifice our sons and daughters, our citizens, for this cause. Our brave men and women serving in Afghanistan are there to protect the American people, but they are also there to reach out to the people in this war-torn country. And that is why, Mr. Chairman, I have offered this particular amendment.

Earlier this year the Afghan Government moved a measure that would severely suppress the rights of this country's Shiite women and girls. This measure would further restrict their free mobility and actually legalizes marital rape. It does not condemn the marrying of minors and, instead, it appears to promote it.

This legislation ties a woman's legal financial stability and well-being to a man, and demands that a woman submit sexually to her husband in order to be privy to any sort of protection.

I see proposals like this in-depth reporting on multiple news media outlets highlighting the struggles that single women, girls, widows, married women face in Afghanistan.

Now, I understand that there are cultural differences, and I understand that culture and society in the Middle East will never look like that in the United States.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin. I yield myself 30 more seconds.

But I also understand what Secretary of State Hillary Clinton speaks of when she says that a woman's rights are human rights. And I understand that these actions prevent a nation from moving beyond an era still wounded by the scars and the fears of years of repressive Taliban rule.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment, although I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentlelady from Wisconsin (Ms. MOORE).

Mr. Chairman, this amendment has a noble purpose, to draw attention to the potential erosion of the social and economic progress that has benefited women throughout Afghanistan since the fall of the Taliban.

Many of us in Congress have remained focused on key areas addressed in the Afghan National Development Strategy, the basis of the Afghanistan Compact, which are vital for building human capital and creating an enabling environment for promoting equal rights and opportunities for women in that country.

We have also focused on ensuring the development and application of sustainable strategies that invest in Afghanistan's human capital, equipping both Afghani women and men with the skills, the support, and the resources needed to move their country forward into peace and stability.

Furthermore, we have repeatedly expressed our commitment to Afghan political, economic and social development and promoting the participation of women and, indeed, all Afghans in these processes.

I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. MOORE of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I would now like to yield the balance of our time to the gentlelady from Illinois, who is the co-Chair of the Women's Caucus, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by Congresswoman GWEN MOORE and really applaud her for that and for her passionate remarks on behalf of this amendment.

In the 8 years since the overthrow of the Taliban, women in Afghanistan have made major strides forward. Ninety-one of Afghanistan's 351 parliamentarians are women, and two women have announced their intention to run for President this year.

However, many women in Afghanistan continue to fight for basic human rights. Violence against women, rape and forced marriages continue in the country's most unstable regions. In April we saw images of stones being thrown at a woman protesting a law legalizing marital rape.

Afghanistan's future will depend on its women building more stable and healthy and thriving communities. The women of Afghanistan have borne the brunt of years of warfare, but they will also form the underpinning of a peaceful Afghanistan.

This amendment recognizes that limiting the rights of women is counterproductive to all of our efforts to help Afghanistan move forward from the devastating damage of Taliban rule.

I urge all of my colleagues, on both sides of the aisle, to stand up for the women of Afghanistan who are suffering, who deserve our help.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. MOORE). The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 15 OFFERED BY MR. ROYCE

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 15 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. ROYCE. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 15 offered by Mr. ROYCE:

At the end of subtitle B of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11 ____ . SENSE OF CONGRESS RELATING TO ERITREA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979, section 40 of the Arms Export Control Act, and section 640A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 stipulate that a designated state sponsor of terrorism is one "that repeatedly provides support to acts of international terrorism".

(2) Eritrea repeatedly has provided support for terrorists in Somalia, including the al-Shabaab insurgent group, which maintains links to the al-Qaeda network, and has been designated a Foreign Terrorist Organization by the Secretary of State pursuant to section 219 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), as amended.

(3) The UN Sanctions Monitoring Group on Somalia, established by a committee of the United Nations Security Council pursuant to resolutions 751 (1992) and 1519 (2003), reported in July 2007 that "huge quantities of arms have been provided to the Shabaab by and through Eritrea," and "the weapons in caches and otherwise in possession of the Shabaab include an unknown number of surface-to-air missiles, suicide belts, and explosives with timers and detonators".

(4) On August 17, 2007, former Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Jendayi Frazer stated, "Eritrea has played a key role in financing, funding and arming the terror and insurgency activities which are taking place in Somalia, and is the primary source of support for that insurgency and terror activity."

(5) In September 2007, Eritrea hosted the Congress for Somali Liberation and Reconciliation conference, offering sanctuary to al-Qaeda linked factions of the Somali opposition, including Sheikh Hassan Dahir Aweys, who has been designated as a terrorist under Executive Order No. 13224 and United Nations Security Council Resolution 1267 for his associations with al-Qaeda, and since has provided substantial political, diplomatic, financial and military support to the Asmara-based Alliance for the Reconstruction of Somalia (ARS) led by Aweys.

(6) In April 2008, the UN Sanctions Monitoring Group on Somalia reported, "the Government of Eritrea continues to provide support to groups that oppose the Transitional Federal Government in the form of arms and military training to fighters of the Shabaab," and that on or about January 8, 2008, an arms shipment from Eritrea arrived in Mogadishu containing dismantled RPG-7s, hand grenades, anti-tank mines, detonators, pistols, mortar shells, AK-47 assault rifles, PKM machine guns, RPG-2s, small mortars, FAL assault rifles, rifle-fired grenades for the FAL, M-16s and explosives.

(7) The April 2008 report of the UN Sanctions Monitoring Group also found that, "towards the end of 2007, about 120 fighters of the Shabaab travelled to Eritrea for the purpose of attending military training at a military base located near the Ethiopian border."

(8) In its December 2008 report, the UN Sanctions Monitoring Group on Somalia identified Eritrea as a "principal violator" of the arms embargo on Somalia and asserted that "Eritrean arms embargo violations take place with the knowledge and authorization of senior officials within the Eritrean Government and the ruling People's Front for Democracy and Justice (PFDJ)."

(9) In testimony before the Senate Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence on February 12, 2009, Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency Lieutenant General Michael Maples stated, "Senior East Africa-based al-Qaeda operatives remain at large and likely continue attack planning against U.S. and Western interests in the region," and "Recent propaganda from both al-Qaeda and the Somalia-based terrorist group al-Shabaab highlighting their shared ideology suggests a formal merger announcement is forthcoming."

(10) On May 20, 2009, Assistant Secretary of State for Africa Affairs Johnnie Carson testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that, "al-Shabaab . . . continues to harbor terrorists, target civilians and humanitarian workers, and attempt to overthrow the TFG through violent means," and that "a loose coalition of forces under the banner of Hizbul al-Islam, have been attacking TFG forces and other moderates in Mogadishu in an attempt to forcefully overthrow the transitional government. We have clear evidence that Eritrea is supporting these extremist elements, including credible reports that the Government of Eritrea continues to supply weapons and munitions to extremists and terrorist elements."

(11) Assistant Secretary Carson also testified, "There is also clear evidence of an al-Qaeda presence in Somalia. In 2008, East Africa al-Qaeda operative Saleh al-Nabhan distributed a video showing training camp activity in Somalia and inviting foreigners to travel there for training. A small number of senior Al-Qaeda operatives have worked closely with al-Shabaab leaders in Somalia, where they enjoy safe haven. We have credible reports of foreigners fighting with al-Shabaab."

(12) On May 14, 2009, Ian Kelly, Spokesman for the U.S. Department of State, stated, "Over the past week, extremists in Mogadishu have repeatedly attacked the people of Somalia and the Transitional Federal Government in pursuit of a radical agenda that can only promote further acts of terrorism and lead to greater regional instability. Eritrea has been instrumental in facilitating support of the extremists to commit these attacks."

(13) In a Presidential Statement issued on May 18, 2009, the UN Security Council expressed "concern over reports that Eritrea has supplied arms to those opposing the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia in breach of the UN arms embargo, and called on the UN Sanctions Monitoring Group to investigate".

(14) On May 21, 2009, the Inter Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD), a regional group made up of Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, Sudan and Uganda, stated, "The government of Eritrea and its financiers continue to instigate, finance, recruit, train, fund and supply the criminal elements in and/or to Somalia," and called on the Security Council of the United Nations "to impose sanctions on the government of Eritrea without any further delay."

(15) The Peace and Security Council of the African Union, at its 190th meeting held on May 22, 2009, issued a communiqué expressing, "deep concern at the reports regarding the support provided to these armed groups, through training, provision of weapons and ammunitions and funding, by external actors, including Eritrea, in flagrant violation of the United Nations arms embargo" and called on the UN Security Council to impose sanctions against Eritrea.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) Eritrea's ongoing and well-documented support for armed insurgents in Somalia, including for designated Foreign Terrorist Organizations and individuals linked to the deadly bombings by al-Qaeda of the United States Embassies in Nairobi, Kenya and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania in 1998, poses a significant threat to the national security interests of the United States and East African nations;

(2) the Secretary of State should designate the State of Eritrea as a State Sponsor of Terrorism pursuant to section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979, section 40 of the Arms Export Control Act, and section 640A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961; and

(3) the United Nations Security Council should impose sanctions against the State of Eritrea until such time as it ceases its support for armed insurgents, including radical Islamist militants, engaged in destabilizing activities in Somalia.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROYCE. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I currently serve as the ranking member of the Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Terrorism. Previously, for 8 years, I served as the chairman of the Africa Subcommittee, so I long have followed the issues surrounding Eritrea and the Horn of Africa.

And this particular amendment calls on the Secretary of State to designate Eritrea as a "state sponsor of terrorism." The Horn of Africa is a combustible mix. You have al Qaeda, you have piracy, a failed state in Somalia, border tensions, and a key instigator of this violence has been the government of Eritrea.

As the amendment indicates, U.N. report after U.N. report cites Eritrea for providing arms and military training to members of the Shabaab, and that's an al Qaeda-linked group that has been designated by the United States as a "foreign terrorist organization."

Mr. Chairman, if you take a look at this picture which appeared in a U.N. report, this is the actual Shabaab fighter who shot down a cargo plane with that shoulder-fired missile supplied by Eritrea. And the reason that we know that is the propaganda footage used by this al Qaeda-linked organization in order to try to recruit fighters to their goal. And they showed the footage of the successful attack on the cargo plane.

Now, what if that had been a civilian jetliner? How many lives would have been lost?

Indeed, our FBI is greatly concerned about Somali Americans who have gone missing from American cities. They are worried that they have gone to Somalia and are linking up with these terrorist groups. And it is Eritrea that is providing the weapons, including shoulder-fired missiles that can take out an airliner and that are providing this military training.

The case for adding Eritrea to the state sponsor of terrorism list is compelling. It's even overwhelming. It has been so for some time. The Obama administration's Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Johnny Carson, has noted that "we have clear evidence that Eritrea is supporting extremists," and that "the government of Eritrea continues to supply weapons and munitions to extremists and terrorist elements."

And this isn't new. The previous administration took a similar view of the destructive role that Eritrea plays in the horn. Some will say that this is counterproductive or the wrong time. Well, it has been a delicate time in this region for a decade now, and it's gotten a whole lot worse.

It is a complex region. One thing, though, is not complex; this is a clear national security threat.

U.N. reports have noted that over 100 Shabaab terrorists have traveled to Eritrea for their military training at an Eritrean military base and then traveled back. The same U.N. reports have identified Eritrea as a "principal violator" of the arms embargo on Somalia and have asserted that these violations "take place with the knowledge and authorization of senior officials within the Eritrean government." Plainly, it is state policy of Eritrea to support international terrorism.

The U.N. Security Council has made similar statements citing Eritrea's destructive role in the horn, and so have many neighboring countries. So it is time that Eritrea should be named a state sponsor of terrorism.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition and rise in strong opposition to the Royce amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, the Royce amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, H.R. 2410, which would designate Eritrea as a state sponsor of terrorism and call on the United Nations Security Council to impose sanctions against Eritrea, I strongly oppose.

While I certainly respect my esteemed colleague from California, ED ROYCE, who served as an excellent chairman on the Subcommittee on Africa for several years, and we worked closely together on many issues, and I have a great deal of respect for him, I must oppose this amendment. This amendment could undermine critical engagements currently going on between the U.S. and Eritrea. I urge my colleagues to vote "no."

The Royce amendment expresses the sense of Congress that the Secretary of State should designate Eritrea a state sponsor of terrorism and that the U.N. Security Council should impose sanctions against Eritrea. I urge you to vote against this amendment for the following reasons:

First, some of the assertions made in the amendment are factually wrong and dated.

Second, the geopolitical dynamics and interstate rivalries in the Horn of Africa cannot be addressed properly without concerted diplomatic engagement. Declaring Eritrea a state sponsor of terrorism and imposing international sanctions would do nothing to further our diplomatic aims and would impose further hardship on the people who are struggling to survive on a daily basis.

Thirdly, while Mr. ROYCE's amendment lays out a long list of reasons why he feels Eritrea should be placed on a state sponsor of terrorism list, the proposed amendment does not recognize the diplomatic efforts currently underway by the State Department to address the complex issues surrounding the Horn of Africa. Just last month, Eritrea President Isaias Akwerki sent a letter to President Obama expressing the desire to engage on these issues and is sending a high-level delegation to Washington. Additionally, a senior State Department official is expected to visit Asmara in a few weeks. Moreover, the Somali Government has said they want to engage with Asmara.

Lastly, putting Eritrea on a sanctions list would have limited effect on our effort to try to stabilize the region and build alliances with governments in a wider battle against extremism.

We should urge the administration to take careful note of the issues raised by Representative ROYCE, and I have written a letter to the President to that effect. The administration is engaging Asmara. We must allow these diplomatic discussions to continue.

In my last trip to Asmara 1 year ago, I met with the President and did indicate changes that would have to be made. The current President of Somalia, Sheikh Sharif Sheikh Ahmed, was in Asmara and went back, and now is trying to lead a government which is fighting against al Shabaab and al Qaeda. And so at this time, I think that this amendment would disrupt sensitive diplomatic issues that are going on. I urge my colleagues to vote against the Royce amendment.

Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROYCE. Let me respond that, first of all, I have a great deal of respect for Chairman PAYNE. We have worked together for years on Africa issues. We worked together on Darfur, Sudan. But this is the very issue of why we disagree here, because all Members should know that it was Eritrea that was the first country to invite Sudan's President, al-Bashir, to visit Eritrea following an arrest warrant for his crimes against humanity in Darfur.

Now, with respect to the issue, I can think of numerous issues and times when Congress has had to push—and we'll take Sudan as an example, since the example I'm giving here is an example in which Eritrea has welcomed al-Bashir at a time when the international community is trying to get him to prevent the crimes that he has committed in Darfur. We have had to push to take more assertive actions. We did that with genocide in Sudan. And in my view, there is nothing wrong now, especially with respect to a state sponsorship of terrorism. I think that the Assistant Secretary of State for Africa's words speak for themselves. Again, this is Secretary Carson before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last month, in which he said, We have clear evidence that Eritrea is supporting these extremist elements, including credible reports that they continue to supply weapons and munitions to terrorist elements.

I ask for an "aye" vote.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chair, during consideration of H.R. 2410, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, I voted for the Royce amendment regarding Eritrea. I know that Eritrea is sending a diplomatic delegation to the United States at the present time, and that sensitive negotiations are taking place in the region. It is my hope that Eritrea will dramatically change its policies as a result of this diplomatic action, and designation of Eritrea as a State Sponsor would be unnecessary. Had this provision been adopted in the House, it could have been (and would have been) removed from the bill in conference should such a change of policy come about. Therefore, I felt that the amendment was worthy of support at this stage of the legislative process notwithstanding the legitimate concerns raised by opponents of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR (Ms. DEGETTE). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ROYCE. Madam Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California will be postponed.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. JACKSON of Illinois) having assumed the chair, Ms. DEGETTE, Acting Chair of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2410) to authorize appropriations for the Department of State and the Peace Corps for fiscal years 2010 and 2011, to modernize the Foreign Service, and for other purposes had come to no resolution thereon.

PERMISSION TO CONSIDER AMENDMENT OUT OF ORDER

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during further consideration of H.R. 2410, pursuant to House Resolution 522, it may be in order to consider amendment No. 17 after amendment No. 27.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2010 AND 2011

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 522 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2410.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2410) to authorize appropriations for the Department of State and the Peace Corps for fiscal years 2010 and 2011, to modernize the Foreign Service, and for other purposes, with Ms. DEGETTE (Acting Chair) in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Acting CHAIR. When the Committee of the Whole rose earlier today, a request for a recorded vote on amendment No. 15 by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE) had been postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 16 OFFERED BY MR. MEEKS OF NEW YORK

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 16 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. MEEKS of New York. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 16 offered by Mr. MEEKS of New York:

At the end of title X, insert the following:
SEC. 10 . . . REPORT ON UNITED STATES-BRAZIL JOINT ACTION PLAN TO ELIMINATE RACIAL DISCRIMINATION.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and one year thereafter, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report detailing the status, efficacy, and coordination of the United States-Brazil Joint Action Plan to Eliminate Racial Discrimination, and a summary of short and long-term efforts to address the plight of in Afro Latinos and indigenous peoples in the Western Hemisphere through cooperation and bilateral efforts.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEKS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MEEKS of New York. Madam Chair, I rise today with an important amendment to H.R. 2410, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011.

We here in the United States understand all too well that it takes more than just passing laws to ensure equal access to prosperity. It took decades of constant pressure and struggle to get the legal right to full participation of African Americans in our American democracy, yet we realize that our work is far from over in our great Nation.

Racial discrimination is a sobering reality, both here in the United States and in the rest of the world. We understand that we cannot throw stones from a glass house, but instead we must work in tandem with our neighbors to ensure that all citizens in our hemisphere are unfettered by discriminatory practices now and the vestiges of those practices of the past.

It is in our interest to work toward a more equal hemisphere. And we are all at risk if our citizens do not have full faith in the strength of democracy to provide upward mobility. The Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., put it best when he said, Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

Afro-Latinos face a longstanding struggle against racial discrimination and a lack of opportunities. Afro-Latinos make up approximately 150 million of the region's 540 million total population and, along with women and indigenous populations, are among the poorest, most marginalized groups in the region.

People of African descent comprise a significant portion of the population in several Latin American countries and account for nearly 50 percent of the region's poor. For many Afro descendants, endemic poverty is exacerbated by isolation, exclusion, and racial discrimination.

In Brazil, Afro-Latinos represent 45 percent of the population but constitute 64 percent of the poor and 69 percent of the extremely poor. In Colombia, the plight of Afro-Colombians is perhaps harshest, as they are all too often caught in the crossfire of violent conflict.

Congress previously supported the United States-Brazil Joint Action Plan Against Racial Discrimination in House Resolution 1254 and called for both the United States and Brazil to promote equality and to continue to work toward eliminating racial discrimination. The joint action plan helps to facilitate the exchange of information on the best practices of anti-discrimination measures and development of ideas of how to bilaterally promote racial and ethnic equality.

With this amendment, we request that Secretary Clinton report on plans and efforts to address the plight of Afro-Latinos and indigenous peoples in the Western hemisphere. And we also request a report on the status of the U.S.-Brazil joint action plan so we can gain a greater understanding of how to increase our collaboration on similar initiatives.

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I rise to claim time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. The U.S.-Brazil Joint Action Plan to eliminate racial and ethnic discrimination and promote equality recognizes the commitment of our governments to promote equality and opportunity.

□ 1615

It also underscores the importance of cooperating in the promotion of human rights in order to maintain an environment of peace, of democracy, and of prosperity in the region.

The United States' commitment to freedom and equality is longstanding. This joint action plan between our two countries helps to further these values throughout the hemisphere.

Mr. MEEKS' amendment requires the Secretary of State to report on the progress of these important bilateral efforts under the action plan. This report will help to bring accountability and greater oversight to the objectives and to the goals of this important joint effort between the United States and Brazil.

I thank Congressman MEEKS for his introduction of this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEKS of New York. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT).

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Madam Chair, first of all, I would like to commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEKS) for his long service in this area of bringing attention to bringing equality to the cultures of Central America, South America, and Latin America. He is to be indeed commended.

Madam Chair, the United States and Brazil are strong partners with a common history and ancestry that, unfortunately, includes experiences of slavery, racism, and discrimination against citizens of African heritage. Still, the United States and Brazil, under the joint action plan, are working to learn from each other's experiences in order to combat racism, promote equality, and increase cooperation in a multitude of fields including education, culture, health, and sports.

Madam Chair, because combating racism and discrimination requires constant vigilance, I support the gentleman from New York's amendment, which will provide Congress with better information moving towards that end.

Mr. MEEKS of New York. Madam Chair, I just want to give some good progress that has been made in Latin America. For example, we see Graciela Dixon become the first black woman to head Panama's Supreme Court in 2005 and Joaquim Barbosa of Brazil rise as a prominent member of the Supreme Court. Paula Moreno stands now as Colombia's first Afro-Colombian to serve as a minister in a presidential cabinet. And in Ecuador, it was reported that a group of more than 100 black women in 2006 sought more government assistance for housing to combat racial discrimination in the rental market.

We are in this together; we can accomplish this together. And I thank the gentlewoman who is the ranking member on the committee for supporting this bill as well as the Chair of the committee.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MEEKS).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 18 OFFERED BY MRS. KIRKPATRICK OF ARIZONA

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 18 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mrs. KIRKPATRICK of Arizona. I have an amendment at the desk and ask for its consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 18 offered by Mrs. KIRKPATRICK of Arizona:

(K) FLOW OF ILLEGAL FUNDS.—A description and assessment of efforts to reduce the southbound flow of illegal funds.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Arizona (Mrs. KIRKPATRICK) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Arizona.

Mrs. KIRKPATRICK of Arizona. Madam Chair, over the past 1½ years, we have witnessed record levels of violence along the southwest border. Since the beginning of 2008, over 7,500 people have died as drug cartels have fought over trafficking routes between Mexico and the United States.

As the fighting has continued in Mexico, those of us who live in border States have seen our communities threatened. Many communities in my home State of Arizona have seen gang violence on the rise, and the State now leads the Nation in both kidnapping and identity theft, an increase that is directly linked to illegal activity along the border.

Our local law enforcement is doing a great job combating crime, but they cannot take on the cartels alone. They need the Federal Government to do its job.

The criminal organizations that smuggle people and drugs into the United States bringing this high level of crime into our homes are fueled by the southbound flow of illegal arms and cash. Arms illegally carried to Mexico are the weapons of choice for cartels, while it is money streaming in from the United States that funds their massive armies.

This bill calls on the President to report to Congress on the activities of the Merida Initiative. Among the matters covered by this report is the assessment of United States efforts to prevent the southbound flow of illegal arms. However, it does not currently include any assessment of our efforts to prevent the movement of cash. The illegal movement of people, drugs, weapons, and money are entirely linked together, and it is impossible to address one of those issues without tackling the rest.

Therefore, I offer this amendment to include an assessment of United States efforts to stem the stream of cash heading south into Mexico. The cartels are continually finding new and innovative ways to transport funds, and our government needs to be at least as creative if these organizations are going to be stopped.

Madam Chairwoman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I rise to claim the time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, the Merida Initiative is an historic opportunity to cooperate with our democratic partners in the region against narco-trafficking and organized crime. Requiring comprehensive reporting on U.S. actions and the consequences of such are essential not only to ensuring oversight but also to ensuring our efforts are effective and, indeed, long lasting.

Congresswoman KIRKPATRICK's amendment works to include a review of the illegal southbound flow of cash under Merida reporting. I believe we should also oversee north in addition to southbound flows of cash across our borders. Only through a comprehensive approach and understanding of what we are facing can we truly be successful.

I support the gentlewoman's amendment, and I congratulate her for offering it.

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I would be most honored to yield to our distinguished chairman.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank the ranking member for yielding.

I just want to add my support. The fact is I had a chance to go to Mexico City, and the gentlewoman from Arizona is absolutely right. The guns are one issue but the huge amounts of cash that are transported are another. Her amendment makes what I think are some good provisions in this legislation on strengthening the Merida Initiative even better, and I urge its adoption.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. KIRKPATRICK of Arizona. Madam Chairwoman, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their help with this amendment.

I ask my colleagues to support this amendment, which addresses a key part of the fight against drug trafficking organizations.

Madam Chairwoman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Arizona (Mrs. KIRKPATRICK).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 19 OFFERED BY MR. KIRK

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 19 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. KIRK. Madam Chair, I have an amendment on the roll.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 19 offered by Mr. KIRK:

At the end of subtitle A of title II, add the following:

SEC. 205. ELIGIBILITY IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES FOR AN AGENCY OF A FOREIGN GOVERNMENT TO RECEIVE A REWARD UNDER THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE REWARDS PROGRAM.

(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Subsection (f) of section 36 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 (22 U.S.C. 2708(f)) is amended—

(1) by striking “(f) INELIGIBILITY.—An officer” and inserting the following:

“(f) INELIGIBILITY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), an officer”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(2) EXCEPTION IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES.—The Secretary may pay a reward to an officer or employee of a foreign government (or any entity thereof) who, while in the performance of his or her official duties, furnishes information described in such subsection, if the Secretary determines that such payment satisfies the following conditions:

“(A) Such payment is appropriate in light of the exceptional or high-profile nature of the information furnished pursuant to such subsection.

“(B) Such payment may aid in furnishing further information described in such subsection.

“(C) Such payment is formally requested by such agency.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subsection (b) of such section (22 U.S.C. 2708(b)) is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1) by inserting “or to an officer or employee of a foreign government in accordance with subsection (f)(2)” after “individual”.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. KIRK) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KIRK. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank Chairman BERMAN and Ranking Member ROS-LEHTINEN for their bipartisan work on this, for a good underlying bill, in my view, as well.

This amendment will assist in our fight against terrorism across the globe, especially in Pakistan and Afghanistan.

Currently, the terrorist rewards program run by the State Department assists in our hunt for terrorists by promising a cash reward or other type of assistance for information leading to the arrest of some of the world's most deadly terrorists. The Rewards for Justice Program, established by the 1984 Act to Combat International Terrorism, has now paid over $77 million to more than 50 people who have provided credible information to put terrorists behind bars and prevent acts of terrorism.

As a staff member, I helped write the amendments that President Clinton asked for when we wanted to offer rewards for persons indicted for war crimes, for example, in the former Yugoslavia. We also passed legislation under Chairman Hyde that loosened up this program so that we could provide more than cash assistance, more meaningful assistance to farmers and other people who may not be able to read in very rural parts of Central Asia.

The program has been the key to success in apprehending people, including Mir Amal Kansi, a terrorist who murdered two CIA employees and injured three others in his 1993 rampage outside of CIA headquarters in Virginia. The program was also important in nailing Ramzi Yousef, convicted of the 1993 World Trade Center bombing; Uday and Qusay Hussein, the two murderous Hussein brothers; Khadafy Janjalani and Abu Solaiman, two high-ranking members of Abu Sayyaf in the Philippines; Libyan Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi, convicted on January 31, 2001, for the murder of 270 people on Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie; Hamsiraji Marusi Sali, the leader of the ASG; Muhsin Khadr al-Khafaji, a member of Saddam Hussein's top Ba'ath Party leadership; Iraqi Khamis Sirhan al-Muhammad, a former official military commander; and Muhammad Zimam Abd al-Razzaq al-Sadun, number 41 on the Iraqi "top 55" wanted list.

Under current law, though, the United States may not pay an award to an officer or employee of another government. I have traveled to Pakistan in each of the last 4 years where I have met a number of government officials, and at the strong suggestion of the fairly poorly paid, especially IB, intelligence bureaus, I believe the Secretary of State should be allowed to pay such a reward especially if it has to do with nailing the greatest terrorists. If there is anyone anywhere working for anyone who has information related to the whereabouts of Osama bin Laden or Ayman al-Zawahiri, we should be doing everything possible to elicit that information.

As Secretary Clinton, Secretary Gates, General Petraeus, and Ambassador Holbrooke execute the President's new strategy for Afghanistan and Pakistan, we should do everything we can to develop a complete picture of where the al Qaeda and Taliban leadership is hiding. This amendment provides our key State Department and intelligence officials with every possible tool that they could have to make sure they can offer a reward even if that person, for example, works for the Pakistani IB bureau.

In the last Congress, the House overwhelmingly passed this amendment 419-1, but it did not pass the Senate, which is why I offer it today.

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition to this amendment, although I am not opposed.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, as the gentleman said, and I agree with every word that he said in support of his amendment—I'm not sure I could have pronounced every word as he did, but this is simply a discretionary authorization to the Secretary of State, usually in extraordinary circumstances, to do something which makes perfect sense, to take advantage of the possibility that a foreign national might under circumstances, and particularly with a reward in mind, provide information of tremendous value in capturing target terrorists that we are pursuing. Whether it's the ones the gentleman spoke about or others, why not give this authority?

I urge that the amendment be adopted and we change the law to remove this restriction, which, to me, doesn't make much sense.

Madam Chair, I yield back the balance of my time.

□ 1630

Mr. KIRK. I appreciate the chairman's work. I also appreciate David Fite's work on this because we were together when we first saw how this restriction could impede the hunt for the two top al Qaeda terrorists—Ayman al-Zawahiri and Osama bin Laden.

For a poorly paid official—and there are many who are patriotic, good servants in Afghanistan and in Pakistan especially—we ought to be able to offer this reward. This will significantly incentivize the hunt for some of the people who have killed most of the Americans. I urge adoption of the amendment.

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Madam Chair, I rise to express my opposition to amendment number 19 offered by Representative KIRK to H.R. 2410, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act.

Representative KIRK's amendment would allow the United States Secretary of State, at her discretion, to make payments from the Rewards for Justice program to officers or employees of foreign governments who provide information leading to the capture of exceptional and high-profile terrorists.

Upon first glance, this amendment may seem reasonable. Of course the United States wishes to encourage persons in foreign countries to assist our efforts to resist global terrorism. However, I question the necessity and wisdom of using U.S. taxpayer funds to pay employees of foreign governments for official duties they are presumably already being paid by their own governments to perform. Long-term success in the global fight against terrorism requires that America's partners make this mission an integral part of their work, not an extra-credit activity.

In addition, the effect of this amendment could be contrary to America's commitment to due process and human rights. In previous instances when soldiers or officials have been offered monetary incentives to capture "terrorists", innocent civilians have been labeled as terrorists and accusations grossly conflated so the informant can claim a financial prize or even a political score. The language of this amendment is too vague to protect against potential human rights abuses.

For the two reasons I have stated, Madam Chair, I voted against the amendment offered by Mr. KIRK.

Mr. KIRK. I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. KIRK).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. KIRK. Madam Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 20 OFFERED BY MR. LYNCH

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 20 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. LYNCH. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk that has been made in order by the rule. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 20 offered by Mr. LYNCH:

Page 73, after line 21, insert the following (and amend the table of contents accordingly):

SEC. 239. REPORT ON SPECIAL IMMIGRANT PROGRAMS FOR CERTAIN NATIONALS OF IRAQ AND AFGHANISTAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the Congress a report on the programs authorized under the following provisions:

(1) Section 1059 of division A of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006 (Public Law 109-163; 8 U.S.C. 1101 note).

(2) Section 1244 of division A of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008 (Public Law 110-181; 122 Stat. 396 et seq.).

(b) CONTENTS.—The report under subsection (a) shall address at least the following:

(1) Whether the eligibility requirements with respect to the programs are sufficiently clear, and if not, whether legislation is necessary to clarify those requirements.

(2) Whether the programs are being run effectively and expeditiously.

(3) Whether processing delays exist with respect to the programs that place applicants' lives at risk, and if so—

(A) what the cause or causes of the delays are; and

(B) whether legislation is necessary to eliminate the delays.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. LYNCH. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Before I begin, Madam Chair, I would like to thank Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman BERMAN for considering my amendment. I congratulate the committee for drafting a bill that, I think, will truly strengthen our Foreign Affairs profile overseas as well as strengthen our capabilities.

I rise in support of my amendment, which will direct the State Department to assess and to report to Congress on the Special Immigrant Visa Program for certain Iraqi and Afghan nationals employed by or on behalf of the United States in both Afghanistan and in Iraq.

As a member of the House Oversight Committee and as a member of its National Security and Foreign Affairs Subcommittee, I've been to Iraq and to Afghanistan on numerous occasions. I've had the pleasure of meeting with some of the brave Iraqi and Afghan workers who actually serve right beside our own men and women in uniform as interpreters, as assistants in military operations and also in the civil operations that are going on in both of those countries. It is extremely dangerous work, and they do deserve incredible recognition for taking a very difficult position in aiding our troops in their mission. They are deserving of our admiration.

There is a sad truth, however, that, in choosing to support U.S. forces in Iraq and in Afghanistan to rebuild their countries, they are also putting their lives on the line and those of their families. The insurgents in Iraq and in Afghanistan have targeted these hardworking patriots and their families in the hopes of terrorizing the local people and in discouraging cooperation.

It is because of this very real danger that Congress created the sections 1059 and 1244 Special Immigrant Visa Programs. They allow for certain Iraqis and Afghans who actually serve as translators—these are the folks who are actually protecting our young men and women in uniform as translators or as interpreters or who are otherwise employed by the U.S. or its contractors—to come to the United States to escape the targeting by these terrorists and insurgents.

I am aware that the State Department prepared a study of these programs in July 2008, but I believe it is necessary, actually, to follow up on this previous study in light of the troubling reports that I received earlier this year. I was informed by our State Department folks in Iraq and in Afghanistan and I was informed by General Ray Odierno, the commander of the United States forces in Iraq, that they are still dealing with unclear eligibility requirements, that they're having difficulty processing these Iraqis with visas and that they're facing long processing times, which has worked to the detriment of these individuals and has also hampered our effort to recruit others to take their places.

With wait times up to a year, these applicants are in constant danger while their applications are sorted out. I think we owe it to these brave men and women, who are doing the right thing, to ensure that any delays are only as long as is absolutely necessary.

Through this study, we will be able to determine the root causes of these difficulties. Then, based on the findings, Congress can act to ensure that these programs are run efficiently and effectively while protecting the applicants' lives, our national security and our men and women in uniform.

I urge my colleagues to support both this amendment and the underlying bill.

I reserve the balance of our time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I claim time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for his helpful and constructive amendment.

I rise in support of this amendment.

I had the opportunity to travel to these areas with the gentleman a few years back. Congress has recognized the debt owed to the Iraqis and Afghans who work at great personal risk in support of our troops. It has responded by creating two Special Immigrant Visa, SIV, programs. One is an SIV program for Iraqi and Afghani translators and interpreters. The second is an SIV program for Iraqi employers and contractors and their families, along with providing refugee resettlement benefits.

However, as a 2008 report by the State Department Inspector General stated: the current process resulted in applicants' receiving SIVs who, one, did not meet the program's criteria of working primarily as interpreters or as translators or, two, in the OIG team's opinion, appeared to be outside the legislative intent of the program. As a result, the number of SIVs that could have been allocated to other qualified applicants were not.

This amendment seeks to address a number of those issues by requiring our State Department, among other actions, to develop clear guidance on eligibility for adjudicators, to maintain a high level of vigilance due to the high risk of fraud and abuse, and many other items.

I again thank the gentleman from Massachusetts. I urge my colleagues to support this vital and important amendment.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time, Madam Chair.

Mr. LYNCH. Madam Chair, at this point, I would like to yield the balance of my time to the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I rise to join the ranking member in supporting very strongly the amendment from the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH).

We have, I think, a general obligation to deal with the issue of the refugees as a consequence of these conflicts both in Iraq and in Afghanistan, but we have a particularly strong duty to deal with the status of people who are displaced or who are objects of persecution, retribution or retaliation because those individuals helped either our military or our diplomats or our AID people in terms of the conflict in either one of those countries.

This is an issue that I, personally, was very involved with in the last couple of years. The gentleman's amendment, I think, helps to spur us to deal with some of the problems in the program now and to do more in this regard. It is certainly an amendment that, if it is passed, I would want to see in the final legislation. I urge its adoption.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 21 OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 21 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. BERMAN. As the designee of Mr. HILL, I have an amendment made in order by the rule, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 21 offered by Mr. BERMAN:
At the end of title X, insert the following:
SEC. 10 . . . REPORT ON REDUCING SMUGGLING AND TRAFFICKING IN PERSONS.

The Secretary of State, in consultation with the heads of other relevant Federal departments and agencies, shall conduct a cost-benefit analysis and submit to Congress a report on how best to use United States funds to reduce smuggling and trafficking in persons.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am operating as a designee for our colleague BARON HILL. I strongly support the amendment that is before the body now. It requires the State Department, in cooperation with other departments and agencies, to report on how best to use government funds to reduce alien smuggling and trafficking in persons.

The State Department estimates that 800,000 people are trafficked in deplorable conditions and in inhumane conditions to cross borders around the world while millions more are trafficked within their own countries. Of these, approximately 80 percent are women and girls. Half are minors. Human smuggling continues to be a significant law enforcement challenge in the international community, and it remains a particular problem for us on our southern border with Mexico.

The United States became a party to the United Nations' smuggling protocol in 2005. It continues to work with other governments, committing substantial resources to end human smuggling and to protect victims from the perilous journeys involved in this profitable enterprise. Some 112 countries are now party to this smuggling protocol.

Madam Chair, in order to more effectively tackle the growing and worrisome problems of human smuggling and trafficking, I support the gentleman's amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I claim time in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, although the amendment urges the executive branch to undertake assessments that, I hope, are already going into the administration's policymaking, I do not oppose this amendment.

All of us are, of course, opposed to alien smuggling, trafficking persons and terrorists entering the United States. We believe that U.S. efforts to fight those grave problems should be cost effective. Thus, I support the amendment's call for a report on this subject.

I yield back the balance of our time.
Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I have no further requests for time.

I yield back the balance of my time.
The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 22 OFFERED BY MR. PETERS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 22 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. PETERS. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 22 offered by Mr. PETERS:
At the end of Title X, insert the following:
SEC. 10 . . . REPORT ON WESTERN HEMISPHERE TRAVEL INITIATIVE.

Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to Congress a report on the effects of the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative (WHTI) on the flow of people, goods, and services across the international borders of the United States, Canada, Mexico, Bermuda, and the Caribbean region, with particular emphasis on whether WHTI has been effective in meeting its goal of strengthening United States border security and enhancing accountability of individuals entering the United States, and an assessment of the economic impact associated with WHTI and its effects on small businesses.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. PETERS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. PETERS. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, today, we are considering important legislation that will support efforts to strengthen, to modernize and to rebuild the capacity of the Department of State to fulfill its core diplomatic mission. This legislation will also increase the arms control and the nonproliferation capabilities of the State Department; it will reform the system of export controls for military technology; and it will improve the oversight of U.S. security assistance abroad.

As we expand our diplomatic capabilities, we must remember that trade is the driving force of both our economy and of our international diplomacy. In December of 2004, Congress passed the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative. As of June 1, 2009, this initiative now requires that travelers have passports for all land and sea crossings, including travel to and from Canada and Mexico.

We need to know exactly how these new passport requirements are affecting our economy. Obviously, prudent security measures must be undertaken to keep Americans safe, but we also need to assess whether these measures are working and how they affect border State businesses. My amendment will require such an assessment. Congress can then determine whether corrective action is needed to change the requirements or to provide relief to border State businesses or both.

The Peters amendment would require the Secretary of State to submit to Congress within 18 months of the passage of this act a report on the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative: on the flow of people, goods and services across the international borders of the United States, Canada, Mexico, Bermuda, and the Caribbean region.

The amendment stipulates the report should pay specific attention to the effects on small businesses and the measure's effectiveness in strengthening border security. Increasing the security of our borders must be a top priority from Congress. We must also ensure that implementation of the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative is carried out in a manner that increases our national security but does not unnecessarily hinder trade and strain our small businesses.

With our Nation's fight through a recession, it is particularly important that we assess the effect measures approved by this body have on our economy.

I greatly appreciate the support from my friend and colleague from New Mexico, Congressman TEAGUE, for his office's assistant on this important amendment and help on issues of importance to both our northern and southern border regions, and I urge my colleagues to support my amendment.

Madam Chair, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition, even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I support this amendment because the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative was fully implemented in June of this year with the goal of strengthening U.S. border security while at the same time enhancing accountability of those entering our country.

By calling on the Secretary of State to provide a report to Congress describing the impact this implementation has had on the flow of people, goods, and services across the international borders shared by the relevant countries, Congressman PETERS' amendment will help us understand better how effective this initiative has been in making our country safer and what impact these two measures will have on the business sectors of our countries.

The Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative was a significant step toward making America more secure. Congressman PETERS' amendment is important as it would provide greater accountability and oversight of the objectives and consequences of this important initiative and will ultimately help us protect the interests and the safety of the American people.

And with that, I yield back.

Mr. PETERS. Madam Chair, my amendment is a commonsense measure that ensures that the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative's effects on small businesses are known and reported to Congress in a timely manner. The Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative must be implemented in a way that strengthens our national security, maintains robust trade and tourism with our neighbors, and protects our Nation's small businesses.

I would like to thank Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman BERMAN and Rules Committee Chairwoman SLAUGHTER.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. PETERS).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 23 OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 23 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, as the designee of Mr. TEAGUE, I have an amendment made in order by the rule, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 23 offered by Mr. BERMAN:

At the end of subtitle A of title XI, insert the following:

SEC. 11 . GLOBAL CLEAN ENERGY EXCHANGE PROGRAM.

(a) PROGRAM ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of State is authorized to establish a program to strengthen research, educational exchange, and international cooperation with the aim of promoting the development and deployment of clean and efficient energy technologies in order to reduce global greenhouse gas emissions, address issues of energy poverty in developing countries, and extend the reach of United States technologies and ingenuity that would be beneficial to developing countries. The program authorized under this subsection shall be carried out pursuant to the authorities of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2451 et seq.) and may be referred to as the "Global Clean Energy Exchange Program".

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CLEAN AND EFFICIENT ENERGY TECHNOLOGY.—The term "clean and efficient energy technology" means an energy supply or end-use technology—

(A) such as—

- (i) solar technology;
- (ii) wind technology;
- (iii) geothermal technology;
- (iv) hydroelectric technology;

(v) alternative fuels; and

(vi) carbon capture technology; and

(B) that, over its life cycle and compared to a similar technology already in commercial use—

(i) is reliable, affordable, economically viable, socially acceptable, and compatible with the needs and norms of the country involved;

(ii) results in—

(I) reduced emissions of greenhouse gases;

or

(II) increased geological sequestration; and

(iii) may—

(I) substantially lower emissions of air pollutants; or

(II) generate substantially smaller or less hazardous quantities of solid or liquid waste.

(2) GEOLOGICAL SEQUESTRATION.—The term "geological sequestration" means the capture and long-term storage in a geological formation of a greenhouse gas from an energy producing facility, which prevents the release of greenhouse gases into the atmosphere.

(3) GREENHOUSE GAS.—The term "greenhouse gas" means—

(A) carbon dioxide;

(B) methane;

(C) nitrous oxide;

(D) hydrofluorocarbons;

(E) perfluorocarbons;

(F) sulfur hexafluoride; or

(G) nitrogen trifluoride.

(c) ELEMENTS.—The program authorized under subsection (a) shall contain the following elements:

(1) The financing of studies, research, instruction, and other educational activities dedicated to developing clean and efficient energy technologies—

(A) by or to United States citizens and nationals in foreign universities, governments, organizations, companies, or other institutions, and

(B) by or to citizens and nationals of foreign countries in United States universities, governments, organizations, companies, or other institutions.

(2) The financing of visits and exchanges between the United States and other countries of students, trainees, teachers, instructors, professors, researchers, entrepreneurs, and other persons who study, teach, and conduct research in subjects such as the physical sciences, environmental science, public policy, economics, urban planning, and other subjects and focus on developing and commercially deploying clean and efficient energy technologies.

(d) ACCESS.—The Secretary of State shall ensure that the program authorized under subsection (a) is available to—

(1) historically Black colleges and universities that are part B institutions (as such term is defined in section 322(2) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1061(2))), Hispanic-serving institutions (as such term is defined in section 502(5) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 1101a(5))), Tribal Colleges or Universities (as such term is defined in section 316 of such Act (20 U.S.C. 1059c)), and other minority institutions (as such term is defined in section 365(3) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 1067k(3))), and to the students, faculty, and researchers at such colleges, universities, and institutions; and

(2) small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, small business concerns owned and controlled by women, and small business concerns owned and controlled by veterans (as such terms are defined in section 8(d)(3) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(d)(3))).

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlelady from Nevada (Ms. TITUS).

Ms. TITUS. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Teague-Titus-Giffords amendment to establish a global clean energy exchange program. This new program will strengthen research, educational exchange, and international cooperation with the aim of promoting the development and deployment of clean and efficient energy technologies.

The development of next-generation solar, wind, geothermal, carbon capture and storage, and other clean energy technologies that will reduce our dependence on foreign oil's going to take cooperative efforts from every corner of the world.

Our amendment provides much-needed support for exchange programs dedicated to providing developing clean-energy and energy-efficient technologies. These exchange programs between the United States and other countries will be available to teachers, students, and entrepreneurs.

In addition to promoting the development and deployment of clean-energy technology, this exchange program will help address issues of energy poverty in developing countries and extend the reach of American clean-energy technologies and innovation that would be beneficial to developing countries.

I urge passage.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition even though I do not oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, while I am concerned by the proliferation of exchange-related authorization earmarks in the underlying bill, which circumscribes the discretion of States' educational and cultural affairs bureaus in deciding how to allot our finite education and exchange resources, I do not oppose this amendment.

I support efforts to use our educational and exchange resources to help support the development of clean and efficient energy sources, and I appreciate the fact that this amendment does not include a specific authorization amount. Therefore, I support the amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I yield the balance of the time to the sponsor of the amendment, under my designee status, the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. TEAGUE).

Mr. TEAGUE. Madam Chairwoman, I am an oilman. I always have been, and I always will be. One thing that I learned as an oilman is that no matter where you go around the world, when you visit oil- and gas-producing areas, you mostly find American companies, American technologies, American equipment, and, of course, Americans. America is the pride of the oil patch.

Over the years, that position has served us well. It creates wealth and jobs in our country and has been the basis for America's leadership in the global economy. But the world is changing. Where before other nations could not compete with our economic might, now they can. And before, where the hydrocarbons were the only solution to the world's energy needs, it no longer is. America will continue to lead the world in the production of oil and natural gas, but we must also lead the world in the production of renewable energy.

America will be stronger if we lead the development of new ways to capture wind energy. America will be wealthier if we create and produce the technology the world uses to produce energy from the sun. Most Americans will have good-paying jobs if it is American ingenuity behind the production of new biofuels around the world.

The Teague-Titus-Giffords amendment creates the Global Clean Energy Exchange Program to strengthen research, educational exchange, and international cooperation with the aim of promoting the development and deployment of clean and efficient American energy technologies around the world.

Our amendment will mean that professors, researchers, entrepreneurs, and small business owners can travel to other nations to show people there the renewable energy products, technology, and expertise that America has developed. And when those nations decide to make investments in renewable energy, I imagine they will turn to the technologies, products, and expertise that we introduced to them in the first place.

This amendment is about enhancing America's leadership in the renewable energy field; it's about creating markets for American goods; it's about creating profits for American companies; it's about creating jobs for American workers.

I thank Chairman BERMAN for his support, and I thank Chairwoman SLAUGHTER for allowing this amendment to be debated on the floor. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 24 OFFERED BY MS. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON OF TEXAS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 24 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 24 offered by Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas:

At the end of subtitle B of title II, add the following:

SEC. 227. EXCHANGES BETWEEN AFGHANISTAN AND THE UNITED STATES FOR WOMEN LEGISLATORS.

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to provide financial assistance to—

(1) establish an exchange program for Afghan women legislators of the National Assembly of Afghanistan;

(2) expand Afghan women participation in international exchange programs of the Department of State; and

(3) promote the advancement of women in the field of politics, with the aim of encouraging more women to participate in civil society, reducing violence against women, and increasing educational opportunities for women and children.

(b) PROGRAM.—The Secretary of State shall establish an exchange program in cooperation with the women members of parliament in Afghanistan to enable Afghan women legislators to encourage more women to participate in, and continue to be active in, politics and the democratic process in Afghanistan.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Texas.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Chairwoman, let me first thank the Chair and ranking member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs for their hard work on this entire document and for the privilege of offering this amendment.

I rise to claim the time in support of my amendment that would provide assistance for Afghan women legislators. The amendment would create a program in the State Department to support exchanges between Afghanistan and the United States for women legislators, expand Afghan women's participation in international exchange programs of the Department of State, and promote the advancement of women in the field of politics with the aim of encouraging more women to participate in the civil society. This program would give female lawmakers of the National Assembly of Afghanistan new opportunities to improve their political and administrative skills and to identify and mentor other future qualified women interested in leadership in the public service.

A new generation of leaders is helping to pave the way to consolidate and secure a stable democracy in Afghanistan. Afghan women legislators are helping to forge this path and already have contributed significantly to the country's democratic solutions. However, as a group, these women legislators face a unique challenge in navigating their path in the political system because of their agenda.

Additionally, many obstacles stand in the way of the advancement of the status of females, including violence against women and restriction on women's personal freedom of movement. Given the current challenges with the status of women and rising insecurity, the Afghan women legislators can greatly benefit from increased professional and leadership development. The U.S. and the international community must ensure that Afghan women can safely and effectively exercise their rights as citizens.

This amendment would also open additional possibilities to take part in an international visitors program and training through the State Department, which already maintains a similar program to encourage women in leadership in other countries. This would be paid out through the customary means for professional exchanges by the State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs.

Taking part in such programs would not only train current legislators, but encourage more women to participate in Afghan civil society. Exchange programs such as these can help raise the awareness of democratic values. These goals are consistent with the national security objectives for Afghanistan and represent an effective use of our public diplomacy resources.

I urge all of my colleagues to support the benefits of international, cultural, and education exchange and to vote "yes" on this amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition, even though I do not oppose the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, I want to rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentlelady from Texas.

The women of Afghanistan have taken great strides since the fall of the Taliban to fully take part in all aspects of their society. Women have realized significant gains in the last several years. However, much remains to be done.

Laws and regulations passed to safeguard the rights of women must be enforced and respected at the provincial and local levels in order to ensure that women make progress throughout all aspects of Afghan society. It is critical that women legislators of Afghanistan receive the necessary training and support that they need to prevent a return to the intimidation, to the discrimination, to the violence that they faced under the Taliban.

Amendment No. 25 offered by Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas:

At the end of subtitle B of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 11. INTERNATIONAL PREVENTION AND ELIMINATION OF CHILD SOLDIERS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the use of child soldiers is unacceptable;

(2) the use of child soldiers is a violation of human rights and the prevention and elimination of child soldiers should be a foreign policy goal of the United States;

(3) the use of child soldiers promotes killing and maiming, sexual violence, abductions, destabilization, and displacement;

(4) investing in the health, education, well being, and safety of children, and providing economic opportunity and vocational training for at-risk youth, is critical to achieving the goals of the United Nations Convention of the Rights of Children; and

(5) countries should raise to 18 years of age the minimum age for the voluntary recruitment of persons into their national armed forces.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Texas.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Chairwoman, let me begin by thanking Chairman BERMAN and Congresswoman ROS-LEHTINEN for all of their hard work and dedication to improving people's lives around the world.

My amendment affirms that the use of child soldiers is unacceptable. It is a violation of human rights, and the prevention and elimination of child soldiers should be a foreign policy goal of the United States. Around the world, children are being recruited by armed forces and exploited as soldiers. Amnesty International estimates 250,000 children under the age of 18 are thought to be currently fighting in conflicts around the world, and hundreds of thousands are members of armed forces who could be sent into conflict at any time. The use of children as soldiers has been universally condemned as horrible and unacceptable; yet over the last 10 years, hundreds of thousands of children have fought and died in conflicts around the world. Child soldiers are usually forced to live under cruel conditions with inadequate food and little to no access to health care. They're almost always treated cruelly, subjected to beatings and shameful treatment. Girl soldiers are particularly at risk of rape, sexual harassment and abuse while in combat. They're often forced into marriage arrangements and are at high risk for unwanted pregnancies.

As a psychiatric nurse, I have seen firsthand the effects of war. The mental, social, and emotional abuses endured as a child soldier will last the rest of their lives, and they'll never know how to solve a problem without fighting. I am eager to work with the State Department to ensure that children around the world are off the frontlines of conflicts and in schools and on playgrounds. Children must have a chance to be children in order to be healthy, happy and productive adults. We must take a stand. Please join me in expressing to the global community that the use of child soldiers is unacceptable. I ask my colleagues to vote "yes."

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I ask unanimous consent to claim time in opposition, even though I do not oppose the substance of the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Madam Chair, the Congress put the force of law behind its condemnation of the use of child soldiers through the Child Soldiers Prevention Act, authored by my good friend from Nebraska (Mr. FORTENBERRY). This was incorporated into the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act and became public law in December 2008. We further opined on this matter in the Child Soldiers Accountability Act of 2008, which became law in October of last year. However, a sense of Congress reaffirming that the use of child soldiers is unacceptable must be supported. I applaud my good friend from Texas for bringing this important issue to our attention again. It is right and just to do so. I encourage our colleagues to support this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Chair, I have no further requests for time.

Mr. BERMAN. Will the gentle lady yield?

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. I just want to express my strong support for this. The issue of child soldiers is a very important one. I appreciate your raising it, as well as some of the other contributions of other Members on this issue. I strongly support the resolution.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Thank you very much.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 26 OFFERED BY MR. POE OF TEXAS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 26 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. POE of Texas. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 26 offered by Mr. POE of Texas:

At the end of title X, insert the following:
SEC. 10. REPORT ON UNITED STATES CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE UNITED NATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually thereafter for the next two years, the President shall submit to Congress a report, with respect to the preceding fiscal year, listing each United States agency, department, or entity that provides assessed or voluntary contributions to the United Nations and United Nations affiliated agencies and related bodies through grants, contracts, subgrants, or subcontracts that is not fully compliant with the requirements to post such funding information for the fiscal year covered by such report on the website "USAspending.gov" as required by the Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act (Public Law 109-282).

(b) AVAILABILITY TO PUBLIC.—The Office of Management and Budget shall post a public version of each report submitted under subsection (a) on a text-based searchable and publicly available Internet website.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. POE of Texas. Madam Chair, this amendment would make it a requirement for the President to report annually the total United States cash and in-kind contributions to the United Nations system each fiscal year by every United States agency or department. This amendment only applies for the next 2 fiscal years.

Last year, American taxpayers contributed $5 billion to the United Nations, making the United States the largest member donor to that institution. Seeing the amount of American investment and the influence the United Nations has on world opinion and world events, it's important that Americans know how their money is being spent and that it is not subsidizing activities which hurt American security, values or our national interests.

The amendment I am sponsoring today would make it a requirement for the President to submit to Congress a report of U.S. cash and in-kind contributions to the United Nations and U.N.-affiliated agencies each fiscal year. The funding would be reported on usaspending.gov, as required by the Federal Funding Accountability and Transparency Act; and this amendment would expire after 2 years. Without the report, Americans would be in the dark concerning the ways in which their money is being spent in funding the United Nations.

I urge the adoption of this amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition to the amendment, though I'm not opposed to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. The gentleman's amendment is pretty direct. It requires the President to report total cash and in-kind contributions by the United States to the entire United Nations system for the period covered by H.R. 2410, fiscal years 2010 and 2011. The amendment makes sense. It encourages full transparency in detailing the logistical and other support that the U.S. provides to critical peacekeeping operations and other U.N. activities in the support of U.S. interests. The Members of Congress have a right to know, the people of America have a right to know, and I support the amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. POE of Texas. I thank the chairman for his response in support of this amendment.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 27 OFFERED BY MR. CASTLE

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 27 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairwoman, I rise for the purpose of offering amendment No. 27.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 27 offered by Mr. CASTLE:
At the end of subtitle A of title XI, add the following (and amend the table of contents accordingly):

SEC. 11 — ALIEN REPATRIATION.

Section 243(d) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1253(d)) is amended to read as follows:

“(d) ENSURING RETURN OF REMOVED ALIENS.—

“(1) DISCONTINUING GRANTING VISAS TO NATIONALS OF COUNTRIES DENYING OR DELAYING ACCEPTING ALIEN.—On being notified by the Secretary of Homeland Security that the government of a foreign country denies or unreasonably delays accepting an alien who is a citizen, subject, national, or resident of that country after the Secretary of Homeland Security asks whether the government will accept the alien under this section, the Secretary of State shall order consular officers in that foreign country to discontinue granting immigrant visas or nonimmigrant visas, or both, to citizens, subjects, nationals, and residents of that country until the Secretary of Homeland Security notifies the Secretary of State that the country has accepted the alien.

“(2) DENYING ADMISSION TO FOREIGN GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS OF COUNTRIES DENYING ALIEN RETURN.—If the Secretary of Homeland Security determines that the government of a foreign country denies or unreasonably delays accepting an alien who is a citizen, subject, national, or resident of that country after the alien has been ordered removed, the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Secretary of State, may deny admission to any citizen, subject, national, or resident of that country who is seeking or has received a nonimmigrant visa pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (G) of section 101(a)(15).

“(3) QUARTERLY REPORTS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2010 and 2011, and every 3 months thereafter, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit to the Congress a report that—

“(A) lists all the countries which refuse or unreasonably delay repatriation; and “(B) includes the total number of aliens who were refused repatriation, disaggregated by—

“(i) country;

“(ii) detention status; and

“(iii) criminal status.”

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairwoman, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

I offer this important amendment before us today for a variety of reasons. When a citizen or a national of a foreign country is convicted of a crime or found to be in the United States illegally, Immigration and Customs Enforcement, or ICE, officials often issue a final order of removal. While most countries in the world repatriate their citizens and nationals in a timely manner, there are a handful of countries that often refuse or unreasonably delay this process. U.S. courts have ruled that our government cannot legally hold criminal aliens in custody for longer than 6 months following their sentence of imprisonment if their home country refuses or delays in taking them back. As a result, ICE reports that more than 17,000 convicted criminals, many of whom have served time for crime such as murder, kidnapping and rape, have been released onto our streets after their home country refuses or delays repatriation. This creates a serious burden on our local law enforcement and wastes millions of dollars in Federal and State resources.

Under current law, our government has the option of denying visas to countries that refuse repatriation. However, this tool has rarely been utilized. The amendment I am offering today with Congressman DENT would provide our government with two new tools for compelling countries to act.

First, the amendment empowers the Secretary of Homeland Security to deny admission to a country's diplomatic visa holders if the Secretary determines the country is unreasonably refusing or delaying repatriation.

Second, the amendment requires quarterly reports to Congress from the Secretary of Homeland Security publicly listing the countries that refuse or unreasonably delay repatriation. These reports are to include specific information on the status and number of criminal aliens released in the U.S.

Madam Chairwoman, it's my hope that this reporting requirement, which calls for naming and shaming uncooperative countries, will assist the administration in putting new pressure on those that refuse or delay the repatriation of convicted criminals. This is just a first step toward solving a serious problem; and in the end, our amendment leaves final discretion to the administration to allow for diplomatic flexibility. I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time in opposition, although I am not going to speak in opposition.

The Acting CHAIR. Without objection, the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

The gentleman has touched on a real problem. Just as he describes it, the notion of criminal aliens released because of the limitations on the time they can be held, not taken in their home country, creates a very undesirable situation in our own country. The gentleman's addition to the existing law makes a lot of sense because it's to retaliate against the officials of that government who seek diplomatic visas to come to the United States.

The existing provision of law is very understandable, although I have a little concern that sometimes we're visiting on the spouse of a U.S. citizen or worker with particular skills the sins of the government on that individual or on that individual's American citizen family. But the gentleman has been very flexible in working with us on this amendment, and he is certainly trying to go after a real problem. I wish I had a better alternative than this, but military force isn't my answer. So I'm going to support the gentleman's amendment.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CASTLE. Madam Chairman, I would just like to thank the Chair and the committee for being helpful in forming this amendment. We had to make some changes, which I think were positive. I think that is very helpful.

At this time I will yield to the gentleman from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (Mr. DENT) such time as he may consume.

Mr. DENT. I thank the gentleman from Delaware.

Madam Chair, I rise in support of the Castle-Dent amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act. As of May 2009, just last month, over 147,000 citizens, residents and nationals of foreign countries remain in the United States because the governments of their home nations are delaying or even refusing repatriation, according to U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. It's simply unacceptable. The disconcerting detail regarding the situation is that over 17,000 of these individuals are criminal aliens who have been released into our communities and neighborhoods because U.S. courts have ruled that our system cannot legally hold them in custody for longer than 180 days, or 6 months, following their sentence of imprisonment if their home country refuses or unreasonably delays repatriation.

Detainment will only be extended if an individual has been proven to be especially dangerous by a court and a psychiatrist.

This extension has only been exercised a handful of times since being instituted in 2004. Releasing dangerous criminals back on to our streets is just not fair to our citizenry and the families and individuals who have legally immigrated to America.

That said, the Castle-Dent amendment requires quarterly reports, reports every 90 days, to Congress from the Secretary of Homeland Security publicly listing the countries that refuse or unreasonably delay repatriation, including information on the total number of criminal aliens in the United States.

Furthermore, the Secretary of Homeland Security will have the power to facilitate the repatriation process by denying the entrance to the U.S. of those holding diplomatic visas of the offending country. The administration can exercise discretion regarding diplomatic flexibility with an affected nation if necessary.

Under current statute, the Immigration and Nationality Act provides that the U.S. State Department has the authority to discontinue the granting of immigrant or nonimmigrant visas to nationals from foreign countries that unreasonably delay or deny accepting an alien who is a citizen, subject, national or resident of that country. Although State has threatened to deny visas in this capacity, it has never enforced this authority.

Additionally, the Congressional Budget Office has indicated this amendment has no significant impact on PAYGO. On the other hand, draw-out repatriation negotiations divert scarce Federal and State resources.

As an example, in one case, the U.S. Government paid $197,000 to fly an alien convicted of assault with a knife back to his home country of Somalia, only to be denied and sent back to the U.S. where he was released and fled to Canada. I don't understand the logic here. We cannot spend taxpayer dollars to remove a dangerous individual from American soil only to discover the nation is refusing the reentry of their citizen.

Congressional action on comprehensive immigration hangs in the future.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BERMAN. Madam Chair, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman.

Mr. DENT. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Just very briefly, I wanted to say about this whole matter, the offending countries tend to be about eight countries, China, India, Vietnam, Laos, Eritrea, and I am probably neglecting one or two. But there are a handful of countries that are responsible for these 147,000 individuals who have valid removal orders against them. They should be removed.

I thank the gentleman, Mr. CASTLE, and I thank the gentleman from California for working with us to provide an amendment that I think sends a very strong message that it is unacceptable that we have to expend our limited resources to hold people who should have been returned.

So, again, I thank you for your courtesy and again urge adoption of the Castle-Dent amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. I have no further speakers. I support the amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 17 OFFERED BY MR. MATHESON

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 17 printed in part C of House Report 111-143.

Mr. MATHESON. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 17 offered by Mr. MATHESON:

At the end of subtitle C of title II, add the following:

SEC. 239. STUDY REGARDING USE OF PASSPORTS FOR OVERSEAS VOTING AND CENSUS.

The Secretary of State, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Director of the Census Bureau, shall conduct a feasibility study and submit to Congress a report assessing methods of facilitating voting in United States elections by United States citizens living overseas using passports or other methods, and for using passports or other methods to count United States citizens living overseas in the United States Census.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 522, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. MATHESON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MATHESON. Madam Chairman, I first want to thank the Foreign Affairs, Rules, Judiciary and House Administration Committees for working with me on this amendment. My amendment seeks to ensure that Americans living overseas, all of whom are currently required to pay taxes to the U.S. Government, are counted in U.S. censuses and get to vote in U.S. elections.

This amendment instructs the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Director of the Census Bureau and the U.S. Attorney General, to develop a study using the passports of overseas Americans to determine how they can fully participate in future censuses and elections.

In the 2000 census, the State of Utah narrowly missed getting a fourth congressional seat in the U.S. House of Representatives because LDS missionaries living overseas at the time were not counted. My amendment seeks to help correct this unfair practice by examining effective ways that all Americans living overseas will be counted in future censuses and get to vote in future U.S. elections.

This amendment is straightforward in establishing a study to examine this issue. I encourage my colleagues to support it.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. MATHESON).

The amendment was agreed to.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE ACTING CHAIR

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments printed in part C of House Report 111-143 on which further proceedings were postponed, in the following order:

Amendment No. 1 by Mr. BERMAN of California;

Amendment No. 2 by Ms. ROSLEHTINEN of Florida;

Amendment No. 6 by Mr. McCAUL of Texas;
 Amendment No. 7 by Mr. LARSEN of Washington;
 Amendment No. 10 by Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida;
 Amendment No. 15 by Mr. ROYCE of California;
 Amendment No. 19 by Mr. KIRK of Illinois.

The Chair will reduce to 2 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first vote in this series.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

The Acting CHAIR. The unfinished business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the ayes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The Clerk redesignated the amendment.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit at the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I am, in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Burton of Indiana moves to recommit the bill H.R. 2410 to the Committee on Foreign Affairs with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. IRAN REFINED PETROLEUM SANCTIONS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The illicit nuclear activities of the Government of Iran—combined with its development of unconventional weapons and ballistic missiles, and support for international terrorism—represent a serious threat to the security of the United States and U.S. allies in Europe, the Middle East, and around the world.

(2) The United States and other responsible nations have a vital interest in working together to prevent the Government of Iran from acquiring a nuclear weapons capability.

(3) The International Atomic Energy Agency has repeatedly called attention to Iran's unlawful nuclear activities, and, as a result, the United Nations Security Council has adopted a range of sanctions designed to encourage the Government of Iran to cease those activities and comply with its obligations under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (commonly known as the "Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty").

(4) As a presidential candidate, then-Senator Obama stated that additional sanctions, especially those targeting Iran's dependence on imported refined petroleum, may help to persuade the Government of Iran to abandon its illicit nuclear activities.

(5) On October 7, 2008, then-Senator Obama stated, "Iran right now imports gasoline, even though it's an oil producer, because its oil infrastructure has broken down. If we can prevent them from importing the gasoline that they need and the refined petroleum products, that starts changing their cost-benefit analysis. That starts putting the squeeze on them."

(6) On June 4, 2008, then-Senator Obama stated, "We should work with Europe, Japan, and the Gulf states to find every avenue outside the U.N. to isolate the Iranian regime—from cutting off loan guarantees and expanding financial sanctions, to banning the export of refined petroleum to Iran."

(7) Major European allies, including the United Kingdom, France, and Germany, have advocated that sanctions be significantly toughened should international diplomatic efforts fail to achieve verifiable suspension of Iran's uranium enrichment program and an end to its nuclear weapons program and other illicit nuclear activities.

(8) The serious and urgent nature of the threat from Iran demands that the United States work together with U.S. allies to do everything possible—diplomatically, politically, and economically—to prevent Iran from acquiring a nuclear weapons capability.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) international diplomatic efforts to address Iran's illicit nuclear efforts, unconventional and ballistic missile development programs, and support for international terrorism are more likely to be effective if the President is empowered with the explicit authority to impose additional sanctions on the Government of Iran;

(2) the concerns of the United States regarding Iran are strictly the result of the actions of the Government of Iran; and

(3) the people of the United States—

(A) have feelings of friendship for the people of Iran;

(B) regret that developments in recent decades have created impediments to that friendship; and

(C) hold the people of Iran, their culture, and their ancient and rich history in the highest esteem.

(c) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It should be the policy of the United States to—

(1) support international diplomatic efforts to end Iran's uranium enrichment program and its nuclear weapons program;

(2) encourage foreign governments to direct state-owned entities to cease all investment in, and support of, Iran's energy sector and all exports of refined petroleum products to Iran;

(3) encourage foreign governments to require private entities based in their territories to cease all investment in, and support of, Iran's energy sector and all exports of refined petroleum products to Iran;

(4) impose sanctions on the Central Bank of Iran and any other Iranian bank or Iranian financial institution engaged in proliferation activities or support of terrorist groups; and

(5) work with the allies of the United States to take appropriate measures to protect the international system from deceptive and illicit practices by Iranian banks and Iranian financial institutions involved in proliferation activities or support of terrorist groups.

(d) AMENDMENTS TO THE IRAN SANCTIONS ACT OF 1996.—

(1) EXPANSION OF SANCTIONS.—Section 5(a) of the Iran Sanctions Act of 1996 (50 U.S.C. 1701 note) is amended to read as follows:

“(a) SANCTIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF PETROLEUM RESOURCES OF IRAN AND EXPORTATION OF REFINED PETROLEUM TO IRAN.—

“(1) DEVELOPMENT OF PETROLEUM RESOURCES OF IRAN.—

“(A) INVESTMENT.—Except as provided in subsection (f), the President shall impose 2 or more of the sanctions described in paragraphs (2), (5), and (6) (excluding restrictions on imports referred to in such paragraph (6)) of section 6(a) if the President determines that a person has, with actual knowledge, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, made an investment of $20,000,000 or more (or any combination of investments of at least $5,000,000 each, which in the aggregate equals or exceeds $20,000,000 in any 12-month period), that directly and significantly contributed to the enhancement of Iran's ability to develop petroleum resources of Iran.

“(B) PRODUCTION OF REFINED PETROLEUM RESOURCES.—Except as provided in subsection (f), the President shall impose the sanctions described in section 6(b) (in addition to any sanctions imposed under subparagraph (A)) if the President determines that a person has, with actual knowledge, on or after the date of the enactment of the Iran Refined Petroleum Sanctions Act of 2009, sold, leased, or provided to Iran any goods, services, technology, information, or support that would allow Iran to maintain or expand its domestic production of refined petroleum resources, including any assistance in refinery construction, modernization, or repair.

“(2) EXPORTATION OF REFINED PETROLEUM RESOURCES TO IRAN.—Except as provided in subsection (f), the President shall impose the sanctions described in section 6(b) if the President determines that a person has, with actual knowledge, on or after the date of the enactment of the Iran Refined Petroleum Sanctions Act of 2009, provided Iran with refined petroleum resources or engaged in any activity that could contribute to the enhancement of Iran's ability to import refined petroleum resources, including—

“(A) providing ships or shipping services to deliver refined petroleum resources to Iran;

“(B) underwriting or otherwise providing insurance or reinsurance for such activity; or

“(C) financing or brokering such activity.”

(2) DESCRIPTION OF SANCTIONS.—Section 6 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking “The sanctions to be imposed on a sanctioned person under section 5 are as follows:” and inserting the following:

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The sanctions to be imposed on a sanctioned person under subsections (a)(1)(A) and (b) of section 5 are as follows:”;

(B) by adding at the end the following:

“(b) ADDITIONAL SANCTIONS.—With respect to the sanctions to be imposed on a sanctioned person under paragraphs (1)(B) and (2) of section 5(a), the President shall, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, prohibit any acquisition, holding, withholding, use, transfer, withdrawal, transportation, or exportation of, dealing in, or exercising any right, power, or privilege with respect to, or transactions involving, any property in which the sanctioned person has any interest by any person, or with respect to any property, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.”.

(3) PRESIDENTIAL WAIVER.—Section 9(c)(2) of such Act is amended by amending subparagraph (C) to read as follows:

“(C) an estimate of the significance of the provision of the items described in paragraph (1) or (2) of section 5(a) or section 5(b) to Iran's ability to develop its petroleum resources, to maintain or expand its domestic production of refined petroleum resources, to import refined petroleum resources, or to develop its weapons of mass destruction or other military capabilities (as the case may be); and”.

(4) STRENGTHENING OF WAIVER AUTHORITY AND SANCTIONS IMPLEMENTATION.—

(A) INVESTIGATIONS.—Section 4(f) of the Iran Sanctions Act of 1996 (50 U.S.C. 1701 note) is amended—

(i) in paragraph (1)—

(I) by striking “should initiate” and inserting “shall immediately initiate”;

(II) by inserting “or 5(b)” after “section 5(a)”;

(III) by striking “as described in such section” and inserting “as described in section 5(a)(1) or other activity described in section 5(a)(2) or 5(b) (as the case may be)”;

(ii) in paragraph (2), by striking “, pursuant to section 5(a), if a person has engaged in investment activity in Iran as described in such section” and inserting “, pursuant to section 5(a) or (b) (as the case may be), if a person has engaged in investment activity in Iran as described in section 5(a)(1) or other activity described in section 5(a)(2) or 5(b) (as the case may be)"; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) DEFINITION OF CREDIBLE INFORMATION.—For the purposes of this subsection, the term 'credible information' means public or classified information or reporting supported by other substantiating evidence."

(B) EXCEPTION FOR PROLIFERATION SECURITY INITIATIVE.—Section 5(f) of the Iran Sanctions Act of 1996 (50 U.S.C. 1701 note) is amended—

(i) in paragraph (6), by striking "or" at the end;

(ii) in paragraph (7), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; or"; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) if the President determines in writing that the person to which the sanctions would otherwise be applied is—

"(A) a citizen or resident of a country that is a participant in the Proliferation Security Initiative; or

"(B) a foreign person that is organized under the laws of a country described in subparagraph (A) and is a subsidiary of a United States person."

(C) GENERAL WAIVER AUTHORITY.—Section 9(c)(1) of the Iran Sanctions Act of 1996 (50 U.S.C. 1701 note) is amended by striking "important to the national interest of the United States" and inserting "vital to the national security interest of the United States".

(D) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The amendments made by this paragraph shall not be construed to affect any exercise of the authority of section 4(f) or section 9(c) of the Iran Sanctions Act of 1996 as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(5) REPORTS ON UNITED STATES EFFORTS TO CURTAIL CERTAIN BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS RELATING TO IRAN.—Section 10 of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) REPORTS ON CERTAIN BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS RELATING TO IRAN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of the Iran Refined Petroleum Sanctions Act of 2009, and every 6 months thereafter, the President shall submit a report to the appropriate congressional committees regarding any person who has—

"(A) provided Iran with refined petroleum resources;

"(B) sold, leased, or provided to Iran any goods, services, or technology that would allow Iran to maintain or expand its domestic production of refined petroleum resources; or

"(C) engaged in any activity that could contribute to the enhancement of Iran's ability to import refined petroleum resources.

"(2) DESCRIPTION.—For each activity set forth in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of paragraph (1), the President shall provide a complete and detailed description of such activity, including—

"(A) the date or dates of such activity;

"(B) the name of any persons who participated or invested in or facilitated such activity;

"(C) the United States domiciliary of the persons referred to in subparagraph (B);

"(D) any Federal Government contracts to which the persons referred to in subparagraph (B) are parties; and

"(E) the steps taken by the United States to respond to such activity.

"(3) FORM OF REPORTS; PUBLICATION.—The reports required under this subsection shall be—

"(A) submitted in unclassified form, but may contain a classified annex; and

"(B) published in the Federal Register."

(6) CLARIFICATION AND EXPANSION OF DEFINITIONS.—Section 14 of such Act is amended—

(A) in paragraph (13)(B)—

(i) by inserting "insurer, underwriter, guarantor, any other business organization, including any foreign subsidiary, parent, or affiliate of such a business organization," after "trust,"; and

(ii) by inserting ", such as an export credit agency" before the semicolon at the end; and

(B) by amending paragraph (14) to read as follows:

"(14) PETROLEUM RESOURCES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'petroleum resources' includes petroleum, petroleum by-products, oil or liquefied natural gas, oil or liquefied natural gas tankers, and products used to construct or maintain pipelines used to transport oil or compressed or liquefied natural gas.

"(B) PETROLEUM BY-PRODUCTS.—The term 'petroleum by-products' means gasoline, kerosene, distillates, propane or butane gas, diesel fuel, residual fuel oil, and other goods classified in headings 2709 and 2710 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States."

(7) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) MULTILATERAL REGIME.—Section 4 of such Act is amended—

(i) in subsection (b)(2), by striking "(in addition to that provided in subsection (d))"; and

(ii) by striking subsection (d) and redesignating subsections (e) and (f) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively.

(B) IMPOSITIONS OF SANCTIONS.—Section 5(b) of such Act is amended by striking "section 6" and inserting "section 6(a)".

SEC. 2. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for purposes of carrying out this Act.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read.

Mr. BERMAN. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

The Clerk will continue to read.

The Clerk continued to read.

Mr. BERMAN (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection. I ask unanimous consent to waive the reading.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the Iranian regime is one of the most prolific state sponsors of terror in the world. Iran has defied the United States, the U.N. Security Council and the IAEA, and it continues its quest for nuclear technology. A nuclear Iran would pose a grave danger to American citizens at home as well as to our service men and women and to our United States citizens abroad.

Focusing on Iran should be a top priority of the United States Congress. Every minute we wait to address this issue the world becomes a more dangerous place. The State Department has not had an authorization bill since fiscal year 2003, and it has continued to operate. While the authorization is important, stopping Iran from attaining a nuclear weapon is far more important.

The Republican motion to recommit would replace the authorization bill with the Iran Refined Petroleum Sanctions bill that Mr. BERMAN introduced earlier this year along with LEANA ROS-LEHTINEN. This bill would impose badly needed sanctions on Iran. We feel that this bill is the right way to proceed and should be acted on immediately. The legislation currently has 155 cosponsors with wide bipartisan support.

This legislation would mandate the State Department to open immediate investigations into alleged violations of the Iran Sanctions Act. This legislation would implement sanctions on companies that do business in Iran. This legislation implements sanctions on those who supply refined fuels to Iran. This legislation expands sanctions on Iranian exported petroleum and petroleum byproducts as well as on those who helped facilitate their export.

Iran can only finance its threatening activities against us and the world because of the foreign investment in its energy sector. Depriving the regime of refined petroleum and of foreign investment will severely undermine Iran's economy, and it will increase pressure on the mullahs to abandon their dangerous course.

We need to impose serious sanctions on Iran, and we need to do it now without delay. We've been delaying long enough. The bill has been introduced for some time. I've talked to the chairman of the committee about it, and there is no reason not to move on it today.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to strongly oppose the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, what we see in the offering of this motion to recommit is a political party or the leadership of a political party that, number one, is not serious about pursuing an effective strategy to stop Iran from developing a nuclear weapons capability and, two, that is using the pretext of Iran to strike every single provision of the bill that we have presented and that has been debated on.

The very first provision in this bill is to strike all that follows after the enacting clause. Then my friend from Indiana takes a bill that I am the sponsor of, along with LEANA ROS-LEHTINEN and a number of people on both sides—it now has something like 155 cosponsors—to focus on the issue of refined oil products going to Iran. He eviscerates that bill by taking out every single trade sanction and all of the financial institution sanctions, so it totally wipes out the State Department authorization bill. They know that we intend to pursue the policy of seeing if Iran diplomatically, in a short timeframe, can be dissuaded from the course they are now on. If they cannot be, at the same time, we are pursuing efforts to get key countries to come together at the Security Council with a level of, as the Secretary of State said, crippling sanctions on Iran to get that regime to change its behavior.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. Will the gentleman let me finish my thought?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I will.

Mr. BERMAN. Then we will pursue these international sanctions in working with the Russians, the Chinese, the Arab States, and with all of the countries that know that Iran with a nuclear weapons capability is an intolerable situation that cannot be tolerated.

Instead, he jumps ahead to the third part of the strategy, a strategy on which we were going to have hearings in the month of July and see how both the multilateral sanctions and the engagement process—the diplomatic process—worked. Then, if we were not moving ahead, he would take a serious and tough bill that had import sanctions, which said that companies that provided refined oil products to Iran couldn't import, stripped from this bill; and that imposed even tougher financial sanctions that we now have stripped from this motion to recommit.

Meanwhile, all of the things in the State Department authorization bill—all of the issues that my friends praised even in the course of the debate on this bill, which they don't like, every single provision—is stripped.

This is not a serious effort. What really bothers me about this amendment is, with Iran, we should have a bipartisan approach. We tried a policy. I supported that policy of the previous administration: isolate and sanction unilaterally because we could never get effective multilateral sanctions. It didn't work. Iran kept enriching every day while we sat around, railing against them.

We are trying something new because we want this policy to work. We want to stop Iran from having a nuclear weapons capability. I don't know if the diplomatic strategy will work. You guys don't know if it will work.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. I don't know if we can get the international community to do the kinds of things that can stop Iran and enforce the regime to change its behavior in this area or on the issue of terrorism or on all of the other issues that we have with Iran; but let's try a policy that's different than the one that has been a total failure for the past 5 years.

We said we won't engage until they suspend. They kept enriching. We said we'll sanction all we can. We caused some annoyances. Most of those sanctions didn't work because no other country was serious about it. Now we're trying a different approach to get the world serious about it. Give it a few months to try and work.

I urge that this eviscerated version of the bill that I am sponsoring in this motion to recommit be defeated and that you don't wipe out the whole State Department authorization bill and the committee's work.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. I am not going to yield to you and am going to vote "no" emphatically on this thing. This is an irresponsible motion.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Well, if my chairman would yield for just one question.

Mr. BERMAN. This politicizes a very important bipartisan issue.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California has the time.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. The gentleman won't yield for one question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote on the question of passage.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 174, noes 250, not voting 9, as follows:

AUTHORIZING THE CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF H.R. 2410, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2010 AND 2011

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk be authorized to make technical corrections in the engrossment of H.R. 2410, to include corrections in spelling, punctuation, section numbering and cross-referencing, and the insertion of appropriate headings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ADLER of New Jersey). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

CONAGRA EXPLOSION OF JUNE 9, 2009

(Mr. ETHERIDGE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, it is always difficult when tragedy rocks our small communities. Yesterday morning an explosion rocked the ConAgra Foods plant in Garner, North Carolina, causing the collapse of a significant portion of that structure and rupturing an ammonia tank. Many of my colleagues here saw that on the national news.

Many times it's nice to make national news, but yesterday was not the day to make national news. Three people tragically died: Barbara McLean Spears of Dunn, North Carolina; Lewis Junior Watson of Clayton, North Carolina; and Rachel Mae Poston Pulley of Clayton, North Carolina. Our sympathies go out to their families, friends and their loved ones. There were 40 other people injured, including four who suffered critical burns. Our thoughts and prayers are with them and their families as they recover.

As usual, when there is an emergency of this size in our community, our first responders—fire, police and EMS—were quick to the scene and prevented further loss of life or injury. Private citizens risked their well-being to come to the aid of their friends and neighbors. I'm proud of the North Carolinians who responded yesterday to the needs of these individuals and their families and those who will respond in the days to come.

Our small communities are enriched by businesses like ConAgra, which provides 900 jobs in this community. This one was the largest plant of ConAgra's plants. I am pleased to learn that they have set up a relief fund for the victims, and they are working to rebuild the plant. I ask my colleagues to join me in a moment of sympathy for these victims and their families.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members will rise for a moment of silence in sympathy.

IRAN'S PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION AND ITS NUCLEAR ASPIRATIONS

(Mr. MORAN of Kansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MORAN of Kansas. This week we are experiencing Iran's presidential election. While the election is noteworthy, it will probably not have an impact on Iran's illegal nuclear program. Unlike in the United States, the President of Iran has minimal influence over the country's national security policies. Those decisions are controlled by Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khomeini, the unelected head of Iran's theocratic regime.

The supreme leader has vowed to continue Iran's nuclear program, and unfortunately we see evidence of this. Just last Friday, the International Atomic Energy Agency reported that Iran has sped up production of nuclear fuel and installed more centrifuges in advance of the election. Nuclear weapons experts say Iran now has enough centrifuge capacity to fuel up to two nuclear weapons a year.

Iran is determined to acquire nuclear weapons regardless of who is president. It would be a mistake for the Obama administration and this Congress to wait and see what direction Iran takes if a new president is elected because the course appears to be already determined. If we are going to engage Iran, we must do so right away, immediately, and back engagement with tougher actions.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO SLAIN OFFICER STEPHEN TYRONE JOHNS

(Mr. ENGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, the horrible events today at the Holocaust Memorial Museum, where Officer Stephen Tyrone Johns was fatally shot and killed, is something that should give us all pause for reflection. First of all, our hearts go out to the officer's family. He's truly a first defender and is someone who was protecting all of us.

Mr. Speaker, it reminded me of an incident just a few years ago where Officer Chestnut and Detective Gibson were shot right here at the Capitol by someone who was deranged. But the person who killed Officer Johns today was a hater, hating Jews, hating blacks, hating everybody. And it's time for us to pause and say that all people of goodwill will not tolerate that kind of hatred.

There's another thing that we really need to take into account as well. And that is, when deranged people can get hold of guns, we really have a serious problem in this country. We need to do something about guns that are out there in the hands of deranged people, people who should never own guns. This person who fired that fatal shot was a known hater, a white supremacist who served time in jail. How in God's name was he ever able to get a gun? We really need to think about this. It has nothing to do with Second Amendment rights. It has to do with sensible Second Amendment rights and sensible feelings and thinking about who should be allowed to have a gun. Certainly not a deranged person.

I would ask for a moment of silence for Officer Johns and let his family understand that the United States Congress appreciates his great service to our country. There are many, many more out there like him. We thank God that we have our first defenders and the people who are there to protect all of us.

I would ask for a moment of silence. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members will rise for a moment of silence.

AMERICAN TAX DOLLARS SHOULD NOT BE USED TO FUND ABORTION

(Mrs. BLACKBURN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. Speaker, there are few issues that divide the American conscience like abortion. There are few topics that are fraught with such conviction and emotion.

Last month the President, speaking at Notre Dame, called "for open hearts, open minds, and fair-minded words" on abortion as he pled with the country for greater understanding. The actions of his administration and this House belie the hope that the President's words implied. While calling for a constructive dialogue on one hand, on the other, he and many of my colleagues commit tax dollars to fund a practice so many find abhorrent.

This Chamber and the President seem to have forgotten that for many, tax dollars are a deeply personal contribution to our government. They are the product of hard work and often represent dreams and opportunities delayed for yet another year as we give the taxman his due. To take those dollars so patriotically sent to Washington and apply them to abortion in our Nation's Capital and abroad is heartbreaking to many Tennesseans. His administration's policy is not open minded or open hearted. It is, I believe, a cavalier disregard not only for life but for those who defend it.

HONORING DEPUTY SHAWN WEBB OF THE PLUMAS COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT

(Mr. McCLINTOCK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. McCLINTOCK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Deputy Shawn Webb of the Plumas County Sheriff's Department.

The entire department, joined by the people of Plumas County, are rallying behind this remarkable young man and his family as he battles a very difficult illness. You don't see this kind of outpouring very often these days. It is a testament to the impact that Deputy Shawn Webb has had on his department and on his community.

Shawn's Commander writes, "We here in Plumas County are blessed to have a 'Grade A' California-raised, true-blooded American Hero."

So I rise to salute the bravery and dedication that Deputy Shawn Webb has brought to his professional life in protecting our community, qualities now so conspicuous in his battle in his personal life.

I also want to salute the people of Plumas County who have embraced and supported Shawn and his family in this difficult time.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

ENERGY TAXES AND TOY CARS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, unveiled today was a new energy plan that would increase production of American-made energy in an environmentally sound manner. The American Energy Act is an all-of-the-above solution that offers more affordable energy, good-paying American jobs and American energy independence, and it is safe for the environment.

However, what the administration and the taxacrats are still proposing is a none-of-the-above approach to energy development. They call it the cap-and-trade bill. Their answer is to tax energy consumption, not actually find more energy.

Their new tax will cost the average American family over $3,000 in additional taxes each year. If you use energy, you are going to be taxed. That will mean all sources of energy will cost all consumers more money. Electricity costs will go up. Natural gas, gasoline, and even the cost of food and consumer goods will rise. Everything is going to cost a whole lot more, because everything Americans buy is produced using the energy the administration is going to tax.

Their plan is to punish Americans who use energy by taxing them, plus there is no real plan for energy that they propose. Their new cap-and-trade national energy tax will financially devastate middle class families across America. It will be especially hard on energy-producing States like Texas that are going to lose thousands of jobs.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office issued their analysis of the energy consumption tax this week. The CBO reports say that the administration cap-and-trade tax imposes $846 billion in new national energy taxes that will affect all of us. Not only that, the CBO told the Senate the new energy consumption tax will have little or no effect on the climate. Now, isn't that lovely?

The none-of-the-above energy plan and tax on business hammers what few manufacturing plants are left in the United States. It is going to send countless American jobs overseas to places like China and India. You see, both of these countries have said they are not going to participate in any scheme to cap-and-tax carbon like America is going to do. Thus, they will make what were American products cheaper in those countries. Also, if all of these factories and plants move overseas, along with the jobs, to so-called polluting nations, how is this going to have any positive effect on our climate?

At the same time, the taxacrats are trying to kill off carbon-based fuel supplies; that is, things like oil and its derivatives, as well as natural gas. There is no transition fuel that exists at this time. That is at least 10 years away. Now we are really in a fix; no new energy, and, literally, we are going to be in the dark and we are going to be taxed back to the stone age.

The strange part of all this is that the taxacrats say natural gas could be that transition fuel, but they are trying to kill the drilling of natural gas, especially offshore. I wonder if they understand that natural gas is a carbon-based fossil fuel that requires drilling to unearth? You cannot grow natural gas like corn.

Those taxacrats also want to force us all into small, little green cars that are death traps. Have you seen these things? These dinky cars are too small for people like me and too small for even groceries or putting children in these toy cars. There is no room, and they are unsafe at any speed.

The Institute for Highway Safety ran three 40-mile-per-hour, car-to-car, front-to-front crash tests each involving one of these little bitty microcars and a midsize car from the same manufacturer. They didn't even use large cars or those SUVs. The results weren't pretty. They found that the weight of just a midsize car was devastating to these micromini toy cars. These green cars simply do not have the weight to protect the passengers, and they are not safe on American highways. So the government is going to force us to drive small, battery-powered, unsafe vehicles, but they will be cute, Mr. Speaker.

And speaking of batteries, if all our vehicles are electric, where are we going to dispose of the millions of larger batteries that will be required to generate these little cars? The other side talks about protecting the environment, but this will create an environmental nightmare when we are trying to dispose of these batteries somewhere in America.

It is just common sense to do everything we can to embrace an all-of-the-above approach that is environmentally friendly as well as affordable for the American people.

The American Energy Act is good for the country. We can drill safely off our shores for oil and natural gas. That will create American jobs and make us less dependent on foreigners.

We need to use more nuclear and hydroenergy, and eventually we will, as an American Nation, develop alternative energy. Meanwhile, we don't need the bureaucrats forcing Americans into a none-of-the-above energy plan, raising taxes and forcing us to drive unsafe cars.

And that's just the way it is.

THE UNSHAKABLE BOND BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND ISRAEL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. ENGEL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to talk about the unshakable bond between the United States and Israel. I believe that support for Israel in this Congress is very strong and it is very bipartisan.

I want to commend President Obama for making that speech in Cairo, where he spoke before an Arab audience in what is the most important Arab capital and said that the bond between the United States and Israel is unbreakable. I think those are very, very important words and courageous words coming from the President of the United States in an arena where nothing has ever been said like that before from the President of the United States in such an arena.

But I want to also focus on some of the other things that have happened, namely the push in some quarters to force Israel to make unilateral concessions, mostly about settlements, but unilateral concessions, in return for nothing.

I believe that the Palestinian-Israeli problem must be settled by negotiations and a two-state solution. But I believe that forcing Israel to make unilateral concessions up front is wrong policy.

The agreement will be made ultimately by Israelis and Palestinians, not by Americans, and if Israel is going to negotiate settlements and other things, as Israel will, then simultaneously the Arab States, the Palestinians, I should say, should also be negotiating and giving up things simultaneously.

People say, well, the roadmap which Israel and the Palestinians signed says as a first step Israel must cease settlement activity. That is true. But it also said simultaneously that the Arabs must stop incitement and have a cessation of violence.

So if those two things are done simultaneously and talked about, that is fine. But this public confrontation against Israel, public demands put upon Israel to halt settlements while the Arabs or the Palestinians have to give nothing in return, is absolutely wrong.

Palestinian President Abbas said the other day, well, he is going to just sit back and let the Israelis make all the concessions. He doesn't have to do anything. Well, that is wrong, and if we pressure the Israelis to make unilateral concessions, we are never going to have peace. Concessions have to be made simultaneously.

I know my good colleague the gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY) feels as I do, and I would like to yield to her for some of her comments on this matter.

Ms. BERKLEY. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to be able to share this time with my very dear friend and colleague, ELIOT ENGEL from New York. I think he made very clear how anxious we are to see peace come to the Middle East and how we support a two-state solution that has been America's policy in the Middle East for many years.

But there is another component to that, and that component is that the Palestinians have to show good faith too—and by showing good faith, that means recognizing Israel's right to exist, adhering to prior agreements and doing other things that would demonstrate, including ending the terror and the violence against Israel—that they are serious partners for peace.

ELIOT, when they talk about sitting down at the peace table, you need to have a partner at the peace table, particularly one that recognizes your right to exist. If your peace partner, so-called, doesn't recognize your right to exist, what are you negotiating, for your right to exist for 10 years, 20 years, 30 years?

When the Palestinians show good faith by truly ending the terrorism, recognizing Israel's right to exist, adhering to prior agreements calling for peace and other measures, then the Israelis can have the security they need to sit down and negotiate a two-state solution.

They have made unilateral withdrawals of land over multiple decades, and, as my dear colleague knows, these have been very, very tough choices for Israel. They have made them with very little in return.

Mr. ENGEL. I thank the gentlewoman. Let me say this: It is time for the Arabs to step up and normalize relations now with Israel.

I will have more to say in a little while.

THE SERVICE MEMBERS FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER RELIEF ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, earlier this year Congress passed H.R. 1, better known as the economic stimulus package. Included in this package was a provision which modified the first-time homebuyers tax credit language that Congress passed last year. Under the new provision, a first-time homebuyer who purchased a home before December 1, 2009, would get a tax credit of $8,000, which can be fully retained by the homebuyer so long as the homebuyer does not sell the home for 36 months after purchase. If the home is sold prior to 36 months, the credit will have to be repaid.

Mr. Speaker, under this law, it is unlikely that U.S. servicepersons who buy their first homes will be able to use the first-time homebuyer tax credit like other American taxpayers. Because many of our military personnel serve at a duty station for only a few years at a time, those who buy a first home are often transferred and have to sell their first residence before the 36-month holding requirement is met.

I recently introduced legislation that would fix this problem by allowing our military men and women the flexibility they need to benefit from this tax credit. H.R. 2398, the Service Members First-Time Homebuyer Relief Act, would amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a member of the United States Armed Forces to retain the first-time homebuyer tax credit if they must sell their home within 36 months of purchase because the servicemember is, one, transferred to a new duty station; two, deployed overseas; or, three, required to reside in government quarters during that period.

I am very pleased that this legislation has received the support of the National Military Families Association. Their letter of support for this bill states, and I quote: "Thank you for recognizing the mobile lifestyle of servicemembers and their families. H.R. 2398 waives the recapture of the first-time homebuyer's tax credit for servicemembers who are transferred to a different duty station or deployed overseas. Moves and deployments can be stressful for military families and H.R. 2398 helps alleviate a financial concern of military families."

Mr. Speaker, at this time, I will submit the text of this letter for the RECORD.

NATIONAL MILITARY FAMILY ASSOCIATION,
May 28, 2009.

Hon. WALTER B. JONES, Jr.,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE JONES: The National Military Family Association has long been an advocate for improving the quality of life of our military family members, who have sacrificed greatly in support of our Nation. We appreciate your sponsorship of the "Service Members First-Time Homebuyer Relief Act of 2009."

Thank you for recognizing the mobile lifestyle of service members and their families. H.R. 2398 waives the recapture of the first time homebuyer's tax credit for service members who are transferred to a different duty station or deployed overseas. Moves and deployments can be stressful for military families and H.R. 2398 helps alleviate a financial concern of military families.

We appreciate your on-going support of service members and their family members. If you have any questions or need further information, please contact Katie Savant in our Government Relations Department at (703) 931-6632 or KSavant@MilitaryFamily.org.

The National Military Family Association is the only national organization whose sole focus is the military family and whose goal is to influence the development and implementation of policies that will improve the lives of the families of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, and the Commissioned Corps of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. For 40 years, its staff and volunteers, comprised mostly of military family members, have built a reputation for being the leading experts on military family issues.

Sincerely,

MARY T. SCOTT,

Chairman, Board of Governors.

I hope my colleagues will become co-sponsors of H.R. 2398 and join in helping our servicemembers gain the flexibility they need to benefit from the first-time homebuyer's tax credit.

I have also handed a letter explaining this issue to both Chairman CHARLIE RANGEL and Ranking Member DAVID CAMP, and I hope they will join me in supporting our military families.

With that, Mr. Speaker, before I close, as I always do on the floor of the House, because we have young men and women in Afghanistan and Iraq, we have young men and women who are dying for this country, and young men and women who are losing limbs in those fights in Afghanistan and Iraq, so I ask God to please bless our men and women in uniform. I ask God to please bless the families of our men and women in uniform. And I ask God in his loving arms to hold the families who've given a child dying for freedom in Afghanistan and Iraq.

And three times, Mr. Speaker, I ask God to please bless America. I ask God to please bless America, and again, I ask God to please bless this great Nation known as America.

DEMOCRACY IN THE MIDDLE EAST

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ADLER of New Jersey). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Nevada (Ms. BERKLEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, before I yield to my colleague, Mr. ENGEL, to continue our discussion, I want to mention a few things that are very much on my mind.

We can talk for hours about the existential threat of a nuclear Iran to Israel. But what I'd like to do in the minute or two that I have before I yield to Congressman ENGEL is, I want to mention the sacrifices that Israel has made in the name of peace.

When there was an opportunity to make peace with Egypt, something that had never been done before, the Israelis gave back the Sinai to the Egyptians, and there's been a peace, a cold peace, but a peace, for all of these years.

When there was extraordinary pressure to leave Lebanon, the Israelis withdrew from Lebanon.

And what was their reward?

They ended up with Hezbollah on their northern border and a war.

When Prime Minister Sharon decided that he would unilaterally withdraw from the Gaza, one would have thought that the Palestinians would have used this opportunity to demonstrate to the world that they were capable of self-governance. Instead of that, they have rained 8,000 rockets on Israel proper over the last 3 years.

I believe that Israel exercised extraordinary restraint before they finally went into the Gaza to end this bloodshed and carnage against their own people.

I understand how the Israelis feel, how tentative they are right now about sitting down and moving towards a two-state solution without any assurances. What is the guarantee, after they left Lebanon and got Hezbollah, after they left the Gaza and got Hamas, that if they leave the West Bank, what is going to happen then?

Do you want a terrorist state living side by side with the democratic State of Israel?

I don't think anybody wants another failed terrorist state. We have to make sure that doesn't happen.

Mr. Speaker, I join my friend and colleague ELIOT ENGEL here tonight to talk about one of our strongest allies, and the only longest-standing democracy (Lebanon held free and fair elections on Sunday, June 7, 2009) in the Middle East: Israel. Under attack for its entire existence, Israel has stood up to threats, enemy armies and countless terrorist attacks, and yet has demonstrated throughout that it is committed to peace and stability for all people within its borders.

President Obama and Secretary Clinton have recently renewed America's efforts to make peace between Israel and the Palestinians. We applaud those efforts. We all want peace in the Middle East.

In the 1970s, after three straight decades of conflict with Egypt, Israel reached a peace agreement with the Egyptians. The courageous Egyptian president Anwar Sadat traveled to Jerusalem and addressed Israel's Parliament, and Israel returned to Egypt the Sinai desert, which had been captured in Israel's self-defensive war in 1967.

In the 1990s, after a long and bloody intifada, after Saddam Hussein rained SCUD missiles on Israel for weeks on end, Israel once again extended her hand in peace when President Clinton brought together Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and former PLO leader Yasser Arafat on the White House lawn.

And in this decade, Israel once again showed her commitment to peace, against all odds. Despite the threat from Hezbollah in the north, Israel pulled back from Lebanon. And despite getting nothing in return, Israel withdrew from the Gaza Strip, in order to give the Palestinians there an opportunity to create a forward-looking and flourishing economy there.

Time and time again, Israel has taken the necessary steps to make peace with their neighbors, and shown their eagerness to make peace. That is why we embrace President Obama and Secretary Clinton's efforts to climb this mountain once again.

Unfortunately, though, we have too often seen Israel's gestures toward peace met with violence. In Lebanon, we saw Israel's withdrawal followed by attacks from Hezbollah. In 2006, those became so severe that Israel was forced to retaliate to protect her own citizens. Even today, Hezbollah continues to re-arm, in contravention of UN Security Council Resolution 1701, which demands their disarmament so that the people of Lebanon can live without this terrorist scourge in their midst.

And just this past winter, Hamas showed they are not interested in building a successful society in Gaza, in building jobs, businesses, schools, infrastructure, or hospitals. Instead, they shelled Israeli towns constantly, without any provocation. Dozens of rockets fell on Israelis each day, targeting citizens who were not "settlers" in "occupied territory" but were residents of areas that have never been disputed Israeli territory.

When Israel finally did retaliate against these attacks, critics accused them of using "disproportionate force." I'd like to ask those critics: would they have preferred more Israelis died in the Hamas rocket attacks? Would that have been proportionate?

And, all the while, Israel faces a growing threat from Iran, which relentlessly pursues nuclear weapons, in contravention of their own treaties, of international law and of Security Council resolutions. President Ahmadinejad continues to deny the Holocaust and threatens Israel with annihilation should Iran ever succeed in producing a nuclear weapon.

How can one nation withstand so many threats to their very existence? How can any nation hope for peace under such pressure?

And yet, despite it all, Israel has remained incredibly strong and amazingly hopeful at the same time. They have built up their defenses and protected their citizens while—at the very same time—extending olive branches, negotiating and sitting down with their adversaries.

So, we stand here together, ready to embrace peace and ready to make peace so that Israelis, Palestinians and all people of the Middle East might finally live in security. But we are also here to say that Israel has not been the problem. They have been ready to make peace at any time and are ready today. But the question is: do they have a partner for peace?

Are the Palestinians ready for peace? Do they have a government that can stop terror? Will they recognize Israel's right to exist? Will they abide by past agreements they signed? Will they turn over Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit? The Palestinians must answer those questions before I, for one, will believe that Israel's overtures will be met with peace, rather than more violence.

Mr. Speaker, Israel stands ready for peace, American stands ready for peace, and we welcome President Obama's efforts to broker an agreement. We wish him great success in this endeavor and we call on the Palestinians to do their part: to renounce terror, to accept Israel's right to exist as a Jewish State, to turn over the captured Israelis and to abide by past agreements.

And at this time I yield to my good friend, ELIOT ENGEL.

Mr. ENGEL. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me. And she makes an excellent point.

You know, Israel withdrew from Gaza. People say, well, Israel needs to withdraw from the territories, from the settlements and there will be peace, land for peace. Well, Israel withdrew from Gaza and got land for war. I mean that's exactly what's happened, with rockets being fired on Israel from the very part in Gaza that Israel left.

The Arab countries, as a whole, need to start normalizing relations with Israel. We can start with Saudi Arabia on down, to show that they are really serious about peace. They need to stop the terrorist infrastructure and end the incitement.

And you know what? Gaza, as Ms. BERKLEY pointed out, is a terrorist organization in control—I'm sorry. Hamas is a terrorist organization in control of Gaza. And what Hamas needs to do is recognize Israel's right to exist, abide by all previous agreements that the Palestinians have signed, and renounce terrorism permanently. Otherwise, why should Israel negotiate with a government that denies its very right to exist?

The United States is right in saying that Hamas is a terrorist organization. And by the way, Representative BERKLEY and I do not believe that we should provide aid to Gaza until Hamas meets these conditions.

So there are people who also say that the Palestinian-Israeli problem needs to be settled before there can be peace in the region. That is nonsense.

The problem with Iran has to be settled before there can be peace in the region. We all know that Iran is developing nuclear weapons. We all know that Ahmadinejad has threatened to wipe Israel off the face of the Earth. We all hope he loses in his election this week. But whoever replaces him is not going to be much more of a moderate than he is.

And so Israel has the absolute right to defend its security, and the United States, as Israel's greatest ally, should not be putting pressure on Israel to make unilateral concessions up front. That is very, very important.

When President Obama said the bond between Israel and the United States is unbreakable, then we ought to show that in our actions as well as our words.

So I thank the gentlewoman for sharing this time with me. I know we are going to continue to fight for strong U.S.-Israel ties.

Again, I'm glad there is bipartisan support in this Congress for Israel. And I'm glad that we pointed out that Israel has made many, many concessions for peace and has only gotten war.

We hear a lot about what the Israelis must do. Let us hear about what the Palestinians must do. The Palestinians must stop the incitement, stop the violence, stop the terrorist infrastructure and say that it recognizes Israel's right to exist.

It's not all right for President Abbas to say he recognizes Israel's right to exist. Let Hamas say it. Let the Palestinians say it, and let them mean it.

THE TYRANNY OF GOOD INTENTIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. DUNCAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, 3 or 4 years ago, if I had told people that we would be facing this year a budget of $3.6 trillion and facing a deficit of $1.870 trillion, people would have thought that I was crazy. But that is what we're facing.

And because of the terrible financial condition of the Federal Government, all of our expenditures are related, even though they may sound at first like they're unrelated. And so I want to speak tonight briefly on two issues of national significance, even though they may sound unrelated at first.

President Reagan used to say frequently in speeches that government was not the solution; government was the problem. And certainly, there also is an expression called the "tyranny of good intentions." And that cannot be seen more clearly in anything than in the Federal Student Loan Program.

When I go to speak at the University of Tennessee or other colleges and I tell them that my first year at the University of Tennessee it cost $90 a quarter, and then $105 and then $120 and $135 a quarter, $405 for the whole year my senior year at the University of Tennessee, gasps go through the room.

But back when I went to college, anybody who needed to could work part-time and pay all of their college expenses. Nobody got out of college with a debt.

But around that time, or maybe a little bit before, the Federal Student Loan Program kicked in. And the colleges and universities across the country have used that as a means or an excuse to raise their tuition and fees three or four or five times the rate of inflation every year since that program came in.

If I went into any college campus and told those students that the Federal Student Loan Program is one of the worst things that ever happened to them, they would stare at me probably in disbelief. And yet it really is one of the worst things that ever happened to them, because throughout our history, college tuition and fees went up very, very slowly, and went up at the rate of inflation or even less until that loan program came in. And now, ever since that program came in, today, tuition and fees are 3- or 4- or 500-percent higher than they would have been if we'd just left the thing totally alone.

As I said, it's called the "tyranny of good intentions." And the only way to correct that now is to punish colleges and universities that continually raise their tuition and fees at three or four or five times the rate of inflation by saying that we're going to limit or cut off the loans at those universities and colleges that continually raise their tuition and fees above the rate of inflation.

The second thing, and it seems a little unrelated except, as I say, when you're talking about matters that there are significant Federal expenditures on, all these things are somewhat related.

And I'll give another example from my own life. In the early nineties, I went to a reception in Lebanon, Tennessee, and the doctor who delivered me came and brought my records. And I asked him how much he charged back then, and he said he charged $60 for 9 months of care and the delivery, if they could afford it.

And I told him that he probably didn't get anything for me then because my parents didn't hardly have any money at that point.

But we took what was a very minor problem in the mid-sixties and turned into a major problem for everybody. Nobody but Bill Gates and Warren Buffett and Sheldon Adelson, the casino man, people of that rank, could afford or survive a catastrophic medical expense of some sort.

We took what was a very minor problem for a very few people and turned it into a major problem for everybody. Before the Federal Government got heavily into medical care, medical care was cheap and affordable by almost everyone. I started following politics and government very closely in the mid-sixties, and I remember when they came in with Medicare, and they said that was going to be the saviour of the system. Instead, costs exploded.

Then I remember in the mid- and late seventies when they started talking about Medicaid, and they came in with that, that was going to be the saviour of the system. Instead, costs exploded.

Now we're talking about the government getting even more into medical care now, and costs will explode again, and they will explode to a level far higher than the predictions of what the costs will be, because when they first started Medicare, they said it would cost $9 billion after 25 years. And now we're at 400 and, I think, $42 billion on Medicare.

The same thing has happened in regard to Medicaid. And it's really sad what we have done to the American people, and especially to the poor and the lower-income and the working people of this country in these two programs. And if we don't—if we aren't very careful, and if we don't put many free market and free enterprise-type measures and reforms into these bills, then these costs are going to explode, and the poor and the lower-income people and the middle income people are going to be hurt even more by programs that are, as I say, the "tyranny of good intentions."

AMERICA'S DEALERSHIPS NEED A MIRACLE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, in less than 48 hours the doors of hundreds of GMC dealers across the Nation and Chevy dealers will be closed. General Motors, now a State-owned enterprise with 60 percent of the stock belonging to the American people and with the directors appointed by the Auto Task Force, capriciously, willfully, unjustly sent out letters to so many of their GM dealers terminating their dealerships at end of this week, dealers who had been asked, in many cases, a few years before to invest millions of dollars of their own in order to promote the GM brand and dealers whose families go back three and four generations, some 85 to 90 years of continuous ownership of service to the community, and their doors will be shut by GM as a result of a letter. And the letter has completely changed the rules as to why they should stay open.

Dealerships that are profitable, dealerships that add to the community, dealerships that pump billions of dollars into State and local sales tax coffers, closed by a letter, without explanation. How outrageous. So outrageous that the majority leader of the House of Representatives, STENY HOYER, whom I joined in a press conference just a few hours ago, made these statements:

"Two Sundays ago, I was on a telephone call with the folks at the White House who are helping to make our policy with respect to this, and I asked them this: 'What money does it save the manufacturer, General Motors or Chrysler, if you shut down the dealership?' The answer: Zero, zero, zero."

This is the official answer from the Auto Task Force to the majority leader of the United States House of Representatives.

We sent letters to General Motors, we sent letters to the Auto Task Force, and all we get is silence. The destruction of a family business after 90 years does not deserve silence in America. It deserves the outrage of America saying, How dare you close down these dealerships when it cost you no money to keep them open?

We asked General Motors and Chrysler, tell us the reasons why you're doing it. And do you know what they say? It's to lessen competition. That means Americans have less choice. That means prices get higher. And isn't it ironic that the American taxpayer, who has paid $60 billion to keep open these companies, now will see his local dealership closed because the guys at GM want to lessen competition. What's good for General Motors isn't good for America today.

A bill introduced by several Marylanders, including CHRIS VAN HOLLEN and FRANK KRATOVIL, H.R. 2743, solves the problem. We need that bill to pass by some miracle before Friday.

PRO-LIFE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. SCHMIDT) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to shine the light on a subject where I do not believe this administration's actions are living up to its rhetoric. Whether it was said on the campaign trail or in speeches during his time in office, the President has certainly tried to sound reasonable on the issue of life, but the administration's actions belie its words.

During a campaign appearance at the Saddleback Civil Forum with Pastor Rick Warren on August 17, 2008, then-candidate Barack Obama made clear that his goal was to "reduce the number of abortions." In fact, he said that he had inserted this into the Democratic Party platform: "How do we reduce the number of abortions?"

Now, given the administration's expressed support for Roe v. Wade, I never expected, nor do not expect it, to suddenly reverse its course. However, one way to reduce the number of abortions in a way that works and one that is a common-ground issue for the American people is not to allow taxpayer-funded abortions. Violating the consciousness of millions of pro-life Americans to fund a procedure which they object to based on a deeply held religious belief, a moral belief, by allowing taxpayers to fund abortions actually increases the number of abortions performed, according to the Guttmacher Institute through research on Planned Parenthood.

Honoring the deeply held religious and moral beliefs of millions of taxpayers by restricting taxpayer-funded abortions actually decreases abortions by about 30 percent. So that is one way to reduce the number of abortions, something that the President has said he would like to do. But since taking office, this administration has actually worked to increase taxpayer funding for abortions at both home and abroad. The first was the Mexico City Policy.

The Mexico City Policy was first promulgated in 1984 and renewed by the Bush administration in 2001. This is a very simple policy that says, as a condition for receipt of U.S. family planning aid, foreign, nongovernmental organizations and international organizations must certify that they neither perform nor actively promote abortion as a method of family planning. Simply put, this policy says that U.S. taxpayers will not pay to promote abortions overseas, yet one of this administration's first acts back in January was to rescind this Mexico City Policy.

Mr. Speaker, I'm going to defer here because I have a gentlelady from the other side of the aisle, Congresswoman DAHLKEMPER, who would like to speak out about this issue, and I would like to give part of my time, as much time as the gentlelady needs, on this issue.

Thank you very much for joining me tonight.

Mrs. DAHLKEMPER. I thank the gentlelady from Ohio for yielding. And I want to extend a thank you for inviting me to have this opportunity tonight to speak on the floor about the issue of life, an issue that is very important to me.

I believe in the sanctity of life from birth to natural death. In fact, I often like to refer to myself as a person who is "whole life" in my beliefs.

This issue of abortion is very personal for me. When I was 21 and I was in college, I found myself unmarried and pregnant, and it was obviously a very difficult time of my life. There was a lot of soul searching that went on, a lot of praying. I had the support of friends and family, but I struggled; I struggled with the thought of telling my parents, and I struggled with the social stigma and the fact that I may have to drop out of school, and also the fact that I would have to be a single parent. But I knew that there was a life inside of me, a living person. And little did I know at that very early stage the joy and the beauty that that child would bring into my life. Today I have an absolutely gorgeous 30-year-old son who is married, and he made me a grandmother just a little over 2 months ago with a beautiful daughter named Charlotte. She is obviously the joy of his life right now, and certainly the joy of her grandfather and my life, too. But that's why I feel so strongly about this important issue of choosing life, an issue where there is a general consensus among American people—in fact, a recent poll shows that a majority of Americans believe in at least some restrictions on abortions, and they certainly do not support their taxpayer dollars going to fund abortion. In fact, a May 15 Gallup poll shows that this practice is opposed by 75 percent of the American people.

Now, I came to Congress just a short 5½ months ago, but I came to this Chamber to represent the American people and my constituents. Therefore, I do not believe that we should be using taxpayer dollars, hard-earned taxpayer dollars for something that faces such widespread opposition.

That being said, it is equally important that we provide the support that is required to bring that child into this world; only then are we going to be able to prevent the root cause of abortion in America and, actually, throughout this world. So I would like us to use our taxpayer dollars not to fund abortions, but to use this money for the moms and for the babies for health care and other services that they need.

I was really proud during my first few weeks here in Washington, in this Chamber, to vote for SCHIP. This legislation provides critical health services for our Nation's babies, and just as importantly, it provides crucial assistance for pregnant moms as well, the first time that we've done that in this country. What a blessing it is that we are finally taking care of our brand new precious babies and providing support for moms too.

I strongly supported this bill because of another personal story that I have. When my second child was being born, when I was pregnant with number two, Gretchen, we changed jobs in the middle of the pregnancy. My husband was carrying the health insurance through his job, and we had a new health care provider. All of a sudden, I had a pre-existing condition, and that pre-existing condition was my pregnancy. And that child was born without myself having any health care coverage. Luckily, I had a very noneventful natural birth, but you still have to go to a doctor and make sure that your child's needs and your needs are taken care of. I would just like to say that a child is not a preexisting condition; a child is precious, and a life that we need to be taking care of.

So as we go forward here in Congress and we take up health care reform, we must address this issue of pre-existing conditions that too often keep mothers, fathers, and children from the care that they need. But the first step is stopping the practice of spending taxpayer dollars to fund abortion.

Once again, I want to thank you so much for the opportunity to speak on the floor tonight about an issue that is very personal for me and for millions of families across this country. And I ask all of my colleagues from both sides to join me in making the whole life of the child a priority, beginning at conception. This begins with steering taxpayers' hard-earned dollars away from providing abortions and towards health care and the other critical services for our children, as well as our moms and dads.

I want to thank the gentlelady, and I yield back.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Thank you very much. And I would just like to say to the gentlelady, we have so much in common, even though we represent different sides of the aisle, and one is the fact that we have the joy of being grandparents. I think one of the things that we learn often in life is that, while your children bring you tremendous joy, the joy cannot even be realized until you have that grandchild.

Mrs. DAHLKEMPER. Will the gentlelady yield?

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Absolutely.

Mrs. DAHLKEMPER. I just have to tell of another joy. My second grandchild was born just 2 weeks ago today, and I was there for that birth.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Congratulations. Well, the gentlelady has me beat by one, but I only have one child, so—

Mrs. DAHLKEMPER. I yield back and thank the gentlelady.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Well, God bless you and your family. Thank you so much.

While we are on this subject of taxpayer abortions, I would like to recognize another gentlelady from North Carolina (Ms. FOXX). I will extend as much time as you need on this very sensitive and important subject.

Ms. FOXX. Well, I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio for being the leader of this Special Order tonight. And I want to thank the gentlelady from Pennsylvania for her pro-life statement and for sharing her experience with us. We are all blessed by her statement, we are all blessed by her being here. She and I and the gentlelady from Ohio are regular attendees at our weekly prayer breakfast, and I can say that it is a blessing to have that opportunity. And it just would make us all so much happier if more people in her caucus felt the way that she does on this issue.

You know, over the past several months, the Obama administration has begun to erode the pro-life protections in place to keep taxpayer dollars from paying for abortions. We know and have known for a long time that the majority of the American people do not want to see taxpayer money used for abortions, but we even know now that the majority of the American people are opposed to abortions.

I think the Obama administration is going in absolutely the wrong direction on this issue, as it is on many other issues. But they began with the repeal of the Mexico City Policy, which restricted taxpayer money from funding groups providing abortions overseas. This is something that had been in effect for many, many years.

□ 1945

Now, what they want to do is bring taxpayer-funded abortions back to Washington, D.C., by changing the so-called Dornan amendment, which restricts publicly funded abortions in the District of Columbia.

The District of Columbia has one of the most troubling track records in the Nation when it comes to its abortion policies. Not only is the District of Columbia part of a notorious group that allows minors to receive abortions, only the District of Columbia and three States have such laws, but it also has one of the highest abortion rates in the country. It is no secret that the District of Columbia's lax abortion policies draw women to D.C. abortion clinics from other States. Repealing the Dornan amendment would mean allowing D.C. to use tax dollars to foot the bill for abortions for minors and potentially for minors from other States.

It is a real travesty when most of our children cannot get any kind of treatment from a physician. They can't get a shot. They can't get a preventative shot. They can't get any treatment. They couldn't be sewn up in a hospital if they are hurt or at school without permission from their parents. However, the District of Columbia allows these minors to get an abortion, to kill a human life. And, again, polls have shown that a majority of Americans do not support taxpayer-funded abortion.

We must preserve the Dornan amendment and keep hardworking Americans' tax dollars from paying for abortions, a practice that violates the conscience of millions of pro-life Americans.

We also know that taxpayer-funded abortions increase the number of abortions done because the research has been done on that.

But I, again, applaud my colleague from Ohio for leading this Special Order tonight. And I want to say that I share Congresswoman DAHLKEMPER's philosophy, that I support life from conception to natural death, and I think that a society that devalues the unborn will soon devalue those who are born, and I do not want to see our country going down that slippery slope because it would not be good for us.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. I want to thank the gentlewoman for her kind words on this very important issue.

Before I turn this over to another gentleperson regarding this issue, I would like to explain to the Speaker one of the situations that we're talking about is the potential funding of abortions for the District of Columbia. And one of the things that I think we might forget is that article I of the U.S. Constitution says that Congress holds complete legislative authority over the District of Columbia, exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever. That is why the entire budget for the District of Columbia, including revenue generated by local sources, must be appropriated by Congress through an annual appropriations bill.

For many years, the annual D.C. appropriations bill contained a provision to prevent the use of any congressionally appropriated funds for the abortions except to save the life of a mother or in the case of rape or incest. This was the so-called Dornan amendment, named after Congressman Dornan, for the fiscal year 1989 appropriations bill that he talked about in 1988. This bill has been in place pretty much consistently over that time. The White House budget document released on May 7, appendix page 1209, asks Congress to repeal the ban on congressionally appropriated funds and replace it with a bookkeeping requirement that would apply only to funds specifically contributed for Federal program purposes.

Now, what I want to point out is this: that while the Dornan amendment was officially put in place in 1989 and was there until 1993, for a few years under the Clinton administration it was relaxed, and what happened during that time was that the funding for abortions in the District of Columbia continued and those funds for abortions actually increased the number of abortions in the District of Columbia. And the way they did it was, according to then Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly, they authorized the use of a million dollars from the Medical Charities Fund, which was originally set up to help indigent AIDS patients to pay for those abortions. So back during the Clinton administration when the Dornan amendment was relaxed, specifically prohibiting any money both directly and indirectly into the District of Columbia that was Federal money for the purpose of abortions, when that was relaxed, not only did the number of abortions go up, but they used an alternate funding to actually pay for those abortions. And that's really the focus of what we're talking about tonight.

And before I go back through my history of this new administration since taking office in January, I do want to turn it over to my good colleague from Minnesota, Congresswoman BACHMANN.

Mrs. BACHMANN. I want to thank the gentlewoman from Ohio, Congresswoman JEAN SCHMIDT. She is the head of the Women's Pro-Life Caucus, and she has done such a remarkable job for us. There aren't that many women who are pro-life women here in the United States Congress, and JEAN has done a wonderful job taking that effort forward.

Thank you, JEAN, for hosting the hour this evening, and I appreciate the honor of being with you and Ms. FOXX and with my colleagues this evening to be able to address this important issue.

I come here tonight as a female Member of Congress, as a strong pro-life Member of Congress, and also as a mother. I have been gifted to be able to bear five children, and I'm grateful for that honor, grateful to have known what it's like to be able to hold a little baby and be able to know what it's like to carry a little baby to full term. It is a thrill. It is a blessing.

And I know for many women across America, they've made decisions in their lives regarding abortion that have affected them, that have affected them for good and for not so good. And for women who are abortion-minded, who have made that decision to abort their baby, they know what I'm talking about. They have made a decision that has radically altered their life. And whether that's a memory that they've tried to put under the carpet or whether it's a memory they are still dealing with, they know in the center and in the core of their being that something huge happened when they made that decision.

And I don't stand here this evening, Mr. Speaker, condemning any women that have made that decision. To the contrary, what I am saying is that there is a way out for women who have made that decision. They can find peace. They can find forgiveness.

But we also want to tell the truth about abortion. We want to tell the truth, that it leaves a gaping hole in the soul of a woman when she makes that decision.

Many women are pressured to make that decision, pressured by a boyfriend who tells them they'll leave the woman if they don't make the decision, pressured by parents who are embarrassed or who don't want their daughter to have to deal with a baby or maybe who themselves don't want to deal with a grandchild that they're just not quite prepared to deal with. And I think part of the message that we want to give tonight is that there are alternatives. There are positive alternatives for women and for men who find themselves in that situation.

There are loving alternative pregnancy centers in nearly every community in the United States who will offer free pregnancy testing, who will offer free sonograms or ultrasounds so that you can hear your baby's heartbeat and see your baby on a screen and make that decision. And I think what we're trying to let a lot of American women know across this country this evening is that choosing life is probably one of the most gratifying decisions any woman, any man can make. We want to let them know they're not alone.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Reclaiming my time, I've been to a number of these wonderful pregnancy care centers in my own district, and it's not just offering them the opportunity of a free sonogram, but it's also offering them the opportunity to really help them, not just with their pregnancy but with the delivery and the carrying of that child. And these centers have programs to help educate the moms and the dads on good parenting skills, something that all of us can benefit from. They also work to give them a points program so, as they go through each one of their phases of education, they can earn points so that they can have a free bed, a free bassinet, free clothing, free food. It is a wonderful experience for these young women and these young men, and it really makes them better parents not just for that baby but for future babies, and it builds a stronger relationship in many cases between that mother and that father.

So it's not just pregnancy centers that want these women to have their child but pregnancy centers that reach out and help that woman and the dad with that child, not just through its birth but through the process of its natural life. And at least the ones in my district open their arms to that, and toward the end of all of the pregnancy centers, I really salute them because they're doing a great job.

I yield.

Mrs. BACHMANN. You're absolutely right, Congresswoman SCHMIDT. They are all across America and they are doing a fabulous job. They do it on very little money. They aren't receiving money from the Federal Government the same way that Planned Parenthood does. Planned Parenthood receives well over $300 million a year in grants from the Federal taxpayer. We don't see that for these pro-life centers. And these are centers who people give donations to.

And for women who find themselves in a situation where they're torn, trying to figure out what they should do about this unplanned pregnancy, Mrs. SCHMIDT is exactly right, because they offer not only just the sonogram and just a pregnancy test, but they offer clothes if you need maternity clothes. They offer baby clothes. They offer a little bassinet. They might offer a stroller, a little baby carrier, free diapers. They are there to help women at their most vulnerable time.

And you will find in a Planned Parenthood that a woman walks in and they say that they're full service, but there is actually only one option usually when you go into Planned Parenthood, and that's to end the life of that little baby. And what the pro-life centers try to do is offer women life-giving choices and to let them know they can keep their dignity. Whether they choose to keep their baby or not, they can keep their dignity, but they can give the greatest gift they can ever give, and that's that they give the gift of life to the next generation. It's one of the most beautiful decisions than can ever be made.

You've had the pleasure of being a mother. I've had the pleasure of being a mother, and it is truly one of the greatest treasures anyone can ever have, to be entrusted with giving life to the next generation.

So I think as we start this discussion on abortion, on what it means, and there are a lot of opinions on either side, but one thing we have seen that has occurred recently, the American people, for the first time, the public opinions show that over 51 percent of Americans claim they are pro-life. This is one of the highest ratings we've ever seen. Part of that, I think, is because of science, because science shows us the human development of the unborn child. And the more that we learn about the unborn child, the fascination, the intricacy, the beauty of the unborn child, the more we embrace giving life to this beautiful treasure and to this beautiful gift.

And that brings us to our subject this evening, dealing with D.C., and there are a few things I wanted to mention in my remarks. The taxpayer funding of abortion also increases the number of abortions. So when we put tax money into the equation, we'll get more abortions. And it makes sense. It's practical. And that's according to the Alan Guttmacher Institute, which is the research arm of Planned Parenthood.

The Guttmacher Institute also routinely reports showing that when public funding is not available, 30 percent fewer women who receive Medicaid have abortions. Now, this is interesting because it means 30 percent more babies whose mothers receive government-subsidized health care survive because of abortion-funding restrictions. And this is, I think, particularly important for women and men in the African American communities, in the Latino communities. In communities of color, we see a very high percentage of abortions. And I know one of our colleagues, Congressman TRENT FRANKS, speaks about this often. He has a tremendous heart, as we do as well, for unborn children in the minority community because such a grossly high percentage of babies in the African American/Latino community are aborted, and we don't want to see that.

These babies add to the richness of the American fabric just as Caucasian babies do. All babies are valuable, but what we're seeing is an even higher percentage of babies who are losing their lives in the minority community. In particular, we see this with minorities as they access Medicaid funding. If they have Medicaid funding, government funding, we'll see more abortions, and we'll see that particularly in the minority communities.

This is a common-ground issue, I think, that we can share with those who embrace a pro-abortion view and with those who embrace a pro-life view because the polls have shown very clearly that the majority of Americans do not support taxpayer-funded abortion. They don't support it. We are here to represent the will and the interests of the American people. That's not where the American people are right now. They don't want to see us spending their money when we don't have much, when this government is in the red—in red ink up to our eyeballs. We don't have money to pay for the intentional murder of unborn children.

The Obama budget changes this Dornan amendment, as my colleague Mrs.

SCHMIDT has said, to the Financial Services' appropriations bill, so the publicly funded abortions will, once again, be available in the District of Columbia. Right here where we stand this evening, this is the District of Columbia. So now, once again, President Obama is expanding abortion. Instead of making it rare, instead of making it safer, this is making more abortions, particularly for pre-born babies of color.

The District of Columbia has a record of abusing taxpayer funds for abortion. It's bad news, but it's true news. In the 80s when the District had the most permissive abortion funding policy in this country, abortions were funded for anyone, not just for Medicaid recipients.

Elizabeth Reveal was the D.C. budget director at the time. She confirmed that the District's government has a policy of funding abortion on demand and does not attempt to determine the circumstances of the pregnancy. D.C. allows minors—that's children—to receive abortion services without the consent of their parents.

So imagine that. Here in D.C., children can receive abortions without their parents' consent, which means that the American taxpayer will be funding abortions, paying for them for children, and minors could easily be brought in from other States. Remember, D.C. is only about 10 miles square, so minors could be transported across State lines and brought to D.C. from other States to have abortions paid for by the American taxpayer right here in Washington, D.C. to avoid the parental notification laws in their home States. That's according to the Alan Guttmacher Institute. According to Planned Parenthood, they don't have accurate numbers on abortions in D.C. due to women from other States coming to D.C. for abortions.

There are problems here with this, deep problems with this measure. That's why we had the Dornan amendment. It made sense. It was only reasonable. So, unfortunately, under the Obama administration, we are taking the Band-Aid off this problem and are exposing it to even more infection. The infection is more money, and we know that more money will lead to more abortions and particularly to more abortions for babies of color.

This is really a sad story. We don't want to just talk about sad stories, because life is such a wonderful story. We would love to just be here this evening and talk about the positive story of life—and it's a beautiful story—but this is a really ugly story because it's about expanding more abortion; it's about more misery for women who are forced into abortions often against their will, who are given incomplete and inadequate information and who may be headed for a lifetime of addiction, depression or of a sense of loss and grief that they may have to deal with for 10, 15, 20 years. We don't want this to happen. We want women to be dignified. We don't want women to be brutalized. That's why we're here this evening, because we really believe in women, and we believe in women's choices and in empowering women. This doesn't empower women to put them in a situation where they're forced to do something quite often by pressure from boyfriends who are careless or from parents who don't want to be bothered.

So I just want to, again, thank Representative JEAN SCHMIDT. She has a heart of love. She has a heart of love on this issue. With her courage and with her dignity, she has brought together this group of men and women here on the House floor this evening who believe very strongly that American women will be hurt by this bill. Certainly, American children will be hurt by this bill.

I thank you for your courage in bringing this forward this evening.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Thank you so much, my good friend from Minnesota.

I just want to add that, while the whole issue is a very emotional issue, one of the things that really disturbs me in the whole abortion debate is when minors have abortions without parental consent, because when a minor has an abortion, that means that child has gotten into a family situation, and they're under age. In many States, that's considered statutory rape. In some cases, including in my own district, at Planned Parenthood, which technically is in District One but is in my own community, there are two lawsuits right now with regard to underage children who had abortions, and their parents were not adequately notified about it. So the whole issue of parental notification on anything—on a child's taking an aspirin—is critical.

Back in the 80s, we know that the District of Columbia was very open about abortions. It let folks from other States have abortions. It let minors without parental consent have abortions. I don't think we want to expand on that policy today.

I really want to turn this over right now to my good friend, the head of our Values Action Team, the good Congressman, Mr. PITTS.

Congressman PITTS, would you please give us your words of advice and encouragement on this issue.

Mr. PITTS. Thank you, JEAN. I really want to commend the lady from Ohio for her leadership and for the Pro-Life Women's Caucus for having this Special Order.

You know, there are really no more eloquent voices for women and children than pro-life women. You're not only eloquent; you're elegant. I want to thank you for your wonderful statements on the issue of life and of women and of the unborn child.

Abortion is an exploitation of women and children. I remember hearing a few years ago the President of Feminists for Life, Frederica Mathewes-Green, when she spoke to the Congressional Life Forum. She said abortion breaks a woman's heart. She said there are always two victims with an abortion. One is the baby. The other is the mother. One is dead. One is wounded. We should keep that in mind as we talk about this issue.

I am very sad to see this administration act so quickly in going towards promoting abortion policies. Three days after the President was inaugurated, on Friday evening at about 5:30, he issued an order overturning the Mexico City Policy. Mexico City was started by President Reagan, and it has been in our policy for many years. He overturned Mexico City. By eliminating the Mexico City Policy, what that does is permits all of the family planning funds that go to international organizations to go to organizations that promote and provide abortions. He has given them that money. Not only did he overturn Mexico City, but in the omnibus bill, he raised the amount of money this year to $545 million to go to these international organizations that promote and provide abortions. It's a tragedy. He is becoming known by many in the pro-life community as the "abortion President." It's very unfortunate. It's very sad.

The next thing he did shortly after that was to issue an executive order overturning the Federal ban that President Bush had put on the stem cell policies, expanding the use of taxpayer funds for the use of destroying embryos so that they could harvest the stem cells and use them for experimentation. Not only did he do that, but he issued an order to discourage adult stem cell research. Now, we all know, having followed this for many years, that for the last 25 years, they've done research on mice and, for the last 12 or 13 years, on humans. The only thing that has worked as far as treating humans are adult stem cells. There are something like 73 successful treatments and several protocols using adult stem cells, but there is nothing using embryonic stem cells, which kills the tiniest of human beings, the human embryo.

Then he proposed a rule shortly after that to remove the critical regulations that were put in place to protect the right of conscience of health care workers so that now health care workers—doctors, nurses, those in health care—can be compelled against their consciences to provide abortion services, which are referrals and providing abortion services. This is another promotion, if you will, of abortion.

Then, in the omnibus bill, they removed the provisions that would have prevented funds from going to the UNFPA—the groups in China that promote abortion and that force abortion and sterilization. They now are eligible to get those funds for that practice.

I remember a few weeks ago that Harry Wu, the great human rights activist from China, who spent 19 years in their laogai, in the gulag there, presented testimony before the Human Rights Caucus. He said, in China, having a baby is not a human right. He said, if you have a second pregnancy, they will forcibly abort that woman. They will forcibly sterilize her. They will find her and tear down her house and sometimes imprison her. We are putting taxpayer funds into organizations that promote and provide that kind of service in China? It is really a terrible thing that American taxpayers, who have consciences against their funds being used for these things, are now seeing this administration open the floodgates for these kinds of provisions in our country and around the world.

Now, in this budget, in the Obama budget, he has included a loophole that will allow taxpayer funds for abortions in the District of Columbia.

The best way to reduce abortion is to limit taxpayer funding for abortion. There has been a lot of talk about abortion reduction, and the one thing that everyone seems to agree on is that public funding for abortion increases the number of unborn babies lost to abortion. Even the Alan Guttmacher Institute, the arm of Planned Parenthood, routinely issues reports showing that, when public funding is not available, 30 percent fewer women in the covered population have abortions. That means 30 percent of babies whose mothers receive government-subsidized health care survive because of an abortion funding restriction. So undermining commonsense policies like the restriction on taxpayer funding for abortion flies in the face of the President's claims that he is working to reduce abortion in America. It is very unfortunate.

I just want to commend the pro-life women for this Special Order tonight. They have an understanding like no one else on this issue, and it is so heartening to hear their eloquent testimony and their voices on behalf of women and children here in our country and around the world. So thank you. Thanks to the gentlelady for inviting me down. I really commend you for your Special Order tonight.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Thank you so much for sharing some moments with us and for all that you do with the Values Action Team to keep us alerted to issues that are pertinent to all in the United States.

When I started this a few moments ago, I was talking a little bit about the new administration and the new President and matching his words with his actions. And I would like to go back a second because I have a transcript from the Saddleback forum, which was back in August of 2008, and I got this off of CNN. And I just want to read you a couple of paragraphs so that, Madam Speaker, you understand that I am not taking what then-candidate Obama and now President Obama has said. I really want to give you the full text.

And so Pastor Warren, after asking then-candidate Obama about his views on religion, Pastor Warren said, Let's go through some tough questions, tough ones. Then-candidate Obama said, I thought that was pretty tough. And Pastor Warren said, Well, that was a freebie. That was a freebie. That's a gimme, okay? Now let's deal with abortion. Forty million abortions since Roe v. Wade. As a pastor, I've had to deal with this all the time, all of the pain and all of the conflicts. And I know this is a very complex issue, 40 million abortions. At what point does a baby get human rights in your view?

Then-candidate Obama said, Well you know, I think that whether you're looking at it from a theological perspective or a scientific perspective, answering that question with specificity, you know, is above my pay grade.

Pastor Warren: But have you—

Then-candidate Obama: But let me speak more generally about the issue of abortion because this is something obviously this country wrestles with. One thing that I am absolutely convinced of is that there are moral and ethical elements to this issue. And so I think anybody who tries to deny the moral difficulties and the gravity of the abortion issue I think is not paying attention. So that would be point number one.

But point number two, I am pro-choice. I believe in Roe v. Wade, and I come to that conclusion not because I am pro-abortion but because ultimately, I don't think women make these decisions casually. I think they, they wrestle with these things in profound ways in consultation with their pastors or their spouses or their doctors or their family members. And so this for me, the goal right now should be, and this is where I think we can find common ground—and by the way, I have now inserted this into the Democratic Party platform—is, how do we reduce the number of abortions?

The fact is that although we have had a President who was opposed to abortion over the last 8 years, abortions have not gone down, and that is something that we have to address.

Pastor Warren: Have you ever voted to limit or reduce abortions?

Then-candidate Obama: I'm in favor, for example, on limits on late-term abortions if there is an exception for the mother's health. From the perspective of those who are pro-life, I think they would consider that inadequate, and I respect their views. One thing that I've always said is that on this particular issue, if you believe that life begins at conception, then—and you are consistent in that belief, then I can't argue with you on that because that is the core of the faith for you.

Madam Speaker, I would like to repeat that because I'm going to be coming back to that in a few minutes.

Then-candidate Obama said, If you believe that life begins at conception, then—and you are consistent in that belief—then I can't argue with you on that because that is a core issue of faith for you. What I can say, what I can and do say, there are ways we can work together to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies so that we actually are reducing the sense that women are seeking abortions. And as an example of that, one of the things that I've talked about is how do we provide the resources that allow women to make the choice to keep a child. You know, have we given them health care that they need? Have we given them the supportive services that they need? Have we given them the options of adoption that are necessary? That can make a genuine difference.

When I began this, I talked about the fact that the President, when he was running for office, spoke of a concept of abortion where we would actually reduce the number of abortions, and yet as soon as he took office, he seemed to reverse that policy.

As many of my colleagues demonstrated tonight, just days after taking office, the first thing that this President did was reverse the Mexico City Policy. And that policy, again, simply says that U.S. taxpayer dollars will not promote abortions overseas and that any NGO and any governmental agency or non-governmental agency overseas cannot use that money to promote abortions that they receive from the United States.

But if this was not enough, today Congress considered a bill that would establish in the State Department the Office of Global Women's Issues. And one of those purposes of that Global Office on Women's Issues is to promote abortions overseas.

So as the President stated when he was running for office, he wanted to reduce the number of abortions, he put it in the platform of the Democratic Party. He said that if you're consistent in your beliefs that life begins at conception, that this should be recognized.

One of the things that this Congress, in concert with the administration, is doing is rapidly promoting abortions through the use of Federal funds for those abortions.

But it's not just the funding of overseas abortions that is occurring. It's not the only assault on creating a culture of life that we have witnessed both from this administration and this Congress. And it's not the only instance where the administration's rhetoric does not match its actions.

What candidate Obama said about stem cell research at the Saddleback forum, he said, Now, if in fact adult stem cell lines are working just as well, then, of course, we should try to avoid any kind of moral arguments that may be in place.

I've got to repeat that.

Candidate Obama at the time said, Now, if in fact adult stem cell lines are working just as well, then, of course, we should try to avoid any kind of moral arguments that may be in place.

Well, today, adult stem cells have actually been found to be useful in treating a large number of diseases or ailments; embryonic stem cells have not yet been found to effectively treat anything. Yet in March, our President signed an executive order overturning the Bush administration's stem cell research policy.

And the assault on life does not stop there. Nor does the double-talk.

You know, the President recently spoke at Notre Dame, and it was met with some controversy. And in that May speech—I want to read to you the context, the full context of what he said on the issue of abortion.

And he said, Nowhere do these questions come up more powerfully than on the issue of abortion. As I considered the controversy surrounding my visit here, I am reminded of an encounter during my Senate campaign, one that I describe in the book I wrote called "The Audacity of Hope." A few days after I won the Democratic nomination, I received an e-mail from a doctor that told me while he voted for me in the primary, he had a serious concern that might prevent him from voting for me in the general election. He described himself as a Christian who was strongly pro-life, but that's not what was preventing him from voting for me.

What bothered the doctor was an entry that my campaign staff had posted on my Web site, an entry that said I would fight right-wing ideologies who want to take away a woman's right to choose. The doctor said that he had assumed that I was a reasonable person, but that if I truly believe that every pro-life individual was simply an ideologue who wanted to inflict suffering on women, then I was not very reasonable.

He wrote, I do not ask at this point that you oppose abortion, only that you speak about this issue in fair-minded words.

Fair-minded words.

After I read the doctor's letter, I wrote back to him and thanked him. I didn't change my position. But I did tell my staff to change the words on my Web site. And I said a prayer that night that I might extend the same presumption of good faith to others that the doctor had extended to me. Because when we do that, when we open our hearts and our minds to those who may not think like we do or believe what we do, that's when we discover at least the possibility of common ground; that's when we begin to say, Maybe we won't agree on abortion, but we can still agree that this is a heart-wrenching decision for any woman to make, both with moral and spiritual dimensions.

So let's work together to reduce the number of women seeking abortions by reducing unintended pregnancies and making adoption more available and providing care and support for women who do carry their child to term. Let's honor the conscience of those who disagree with abortion and draft a sensible conscience clause and make sure that all of our health care policies are grounded in clear ethics and sound science as well as respect for the equality of women.

I could go on with this speech. But what I want to say is that while speaking at Notre Dame, the President said, Let's honor the conscience of those who disagree with abortion and draft a sensible conscience clause to make sure that our health care policies are grounded in clear ethics and sound evidence.

I didn't take it out of context.

But he actually said this, Madam Speaker, after his administration had rescinded the conscience clause regulations promulgated by the Bush administration. These regulations made it clear that a health care provider who would not have to choose between his or her deeply held moral and religious beliefs and a career. In fact, this is what the President, then-candidate, alluded to at the Saddleback conference that, you know, your conscience should be recognized and your moral ground should be recognized especially if you're consistent with your belief that life begins at conception and ends at natural death. And yet the conscience clause was almost immediately rescinded upon this President's arrival to take office.

Does the gentlelady wish to say something?

Ms. FOXX. I wonder if the gentlewoman would yield.

I appreciate very much what you and our other colleagues have pointed out tonight in terms of the inconsistencies in the President's position. I also want to thank you for having pointed out the joy of having children. And I want to bring up one more example of what I think is an inconsistency on the part of the President.

He has nominated Dawn Johnsen to head up the Office of Legal Council, and she is among the most controversial of his nominees. She formerly worked for NARAL and the ACLU's Reproduction Freedom Product.

She has compared pregnancy to involuntary servitude, describing pregnant women as "losers in the contraceptive lottery," and she even criticized then-Senator Clinton for claiming a need to keep abortions, traumatic experiences, rare.

She, as I said, has said that she believes that being pregnant or banning abortion undermines the 13th Amendment, which bans slavery. And she says "that there is no 'father' and no 'child'—just a fetus." Any move by the courts to force a woman to have a child amounted to "involuntary servitude." She goes on and on and on to talk about how horrible it is to bear a child.

And I think it is a very sad, sad situation that the President has nominated a woman who has these kinds of beliefs to head up an extremely important position in the administration, the Office of Legal Council. And I wanted to point that out as another inconsistency in the positions that he's taken.

And I yield back.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. I thank you so much for that because consistently since January, the words and the actions have not met the conscience clause, which he clearly took out, and yet said both as a candidate and in subsequent speeches as President that our conscience needs to be recognized and our moral beliefs need to be recognized, especially on this issue. He has really taken that away.

What we now are facing today is the change in the D.C. policy in which we are going to be faced with allowing for the public funding of abortions. Congressman Dornan's amendment prior to FY1989 allowed the District of Columbia to use congressional funds, appropriated funds, something that we have to do because of article I of the Constitution, give the District of Columbia money to operate with. The disconnect between using those funds inadvertently for abortions was shut down by Congressman Dornan's amendment. This was an amendment that has been faithfully in place, except for a few years in the Clinton administration. Now with the President's new budget, he wants to cleverly allow for the District of Columbia to use federally funded money for abortions.

I would now like to turn some time over to my very dear colleague, an individual who has been at the forefront of life issues, not just recognizing the value of a child both inside and outside the womb, but the value of children all across the world, including his fight for a father to bring his child home from Brazil.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I thank my friend for yielding. As a matter of fact, that's why I was late in getting here. I was working on that very issue.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. You are a great American. Take as much time as you would like.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. JEAN, just very briefly to say to my colleagues tonight, Barack Obama has said he is seeking common ground, and he wants to reduce the number of abortions. Sadly, virtually everything he has done, months to date, as President of the United States has expanded abortions internationally as well as domestically by executive order as well as by his embedding into his administration a virtual who's who of abortion leaders, people from the organizations who are now running agencies of the government of the United States. These are the people who ran the organizations for abortion rights. Now they're there.

The District of Columbia for years has not provided—and our hope is that it will continue not to provide—any funding for abortion, except for rape and incest and life of the mother. That language, as you have pointed out, was crafted by Congressman Bob Dornan; and it was a little game that was played for years. I have been here 29 years, and I will never forget the game that was played. The language would say, no Federal funds can be used to pay for abortion; but they would allow it because we congressionally authorize local funds, so the bottom line was, the net consequence was, abortion on demand unfettered was paid for by public funds, by taxpayers.

Barack Obama keeps saying he wants to reduce abortions. The common ground on reducing abortions is proscribing, prohibiting funding for abortions. The Alan Guttmacher Institute, the research arm of Planned Parenthood, and Planned Parenthood itself continually say that about a third of the abortions don't occur when public financing is not available. So as a result of the Hyde amendment, as a result of an amendment that I offered back in 1983 that proscribed funding under the auspices of the Federal Employees Health Benefits plan, the Dornan amendment on D.C. approps, and all the other amendments have actually permitted, facilitated those children who otherwise would have been aborted because public financing of abortion wasn't there. That's true common ground. Taxpayers don't want to subsidize chemical poisoning and dismemberment of unborn children.

People can talk all they want. The cheap sophistry of choice is that it does not bring into the visibility that it deserves the very active abortion, which is the maiming, ultimately the killing, of an unborn child. This is the year 2009. We know more about the magnificent life of an unborn child than ever before. Microsurgeries are being done. These unborn children are the littlest patients. They can get blood transfusions. Unfortunately in some hospital rooms and especially in clinics, they are being dismembered; they are being chemically poisoned; and they are being starved to death in the act of abortion, which then is suggested to be a benign act. It is anything but. It is not compassion. It shows no sense of justice; and the public should not be forced, compelled to finance abortion in the District of Columbia or anywhere else.

Mrs. SCHMIDT. I would just like to close, Madam Speaker, by saying this is a very sensitive and important issue. The public has spoken out on the fact that they really do not want Federal funds to be used for abortion. The President, as a candidate, when he took office, and in subsequent speeches, has said he wants to work to reduce the number of abortions. To do that is not to allow for Federal funds. So I would only hope that this administration would match their words with their action.

CREATION OF NEW JOBS THROUGH CLEAN ENERGY TECHNOLOGY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. KILROY). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 2009, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. POLIS) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. POLIS. Madam Speaker, we are truly on the verge of a historic moment. We're moving closer and closer to finally achieving legislation that will put us on the right path towards true energy independence and true environmental protection. Legislation that, at the same time, will grow our economy through clean energy jobs and promote an investment in cutting-edge American technology all while addressing the costly damages to our public health, economy and environment that is coming and will come from a changing climate.

The Republican Party just doesn't seem to get it. They don't seem to understand that the American people know that the cost of inaction is far higher than the cost of action. The same scare tactics and lack of faith in science and in American innovation which lost them the last election won't fool the American people. Madam Speaker, the minority party has chosen to put this debate in oversimplified and disingenuous terms, and that's truly sad. They've decided to call our clean energy future a tax because they don't think the American people can figure out the truth, that endangering our economy, our public health and our environment is what is truly taxing our Nation.

Madam Speaker, what the Republicans are espousing is a tax of inaction. The Republican inaction tax will cost our country many, many middle-class careers. The Republican inaction tax will mean harm to family farms, harm to water sources, and harm to the fastest-growing sector of American jobs, clean energy infrastructure. This Republican inaction tax means higher energy costs for families who won't be able to weatherize their homes or invest in energy efficiency. The Republican inaction tax will pass along growing debt to our children by leaving behind opportunities to invest in innovative sectors and businesses that we are promoting in this American Clean Energy and Security Act. The Republican inaction tax will mean further devastation to our real estate market, as melting polar ice caps and rising sea levels could cost our Nation hundreds of billions of dollars in lost real estate value. This Republican inaction tax will cost the American people nearly $1.9 trillion annually, or 1.8 percent of U.S. GDP, by 2100. It's time we have a real debate on this issue, not rhetorical oversimplifications that fail to serve our country but with the high-minded debate that we all deserve. It's time that we discuss what's really in this bill.

I would like to welcome my colleague and good friend from New Mexico, Representative MARTIN HEINRICH, who has a lot to say about what this bill has to offer.

Mr. HEINRICH. I want to thank my friend from Colorado.

Madam Speaker, we formed the Sustainable Energy and Environment Coalition in the 111th Congress because we believe in America's promise to become the global leader in energy and environmental strategies of the 21st century. Leadership and innovation is the hallmark of American success. In 1961 when President John F. Kennedy said that our country would lead the world by landing an American on the Moon, within 8 years his goal was achieved with the Apollo project. Today that same innovation is present in our emerging clean energy economy.

Madam Speaker, the opportunity for America to create thousands of clean energy jobs that will build our 21st century economy cannot be understated. Evidence of that clean energy job growth, a key component of our local economic recovery, is already visible on the ground in communities like New Mexico's First Congressional District, which I represent.

Part of this clean energy cluster growth is a result of the vast natural resources that New Mexico has to share. We are second in the Nation in solar energy capacity and 12th in the Nation for wind energy production potential, but we also have invested heavily in our human capital. One example of this success is the work being done in partnership with Sandia National Laboratories, which has been at the center of multiple renewable energy advancements across our country, including the creation of a high-performing biofuel that can be used in military aircraft. With Sandia's help, thousands of jobs in new energy fields have been created in our community by companies like Advent Solar and EMCORE, which makes concentrated solar photovoltaics. Just a month ago I participated in the grand opening of a $100 million Schott Solar manufacturing plant in Albuquerque, which is on track to eventually employ 1,400 people. On the west side of the First Congressional District, Solar Array Ventures is building a factory that will employ 1,000 people; and in the rural east side of our congressional district, hundreds of people have been at work with good-paying jobs on the near complete 100-megawatt High Lonesome Mesa wind project.

Madam Speaker, these jobs are part of a thriving clean energy cluster that is leading our community towards economic recovery. I'm proud to report that Albuquerque's clean energy job growth recently earned us a second-place national ranking in Kiplinger's 2009 list. Albuquerque was recognized for leading the Nation in key job growth areas of tomorrow. The potential to create these kinds of clean energy jobs across our Nation cannot be denied, and I am proud that the 111th Congress has already started investing in our clean energy future.

In the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, we invested more than $60 billion to help jump-start the clean energy jobs of tomorrow. These investments include building transmission lines to carry solar and wind to communities in need, improving battery technology, training a new clean energy workforce, and increasing energy efficiency to help our country use less energy while we strengthen our economy.

I'm proud to have sponsored the Clean Energy Promotion Act, a bill that will expedite the review of wind and solar energy projects on our public Bureau of Land Management lands. I also cosponsored the national renewable energy standard legislation that is included in the current legislation to increase our country's generation of energy from renewable sources.

Madam Speaker, in New Mexico's First Congressional District and across the country, we are at a crossroads. We can either cede leadership and clean energy innovation to nations like Germany, which has the highest solar generation of any country in the world even though it only has the same average solar exposure as the State of Alaska; or we can jump-start the American clean energy industry, spurred by the same spirit of innovation that put us on the Moon, to put Americans to work in clean energy careers, building solar panels and wind turbines. Let's choose the path of innovation, the path that has led to American success throughout our history. Now is the time to take bold action on our energy policy.

Mr. POLIS. I have a question on that. I've heard supporters of this Republican inaction tax trying to argue that this bill costs jobs, that somehow this is going to be bad for the economy. A lot of what you've been talking about, I mean, a solar plant hiring 1,400 people in your district, job growth on the infrastructure side. It certainly sounds to me like by passing this bill, it's going to lead to even more job growth in your district.

Is that what you've been finding?

Mr. HEINRICH. I believe that's absolutely the case. In fact, what we've seen is even in the midst of this recession, the good news on our horizon has been these quality high-tech jobs in the renewable energy sector.

Mr. POLIS. Earlier on, as we were walking to the floor, we were talking about American ingenuity and innovation, and we talked about what's possible with solar cars. I thought maybe you could share with us this story of what's possible. I mean, the strength of America has always been innovation and ingenuity. I think this bill is really playing to our strength as a country in terms of what's possible.

Mr. HEINRICH. I couldn't agree more. I have to say, as someone who got my degree in mechanical engineering back in the mid-nineties, I actually participated in a solar car team, just a group of college students that got together in the early nineties, built a carbon fiber lightweight solar-powered vehicle that we raced across the United States against teams from Stanford and Michigan and other colleges around the country. I always thought to myself, if we could do that in 1993, 15 years ago, a bunch of college students who didn't even have our degrees yet, then think of the potential that we have today with the technology and the real support of policymakers like yourself. I think the opportunities for science and for business are absolutely endless.

Mr. POLIS. I see we've been joined by our colleague from New York (Mr. TONKO). Would you like to add to this discussion?

□ 2045

Mr. TONKO. Sure. Absolutely. Let me thank you, Mr. POLIS, for managing our discussion this evening here on the floor of the House of Representatives. It is a pleasure to join you. I know you have been an outspoken voice for greening up our thinking as it comes to energy and the environment and the economy, three areas that are critical right now that face a crisis of some dimension, and we can resolve those crises simply by moving forward with progressive policies.

So I thank you for providing the leadership here this evening on the floor and to join with you and our friend and colleague Representative HEINRICH because, you know, you are surrounded here by two mechanical engineers in background, education background.

Mr. HEINRICH. I believe that doesn't happen on the floor of the House of Representatives very often.

Mr. TONKO. It doesn't. We are usually vastly outnumbered. So it is good for us to step back and look at these issues from an academic perspective and to respond to them in technological terms. That is real leadership. And the President, the Speaker of the House, NANCY PELOSI, leaders here across the board here in the House and rank-and-file Members have joined together to speak forcefully about just what we can accomplish if we set our sights on this innovation economy that is sparked by a green energy arena.

The numbers of jobs that we can create in this clean energy career ladder are tremendous. It is a way to provide opportunities for those emerging members of the workforce and to train and retrain our existing workforce. As we look at the opportunities out there, they are immense.

Representative POLIS, you talked about the fear and despair approach taken by some as they try to message in very negative terms the work that is being done in this area. Well, a $475 billion bill that finds money going to foreign imports for fossil-based fuels could be referenced as a tax. We might say we are paying our bills for the energy supply we need, but it is taxing our economy and, more importantly, it is taxing households, families that could otherwise be producing here in America the supplies we need with American jobs, American know-how, American intellect.

You know, as I listened to our Representative from New Mexico, as Representative HEINRICH spoke of that global race back from the decades ago, from the sixties, having heard Sputnik over and over again in the elementary classroom and having seen us in a race somewhat narrower than today's race would be, Russia, the U.S. all competing to land a person on the moon. But a vision shared by a very eloquent, articulate leader of this Nation, John F. Kennedy, allowed us to come together as a nation in bipartisan frameworks and provide the kind of energy that is required to get us to think in those positive and progressive terms, and it stretched our thinking, it provided loftiness to the outcomes, and it created career opportunities for many.

That same race, global race, is upon us today, and it is not like we have a choice to enter into the race. We have no choice but to be part of it, and the pressure is on for us to win.

When China invests $12.7 million per hour in its greening-up opportunities, that is a signal to us that we can and we must do better than we are today. And whoever emerges, whichever country emerges the leader, the winner of that race, will then be that go-to nation that will export energy intellect, energy innovation, energy ideas. The energy capital that we can build will be extremely valuable for all of our American families.

I, as you know, had worked at NYSERDA before I entered here. I had chaired the Energy Committee in the New York State Assembly for 15 of my 25 years in the Assembly, and then went to assume the role of president and CEO at the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority.

Projects that found us utilizing our wind, our sun, our Earth, our soil and our water enabled us to create energy supplies for New York State. Hydrokinetic power that was produced simply by the turbulence of the East River along the shoreline of the Island of Manhattan is there as a demonstration project, an R&D project, that as a prototype holds promise, great promise, when deployed into the manufacturing and commercial sectors.

The opportunity for geothermal, where I witnessed at the Culinary Institute of America six new dorms, lodges as they are referred to, utilizing geothermal as an energy source, and using the constant temperature of the Earth far below us was a simple and novel idea, almost cave-like in its concept, but it is providing modern-day usage. And certainly wind, solar, PV, all being utilized in New York State, as much as 1,100 megawatts worth of wind power.

So this is possible. It is very possible. And the jobs that we can create are countless as we go forward, and it provides energy security, energy independence, and therefore I believe is critically important to us, to our national security. We won't be putting our sons and daughters in harm's way because we won't be in the battle zone fighting over the commodity of oil and fossil-based fuels.

Mr. POLLS. If the gentleman will yield, what you are talking about sounds great, the great spirit of American innovation, jobs being created, improving our security. I mean, do you think that if we fail to enact this policy, that will be a blow to a lot of this activity, economic activity, security activity, everything you are talking about?

Mr. TONKO. Absolutely. And, you know, we will have to pay some other nation for their ideas. When we spoke the other day with the SEEC Caucus, of which both of you made mention, with the Sustainable Energy and Environment Coalition, the Green Dogs, so-to-speak, in the 111th Congress, we heard from the most recent energy minister, past energy minister, that a lot of American know-how and patents were being utilized in Denmark. Well, if we are coming up with this intellectual capacity and this brain power, what a shame if we don't invest it for our own benefit.

So the time is now to move. The time is long past that we have a comprehensive energy plan for this Nation. And it was one of the motivations for me to run for Congress, so that we could come here and do those sound policies that will move us into a new era of energy thinking, eclipsing us from a political generation of denial.

Mr. POLIS. You know, I think with regard to all of the great economic activity you are talking about, when we are talking about the cost of not taking action, it is not only an environmental cost, it is not only the direct impact of global climate change, we are also talking about disrupting a lot of these science and research, economic activities, undermining our own national security, all these other costs.

So it is frustrating when people try to say, oh, this costs money. Well, you have to look at the cost of not taking action, which is far greater, orders of magnitude greater, than what we are talking about here, which is a very practical way to boost this industry and create green jobs.

Mr. TONKO. Well, one of the great investments at NYSEERDA in the State context that I functioned was a huge investment in R&D. And you need to see that R&D, research and development, and deployment, I would add, are economic development tools. You are using very bright minds with clever ideas, putting that lab experiment together.

Then we need to further commit to the deployment stage. You cannot just research and develop. You need to take that success story, of which there are many, and deploy them into manufacturing and the commercial use of those ideas. That is what this agenda is about. And it is not maintaining the spirit of $475 billion per year of American dollars, call it a tax, call it an investment, call it paying your bills. Whatever it is, it is cash leaving us to help another economy that isn't providing any benefit because these are, in many cases, unstable governments and some of the most troubled spots in the world.

Mr. POLIS. I would like to welcome our good friend Mr. CONNOLLY from Virginia.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. I am so pleased to join my fellow Green Dogs to talk about the subject. I couldn't help but pick up, if I may, to our friend from New York, Mr. TONKO, the point he was making about the power of research and development, R&D dollars, in innovative technology.

Let's just take the potential power of the advanced battery research. What could that do? Well, in the automotive industry, advanced lithium batteries, for example, could get you plug-in hybrid vehicles that get an average equivalent of 100 miles per gallon. If every vehicle in America got an average of 100 miles per gallon, you would almost wipe out the need for any imported oil in the United States of America. It is not science fiction. It is around the corner, but it needs an extra investment. It is an investment with an enormous potential return that would more than return dollars to U.S. taxpayers and, of course, contribute to the economy.

Similarly, advanced battery research is desperately needed to essentially bring the solar industry in the United States to that next step. What we lack in solar right now is the ability to really store the sun. And if we could have a breakthrough, and, again, it is not rocket science, it is not science fiction, if we could have a breakthrough in advanced battery research so that we can extend storage capacity, so on sunny days we can store that energy on overcast days, especially in climates that aren't as warm as, say, the Southwest where our friend Mr. HEINRICH comes from in New Mexico, we could absolutely transform the solar industry and make it a practical either supplement or alternative for households and businesses all across the United States.

What could that do in terms of job creation and reviving the manufacturing sector of the United States? An almost endless return on a very wise investment of dollars.

Mr. TONKO. Mr. POLIS, if I might, to the comments made by Representative CONNOLLY of Virginia, and I thank him for his insight, to those comments I would add that as we achieve those efficiency outcomes, we are also cleaning the environment. We have the moral responsibility to make certain that our children, our grandchildren, generations that will follow us, do not get handicapped by some sort of situation out there like climate change, global warming, the carbon footprint, that will destroy our environment.

The air we breathe is essential, and as stewards today of the environment that we inherited, we must pass it on to further generations, future generations, in a state that is acceptable, clean and better, improved, so that we can achieve that.

While we are on the battery situation, I would just make quick mention of GE. Their corporate headquarters are in Schenectady, which is housed within the 21st Congressional District within New York State, which I represent.

GE recently announced its intentions to build an advanced battery manufacturing center in the capital district region of New York. That will provide some 350 to 400 jobs for a state-of-the-art battery that will deal with sodium chloride and nickel as a combination, adding to the diversity. There are lithium-ion batteries that are spoken of and other sorts of batteries that are being encouraged. This provides for diversity, which is sound for our mix. It is good for our energy choices.

That battery will be able to be used for heavy vehicles. That is important. It can be used for intermittent energy storage, and it can be utilized also for energy generation.

So the transportation sector, the energy generation and energy storage areas can all be addressed by this battery innovation. That is the key that can unlock the door to immense potential and opportunities of all kinds.

So we are at the cusp, I believe, of tremendous discoveries here that will allow us to compete effectively in this global race to be the energy go-to nation.

Mr. POLIS. When we hear about all these wonderful things, battery storage technologies, jobs being created in New Mexico and New York, clean electric vehicles, what we are talking about and the nexus to why this is important and what American families need to know is the American Clean Energy and Security Act is the enabling law that allows all of this to occur. All of this great stuff that we are talking about, the job creation, the clean cars, the storage, this will all be dealt a huge blow if Congress fails to act. That is why the stakes for this debate are so important.

Mr. HEINRICH. You know, I think this whole issue of research and development is absolutely critical, because we have fallen behind the entire world in things that we were at the very front edge of just a few years ago. We can do so much better. And when you look around at the American innovation in New York, in New Mexico, in Virginia and Colorado, there is no more innovative people in the world than the American entrepreneur.

You know, I was lucky to have the majority leader visit my district last year, so I took him out to Sandia National Labs, one of the places involved in basic research and development, that is rebuilding our energy economy and pushing us forward to the leadership position in the world that we deserve.

One of the things that we looked at Sandia National Labs was actually a process where they take solar energy and a carbon dioxide feedstock, what is currently a problem, it is pollution, it is warming our planet, and utilize that to make liquid fuels, high-density energy fuels that can then be used as an energy storage medium, just like the advanced batteries you were talking about.

There are people doing research today on a much more efficient method of hydrolysis that would then utilize hydrogen as the output, basically do in the energy field what trees do every day, take sunlight and then store that as energy in a way that you can use.

Take sunlight, and then store that as energy in a way that you can use. And if any country in the world should be leading these efforts, it's the United States. And it's time for us to take back our rightful position, leading the world on the future of clean jobs. But we can only do that through changes in policy. If we sit back and watch as the battery research moves to Korea and Japan and other places, we will be buying the advanced vehicles from those countries. And instead, we need to be supporting the advance battery research that's being done in places like New York.

In my own home district we were doing research on batteries at Sandia National Laboratories to make sure that we do a better job increasing the density and the safety of these things. So, this is a huge opportunity for us.

As you said, it's a job creator. And the cost, the opportunity cost of not acting, really hits us in the West, I think, probably more than anyplace except for maybe where you have a coast line. We are reliant for our economy on water, on the water that falls as snow pack, just like it does in your district in Colorado, Congressman POLIS, and that water flows down hills and it runs our farms and it runs our factories. It keeps our rivers alive.

And yet we have seen a dramatic decrease in the amount of snow pack that actually reaches places like Albuquerque because it's evaporating earlier, you know, temperatures are rising. The Tehemas Mountains in New Mexico have seen something like a seven-plus degree Fahrenheit swing in temperatures over time. That's impacting forest fires. It's less water for all of us to use for economic activity. And so the cost of not doing anything, of not implementing this bill, which is basically an Apollo project for energy independence and jobs in this country, is so much greater than the cost of acting.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. If my colleague would yield, because the point you've both been making about the need for that competitive edge for American industry is really underscored by the various American companies that, in fact, have endorsed this legislation. Let's just take the automotive sector. Ford, Chrysler, GM, John Deere, Caterpillar have all endorsed this legislation. There's a reason for that. They understand that to stand still with existing technology is not going to cut it. They're going to continue to lose market share, and they're going to lose to foreign competition.

If I may, I'd just like to read into the RECORD some of the other companies, especially in the energy sector. And the reason I want to read these names into the RECORD is because so often we hear from our friends on the other side of the aisle, this is going to destroy American business as we know it. Well, that would come as news to the following list of companies who've enthusiastically endorsed this specific bill. Duke Energy, coal, by the way, represents 75 percent of Duke's portfolio. American Electric Power; Edison Electric Institute; Exelon; PG&E Corporation; FPL Group in Florida; Entergy; Austin Energy; Constellation Energy;

Seattle City Light; Public Service Enterprise; P&M resources in New Mexico, Mr. HEINRICH; Shell Oil; Conoco; BP America; Entergy Energy; GE; Alcoa; Dupont; Dow Chemical; Johnson & Johnson; Rio Tinto; Siemens; National Venture Capital Association.

These are American companies that understand the point you were making a little bit earlier, Mr. POLIS, that to stand still is to lose ground; and that actually, we have an enormous opportunity here to regain America's competitive edge, create jobs and, once again, lead the world in innovative technologies and techniques. But we've got to make that initial step. This bill creates that framework.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. CONNOLLY, you know, one of the things that Mr. HEINRICH talked about, he said, you know, if these jobs aren't created here, they're going to be created elsewhere. The research will be done elsewhere. The fact that the American industry, the companies that you recognize, who are, many of them American-based companies, feel that this is good policy. These are global problems we're facing. Some way or other the world is going to need to wean itself off fossil fuels. Don't you think that this policy helps make sure that those solutions happen here in this country?

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Absolutely. And the bill takes care, where there are trade-sensitive and energy-intensive sensitive industries, to give them a transition period of time, in some cases a very generous transition period of time in which to get themselves competitive again.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. TONKO.

Mr. TONKO. Sometimes the issue comes across in such a complex picture that it's difficult for people to get their arms around what the discussion is all about. To repeat what I mentioned earlier about the hundreds of billions of dollars that we have been spending that go to foreign nations that import to us these fossil-based fuels, we need to see this as an embracing of the American intellect, to take ideas that are there shelf-ready and put them to work for us. It's, quite simply, American power to power America. It is providing our opportunity to utilize the American workforce to produce this power that then powers this country to do all that it needs to do.

It provides great opportunities for manufacturing sectors, and for our business communities, small and large, because I witness firsthand what happens when we retrofit these facilities, even our dairy farms in New York State, with state-of-the-art opportunities for efficiency. Where you need to use fuel for the power that you're using, let's use it efficiently. That's good for the environment; it's good for the economy. It's good for the energy equation.

But in many cases we'll be able to produce that power we need with no fuel cost. So the $475 billion that has been spent annually that goes outside this Nation's boundaries is a fuel cost. We won't have that fuel cost when we benignly utilize our wind, our sun, our soil and our water.

And I think that's an effective way to approach a situation where we allow for the brain power of this country that is invested in, when people choose their career paths. We want to make certain that all that investment in the classroom and on the college campuses and in the private sector through its R&D opportunities of workforce training and development, we want to put that to work here. And we have those available solutions. We need to go forward with that sort of concept.

And, again, it takes a vision. I believe this public, the American public, joins in the efforts when a vision is painted for them. It's been painted in bold green measure by President Obama. His administration is taking us to a new level of thinking. The Speaker of the House, the leadership in this House, the Members, the rank and file Members of the majority know this is the right thing to do. And it takes that boldness of vision and that determination, the integrity to move us to this new economy, and it will happen.

Mr. POLIS. So what you're saying is, you know, rather than, we're sending hundreds of billions of dollars a year to Saudi Arabia, to the Arab countries, to Venezuela. That money is gone from America when it's gone. And we send it over there and that's fueling their economy. We can recapture some of that money here and create clean energy here.

Mr. TONKO. Absolutely. Mr. POLIS, I would add this: As Representative in Colorado, like any of us as Representatives, we have seen far too many of our sons and daughters lost in the efforts to, in our involvement in the Mid East. Some of this money is going to those nations that we are now fighting against with the war on terrorism and the war in the Mid East. And so it really behooves us to think in newer terms, in bolder terms, in ways that build our independence, our security and our national security, which is critically important to us as we speak.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. HEINRICH.

Mr. HEINRICH. That word, independence, I think, is absolutely critical because this legislation will give us the independence that, as Americans, we crave. And I can say, you know, one of the pieces of this is renewable energy portfolio standard, something that says all the utilities are going to create a certain portion of their power from renewable and clean sources, we've had that for a number of years in New Mexico; and it's worked remarkably well. In concert with photovoltaic technology, this spring, you know, starting March or April, I started getting a credit from P&M resources that you mentioned earlier because I've got solar panels tied into the system, and during the day when we're not home, we're selling power back to the grid at the very time when everybody's turning on their air conditioner. It is innovative solutions like that that are already working in so many places that are going to give people freedom from those energy bills and independence from this international and foreign oil that sucks so much money out of our economy in the United States.

Mr. POLIS. You know, and a good point you raise, you're right. New Mexico and also my home State of Colorado have really been leaders in terms of instituting renewable energy standards, also instituting incentives for solar technology. You know, at our State level and probably yours, the opponents made the same arguments. They said, oh, this is going to drive jobs out of Colorado and New Mexico. This is going to hurt the economy.

Well, here we are several years down the road. This has made both of our economies stronger. I mean, isn't this a great success story in New Mexico?

Mr. HEINRICH. Absolutely. And always better to be the leader that's creating jobs than the State or the country that's following and watching those jobs go someplace else.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. I might add to the point you're making, Mr. POLIS, in my State of Virginia, for example, we have a gubernatorial election going on right now, and one of the candidates, the Republican nominee, has talked about drill now, right off the shore of Virginia. Maybe that makes sense; maybe it doesn't. But the wind power potential off the shore of Virginia dwarfs any estimates of what possible oil and gas reserves there might be offshore and could create jobs and could actually make Virginia an enormous net exporter to the Northeast and the Mid-Atlantic of a renewable source of energy forever.

Mr. POLIS. You know, Colorado is in this boat and I think New Mexico too. We are blessed with some natural resources, with natural gas and with oil. And I have to tell you, it's a mixed blessing.

First of all, it's highly cyclical. We've been through several cycles in Colorado where there's been oil boom times. Everybody was riding high. Three years later the price crashes: everybody's out of work, everybody's looking for work.

We are also using a nonrenewable energy source. You take it out of the ground, it's gone. We're also destroying one of our other revenue sources, and it's frequently at odds with the tourism industry, with preserving our natural heritage of great value to Colorado residents, the quality of life that attracts people to New Mexico and Colorado in the first place.

I mean, you know, we can have and we do have now, thanks to the leadership in our State of Governor Ritter and, in fact, the leadership of our voters who passed a number of these initiatives overwhelmingly. The renewable energy standard was passed by Colorado voters with over 60 percent of the vote. They didn't buy the arguments of the other side. It's even more popular today, 5 years down the road, than it was at the time because people have seen that effect. We can have a more stable economy. We can create jobs, and we can promote a clean environment all at the same time.

Mr. TONKO. Representative POLIS, I believe that even T. Boone Pickens has said we are not going to drill our way out of this given crisis. This energy crisis needs to be addressed in a constructive way. The constructive way reminds us that there are ways to produce power, as you suggest, without a fuel cost. And then our fuel of choice needs to be energy efficiency. That plant which we never built simply because we have reduced demand by a given order of megawatts is then allowing us to avoid the construction of a larger facility. And we can do that.

When you look at the size of this Nation, the population, the business sector, any 1 percent of improvement translates into a huge supply, as Representative CONNOLLY mentioned earlier, of power saved. And the demand side of the equation was not addressed by the previous administration. It was supply, supply, supply: How much more can we create and let people consume? We have some of the most gluttonous consumption in the entire world. And we know that there are ways to allow us to be more efficient and to provide those savings by addressing demand-side solutions. And I think that's where this plan is taking us also.

Mr. POLIS. I'm really happy that my good friend Mr. TONKO from New York brought up the demand side in conserving energy. There are many Federal energy efficiency provisions that are part of the American Clean Energy and Security Act. And in terms of what they mean to American families, the estimates are that American families will save $750 per year per household within 10 years because of the energy efficiency provisions of this bill. You know, what would you do with another $750 a year? That is the savings the average American family will have as a result of the energy efficiencies presented in this bill.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Would my colleague yield on that point, because that's such a good point you're bringing up, Mr. POLIS, because we hear from the other side, seemingly deliberate misinformation on the floor of this House. And the figure constantly cited is a little over $3,100; this is going to cost everybody $3,100 a year. The opposite is true, as you just indicated. There's a new study the American Council for Energy Efficient Economy just issued that says that the Federal energy efficiency provisions in this bill will, in fact, save $750 per household by 2020, as you indicated, and $3,900 per household by 2030. So maybe our Republican colleagues just have their numbers inverted.

I might point out that that magical figure of $3,100 per year that they cite, and derive this bill as a cap-and-tax bill, not a cap-and-trade bill, is based on a study done by an MIT professor—a rather obscure study. And interestingly, that professor, the author of that study, has written the Republican leadership of this body objecting to the use of this study, saying they vastly overstate any potential costs that in fact might accrue to consumers. And it is based on faulty analysis as well.

The provisions of this bill are carefully drafted so that any increase in utility costs, for example, that aren't already protected by the provisions in the bill would not be allowed to be passed on to consumers. It is patently false. And talk about not reading the bill; clearly our friends on the other side of the aisle either haven't read the bill or choose to ignore the facts therein. But there are carefully crafted provisions that not only protect consumers, but as our colleague, Mr. POLIS, indicated, and as this recent study indicates, will in fact save, not cost, consumers hundreds of dollars—and ultimately thousands of dollars—every year.

Mr. POLIS. Well, $3,900 in 20 years, and in 10 years, $750. I mean, that is a lot of money for American families that this bill saves right there.

Mr. TONKO. And also, Representative POLIS, I think it's important to note that controlling your destiny when it comes to energy choices, having those American options available, having the production here domestically enhanced, having the efficiency tools that we require, not only utilized that are shelf-ready, but to develop additional product lines that can create these, given opportunities, smart meters in which we invested this year with the stimulus package, with the Recovery Act, are a great way to provide for control over your energy consumption and your bills, to utilize off-peak where possible, and to have a smarter opportunity presented for us as consumers. That's all available with technology today.

And as we further develop these packages that will enable consumers to control their energy destiny, it's a great thing as we develop this American power to power America. It's a wonderful concept.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Would my colleague yield just for a moment on that? Because this same study that Mr. POLIS and I are referring to, I just want to read a paragraph that addresses the very point you're making, Mr. TONKO.

It says, In total, the energy-efficiency provisions of H.R. 2454 could reduce U.S. energy use by 4.4 quadrillion BTUs by 2020. These energy-efficiency savings are more than the annual use of 47 of the 50 States, including your home State of New York. Moreover, such savings will avoid 293 million metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions by 2020, the equivalent—this is astounding—of taking 49 million automobiles off the road every year. By 2030, these energy efficiency savings go to 11 quadrillion BTUs, accounting for about 10 percent of projected U.S. energy use that year.

This is incredible. And that's what you're getting at, that there are other efficiencies that can be achieved by this bill that, by the way, also will lead to innovation, job creation, and savings for consumers we haven't even calculated.

Mr. HEINRICH.

Mr. HEINRICH. I think what my friend from Virginia is describing is actually a very conservative position. And I think that one of the ironies in all of this is when you realize that we have nonrenewable resources and they're very valuable—they cost us billions and billions of dollars in our economy—to use less of them, to stretch those out and to utilize them more effectively, that is a fundamentally conservative position, not to waste the resources that God has given us, but to utilize them as efficiently as we possibly can.

You know, I remember during the campaign of 2008 there was this whole issue of the tire gauge, and hearing Rush Limbaugh just make fun of this idea that a tire gauge could be of any value at all. And when you think about the fact that we will fight like dogs and cats in this Chamber over this little postage stamp of oil and gas in the North Slope of Alaska, the same amount of which could be conserved in a few years if people would use those tire gauges, that is, I think, a fundamental irony in all of this.

We're going to continue to use oil and gas; we're probably going to continue to use coal for a number of years. We should use those nonrenewable resources as conservatively as we possibly can.

Mr. TONKO. Absolutely. And, Representative POLIS, I would go back to an earlier statement that I made. We're all talking about how we can improve our economy, address our energy crisis, address our environmental crisis, but at the same time, we need to bear in mind that this is the way we draw attention to this Nation and her intellectual capacity, where we become the exporter of energy thinking, of energy ideas, of innovation. This is the strengthening of the economy.

As people invest in this economy, in the American know-how, we then become even stronger as we develop the solutions for our air that we breathe, the water that we drink, and certainly the soil that we utilize for our own opportunities and routine opportunities throughout life. We can then become this go-to nation, which is as critical today, if not more critical, than the space race was in the Sixties, which we won because we committed to thinking in new terms, in bolder terms.

Change is not easy. Change is not easy to get our arms around. But change is what we ought to be about as leaders of legislative policy that can then take this country into new orders of job development and energy policy.

Mr. POLIS. The American Clean Energy and Security Act will help make sure that a lot of this technology is created here. We all worry about the trade deficit. It seems like America doesn't make anything anymore. It seems like we're importing everything from all over the world. Well, here is our opportunity to start making things again.

I visited a company in my district 2 weeks ago. They got a big order from China for solar panels. They are exporting solar panels from Colorado to China.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Mr. POLIS, right on message, I visited a company in my district the other day that manufactures microchips. That market is very cyclical. And the manufacturing capacity in the United States has shrunk and shrunk and shrunk. They had a factory they had to close in the Midwest. They are retrofitting, and they are going to make solar panels at this factory should we pass this bill. They are waiting for this bill to pass, and almost overnight they are going to start to manufacture solar panels.

Mr. TONKO. And I will add, if I may, that there are those industries that are energy intensive and trade intensive. And those are the focal points that we can provide where there needs to be this assistance—if you can produce something at less cost, which becomes a reality if you provide energy retrofits that make it more efficient, some of these industries that are energy intensive, when improved upon, where you utilize, as Representative HEINRICH said, your resources more wisely and effectively, that produces a lower cost of production of that given product and so it makes you more competitive in the global marketplace.

Mr. POLIS. So you're saying that it's going to create a lot of jobs. But there is a family out there, and let's say they're a steelworker, let's say they are working in some of these industries; we can reassure them that this won't hurt their competitiveness in the global environment at all. That has been dealt with in this bill, right?

Mr. HEINRICH. I think not only on the steel front will it help their competitiveness, the way it's structured actually rewards them for being more efficient. We produce steel in this country with far less of a carbon footprint than they do in China. And one of the things that the incentives in this legislation does is it will incentivize spending money on capital investment that will continue to bring down the carbon footprint and increase the efficiency, making steel in this country more competitive worldwide in a way that is even compliant with the WTO. So we will actually be improving the competitiveness of the American steel industry instead of, once again, shipping those jobs and ceding them to another country.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. And to the point you're making, Mr. HEINRICH, and yours, Mr. POLIS, the legislation specifically addresses the steel and cement industries and provides them a very generous transition through the year 2025. Thereafter, the President could still extend that transition should he or she decide it's warranted. And if he or she decides it's not, it's phased out, but on a maximum of 10 percent per year. So it is a very generous set of circumstances to make sure that our domestic steel industry and our domestic cement-producing industries have the requisite period of time in which to make this transition.

Mr. POLIS. And as Mr. HEINRICH pointed out, along the way they actually have an incentive; they actually get paid. They earn money if they find more energy-efficient ways to produce these metals, which of course they're going to.

Again, American ingenuity, as Mr. TONKO talked about. There is no problem that's created that Yankee ingenuity can't solve. And technology has been a great force of growth for this country. And Mr. CONNOLLY pointed out, you know what? They probably will be there with the right incentives by 2025. Not only will this bill help create a whole new green tech and manufacture and research base, but it can also be the salvation of some of our existing manufacturing jobs by showing them the way to do it more cleanly and actually providing an economic incentive that is actually money in the pockets of workers and companies manufacturing in this country by being ahead of the curve and ending their reliance on fossil fuels.

Mr. TONKO. And Representative POLIS, if I might, as we choose to speak to this green energy thinking, our actions, the vision shared with this Nation will percolate into all sorts of layers, even reach our youngest population where in the classroom they may be inspired to move into these careers. We need to encourage that sort of outcome. We need to encourage our more technically sophisticated workers of the future. And it could start as early as the elementary years when they hear the discussion out there—when they don't hear the denial, when they don't have the deception, but when they get the facts brought to them. When they see the potential out there that exists today and that can grow into the future, that can't help but spark the interest.

How many young people were watching the first step on the moon? How many young people then chose to be scientists and engineers to go along that path? Our community colleges that are there as the campus of choice in so many communities, where they can train and retrain a workforce to become those stewards of the environment, that will help us in this agenda to be most energy efficient and to grow R&D opportunities in the lab.

This is a tremendous opportunity to inspire our Nation, to lift us from the doldrums of an energy environment and economic crisis that has really hampered a lot of progress for this country and has denied competitiveness for our manufacturing base.

Mr. HEINRICH. This really is our generation's Apollo Project. It is the greatest challenge of our generation. And we intend to meet it and not cede that leadership to someone else.

And the words that keep coming up over and over again, when you discuss these issues, independence, ingenuity, entrepreneurship, conservation, I mean, those are things that this Nation was built upon, and we certainly cannot turn our back on them now.

Mr. POLIS. You know, and again, what started this whole discussion is the cost of inaction, and we're talking about the benefits of action. And I think we've made that case; I mean, when it's 750 bucks a year in your family's pocket, whether it's extra jobs being created or whether it's us exporting technology to China and Europe, I mean, these are the benefits. And when we look at the cost side, that cost side is skewed towards not taking any action.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Boy, are you right, Mr. POLIS. You know, I listen sometimes to the rhetoric of our friends on the other side of the aisle, and they never talk about that. They never talk about the fact that the cost of inaction to the automotive industry is the utter collapse of any automotive manufacturing capacity in the United States. They don't talk about the challenge of power generation. They don't talk about the extraction industries. They don't talk about what it means to any other kind of manufacturing capacity.

For that matter, technology today, the industry that dominates my district, the information technology industry, is dependent on a reliable source of energy. And they understand that reliable source of energy needs to be, if we are going to stay competitive with foreign competition in the technology sector, a renewable source of energy.

Mr. POLIS. As Mr. TONKO pointed out, another cost which we never hear the folks on the other side talking about, a cost of our reliance on oil, over $800 billion with the war in Iraq. Our foreign adventures in the Middle East, even absent the first war in Kuwait that we had to liberate Kuwait, the new war in Iraq, our ongoing presence in the region, these are all costs that the American taxpayers are paying. Where is the outrage from the other side of the aisle, as stewards of our taxpayer dollars, about all that money that is built into our reliance on foreign oil? That is all money that is leaving our country, never to be seen again. Not only are we sending all of our money to buy barrels of oil from Saudi Arabia, we are sending our young men and women, our brothers and sisters over there to risk their lives for those barrels of oil that we have coming back. I mean, this is critical for the national security of our Nation.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. And if I might interject just one thing, Mr. POLIS, because when you said that, I am reminded of what we went through just 1 year ago this very summer, where the volatility of the price of gasoline really hit the pocketbook of the average American consumer. You want to talk about cost—it affected people's choices. If affected whether they could take that vacation. It affected their commutes. It affected discretionary travel in terms of shopping or seeing movies or even seeing friends and relatives because the cost of gasoline had become almost prohibitive for so many of our citizens. That's the cost, too, if we do nothing.

Mr. POLIS. I mean, wind and solar, they don't fluctuate like that. The quantities are there. I mean, absent a bill like this, we could very well see $5 a gallon, $6 a gallon of gas.

I saw oil again hit a peak today. It was up over $80 a barrel. The dollar is weakening. Why is the dollar weakening? Because global investors are losing confidence in our currency. We can restore that confidence by being the centerpiece of this green revolution.

Mr. TONKO. Representative POLIS, I believe that volatility, that unpredictable nature of what we have to pay for this import of oil or gasoline should really drive our thinking. And I firmly believe, with every ounce of my being, that this is the moment for America. This is our moment, a golden opportunity to turn green. And we can grow an economy and really respond to the environment that needs to be nurtured by us, and we can utilize our energy resources in an efficient way by having this American power that will power America. And this is our moment, and we can't walk away from it.

Mr. POLIS. Our time is soon coming to an end. Do you have any closing thoughts, Mr. HEINRICH?

Mr. HEINRICH. Just to thank my friend from New York for really closing, I think, on the issue we need to think about. This is about independence. It's about seizing the moment. And it's about providing the good jobs of tomorrow for the next generation. For my sons who are 6 and 2½, I want them to grow up in this country with the same opportunities that I had and more. And it's going to be up to us to be able to pass this legislation to be able to provide those kinds of opportunities for the future generations of our Nation.

Mr. POLIS. When people hear the American Clean Energy and Security Act, when they hear cap-and-trade, when they hear these, this is what they really mean, a lot of things we talked about here today. We are talking about the future of the American economy. We're talking about creating green jobs. We're talking about saving American households $750 a year within 10 years and $3,900 a year within 20 years. We are talking about creating an immense growth sector, making America the center of this technology, exporting this technology to some of the very same countries that we rely upon today for importing either manufactured products or energy-related products.

And, most importantly, we are talking about ending the cost of inaction. We are talking about completely reducing a lot of these hidden costs and overt costs that we are paying every day when you fill up your tank with gas; sending our men and women overseas; importing products from overseas; sending our jobs overseas; and, of course, climate change, which is having an effect on farmers across our country as well as everybody else.

So by passing this American Clean Energy and Security Act, which our SEEC coalition, Sustainable Energy and Environmental Coalition, is heavily involved with here in the United States Congress, can be the single most important act that we take this term in Congress to help make sure that America has a strong economy throughout the rest of this century and that the dollar regains its strength, that we create jobs here in our country, and we also save American taxpayers and families money along the way.

So when people hear about this debate and they hear about costs, they need to realize the costs of inaction are greater, and they need to realize that the benefits of taking the right action now, and the right action is in this bill, will be a great testimony to America's success and ingenuity for the next generation.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. HILL (at the request of Mr. HOYER) for today after noon on account of family reasons.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. BERKLEY) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Ms. WOOLSEY, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. BERKLEY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ENGEL, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. KAPTUR, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. POE of Texas) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. PAULSEN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MCCLINTOCK, for 5 minutes, June 11.

Mr. POE of Texas, for 5 minutes, June 17.

Mr. JONES, for 5 minutes, June 17.

Mr. MORAN of Kansas, for 5 minutes, June 17.

Mr. DUNCAN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. MANZULLO, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. OLSON, for 5 minutes, June 11.

Mr. GOHMERT, for 5 minutes, today and June 11.

Mr. BROUN of Georgia, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. HENSARLING, for 5 minutes, June 11.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 35 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, June 11, 2009, at 10 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

2091. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Metconazole; Pesticide Tolerances [EPA-HQ-OPP-2007-0514; FRL-8408-6] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

2092. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Novaluron; Pesticide Tolerances for Emergency Exemptions [EPA-HQ-OPP-2009-0166; FRL-8409-8] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

2093. A letter from the Performing the Duties of the Under Secretary of Defense (Personnel and Readiness), Department of Defense, transmitting the Department's report on Joint Officer Management, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 667; to the Committee on Armed Services.

2094. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting the legislative proposal entitled, "Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2009", or "PAYGO", together with a sectional analysis; (H. Doc. No. 111—46); to the Committee on the Budget and ordered to be printed.

2096. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Approval and Promulgation of Implementation Plans; Kentucky; Section 110(a)(1) Maintenance Plans for the 1997 8-Hour Ozone Standard for the Huntington-Ashland Area, Lexington Area and Edmonson County; Withdrawal of Direct Final Rule [EPA-R04-OAR-2007-1186-200821(w); FRL-8900-4] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2097. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Finding of Failure to Submit State Implementation Plans Required for the 1997 8-Hour Ozone national Ambient Air Quality Standard; North Carolina and South Carolina [EPA-R04-OAR-2009-0043; FRL-8901-8] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2098. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Revisions to the California State Implementations Plan, North Coast Unified Air Quality Management District [EPA-R09-OAR-2008-0668; FRL-8780-1] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2099. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Revisions to the California State Implementation Plan, North Coast Unified Air Quality Management District [EPA-R09-OAR-2008-0891, FRL-8782-7] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2100. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Revision to the California State Implementation Plan, Santa Barbara County Air Pollution Control District [EPA-R09-OAR-2009-0083; FRL-8900-2] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2101. A letter from the Director, Regulatory Management Division, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule — Revisions to the California

State Implementation Plan, South Coast Air Quality Management District Sacramento Metropolitan Air Quality Management District [EPA-R09-OAR-2008-0839; FRL-8783-9] received May 5, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

2102. A letter from the Secretary, Department of Transportation, transmitting the results of the Freight Intermodal Distribution Pilot Grant Program, pursuant to 23 U.S.C. 103 Public Law 109-59, section 1306(f); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2103. A letter from the Secretary, Judicial Conference of the United States, transmitting a Judicial Conference determination that United States Judge Samuel B. Kent of the Southern District of Texas, has engaged in conduct for which consideration of impeachment may be warranted, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 355(b)(1)–(2); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2104. A letter from the Acting Administrator, Department of Homeland Security, transmitting notification that funding under Title V, subsection 503(b)(3) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended, has exceeded $5 million for the cost of response and recovery efforts for a single emergency declaration specified in subsection 503(b)(1), 42 U.S.C. 5193(b)(1), FEMA-3302-EM, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 5193; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

2105. A letter from the Secretary, Department of Transportation, transmitting the 2008 report on the Transportation Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act of 1998, pursuant to Public Law 109-59, section 1601(h); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

[Omitted from the Record of June 9, 2009]

Mr. OBERSTAR: Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. House Resolution 484. Resolution expressing support for designation of June 10th as “National Pipeline Safety Day” (Rept. 111-144, Pt. 1). Referred to the House Calendar.

DISCHARGE OF COMMITTEE

[Omitted from the Record of June 9, 2009]

Pursuant to clause 2 of rule XII the Committee on Energy and Commerce discharged from further consideration. House Resolution 484 referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. THORNBERRY:

H.R. 2784. A bill to establish a loan repayment program for qualifying physicians and nurse practitioners participating in the Medicare Program; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. THORNBERRY:

H.R. 2785. A bill to reduce the amount of paperwork and improve payment policies for health care services, to prevent fraud and abuse through health care provider education, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and in addition to the Committee on Ways and Means, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. THORNBERRY:

H.R. 2786. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to improve the ability of medical professionals to practice medicine and provide quality care to patients by providing a tax deduction for patient bad debt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. THORNBERRY:

H.R. 2787. A bill to provide grants to States for health care tribunals, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CALVERT:

H.R. 2788. A bill to designate a Distinguished Flying Cross National Memorial at the March Field Air Museum in Riverside, California; to the Committee on Natural Resources.

By Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA:

H.R. 2789. A bill to confer certain Federal jurisdiction on the High Court of American Samoa, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. EHLERS:

H.R. 2790. A bill to create or adopt, and implement, rigorous and voluntary American education content standards in mathematics and science covering kindergarten through grade 12, to provide for the assessment of student proficiency benchmarked against such standards, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA (for himself, Ms. BORDALLO, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, Mr. PIERLUISI, and Mr. SABLAN):

H.R. 2791. A bill to permit each of the territories of the United States to provide and furnish a statue honoring a citizen of the territory to be placed in Statuary Hall in the same manner as statues honoring citizens of the States are placed in Statuary Hall; to the Committee on House Administration.

By Mrs. DAVIS of California (for herself and Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California):

H.R. 2792. A bill to amend title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to require individual account plans which permit participants and beneficiaries to direct the investment of assets in their individual accounts to include in pension benefit statements appropriate points of comparison to demonstrate relative performance of investment options under such plans; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. KLINE of Minnesota (for himself, Mr. WILSON of South Carolina, and Mrs. BACHMANN):

H.R. 2793. A bill to require a report to the Congress from the Presidential Task Force on the Auto Industry regarding closings of vehicle dealerships in connection with the bankruptcies of Chrysler Corporation and General Motors Corporation, and to suspend imposition of withdrawal liability to multi-employer plans in connection with the closing of such dealerships (and to suspend the requirement for payment of existing withdrawal liability in connection with such closings) until 60 days after submission of such report; to the Committee on Education and Labor, and in addition to the Committee on the Judiciary, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Ms. FUDGE:

H.R. 2794. A bill to amend the Truth in Lending Act to prohibit prepayment penalties, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Financial Services.

By Mr. MCGOVERN (for himself, Mrs. EMERSON, and Mr. MOORE of Kansas):

H.R. 2795. A bill to address global hunger and improve food security through the development and implementation of a comprehensive governmentwide global hunger reduction strategy, the establishment of the White House Office on Global Hunger and Food Security, and the creation of the Permanent Joint Select Committee on Hunger, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and in addition to the Committees on Agriculture, and Rules, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. LATOURETTE (for himself, Mr. GERLACH, Mr. KUCINICH, Mr. LATTA, Mr. LOBIONDO, Mr. MCCOTTER, Mr. MCHENRY, Mr. MCKEON, Mr. NUNES, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. TIBERI, Mr. TURNER, Mr. WHITFIELD, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. BACHMANN):

H.R. 2796. A bill to restore the economic rights of automobile dealers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Financial Services.

By Mr. TURNER (for himself and Mr. MARSHALL):

H.R. 2797. A bill to strengthen the United States commitment to transatlantic security by implementing the principles outlined in the Declaration on Alliance Security signed by the heads of state and governments of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Strasbourg and Kehl on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the Alliance; to the Committee on Armed Services, and in addition to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. ARCURI (for himself and Mr. MAFFEI):

H.R. 2798. A bill to increase securities protection coverage in the event of stolen or missing assets, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Financial Services.

By Mr. BOOZMAN:

H.R. 2799. A bill to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the 225th anniversary of the establishment of the Nation's first law enforcement agency, the United States Marshals Service; to the Committee on Financial Services.

By Mr. BURGESS:

H.R. 2800. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to improve the safety of imported food, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. COBLE:

H.R. 2801. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand and extend the first-time homebuyer credit; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DELAHUNT:

H.R. 2802. A bill to provide for an extension of the legislative authority of the Adams Memorial Foundation to establish a commemorative work in honor of former President John Adams and his legacy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Natural Resources.

By Mr. FATTAH (for himself, Ms. SCHWARTZ, and Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania):

H.R. 2803. A bill to amend the Richard B. Russell National School Lunch Act to improve paperless enrollment and efficiency for the national school lunch and school breakfast programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas:

H.R. 2804. A bill to amend title XXI of the Social Security Act to require 12-month continuous coverage under the State Children's Health Insurance Program; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas:

H.R. 2805. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to require 12-month continuous coverage for children under Medicaid; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. HASTINGS of Washington:

H.R. 2806. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to adjust the boundary of the Stephen Mather Wilderness and the North Cascades National Park in order to allow the rebuilding of a road outside of the floodplain while ensuring that there is no net loss of acreage to the Park or the Wilderness, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Natural Resources.

By Mr. KIND (for himself and Mr. JONES):

H.R. 2807. EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF LAURAIN FERRIS

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Lauraine Ferris, an active community member with more than twenty years of experience in social services.

Lauraine Ferris, a graduate of the John Jay College of Criminal Justice, is currently the Assistant Director of the Rose McCarthy Family Residence in the East New York section of Brooklyn. Ms. Ferris and her staff assist families with obtaining the necessary life skills to achieve and obtain independent living.

Lauraine Ferris also possesses a vibrant, creative spirit that thrives on the performing arts. Ms. Ferris is an accomplished actress, dancer, and model, winning several pageants. She shares her talents with the youth and seniors of her community, donating her time to teach African/modern dance.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Lauraine Ferris, someone whose ability to help her neighbors back on their feet through social services and through dance is an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Lauraine Ferris.

TRIBUTE TO DR. ROBERT MILLIS ON HIS RETIREMENT FROM THE LOWELL OBSERVATORY

HON. ANN KIRKPATRICK

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mrs. KIRKPATRICK of Arizona. Madam Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to Dr. Robert L. Millis who is retiring as director of the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona. During his tenure, Dr. Millis oversaw the Lowell Observatory—one of only a handful of private, independent research observatories in the United States—quadruple its staff, increase visitation tenfold, and construct major new facilities including the Steele Visitor Center, the McAllister Public Observatory, the John M. Wolff instrument facility, and, most recently, the 4.2-meter Discovery Channel Telescope now under construction in Northern Arizona.

As a researcher at Lowell, Dr. Millis concentrated on smaller bodies of the Solar System: asteroids, comets, planetary satellites, Pluto, and objects orbiting on the edges of our Solar System. Dr. Millis was a member of several two-person teams that discovered the rings of Uranus, noted periodic variation in the activity of Comet Halley, and proved the existence of an extended atmosphere on Pluto. He also led a multi-institutional team—the Deep Ecliptic Survey—in an eight-year endeavor to explore the region of the Solar System beyond the orbit of Neptune. That venture resulted in the discovery of approximately half the currently known objects in the area known as the Kuiper Belt.

Dr. Millis will remain an active pillar of the Flagstaff community. He will work with Flagstaff-area business leaders committed to improving the greater Flagstaff area and the State of Arizona by bringing together talent and resources to provide leadership on economic and quality of life issues in the region. I wish Dr. Millis the best of luck and look forward to seeing the greater Flagstaff community benefit from the energy and leadership that Dr. Millis provided to the Lowell Observatory for the past 40 years.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF OFFICER JOSE ENRIQUE VERA

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Officer Jose Enrique Vera, a trusted community partner in Brooklyn's safety.

Officer Vera, a native of La Ceiba, Honduras, migrate with his family to the United States in 1975 at the age of 12. He attended the August Martin High School in Queens, New York, graduated from Farmingdale State University with a major in Business Administration, and graduated from the Police Academy in 1991.

Officer Vera was assigned to the 80th Precinct in the Clinton Hill section of Brooklyn. He later worked in Brooklyn South Borough and the 84th Precinct.

Officer Vera now works on the Community Affairs Bureau, where he has expanded his role in working with the community as a Brooklyn North Crime Prevention Liaison, educating the community on personal safety and identity theft.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Officer Jose Enrique Vera, an individual committed to bringing diverse communities together and an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Officer Jose Enrique Vera.

HONORING MARTIN KAIDO FOR HIS APPOINTMENT TO THE UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY

HON. PHIL GINGREY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a young man from Georgia's 11th Congressional District who has distinguished himself as an excellent student and leader and has committed to serving his country. I am proud to announce that Martin Kaido from Marietta, Georgia, has received an appointment to the United States Military Academy.

For the past year, Martin has attended West Point's Preparatory School in Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. Martin worked very hard during his year in prep school, and the results speak for themselves.

Before the prep school, Martin attended St. Pius X Catholic High School. Martin was very involved athletically at St. Pius, participating in both wrestling and football, and has continued to excel in sports at the West Point Prep School. In addition to his scholastic and athletic achievements, Martin has also attained the rank of Eagle Scout and has even served as an assistant scoutmaster.

Further, Martin is very involved with his church, where he serves as a Faith Formation Teacher, a Eucharistic Minister, an Atlanta Chorister's Guild Camp Counselor, and participates in the Church Teen Group. He also volunteers for the St. Francis Table, the St. Vincent de Paul Thrift Store, and Habitat for Humanity.

Martin Kaido is an incredibly well-rounded young man, and I am honored to have the privilege to nominate him for an appointment to the U.S. Military Academy. I ask that my colleagues take this time to congratulate Martin as well as his parents, Michael and Mary Kaido, for his accomplishments. It is because of dedicated young people like Martin that America has the finest military in the world. Our Nation is fortunate to have his service.

FLAG DAY JUNE 14, 2009

HON. NICK J. RAHALL II

OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. RAHALL. Madam Speaker, the 14th of June is an important day for all Americans, the day we celebrate the American Flag. The American Flag is a proud and prominent symbol of our great Nation and celebrating this important icon shows respect for the millions of Americans who consider the flag a representation of our nation's most fundamental traditions and beliefs.

As a member of Congress, I feel great pride when I see our striking stars and stripes flying over the majestic United States Capitol. Whether the Flag is flying among the mountains of southern West Virginia or above our nation's capitol, it is a sign of our nation's commitment to working together across our vast and diverse land to create one great nation. Our flag flies in every state and around the World at our embassies in foreign lands.

Today, the flag consists of thirteen horizontal stripes, seven red, alternating with six white, reminding us always of our Nation's humble beginnings as just thirteen colonies. The stars illustrate our one country with 50 independent and unique states each with a separate state government. Together, the stars and stripes reflect our efforts to create a unified nation with united principles joined together under one Flag for over 200 years.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman signed legislation requesting National Flag Day become an annual event, and since that day we have been celebrating our stately Flag every year.

On Capitol Hill, the United States Flag is celebrated everyday. Flags are flown over the Capitol each day of the year in honor of birthdays, retirements, and, as well as in the memory of loved ones lost. These flags are then shipped directly from congressional offices with an official certificate from the Architect of the Capitol, declaring the date and occasion for which the flag was flown.

I ask that you join me in supporting House Resolution 420, thereby celebrating this American symbol, honoring our country, our men and women who have served and are currently serving in the United States Armed Forces, our veterans who bravely fought beneath flag, and all citizens who proudly fly the American Flag to show their support for our great country, and the ideals this great Flag represents.

ON THE PASSAGE OF H.R. 2200,
THE TRANSPORTATION SECURITY ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION ACT

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, today I rise to voice my concerns with the Transportation Security Administration Authorization Act. While I supported this bill, I would like to make clear that I had concerns with the air cargo security language contained in Section 201 of H.R. 2200 and hope that as the bill moves forward that this provision is changed.

The 9/11 Commission recommended that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) be given the necessary staff and funding in order to screen 100 percent of all air cargo by August, 2010. Currently there are serious deficiencies in the screening of inbound air cargo, which accounts for nearly half of the air cargo carried on passenger airplanes each year. Section 201 of H.R. 2200 creates a significant delay of two years until 100 percent of cargo must be screened from the enactment of this bill, even though there was a year left on the original deadline as passed when Congress implemented the 9/11 Commission recommendations. It makes no sense to grant an extension with over a year until the original deadline.

Outbound passenger air cargo is screened at a much higher rate, but in order to be fully secure, inbound cargo must be thoroughly checked as well. As the United States continues to confront the threats of terrorism since September 2001, we must be as cautious and careful as possible with our transportation security net to ensure that passengers on commercial airplanes are safe, and that cargo on airplanes is thoroughly checked.

Meeting the 100 percent screening mandate presents significant challenges in both funding and manpower, however, Congress should not be diluting the requirements recommended by the 9/11 Commission and should be providing the TSA with the required resources to meet the deadline, instead of extending the deadline into the future. In doing so, we will increase our safety and security as well as fully implement the 9/11 Commission's recommendation for air cargo.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF MARIE J. MARJORIE

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Marie J. Marjorie, a community leader dedicated to improving the health of Central Brooklyn's residents.

Marie J. Marjorie is an Administrative Director at Interfaith Medical Center where her responsibilities include Community Affairs, Media and Marketing, Internship and Volunteer Services, and management of the Gift Shop.

Marie J. Marjorie reaches out to the numerous community organizations, agencies, clergy, churches, schools, and other groups that are interested in working together with Interfaith to continue to improve the health of Central Brooklyn's residents. She has implemented many successful programs at the hospital including the "Health Care Career Learning Center" which gives high school students hands-on training in different departments.

A passionate health advocate, Marie J. Marjorie frequently lectures on health care disparities, patients' rights, and immigrant health issues. Her research "Who are the children and how is their Health?" was published in the book "The Multicultural Cultural Challenge in Health Education" by ETR & Associates.

In addition to her work at Interfaith, Marie J. Marjorie is a volunteer English tutor for a group of young recent immigrants and a parishioner of St. Boniface R.C. Church where she is the Sunday school instructor for the youth group.

Marie J. Marjorie earned a Bachelor of Science degree from Long Island University.

She is an advisory board member of the Haitian Apostolate, the HHT Association Resource Group, and a member of Boston College for Corporate Citizenship, the American Public Health Association and the Public Relations Society of America.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Marie J. Marjorie, a visionary leader and an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Marie J. Marjorie.

BILL COX'S STATEMENT IN HAVERHILL HONORING SENATOR EDWARD M. KENNEDY

HON. NIKI TSONGAS

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Ms. TSONGAS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to join one of my constituents, Bill Cox of Haverhill, Massachusetts, in honoring Senator EDWARD M. KENNEDY of Massachusetts by including a copy of Bill's heartfelt remarks, given at a recent event in Haverhill, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. His comments fondly and appropriately pay tribute to Senator KENNEDY for his lifetime of unparalleled service to Haverhill, Massachusetts, and our country.

If you tell Ted Kennedy that you are from Haverhill, the first thing he will tell you is how proud he is to have Barbara Souliotis looking out for his Massachusetts office. Barbara has worked for the Senator since he was first elected 47 years ago and currently serves as his State Director. Barbara has been called the role model for running a senator's district office.

I can now tell you that one of the most difficult assignments anyone can undertake is to attempt to summarize the career and accomplishments of Senator Ted Kennedy.

It has been said that no one works harder than Ted Kennedy and that his legislative instincts are unsurpassed. Both statements are indisputable.

His record of achievements on educational opportunities, justice and equal rights for all people, protecting the environment and achieving quality health care for all Americans is unsurpassed. Even as he contends with his own recent health issues, his drive and determination are stronger than ever.

Having been our United States Senator for 47 years, Ted Kennedy has . . . fought for issues that benefit the people of Massachusetts and the nation, such as increasing the minimum wage and funding his 'No Child Left Behind' initiative. He continues to work to better the lives of working families and to secure our nation from our true threats.

He has a reverence for those who serve in our Armed Forces . . . and has quietly intervened for and consoled those families who have made the ultimate sacrifice.

Senator Kennedy has moved an agenda that includes everything from hunger to high tech.

Senator Kennedy has a deep and abiding devotion to his home state. He led the charge to see that we have sufficient funding for a parking garage here in Haverhill. Although the Senator is a citizen of the world, he knows that he is home when he is in Haverhill. We recall fondly his recent visit to the City [with] Congresswoman Tsongas. He stopped at Mark's Deli to visit with his old friends, the Dimakis family, then on to A-1 Deli where a crowd awaited him and he met new friends and old.

On behalf of the City Committee, we send our best wishes to Ted and Vicki, and take this opportunity to reflect and pay thanks to the unparalleled service of Senator Kennedy for his lifetime of service to our City, State and Country.

HONORING JAMES AFRICANO FOR HIS APPOINTMENT TO THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE ACADEMY

HON. PHIL GINGREY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a young man from Georgia's 11th Congressional District who has distinguished himself as an excellent student and leader and has committed to serving his country. I am proud to announce that James Africano from Kennesaw, Georgia has received an appointment to the United States Air Force Academy. James attends Harrison High School, where he has a 3.5 Grade Point Average and serves as Senior Class Vice President. James is also a member of the Math Honors Society, the Integrity Team, and the Harrison High School robotics team. In addition to James's focus on academics, he has also remained very active in extracurricular activities. James is on Harrison's water polo, swimming, and martial arts teams, and is also very involved in the school's band program. In fact, he was ranked second in this year's State Marching Band Competition. Despite all of these commitments, James still finds time to be involved in community service activities, where he volunteers with the Atlanta Youth Philharmonic Orchestra and devotes time to restoring the trail at the Natchez Trace State Parkway. James Africano is an incredibly well-rounded young man, and I am honored to have the privilege to nominate him for an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy. I ask that my colleagues take this time to congratulate James as well as his parents, Thomas and Choi Africano, for his accomplishments. It is because of dedicated young people like James that America has the finest military in the world. Our nation is fortunate to have his service.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF STEVE HUNT

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Steve Hunt, a leader in adolescent drug and substance abuse prevention in Brooklyn.

Steve Hunt is the vice president of The Alpha School Center of Progressive Living, Inc., located in the east New York section of Brooklyn, New York. His responsibilities include supervision of the Adolescent Drug Prevention Program and the Outpatient Chemical Dependency Program serving youth at risk and management of daily administrative duties.

Steve Hunt has an extensive background of 22 years in community service working with both adolescent and adult populations. His experience includes individual and group counseling in areas such as chemical dependency, HIV/AIDS, and anger management.

Steve Hunt has received several awards and has been recognized for his outstanding work with civic community organizations. He is a member of the Substance Abuse Committee for the Brownsville/East New York Child Welfare Neighborhood Network as well as the New York City Addictions Treatment Providers Association and the New York State HIV Prevention Planning Group.

Steve Hunt was born and raised in Brooklyn where he attended Tilden and Jefferson High Schools. He earned a bachelor of science degree in community health education from York College. He is professionally certified as a New York State Credentialed Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Counselor, an Internationally Certified Alcohol & Drug Counselor, a Pre and Post Test HIV/AIDS Counselor and is certified in Mediation/Conflict Resolution.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Steve Hunt, a visionary leader and an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Steve Hunt.

WOMEN FOR THE WATER WORKS
JUNE 9, 2009 DEDICATION CEREMONY

HON. ALLYSON Y. SCHWARTZ

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Ms. SCHWARTZ. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor and congratulate the Women of the Water Works upon the completion of the extensive restoration of the Fairmount Water Works. What was once one of the most popular tourist attractions of the 19th century will again enchant and educate both Philadelphia visitors and residents.

The Water Works began operation in the 1790s when a yellow fever epidemic hit Philadelphia. People blamed the disease on the filth that coated city streets and looked for a way to deliver drinking water and wash roads. Construction on the Water Works began in 1812, and after three years, clean water was being pumped to the homes of Philadelphia.

In ten short years, the Water Works was pumping over five million gallons of water daily. This engineering marvel was praised by many tourists and admirers, including Mark Twain and Charles Dickens. In 1909, the Water Works was closed due to pollution in the Schuylkill River.

In 1976, the Water Works was recognized as a National Historic Landmark by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior. Shortly before the announcement, the Junior League of Philadelphia initiated a campaign to preserve this treasure. Since that time, other organizations have joined the effort to return this landmark to its former status as a prime recreational, educational, and historic attraction.

By the turn of the 21st century, Women for the Water Works spearheaded a $26 million project to restore the Water Works, as well as to incorporate a new Interpretative Center. The Interpretive Center opened its doors in 2003 with a mission "to educate citizens to understand their community and environment, especially the urban watershed, know how to guide the community and environment in the future, and understand the connections between daily life and the natural environment."

In 2008, the Women for the Water Works reached their fundraising goal of $5 million for the final phase of the project, bringing the total dollars raised to more than $28 million since renovations began thirty years ago. It is commendable that the funds raised are not only restoring the site for today, but will ensure that future generations will be able to enjoy the restored Water Works for years to come.

I share with the Women of the Water Works and the people of Philadelphia a common concern about wildlife, the environment, and the preservation of natural resources, as well as a commitment to a sustainable, livable City and region.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in celebrating the Fairmount Water Works and thanking the Women of the Water Works who worked tirelessly to protect and preserve this special gem.

HONORING SUPERINTENDENT DR.
JOHN GRAVES

HON. MARK H. SCHAUER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. SCHAUER. Madam Speaker, I am proud to honor Jackson County Intermediate School District (JCISD) Superintendent, Dr. John Graves upon the occasion of his retirement.

After an accomplished 40-year career that started as a teacher and a coach at Grass Lake High School to a principal at Beaverton and included leading four different school districts, Dr. Graves is retiring to go back to school. He will begin classes at the University of Michigan Law School, where he was initially accepted in 1968 after graduating from the University of Wisconsin with a degree in economics.

Dr. Graves has led the 450-employee JCISD since 2001. He is most recognized for his organizational leadership and his foremost concern was always how well students performed and achieved. For the past 40 years, Dr. Graves has earned both the respect and admiration of other educators, colleagues, staff, and community members for his skillful and honest leadership.

Dr. Graves is a model of patriotism and well deserves our respect and appreciation for his many years of dedication and distinguished service in education. His intellect, eagerness, and vision will be sincerely missed by not only Jackson, but also the many other communities he has touched. May he know of my sincerest best wishes in all his future endeavors.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF
HARRY L. POLITE, SR.

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Harry L. Polite, Sr., a champion for the youth and the elderly of Brooklyn.

Harry L. Polite, Sr. has been active in his Brooklyn community for over forty years, serving as President of the Lafayette Gardens Tenants Association for 16 years. He is an advocate for adequate and safe living conditions in his community. He has also advocated for increased activities for senior citizens and community youth.

Harry L. Polite, Sr. is also the founder of the Lafayette Gardens Seniors Club. The Seniors Club serves 30 senior residents with lunch, computer training, job placement, and social activities. Mr. Polite has also developed youth softball and basketball tournaments. He has organized cultural and political trips for residents and coordinates the annual family celebration and block party known as "Lafayette Gardens Day".

Harry L. Polite, Sr. has also served as the Coordinator for the Lafayette Gardens Tenant Patrol for the past ten years. He is an Executive Member/Sgt at Arms for the NYCHA Citywide Council of Presidents-Brooklyn West District and serves on the NYPD Housing Bureau Police Service Area #3.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Harry L. Polite, Sr., a visionary leader and an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Harry L. Polite, Sr.

A TRIBUTE TO THE 2009 ELLIS ISLAND MEDAL OF HONOR RECIPIENTS

HON. DAN BURTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the 2009 recipients of the coveted Ellis Island Medal of Honor. Presented annually by the National Ethnic Coalition (NECO), the Ellis Island Medal of Honor pays tribute to our Nation's immigrant heritage, as well as individual achievement. The medals are awarded to U.S. citizens from various ethnic backgrounds who exemplify outstanding qualities in both their personal and professional lives, while continuing to preserve the richness of their particular heritage. Since NECO's founding in 1986, more than 2,000 American citizens have received Ellis Island Medals of Honor, including six American Presidents, several United States Senators, Congressmen, Nobel Laureates, outstanding athletes, artists, clergy, and military leaders.

As we all know, citizens of the United States can trace their ancestry to many nations. The richness and diversity of American life makes us unique among the Nations of the world and is in many ways the key to why America is the most innovative country in the world. The Ellis Island Medals of Honor not only celebrate select individuals but also the pluralism and democracy that enabled our ancestors to celebrate their cultural identities while still embracing the American way of life. This medal is not about money, but about people who really seized the opportunities this great country has to offer and who used those opportunities to not only better their own lives but make a difference in the lives of those around them. By honoring these outstanding individuals, we honor all who share their origins and we acknowledge the contributions they and other groups have made to America. I commend NECO and its Board of Directors headed by my good friend, Nasser J. Kazeminy, for honoring these truly outstanding individuals for their tireless efforts to foster dialogue and build bridges between different ethnic groups, as well as promote unity and a sense of common purpose in our Nation.

Madam Speaker, I ask all of my colleagues to join me in recognizing the good works of NECO, and congratulating all of the 2009 recipients of the Ellis Island Medals of Honor. I also ask unanimous consent that the names of this year's recipients be placed into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD following my statement.

Gen. John P. Abizaid, USA (Ret), Hon. Eduardo Aguirre, Imam Shamsi Ali, Dr. Kaveh Alizadeh, Robert V. Allegrini, Hon. Victor G. Atiyeh, Archbishop Vicken N. Aykazian, Sir Julian Bachynsky, Ralph M. HONORING THE LIFE OF MARILYN GIORDANO

HON. GUS M. BILIRAKIS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Marilyn Giordano, a wonderful woman who recently lost her courageous battle with colon cancer.

I came to know Marilyn through her work with the American Vitiligo Research Foundation. Vitiligo is a condition in which one's skin loses pigment and becomes discolored. It is a disease that can easily destroy the spirit of those it afflicts. Marilyn cared passionately about people with Vitiligo, especially children who are often not emotionally prepared to deal with its psychological affects. Marilyn dedicated her life to helping these precious children deal with their condition the best they could.

Marilyn's friend Stella Pavlides, the founder of the American Vitiligo Research Foundation, shared with me the courage with which Marilyn battled colon cancer. Stella said that Marilyn never lost faith that she would survive, refrained from complaining or asking why she was going through such an ordeal, and remained optimistic and positive until the very end, which came peacefully on April 29. That sounds just like the Marilyn I came to know.

Stella has asked me to become an advocate for raising awareness about colon cancer in the days since Marilyn's death. She correctly points out that colon cancer is one of the most deadly forms of cancer in its advanced stages, though it also is one of the most treatable in its earliest stages. I was pleased that the House passed H. Con. Res 60 earlier this year, which supports the observance of Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month in March and emphasizes the importance of early detection and screening of this disease.

I also recently cosponsored H.R. 1189, the Colorectal Cancer Prevention, Early Detection, and Treatment Act, which would establish a colorectal cancer screening program at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and provide grants to states for colorectal cancer screening and treatment programs. I believe the House should pass this vitally important bill to improve the detection and treatment of this deadly disease.

Madam Speaker, I urge all of our colleagues to honor Marilyn's life by passing H.R. 1189 and improving the detection and treatment of this disease. Although her earthly life has ended much too soon, I am certain that her legacy will live on in the lives that will be saved by raising awareness about this treatable but deadly disease, and in the children with Vitiligo whose lives she has forever changed for the better.

HONORING KENNEDY PATTERSON FOR HIS APPOINTMENT TO THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE ACADEMY

HON. PHIL GINGREY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a young man from Georgia's 11th Congressional District who has distinguished himself as an excellent student and leader and has committed to serving his country. I am proud to announce that Kennedy Patterson from Marietta, Georgia, has received an appointment to the United States Air Force Academy.

For the past year, Kennedy has attended the Air Force Academy Preparatory School. Kennedy has worked very hard during his year in prep school and the results speak for themselves. Before the prep school, Kennedy attended Marietta High School where he was a member of the Air Force JROTC. Kennedy is an Eagle Scout and has a black belt in Taekwondo. He has been recognized with the Admiral's Cup Award, the Aviator Wings Award, the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution Bronze ROTC Medal, the American Legion Military Excellence Medal, and the American Legion Silver Medal.

Kennedy Patterson is an incredibly well-rounded young man, and I am honored to have the privilege to nominate him for an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy. I ask that my colleagues take this time to congratulate Kennedy as well as his parents, James and Nell Patterson, for his accomplishments. It is because of dedicated young people like Kennedy that America has the finest military in the world. Our nation is fortunate to have his service.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. TIMOTHY V. JOHNSON

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Madam Speaker, unfortunately on June 8, 2009, I was unable to cast my votes on H.R. 1736, H.R. 1709, and H. Res. 420. Had I been able to vote, I would have voted as follows:

Had I been present for rollcall No. 311, on suspending the rules and passing H.R. 1736, International Science and Technology Cooperation Act, I would have voted "yea."

Had I been present for rollcall No. 312, on suspending the Rules and passing H.R. 1709, STEM Education Coordination Act of 2009, I would have voted "yea."

Had I been present for rollcall No. 313, on suspending the Rules and passing H. Res. 420, Celebrating the symbol of the United States flag and supporting the goals and ideals of Flag Day, I would have voted "aye."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. STEVE KING

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. KING of Iowa. Madam Speaker, on June 9, 2009, I mistakenly cast a "YES" vote on H.R. 2751, the Consumer Assistance to Recycle and Save Act. I am submitting this statement for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to clarify that I am opposed to H.R. 2751 and had intended to vote "no." The bill authorizes $4 billion of new spending. This is on top of the $85 billion American taxpayers have provided to help "restructure" the auto industry already. Just yesterday, auto-parts suppliers asked President Obama's auto task force for an additional $8 to $10 billion in federal aid. In addition, a similar program instituted in Germany ended up costing three times more than originally anticipated. Also, the legislation requires dealers to remove "clunkers" from the market through salvage, reducing the amount of preowned supply. Families that still cannot afford a new automobile, even with the voucher, will face rising prices in the used car market during the current recession at a time when affordability is an even greater issue. Additionally, under the bill, the DOT is required to promulgate many of the regulations to implement the program within 30 days. This grants too much authority to the executive branch to enact a new $4 billion dollar program. For these and other reasons, I am opposed to H.R. 2751, and I intended to vote "no" on rollcall 314.

HONORING NICHOLAS JACKSON FOR HIS APPOINTMENT TO THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE ACADEMY

HON. PHIL GINGREY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a young man from Georgia's 11th Congressional District who has distinguished himself as an excellent student and leader and has committed to serving his country. I am proud to announce that Nicholas Jackson from Acworth, Georgia has received an appointment to the United States Air Force Academy.

Nick attends Harrison High School where he has a 3.47 Grade Point Average. Nick is a four year varsity letter winner for the Harrison football and the track and field teams and has proven himself a leader—being selected Captain of the football team on multiple occasions. He was named to the Cobb County Touch-down Club All County football team, the Marietta Daily Journal 2nd team All County football team, and was an honorable mention Atlanta Journal-Constitution All Northwest Georgia football player. Nick brings his love of sports into community service, as well, annually volunteering for the Fellowship of Christian Athlete's football camp as well as the Harrison High School Community Service Day. Nick's athletic accomplishments have not gone unnoticed by the Air Force Academy—earning him a letter of recruitment from the head coach of the Falcons.

Nicholas Jackson is an incredibly well-rounded young man, and I am honored to have the privilege to nominate him for an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy. I ask that my colleagues take this time to congratulate Nick as well as his parents, Michael and Colleen, for his accomplishments. It is because of dedicated young people like Nick that America has the finest military in the world. Our nation is fortunate to have his service.

A TRIBUTE TO PATRICK HURLEY

HON. BRIAN P. BILBRAY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. BILBRAY. Madam Speaker, I would like to bring to your attention today the many outstanding achievements of Patrick Hurley, the outgoing president of the Carlsbad Hi-Noon Rotary Club. Patrick's leadership during the 2008–2009 Rotary year has contributed significantly to the Hi-Noon Rotary Club, the community of Carlsbad and the mission of Rotary. During his tenure, the Carlsbad Hi-Noon Rotary Club sponsored Interact, a youth service club; RYLA, a youth awareness leadership conference; a Christmas party and provided meals and gifts to needy elementary school children; cosponsored the Oktoberfest fundraiser that benefited the Carlsbad Women's Resource Center and the Carlsbad Boys and Girls Club and completed a very successful golf tournament which funded scholarships for Carlsbad high school students; provided mentors for the City Stuff Program, a program that exposed school children to the workings of city government; promoted literacy by providing dictionaries for English and Spanish speaking elementary school children; provided over nine hundred books to the Jefferson Elementary School students, and provided financial support to our military personnel and their families.

In addition, under President Patrick Hurley's leadership the Carlsbad Hi-Noon Rotary and its membership completed a number of other projects. These projects included providing volunteers to help maintain public and private property, provide food and clothing for the needy and homeless, and assist in the distribution of food, clothing and toys to needy Carlsbad families in conjunction with the Carlsbad Christmas Bureau, and through the Gazebo project, a city landmark structure was refurbished and relocated for public enjoyment.

In the international arena, under President Hurley's leadership, a team of Carlsbad Hi-Noon Rotarians joined with others and traveled to Mexico to build a house for a needy family: a badly needed ambulance was provided and refurbished for the City of Mazatlan, Mexico, and through our support of the Paul Harris Foundation, we co-sponsored numerous other humanitarian projects all over the world including the effort to eradicate polio world wide, and providing funding for the Micro-banking project enabling third world countries to develop entrepreneurial skills and become self sufficient.

I hope my colleagues will join me in recognizing the many fine achievements of Patrick Hurley. Without question, his leadership and fine work of the Carlsbad Hi-Noon Rotary Club are worthy of recognition by the House today.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF ADRIAN STRAKER

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Adrian Straker, a tireless advocate for children in our community.

Adrian Mary Levell was raised in Bedford Stuyvesant, Brooklyn, graduated from Midwood High School with honors, received her Bachelor's degree in Sociology from Northwestern University, and attended graduate school at Long Island University, receiving her Master of Science in Counseling and Development.

Following the completion of her studies, Adrian began her career in public service as a caseworker in the foster care unit at St. Vincent's Services in Brooklyn, NY. There Adrian developed her passion for helping to solve the dilemmas and socio-economic challenges of urban life. For the past 17 years, Adrian has been a guidance counselor at Public School 32 serving the Carroll Gardens-Gowanus Housing Development community, where she interacts daily with neighborhood youth and their families serving as the link between classroom teachers, parents, guardians, administration officials, and on-site medical/mental health programs to ensure a student's overall academic achievement and personal development.

Adrian also recently served on the staff of Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz as the Director of Community Boards. In this role, she managed a staff of community relations personnel who maintained interactive relationships with community board chairpersons and district managers. She also served as the borough president's chief architect of faith-based relationships.

Adrian is member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. and has served as regional officer and charities chairperson. She is also the past vice chairperson of the Brooklyn Chapter of Jack and Jill of America, Inc. Adrian sits on numerous professional and community boards including Inner City Little League Brooklyn, Northwestern University Alumni Association, St. Mark's Independent Block Association, Cornerstone Baptist Church Support Services and is a founding member of the Concerned Crew of Bedford Stuyvesant.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Adrian Straker, a visionary leader and an inspiration to all of New York.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Adrian Straker.

A TRIBUTE TO CHICAGO BLUES
LEGEND CORA "KOKO" TAYLOR
(1928-2009)

HON. BOBBY L. RUSH

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. RUSH. Madam Speaker, American music legend, KoKo Taylor, the "Queen of the Blues," died June 3, 2009 in Chicago. Her masterful voice represented the spirit of Chicago—proud, loud and full of life.

Born September 28, 1928, in Bartlett, Tennessee, on a small farm to a family of sharecroppers, Cora Walton would one day be known throughout the world as "KoKo Taylor." She earned her nickname because of a love of chocolate. Orphaned by age 11, along with her five brothers and sisters, Koko developed a love for music from a mixture of gospel she heard in church and blues she heard on radio stations. With one brother accompanying her on a guitar strung with baling wire and another brother on a fife, made out of a corncob, Koko began her career as a blues woman.

In her early 20s, Koko and her soon-to-be husband, the late Robert "Pops" Taylor, moved to Chicago looking for work. With nothing but, in Koko's words, "35 cents and a box of Ritz crackers," the couple settled on the city's South Side, the cradle of the rough-edged sound of Chicago blues. Taylor found work cleaning houses for wealthy families in the ritzy northern suburbs. At night and on weekends, Koko and Pops would visit the South and West Side blues clubs, where they would hear singers like Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf, Magic Sam, Little Walter and Junior Wells. And, thanks to prodding from Pops, it wasn't long before Taylor was sitting in with many of the legendary blues artists on a regular basis.

Ms. Taylor's big break came in 1963 when, after one of her signature fiery performances, songwriter/arranger Willie Dixon approached her. Much to Koko's astonishment, he told her, "My God, I never heard a woman sing the blues like you sing the blues." Dixon first recorded Koko for USA Records and, then, secured a Chess Records recording contract for her. He produced several singles and two albums for her—including her huge 1966 hit single Wang Dang Doodle—firmly establishing Koko as the world's number one female blues talent.

Over the course of her nearly 50-year career, Ms. Taylor received numerous awards for her music. She signed with Alligator Records in 1975 and recorded nine albums for the label, eight of which were Grammy-nominated, and came to dominate the female blues singer ranks, winning 25 W.C. Handy Awards, more than any other artist. In 1984, she received a Grammy for the live, multi-artist album Blues Explosion on Atlantic Records. In 2004, KoKo was presented with the coveted National Heritage Fellowship Award from the National Endowment for The Arts. She also earned 25 Blues Music Awards, more than any other blues artist, male or female. On March 3, 1993, Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley honored the songstress with a Legend of The Year Award, and declared "Koko Taylor Day" throughout Chicago.

In 1998, Chicago Magazine named Koko "Chicagoan of the Year" and, in 1999, she was inducted into the Blues Foundation's Hall of Fame. "There are many kings of the blues," said The Boston Globe at the time, "but only one queen. Koko's voice is still capable of pinning a listener to the back wall."

There is no doubt she was the queen of the blues and Koko Taylor's legacy will live on through her music. She has influenced a number of musicians including Bonnie Raitt, Shemekia Copeland and Janis Joplin. Her voice lives on in her recordings. We all are forever indebted to her for her contributions to America's rich music history.

HONORING MR. MARK E. NEIHLS

HON. JIM GERLACH

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GERLACH. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor a pioneer of private education who has provided 25 years of faithful service to the students, families and staff at Coventry Christian Schools in Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

Mark E. Neihls started planning a preschool and registered Christian school in 1983, pouring amazing amounts of energy into fulfilling his vision of providing a world-class education to students in Montgomery, Chester and Berks Counties.

Coventry Christian was incorporated in 1984 and opened with seven preschool students taught by two volunteer teachers. Thanks to Mr. Neihls' outstanding leadership as superintendent, the School has grown to more than 400 students in preschool through 12th grade and has more than 50 employees on two campuses.

Mr. Neihls earned the respect of students, teachers and their families by refusing a paycheck for 19 years while, at the same time, often working six days a week and being available to students well beyond regular school hours.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me today in honoring Mark E. Neihls for his 25 years of humble service as founder and superintendent of Coventry Christian Schools and recognizing his unwavering commitment to a high standard of educational excellence in a Christian setting.

INTRODUCING H.R. 2548, THE KEEP AMERICA'S WATERFRONTS
WORKING ACT OF 2009

HON. CHELLIE PINGREE

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Madam Speaker, coastal communities across this nation are in trouble. Fishermen who have spent their lives on the water—the sons and daughters of fishermen, the grandchildren of fishermen, fishermen from families that have been fishing for generations, have hung up their boots and do not go out sea any more. My friends and neighbors are giving up a lifetime of fishing. Businesses that depend on the water shut their doors and close their wharves. You see Madam Speaker, I live in a community built around fishing. A community with a working waterfront. A community that is in trouble.

When I was a teenager in my hometown, the island of North Haven, there were more fishermen and the island supported a diverse fishery. Throughout the history of the islands of Penobscot Bay, from the first natives fishing off the island in dugout canoes to the herring seiners, gill netters, ground fisherman, and lobstermen, fishing has been an important part of the islands—providing jobs and a sense of place.

The fishing vessel Starlight seined for herring in the waters off the island and brought fish ashore for lobster bait. Now, most boats fish for lobster. My friends and neighbors on North Haven, like all fishermen up and down the coast, need a place to land their lobsters, store their bait, load and unload their lobster traps. In some communities fishermen use privately owned piers, in other communities they compete for space at public landings and town docks. Some keep their skiffs upside down on the beach and others on the dock, most park their trucks at the landing.

Coastal landowners who used to allow their friends and neighbors to cross their property to get to the clam flats face rising property taxes and pressure to sell. With these sales to the highest bidder, frequently to build a vacation home or condos on a desirable and “authentic waterfront,” access for the community is lost in the process. Condos spring up, displacing the fishermen and boat builders, and the wide variety of businesses that require access to the water. As new construction sprawls, traditional ties to the water are severed and the economic engine that is our coast sputters and stalls for want of a place to land a fish or dock a boat.

Our nation’s working waterfronts are disappearing. Less than 20 miles of Maine’s 3,300 mile coastline support commercial fishing and other traditional marine based activities—and working waterfronts are continuing to disappear.

These are a very important 20 miles. Maine’s Working Waterfront Coalition, a broad and diverse group of stakeholders dedicated to protecting working waterfronts, conducted a study that found that working waterfronts like those supported by this legislation add between $15 and $168 million more to the economy than do the conversion of those properties to high end residential uses.

Working Waterfronts support many communities up and down the coast. Every community is unique but they all are connected by the bond of having a working waterfront. The challenges facing working waterfronts are not unique to Maine. These waterfronts are disappearing up and down our coasts, in all of our coastal states. In Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, Virginia and South Carolina, Florida and Texas, California, Oregon, and Washington and even on the Great Lakes. Across the country, working waterfronts and the jobs they provide are quickly disappearing under the tremendous pressure these communities face from conversion to incompatible uses. As history has shown us, once these business close, and waterfronts stop supporting water dependent businesses, they do not come back.

Together, our nation must take an important step towards protecting these jobs and the families they support—and even, eventually rebuilding our working waterfronts. In honor of the many folks in Maine who have been tirelessly working to ensure these special areas are protected, I am proud to have introduced legislation, H.R. 2548, with Representatives MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO, LOIS CAPPAS, BILL DELAHUNT, SAM FARR, BARNEY FRANK, PATRICK J. KENNEDY, RON KLEIN, JAMES R. LANGEVIN, JAMES P. MCGOVERN, MIKE MCINTYRE, MICHAEL H. MICHAUD, JAMES P. MORAN, MIKE THOMPSON, and ROBERT J. WITTMAN that encourages states to consider the importance of working waterfronts and how to best protect them.

Our legislation amends the Coastal Zone Management Act to establish a Working Waterfronts program. The Coastal Zone Management Act is a flexible tool, developed to allow states to manage their coasts in a manner that fits that particular coast. In recognition of this, the Working Waterfronts program broadly defines working waterfronts to be water-dependent, coastal related businesses—this includes commercial fishing, recreational fishing businesses, aquaculture, boat yards and other businesses whose business model requires access to the water.

This bill creates a Working Waterfront Grant program to help states protect and preserve these important areas. In order for states to be eligible for a working waterfront grant, the State must have a working waterfront plan that requires a thoughtful, collaborative, public process to identify the economic and social value of working waterfronts and the plan requires the states to be thoughtful and strategic in their use of federal money. This bill is not designed to require states to undergo a completely new or comprehensive planning process but rather to utilize existing information to the maximum extent practicable.

The program encourages states to use the best information they have available to develop their working waterfronts plan. It is not our intention to require a detailed or in-depth GIS study of the entire coast, an undertaking that may well be beneficial but also could delay and hinder the implementation of the program. We only ask that the coastal states give some thought to what makes a working waterfront in that state and why working waterfronts are particularly important or special to that state.

This bill not only protects working waterfronts and the jobs they provide, this bill also protects public access to our coastline. One of the conditions of the bill states that any working waterfront receiving a working waterfront grant must provide access to the water for the public. The bill makes an exception for commercial fishing if providing access would not be safe.

Those who live on or visit our coasts know how valuable coastal property is—and this is why traditional uses of working waterfronts are vulnerable. Eliminating working waterfronts fundamentally alters the economy, culture and heart of coastal communities. Please join me in supporting the Keep America’s Waterfronts Working Act of 2009; help protect working waterfronts and the jobs they provide.

RECOGNIZING THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF HOSTELLING INTERNATIONAL USA

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. OBERSTAR. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Hostelling International USA for 75 years of service to intercultural understanding and youth travel.

Hostelling International USA is a nonprofit organization founded in 1934 to promote hostels and hostel related programs in the United States, especially for young travelers. It has grown nationally and currently hosts nearly one million overnight stays by both domestic and foreign travelers. In doing so, it promotes cultural exchange through travel and supports tourism for local economies.

The Minnesota Council of Hostelling International USA operates the Mississippi Headwaters Hostel in Itasca State Park. Since 1992, in partnership with the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, this hostel offers budget accommodations for families, schools, and youth groups. In addition, the Council promotes global travel to and cultivates cultural understanding in Minnesotans through educational programs in the Twin Cities.

I congratulate Hostelling International USA for its 75 years of service.

INTRODUCING THE RETIREMENT SAVINGS TRANSPARENCY ACT

HON. SUSAN A. DAVIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Madam Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Retirement Savings Transparency Act.

More than ever, Americans are relying on 401(k) plans to finance their retirements. Almost 50 million Americans have invested approximately $2.7 trillion in 401(k) retirement plans.

Yet a recent study by the Government Accountability Office (GAO) has found that over 80 percent of Americans do not know what kind of fees are being charged on their hard earned retirement savings.

But even small differences in these 401(k) fees can lead to significant reductions in the amount of money retirees can expect to see.

For example, an increase of only one percent in 401(k) fees can lower a retiree’s savings by over $32,000 over the course of a 30-year period.

The same reductions can take place because of even minor differences in the rates of return on a 401(k) investment portfolio.

One of the most persistent barriers to workers understanding their retirement options is the failure of financial disclosures to put these fees and returns in context.

When they are provided with information on fees and returns, consumers often have no frame of reference to which to make comparisons.

Yet these benchmarks are readily available in the marketplace and are regularly used by institutional investors in making their investment decisions.

I believe we need to make these same benchmarks available to all Americans saving for retirement.

We have an obligation to help workers make informed decisions when it comes to their precious retirement savings.

The legislation I am introducing today would provide workers with appropriate points of comparison for both the fees and returns associated with each investment option in their 401(k) accounts.

This will help Americans better understand their investment options and make the right decisions to maximize their retirement savings.

At the same time, the increased transparency in fees and returns will force plan providers to compete, driving down costs and increasing returns.

During the tough economic climate, Americans have already seen their retirements decline. Many retirees have seen their nest eggs evaporate and some are even being forced to go back to work after retirement.

It is even more important now than ever to help Americans squeeze every penny out of their retirement investments.

I hope we will pass this important legislation and empower Americans to make the most of their hard earned savings.

HONORING VICTORIA HAYES FOR HER APPOINTMENT TO THE UNITED STATES MERCHANT MA-RINE ACADEMY

HON. PHIL GINGREY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize a young woman from Georgia's 11th Congressional District who has distinguished herself as an excellent student and leader and has committed to serving her country. I am proud to announce that Victoria Hayes from Acworth, Georgia has received an appointment to the United States Merchant Marine Academy.

For the past year, Victoria has attended New Mexico Institute in Roswell, N.M., which is the prep school for the Merchant Marine Academy. Victoria has worked very hard during her year in prep school and the results speak for themselves. Before the prep school, Victoria attended East Paulding County High School. Victoria was very involved with the East Paulding band program, and has continued to excel in music at the Merchant Marine prep school—participating in the marching, concert, and regimental bands. She also has the honor of being a Silver Taps bugler.

Victoria Hayes is an incredibly well-rounded young woman, and I am honored to have the privilege to nominate her for an appointment to the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. I ask that my colleagues take this time to congratulate Victoria as well as her parents, William and Mary Ellen Hayes, for her accomplishments. It is because of dedicated young people like Victoria that America has the finest military in the world. Our nation is fortunate to have her service.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. RON KIND

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. KIND. Madam Speaker, on June 8, 2009, I missed rollcall votes 311, 312, and 313 due to family reasons. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on each of those votes.

A TRIBUTE IN RECOGNITION OF SANTOS CRESPO, JR.

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Santos Crespo, Jr., a visionary leader in New York City's labor community.

Santos Crespo, Jr. was first introduced to the labor movement at the age of 10, when his father, a delegate and executive board member of Local 6, H.E.R.E. (Hotel Employees & Restaurant Employees Union) brought him to meetings where he witnessed the struggles non-unionized employees must endure.

Santos Crespo, Jr. began community organizing at the age of 14 and was recognized by the late W. H. Booth, Chairman of the Committee on Human Rights under then Mayor John Lindsay. He was a founding member of the Black and Puerto Rican Student Union at Bronx Community College and was instrumental in introducing Black and Puerto Rican Studies there. He has received numerous awards, was named by the Daily News Viva as one of New York City's Influential Latinos, and has also served in numerous committees related to youth and substance abuse prevention and intervention.

Santos Crespo, Jr. is currently the Executive Vice President of the New York City Board of Education Employees Union, Local 372, DC 37, AFSCME, the largest local (26,000 members) within DC 37 and also serves as one of DC 37's Vice Presidents. He is also a member of the New York City Chapter of the Labor Council for Latin American Advancement (LCLAA), serves on its Executive Board, and also serves on the Executive Board of the national LCLAA, representing 1.4 million Latino Trade Unionists. He is also a member of many other labor organizations such as the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists (CBTU) and the Asian Pacific American Labor Alliance (APALA) along with civil rights organizations including the Congress for Puerto Rican Rights and the New York NAACP.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize Santos Crespo, Jr., a champion of New York City's many labor causes.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Santos Crespo, Jr.

CONGRATULATING DANA WYGLE, RECIPIENT OF THE AHWATUKEE
FOOTHILLS CHAMBER OF COM-MERCE 2009 WOMEN IN BUSINESS SCHOLARSHIP

HON. HARRY E. MITCHELL

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the achievements of Dana Wygle, who is the recipient of the 2009 Ahwatukee Chamber of Commerce Women in Business $1,000 Scholarship. The Ahwatukee Foothills Chamber recently honored Dana at the Ahwatukee Women in Business Faces of Success event, which recognizes present and future businesswomen.

Dana recently graduated from Desert Vista High School. An active and involved student, she also worked at Barro's Pizza throughout high school. Dana danced, served as a team captain for the American Cancer Society's 24-hour Relay for Life in 2008 and 2009, and was a member of DECA, a student business organization. She plans to use the scholarship award to attend the W.P. Carey School of Business at Arizona State University. Her goal is to own and operate a sports bar.

Madam Speaker, please join me in congratulating Dana Wygle for her accomplishments and wishing her the best in all her future endeavors.

A TRIBUTE TO JIMMY DEE CLARK

HON. RANDY NEUGEBAUER

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. NEUGEBAUER. Madam Speaker, I would like to take this time to recognize Jimmy Dee Clark for his dedication to the 19th Congressional District of Texas. Jimmy retires this month after 23 years of continuous service to the district.

Born to Leeman and Frances Clark on December 12, 1945, Jimmy was raised on a farm in Acuff, Texas. He graduated from Roosevelt High School in 1964 and just two years later, he married his childhood sweetheart, Rita Dunagan. After 20 years of running his family farm, Jimmy began an additional career in public service.

In 1986, my predecessor in Congress, Larry Combest, hired Jimmy as a district representative. As Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee in the 106th and 107th Congresses, Mr. Combest greatly shaped farm policy in this country, and Jimmy brought indispensable insight as a liaison between the farmers and ranchers of the 19th District and their representative. Jimmy was instrumental in helping Chairman Combest shepherd the 2002 Farm Bill through Congress.

Following Chairman Combest's retirement in 2003, Jimmy came to work for me as my District Director and Deputy Chief of Staff. Jimmy's experience and counsel have made him an invaluable asset to my staff. Most notable, however, is Jimmy's ability to relate to his fellow farmers in West Texas and to help ensure I understand their business, their concerns and their role in District 19's economy. Again, Jimmy's guidance and his role as the voice of the farmers of my district were essential in helping me during the 2008 Farm Bill.

Jimmy is also a strong Christian and family man. He and Rita have two daughters, Jill and Randee, and five grandchildren: Caden, Kacie, Josh, Steffanie, and Gabbie, that I know he will now get to spend more time with. A 32nd degree Mason, Jimmy's public service has reached more than just the farmers in West Texas. He has served as a past member and Commander of the Lubbock County Sheriff's Reserve. A licensed pilot, Jimmy's hobbies include flying and home remodeling.

I am enormously appreciative to Jimmy for his hard work and for his contributions to improving the course of agriculture policy in the United States and in West Texas. More important, I am proud to count him as a friend. Those in District 19, including myself, thank him for a job well-done and extend to him our best wishes for his retirement/retirement.

HONORING THE LIFE AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF NORMAN BRINKER

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the life and accomplishments of restaurateur Norman Brinker.

Brinker, the chairman emeritus and former chief executive of Brinker International, died June 9th at the age of 78.

Brinker, the founder of Steak and Ale restaurant in 1966, built Brinker International into a restaurant giant. He is most well known for turning Chili's Grill and Bar restaurant from a string of local restaurants into a national chain owned by Brinker International. Brinker's illustrious restaurant career began in my Dallas area district in 1965, opening Brink's Coffee Shop, and I am deeply saddened by the loss of someone so influential to the history of the city.

In his time in the restaurant industry, Mr. Brinker has changed American casual dining, while touching the lives of many in the restaurant industry. At one time or another, essentially every major restaurant chain in the country had as its leader a former employee of Brinker.

Aside from his commitment to the restaurant industry, Mr. Brinker also served as a board member and important counsel for the Susan G. Komen for the Cure foundation.

Mr. Brinker's legacy stands as a testament to interaction with the local community, and a foresight for changes in the restaurant community that would remain for years to come. I ask my fellow members of Congress to join me in honoring Norman Brinker and his impact both in the Dallas area and nationwide.

RECOGNIZING MASSACHUSETTS FOR RESOLUTION

HON. NIKI TSONGAS

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Ms. TSONGAS. Madam Speaker, as the House is soon to consider comprehensive climate change legislation, I would like to illustrate how individual states stand ready to lead the effort to combat global warming and are willing to take extremely ambitious and necessary stands. On March 12th, my home state of Massachusetts passed a resolution committing to re-power America with 100 percent clean electricity in the next ten years. The resolution was successful in large part because of the tireless efforts of Massachusetts Power Shift, a grassroots organization of climate advocates. Global warming is no longer an academic question for scientists to ponder. It's a very real crisis that requires American leadership. This is not a political issue; this is a critical generational responsibility that will take a commitment from every American. The renewable technologies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and move towards energy independence exist; the societal will and desire to go green have been demonstrated; and the political climate to finally create sound public policy to do so is now present. Re-powering America with clean energy will create jobs, reduce our dependence on foreign oil, and help reduce greenhouse gas emissions—the clearest solution to preserving our natural treasures for future generations. I am proud to represent the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and congratulate its legislature for such a resolution.

CONDEMNING THE MURDER OF STEPHEN TYRONE JOHNS

HON. MICHELE BACHMANN

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mrs. BACHMANN. Madam Speaker, I rise to share in the nation's shock, outrage, and sorrow at the tragic shooting today at the U.S. Holocaust Museum here in Washington. My heart and prayers go out to the family of the young security guard, Stephen Tyrone Johns, who was killed in this senseless crime.

Senator FRANK LAUTENBERG, who serves on the board for the museum, noted the irony that this hateful act took place in this beautiful, peaceful place; a sort of thoughtful sanctuary dedicated to ensuring that the evil of the holocaust never again gains a foothold on this earth. How right he is. How many times must this museum serve to teach the world about the horrible power of hate?

Earlier this week, this body considered two resolutions, one condemning the killing of Dr. George Tiller and one condemning the killing of Army Private William Long and the wounding of Army Private Quinton Ezeagwula. Like today's killing, these acts were simply reprehensible. The taking of innocent life cannot be justified.

Our society has traveled down a road that should never have been trodden. Human life has been devalued. Violence has been glorified. The gift of living has lost its meaning. In accepting his Nobel Prize, Dr. Martin Luther King said, "Man must evolve for all human conflict a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love." As a people, we must promote life, we must celebrate this miracle. And, as a Congress, we must lead the way with laws that protect all, particularly the most vulnerable amongst us, and that encourage loving, life-affirming ways.

46TH ANNIVERSARY OF EQUAL PAY ACT

HON. MIKE QUIGLEY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. QUIGLEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the anniversary of an important milestone in our American history.

Today marks the 46th anniversary of the passage of the Equal Pay Act.

In 1963, Congress passed the Equal Pay Act to prohibit employers from wage discrimination on the basis of someone's sex.

This groundbreaking shift was a game-changer for women who were before, and in many places still are, treated as unequals in the workplace.

It was important to level the playing field.

It was important to provide equal pay for equal work.

And it's important for us today to remember that we need more game-changers—that there are more wrongs to right, and that there are inequalities and injustices to remedy.

That those things over which we have no control—our race, our gender, our sexual orientation, our disabilities—should not divide us or preclude anyone from achieving success and providing for his or her family.

The enactment of the EPA was only the first step, and while women's salaries have risen dramatically, we have more work to do to end employment and pay discrimination.

Let's remember that all Americans are created equal and deserve equal treatment.

We should keep that in mind, not just today on this anniversary, but every day.

CONGRATULATING PATTY DURANT, RECIPIENT OF THE AHWATUKEE FOOTHILLS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE 2009 WOMEN IN BUSINESS PALO VERDE AWARD

HON. HARRY E. MITCHELL

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. MITCHELL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the achievements of Patty Durant as the recipient of the 2009 Women in Business Palo Verde Award. The Ahwatukee Foothills Chamber recently honored Patty at the Ahwatukee Women in Business Faces of Success event, which recognizes present and future businesswomen. The award is given to female Chamber members who are role models for other women in business.

Patty is involved with her local business community in many different ways. She is a long-time Ahwatukee Foothills Chamber of Commerce member, treasurer of the Board of Directors, and past chairwomen of its women in business committee. For the past two years, she has served on the Tukee Home Tour committee, a group which organizes events to allow participants the opportunity to view remodeled homes in the community. In addition to her involvement with the chamber, she is a sales representative for Ahwatukee Foothills and Tempe offices of Empire Title Agency.

Presently, Patty serves as a co-chair of the Chamber Scholarship sub-committee, evidence of her commitment to the support of future businesswomen. At the same event at which she was honored for her achievements, she presented 2009 Desert Vista High School graduate Dana Wygle with the Ahwatukee Chamber of Commerce Women in Business Scholarship award.

Madam Speaker, please join me in recognizing Patty Durant for her contributions to her local business community and her efforts to encourage the endeavors of future businesswomen.

RECOGNIZING THE RECIPIENTS OF THE 2009 SHELTER HOUSE, INC.
VOLUNTEER AWARDS

HON. GERALD E. CONNOLLY

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 10, 2009

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Shelter House, Inc., and more particularly the contributions that its volunteers make in service to our community. Shelter House and its outstanding volunteers serve Northern Virginia by coming to the aid of some of those most in need of support and assistance. Volunteers are critical in helping Shelter House achieve its mission of breaking the cycle of homelessness by providing crisis intervention, temporary housing, training, counseling, and programs to promote self sufficiency.

Shelter House is a community-based, non-profit organization. It was formed in 1981 when several ecumenical groups came together to better serve low-income individuals and families. Shelter House operates two shelters, the Katherine K. Hanley Family Shelter and the Patrick Henry Family Shelter, which provide temporary housing for families in our community who find themselves homeless. In addition, Shelter House offers transitional housing services throughout Fairfax County. As part of the effort to stop the cycle of homelessness, the services provided by Shelter House continue even after individuals enter permanent housing.

Individuals, organizations, and businesses dedicate their time, money, and wherewithal to help Shelter House succeed in its efforts to end homelessness in Fairfax County. These relationships are critical assets to Shelter House and a leading cause for its successes. Shelter House has recognized the specific contributions from its partners and volunteers and named the following recipients of its 2009 Volunteer Awards: Ending Homelessness Award: Lord of Life Lutheran Church; Youth Volunteer Award: Simrun Soni; Unsung Hero Award: Mary Joyce; Special Events Award: Jack and Jill of Northern Virginia; Friend of Shelter House Kids Award for the Patrick Henry Family Shelter: Ira Kirschbaum; Friend of Shelter House Kids Award for the Katherine K. Hanley Family Shelter: Ron Koch; Community Partner Award for the Patrick Henry Family Shelter: Interior Redesign Industry Specialists, National Capitol Area; Community Partner Award for the Katherine K. Hanley Family Shelter: Clifton Community Women's Club; and Community Champion Awards: Miller and Smith; Junior League of Northern Virginia and Capital One.

The outstanding efforts of the above-mentioned individuals and organizations merit special recognition, but one must acknowledge the impact of all Shelter House volunteers who work to provide secure and structured environments for families and connect them with the supportive services they require. These volunteers help make Shelter House one of the most effective organizations in the battle to end homelessness by empowering families to reach their full potential.

Madam Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in expressing our gratitude for the efforts of these volunteers and their colleagues at Shelter House. The selfless commitment of these individuals provides enumerable benefits to Northern Virginia as a community as well as life-changing services to the individuals in need.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, June 11, 2009 may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

SENATE—Thursday, June 11, 2009

The Senate met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable KIRSTEN E. GILLIBRAND, a Senator from the State of New York.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Almighty God of love, whose plan for history is to bring unity to our world, bring unity to this legislative body. Lord, we don't ask for uniformity, which tries to find the lowest common denominator. We desire true unity with its bountiful diversity. Help our lawmakers to create an environment for such harmony. Give them the wisdom to appreciate each other and to honor their differences. May they see the good, even in those who oppose their views, knowing that out of differences can come the synthesis of truth and action that represents maximum wisdom and influence. Empower them to serve one another in a way that honors You. We pray in Your loving Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable KIRSTEN E. GILLIBRAND led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, June 11, 2009.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable KIRSTEN E. GILLIBRAND, a Senator from the State of New York, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Madam President, following the remarks of the leaders, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 2 p.m. and Senators will be allowed to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each. The first hour is equally divided between the two leaders or their designees, with the Republicans controlling the first half and the majority controlling the next half.

Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 1256, the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act. The time until 2:30 will be equally divided and controlled between Senators DODD and ENZI or their designees, from 2 to 2:30. At 2:30, we will vote on passage of the bill.

MEASURES PLACED ON CALENDAR—S. 1232 and H.R. 2751

Mr. REID. Madam President, I understand there are two bills at the desk due for a second reading.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is correct.

The clerk will read the titles of the bills for a second time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1232) to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act with respect to the importation of prescription drugs, and for other purposes.

A bill (H.R. 2751) to accelerate motor fuel savings nationwide and provide incentives to registered owners of high polluting automobiles to replace such automobiles with new fuel efficient and less polluting automobiles.

Mr. REID. Madam President, one is the drug reimportation legislation that has been around for a number of years. We are trying to move forward on that legislation. Senators DORGAN, MCCAIN, SNOWE, and a number of people are very interested in that legislation. We are going to try to work it out and have this on the Senate floor on the earliest possible date. The other one is the so-called cash for clunkers bill.

I object to any further proceedings with respect to these bills en bloc.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bills will be placed on the calendar.

HONORING OFFICER STEPHEN T. JOHNS

Mr. REID. Madam President, yesterday, this city and our country experienced a terrible and horrifying tragedy. A man by the name of Stephen Johns went to work every day for the last 6 years at one of our Nation's most moving museums—a living memorial to one of our world's most horrific atrocities—the Holocaust Memorial Museum.

While standing guard yesterday at that U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Mr. Stephen Johns was killed while protecting thousands of others who were inside the building from the same fate that he suffered. His death has shocked, upset, and angered the Senate, our Nation, and all who detest such senseless bloodshed.

Mr. Johns was murdered in a place built to memorialize humanity's most unspeakable murders. He was a victim of violence and hatred in a place dedicated to teaching us the evils of violence and hatred. He was a target of intolerance in a place created for reflection on the consequences of intolerance. His death reminds us that we have much more work to do.

Stephen Johns was just 39 years old. He had a wife and a son. He grew up in Temple Hills, MD, just a few miles south and east of where I stand today. He still lived in that community. Mr. Johns started working at the Holocaust Museum after spending a year in New Orleans in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

Those who knew Mr. Johns called him "Big John" and "a gentle giant." Those who knew him describe him as caring, polite, friendly, and helpful. Even those who didn't know him are deeply saddened by his loss and inspired by his heroism.

In the spirit of the museum where every day he so bravely reported for duty, it is our duty to keep alive his memory. Today, the Holocaust Museum is closed. Its flags fly at half staff. When it opens tomorrow, it will continue to serve as one of our Nation's most poignant reminders of the inexcusable racism, hatred, violence, and cruelty that we must never stop trying to erase from our world. When it opens tomorrow, and every day thereafter, Stephen Johns' courage and courtesy will be missed.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. REID. Madam President, our plan to fix America's broken health care system is based on a simple premise: when it comes to keeping ourselves and our loved ones healthy, people—not corporations—should be in the driver's seat.

We have a plan to right that wrong. That plan is guided by three goals: One, lower the high costs of health care; two, ensure every American has access to that quality, affordable care; three, let people choose their own doctors, hospitals, and health plans.

One of those choices should be a public option. This has two primary benefits: First, people can choose to get their insurance from someone other than a greedy private insurance company; second, the very existence of that public option means there is more competition in the market. As a result, the private options will have to serve their customers even better.

The Republicans often like to pretend the government will force you to take the public option. Every time you hear them say that, you know they are not interested in honest debate. After all, it is right in the name; it is a public "option." So talking about government forcing anybody to do anything is simply unfair and not accurate. It is a public option, meaning you have choices.

If you have coverage, and you like it, you can keep it. You should be able to choose the best coverage for your family. You should be able to compare benefits and prices instead of surrendering to out-of-control corporations. You, the individual, should be in control of your own family's health decisions.

I am confident that both private insurance companies and the option of a public plan can live in harmony. When you send a birthday present to a relative—say, I want to send something to one of my children in Nevada—the products that I choose can be sent by FedEx, UPS, DHL, or you can choose the U.S. Postal Service. The Postal Service may not be perfect, but because that public option is there, the private companies—FedEx, UPS, and DHL—know they cannot overcharge, rip you off, or slack in their service.

Just like our proposal for the health care system, you don't have to choose the Postal Service. But it is good to know it is there. For some, it is all they can afford. I hear every day from Nevadans who are asking for our help. They are people turned down for health coverage by insurance providers who care more about profits than people; people who lost their health coverage when they lost their jobs and now have no means of getting it back; people who play by the rules and rightly demand our health care system be guided by common sense.

Nearly two-thirds of all bankruptcies are caused by medical problems and the exorbitant bills that ensue. Many of the foreclosures are both a cause and an effect for the global credit crisis and can be traced back to health insurance costs.

If you agree we already have enough economic problems on our hands, if you agree we cannot wait another year while 50 million Americans live without any options to stay healthy, then you will agree now is the time for action, not partisan games.

Insurance companies are holding Americans' health hostage. Far too many people cannot afford the ransom. If we are going to fix our broken health care system, we are going to have to return control to the people who need that care.

I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. McCONNELL. Madam President, the American people are frustrated with the U.S. health care system. But they are also increasingly concerned about some of the proposals coming from Washington. Now the alarms are beginning to sound. As reported in today's New York Times, the Nation's doctors are strongly opposed to the so-called government plan that appears to be gaining steam in Washington. The American Medical Association says the government plan threatens to restrict patient choice by putting out of business existing health plans that cover nearly 70 percent of Americans.

One estimate suggests that 119 million Americans could lose the private coverage they have as a consequence of the government plan. Moreover, the AMA, in its statement from yesterday, notes that "the corresponding surge in public plan participation would likely lead to an explosion of costs that would need to be absorbed by taxpayers."

Republicans and Democrats alike agree that health care reform is needed in this country. But a government plan is not the kind of reform the American people want. They want real reform for a system that's in serious need of it. Unfortunately, what some in Washington are proposing instead is the illusion of a reform that will replace what is good about health care in America with something that is far worse.

Instead of making health care more affordable and accessible, these proposals could make treatments and procedures that everyday Americans currently take for granted less accessible or even impossible to obtain—even as these proposals would add to the colossal and unsustainable debt that already burdens the Federal Government.

I have spoken repeatedly on the Senate floor about the dangers of a government-run health plan. By drawing on the experience of countries that have already adopted these government-run system I have pointed out the serious problems government-run health care creates for millions around the world. I have noted that a common defect of these government-run plans is that they deny, delay, and ration health care. And I have noted that the primary culprit in almost every case is the so-called government board that these countries have established to decide which treatments and medicines patients in these countries can and cannot have. This morning I would like to focus again on these so-called government boards, so people have an idea of what they could expect from a government-run plan here in the U.S.

Britain's government board, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence, or NICE, is responsible for setting guidelines on the use of drugs and treatments for patients in that country. The government bureaucrats at this agency are supposed to weigh the effectiveness of a medicine or a treatment against its cost to the government. If the government thinks that a drug is too expensive, it can refuse to make it available to patients, regardless of any potential benefits.

Last summer, the board in Great Britain denied patients in that country access to four kidney cancer drugs that have the potential to extend life. Here's the chilling explanation it gave to justify the move.

Although these treatments are clinically effective, regrettably the cost . . . is such that they are not a cost-effective use of . . . resources.

After a public outcry, NICE reversed its position on one of the drugs but affirmed its ban on the other three.

In New Zealand, a government board known as Pharmac reviews potential drugs and treatments and decides whether they should be prescribed to patients in that country. Pharmac says its goal is to use its "expertise" to "help . . . decide which new hospital medicines are cost-effective." And like the government board in Great Britain, if Pharmac does not think a drug's cost justifies its benefits, it can refuse to make it available to patients or doctors who want it.

One drug that Pharmac did not think was worth the cost was Herceptin, which had proven to be effective in fighting breast cancer. Although Pharmac began covering the drug for advanced breast cancer in 2002, it refused to fund the drug for early stage breast cancer. After a public outcry and a reevaluation of the decision, Pharmac finally relented and decided to allow the drug for early stage breast cancer in 2007, but only for a limited amount of treatments.

These kinds of decisions about which drugs should or should not be covered are based on a method commonly known as "comparative effectiveness." Comparative effectiveness is not alien to the U.S. health care system. Indeed, the stimulus bill Congress passed earlier this year included significant funding to lay the groundwork for just this kind of research in the United States. In my view, the more research we do on the effectiveness of drugs and treatments the better. Doctors should have as much good information as possible in dealing with their patients.

What Americans strenuously oppose, however, is the government using this information to deny access to treatment or procedures that patients and doctors choose to pursue—just as government agencies such as NICE and Pharmac do in Great Britain and New Zealand. Americans oppose this kind of government-mandated limitation on health care. They simply will not allow it.

That is why my friend, Senator KYL, will propose a bill that will prohibit the government from ever using comparative effectiveness in this way. It is a wise bill, and it should be included as a part of any health reform we consider. Americans want their doctors to have clinical information on which treatments work best and which ones do not. But government bureaucrats should not be able to use that information to determine what treatments Americans can or cannot get. That is a decision we currently leave between a patient and his or her doctor, and that is where it should remain.

Americans want to see changes in the health care system, but they don't want changes that deny, delay, or ration care. They want reforms that control costs, even as they protect patients. They want us to discourage frivolous medical liability lawsuits that limit access to care in places such as rural Kentucky. They want prevention and wellness programs that cut costs by helping people quit smoking, overcome obesity, and diagnose illnesses early. And they want us to address the needs of small businesses without imposing new mandates or taxes that kill jobs.

All of us want reform, but the government-run plan some are proposing in the United States is not the kind of change Americans are looking for. We should learn the lessons from problems we have seen in countries such as Great Britain and New Zealand. We should learn a lesson from the nightmares so many people in these countries and their families have endured as a result of government-run health care and the bureaucratic government boards that almost always come with it.

Madam President, I am about to yield the floor, but before I do that, I see my friend from Arizona is on the floor. I want to express to him my gratitude for his leadership on this very important issue. The most important issue we will be dealing with this year is the question of whether the government should literally take over and run 16 percent of our economy. We have seen the government take over banks, insurance companies, and automobile companies. Now it appears as if there is an effort underway to take over health care as well.

I thank my friend from Arizona for the contribution he has made on this important issue in the past and say we are looking forward to working together on this in the future.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business until 2 p.m., with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each, with the first hour equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, with the Republicans controlling the first 30 minutes and the majority controlling the second 30 minutes.

The Senator from Arizona.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I rise to discuss two issues this morning, health care reform and also the pending supplemental spending bill that, according to news reports, does not include the Senate language that explicitly allowed President Obama to keep photos of detainee abuse during the Bush administration confidential.

I thank my friend from Kentucky, the Republican leader, who has shown such impressive leadership on, as he describes, probably the most important domestic issue that certainly will be addressed by this Congress. I look forward to working with my colleagues over the next few weeks on legislation reforming our current health care system.

Americans are looking to Congress to enact health care legislation that provides all Americans affordable access to health insurance and the ability to choose the health insurance policy that fits each American's needs. Yesterday, it was reported that 62 percent of Americans support Congress enacting a major overhaul of the U.S. health care system, according to a Diageo/Hotline poll.

I believe health care should be available to all and not limited to where you work or how much money you make. I believe any proposal must use competition to improve the quality, availability, and affordability of health insurance and match people's needs, lower prices, and promote portability. I believe American families, not Washington bureaucrats or insurance companies, should be in charge of any health care decision. But I don't believe we need to expand government's bureaucracy to control one-sixth of our economy to ensure the uninsured get health coverage. Nor do I believe Americans should be asked to pay more in taxes to cover the costs of any comprehensive health care reform legislation.

Last month, the Wall Street Journal stated:

But now Democrats need the money to finance $1.2 trillion or more for their new health insurance entitlement. . . .

A sampler:

End or limit the tax-exempt status of charitable hospitals. . . .

Make college students in work-study programs subject to the payroll tax. Also targeted are medical residents, perhaps on the principle that they'll one day be "rich doctors."

I agree that any real health care reform proposal must address the tax treatment of employer-provided health benefits, but not in such a way that would force Americans to fork over more of their hard-earned money to the Federal Government, particularly during these difficult times.

Today individuals who receive health insurance through their employer are not taxed on their health care benefits, as we know. However, those who purchase coverage on their own do not receive such a tax break. That is unfair and regressive. It hits those who need this tax break the most—the self-employed or working poor whose employer does not offer health insurance coverage.

To offset the taxable treatment of this income, I believe Americans should have funds returned to them to assist with the cost of acquiring health insurance. An approach such as this treats individuals equally, in stark contrast to the system we currently have.

Key to any proposal is a policy that allows people to have accessible, portable, and affordable health insurance coverage. Policies should also address what I hear from Americans everywhere I go—choice. Americans want choice. They want choice of their doctor, their care, their coverage, and employment freedom—freedom to seek employment that is not dependent on whether an employer provides insurance coverage. This is particularly important in today's difficult economic times when Americans are uncertain about whether they will have a job tomorrow. Some, including the President, criticize this approach. However, the New York Times reported:

The Obama administration is signaling to Congress that the President would support taxing some employee health benefits.

While I appreciate the President's and the Democrats' new consideration of such a proposal, it is not acceptable to turn this into a tax-and-spend health care reform. Any new resources derived from changing the existing tax treatment of private health insurance should be devoted to a fairer and more efficient mechanism for Americans to acquire private insurance.

The United States spends over $2.4 trillion on health care. Health insurance premiums continue to rise as employer-based family coverage increased and Medicare and Medicaid spent $818 billion in 2008 and is projected to reach $1.7 trillion by 2018.

I also want to mention something that should trouble every American and every Member of this Chamber.

Last week, I spoke about what the special interests were doing to derail much needed health reform dealing with prescription drugs, a reform that is very bipartisan. Any Member in this Chamber knows I work across the aisle on policies that are important to the American people. Health reform is one issue that fundamentally must be bipartisan.

All Americans are affected by what we do here, so we should be working in a bipartisan manner. It is with extreme regret that I read in "Roll Call" this morning about a meeting that Democratic staff was threatening—let me repeat—threatening Democratic lobbyists or the organizations they represent against meeting with Republicans and that attending meetings with Republicans "will be viewed as a hostile act."

This is outrageous. I hope the article is inaccurate. I hope the staff on the other side does not view health reform as a process they control by threats and hostilities. I hope we are above that.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the "Roll Call" article.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Roll Call, June 11, 2009]

BAUCUS AIDES WARN K STREET

(By David M. Drucker, Anna Palmer and Kate Ackley)

Top aides to Senate Finance Chairman Max Baucus (D-Mont.) called a last minute, pre-emptive strike on Wednesday with a group of prominent Democratic lobbyists, warning them to advise their clients not to attend a meeting with Senate Republicans set for Thursday.

Russell Sullivan, the top staffer on Finance, and Jon Selib, Baucus' chief of staff, met with a bloc of more than 20 contract lobbyists, including several former Baucus aides.

"They said, 'Republicans are having this meeting and you need to let all of your clients know if they have someone there, that will be viewed as a hostile act,'" said a Democratic lobbyist who attended the meeting.

"Going to the Republican meeting will say 'I'm interested in working with Republicans to stop health care reform,'" the lobbyists added.

Republican leaders have been meeting with health care stakeholders for months, with those sessions occurring "more frequently than once a month," according to a senior Senate GOP aide.

The stated purpose of Thursday's meeting, organized by Sen. John Thune (R-S.D.), is to discuss proposals for how to pay for health care reform.

But the underlying motivation for the get-together is to encourage health care lobbyists and stakeholders concerned about the Democrats' health care reform plans to speak out publicly.

"They need to speak up," one Senate Republican leadership aide said. "They need to help us help them."

Thune said Democrats are using threats and intimidation to keep unhappy stakeholders silent.

"If you don't engage on this thing, this train's leaving the station," Thune said. "If you want [Republicans] to have more influence, you've got to engage."

One longtime health care lobbyist agreed that the GOP frustration is spilling out of the Capitol and onto K Street.

"It is notable that Republicans are really finding their voice, and their level of frustration is building with the stakeholders' inability or refusal to speak out," this lobbyist said. "They're getting frustrated. Republicans are doing it themselves."

One senior Democratic source charged that Thune's meeting and the supposed motives behind it are in fact a smoke screen for killing health care reform altogether.

"While Democrats and many Republicans are working collaboratively to reform health care, a small group of Republicans appear all too eager to derail this promising, bipartisan effort," this source said. "It's politics as usual, it's disheartening and it's a shame."

Senate Republicans are opposed to plans by President Barack Obama and Congressional Democrats to implement a government-run, public plan option as a part of health care reform. They also are concerned with how Democrats plan to pay for reform.

Recognizing they don't have the votes to stop legislation on their own, Republicans are pushing their natural allies in the business community to help bring public pressure to bear as another way to influence the outcome.

Obama has set Oct. 15 as the deadline for approval of health care reform, and Democratic leaders in Congress are rushing to clear bills from their respective chambers by the end of July.

"Our effort has been to get these folks to speak their mind," one senior Senate Republican aide said.

After months of holding their tongues while inclusive, bipartisan negotiations continued in the Senate Finance and Health, Education, Labor and Pensions committees, the business community has now considered speaking out, given their displeasure with the HELP panel's reform bill, which was made public on Tuesday.

But with Baucus' office still warning dissenters that anyone who makes their opposition public could be permanently excluded from future negotiations, the groups representing businesses, health care providers, hospitals and similar stakeholders are still wavering on whether to voice their concerns publicly.

The lineup of lobbyists who attended the Wednesday session included a cast of Democratic insiders similar to that at previous meetings convened by Baucus' staff. The participants included: Jeff Forbes, a former Baucus chief of staff who lobbies at Cauthen Forbes & Williams; Jonathon Jones, a partner with Peck, Madigan, Jones & Stewart; Tarplin Strategies' Rich Tarplin, an assistant secretary at Health and Human Services in the Clinton administration; another former Baucus top aide, David Castagnetti, of Mehلمان Vogel Castagnetti and OB-C Group founder Larry O'Brien.

Democratic sources noted Wednesday that Baucus is courting Republican support and remains committed to treating all stakeholders fairly.

On Wednesday, he met with Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) in the Capitol, part of a marathon day of bipartisan meetings that included a session with his GOP colleagues at the White House and discussions with Republican members of the Finance Committee.

"Chairman Baucus wants to continue to keep health care stakeholders informed of the progress on health reform," said the Senator's Finance Committee spokesman, Scott Mulhauser. "This is a lengthy, transformative process, and meetings like these are an essential part of the ongoing, bipartisan effort to continue to keep everyone at the table working together."

One lobbyist who attended the Wednesday meeting with Baucus' staff said that the message was more bipartisan. "They said they anticipate having a bipartisan bill and that the process is going well with Republicans," this lobbyist said. But, the lobbyist added, Baucus' team did warn, "If your clients attack the process or the product, it's going to be hard to work with you."

As for Baucus, he told reporters earlier this week that he was not aware of health care stakeholders being threatened by his staff to play ball with the Finance Committee-led negotiations or risk being blackballed from the process.

"I'm sure they can all say what they want to say," Baucus said, referring to GOP accusations that health care lobbyists have been subject to intimidations and threats. "It's news to me. I don't think so. I don't know of any."

Republican lobbyists said they have not felt any threats from their party.

"For a while, Republicans have cautioned industry to be careful about getting in bed with the administration or Kennedy or Baucus too early," said Janet Grissom, a lobbyist at Peck, Madigan, Jones & Stewart, who was once a top aide to McConnell.

DETAINEE PHOTOS

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, it appears the House Democrats, according to a "Roll Call" article this morning about the supplemental bill—I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD this morning's "Roll Call" article titled "Intraparty Fights PerVADE Agenda" concerning the war supplemental bill.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Roll Call, June 11, 2009]

INTRAPARTY FIGHTS PERVADE AGENDA

(By Steven T. Dennis and Emily Pierce, Roll Call Staff)

Democratic leaders appeared to clear the way Wednesday for passage of a $100 billion war supplemental, even as they worked furiously to repair internal rifts over health care and climate change legislation.

The war bill, which has swollen with items including a cash-for-clunkers incentive, will eliminate Senate language explicitly allowing President Barack Obama to keep photos of detainee abuse during the Bush administration confidential.

That language was included by the Senate and is backed by Obama and Republicans, but it has been a deal-breaker for House liberals like Financial Services Chairman Barney Frank (Mass.).

Frank and other Democrats who opposed the war bill originally, have committed to voting for it in order to help carry a $108 billion package of loans to the International Monetary Fund, an Obama priority.

Assuming no Republican support, Democratic leaders need 18 of 51 anti-war Democrats to back the bill, a number that they appear likely to reach despite the continued opposition from leaders of the Congressional Progressive Caucus.

House Republican leaders had derided the IMF money as a "global bailout" and vowed to whip hard to defeat the supplemental with it included.

And even moderate House Republicans from auto industry states appeared unlikely to be won over by the inclusion of a cash-for-clunkers provision aimed at jump-starting the auto industry.

"That's going to have no bearing on people's votes on the bill," Rep. Fred Upton (R-Mich.) said. "They're not going to get hardly any Republican votes."

The outcome of any Senate vote on the supplemental conference report remains uncertain, given that Sens. Joe Lieberman (ID-Conn.) and Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.) threatened to not only filibuster the bill, but also block other Senate business if the supplemental did not include their language barring disclosure of the detainee abuse photos.

One senior Senate Democratic aide said Lieberman and Graham's threat to hold up the supplemental indefinitely was unlikely to last and predicted that Defense Secretary Robert Gates would likely pressure the two defense hawks to relent so that funding for the wars wouldn't run out.

The trickier problem is what delay tactics Graham and Lieberman might use to stymie Senate action on other bills. The senior Senate Democratic aide acknowledged that Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) and Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) might have to come up with a plan for passing the language on some other bill that would be able to pass the House, but this aide noted that Obama has the strongest hand in getting Graham and Lieberman to stand down.

Senate Democratic aides said the language to close the prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, was designed to satisfy the Obama administration's need to transport terrorists for trial, as well as to ease, for the most part, Democrats' fear of political repercussions from having detainees permanently housed in the United States.

The language would allow terrorists to be in the U.S. for trial only, which the senior Senate Democratic aide said would "give Obama some flexibility while also mollifying those that have NIMBY problems."

But the supplemental has been largely a sideshow to the big push behind the scenes on health care, especially from the White House.

One House Democratic aide to a liberal lawmaker said left-leaning Members have been much more focused on health care reform and are generally happy with the direction negotiations on the issue are going.

"The debate is no longer whether there will be a public plan; it's over what the public plan will look like," the aide said.

Democratic House chairmen have dismissed a call from conservative Blue Dogs for a "trigger" option that would delay a government-sponsored health care plan, but there are still numerous fights going on behind the scenes—including on the makeup of the plan and how to pay for it.

Some Members fear that a Medicare-style plan that forces doctors to participate will provoke a revolt; others worry that a public plan may ultimately swallow up the entire marketplace.

But parochial concerns are also proving paramount, with individual lawmakers demanding answers on how it will affect their own districts. Rep. Dennis Cardoza (D-Calif.), a leading Blue Dog, said his district is plagued by a lack of doctors in part because of low reimbursement rates under government health programs.

"If that's not addressed, I'm not voting for the bill," he said. "We have huge amounts of details to put on the bones."

But health care isn't the only issue sparking Democratic intraparty battles.

The cap-and-trade bill limiting carbon emissions, largely negotiated behind closed doors in the House, has rural Democrats balking.

House Agriculture Chairman Collin Peterson (D-Minn.) said Wednesday that Democrats have reached an impasse on the climate change bill. He cast doubts that his committee would pass the bill by next week.

"I think it's very doubtful that we can get anything done by then," Peterson said.

Pelosi set a June 19 deadline for committee action on the bill, although she left open the possibility of an extension.

Peterson previously estimated that 45 Democrats would side with him in opposing the climate change measure if an agreement wasn't reached. On Wednesday, he said that number has likely grown.

"The more people look at this, the more problems they've got. My list has grown since I've been looking at it," Peterson said.

For his part, Energy and Commerce Chairman Henry Waxman (D-Calif.) said that there are "very constructive" discussions taking place and that he still wants the bill on the floor before the July Fourth recess.

House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (D-Md.) said he expected to bring the war bill to the floor next week. The conference committee was scheduled to meet at 3 p.m. today.

Mr. MCCAIN. I quote from it:

The war bill, which has swollen with items including a cash-for-clunkers incentive, will eliminate Senate language explicitly allowing President Barack Obama to keep photos of detainee abuse during the Bush administration confidential.

The Graham-Lieberman amendment that would classify these photos was accepted by voice vote. In other words, any Senator who wanted to object or vote against it could have called for a vote. Instead, it was unanimously adopted.

According to the "Roll Call" article I quoted, that provision will be removed from the emergency supplemental. According to that article:

One senior Democratic aide said Lieberman's and Graham's threat to hold up the supplemental indefinitely [unless their provision was included] was unlikely to last and predicted that Defense Secretary Robert Gates would likely pressure the two defense hawks to relent so that funding for the wars wouldn't run out.

I think this Democratic aide highly underestimates Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator GRAHAM, and the rest of us.

I had a conversation with General Petraeus the day before yesterday. I believe those conversations are confidential, and I asked his agreement to quote from him: If these photos are released, it would harm the ability of the United States military to pursue our national security interests and could put American lives in danger. That is a serious statement from the most respected military leader this Nation has.

I want to point out something very important. Today the President of the United States could issue an Executive order classifying those photos and not allowing them to be released. He could do it today. It is time for the President of the United States to stand up to the leftwing of his party for the good of the national security of this Nation.

I join others, that if that supplemental comes over without the provision which was adopted unanimously by the Senate to make sure those photos are not released because of the harm it would do to America's effort in combating radical Islamic extremism throughout the world and put the lives of the men and women who are serving in our military in greater danger—I intend to join my friends Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator GRAHAM in doing everything we can to oppose such legislation.

This war supplemental is intended to help us win this battle, the war on terrorism, dare I say. It is supposed to help the men and women who are serving in Iraq and Afghanistan as they pursue an implacable and evil enemy and try to instill democracy and freedom in these countries. And if these photos are made public, it will harm their effort and put their lives in danger.

I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing a bill that would eliminate the provision that prevents these photos from being published, and I call on the President today to relieve this pressure and declare, by Executive order, that these photos are classified and not to be released to the world's public.

Madam President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CLIMATE CHANGE

Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, the House of Representatives is prepared to pass the President's energy tax. It is also known as the American Clean Energy and Security Act. The act, therefore, is known as ACES—American Clean Energy and Security Act. ACES is the right thing to call this particular bill because it gambles—it gambles—with the future of the American people. In blackjack, the dealer might have an ace that is showing, but one card in the dealer's hand is always hidden. In this case, the hidden card is the card that shows the real cost of this bill to the American taxpayer. What the taxpayer doesn't know is that the game is rigged. The taxpayer is going to lose. No matter how many times the majority adds to this hand another giveaway to special interests, another tax break to offset the monumental cost of this bill, the end will be just the same: The taxpayer goes bust and Washington will win the game.

ACES is the product of a supermajority that the Democrats have in the House of Representatives. Given the rules and given the procedures of the House, reasonable amendments are going to be defeated or even blocked from ever being considered. The final product will not be a real starting point to begin this debate on climate change.

ACES is going to have a devastating effect on our economy, and we will see there will be no environmental benefit from doing this bill—none. That is not just my belief or my assessment alone, it is also the belief of others.

Martin Feldstein, noted Harvard economist, in a recent Washington Post article stated:

ACES will have a trivially small effect on global warming while imposing substantial costs on all American households.

Let me repeat that: a trivially small effect, while imposing substantial costs. How big are the costs? Well, he cites the Congressional Budget Office, which estimated that the resulting increases in consumer prices needed to achieve just a 15-percent reduction in carbon dioxide—slightly less than the target of this bill—would raise the cost of living $1,600 a year, every year, for every family in America. That is a $1,600 tax on every American family every year.

The Heritage Foundation predicts that the ACES approach could cost the economy $9.6 trillion and more than 1 million lost jobs into the future. And these are just the raw numbers. The real potential for economic pain goes much further.

David Sokol, chairman of MidAmerican Energy, points out that ACES—this bill—could be a bonanza. And for whom will it be a bonanza? For more Wall Street corruption and more Wall Street greed because ACES is going to deal in investment banks, it is going to deal in hedge funds and other speculators who want to speculate in the cap-and-trade market. David Sokol points out:

If you liked what credit default swaps did to our economy, you're going to love cap and trade.

Coincidentally, the House bill actually allows for credit default swaps.

He is not alone in his assessment. British scientist James Lovelock, who is a noted chemist and environmentalist, stated in January that:

Carbon trading, with its huge government subsidies, is just what the finance industry wanted. It'll make a lot of money for a lot of people and postpone the moment of reckoning.

So he is saying it will make a lot of money for a lot of people in the financial industry.

Carbon markets can also cause huge fluctuations. We can look to Europe as an example and what we saw happen there. In February of this year, the Financial Times wrote an article entitled "Fall in CO₂ Price a Risk to Green Investment." It seems that the price of carbon in the European Union had fallen so low that it no longer provided an incentive to lower the use of carbon.

So those are things happening not just for this country but around the world.

Another problem is the huge economic gamble ACES makes by bypassing cheaper, low-carbon fuels by heavily relying on unreliable expensive energy. This ACES legislation mandates that by 2020 the electric utilities meet 20 percent of their electricity demand through renewable energy sources and energy efficiency. This is the wrong approach. We need an all-of-the-above energy strategy to address our Nation's energy needs. We need to make America's energy as clean as we can, as fast as we can, without raising energy prices for American families. That is how you create and that is how you then sustain economic development. So I would say, let's develop all of our energy sources—wind, solar, geothermal, hydro, clean coal, nuclear, natural gas—all of the energy sources. Our Nation is so blessed with abundant energy resources. They are right here for us to use in a clean and environmentally friendly way. Coal is cheap and abundant in America. It is what is keeping our energy affordable today. Uranium is abundant in America too. Let's develop this proven zero-carbon resource. And, yes, let's develop all of the renewable energies—the wind, the solar, the hydropower. We need it all.

Lisa Jackson, Director of the Environmental Protection Agency, recently took a trip to Wyoming, and this is what she said while she was in my home State of Wyoming:

As a home of wind, coal, and natural gas, Wyoming is at the heart of America's energy future.

That is because Wyoming has it all. It has the coal, it has the wind, it has the natural resources of natural gas and oil and uranium for nuclear power. It has it all, and we need it all.

The bottom line is that the Democrats' cap-and-tax bill costs jobs and it raises energy prices. I don't understand why we can't make America's energy as clean as we can, as fast as we can, without raising energy prices on American families. The administration wants to take a different approach. Why are the American people being given this stacked deck, where all of the options hurt the economy, raise energy prices, and cost jobs? The President says we need green jobs. I agree. We also need red, white, and blue jobs—American energy, American energy sources.

The reality is, this partisan energy tax bill passing in the House is a bad bet for all of us. We shouldn't double down with any more taxpayer money to bail out the climate through an energy tax.

Madam President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, I understand we are in morning business, and I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for about 12 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUPERFUND IN KANSAS

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, I rise today to discuss an issue that is one of these "believe it or not" issues of waste and abuse concerning billions of tax dollars and stimulus funding. I have some good news and then I have some bad news to report.

First the good news. In the last 24 hours, we have been able to reverse a policy that would have used stimulus money to pave the same road twice within a matter of months. I said yesterday that did not pass the Kansas commonsense test or, for that matter, any State's commonsense test, and would be a huge abuse of taxpayer dollars. We have reversed this plan, this silly plan, in a bipartisan way.

I wish to personally thank Vice President BIDEN, the man charged with overseeing all of the stimulus spending, for taking action to correct this abuse after I contacted him. I really thank the Vice President because the White House moved and the Vice President moved in an expeditious fashion, and I, quite frankly, didn't expect they could move that fast, but they got the job done.

The Vice President will be in Kansas today, and I asked him to review this rather ridiculous example of wasteful spending occurring in Cherokee County, KS, just a short 2-hour drive south on U.S. Highway 96 from where the Vice President will be. You see, a section of old Highway 96 would have been resurfaced with stimulus funds. Then portions of an EPA Superfund site would have been cleaned up with stimulus funds, and the heavy equipment used for the cleanup would have damaged the newly resurfaced highway, so they would have to go back in and do the highway again. Once this cleanup was complete, additional stimulus funds would have gone to repair the road damage caused by the heavy trucks. Taxpayers would have paid almost $1 million to fix this road twice.

Fortunately, in working with the Vice President, we now have media reports that the Superfund cleanup will occur prior to any roadwork. That is the good news. Again, I credit the Vice President and his staff and his team.

Now for the bad news. While this spending issue has been fixed, there is a much larger spending issue affecting dozens of Kansas families in Cherokee County, KS, and that is still a major problem. I am going to urge the Vice President to again provide leadership. He is the self-proclaimed new sheriff in town. I am an honorary sheriff of Dodge City, KS, my hometown. So from one sheriff to another, I would simply say to the Vice President: Sheriff, I will ride shotgun or you can ride shotgun. We have the problem only half solved.

You see, in April, EPA Region 7 issued a press release saying Cherokee County would receive up to $25 million from the stimulus. According to the press release:

By starting or speeding up cleanup at Superfund sites, the [stimulus] funding is also increasing the speed with which these sites are returned to productive use. When a Superfund site is redeveloped, it can offer significant economic benefits to local communities, including future job creation.

Unfortunately, for fewer than 100 residents living in the city of Treece, the stimulus funding for this project is literally going down a sinking hole. The city of Treece, KS, sits on the Kansas-Oklahoma border. This small, rural community was once a world leader in lead and zinc mining, mining that lasted for nearly 100 years. As the mining companies shut down in the 1970s, the groundwater began to rise and the pillars that supported the soil above the mine shafts began to collapse and you had a giant sinkhole. Shortly thereafter—in 1983, to be exact—the EPA placed over 500 square miles in southeast Kansas, northeast Oklahoma, and southwest Missouri on the National Priorities List of the Superfund list, including the city of Treece. In total, Cherokee County, KS, where Treece is located, has 115 square miles in the Superfund Program.

Last summer, during a listening tour of this part of Kansas, I saw firsthand how 100 men and women and children are living in absolute blight. They live day by day not knowing when—and I mean when, not if—their homes will collapse into the earth below into a giant sinkhole. They remain there despite the loss of businesses and infrastructure because their homes have no market value and they cannot sell them to fund a new home or even rent one.

As parts of Cherokee County have been on the Superfund list for the last 26 years, the EPA has removed and replaced contaminated topsoil. According to their stimulus press release, the EPA will continue to remove lead-contaminated residential soil at more than 380 acres in Baxter Springs and Treece. That probably sounds like an admirable thing to do, but as the ground below it caves in, the exposed soil that has not been cleaned up will rise, so essentially this is a never-ending process. You are cleaning up topsoil on a single home, and after the sinkhole sinks, obviously the topsoil is going to be contaminated with the contaminated soil underneath the new topsoil. If you get all that, I think you got the problem. This is a never-ending process.

I have worked very long and hard with other members of the Kansas delegation to determine how best to address this situation. The only satisfactory answer anyone has been able to give me is to relocate the town to protect the residents from a complete cave-in. The Federal Government needs to buy out the land from the remaining homes and business owners and then prohibit any future construction on the property affected by the contamination. This is exactly what we did with Pitcher, OK, on the other side of the State line, just a few years ago. Most estimates indicate we could relocate the entire town with $3 million in Federal funding and $500,000 in State funding—funding the State of Kansas has already set aside. During the previous Congress, I introduced legislation to address the Federal portion of this funding.

Fast forward to today, with an economy experiencing a lot of turbulence and a so-called stimulus bill that everyone in this body heard was an absolute necessity and not only a job maintainer but a job creator. So I asked the EPA to use $3 million of already allocated stimulus funding to relocate the community—$3 million. I was told no.

Instead of solving this problem and relocating the families of Treece to a safe facility, the EPA, with the assistance of the stimulus package, continues to spend even more money, $25 million—eight times the amount needed to relocate the community, the 100 people who live in blight and fear that their homes will sink into a sinkhole—to put new soil—this is what they are currently going to do—onto contaminated soil, which is then going to collapse and recontaminate all the soil. This doesn't make sense.

I have had an ongoing dialog with EPA, and they have told me:

The wastes are causing great environmental harm to southeast Kansas—

We, of course, knew that—as evidenced by the documented impacts to birds, fish, mussels, macro-invertebrates, and horses. There is also evidence of harm to humans as it is related to elevated blood lead levels.

The letter went on to say:

EPA Region 7 believes the situation at the adjacent Region 6 Tar Creek Superfund site in Oklahoma materially differs from the Cherokee County Superfund site, and that is what drives different decisions for the Tar Creek Site.

I am going to refer to a couple of charts here.

This is a picture of Treece, KS, located right here. You can see all of these white objects here. Basically, that is the chat material that has come out of many mines over 100 years.

Here is Treece, KS, and here is Pitcher, OK. Here is a giant chat pile in between. I have been there. You see many little ponds and winding roads, and I advise you not to go fishing in any of those ponds. You might catch a three-eyed fish. At any rate, it is all contaminated, all a sinkhole, whether it is from Treece, KS, in Region 7 with the EPA or whether it is Pitcher, OK, in Region 6 in Dallas. I don't know what the difference is. If this is contaminated, and it is, and this is contaminated and looks the same, and it is, what the heck is the difference?

Let me show another angle so you can appreciate what I am talking about. This is what the people of Treece see every day as the Sun rises and sets. This is a giant chat mountain—all of this contaminated soil. This side of the chat mountain is Treece, the other side is Oklahoma—the same situation, same problem, same contaminated soil, same sinkhole, and the same thing on the other side, except EPA 7 in Kansas City can't get it through their heads that this is identical to the same problem over here.

Instead of spending $25 million to clean up and put topsoil on contaminated soil that will sink, why can't we spend $3 million to save the community of Treece and relocate these people? Basically, EPA Region 7 does not have a factual basis, according to them, "that would allow the use of regular or [stimulus] funds for a residential buy-out at the Treece subsite." Why? We were going to spend money for a road to be built twice. We are spending $25 million to put topsoil on a sinkhole. Why can't we put $3 million to relocate this town?

Here is my question. EPA acknowledged there is evidence of harm to humans. They listed a whole series of other animals and wildlife, and so on and so forth, that they are worried about. I understand that. But why not provide assistance to relocate fewer than 100 people from harm's way?

Furthermore, EPA told me that "a 10-year timeframe is estimated for complete waste remediation." Due to the continual mine collapses, I wonder if the environmental cleanup will ever be completed.

I think it is in the best interests of all taxpayers to quit throwing money down sinkholes and provide an opportunity for 100 folks who have no other options to move, as their homes are worth nothing. We do not need to spend, again, $25 million on a problem that will not be solved—topsoil on top of the sinkhole. We need to take care of these people and spend $3 million to let them get on with their lives. While American taxpayers are spending untold millions to prevent mortgage collapses, I can see no better use for the stimulus plan than to get the residents of Treece into safe homes.

I said once before, I am an honorary sheriff of Dodge City. I have a badge. You can go to Dodge City and you can meet the marshal, you can see Miss Kitty. You can go down to the Long Branch. We are used to taking care of problems ourselves. Kansas has appropriated $500,000 to do this. All we are asking for is $3 million, not the $25 million that I don't think is going to ever really result in any long-term cleanup.

You have to be there to realize just how bad this is, the pools of water and all. People will tell you: Senator, we are going to take you around this way. Don't walk this way.

So I would just ask Sheriff Joe, who is the self-declared sheriff on stimulus money, help me out here. Ride side-saddle or you can drive the stage. Help me get $3 million. You have already stopped the ridiculous situation of building the road twice after we had destroyed it with stimulus money. That is the good news. But the rest of the story is that the citizens of Treece need to be relocated. We can do this for $3 million.

This remains an awful way to treat any community. I think it is not a wise use of taxpayer money. It does not pass the Kansas commonsense smell test.

I yield the floor.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. BENNET. Madam President, I rise today to discuss the urgent need for health care reform. The people of Colorado, and the American people, have waited for too long for Washington to act.

We should begin with a basic principle: if you have coverage and you like it, you can keep it. We will not take that choice away from you.

But even as we keep what works, we must confront the challenges of soar-ing health care costs and the lack of access to affordable, quality health care. The status quo is unacceptable. Every day, families in Colorado and across America face rising premiums. Their plans offer fewer benefits. They are denied coverage because of pre-existing conditions.

And until we fix the health care system, we will not be able to fix the fiscal mess in which we find ourselves.

Since 1970, the share of health care as a part of the GDP has gone from 7 percent to 17 percent. The United States spends over $2 trillion in health care costs, including over $400 billion on Medicare. President Obama has said the biggest threat to our nation's balance sheet is the skyrocketing cost of health care. He is right.

In Colorado, we have not waited on Washington. We have made real progress in showing how you can provide high quality health care at a lower cost. Last week, the New Yorker magazine published an article titled "The Cost Conundrum" that highlights the important work that has been done in Mesa County, CO. Over 30 years ago this community serving 120,000 people came together, doctors, nurses, and the nonprofit health insurance company. They agreed upon a system that paid doctors and nurses for seeing patients and producing better quality care. They realized that problems and costs go down when care is more patient-focused.

In Mesa County, the city of Grand Junction implemented an integrated health care system that provides follow-up care with patients. This follow-up care has helped lower hospital readmissions rates in Grand Junction to just 3 percent. Compare that to the 20 percent rate nationwide, and it is clear that our rural community on the Western Slope of Colorado is onto something groundbreaking.

High readmission rates are a large problem for our seniors. Nearly one in five Medicare patients who leave a hospital will be readmitted within the following month, and more than three-quarters of these readmissions are preventable. Rehospitalization costs Medicare over $17 billion annually.

It is painful for patients and families to be caught up in these cycles of treatment. All too often, care is fragmented; you go from the doctor, to the hospital, to a nursing home, back to the hospital and then back to the doctor again. Patients are given medication instructions as they are leaving the hospital, many times after coming off of strong medications. They do not know whom to call, and they are not sure what to ask their primary care doctor.

The solution, both our Denver and Mesa County health communities have found, is to provide patients leaving the hospital with a "coach." This coach is a trained health professional connecting home and the hospital. This coach teaches patients how to manage their health on their own.

Our Denver health community created a model based on this idea called the Care Transitions Intervention. Their work is the basis for the Medicare Care Transitions Act of 2009, a bill I introduced to implement this model on the national level. This legislation recognizes that patient care should not begin in a doctor's office and end at the hospital doors. Investing in coaching and transitional care now can head off huge costs down the road. It has the advantage of being both preventive and responsive.

Take 67-year-old Bill Schoens, from Littleton, CO, who recently suffered a heart attack. Before he was released from the hospital, registered nurse Becky Cline was assigned as his Transitions Coach. She made sure that he understood the medications that his doctors prescribed and everything else he needed to do to get healthy. Bill even pointed out, "When you are in the emergency room, you are all drugged up and can barely remember what to do. Confusion starts to set in."

Becky went through each step Bill needed to follow when he left the hospital. Becky evaluated Bill's ability to follow doctor's orders in his environment and helped him maintain his own Personal Health Record. With her help, when Bill visited the doctor, he did not have to remember everything that happened since he left the hospital; it was all in the book.

Bill said, "When people are in front of their doctor, their blood pressure goes sky high and they forget what they need to ask." He said he found the help and guidance he received from his Transitions Coach "invaluable and life-saving."

We need patient-centered coordinated care, care that views nurses, doctors and family members not as isolated caregivers, but as partners on a team whose ultimate goal is to make sure patients get the guidance and care they need. Hospitals are not the problem, primary care physicians are not the problem, and nurses are not the problem. Our fragmented delivery system of care is the problem.

This bill also makes sure that we are teaching patients to manage their own conditions at home.

Sixty-nine-year-old Frank Yanni of Denver, CO, had surgery for a staph infection of the spinal cord. After leaving the hospital, he noticed that the pain he was experiencing weeks after surgery was getting worse. Having been "coached," he identified the problem and knew to insist on visiting his doctor immediately. A hospital test showed that Mr. Yanni required a second surgery. His coach said that, "Had he let that go for even another week, he could have ended up in the ICU, septic and horribly sick."

Our Colorado transition of care model, reflected in our legislation, gives health care systems the choice of whether to create this program. But it allows existing patient-centered transitional care programs like the one in Mesa County, CO, to continue on.

We want communities and providers to think and work together to reduce readmission rates, reduce costs and provide better coordinated care to our patients. Other systems should look at Colorado and the systems in 24 States that have already begun to follow this model.

As we begin to emerge from the economic downturn, we must call upon existing health care professionals from all walks of life—nurses, nurse practitioners, social workers, long-term care, and community health workers—to serve as transitional coaches.

Colorado nurses like Becky Cline have found that focusing on transitional care has leveraged their skills, empowering them to take a more active role with patients. They are able to work with both patients and family caregivers. For too long, family caregivers have been “silent partners.” Some 50 million Americans provide care for a chronically ill, disabled or aged loved one. This bill recognizes their importance, connecting them with a coach who can teach them how to properly coordinate at-home care.

This bill is only a small part of the solution to the complex challenges of our fragmented health care system. The problems of rising costs and limited access affect people from all walks of life.

Skip Guarini of Parker, CO, is a self-employed private consultant and retired U.S. Marine. After years of regular doctors' visits, Skip's dentist discovered a lump on his thyroid during a routine exam that had gone undetected by his physician despite 10 previous exams.

Skip underwent a CT/MRI scan, ultrasound, and biopsy, all of which were inconclusive. A second series of tests 6 months later revealed that the lump had grown, and Skip underwent surgery. During the surgery, doctors found cancer. Skip was then sent to an endocrinologist who ordered more tests. All tests came back negative. A second full body scan revealed no sign of cancer anywhere in Skip's body.

All these exams and screenings cost Skip $122,000.

Since then, Skip has maintained perfect health, but he cannot obtain private insurance because of the thyroid surgery. He now relies on COBRA and is paying a monthly premium of $1,300. This coverage is set to expire in less than 1 year, at which point Skip will have no insurance.

Hollis Berendt is a small business owner in Greeley, CO. She is covered through her husband's employer, which is “a luxury many other small business owners don't have,” she said.

After graduating from Colorado State University in 2004, their daughter Abby found a job with a large company in New York City. She was told she could not get health care coverage until she had been working for the company 1 year. At 10 months of employment, she was diagnosed with an ovarian tumor that would require surgery. The expenses were too much for Abby, so her parents had to take out a second mortgage to pay her medical bills.

Hollis shared that “this experience brought to light, all too clearly, how close we all are to losing everything due to a health issue.”

The current system is hurting our small business people and their employees. Take Bob Montoya of Pueblo, CO, who runs Cedar Ridge Landscape in Pueblo with his brother Ron. They are torn between providing health care coverage for employees and keeping the business afloat.

Last year, the business paid out $36,000 for a health care plan to cover Bob and Ron's families and one other employee. The other 12 employees and their families do not get coverage through their work. Bob said, “As business owners, we want to do right by the people who work for us, but if all our employees opted into our health care plan and paid their 50 percent, we would be forced out of business.”

He said it is an “impossible situation” for him and his employees.

Like too many small business owners, Bob can not find good health care coverage at a cost he can afford.

He said, “The longer it takes to pass comprehensive health care reform, the more jobs will be lost as small businesses shut their doors due to rising costs.”

These Coloradans speak for countless others across the nation. All they ask for is a health care system that works for them, a health care system that does not crush them with unreasonable costs, and a health care system that does not deny them coverage just because they have pre-existing conditions. I am hopeful.

I am hopeful that we can keep what works in our system and fix what is broken. I am hopeful that this Congress, working with our President, will finally deliver on the promise of health care reform. The people of Colorado deserve it. The American people deserve it.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KAUFMAN.) The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I understand we are in morning business. I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 20 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

OFFSHORE DRILLING

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, the Senate Energy Committee has just approved an energy bill that adopted a very controversial amendment that would allow oil to be drilled 10 miles off of the coast of Florida.

I wish to refer to this chart. Here is the peninsula of Florida. This is the panhandle of Florida, including Pensacola, Fort Walton Beach, Panama City, and Cape San Blas. Some of our largest military installations in America are here: the Pensacola Naval Air Station, the big complex of the Air Force, Eglin Air Force Base in that area of Fort Walton Beach. Down here in Panama City is Tyndall Air Force Base, where they are training all of the F-22 pilots. As one can see on this map, the rest of the gulf coast of the United States includes Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and then Texas.

This chart illustrates what the Dorgan amendment does to Florida. It shows the western planning area of the gulf, the central planning area, and what is known as the eastern planning area. The chart shows that in legislation we passed in 2006, a compromise was struck whereby the oil industry could drill in an additional 8.3 million acres, in addition to the 33 million acres they have under lease in the central and western gulf—33 million that they have under lease that they had not drilled. We worked out an additional 8.3 million acres in this tan area called lease sale 181. In exchange, the compromise was for the protection of the Gulf of Mexico, everything east of this longitude line known as the military mission line. Why? Because everything east of this line is the largest testing and training area for the U.S. military in the world. It is where we are training our F-22 pilots out of Tyndall Air Force Base, it is where we are training our Navy pilots in Pensacola, and it is where we are testing some of the most sophisticated weapons systems in the world that are under the test and evaluation component of Eglin Air Force Base.

This is the area. It is also where we are training our Navy squadrons at Key West Naval Air Station. They will send in a squadron down here to Key West, and when they lift off from the Boca Chica runway, within 2 minutes they are over protected airspace. So they don't have a lot of travel time. They don't spend a lot of gas getting to their training area, which is out here. So we see that we have this area that is now protected.

I wish to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Secretary of Defense—and this is actually from the previous Secretary of Defense, Secretary Rumsfeld—in which he says the use of this for oil and gas production would be incompatible with the needs of the U.S. military in this test and training area.

I ask unanimous consent to have this letter printed in the RECORD, if I may.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, DC, November 30, 2005.

Hon. JOHN WARNER,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, Russell Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter of October 7, 2005, concerning the potential effect of Department of Interior-administered oil and gas leasing on military training and readiness in the Eastern Gulf of Mexico. The Department of Defense (DoD) fully supports the national goal of exploration and development of our nation's offshore oil and gas resources. The DoD, the Department of the Interior, and affected states have worked together successfully for many years to ensure unrestricted access to critical military testing and training areas, while also enabling oil and gas exploration in accordance with applicable laws and regulations.

DoD conducts essential military testing and training in many of the 26 Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) planning areas. Prior analysis and existing agreements with Interior recognize that areas east of the 86° 41' line in the Gulf of Mexico (commonly known as the "Military Mission Line") are especially critical to DoD due to the number and diversity of military testing and training activities conducted there now, and those planned for the future. In those areas east of the Military Mission Line, drilling structures and associated development would be incompatible with military activities, such as missile flights, low-flying drone aircraft, weapons testing, and training.

As the planning process for Interior's new 5-year OCS oil and gas leasing program proceeds, DoD will continue both to evaluate its military requirements and to work with Interior to ensure the 2007–2012 oil and gas program, and any future lease sales resulting from it, strike the proper balance between our nation's energy and national security goals.

Sincerely,

DONALD RUMSFELD.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, here is what people don't understand. The committee that adopted this amendment, 13 to 10, doesn't realize this is the largest testing and training area for the U.S. military. That is why in the legislation in law we protect everything east of that line that we passed 3 years ago. In return, we gave the oil boys an additional 8.3 million acres in lease sale 181 and lease sale 181 south. That, by the way, is in addition to their 33 million acres they have under lease here, and here, as shown on this map, that they have not drilled.

Why do the oil companies want to have this additional lease area when, in fact, they have a lot of leases they haven't drilled—33 million acres plus another 8 million acres? Well, it is because a lease has a legal value. If there is estimated to be any oil or gas there, that has a value, and those leases then become a part of the assets of the company, which increases the value of the company, which, of course, then makes their stock worth more. But what we struck in the compromise 3 years ago that everybody out here on this Senate floor agreed to—agreed to, I might say, with Senator MARTINEZ and me—was in exchange for getting that additional area, they would leave the military mission test and evaluation and training area alone.

In the last round of BRAC, which is the Base Realignment and Closure Commission, the "r" of BRAC stands for realignment. Is it any wonder that in that round of evaluating military bases they decided to send all the pilot training for the new stealth fighter—the F-22—that they brought it here to Tyndall Air Force base at Panama City? Why? Because they have that area.

Listen, this fighter does a dog fight at 1.5 Mach, twice what an F-16 and an F-15 does a dog fight at. They are doing a dog fight, doing tight turns at about .75 Mach. The new F-22 stealth fighter will go into and engage another aircraft at 1.5 Mach. When you do turns at twice the speed of an F-15 and F-16, you have a much wider radius of a turn. That is why they need all that area. When they are dropping on targets, they are dropping live ordnance.

When we are testing long-range weapons systems at Eglin Air Force Base—some that we release from airplanes, some that are shot from ships—we need hundreds of miles of range. That is why the operative policy of the Department of Defense is that you can't have oil rigs out here to interfere with national security preparation, but, apparently, that is not the way 13 Members of the Senate Energy Committee understood this argument.

Now there is another argument. By the way, I might point out that in that realignment of the bases, they are bringing into Eglin Air Force base all the pilot training for the new F-35. That is the Joint Strike Fighter that is still being developed, but that will be coming out within the next few years. That is the Joint Strike Fighter for the Navy, the Marines, and the Air Force. That Joint Strike Fighter will be sold to some of our allies.

Where is the pilot training? Right here because of the restrictions, it being a test, a training, and an evaluation area. That is why the U.S. military brought these new assets into this area.

There is another reason now that I get so exercised about this, other than the fact of the agreements that were set, that were agreed to; the compromises that were struck 3 years ago are now being abrogated.

That is, they now bring oil rig leasing within 10 miles of the world's most beautiful beaches. There are not too many Americans who don't know that the beaches running from Pensacola all the way through Panama City to Mexico Beach are some of the world's most beautiful beaches. They are sugary white sand, and people from all over go to enjoy this extraordinary valuable resource. It is God's way of giving us a blessing on Earth that people enjoy when they want to go to the beach.

Can you imagine, what the Energy Committee has passed, allowing oil rigs 10 miles off the world's most beautiful beaches? Environmentally, that is one thing, but let's look at the economy of Florida. The economy of Florida—we are a peninsula. We have more coastline than any other State, save Alaska, but Alaska doesn't have a lot of beaches. We have more beaches than almost—not almost—than any other State. Is it any wonder we want to protect our economy, which is a $60 billion-a-year tourism industry, particularly at a time when the economy is being savaged as much as it is?

Yet the Senate Energy Committee would say they are not only going to ignore the military tests and training range that has been off-limits in the law, but now they are going to run rigs up to 10 miles offshore and threaten those sugary white beaches.

Well, let me tell you a few points about this wise energy policy they have supposedly adopted. We all know increased domestic drilling is not going to decrease U.S. dependence on foreign oil. That has been shown over and over. Why? Because if there was oil there, you are not going to get it into production for 10 years. So using the scare tactics of the gas prices going up and up doesn't do a bit for decreasing U.S. dependence on foreign oil and helping gas prices. But let's say it would. Even though bad oil spills and shipping accidents take place, let's say, for a moment, the technological innovations now have made all drilling operations safe; and if the United States wishes to remain dependent on oil, well, shouldn't we drill anywhere we can find oil? How about Colorado for oil shale? But, oh, no, that is off-limits.

How about the five Great Lakes? They should have plenty of black gold. But, no, that is off-limits. How about the oil-rich Arctic National Wildlife Refuge? That is off-limits. This Senator has supported keeping that off-limits. No, the reality is that, instead, some of my colleagues in the Senate want to come—it is kind of like: don't tax you, don't tax me, go tax that "fella" under the tree. They want to go and hit somebody else. They want to cut the heart and the lungs out of the U.S. military testing area. They want to come in and start fouling up the most beautiful beaches in the world, the northwest Florida coast.

Three years ago, we opened that additional 8.3 million acres. We didn't allow any drilling any closer than 100 miles off Pensacola, 125 miles off Panama City, 237 miles off Tampa Bay, and over 300 miles off Naples. Why are some people pushing to change this so soon after that compromise that was struck 3 years ago? It is the oil industry, that is why. The oil industry has those 33 million acres out here in the central and western gulf. It is leased, it is not being drilled, but that is not enough for them. Even though the industry hand-picked areas opened here in the 2006 compromise, it now feels it can make more of a profit by drilling closer to Florida's coast.

I don't think we should have to trash our coastline and our economy and the U.S. military so big oil can increase its profit margin. There are serious national security implications if this were to become law. I wish to show you something else. Look at this picture. This is a beach in Pinellas County, Florida after an oil spill. You know what that is—that is oil mixing with white, sugary, powdery, white sand.

Drilling 10 miles off the coast of Florida would destroy the economy of the Nation's fourth largest State. It would convert Florida's world-class beaches to an industrial coastline. We would trade the world's top beaches and the tourist attractions for an industrial waste line dotted with transmission pipes, storage tanks, and oil rigs. We would take away the U.S. military's last unfettered testing and training range—and take it away during a time of war.

Supporters of opening the eastern gulf say we need to do it to help get America off foreign oil. Tell me, then, why isn't there a clause in the drilling amendment passed specifying that all oil and natural gas that would be produced in the eastern gulf has to stay in the United States for domestic consumption?

But, no, that is not there because, the truth is, any oil that would be drilled could be sent to any other country in the world, reducing our use of foreign oil not by one single drop.

If we wish to reduce our dependence on foreign oil—and you have heard me say this ad infinitum—we need to increase our use of alternative energy, energy-efficient cars and appliances.

Mr. President, is my time coming to a close?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Recently, we have seen how gas prices have started to rise. Why? Last year, the price of oil went up to $147 a barrel. Why, in 1 day, did the price of oil rise $37 for a barrel of oil? It is because those greedy speculators on unregulated futures commodities markets had been able to bid up crude oil prices in part due to a legal loophole, called the Enron loophole, which, in effect, unleashed insider trading similar to condo flipping since 2001.

Some Gulf Coast States, such as Louisiana, have embraced drilling. Congress even agreed to prop them up with revenue sharing. But because Louisiana doesn't have beaches—or has beaches that are left such as this one in the picture—and they don't have a tourism economy like Florida's, it isn't worth the risk to the jobs and the revenue and the economy of Florida.

Florida's Gulf Coast has some of the most beautiful beaches in the world. These beaches account for a substantial portion of the $60 billion-a-year tourism economy.

Would you visit a beach with oil operations along its shores? Would you want to go to a beach that looks like this photo? I'll tell you a little more about it. This photo is of a relatively small oil spill that occurred as a result of a shipping accident in Pinellas County, FL, in 1993. It simply doesn't make sense to jeopardize Florida's tourism industry and put the coastline at risk of ending up like this.

I will close by reading a timely editorial that appeared in today's St. Petersburg Times. That is one of Florida's largest newspapers. This was so poignant I think it is worth me inserting it into the RECORD, which I will.

I ask unanimous consent that the entire article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the St. Petersburg Times, June 11, 2009]

AGAIN, WITH FEELING: NO NEW DRILLING

There is a rhythm to summer that has become as predictable in Washington as it is predatory and senseless: Schools let out, vacation season begins, gas prices rise and opportunists in Congress—encouraged by Big Oil—cite the pain at the pump to push for expanding offshore drilling, jeopardizing Florida's priceless coastline.

Do any of the 13 members of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee who voted to expand drilling Tuesday realize that the nation is moving in the opposite direction and seeking to reduce reliance on fossil fuels with a cleaner energy policy?

The committee approved an amendment to a Senate energy bill that would allow gas and oil drilling just 45 miles off Florida's west coast and even closer off the Florida Panhandle. It would wipe out a 2006 congressional compromise that bans drilling within 230 miles of Tampa Bay and 100 miles of the Panhandle through 2022. That exclusion zone is a reasonable line of defense. Florida's beaches are vital to the state's status as a world-class tourist destination.

Allowing drilling within 10 miles off the eastern Gulf Coast also would jeopardize an important training area for the Air Force and Navy.

As an energy strategy, the measure makes the Senate look hopelessly out of date. Twenty-eight states, in the absence of leadership in Washington, have set targets for renewable energy production. The purpose of energy legislation in both houses of Congress is to fashion a way to leverage billions of tax dollars to curb emissions of global-warming greenhouse gases, build more fuel-efficient cars and to foster investment in alternative energies.

The drilling amendment is an example of a time-honored tactic of tacking on something distasteful to broadly supported legislation. The bill, which committee members expect to pass today, also unfortunately encourages some Republican state legislators who have unsuccessfully sought to open state waters in the gulf to drilling. If the 2006 federal line falls, there will be no stopping the shortsighted in Tallahassee.

Sen. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., has vowed to filibuster the bill if it comes to that. The state's congressional delegation needs to show united opposition, and House members need to demand Speaker Nancy Pelosi stand by her commitment to the 2006 drill-free zone. Gov. Charlie Crist, who is running to succeed Sen. Mel Martinez, R-Fla., also needs to quit waffling and oppose this. And Defense Secretary Robert Gates should explain the implications for naval training and national security should offshore rigs and their attendant infrastructure spring up along the training ranges for America's military pilots. The energy bill is supposed to chart a new strategy going forward. The Senate is headed backward.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. This is what the article says:

And it goes on to cite the numbers I told you, basically keeping that eastern area off-limits.

The editorial continues:

The energy bill is supposed to chart a new strategy going forward. The Senate is headed backward.

I thank the Presiding Officer for her indulgence that I could get this off my chest. I don't want to mess up the Energy bill. It is critical for us. I am supportive of many of its provisions. But I am simply going to have to assert my rights under the Senate rules if they try to bring this as a part of that Energy bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). The Senator from Minnesota.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Madam President, the time for health care reform is now. We cannot afford to wait any longer. For some time, Peter Orszag, now President Obama's Budget Director, has warned that rising health costs are unsustainable and represent the central fiscal challenge facing the country.

At $2.4 trillion per year, health care spending represents close to 17 percent of the American economy, and it will exceed 20 percent by 2018 if current trends continue. Hospitals and clinics are also providing an estimated $56 billion in uncompensated care. Meanwhile, businesses are squeezed on the bottom line, forced to reduce or drop health coverage for their employees. Without action, costs will continue to rise and waste will proliferate.

We need to make health care affordable for everyone, and we need to reduce the waste and fraud that plagues the current system.

To my colleagues who are conjuring up reasons not to pass reform this year, using scare tactics about nationalized health care and engaging in fear mongering, I say we cannot stay where we are. We cannot stay where we are. They must be getting different mail than I am. I am getting mail, and I am getting people coming up to me all over the State. Even though our State has some of the most affordable health care in the country, people know their money is being spent in other States that are not as efficient. They know health care coverage when the economy is tough is very difficult to come by, and that is what they are coming up to me and talking about. They are not saying let's stay the way we are. They are saying reform this system.

In 2008, employee health premiums increased by 5 percent, two times the rate of inflation, and the annual premium for an employer health plan covering a family of four averaged nearly $12,700.

Families cannot continue to bear the burden of runaway health costs. If we do not act, these costs are going to break the backs of the American people. We must remain committed to enacting a uniquely American solution to our Nation's health care problem. We must keep what works and fix what is broken.

As Congress prepares to take up landmark health care legislation, many in Washington are looking to my State, the State of Minnesota, as a leader. Among them is the President of the United States. President Obama has provided leadership and vision on this issue, and in a recent weekly radio address, he has highlighted how the Mayo Clinic and other innovative health care organizations succeed in providing high-quality care at relatively low cost. As he has said, we should learn from the successes and promote the best practices, not the most expensive ones.

In Minnesota, the Mayo Clinic is not alone. Health partners Park Nicollet and Essensia Health are already among those working to deliver the best health care at the least price. At 92 percent of the State covered by some kind of health care insurance, Minnesota has a strong history making sure the health care system promotes both quality care and access—92 percent coverage.

Minnesota, Washington, Wisconsin, Iowa, Utah, and North Dakota are just a few of the States that can help provide leadership to help Congress and the administration as we work to develop a quality integrated health care system that reduces cost to the taxpayer and improves health care outcomes.

It is no coincidence that as we speak, the President is in Wisconsin, another State that understands to have high-quality care, you do not necessarily have to have high prices. In fact, it is the opposite.

I will distill this cost issue into some understandable language. I grew up watching the Minnesota Vikings. Year after year, our State has waited for the Vikings to win the Super Bowl. We have been to the Super Bowl four times, and we have never won the Super Bowl. All during that same amount of time, the people of our country have been waiting for health care reform. They have been waiting for something to happen to make health care more affordable. The people of this country cannot wait any longer. We might be able to wait on the Vikings; the people cannot wait any longer.

The importance of Minnesota's best practices can be outlined in a game plan for national health care reform with a few key pointers: rewarding quality, not quantity; promoting coordinated, integrated care; and focusing on prevention and disease management.

We are never going to be able to move the ball for that next first down unless we start talking about costs; otherwise, we are simply going to have different people pay for the same expensive health care but not do anything to reduce the cost.

First, our game plan for health care reform to reduce costs is to be sure to keep score. That means measuring outcomes and rewarding providers who deliver quality results. Right now in many places, we are not getting our money's worth from our health care dollars. In Miami, Medicare spends twice as much on the average patient as it does in Minneapolis, even though quality is much better in Minnesota—twice as much.

If we look at this chart, we will see that the areas in dark blue are the higher spending regions of the country. They receive the lion's share of Medicare payments. The light blue areas—States such as Minnesota, Montana, and Iowa—are areas where Medicare spending is low but quality of care is often high.

In a recent New York Times article, some explained these differences in spending as they were trying to explain how can this happen that you have twice the Medicare, twice the taxpayers' dollars for the same kind of medical treatments as you would in another part of the country. Some said it is a difference in cost of living, sicker people, more teaching hospitals. But research shows those factors only explain 18 percent of the variation in spending.

It is no surprise. Most health care is purchased on a fee-for-service basis, so more tests and more surgeries mean more money. Quantity, not quality, pays.

According to research at Dartmouth Medical School, nearly $700 billion per year is wasted on unnecessary or ineffective health care—$700 billion per year. That is 30 percent of total health care spending. So to my colleagues who are fear mongering and saying we should do nothing, I say how about $700 billion, 30 percent of total health care spending that we have the opportunity to change around to benefit the people of this country?

Just look at this fact, if you want to look at quality care. The Mayo Clinic ranked as one of the highest quality institutions in this country. If you look at the last 4 years of the lives of chronically ill patients, some of the most difficult times for people in this country, an independent study from Dartmouth came out after they looked at what the Mayo Clinic did. They have a team of doctors working together with quality ratings incredibly high. Then they looked at what was going on in other regions of the country.

If all the hospitals in this country used the same protocol that Mayo Clinic used in the last 4 years of a patient's life, where the quality rating is incredibly high, we would save $50 billion every 5 years in Medicare spending—$50 billion.

So, no, I don't think the answer is just to throw away health care reform and do a lot of fear mongering. I think the answer is to work together to bring this kind of cost savings to the rest of the country.

There is general consensus that Medicare should reward value, and value consists of both quality and efficiency. However, value is not taken into account when Medicare determines payment for providers.

To begin reining in costs, we need to have all health care providers aiming for high quality, cost-effective results. That is why I plan to introduce legislation with Senator CANTWELL and others that would authorize the U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary to create a value index as part of a formula used to determine Medicare's fee schedule—paying for value. This indexing will help regulate overutilization because those who produce more volume will need to also improve care or the increased volume will negatively impact fees. You have to have those incentives in place in how you do the payments or you are never going to reduce costs.

In adding a value index, my bill would give physicians a financial incentive to maximize quality and value of their services instead of volume. Linking rewards to the outcomes for the entire payment area creates the incentive for physicians and hospitals to work together to improve quality and efficiency.

I am also interested in the idea that the President has proposed to give increased consideration to recommendations made by the Medicare Payment Advisory Committee, MedPAC, a commission created by a Republican Congress. MedPAC's recommendations for payment reform include bundling, which has potential significant cost savings. Giving the recommendations made by experts increased authority could be a valuable tool to help rein in health care spending and improve quality in a responsible way.

So the first part of our game plan for reducing costs for health care is focusing on value. The second part of the game plan for making health care more affordable is to focus on teamwork.

Understandably, patients like it when their health care providers talk with one another and even work together. This means higher quality care, as well as more efficient care. In too many places, however, patients must struggle against a fragmented delivery system where providers duplicate services and sometimes work at cross-purposes—an x ray here, an x ray there, an expert here, an expert there. It is like a football team with 11 quarterbacks but no wide receivers, no running backs and no offensive line. This does not work in football, and it is not going to work in health care.

The beauty of integrated care systems is that a patient's overall care is managed by a primary care physician in coordination with specialists, nurses, and other care providers as needed. It is one-stop shopping. In our rural communities, critical access hospitals utilize this model and provide quality health care for residents in their community with a team of providers.

To better reward and encourage this collaboration, we also need to have better coordination of care and less incentive to bill Medicare by volume. Increasing the bundling of services in Medicare's payment system has the potential to deliver savings and start encouraging quality, integrated care.

When it comes to improving care, changing who pays a doctor will make no more difference. The lesson of high-quality, efficient States such as Minnesota and Wisconsin is that someone has to be responsible for the care of the patient from start to finish, from one goal line to the other. Bundling will ensure that practice is rewarded.

This is a very interesting chart. It does not look interesting, but it is. A lot of people think the more you pay, the better quality care you get. This was a MedPAC analysis of county level fee-for-service expenditures, a national study.

Do you know what they found? They found that those areas of the country, those counties that had low utilization—in other words, maybe someone called a nurse line or a doctor referred them to one specialist instead of them going to three on their own—they found they had the highest quality care. Why is that? It makes sense. You have one primary doctor who knows exactly what is going on, is checking your charts and can send them to one specialist so mistakes are not made. You go to one specialist who does not know you are taking a certain medication and you are allergic to another. High-quality care with low utilization; lowest quality care with high utilization.

That is probably the opposite of what most people in this country think. But, literally, you get the highest quality care in those parts of the country where you are paying less money.

As I said, if people start to say our area of the country is so expensive, only 18 percent of that difference with the high-quality, low-cost States and the low-quality, high-cost States can be attributed to cost of living.

Research has shown that moving toward a better integrated and coordinated delivery system would save Medicare alone up to $100 billion per year. So if people don't want to talk about reform and they want to make a bunch of fear-mongering statements, let them explain to the American people why we are not going to save $100 billion per year.

Finally, the last game pointer is that the best offense is a good defense. My dad covered football his whole life for the newspaper, and this is what he would always say to me: It works on the football field and it works in health care. It is a lot better for both the patient and the patient's pocketbook if a chronic medical problem can be prevented or managed early to stave off complications and the need for costly care. Right now, physicians are paid to treat diseases, not prevent them. Yet a payment system that encourages prevention and disease management could generate enormous savings because a large portion of health care spending is devoted to treating a relatively small number of people with chronic medical conditions.

Let me give an example of this. This is Health Partners, which is a clinic in Minnesota—all over our State. A lot of patients are members of it. They started looking at how can we do a better job with diabetes. They did this back in the fourth quarter of 2004 compared to the fourth quarter of 2008. You see here an increase in quality for the patients, an increase in percentage of patients with optimal diabetes control, because they put in some practical protocols.

What do you see with costs? You see an actual major decrease in the cost per patient. That is the green line. The yellow line is an increase in the patients with optimal diabetes control, as the doctors determined. The green line is a decrease in cost. The red line is patients with diabetes who had asked that they recommend Health Partners clinics. So even as they saw this dramatic reduction in cost, they were still on the up in terms of recommending using Health Partners clinics. Most people don't like their HMOs very much. They always have reasons to complain. So I think this is amazing that they were able to show this kind of result.

At Park Nicollet in Minnesota, they have implemented a congestive heart failure program with Medicare. In the 3 years since the program began, Park Nicollet has saved nearly $5,000 per patient, per year.

Diabetes, congestive heart disease, and back problems all contribute to the excessive cost and growth in our health care system and cause decreased productivity in our economy. One study found that the most costly 20 percent of Medicare patients in a given year account for 84 percent of total Medicare spending. By contrast, the least costly 40 percent of Medicare patients accounted for just 1 percent of overall spending. As the examples from Minnesota and other places demonstrate, effectively managing these and other chronic illnesses is essential to health care reform.

A recent New Yorker magazine article showcased the Mayo Clinic in the context of health care's cost conundrum.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for 3 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. According to the author, a physician, we are in "a battle for the soul of American medicine." On one side is a fragmented, volume-driven model that too often crosses into profiteering. There are good parts about our health care system, believe me. I know this because I live in Minnesota. We have to maintain those. But we have to fix this broken cost structure. On the other side, you see this model offered by Mayo and other peer institutions across the country where doctors collaborate to provide the best, most efficient care for their patients.

On one side is more of the same, which is both financially and morally unsustainable; on the other side is a new direction that promises to curb cost while expanding affordable coverage. It is time to choose sides. For the sake of our fiscal health and for the sake of millions of Americans struggling to afford the care they need, I urge my colleagues to choose the latter.

Yesterday, I met with a bipartisan group of Senators, and I have to tell you I still have hope that we are going to get this done and I have hope that there will be bipartisan support for this. What I am talking about today—cost reduction, putting these incentives in place—isn't a Democratic issue or a Republican issue. It is an American issue. This is an American cause, and we can find a uniquely American solution to this problem so that we can reduce costs and make health care better quality. I can tell you, having spent my entire life in the State of Minnesota and having a daughter who was born very sick, who couldn't even swallow when she was born, I know we can get high-quality health care at lower cost. They do it every day in my State, and we can do it in the rest of the country.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, when it comes to health care, Republicans want reform that respects patient freedom and choice. We want to maintain the sanctity of the doctor-patient relationship. We believe doctors, not Washington, should tailor an individual's care. Washington-run health care would delay or deny care and would displace millions of Americans who are happy with their current health insurance. Federal bureaucracies are not known for being efficient, innovative, or hassle-free.

On Wednesday, the majority whip said:

Those who come to the floor of the Senate defending the health insurance companies and saying they want no change in the health care system have to defend the indefensible.

Well, who exactly has come to the floor and said that? Who in the Senate has come to the floor and said they want no change? I know of no one who has done that. This is a straw man argument, usually made when you can't win an argument on the merits, but it has become a familiar refrain from some of our friends on the other side of the aisle. They present a false choice between doing what they want and doing nothing. When they don't want to listen to Republican ideas, they accuse us of wanting to do nothing. It happened with the stimulus bill, and it is happening now with health care.

Republicans want health care reform. I have said this repeatedly, and so has Senator MCCONNELL. I have noted that there are abundant problems in our current system, that a routine visit to the doctor can be surprisingly expensive. Too many people have to go without basic care for a host of reasons, whether they are unemployed or work for a business that doesn't have health care or perhaps have a preexisting condition.

The task before us is to ensure that all Americans have access to quality health care without degrading the quality of care for anyone. In other words, those who are happy with their care—and that is the majority of Americans—don't want to have to sacrifice their care in order to take care of the problem of those who are having issues. And by access to care, I don't mean access to a government waiting list.

There are two ways to approach health care reform while trying to keep costs in line. One, which President Obama says he rejects, is to create a competitive marketplace in which consumers get to pick the plan that works the best for their families. Competition helps the consumer. The more competition, the better. And this concept does not include a Washington-run plan.

The other is for the government to ration care by deciding what treatments you can get and which medications you can have. Yes, you can cut costs this way, but it is not right, it is not what Americans want, nor is it what physicians want. The American Medical Association, an organization of 250,000 of America's physicians, said in a recent statement that it does not "... believe that creating a public health insurance option for non-disabled individuals under the age of 65 is the best way to expand health insurance coverage and lower costs." I agree. The doctors—those who provide the care—are concerned about what a Washington-run health care would mean for their patients and for the uninsured Americans who need to get in to see them.

Republicans have been discussing the state of health care in Canada and the United Kingdom because those countries have government-run health care and they delay or deny treatment for many of their citizens in order to keep costs under control. The Canadian and British Governments created these systems with the best of intentions, but government-run care is not serving their citizens' needs, and we don't need to replicate their problems here in the United States. In fact, in Canada, Claude Castonguay, chair of the commission which recommended that Quebec establish a government-run system in the 1960s, declared last year that "the system is in crisis"—his words. Private clinics are opening all over Canada at the rate of one per week to treat those who are on waiting lists at the public hospitals. Many Canadians who have the resources to get out of the bureaucratic government have chosen to do so.

As the Republican leader pointed out today, Britain's National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence—the entity responsible for setting guidelines on pharmaceuticals and treatments for British patients—last year denied patients in that country access to four kidney cancer drugs that have the potential to elongate patients' lives. The institute explained it this way:

Although these treatments are clinically effective, regrettably, the cost is such that they are not a cost-effective use of resources.

A chilling statement, indeed. The stories of patients being denied treatment by their governments are real.

President Obama and some of my colleagues in the Senate have argued—as the majority whip has—that a public or a government-run option can compete with other insurers and that this government-run option would be only one choice of many. My question is, Why is it needed?

And what will it do? Government-run health care would crowd out other insurers, quickly becoming a monopoly. I have cited these statistics from the Lewin Group, which has made this point. Someone who has insurance through his or her company could be forced into the government's plan if the employer decides it is simpler and cheaper to pay a fine to the government and eliminate its coverage. A company might say: Why bother with the paperwork and administration when we can just pay a fine and tell people to get onto the government insurance rolls? As I said, that is what health experts say will happen. The Lewin Group I cited before has estimated that 119 million people will be shifted from a private plan onto a government plan if it is created. That would affect two-thirds of the 170 million Americans who currently have private insurance, all but ending private insurance in America.

President Obama said recently:

If we don't get this done this year we're not going to get it done.

Well, why is that? Why does that have to be so? Could it be because the President would prefer that we rush a bill through before Americans get a chance to absorb what Washington-run health care would mean for their families? If this is worth doing, it is worth doing right. It is worth taking the time to do it right.

Americans are compassionate, and we want coverage for our neighbors just as much as we want it for our own families. But I will tell you that my constituents worry about the cost, and they do not want the Federal Government to cover others at their expense, both in cost and in the form of rationed care. So one of the first questions for this program is, How much is it going to cost and who is going to pay it? Another question is, What is going to be the effect on seniors who are in Medicare? Do they have anything to worry about? And my answer to that is, absolutely, because some of the conversation has to do with "reforming the way our seniors get their health care."

We haven't heard much about the exact price of government-run health care, but we know the cost will be extremely high. And whatever we spend, it won't be enough to ensure all Americans get the care they need. So when we begin talking about cost and being more concerned about the cost than the quality of care, as was the institute in Britain I just quoted, then we get into a situation where we are going to have to ration care, and that is something neither our seniors nor families with coverage today want at all.

We need a real marketplace of options. Choice, freedom, and competition should be guiding principles for the health care reform we all want.

I reiterate that Republicans as well as Democrats want reforms in our health care system. There are people who need coverage, and we all understand there are ways we can save money. The question is, Do we do this through more government control, more government bureaucracy, government-run insurance companies, fines on employers, and raising taxes in order to add 40 or 50 million more people to insurance rolls or do we try to achieve the results through removing barriers to competition which currently exist?

Republicans have noted a whole series of laws right now that could either be reformed or repealed in order to allow more competition, in order to reduce prices for those already in the market and give patients more choice. I don't know why the resistance to this insurance reform. I don't know of anybody who likes the way insurance companies always do their business. I know I don't. So why not reform and enable those who would do it the way people want to have products that could be offered to the public and which presumably the public would buy if they are concerned about the way their insurance is currently being offered?

So this is not a matter of one side wanting reform and the other side not; it is a matter of different approaches. And from my constituents, I can tell you they are concerned about what they have and they are concerned about what they are going to have to pay. As much as they want to help other people have the same kind of coverage they do, they don't want it at the expense of their families, by having care rationed to them and their families as a result of the fact that it would cost more money than we are currently paying.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

JOB LOSS CRISIS

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, in my State of Ohio and States such as Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, middle-class families already hit by a terrible recession are facing a new wave of devastating job losses and plant closings. Some 400,000 Ohioans are employed, directly or indirectly, because of the auto industry. The auto industry crisis is a crisis especially in my State and in Michigan and in the other States in the region.

As Congress works to help the industry through these most difficult times, the industry must do all it can to keep jobs here at home. That is why it was welcome news when GM announced that rather than start more small car production in China and Mexico, which they have done in the past, they would open a new small car manufacturing plant somewhere in one of these auto States.

This crisis has hit home in my State, especially in Mansfield, where GM has one of its best stamping plants. Workers at this plant were asked to make concessions over the past 2 years, and they did. They were asked to produce in an exceptionally efficient manner, and they now rank at or near the top, across a range of performance standards. The Mansfield GM Fisher Body Stamping Plant played by the rules, did all that was expected of them, and they made it to the top, literally to the top of GM's stamping plants. Yet GM has decided to close this facility.

GM's decision not to include the Mansfield stamping plant in the New GM, this new coming-out-of-bankruptcy company, one that is focused on building fuel-efficient cars for the 21st century, is troubling, it is more than troubling to employees and members of the Mansfield community and to me.

Yesterday, I met with GM officials who were direct and polite and are trying to do their best. I met with GM officials to try to understand their decision. I am not convinced this makes sense for the New GM, to close this Mansfield Fisher Body Stamping Plant. I know it does not make sense for Ohio. GM's own scorecard shows the Mansfield plant has met nearly 100 percent of its targets and has a productivity rate of 94 percent. According to GM's records, it is the single highest ranked stamping plant in GM.

The plant that is a very close second is 70 miles away, north of Mansfield, in Parma, OH. By GM's own records, those are the two top-rated stamping plants. It makes little sense to me and to the town and GM workers at Mansfield that the company would not want its best and brightest to embark on its new path toward success.

The auto crisis hit home in Twinsburg, OH. Twinsburg is the home of the most modern stamping plant in Chrysler's network. It ranks among the highest in safety and productivity. Yet Twinsburg's workers and their families got the rug pulled out from under them last month. The crisis is playing itself out every day as auto suppliers struggle to find credit.

So it is not just Mansfield and Twinsburg, it is not just the loss of fewer than 100, but 80 or 90 people in families in the Columbus area who lost jobs when a GM supply center announced it was closing. It is also what happens to those companies that supply the auto companies, and they, frankly, employ more workers than the auto companies themselves do.

The crisis plays itself out every single day as auto suppliers struggle to find credit. If a manufacturer has auto customers, banks seem to put them on a black list and do not want to extend any loans, even those backed by the Small Business Administration.

The crisis plays itself out in Warren and Dayton, where Delphi salaried workers, who played by the rules, are left without the pensions they deserve. These stories from Mansfield, from Twinsburg, from Warren, from Dayton, from smaller communities are, unfortunately, not unique. There are more stories, from small Ohio towns such as Trotwood, near Dayton; Van Wert, on the Indiana border; and Greenwood and from other cities across Ohio and the Midwest.

That is why it angered me when I sat in the Banking Committee as I was chairing, as Chairman DODD was working on health care issues, when I heard these restructuring proposals for Chrysler and GM portrayed by my more conservative colleagues in this body as “giveaways” to workers. When they label this as “everybody sacrificed except the workers,” the workers have seen tens of thousands of lost jobs. We have seen a $7-an-hour cut in compensation for these workers. That is a $14,000 a year hit that these workers are taking. They are far from giveaways.

American autoworkers, their families, and their communities are all in this together and have suffered with their communities perhaps more than anybody.

Just 3 years ago there were a quarter million members of the UAW. After these GM and Chrysler restructurings in the auto industry, that number of worker members will be below 100,000. These are men and women who make up our Nation’s middle class, the heart-beat of America, if you will.

They work hard, they support their families. They are watching as their chance at the American dream goes up in smoke. It is an American tragedy. Anyone who dismisses it otherwise should be ashamed.

Wages have decreased for entry-level workers. Wages have been frozen. Key health care benefits were eliminated for both active and retired workers. Understand, the much maligned legacy costs that companies are burdened with, if you will, these legacy costs, health care and pensions, were negotiated at the bargaining table when workers said: We will take less money in salary and wages today if you put that money aside for pensions and health care—for health care now and for pensions later. So they gave up dollars at the bargaining table. That is what these legacy costs are.

These concessions, combined with swapping GM’s contributions owed to the VEBA with stock, a step that will increase risks for retirees, will save General Motors billions. That is a good idea because we want this company to survive and thrive.

Every facet of this restructuring has an impact on hard-working Americans, on their communities, their States, their Nation as a whole. We should ask yourselves this: Is the government doing everything it can to protect and create American jobs? Is the government ensuring that top-performing segments of Chrysler and GM are not sacrificed because of expediency or politics or information gaps or favoritism?

I held a conference call with mayors from Ohio’s auto communities recently. Nearly all of them raised the fact that they may need to eliminate police and fire and their other local government entities, eliminating teaching positions and others, because of the shortfall in tax revenue from plant closings. Some mayors have already done that.

The worry from these mayors reminds us we are talking more about jobs and bottom line. We are talking about our Nation’s manufacturing future. We are talking about our Nation’s middle class.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. UDALL of New Mexico.) The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to speak for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise this afternoon to speak of a subject that is on the minds of so many Americans. It is also the subject of a lot of attention and work here in Washington, and that issue is health care. I won’t try today to cover every aspect of it and to cover all of the details that are being debated here in Washington, but I rise to begin a series of speeches that I and others will be giving on this topic.

I don’t think I need to recite the challenge the people of Pennsylvania and America face when it comes to their health care. I do believe there is some consensus, not only here in Washington but around the country, about what we have to do. We have to take action, and as we take action, we have to be very clear about what we tell people and what is in the legislation: that if you like the health care you have, you can keep it; if you don’t like what you have or you don’t have any health care, we are going to put a bill in front of the American people—in front of the Senate and the House, and then legislation before the American people—which will allow that kind of choice.

I believe there is consensus about that. There is consensus about some fundamental keys to reform. No. 1 is the question of cost reduction. We can’t get through this process and not get a handle on costs, especially for the future. No. 2: I think there is a great consensus about choice, preserving the kinds of choices people have now and in fact enhancing the choices that people have in their health care decisions. No. 3: To ensure quality, affordable health care for all Americans. The nature of that issue is that we can build on our current system, but that we have too many people—as many as almost 50 million—who are uninsured.

There are a lot of people to thank here in Washington for the work that has been done already. I know we are a long way off. We have a lot more to do. There are weeks and weeks of work still ahead of us, but a few bear mentioning. Obviously, the President of the United States, President Obama, has made this a central issue of his Presidency and has worked very hard and has continued to make this a priority. We want to commend his leadership. It is essential. We cannot move this legislation without his help.

Senator KENNEDY, who has worked on this issue for more than four decades, I guess, now, has given tremendous leadership and inspiration. Whether he is here physically or whether he is not, he is providing that and has provided that for the American people for a generation on health care.

Senator BAUCUS, the head of the Finance Committee, has worked not just months but years on this. Especially in the last year, in the last 6 months, he has been working very hard to get it right on that essential committee.

Senator DODD has stepped into the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee leadership role because Senator KENNEDY hasn’t always been able to be here because of his own health challenges.

I also wish to commend the bipartisan spirit that I think is evident on both sides of the aisle. People want to get this done, and they want to get it done in a bipartisan manner.

What I will speak about today is an aspect of this challenge which I think is not getting enough attention and enough focus and, therefore, may not get enough resolution in the legislation, and that is the issue of what happens to our children, especially children who are poor or those with disabilities, those with special needs. I believe the theme—not just the theme and not just the goal but the ironclad promise that we should make when we talk about reforming health care and getting legislation passed—the ironclad promise should be as follows: No child worse off. No child in America should be worse off at the end of this process, especially poor children and especially those who have special needs, those with a disability.

Despite all of the great work—and I could cite a long list of people to thank for children’s health insurance—the legislation that was passed in the 1990s and the reauthorization is great news: 6 million kids covered, plus 4 million more who will be covered, so almost 10 million—almost 11 million, actually—more than 10 million children are covered by that. That is wonderful. We should be happy about that. We got that done this year. Here is the problem: There are still 5 million more who are not covered. So I rise today to speak about coverage and a focus on those children.

Here is what I believe when it comes to children in our society. I believe every child born in America is born with a light inside them. For some children, the reach of that light will be boundless. It will be scintillating. You won't be able to see it, it will be so bright, because of that child's potential or because of his or her circumstances, but their potential and, therefore, the light within them is boundless. For some other children, that light will be a little more limited because of circumstance, or because of other limitations they may have. No matter what the situation that child is in, no matter how brightly or not so brightly that light is shining, we have to make sure we are there for them, especially when it comes to health care. So I believe that light has to continue to shine, and one of the reasons I am so grateful for the work that has been done already is that in our committee, we have made children a priority.

The Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee has not only produced a bill already—it is from one side of the aisle, the Democratic side; we are working with our Republican colleagues now—but the Affordable Health Choices Act is now on the table for debate. We are working on it today, hours and hours yesterday and today, and we will continue that with our Republican colleagues.

There are a number of provisions in there for children that speak directly to this concern I have. Senator DODD has shown tremendous leadership on this issue of helping our children through this legislation. But I believe we have to focus the attention of the country on the challenge, and that is why I have introduced S. Res. 170.

I ask unanimous consent that the entire resolution be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. RES. 170

Whereas Medicaid is a cornerstone of the Nation's health care infrastructure, providing critical health coverage to Americans who have the greatest needs: children and adults whose financial means are very modest and people who are in poorer health compared to the population at-large, including individuals with significant disabilities and those with multiple chronic illnesses;

Whereas Medicaid provides health coverage to $\frac{1}{4}$ of the Nation's children and more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of all low-income children;

Whereas because minority children are more likely to be from low-income families, Medicaid has been shown to reduce racial and ethnic disparities in health care, as it provides coverage for 2 out of every 5 African-American and Hispanic children;

Whereas by limiting cost-sharing and premiums, Medicaid provides a comprehensive benefit package and ensures that children have access to affordable coverage and the health care services they need to stay healthy and meet developmental milestones;

Whereas Medicaid is designed to meet the complex health care needs of low-income and special needs children by including a wide range of essential and comprehensive services that many private insurers do not cover;

Whereas Medicaid provides developmental assessments for infants and young children (including well-child visits, vision and hearing services, and access to a wide range of therapies to manage developmental disorders and chronic illnesses) and coverage for in-home support, long-term care for special needs children, and transportation services;

Whereas Medicaid provides a care coordination benefit that supports at-risk children by coordinating State health services, thereby furthering the ability of States to effectively coordinate medical and social services that are provided by multiple organizations and agencies;

Whereas administrative spending is lower in Medicaid than through private insurance;

Whereas Medicaid is critical for ensuring that children have access to safety-net providers in their local communities and for training health care professionals, including pediatricians; and

Whereas Medicaid provides low-income children with the full complement of services they need to meet their unique health and developmental needs: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) Congress should ensure that reform of our Nation's health care system shall benefit all children and that no child shall be worse off, particularly the most vulnerable low-income children and children with disabilities; and

(2) strengthening our Nation's Medicaid program should be a priority and that low-income children should not be moved into a health care exchange system that could disrupt and diminish their benefits, cost-sharing protections, availability of care standards and protections, and access to supports, services, and safety-net providers.

Mr. CASEY. S. Res. 170 is cosponsored by Senators DODD, ROCKEFELLER, BROWN, WHITEHOUSE, and SANDERS. I will highlight some of the features of it.

First, it starts with a recognition that the Medicaid Program is a cornerstone of the Nation's health insurance infrastructure. It notes in the resolution that Medicaid covers a quarter of all children in the country—one-quarter—and half of all poor children. It notes as well that Medicaid has been shown to reduce racial and ethnic disparities in health care and provides coverage for two out of every five African-American and Hispanic children.

Medicaid is a comprehensive benefit package. It provides developmental assessments for infants and young children. It has care coordination benefits in support of at-risk children, and Medicaid's administrative spending is lower than that through private insurance.

Here is the end of the resolution, and I am summarizing here: It is the intent of this resolution to say that the Nation's health care system shall benefit all children—all children—and that no child shall be worse off at the end of this debate. Low-income children should not be moved into a health care exchange system that could disrupt and diminish their benefits. That is S. Res. 170.

I believe it is critically important to emphasize this idea, that no child should be worse off as a result of health care reform—not a single child—and in particular, those who have special needs or who happen to be poor.

We know from our research that children are not small adults. They have different challenges. They have developmental and health care needs that are very different from adults. The challenges they have, the problems they encounter can be exacerbated if children face economic challenges or have any kind of special needs. These needs must be met, and if they are not met, the whole trajectory for the future of that child will be changed for the worse.

Let me say in conclusion, we have seen throughout our history that there are some people who cannot do something on their own, that they need the help of a program, they need the help of a government, and thank goodness we made the determination a long time ago that our health care system is part of that equation. When I think about health care and when we think about the health care of children, no matter what income level their family happens to be in, but especially if they are poor or have special needs, and you think of the love of a mother, with the kind of love that a mother provides to a child, there are so many things that one mother can provide for her child. She can help with that child's education. She can provide nurturing and care and love to make sure that child develops in the way we would hope. She can even help somewhat in that child's health care. But no matter how much a mother loves her child, no matter how skilled she is, no matter how dedicated she is to the welfare of her child, and no matter how much she loves that child, she cannot—cannot—provide the kind of protections that health insurance provides and the kind of medical attention that a good hospital or a good doctor or a good health care professional can provide.

So we have a choice. We can have health reform legislation, and everyone will pat each other on the back and we will all be happy we got it done. That would be wonderful. But if we get this bill passed and we have fallen short with regard to our children, especially those who are poor and have special needs, I think we will have failed not only those children, of course, but we will have failed the obligation we have to make sure that every child comes through this with the kind of protections and the kind of help they should have a right to expect, and that that mother can have a sense that this country, this government has made a full commitment—not a partial commitment but a full commitment—to children.

Let us, as we go forward, remember the love that a mother has for her child and the limitations—no matter how much that mother loves that child and what she is able to do—that we must help her with in this debate. Let us not forget, and let us make sure that the legislation we pass on health care reform has as one of its ironclad promises: no child worse off.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and would note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, what is the business before the Senate?

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

FAMILY SMOKING PREVENTION AND TOBACCO CONTROL ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 1256, which the clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1256) to protect the public health by providing the Food and Drug Administration with certain authority to regulate tobacco products, to amend title 5, United States Code, to make certain modifications in the Thrift Savings Plan, the Civil Service Retirement System, and the Federal Employees' Retirement System, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 2:30 p.m. will be equally divided and controlled between the Senator from Connecticut, Mr. DODD, and the Senator from Wyoming, Mr. ENZI, or their designees.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I see my friend from Ohio, Senator BROWN, who has been a champion of this issue, not only as a Member of this body but as a former Member of the other body. He has spoken eloquently on this already. I will defer to him whatever time he may wish to use. I am told Senator ENZI will be here shortly. We will go back and forth between now and 2:30.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. BROWN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I have watched with great admiration Senator DODD's work on this bill. I also worked on this bill with HENRY WAXMAN in the House of Representatives. Senators KENNEDY, DODD, DURBIN, and Congressman WAXMAN have helped to bring these issues forward, and they have never given up.

I boil this issue down to basically almost one sentence. I remember sitting in front of the Health Subcommittee in the House years ago and seeing the tobacco company executives swear to tell the truth, and they didn't exactly tell the truth when they talked about nicotine not being an addiction. I learned one simple concept at that hearing—and we have known this for a number of years—which is that 400,000 Americans die every year from tobacco-related illnesses. On average, that means more than 1,000 Americans die every day from tobacco-related illnesses.

If you are a tobacco executive, you think about this: You have lost 400,000 customers every year, more than a thousand customers every day, and you need to replenish your customer base. What do you do? You need to find 400,000 new customers every year. You don't go to people of Senator DODD's and my generation; you don't even go to my children's age group; they are in their late twenties. You aim your marketing campaign at the young men and women sitting in front of me, the pages on the steps in front of the Presiding Officer's chair. You aim at people 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 years old. You have to find 400,000 new customers every year and more than 1,000 customers every day. And they are pretty successful at it.

I heard Senator DODD talk a few minutes ago in another meeting, and he said something like 3,000 new young people start smoking every day. Of those 3,000, for many it becomes a lifelong habit and many will die as a result of smoking. So the key point about this legislation—what makes the legislation Chairman DODD brought forward today so important—is to have the FDA finally be involved in tobacco-related illness and regulation. What makes it so important is we need somebody to stand between the very well-paid drug company marketing executives and these 13-, 14-, 15-, and 16-year-olds who aren't nearly as sophisticated. We need some assistance in making sure those targeting efforts cannot get those young people addicted.

One thousand Americans every day die from tobacco-related illnesses. They need 1,000 new customers every day to replenish their customer base. This legislation will help stop that. That is why this is important, and the Senate needs to pass this legislation. That is why this 15-year effort to do this right finally is coming to fruition. We need to pass this and get it to the President. He is eager to sign it. It will matter greatly in affecting America's public health in the decades ahead.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague from Ohio for his remarks and for his efforts over the years. This has been a long journey. It goes back 50 years. Back then, the Surgeon General of the United States warned of the health effects of smoking—a half century ago.

I know we will have a big vote at 2:30, and that is great news. Sometimes a large vote such as this minimizes the impact of the decision. This has been a very long battle. Somebody told me the other day the issue to ban smoking on airplanes only passed the Congress by one vote. Imagine today if somebody tried to restore the right, or privilege, to smoke on airplanes. I doubt you would find one vote in favor. Even smokers object to smoking on airplanes today. So only by a one-vote margin did Congress vote to ban that practice.

On Monday, we had a cloture vote. People can vote for a lot of different reasons. I don't suggest that everybody who voted against cloture was in favor of continuing to allow the tobacco industry to be unregulated. But by a 1-vote margin, basically, 61 votes, on a bipartisan basis, we terminated that debate, which is bringing us to the vote in 20 minutes. While it may seem like another vote on this day, June 11, 2009, it is a significant vote. I don't know of another vote in the last number of years as important as this one. We are going to start a markup in the next week—my friend from Wyoming has been involved in this and is passionate about the issue of smoking. We are going to mark up bills and fashion a major health care reform debate in this country. What better way to begin that debate than by the vote we are going to take in a few minutes.

For the first time in the history of our country, we will insist that tobacco products be regulated by the FDA. To put this into perspective, the FDA regulates not only all the food and other products we ingest, it regulates cosmetics, mascara, lipstick, and all sorts of products that we not only ingest but that we also use on our bodies. It also controls the products your pets consume, such as cat food, dog food, hamsters, and whatever else; the FDA has the power to regulate that.

But for 50 years, the tobacco industry has successfully fought the ability to regulate tobacco products. Yet 3,000 to 4,000 kids start smoking every day in this country; 400,000 a year die, as you have heard from Senator BROWN. It is incredible to me that for more years than many want to believe or count, we have had an industry that has gone basically unregulated. Of course, the idea that you can put cherry flavors and strawberry flavors in a cigarette and use cartoon figures to market it, that is not aimed at the 30- and 40-year-old tobacco user, it is aimed at children. One thousand of those children become addicted every day, and one-third that number will die prematurely from smoking.

I will guarantee you there is not an adult smoker who wishes their child would begin smoking. I guarantee you that virtually 100 percent of adult smokers have many wishes for their children and one is that their children never start the habit that they did. We are told by health officials, experts, that the average person who smokes and tries to quit, tries seven times before effectively kicking the habit. I am a former smoker. Let me tell you, it is hard. I know others have not smoked, and my colleague from Wyoming talks about his own family smoking. He never did, but he grew up in a family that did. My mother smoked cigarettes and my father smoked cigars and pipes in our house with six children. Many of my siblings smoked growing up, all of whom have stopped. But it is hard.

Today, in the name of my colleague from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY, who for four decades championed this, as well as HENRY WAXMAN in the House, DICK DURBIN of Illinois, SHERROD BROWN of Ohio, MIKE ENZI of Wyoming, and many others who have fought this battle, we will vote at 2:30. It will go through overwhelmingly, and we will go on to the next matter.

Our leader, HARRY REID, insisted we stay on this matter. That is leadership. He could have easily said let's move on to another issue, it is taking too long—3 weeks to get it done. But because HARRY REID and DICK DURBIN and MIKE ENZI stayed with us and insisted we go through a normal process, which is right to do in our committee, with the good staff people who have worked hard on this, we are going to get this done today. We might move on to the next issue then.

For the first time, we will make a difference by requiring that the FDA regulate the production, the sale, and the marketing of these products. That is history. I cannot tell you how proud I am to be involved in it, in the name of TED KENNEDY and the others who came before us, including Mike DeWine of Ohio, Tom Davis, HENRY WAXMAN and many others and the thousands of organizations that joined us in this effort today.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. DODD. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from Connecticut for his leadership on this issue. Just a few weeks ago, he had the legislation on credit card reform.

I thank Senator ENZI for making this a true bipartisan effort. We would not be here today without his cooperative effort.

I thank Senator DODD for invoking the name of our great hero, TED KENNEDY, who started this fight.

In just a few minutes, this Senate will make a historic decision, and I think it will make the right decision. Joe Camel will be given a life sentence and put away forever, and we are going to give our kids and families across America a fighting chance for a better life.

This bill is historic. It has been a long time coming. I thank my colleagues for all their work to make it possible.

Mr. DODD. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act. I have thought long and hard about this legislation, and after a lot of work and a few good improvements, I believe this bill is the only bill we will consider seriously that will make it difficult for kids to get tobacco, make it difficult for them to start smoking, and that is the important point.

I want to be clear, I still do not think there is enough in this bill to stop smoking. One smoker is too many. But maintaining the current state of tobacco regulations is not acceptable to me.

One issue we have not discussed much is the cost of tobacco use to non-smokers. Many smokers say it is their business what they put into their bodies. Ordinarily, they would be right. But when it comes to tobacco, we all pay for what smokers put into their bodies and breathe out into the air. We all bear the increased financial costs of the diminished health of smokers. When one of your colleagues smokes, health insurance premiums go up for everybody. Every senior who uses tobacco creates a further strain on Medicare, and since you pay for that, too, through your taxes, it puts a strain on your wallet.

If smokers were the only ones who paid the price for smoking, we would not be having this debate at all. But since the extra costs get shifted to the rest of us, it becomes our problem too. Secondhand smoke penalizes those who do not smoke, particularly the families of smokers. I hope they listen to that and realize that.

Unfortunately, I know a lot about this since my parents' smoking impacted me. My mom, we thought, quit, but she became a closet smoker, which goes with Senator DODD's comment that it is hard to give it up, and I understand how hard it is to give it up. When she quit smoking and was not smoking around me, my doctor told me he was glad I quit smoking. I said I never did. He showed me the lung x rays he had taken the year before at my athletic physical and that year at my athletic physical. When they quit smoking around me, I also got over extreme hay fever.

Nearly 22 million U.S. children aged 3 to 11 are exposed to secondhand smoke. Approximately 30 percent of indoor workers in the United States are not covered by smoke-free workplace policies. Those numbers are just too high. We cannot keep paying that price.

I also have concerns about the long-term financial health of this new center at FDA. The bill gives FDA increases in funding for this program for the first 10 years but leaves it flat after that. I think Congress will have to revisit that issue or this program will wither on the vine and we will not have meaningful tobacco regulation. We cannot let that happen.

This bill does contain three important provisions for which I fought; increased fines on tobacco companies, larger color graphic warning labels, and reporting to Congress on how the program is going. I would like to talk about each of these for a moment.

We know from decades of experience that the tobacco companies are not inclined to follow the law. They do not have a history of being forthcoming with the health information in their possession. Just 2 weeks ago, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia found that the tobacco companies were guilty of "... a decades-long conspiracy to deceive the American public about the health effects and addictiveness of smoking cigarettes."

I am pleased I was able to add a measure to the bill that increased civil penalties for violations of the new law and sends a strong message that we are serious about expecting compliance from the tobacco industry.

The new larger color graphic warning labels provision I authored will do a lot to reduce smoking. Everyone from the World Health Organization to the Congressional Budget Office says these warnings work. Research shows these warnings have a big impact. One-fifth of the participants reported smoking less as a result of the labels. Only 1 percent reported smoking more.

We should want kids who are thinking about taking up this deadly habit to have a bit of a shock just by looking at the package. We should want smokers to think about these health issues each time they light up. Any tool in our arsenal that makes people think twice about taking up tobacco should not be an option, it should be a requirement. Now these labels are a requirement.

Finally, we now require reports on the performance of FDA's tobacco center and on the financial situation of the program. Without this regular reporting, Congress would have little insight into the operation and status of this new program. These reports play an important role in establishing the health of the programs and FDA's performance in carrying out the law.

I want to make sure the agency is doing what it is supposed to do and that the fees are paying for FDA's tobacco control activities. These reports will help us do just exactly that.

I have always stood against tobacco. The footing would have been better if changes such as my phase-out amendment to reduce tobacco use over 100 years was accepted. I know how addictive it is. I did not want to make it too short a period of time. I thought 100 years was plenty reasonable. We did not have a chance to debate that or look at it. I actually offered that a little more than a year ago. It was a new amendment then. New amendments have trouble getting traction, except in New Zealand. New Zealand liked this approach to stopping smoking and looked at it in their legislature. They even called it the Enzi bill. Of course, you have to realize that is how it sounds and that is the way they spelled it, but in New Zealand, "NZ" stands for their country. I think they were talking about their country's bill rather than something I had written. It was kind of fun to watch anyway.

I think we need to look at some approaches such as that idea where the tobacco companies have to reduce the number of cigarettes they are selling each and every year or purchase a number from another company to make up for the increase in cigarettes they sold, which would reduce smoking at least in one part and over a long period of time would eliminate this problem.

This bill is just one step toward the goal I know we all share, which is reducing the public health toll of tobacco use. I urge my colleagues not to rest on their laurels and think this bill is enough to combat tobacco. I intend to continue the fight against tobacco, and I ask my colleagues to join me.

I thank Senator DODD, who has been chairing this effort and working on this bill with me, for giving us a voice and taking the bill through the whole process. It was extremely important, extremely valuable. The floor discussion took longer but with less debate than I anticipated. I know some parliamentary issues got in the way of that. We could have had more success, but there were some additional amendments that could not be resolved.

I always ask people to do relevant or germane amendments to the bills. When they talk about doing other ones, it sometimes slows our process down dramatically and usually does not result in any of those amendments happening anyway.

I also wish to thank all the staff who worked on this bill. They, too, have been very diligent, have looked at everything, have done tremendous research. I particularly thank Amy Muhlberg for her efforts on this legislation. I think she knows the tobacco bill and other proposals better than probably anybody. She has real diligence and passion for it. I also thank Greg Dean of my staff for his efforts. He has a legal mind that helps us on these issues.

I thank Senator BARR for his hard work during this process. Although he ultimately was not successful, his efforts helped advance the debate and highlight some areas where improvement is needed. He put considerable time and energy into preparing a viable alternative, and I appreciate the way he created options.

Chris Wall of Senator BARR's staff was extremely helpful during the markup and floor debate, and I thank him and compliment his work with my staff and others on this bill. Jeff Teitz and Ben Olinsky of Senator KENNEDY's staff, and Jim Fenton and Jeremy Sharp of Senator DODD's staff were also critical to our progress on this bill. Finally, Megan Hauck from the Republican leader's office and the floor staff for their assistance.

I do intend to continue the fight against tobacco. I ask my colleagues to join me in this fight. I thank Senator DODD for all of his efforts. There is true passion.

I yield the floor.

REGULATING TOBACCO WAREHOUSES

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the bill before us grants standby authority to the Secretary of Health and Human Services to regulate "tobacco warehouses." Because the bill already draws a bright line between tobacco companies that actually manufacture tobacco products and those, including growers and "tobacco warehouses," that do not manufacture, I would expect that the Secretary would utilize the standby authority to regulate tobacco warehouses only under unforeseen and unanticipated circumstances that give rise to public health concerns.

Mr. DODD. That is my general understanding of the provision.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Senator.

PESTICIDE REGULATION

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, the EPA's Office of Pesticide Programs has been protecting the environment, agricultural workers and the public health by regulating pesticides for many years. These chemicals are commonly used in agriculture, including the production of tobacco leaf. EPA approves the use of all pesticides in the United States under the authority of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act—FIFRA. I would ask Senator HARKIN if this bill would in any way limit the authority of the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to regulate pesticides under FIFRA.

Mr. HARKIN. I would respond to the Senator from Georgia that it is my understanding that nothing in the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act would restrict the Administrator's authority provided under FIFRA.

Mr. DODD. I agree with my colleagues from the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I support the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act. Tobacco products kill approximately 400,000 people each year. The Food and Drug Administration, FDA, must be provided with the authority to regulate deadly tobacco products, restrict advertising, and further restrict access of tobacco to children.

The Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids estimates that almost 10 percent of Hawaii high school students smoke. Flavored cigarettes are one of the repulsive methods used by tobacco companies to get children and teenagers to start smoking. In 2004, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company tried to exploit images of my home state of Hawaii and the name of one of our islands in an attempt to make smoking more attractive. One of the cigarettes, which was named Kauai Kolada, was flavored with hints of pineapple and coconut. Another lime-flavored cigarette was featured in the predatory marketing campaign. It was extraordinarily offensive that a manufacturer of such a deadly product would exploit and taint the images and names from Hawaii in an attempt to attract young smokers. This is just one example of some of the products and marketing used to attract young people to become smokers.

This legislation includes a long overdue prohibition on fruit and candy flavored cigarettes. It also will permit the FDA to restrict advertising, marketing, and sales practices in an attempt to further limit the access of tobacco products to children. This bill will help protect our children and improve the public health of our country. We must prevent tobacco companies from cultivating another generation of smokers so that they can increase sales and reap more profits at the expense of the health and well-being of our families.

In order to supplement the loss in revenue from this bill, the House added provisions to increase revenue through the introduction of a Roth-like option for Thrift Savings Plan participants. The additional revenue also covered a number of annuity enhancement, correction, and equity provisions for Federal employees. The Lieberman amendment included these provisions as well as the Non-Foreign Area Retirement Equity Assurance Act, to provide Federal employees in Alaska, Hawaii, and the territories locality pay. I strongly supported the Lieberman amendment and all the Federal employee annuitant provisions, and I am very disappointed that a lack of cooperation for this bipartisan amendment led to its defeat. I am hopeful that we will be able to address these critical issues to Federal employees very soon.

I appreciate all of the work done on this important issue by my friend from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY, and my friends from Connecticut, Senators DODD and LIEBERMAN. I look forward to the enactment of this vital legislation.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am pleased the Senate is moving once again to pass legislation to regulate tobacco products in the United States. Senator KENNEDY's lifetime efforts to improve the public's health are exemplified in his fight to pass the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act. Despite many setbacks, Senator KENNEDY has worked tirelessly to pass this legislation and I am proud to join him again as a cosponsor of this bill. This legislation is long overdue and I look forward to it being signed into law.

The health risks associated with smoking are undisputed and cost hundreds of thousands of Americans their lives every year. Tobacco products will kill one out of three long-term smokers, leading to over 400,000 deaths per year. The Surgeon General has determined that smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, and other serious illnesses. Deaths from tobacco products exceed deaths from HIV/AIDS, illegal drug use, alcohol use, car accidents, suicides, and murders combined.

Despite the dangers of smoking, we have seen that children have the greatest risk of becoming addicted to tobacco. Each day more than 3,500 children will try a cigarette for the first time and 1000 of those kids will become regular smokers. Among adult smokers, 90 percent started smoking as children and teens under the age of 18. In my home State of Vermont, more than 18 percent of high school students smoke. According to the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, 12,000 children in Vermont will ultimately die from smoking if smoking rates remain unchanged.

These statistics are horrifying but perhaps not surprising given the historic lack of regulation of the tobacco industry. At a congressional hearing as late as 1994, tobacco industry chairmen and CEOs testified that nicotine is not addictive, even though decades of evidence showed otherwise. In fact, the tobacco industry has increased the nicotine levels in cigarettes by more than 11 percent from 1998 to 2005, increasing the risk of cigarette addiction. If enhanced nicotine levels in cigarettes is not enough to convince us that the tobacco industry should be regulated, a new study released this spring showed that changes the tobacco industry has made to cigarette design over the years has increased the risk of lung cancer for those who smoke.

In addition to making their products more potent and addictive, study after study has shown how the tobacco industry continues to successfully target advertising to minors to get them hooked for life on smoking. Each year, the tobacco industry spends over $13 billion in advertising—that is $36 million every day. Studies have showed that children are three times more sensitive to tobacco advertising than adults and are more likely to be influenced to start smoking by cigarette marketing than by peer pressure.

This bill addresses these shameful business practices by giving the United States Food and Drug Administration the authority for the first time to regulate the sale, distribution, and advertising of cigarettes and smokeless tobacco. It will require manufacturers to better disclose the contents and consequences of their products in new, stronger warning labels on packages. It will also prohibit cigarette companies from labeling their brands as reduced risk "lite" or "ultra-lite" unless the government can certify that those claims are true. The very purpose of the Food and Drug Administration is to protect the interests and safety of consumers and this legislation will finally allow the FDA to hold the tobacco industry accountable for their products.

A recent ruling by the District of Columbia Circuit Court highlights the need for serious regulation of the tobacco industry. The DC Appeals Court confirmed the district court's ruling, which found that the tobacco industry had for decades engaged in deceptive marketing tactics to conceal the negative health impacts of smoking. The ruling confirmed that tobacco companies had not changed the way their products were marketed in response to the Master Settlement Agreement, and instead the industry has more than doubled spending on marketing campaigns that included spurious claims of "healthier" cigarettes that are "light" or "low-tar." The ruling did not, however, require that the tobacco industry surrender profits that resulted in the misleading advertising or stop the industry from adding flavors to make products more appealing to kids or to manipulate nicotine levels to increase addictiveness and harm. The tobacco industry must be regulated to create transparency in the contents of tobacco products and to help stop hundreds of thousands of preventable deaths each year.

For far too long, the tobacco industry has been given free rein to mislead the public and encourage children and teens to take up smoking. The passage of this bill will give the FDA the authority it needs to effectively protect children from smoking and improve consumer awareness of tobacco industry practices, which will in turn save American lives. I urge all Senators to support passage of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues. We are getting close to the time of the vote. I would be remiss if I did not also mention our staff. I often say in a time such as this, Senators get the opportunity to stand at a podium and be heard, but there are literally dozens of people whose names most Americans will never know who make these moments happen. They deserve public recognition because they worked tirelessly, late nights, weekends, around the clock negotiating, working with each other trying to iron out provisions of the bill.

On Senator KENNEDY's staff: Jeff Teitz, Michael Myers, Ben Olinsky, Terri Roney, Shawn Daugherty, and Portia Wu. Some are in the Chamber. I thank them immensely on behalf of Senator KENNEDY.

Senator DURBIN's staff: Tom Falletti and Sara Singleton have been terrific in this effort. We thank Tom and Sara for their work.

Senator ENZI's staff: Greg Dean and Amy Muhlberg. We thank them immensely. They worked hard on this bill.

Finally I want to thank Jim Fenton from my office, Rachael Holt, Jeremy Sharp, who is sitting next to me, and Monica Feit. I have gotten a lot of help in this effort, with Senator KENNEDY's staff and Senator ENZI's staff.

There are members of the majority leader's staff who deserve our thanks as well. We always have to thank Lula, Tim, and others who make it all possible. We thank them all very much for what they do.

Again, as Senator DURBIN said, and Senator ENZI and others have said, this is a historic moment for our Chamber to be able to do something. Fifty years ago the Surgeon General warned us of tobacco use, and a half century later we are about to insist the agency in charge of food, drugs, cosmetics, and pet food also be able to include tobacco. We are about to do that.

The House and Senate bills are similar, and I believe we will have a Presidential signature on this legislation very quickly.

On behalf of millions of families across this country and as the father of a 4-year-old and a 7-year-old who do not know anything about tobacco yet, and whose mother does not smoke, never did, and a father who did but stopped, on behalf of my children and millions of children around this country, we are told by the Congressional Budget Office that an 11-percent reduction in youth smoking can happen immediately with the passage of this bill. That may not seem like much, but it is a beginning. We may just reach the goal of my colleague from Wyoming of a 100-percent reduction of young people smoking. My hope is that certainly will be the case.

Mr. President, with a little bit of time remaining, I am prepared to yield back the time, and at the appropriate moment, I will ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The Senator from Wyoming has 3 minutes 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

Under the previous order, the bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill, as amended, pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND) would have voted "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 79, nays 17, as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

- (1) The use of tobacco products by the Nation's children is a pediatric disease of considerable proportions that results in new generations of tobacco-dependent children and adults.
- (2) A consensus exists within the scientific and medical communities that tobacco products are inherently dangerous and cause cancer, heart disease, and other serious adverse health effects.
- (3) Nicotine is an addictive drug.
- (4) Virtually all new users of tobacco products are under the minimum legal age to purchase such products.
- (5) Tobacco advertising and marketing contribute significantly to the use of nicotine-containing tobacco products by adolescents.
- (6) Because past efforts to restrict advertising and marketing of tobacco products have failed adequately to curb tobacco use by adolescents, comprehensive restrictions on the sale, promotion, and distribution of such products are needed.
- (7) Federal and State governments have lacked the legal and regulatory authority and resources they need to address comprehensively the public health and societal problems caused by the use of tobacco products.
- (8) Federal and State public health officials, the public health community, and the public at large recognize that the tobacco industry should be subject to ongoing oversight.
- (9) Under article I, section 8 of the Constitution, the Congress is vested with the responsibility for regulating interstate commerce and commerce with Indian tribes.

ability for regulating interstate commerce and commerce with Indian tribes.

(10) The sale, distribution, marketing, advertising, and use of tobacco products are activities in and substantially affecting interstate commerce because they are sold, marketed, advertised, and distributed in interstate commerce on a nationwide basis, and have a substantial effect on the Nation's economy.

(11) The sale, distribution, marketing, advertising, and use of such products substantially affect interstate commerce through the health care and other costs attributable to the use of tobacco products.

(12) It is in the public interest for Congress to enact legislation that provides the Food and Drug Administration with the authority to regulate tobacco products and the advertising and promotion of such products. The benefits to the American people from enacting such legislation would be significant in human and economic terms.

(13) Tobacco use is the foremost preventable cause of premature death in America. It causes over 400,000 deaths in the United States each year, and approximately 8,600,000 Americans have chronic illnesses related to smoking.

(14) Reducing the use of tobacco by minors by 50 percent would prevent well over 10,000,000 of today's children from becoming regular, daily smokers, saving over 3,000,000 of them from premature death due to tobacco-induced disease. Such a reduction in youth smoking would also result in approximately $75,000,000,000 in savings attributable to reduced health care costs.

(15) Advertising, marketing, and promotion of tobacco products have been especially directed to attract young persons to use tobacco products, and these efforts have resulted in increased use of such products by youth. Past efforts to oversee these activities have not been successful in adequately preventing such increased use.

(16) In 2005, the cigarette manufacturers spent more than $13,000,000,000 to attract new users, retain current users, increase current consumption, and generate favorable long-term attitudes toward smoking and tobacco use.

(17) Tobacco product advertising often misleadingly portrays the use of tobacco as socially acceptable and healthful to minors.

(18) Tobacco product advertising is regularly seen by persons under the age of 18, and persons under the age of 18 are regularly exposed to tobacco product promotional efforts.

(19) Through advertisements during and sponsorship of sporting events, tobacco has become strongly associated with sports and has become portrayed as an integral part of sports and the healthy lifestyle associated with rigorous sporting activity.

(20) Children are exposed to substantial and unavoidable tobacco advertising that leads to favorable beliefs about tobacco use, plays a role in leading young people to overestimate the prevalence of tobacco use, and increases the number of young people who begin to use tobacco.

(21) The use of tobacco products in motion pictures and other mass media glamorizes its use for young people and encourages them to use tobacco products.

(22) Tobacco advertising expands the size of the tobacco market by increasing consumption of tobacco products including tobacco use by young people.

(23) Children are more influenced by tobacco marketing than adults: more than 80 percent of youth smoke three heavily marketed brands, while only 54 percent of adults, 26 and older, smoke these same brands.

(24) Tobacco company documents indicate that young people are an important and often crucial segment of the tobacco market. Children, who tend to be more price sensitive than adults, are influenced by advertising and promotion practices that result in drastically reduced cigarette prices.

(25) Comprehensive advertising restrictions will have a positive effect on the smoking rates of young people.

(26) Restrictions on advertising are necessary to prevent unrestricted tobacco advertising from undermining legislation prohibiting access to young people and providing for education about tobacco use.

(27) International experience shows that advertising regulations that are stringent and comprehensive have a greater impact on overall tobacco use and young people's use than weaker or less comprehensive ones.

(28) Text only requirements, although not as stringent as a ban, will help reduce underage use of tobacco products while preserving the informational function of advertising.

(29) It is in the public interest for Congress to adopt legislation to address the public health crisis created by actions of the tobacco industry.

(30) The final regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health and Human Services in the August 28, 1996, issue of the Federal Register (61 Fed. Reg. 44615-44618) for inclusion as part 897 of title 21, Code of Federal Regulations, are consistent with the first amendment to the United States Constitution and with the standards set forth in the amendments made by this subtitle for the regulation of tobacco products by the Food and Drug Administration, and the restriction on the sale and distribution of, including access to and the advertising and promotion of, tobacco products contained in such regulations are substantially related to accomplishing the public health goals of this division.

(31) The regulations described in paragraph (30) will directly and materially advance the Federal Government's substantial interest in reducing the number of children and adolescents who use cigarettes and smokeless tobacco and in preventing the life-threatening health consequences associated with tobacco use. An overwhelming majority of Americans who use tobacco products begin using such products while they are minors and become addicted to the nicotine in those products before reaching the age of 18. Tobacco advertising and promotion play a crucial role in the decision of these minors to begin using tobacco products. Less restrictive and less comprehensive approaches have not and will not be effective in reducing the problems addressed by such regulations. The reasonable restrictions on the advertising and promotion of tobacco products contained in such regulations will lead to a significant decrease in the number of minors using and becoming addicted to those products.

(32) The regulations described in paragraph (30) impose no more extensive restrictions on communication by tobacco manufacturers and sellers than are necessary to reduce the number of children and adolescents who use cigarettes and smokeless tobacco and to prevent the life-threatening health consequences associated with tobacco use. Such regulations are narrowly tailored to restrict those advertising and promotional practices which are most likely to be seen or heard by youth and most likely to entice them into tobacco use, while affording tobacco manufacturers and sellers ample opportunity to convey information about their products to adult consumers.

(33) Tobacco dependence is a chronic disease, one that typically requires repeated interventions to achieve long-term or permanent abstinence.

(34) Because the only known safe alternative to smoking is cessation, interventions should target all smokers to help them quit completely.

(35) Tobacco products have been used to facilitate and finance criminal activities both domestically and internationally. Illicit trade of tobacco products has been linked to organized crime and terrorist groups.

(36) It is essential that the Food and Drug Administration review products sold or distributed for use to reduce risks or exposures associated with tobacco products and that it be empowered to review any advertising and labeling for such products. It is also essential that manufacturers, prior to marketing such products, be required to demonstrate that such products will meet a series of rigorous criteria, and will benefit the health of the population as a whole, taking into account both users of tobacco products and persons who do not currently use tobacco products.

(37) Unless tobacco products that purport to reduce the risks to the public of tobacco use actually reduce such risks, those products can cause substantial harm to the public health to the extent that the individuals, who would otherwise not consume tobacco products or would consume such products less, use tobacco products purporting to reduce risk. Those who use products sold or distributed as modified risk products that do not in fact reduce risk, rather than quitting or reducing their use of tobacco products, have a substantially increased likelihood of suffering disability and premature death. The costs to society of the widespread use of products sold or distributed as modified risk products that do not in fact reduce risk or that increase risk include thousands of unnecessary deaths and injuries and huge costs to our health care system.

(38) As the National Cancer Institute has found, many smokers mistakenly believe that "low tar" and "light" cigarettes cause fewer health problems than other cigarettes. As the National Cancer Institute has also found, mistaken beliefs about the health consequences of smoking "low tar" and "light" cigarettes can reduce the motivation to quit smoking entirely and thereby lead to disease and death.

(39) Recent studies have demonstrated that there has been no reduction in risk on a population-wide basis from "low tar" and "light" cigarettes, and such products may actually increase the risk of tobacco use.

(40) The dangers of products sold or distributed as modified risk tobacco products that do not in fact reduce risk are so high that there is a compelling governmental interest in ensuring that statements about modified risk tobacco products are complete, accurate, and relate to the overall disease risk of the product.

(41) As the Federal Trade Commission has found, consumers have misinterpreted advertisements in which one product is claimed to be less harmful than a comparable product, even in the presence of disclosures and advisories intended to provide clarification.

(42) Permitting manufacturers to make unsubstantiated statements concerning modified risk tobacco products, whether express or implied, even if accompanied by disclaimers would be detrimental to the public health.

(43) The only way to effectively protect the public health from the dangers of unsubstantiated modified risk tobacco products is to empower the Food and Drug Administration to require that products that tobacco manufacturers sold or distributed for risk reduction be reviewed in advance of marketing, and to require that the evidence relied on to support claims be fully verified.

(44) The Food and Drug Administration is a regulatory agency with the scientific expertise to identify harmful substances in products to which consumers are exposed, to design standards to limit exposure to those substances, to evaluate scientific studies supporting claims about the safety of products, and to evaluate the impact of labels, labeling, and advertising on consumer behavior in order to reduce the risk of harm and promote understanding of the impact of the product on health. In connection with its mandate to promote health and reduce the risk of harm, the Food and Drug Administration routinely makes decisions about whether and how products may be marketed in the United States.

(45) The Federal Trade Commission was created to protect consumers from unfair or deceptive acts or practices, and to regulate unfair methods of competition. Its focus is on those marketplace practices that deceive or mislead consumers, and those that give some competitors an unfair advantage. Its mission is to regulate activities in the marketplace. Neither the Federal Trade Commission nor any other Federal agency except the Food and Drug Administration possesses the scientific expertise needed to implement effectively all provisions of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act.

(46) If manufacturers state or imply in communications directed to consumers through the media or through a label, labeling, or advertising, that a tobacco product is approved or inspected by the Food and Drug Administration or complies with Food and Drug Administration standards, consumers are likely to be confused and misled. Depending upon the particular language used and its context, such a statement could result in consumers being misled into believing that the product is endorsed by the Food and Drug Administration for use or in consumers being misled about the harmfulness of the product because of such regulation, inspection, approval, or compliance.

(47) In August 2006 a United States district court judge found that the major United States cigarette companies continue to target and market to youth. USA v. Philip Morris, USA, Inc., et al. (Civil Action No. 99-2496 (GK), August 17, 2006).

(48) In August 2006 a United States district court judge found that the major United States cigarette companies dramatically increased their advertising and promotional spending in ways that encourage youth to start smoking subsequent to the signing of the Master Settlement Agreement in 1998. USA v. Philip Morris, USA, Inc., et al. (Civil Action No. 99-2496 (GK), August 17, 2006).

(49) In August 2006 a United States district court judge found that the major United States cigarette companies have designed their cigarettes to precisely control nicotine delivery levels and provide doses of nicotine sufficient to create and sustain addiction while also conceding much of their nicotine-related research. USA v. Philip Morris, USA, Inc., et al. (Civil Action No. 99-2496 (GK), August 17, 2006).

SEC. 3. PURPOSE.

The purposes of this division are—

(1) to provide authority to the Food and Drug Administration to regulate tobacco products under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.), by recognizing it as the primary Federal regulatory authority with respect to the manufacture, marketing, and distribution of tobacco products as provided for in this division;

(2) to ensure that the Food and Drug Administration has the authority to address issues of particular concern to public health officials, especially the use of tobacco by young people and dependence on tobacco;

(3) to authorize the Food and Drug Administration to set national standards controlling the manufacture of tobacco products and the identity, public disclosure, and amount of ingredients used in such products;

(4) to provide new and flexible enforcement authority to ensure that there is effective oversight of the tobacco industry's efforts to develop, introduce, and promote less harmful tobacco products;

(5) to vest the Food and Drug Administration with the authority to regulate the levels of tar, nicotine, and other harmful components of tobacco products;

(6) in order to ensure that consumers are better informed, to require tobacco product manufacturers to disclose research which has not previously been made available, as well as research generated in the future, relating to the health and dependency effects or safety of tobacco products;

(7) to continue to permit the sale of tobacco products to adults in conjunction with measures to ensure that they are not sold or accessible to underage purchasers;

(8) to impose appropriate regulatory controls on the tobacco industry;

(9) to promote cessation to reduce disease risk and the social costs associated with tobacco-related diseases; and

(10) to strengthen legislation against illicit trade in tobacco products.

SEC. 4. SCOPE AND EFFECT.

(a) INTENDED EFFECT.—Nothing in this division (or an amendment made by this division) shall be construed to—

(1) establish a precedent with regard to any other industry, situation, circumstance, or legal action; or

(2) affect any action pending in Federal, State, or tribal court, or any agreement, consent decree, or contract of any kind.

(b) AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES.—The provisions of this division (or an amendment made by this division) which authorize the Secretary to take certain actions with regard to tobacco and tobacco products shall not be construed to affect any authority of the Secretary of Agriculture under existing law regarding the growing, cultivation, or curing of raw tobacco.

(c) REVENUE ACTIVITIES.—The provisions of this division (or an amendment made by this division) which authorize the Secretary to take certain actions with regard to tobacco products shall not be construed to affect any authority of the Secretary of the Treasury under chapter 52 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 5. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this division, of the amendments made by this division, or of the regulations promulgated under this division (or under such amendments), or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance is held to be invalid, the remainder of this division, such amendments and such regulations, and the application of such provisions to any other person or circumstance shall not be affected and shall continue to be enforced to the fullest extent possible.

SEC. 6. MODIFICATION OF DEADLINES FOR SECRETARIAL ACTION.

(a) DELAYED COMMENCEMENT OF DATES FOR SECRETARIAL ACTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c), with respect to any time periods specified in this division (or in an amendment made by this division) that begin on the date of enactment of this Act, within which the Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to carry out and complete specified activities, the calculation of such time periods shall commence on the date described in subsection (b).

(2) LIMITATION.—Subsection (a) shall only apply with respect to obligations of the Secretary of Health and Human Services that must be completed within a specified time period and shall not apply to the obligations of any other person or to any other provision of this division (including the amendments made by this division) that do not create such obligations of the Secretary and are not contingent on actions by the Secretary.

(b) DATE DESCRIBED.—The date described in this subsection is the first day of the first fiscal quarter following the initial 2 consecutive fiscal quarters of fiscal year 2010 for which the Secretary of Health and Human Services has collected fees under section 919 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (as added by section 101).

(c) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any time period (or date) contained—

(1) in section 102, except that the reference to “180 days” in subsection (a)(1) of such section shall be deemed to be “270 days”; and

(2) in sections 201 through 204 (or the amendments made by any such sections).

(d) ADJUSTMENT.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services may extend or reduce the duration of one or more time periods to which subsection (a) applies if the Secretary determines appropriate, but no such period shall be extended for more than 90 days.

TITLE I—AUTHORITY OF THE FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 101. AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL FOOD, DRUG, AND COSMETIC ACT.

(a) DEFINITION OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—Section 201 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(rr)(1) The term ‘tobacco product’ means any product made or derived from tobacco that is intended for human consumption, including any component, part, or accessory of a tobacco product (except for raw materials other than tobacco used in manufacturing a component, part, or accessory of a tobacco product).

“(2) The term ‘tobacco product’ does not mean an article that is a drug under subsection (g)(1), a device under subsection (h), or a combination product described in section 503(g).

“(3) The products described in paragraph (2) shall be subject to chapter V of this Act.

“(4) A tobacco product shall not be marketed in combination with any other article or product regulated under this Act (including a drug, biologic, food, cosmetic, medical device, or a dietary supplement).”

(b) FDA AUTHORITY OVER TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—The Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating chapter IX as chapter X;

(2) by redesignating sections 901 through 910 as sections 1001 through 1010; and

(3) by inserting after chapter VIII the following:

“CHAPTER IX—TOBACCO PRODUCTS

“SEC. 900. DEFINITIONS.

“In this chapter:

“(1) ADDITIVE.—The term ‘additive’ means any substance the intended use of which results or may reasonably be expected to result, directly or indirectly, in its becoming a component or otherwise affecting the characteristic of any tobacco product (including any substances intended for use as a flavoring or coloring or in producing, manufacturing, packing, processing, preparing, treating, packaging, transporting, or holding), except that such term does not include tobacco or a pesticide chemical residue in or on raw tobacco or a pesticide chemical.

“(2) BRAND.—The term ‘brand’ means a variety of tobacco product distinguished by the tobacco used, tar content, nicotine content, flavoring used, size, filtration, packaging, logo, registered trademark, brand name, identifiable pattern of colors, or any combination of such attributes.

“(3) CIGARETTE.—The term ‘cigarette’—

“(A) means a product that—

“(i) is a tobacco product; and

“(ii) meets the definition of the term ‘cigarette’ in section 3(1) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act; and

“(B) includes tobacco, in any form, that is functional in the product, which, because of its appearance, the type of tobacco used in the filler, or its packaging and labeling, is likely to be offered to, or purchased by, consumers as a cigarette or as roll-your-own tobacco.

“(4) CIGARETTE TOBACCO.—The term ‘cigarette tobacco’ means any product that consists of loose tobacco that is intended for use by consumers in a cigarette. Unless otherwise stated, the requirements applicable to cigarettes under this chapter shall also apply to cigarette tobacco.

“(5) COMMERCE.—The term ‘commerce’ has the meaning given that term by section 3(2) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act.

“(6) COUNTERFEIT TOBACCO PRODUCT.—The term ‘counterfeit tobacco product’ means a tobacco product (or the container or labeling of such a product) that, without authorization, bears the trademark, trade name, or other identifying mark, imprint, or device, or any likeness thereof, of a tobacco product listed in a registration under section 905(i)(1).

“(7) DISTRIBUTOR.—The term ‘distributor’ as regards a tobacco product means any person who furthers the distribution of a tobacco product, whether domestic or imported, at any point from the original place of manufacture to the person who sells or distributes the product to individuals for personal consumption. Common carriers are not considered distributors for purposes of this chapter.

“(8) ILLICIT TRADE.—The term ‘illicit trade’ means any practice or conduct prohibited by law which relates to production, shipment, receipt, possession, distribution, sale, or purchase of tobacco products including any practice or conduct intended to facilitate such activity.

“(9) INDIAN COUNTRY.—The term ‘Indian country’ has the meaning given such term in section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

“(10) INDIAN TRIBE.—The term ‘Indian tribe’ has the meaning given such term in section 4(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.

“(11) LITTLE CIGAR.—The term ‘little cigar’ means a product that—

“(A) is a tobacco product; and

“(B) meets the definition of the term ‘little cigar’ in section 3(7) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act.

“(12) NICOTINE.—The term ‘nicotine’ means the chemical substance named 3-(1-Methyl-2-pyrrolidiny) pyridine or C[10]H[14]N[2], including any salt or complex of nicotine.

“(13) PACKAGE.—The term ‘package’ means a pack, box, carton, or container of any kind or, if no other container, any wrapping (including cellophane), in which a tobacco product is offered for sale, sold, or otherwise distributed to consumers.

“(14) RETAILER.—The term ‘retailer’ means any person, government, or entity who sells tobacco products to individuals for personal consumption, or who operates a facility where self-service displays of tobacco products are permitted.

“(15) ROLL-YOUR-OWN TOBACCO.—The term ‘roll-your-own tobacco’ means any tobacco product which, because of its appearance, type, packaging, or labeling, is suitable for use and likely to be offered to, or purchased by, consumers as tobacco for making cigarettes.

“(16) SMALL TOBACCO PRODUCT MANUFACTURER.—The term ‘small tobacco product manufacturer’ means a tobacco product manufacturer that employs fewer than 350 employees. For purposes of determining the number of employees of a manufacturer under the preceding sentence, the employees of a manufacturer are deemed to include the employees of each entity that controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with such manufacturer.

“(17) SMOKE CONSTITUENT.—The term ‘smoke constituent’ means any chemical or chemical compound in mainstream or sidestream tobacco smoke that either transfers from any component of the cigarette to the smoke or that is formed by the combustion or heating of tobacco, additives, or other component of the tobacco product.

“(18) SMOKELESS TOBACCO.—The term ‘smokeless tobacco’ means any tobacco product that consists of cut, ground, powdered, or leaf tobacco and that is intended to be placed in the oral or nasal cavity.

“(19) STATE; TERRITORY.—The terms ‘State’ and ‘Territory’ shall have the meanings given to such terms in section 201.

“(20) TOBACCO PRODUCT MANUFACTURER.—The term ‘tobacco product manufacturer’ means any person, including any repacker or relabeler, who—

“(A) manufactures, fabricates, assembles, processes, or labels a tobacco product; or “(B) imports a finished tobacco product for sale or distribution in the United States.

“(21) TOBACCO WAREHOUSE.—

“(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), the term ‘tobacco warehouse’ includes any person—

“(i) who—

“(I) removes foreign material from tobacco leaf through nothing other than a mechanical process;

“(II) humidifies tobacco leaf with nothing other than potable water in the form of steam or mist; or

“(III) de-stems, dries, and packs tobacco leaf for storage and shipment;

“(ii) who performs no other actions with respect to tobacco leaf; and “(iii) who provides to any manufacturer to whom the person sells tobacco all information related to the person’s actions described in clause (i) that is necessary for compliance with this Act.

“(B) The term ‘tobacco warehouse’ excludes any person who—

“(i) reconstitutes tobacco leaf;

“(ii) is a manufacturer, distributor, or retailer of a tobacco product; or

“(iii) applies any chemical, additive, or substance to the tobacco leaf other than potable water in the form of steam or mist.

“(C) The definition of the term ‘tobacco warehouse’ in subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the extent to which the Secretary determines, through rulemaking, that regulation under this chapter of the actions described in such subparagraph is appropriate for the protection of the public health.

“(22) UNITED STATES.—The term ‘United States’ means the 50 States of the United States of America and the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Wake Island, Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, Johnston Atoll, the Northern Mariana Islands, and any other trust territory or possession of the United States.

“SEC. 901. FDA AUTHORITY OVER TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Tobacco products, including modified risk tobacco products for which an order has been issued in accordance with section 911, shall be regulated by the Secretary under this chapter and shall not be subject to the provisions of chapter V.

“(b) APPLICABILITY.—This chapter shall apply to all cigarettes, cigarette tobacco, roll-your-own tobacco, and smokeless tobacco and to any other tobacco products that the Secretary by regulation deems to be subject to this chapter.

“(c) SCOPE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this chapter, or any policy issued or regulation promulgated thereunder, or in sections 101(a), 102, or 103 of title I, title II, or title III of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, shall be construed to affect, expand, or limit the Secretary’s authority over (including the authority to determine whether products may be regulated), or the regulation of, products under this Act that are not tobacco products under chapter V or any other chapter.

“(2) LIMITATION OF AUTHORITY.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to tobacco leaf that is not in the possession of a manufacturer of tobacco products, or to the producers of tobacco leaf, including tobacco growers, tobacco warehouses, and tobacco grower cooperatives, nor shall any employee of the Food and Drug Administration have any authority to enter onto a farm owned by a producer of tobacco leaf without the written consent of such producer.

“(B) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), if a producer of tobacco leaf is also a tobacco product manufacturer or controlled by a tobacco product manufacturer, the producer shall be subject to this chapter in the producer’s capacity as a manufacturer. The exception in this subparagraph shall not apply to a producer of tobacco leaf who grows tobacco under a contract with a tobacco product manufacturer and who is not otherwise engaged in the manufacturing process.

“(C) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to grant the Secretary authority to promulgate regulations on any matter that involves the production of tobacco leaf or a producer thereof, other than activities by a manufacturer affecting production.

“(d) RULEMAKING PROCEDURES.—Each rulemaking under this chapter shall be in accordance with chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code. This subsection shall not be construed to affect the rulemaking provisions of section 102(a) of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act.

“(e) CENTER FOR TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall establish within the Food and Drug Administration the Center for Tobacco Products, which shall report to the Commissioner of Food and Drugs in the same manner as the other agency centers within the Food and Drug Administration. The Center shall be responsible for the implementation of this chapter and related matters assigned by the Commissioner.

“(f) OFFICE TO ASSIST SMALL TOBACCO PRODUCT MANUFACTURERS.—The Secretary shall establish within the Food and Drug Administration an identifiable office to provide technical and other nonfinancial assistance to small tobacco product manufacturers to assist them in complying with the requirements of this Act.

“(g) CONSULTATION PRIOR TO RULEMAKING.—Prior to promulgating rules under this chapter, the Secretary shall endeavor to consult with other Federal agencies as appropriate.

“SEC. 902. ADULTERATED TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(A) tobacco product shall be deemed to be adulterated if—

“(1) it consists in whole or in part of any filthy, putrid, or decomposed substance, or is otherwise contaminated by any added poisonous or added deleterious substance that may render the product injurious to health;

“(2) it has been prepared, packed, or held under insanitary conditions whereby it may have been contaminated with filth, or whereby it may have been rendered injurious to health;

“(3) its package is composed, in whole or in part, of any poisonous or deleterious substance which may render the contents injurious to health;

“(4) the manufacturer or importer of the tobacco product fails to pay a user fee assessed to such manufacturer or importer pursuant to section 919 by the date specified in section 919 or by the 30th day after final agency action on a resolution of any dispute as to the amount of such fee;

“(5) it is, or purports to be or is represented as, a tobacco product which is subject to a tobacco product standard established under section 907 unless such tobacco product is in all respects in conformity with such standard;

“(6)(A) it is required by section 910(a) to have premarket review and does not have an order in effect under section 910(c)(1)(A)(i); or

“(B) it is in violation of an order under section 910(c)(1)(A);

“(7) the methods used in, or the facilities or controls used for, its manufacture, packing, or storage are not in conformity with applicable requirements under section 906(e)(1) or an applicable condition prescribed by an order under section 906(e)(2); or “(8) it is in violation of section 911.

“SEC. 903. MISBRANDED TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—A tobacco product shall be deemed to be misbranded—

“(1) if its labeling is false or misleading in any particular;

“(2) if in package form unless it bears a label containing—

“(A) the name and place of business of the tobacco product manufacturer, packer, or distributor;

“(B) an accurate statement of the quantity of the contents in terms of weight, measure, or numerical count;

“(C) an accurate statement of the percentage of the tobacco used in the product that is domestically grown tobacco and the percentage that is foreign grown tobacco; and

“(D) the statement required under section 920(a),

except that under subparagraph (B) reasonable variations shall be permitted, and exemptions as to small packages shall be established, by regulations prescribed by the Secretary;

“(3) if any word, statement, or other information required by or under authority of this chapter to appear on the label or labeling is not prominently placed thereon with such conspicuousness (as compared with other words, statements, or designs in the labeling) and in such terms as to render it likely to be read and understood by the ordinary individual under customary conditions of purchase and use;

“(4) if it has an established name, unless its label bears, to the exclusion of any other nonproprietary name, its established name prominently printed in type as required by the Secretary by regulation;

“(5) if the Secretary has issued regulations requiring that its labeling bear adequate directions for use, or adequate warnings against use by children, that are necessary for the protection of users unless its labeling conforms in all respects to such regulations;

“(6) if it was manufactured, prepared, propagated, compounded, or processed in an establishment not duly registered under section 905(b), 905(c), 905(d), or 905(h), if it was not included in a list required by section 905(i), if a notice or other information respecting it was not provided as required by such section or section 905(j), or if it does not bear such symbols from the uniform system for identification of tobacco products prescribed under section 905(e) as the Secretary by regulation requires;

“(7) if, in the case of any tobacco product distributed or offered for sale in any State—

“(A) its advertising is false or misleading in any particular; or

“(B) it is sold or distributed in violation of regulations prescribed under section 906(d);

“(8) unless, in the case of any tobacco product distributed or offered for sale in any State, the manufacturer, packer, or distributor thereof includes in all advertisements and other descriptive printed matter issued or caused to be issued by the manufacturer, packer, or distributor with respect to that tobacco product—

“(A) a true statement of the tobacco product’s established name as described in paragraph (4), printed prominently; and

“(B) a brief statement of—

“(i) the uses of the tobacco product and relevant warnings, precautions, side effects, and contraindications; and

“(ii) in the case of specific tobacco products made subject to a finding by the Secretary after notice and opportunity for comment that such action is appropriate to protect the public health, a full description of the components of such tobacco product or the formula showing quantitatively each ingredient of such tobacco product to the extent required in regulations which shall be issued by the Secretary after an opportunity for a hearing;

“(9) if it is a tobacco product subject to a tobacco product standard established under section 907, unless it bears such labeling as may be prescribed in such tobacco product standard; or “(10) if there was a failure or refusal—

“(A) to comply with any requirement prescribed under section 904 or 908; or “(B) to furnish any material or information required under section 909.

“(b) PRIOR APPROVAL OF LABEL STATEMENTS.—The Secretary may, by regulation, require prior approval of statements made on the label of a tobacco product to ensure that such statements do not violate the misbranding provisions of subsection (a) and that such statements comply with other provisions of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act (including the amendments made by such Act). No regulation issued under this subsection may require prior approval by the Secretary of the content of any advertisement, except for modified risk tobacco products as provided in section 911. No advertisement of a tobacco product published after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act shall, with respect to the language of label statements as prescribed under section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act and section 3 of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 or the regulations issued under such sections, be subject to the provisions of sections 12 through 15 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

“SEC. 904. SUBMISSION OF HEALTH INFORMATION TO THE SECRETARY.

“(a) REQUIREMENT.—Each tobacco product manufacturer or importer, or agents thereof, shall submit to the Secretary the following information:

“(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, a listing of all ingredients, including tobacco, substances, compounds, and additives that are, as of such date, added by the manufacturer to the tobacco, paper, filter, or other part of each tobacco product by brand and by quantity in each brand and subbrand.

“(2) A description of the content, delivery, and form of nicotine in each tobacco product measured in milligrams of nicotine in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary in accordance with section 4(e) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act.

“(3) Beginning 3 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, a listing of all constituents, including smoke constituents as applicable, identified by the Secretary as harmful or potentially harmful to health in each tobacco product, and as applicable in the smoke of each tobacco product, by brand and by quantity in each brand and subbrand. Effective beginning 3 years after such date of enactment, the manufacturer, importer, or agent shall comply with regulations promulgated under section 915 in reporting information under this paragraph, where applicable.

“(4) Beginning 6 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, all documents developed after such date of enactment that relate to health, toxicological, behavioral, or physiologic effects of current or future tobacco products, their constituents (including smoke constituents), ingredients, components, and additives.

“(b) DATA SUBMISSION.—At the request of the Secretary, each tobacco product manufacturer or importer of tobacco products, or agents thereof, shall submit the following:

“(1) Any or all documents (including underlying scientific information) relating to research activities, and research findings, conducted, supported, or possessed by the manufacturer (or agents thereof) on the health, toxicological, behavioral, or physiologic effects of tobacco products and their constituents (including smoke constituents), ingredients, components, and additives.

“(2) Any or all documents (including underlying scientific information) relating to research activities, and research findings, conducted, supported, or possessed by the manufacturer (or agents thereof) that relate to the issue of whether a reduction in risk to health from tobacco products can occur upon the employment of technology available or known to the manufacturer.

“(3) Any or all documents (including underlying scientific or financial information) relating to marketing research involving the use of tobacco products or marketing practices and the effectiveness of such practices used by tobacco manufacturers and distributors.

An importer of a tobacco product not manufactured in the United States shall supply the information required of a tobacco product manufacturer under this subsection.

“(c) TIME FOR SUBMISSION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—At least 90 days prior to the delivery for introduction into interstate commerce of a tobacco product not on the market on the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the manufacturer of such product shall provide the information required under subsection (a).

“(2) DISCLOSURE OF ADDITIVE.—If at any time a tobacco product manufacturer adds to its tobacco products a new tobacco additive or increases the quantity of an existing tobacco additive, the manufacturer shall, except as provided in paragraph (3), at least 90 days prior to such action so advise the Secretary in writing.

“(3) DISCLOSURE OF OTHER ACTIONS.—If at any time a tobacco product manufacturer eliminates or decreases an existing additive, or adds or increases an additive that has by regulation been designated by the Secretary as an additive that is not a human or animal carcinogen, or otherwise harmful to health under intended conditions of use, the manufacturer shall within 60 days of such action so advise the Secretary in writing.

“(d) DATA LIST.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, and annually thereafter, the Secretary shall publish in a format that is understandable and not misleading to a lay person, and place on public display (in a manner determined by the Secretary) the list established under subsection (e).

“(2) CONSUMER RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall conduct periodic consumer research to ensure that the list published under paragraph (1) is not misleading to lay persons. Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report on the results of such research, together with recommendations on whether such publication should be continued or modified.

“(e) DATA COLLECTION.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall establish, and periodically revise as appropriate, a list of harmful and potentially harmful constituents, including smoke constituents, to health in each tobacco product by brand and by quantity in each brand and subbrand. The Secretary shall publish a public notice requesting the submission by interested persons of scientific and other information concerning the harmful and potentially harmful constituents in tobacco products and tobacco smoke.

“SEC. 905. ANNUAL REGISTRATION.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) MANUFACTURE, PREPARATION, COMPOUNDING, OR PROCESSING.—The term ‘manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing’ shall include repackaging or otherwise changing the container, wrapper, or labeling of any tobacco product package in furtherance of the distribution of the tobacco product from the original place of manufacture to the person who makes final delivery or sale to the ultimate consumer or user.

“(2) NAME.—The term ‘name’ shall include in the case of a partnership the name of each partner and, in the case of a corporation, the name of each corporate officer and director, and the State of incorporation.

“(b) REGISTRATION BY OWNERS AND OPERATORS.—On or before December 31 of each year, every person who owns or operates any establishment in any State engaged in the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing of a tobacco product or tobacco products shall register with the Secretary the name, places of business, and all such establishments of that person. If enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act occurs in the second half of the calendar year, the Secretary shall designate a date no later than 6 months into the subsequent calendar year by which registration pursuant to this subsection shall occur.

“(c) REGISTRATION BY NEW OWNERS AND OPERATORS.—Every person upon first engaging in the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing of a tobacco product or tobacco products in any establishment owned or operated in any State by that person shall immediately register with the Secretary that person’s name, place of business, and such establishment.

“(d) REGISTRATION OF ADDED ESTABLISHMENTS.—Every person required to register under subsection (b) or (c) shall immediately register with the Secretary any additional establishment which that person owns or operates in any State and in which that person begins the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing of a tobacco product or tobacco products.

“(e) UNIFORM PRODUCT IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.—The Secretary may by regulation prescribe a uniform system for the identification of tobacco products and may require that persons who are required to list such tobacco products under subsection (i) shall list such tobacco products in accordance with such system.

“(f) PUBLIC ACCESS TO REGISTRATION INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall make available for inspection, to any person so requesting, any registration filed under this section.

“(g) BIENNIAL INSPECTION OF REGISTERED ESTABLISHMENTS.—Every establishment registered with the Secretary under this section shall be subject to inspection under section 704 or subsection (h), and every such establishment engaged in the manufacture, compounding, or processing of a tobacco product or tobacco products shall be so inspected by 1 or more officers or employees duly designated by the Secretary at least once in the 2-year period beginning with the date of registration of such establishment under this section and at least once in every successive 2-year period thereafter.

“(h) REGISTRATION BY FOREIGN ESTABLISHMENTS.—Any establishment within any foreign country engaged in the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing of a tobacco product or tobacco products, shall register under this section under regulations promulgated by the Secretary. Such regulations shall require such establishment to provide the information required by subsection (i) and shall include provisions for registration of any such establishment upon condition that adequate and effective means are available, by arrangement with the government of such foreign country or otherwise, to enable the Secretary to determine from time to time whether tobacco products manufactured, prepared, compounded, or processed in such establishment, if imported or offered for import into the United States, shall be refused admission on any of the grounds set forth in section 801(a).

“(i) REGISTRATION INFORMATION.—

“(1) PRODUCT LIST.—Every person who registers with the Secretary under subsection (b), (c), (d), or (h) shall, at the time of registration under any such subsection, file with the Secretary a list of all tobacco products which are being manufactured, prepared, compounded, or processed by that person for commercial distribution and which have not been included in any list of tobacco products filed by that person with the Secretary under this paragraph or paragraph (2) before such time of registration. Such list shall be prepared in such form and manner as the Secretary may prescribe and shall be accompanied by—

“(A) in the case of a tobacco product contained in the applicable list with respect to which a tobacco product standard has been established under section 907 or which is subject to section 910, a reference to the authority for the marketing of such tobacco product and a copy of all labeling for such tobacco product;

“(B) in the case of any other tobacco product contained in an applicable list, a copy of all consumer information and other labeling for such tobacco product, a representative sampling of advertisements for such tobacco product, and, upon request made by the Secretary for good cause, a copy of all advertisements for a particular tobacco product; and

“(C) if the registrant filing a list has determined that a tobacco product contained in such list is not subject to a tobacco product standard established under section 907, a brief statement of the basis upon which the registrant made such determination if the Secretary requests such a statement with respect to that particular tobacco product.

“(2) CONSULTATION WITH RESPECT TO FORMS.—The Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Treasury in developing the forms to be used for registration under this section to minimize the burden on those persons required to register with both the Secretary and the Tax and Trade Bureau of the Department of the Treasury.

“(3) BIENNIAL REPORT OF ANY CHANGE IN PRODUCT LIST.—Each person who registers with the Secretary under this section shall report to the Secretary once during the month of June of each year and once during the month of December of each year the following:

“(A) A list of each tobacco product introduced by the registrant for commercial distribution which has not been included in any list previously filed by that person with the Secretary under this subparagraph or paragraph (1). A list under this subparagraph shall list a tobacco product by its established name and shall be accompanied by the other information required by paragraph (1).

“(B) If since the date the registrant last made a report under this paragraph that person has discontinued the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing for commercial distribution of a tobacco product included in a list filed under subparagraph (A) or paragraph (1), notice of such discontinuance, the date of such discontinuance, and the identity of its established name.

“(C) If since the date the registrant reported under subparagraph (B) a notice of discontinuance that person has resumed the manufacture, preparation, compounding, or processing for commercial distribution of the tobacco product with respect to which such notice of discontinuance was reported, notice of such resumption, the date of such resumption, the identity of such tobacco product by established name, and other information required by paragraph (1), unless the registrant has previously reported such resumption to the Secretary under this subparagraph.

“(D) Any material change in any information previously submitted under this paragraph or paragraph (1).

“(j) REPORT PRECEDING INTRODUCTION OF CERTAIN SUBSTANTIALLY EQUIVALENT PRODUCTS INTO INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Each person who is required to register under this section and who proposes to begin the introduction or delivery for introduction into interstate commerce for commercial distribution of a tobacco product intended for human use that was not commercially marketed (other than for test marketing) in the United States as of February 15, 2007, shall, at least 90 days prior to making such introduction or delivery, report to the Secretary (in such form and manner as the Secretary shall prescribe)—

“(A) the basis for such person’s determination that—

“(i) the tobacco product is substantially equivalent, within the meaning of section 910, to a tobacco product commercially marketed (other than for test marketing) in the United States as of February 15, 2007, or to a tobacco product that the Secretary has previously determined, pursuant to subsection (a)(3) of section 910, is substantially equivalent and that is in compliance with the requirements of this Act; or

“(ii) the tobacco product is modified within the meaning of paragraph (3), the modifications are to a product that is commercially marketed and in compliance with the requirements of this Act, and all of the modifications are covered by exemptions granted by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (3); and

“(B) action taken by such person to comply with the requirements under section 907 that are applicable to the tobacco product.

“(2) APPLICATION TO CERTAIN POST-FEBRUARY 15, 2007, PRODUCTS.—A report under this subsection for a tobacco product that was first introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce for commercial distribution in the United States after February 15, 2007, and prior to the date that is 21 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act shall be submitted to the Secretary not later than 21 months after such date of enactment.

“(3) EXEMPTIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may exempt from the requirements of this subsection relating to the demonstration that a tobacco product is substantially equivalent within the meaning of section 910, tobacco products that are modified by adding or deleting a tobacco additive, or increasing or decreasing the quantity of an existing tobacco additive, if the Secretary determines that—

“(i) such modification would be a minor modification of a tobacco product that can be sold under this Act;

“(ii) a report under this subsection is not necessary to ensure that permitting the tobacco product to be marketed would be appropriate for protection of the public health; and

“(iii) an exemption is otherwise appropriate.

“(B) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 15 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall issue regulations to implement this paragraph.

“SEC. 906. GENERAL PROVISIONS RESPECTING CONTROL OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any requirement established by or under section 902, 903, 905, or 909 applicable to a tobacco product shall apply to such tobacco product until the applicability of the requirement to the tobacco product has been changed by action taken under section 907, section 910, section 911, or subsection (d) of this section, and any requirement established by or under section 902, 903, 905, or 909 which is inconsistent with a requirement imposed on such tobacco product under section 907, section 910, section 911, or subsection (d) of this section shall not apply to such tobacco product.

“(b) INFORMATION ON PUBLIC ACCESS AND COMMENT.—Each notice of proposed rulemaking or other notification under section 907, 908, 909, 910, or 911 or under this section, any other notice which is published in the Federal Register with respect to any other action taken under any such section and which states the reasons for such action, and each publication of findings required to be made in connection with rulemaking under any such section shall set forth—

“(1) the manner in which interested persons may examine data and other information on which the notice or findings is based; and

“(2) the period within which interested persons may present their comments on the notice or findings (including the need therefore) orally or in writing, which period shall be at least 60 days but may not exceed 90 days unless the time is extended by the Secretary by a notice published in the Federal Register stating good cause therefore.

“(c) LIMITED CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—Any information reported to or otherwise obtained by the Secretary or the Secretary’s representative under section 903, 904, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, or 704, or under subsection (e) or (f) of this section, which is exempt from disclosure under subsection (a) of section 552 of title 5, United States Code, by reason of subsection (b)(4) of that section shall be considered confidential and shall not be disclosed, except that the information may be disclosed to other officers or employees concerned with carrying out this chapter, or when relevant in any proceeding under this chapter.

“(d) RESTRICTIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may by regulation require restrictions on the sale and distribution of a tobacco product, including restrictions on the access to, and the advertising and promotion of, the tobacco product, if the Secretary determines that such regulation would be appropriate for the protection of the public health. The Secretary may by regulation impose restrictions on the advertising and promotion of a tobacco product consistent with and to full extent permitted by the first amendment to the Constitution. The finding as to whether such regulation would be appropriate for the protection of the public health shall be determined with respect to the risks and benefits to the population as a whole, including users and nonusers of the tobacco product, and taking into account—

“(A) the increased or decreased likelihood that existing users of tobacco products will stop using such products; and

“(B) the increased or decreased likelihood that those who do not use tobacco products will start using such products.

No such regulation may require that the sale or distribution of a tobacco product be limited to the written or oral authorization of a practitioner licensed by law to prescribe medical products.

“(2) LABEL STATEMENTS.—The label of a tobacco product shall bear such appropriate statements of the restrictions required by a regulation under subsection (a) as the Secretary may in such regulation prescribe.

“(3) LIMITATIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—No restrictions under paragraph (1) may—

“(i) prohibit the sale of any tobacco product in face-to-face transactions by a specific category of retail outlets; or

“(ii) establish a minimum age of sale of tobacco products to any person older than 18 years of age.

“(B) MATCHBOOKS.—For purposes of any regulations issued by the Secretary, matchbooks of conventional size containing not more than 20 paper matches, and which are customarily given away for free with the purchase of tobacco products, shall be considered as adult-written publications which shall be permitted to contain advertising. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, if the Secretary finds that such treatment of matchbooks is not appropriate for the protection of the public health, the Secretary may determine by regulation that matchbooks shall not be considered adult-written publications.

“(4) REMOTE SALES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall—

“(i) within 18 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, promulgate regulations regarding the sale and distribution of tobacco products that occur through means other than a direct, face-to-face exchange between a retailer and a consumer in order to prevent the sale and distribution of tobacco products to individuals who have not attained the minimum age established by applicable law for the purchase of such products, including requirements for age verification; and “(ii) within 2 years after such date of enactment, issue regulations to address the promotion and marketing of tobacco products that are sold or distributed through means other than a direct, face-to-face exchange between a retailer and a consumer in order to protect individuals who have not attained the minimum age established by applicable law for the purchase of such products.

“(B) RELATION TO OTHER AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this paragraph limits the authority of the Secretary to take additional actions under the other paragraphs of this subsection.

“(e) GOOD MANUFACTURING PRACTICE REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) METHODS, FACILITIES, AND CONTROLS TO CONFORM.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In applying manufacturing restrictions to tobacco, the Secretary shall, in accordance with subparagraph (B), prescribe regulations (which may differ based on the type of tobacco product involved) requiring that the methods used in, and the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture, preproduction design validation (including a process to assess the performance of a tobacco product), packing, and storage of a tobacco product conform to current good manufacturing practice, or hazard analysis and critical control point methodology, as prescribed in such regulations to assure that the public health is protected and that the tobacco product is in compliance with this chapter. Such regulations may provide for the testing of raw tobacco for pesticide chemical residues regardless of whether a tolerance for such chemical residues has been established.

“(B) REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary shall—

“(i) before promulgating any regulation under subparagraph (A), afford the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee an opportunity to submit recommendations with respect to the regulation proposed to be promulgated;

“(ii) before promulgating any regulation under subparagraph (A), afford opportunity for an oral hearing;

“(iii) provide the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee a reasonable time to make its recommendation with respect to proposed regulations under subparagraph (A);

“(iv) in establishing the effective date of a regulation promulgated under this subsection, take into account the differences in the manner in which the different types of tobacco products have historically been produced, the financial resources of the different tobacco product manufacturers, and the state of their existing manufacturing facilities, and shall provide for a reasonable period of time for such manufacturers to conform to good manufacturing practices; and

“(v) not require any small tobacco product manufacturer to comply with a regulation under subparagraph (A) for at least 4 years following the effective date established by the Secretary for such regulation.

“(2) EXEMPTIONS; VARIANCES.—

“(A) PETITION.—Any person subject to any requirement prescribed under paragraph (1) may petition the Secretary for a permanent or temporary exemption or variance from such requirement. Such a petition shall be submitted to the Secretary in such form and manner as the Secretary shall prescribe and shall—

“(i) in the case of a petition for an exemption from a requirement, set forth the basis for the petitioner's determination that compliance with the requirement is not required to assure that the tobacco product will be in compliance with this chapter;

“(ii) in the case of a petition for a variance from a requirement, set forth the methods proposed to be used in, and the facilities and controls proposed to be used for, the manufacture, packing, and storage of the tobacco product in lieu of the methods, facilities, and controls prescribed by the requirement; and “(iii) contain such other information as the Secretary shall prescribe.

“(B) REFERRAL TO THE TOBACCO PRODUCTS SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—The Secretary may refer to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee any petition submitted under subparagraph (A). The Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee shall report its recommendations to the Secretary with respect to a petition referred to it within 60 days after the date of the petition's referral. Within 60 days after—

“(i) the date the petition was submitted to the Secretary under subparagraph (A); or “(ii) the day after the petition was referred to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee, whichever occurs later, the Secretary shall by order either deny the petition or approve it.

“(C) APPROVAL.—The Secretary may approve—

“(i) a petition for an exemption for a tobacco product from a requirement if the Secretary determines that compliance with such requirement is not required to assure that the tobacco product will be in compliance with this chapter; and

“(ii) a petition for a variance for a tobacco product from a requirement if the Secretary determines that the methods to be used in, and the facilities and controls to be used for, the manufacture, packing, and storage of the tobacco product in lieu of the methods, facilities, and controls prescribed by the requirement are sufficient to assure that the tobacco product will be in compliance with this chapter.

“(D) CONDITIONS.—An order of the Secretary approving a petition for a variance shall prescribe such conditions respecting the methods used in, and the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture, packing, and storage of the tobacco product to be granted the variance under the petition as may be necessary to assure that the tobacco product will be in compliance with this chapter.

“(E) HEARING.—After the issuance of an order under subparagraph (B) respecting a petition, the petitioner shall have an opportunity for an informal hearing on such order.

“(3) COMPLIANCE.—Compliance with requirements under this subsection shall not be required before the end of the 3-year period following the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act.

“(f) RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary may enter into contracts for research, testing, and demonstrations respecting tobacco products and may obtain tobacco products for research, testing, and demonstration purposes.

“SEC. 907. TOBACCO PRODUCT STANDARDS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—

“(1) SPECIAL RULES.—

“(A) SPECIAL RULE FOR CIGARETTES.—Beginning 3 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, a cigarette or any of its component parts (including the tobacco, filter, or paper) shall not contain, as a constituent (including a smoke constituent) or additive, an artificial or natural flavor (other than tobacco or menthol) or an herb or spice, including strawberry, grape, orange, clove, cinnamon, pineapple, vanilla, coconut, licorice, cocoa, chocolate, cherry, or coffee, that is a characterizing flavor of the tobacco product or tobacco smoke. Nothing in this subparagraph shall be construed to limit the Secretary's authority to take action under this section or other sections of this Act applicable to menthol or any artificial or natural flavor, herb, or spice not specified in this subparagraph.

“(B) ADDITIONAL SPECIAL RULE.—Beginning 2 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, a tobacco product manufacturer shall not use tobacco, including foreign grown tobacco, that contains a pesticide chemical residue that is at a level greater than is specified by any tolerance applicable under Federal law to domestically grown tobacco.

“(2) REVISION OF TOBACCO PRODUCT STANDARDS.—The Secretary may revise the tobacco product standards in paragraph (1) in accordance with subsection (c).

“(3) TOBACCO PRODUCT STANDARDS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may adopt tobacco product standards in addition to those in paragraph (1) if the Secretary finds that a tobacco product standard is appropriate for the protection of the public health.

“(B) DETERMINATIONS.—

“(i) CONSIDERATIONS.—In making a finding described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall consider scientific evidence concerning—

“(I) the risks and benefits to the population as a whole, including users and nonusers of tobacco products, of the proposed standard;

“(II) the increased or decreased likelihood that existing users of tobacco products will stop using such products; and “(III) the increased or decreased likelihood that those who do not use tobacco products will start using such products.

“(ii) ADDITIONAL CONSIDERATIONS.—In the event that the Secretary makes a determination, set forth in a proposed tobacco product standard in a proposed rule, that it is appropriate for the protection of public health to require the reduction or elimination of an additive, constituent (including a smoke constituent), or other component of a tobacco product because the Secretary has found that the additive, constituent, or other component is or may be harmful, any party objecting to the proposed standard on the ground that the proposed standard will not reduce or eliminate the risk of illness or injury may provide for the Secretary's consideration scientific evidence that demonstrates that the proposed standard will not reduce or eliminate the risk of illness or injury.

"(4) CONTENT OF TOBACCO PRODUCT STANDARDS.—A tobacco product standard established under this section for a tobacco product—

"(A) shall include provisions that are appropriate for the protection of the public health, including provisions, where appropriate—

"(i) for nicotine yields of the product; "(ii) for the reduction or elimination of other constituents, including smoke constituents, or harmful components of the product; or "(iii) relating to any other requirement under subparagraph (B);

"(B) shall, where appropriate for the protection of the public health, include—

"(i) provisions respecting the construction, components, ingredients, additives, constituents, including smoke constituents, and properties of the tobacco product;

"(ii) provisions for the testing (on a sample basis or, if necessary, on an individual basis) of the tobacco product;

"(iii) provisions for the measurement of the tobacco product characteristics of the tobacco product;

"(iv) provisions requiring that the results of each or of certain of the tests of the tobacco product required to be made under clause (ii) show that the tobacco product is in conformity with the portions of the standard for which the test or tests were required; and

"(v) a provision requiring that the sale and distribution of the tobacco product be restricted but only to the extent that the sale and distribution of a tobacco product may be restricted under a regulation under section 906(d);

"(C) shall, where appropriate, require the use and prescribe the form and content of labeling for the proper use of the tobacco product; and

"(D) shall require tobacco products containing foreign-grown tobacco to meet the same standards applicable to tobacco products containing domestically grown tobacco.

"(5) PERIODIC REEVALUATION OF TOBACCO PRODUCT STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall provide for periodic evaluation of tobacco product standards established under this section to determine whether such standards should be changed to reflect new medical, scientific, or other technological data. The Secretary may provide for testing under paragraph (4)(B) by any person.

"(6) INVOLVEMENT OF OTHER AGENCIES; INFORMED PERSONS.—In carrying out duties under this section, the Secretary shall endeavor to—

"(A) use personnel, facilities, and other technical support available in other Federal agencies;

"(B) consult with other Federal agencies concerned with standard setting and other nationally or internationally recognized standard-setting entities; and

"(C) invite appropriate participation, through joint or other conferences, workshops, or other means, by informed persons representative of scientific, professional, industry, agricultural, or consumer organizations who in the Secretary's judgment can make a significant contribution.

"(b) CONSIDERATIONS BY SECRETARY.—

"(1) TECHNICAL ACHIEVABILITY.—The Secretary shall consider information submitted in connection with a proposed standard regarding the technical achievability of compliance with such standard.

"(2) OTHER CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary shall consider all other information submitted in connection with a proposed standard, including information concerning the countervailing effects of the tobacco product standard on the health of adolescent tobacco users, adult tobacco users, or nontobacco users, such as the creation of a significant demand for contraband or other tobacco products that do not meet the requirements of this chapter and the significance of such demand.

"(C) PROPOSED STANDARDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register a notice of proposed rulemaking for the establishment, amendment, or revocation of any tobacco product standard.

"(2) REQUIREMENTS OF NOTICE.—A notice of proposed rulemaking for the establishment or amendment of a tobacco product standard for a tobacco product shall—

"(A) set forth a finding with supporting justification that the tobacco product standard is appropriate for the protection of the public health;

"(B) invite interested persons to submit a draft or proposed tobacco product standard for consideration by the Secretary;

"(C) invite interested persons to submit comments on structuring the standard so that it does not advantage foreign-grown tobacco over domestically grown tobacco; and

"(D) invite the Secretary of Agriculture to provide any information or analysis which the Secretary of Agriculture believes is relevant to the proposed tobacco product standard.

"(3) FINDING.—A notice of proposed rulemaking for the revocation of a tobacco product standard shall set forth a finding with supporting justification that the tobacco product standard is no longer appropriate for the protection of the public health.

"(4) COMMENT.—The Secretary shall provide for a comment period of not less than 60 days.

"(d) PROMULGATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After the expiration of the period for comment on a notice of proposed rulemaking published under subsection (c) respecting a tobacco product standard and after consideration of comments submitted under subsections (b) and (c) and any report from the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee, the Secretary shall—

"(A) if the Secretary determines that the standard would be appropriate for the protection of the public health, promulgate a regulation establishing a tobacco product standard and publish in the Federal Register findings on the matters referred to in subsection (c); or

"(B) publish a notice terminating the proceeding for the development of the standard together with the reasons for such termination.

"(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—A regulation establishing a tobacco product standard shall set forth the date or dates upon which the standard shall take effect, but no such regulation may take effect before 1 year after the date of its publication unless the Secretary determines that an earlier effective date is necessary for the protection of the public health. Such date or dates shall be established so as to minimize, consistent with the public health, economic loss to, and disruption or dislocation of, domestic and international trade. In establishing such effective date or dates, the Secretary shall consider information submitted in connection with a proposed product standard by interested parties, including manufacturers and tobacco growers, regarding the technical achievability of compliance with the standard, and including information concerning the existence of patents that make it impossible to comply in the timeframe envisioned in the proposed standard. If the Secretary determines, based on the Secretary's evaluation of submitted comments, that a product standard can be met only by manufacturers requiring substantial changes to the methods of farming the domestically grown tobacco used by the manufacturer, the effective date of that product standard shall be not less than 2 years after the date of publication of the final regulation establishing the standard.

"(3) LIMITATION ON POWER GRANTED TO THE FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION.—Because of the importance of a decision of the Secretary to issue a regulation—

"(A) banning all cigarettes, all smokeless tobacco products, all little cigars, all cigars other than little cigars, all pipe tobacco, or all roll-your-own tobacco products; or

"(B) requiring the reduction of nicotine yields of a tobacco product to zero, the Secretary is prohibited from taking such actions under this Act.

"(4) AMENDMENT; REVOCATION.—

"(A) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary, upon the Secretary's own initiative or upon petition of an interested person, may by a regulation, promulgated in accordance with the requirements of subsection (c) and paragraph (2), amend or revoke a tobacco product standard.

"(B) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The Secretary may declare a proposed amendment of a tobacco product standard to be effective on and after its publication in the Federal Register and until the effective date of any final action taken on such amendment if the Secretary determines that making it so effective is in the public interest.

"(5) REFERRAL TO ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may refer a proposed regulation for the establishment, amendment, or revocation of a tobacco product standard to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee for a report and recommendation with respect to any matter involved in the proposed regulation which requires the exercise of scientific judgment.

"(B) INITIATION OF REFERRAL.—The Secretary may make a referral under this paragraph—

"(i) on the Secretary's own initiative; or "(ii) upon the request of an interested person that—

"(I) demonstrates good cause for the referral; and

"(II) is made before the expiration of the period for submission of comments on the proposed regulation.

"(C) PROVISION OF DATA.—If a proposed regulation is referred under this paragraph to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee, the Secretary shall provide the Advisory Committee with the data and information on which such proposed regulation is based.

"(D) REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION.—The Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee shall, within 60 days after the referral of a proposed regulation under this paragraph and after independent study of the data and information furnished to it by the Secretary and other data and information before it, submit to the Secretary a report and recommendation respecting such regulation, together with all underlying data and information and a statement of the reason or basis for the recommendation.

"(E) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—The Secretary shall make a copy of each report and recommendation under subparagraph (D) publicly available.

"(e) MENTHOL CIGARETTES.—

"(1) REFERRAL; CONSIDERATIONS.—Immediately upon the establishment of the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee under section 917(a), the Secretary shall refer to the Committee for report and recommendation, under section 917(c)(4), the issue of the impact of the use of menthol in cigarettes on the public health, including such use among children, African-Americans, Hispanics, and other racial and ethnic minorities. In its review, the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee shall address the considerations listed in subsections (a)(3)(B)(i) and (b).

“(2) REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION.—Not later than 1 year after its establishment, the Tobacco Product Scientific Advisory Committee shall submit to the Secretary the report and recommendations required pursuant to paragraph (1).

“(3) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to limit the Secretary’s authority to take action under this section or other sections of this Act applicable to menthol.

“(f) DISSOLVABLE TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—

“(1) REFERRAL; CONSIDERATIONS.—The Secretary shall refer to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee for report and recommendation, under section 917(c)(4), the issue of the nature and impact of the use of dissolvable tobacco products on the public health, including such use among children. In its review, the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee shall address the considerations listed in subsection (a)(3)(B)(i).

“(2) REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION.—Not later than 2 years after its establishment, the Tobacco Product Scientific Advisory Committee shall submit to the Secretary the report and recommendations required pursuant to paragraph (1).

“(3) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to limit the Secretary’s authority to take action under this section or other sections of this Act at any time applicable to any dissolvable tobacco product.

“SEC. 908. NOTIFICATION AND OTHER REMEDIES.

“(a) NOTIFICATION.—If the Secretary determines that—

“(1) a tobacco product which is introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce for commercial distribution presents an unreasonable risk of substantial harm to the public health; and

“(2) notification under this subsection is necessary to eliminate the unreasonable risk of such harm and no more practicable means is available under the provisions of this chapter (other than this section) to eliminate such risk, the Secretary may issue such order as may be necessary to assure that adequate notification is provided in an appropriate form, by the persons and means best suited under the circumstances involved, to all persons who should properly receive such notification in order to eliminate such risk. The Secretary may order notification by any appropriate means, including public service announcements. Before issuing an order under this subsection, the Secretary shall consult with the persons who are to give notice under the order.

“(b) NO EXEMPTION FROM OTHER LIABILITY.—Compliance with an order issued under this section shall not relieve any person from liability under Federal or State law. In awarding damages for economic loss in an action brought for the enforcement of any such liability, the value to the plaintiff in such action of any remedy provided under such order shall be taken into account.

“(c) RECALL AUTHORITY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary finds that there is a reasonable probability that a tobacco product contains a manufacturing or other defect not ordinarily contained in tobacco products on the market that would cause serious, adverse health consequences or death, the Secretary shall issue an order requiring the appropriate person (including the manufacturers, importers, distributors, or retailers of the tobacco product) to immediately cease distribution of such tobacco product. The order shall provide the person subject to the order with an opportunity for an informal hearing, to be held not later than 10 days after the date of the issuance of the order, on the actions required by the order and on whether the order should be amended to require a recall of such tobacco product. If, after providing an opportunity for such a hearing, the Secretary determines that inadequate grounds exist to support the actions required by the order, the Secretary shall vacate the order.

“(2) AMENDMENT OF ORDER TO REQUIRE RECALL.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—If, after providing an opportunity for an informal hearing under paragraph (1), the Secretary determines that the order should be amended to include a recall of the tobacco product with respect to which the order was issued, the Secretary shall, except as provided in subparagraph (B), amend the order to require a recall. The Secretary shall specify a timetable in which the tobacco product recall will occur and shall require periodic reports to the Secretary describing the progress of the recall.

“(B) NOTICE.—An amended order under subparagraph (A)—

“(i) shall not include recall of a tobacco product from individuals; and “(ii) shall provide for notice to persons subject to the risks associated with the use of such tobacco product.

In providing the notice required by clause (ii), the Secretary may use the assistance of retailers and other persons who distributed such tobacco product. If a significant number of such persons cannot be identified, the Secretary shall notify such persons under section 705(b).

“(3) REMEDY NOT EXCLUSIVE.—The remedy provided by this subsection shall be in addition to remedies provided by subsection (a).

“SEC. 909. RECORDS AND REPORTS ON TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Every person who is a tobacco product manufacturer or importer of a tobacco product shall establish and maintain such records, make such reports, and provide such information, as the Secretary may by regulation reasonably require to assure that such tobacco product is not adulterated or misbranded and to otherwise protect public health. Regulations prescribed under the preceding sentence—

“(1) may require a tobacco product manufacturer or importer to report to the Secretary whenever the manufacturer or importer receives or otherwise becomes aware of information that reasonably suggests that one of its marketed tobacco products may have caused or contributed to a serious unexpected adverse experience associated with the use of the product or any significant increase in the frequency of a serious, expected adverse product experience;

“(2) shall require reporting of other significant adverse tobacco product experiences as determined by the Secretary to be necessary to be reported;

“(3) shall not impose requirements unduly burdensome to a tobacco product manufacturer or importer, taking into account the cost of complying with such requirements and the need for the protection of the public health and the implementation of this chapter;

“(4) when prescribing the procedure for making requests for reports or information, shall require that each request made under such regulations for submission of a report or information to the Secretary state the reason or purpose for such request and identify to the fullest extent practicable such report or information;

“(5) when requiring submission of a report or information to the Secretary, shall state the reason or purpose for the submission of such report or information and identify to the fullest extent practicable such report or information; and

“(6) may not require that the identity of any patient or user be disclosed in records, reports, or information required under this subsection unless required for the medical welfare of an individual, to determine risks to public health of a tobacco product, or to verify a record, report, or information submitted under this chapter.

In prescribing regulations under this subsection, the Secretary shall have due regard for the professional ethics of the medical profession and the interests of patients. The prohibitions of paragraph (6) continue to apply to records, reports, and information concerning any individual who has been a patient, irrespective of whether or when he ceases to be a patient.

“(b) REPORTS OF REMOVALS AND CORRECTIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall by regulation require a tobacco product manufacturer or importer of a tobacco product to report promptly to the Secretary any corrective action taken or removal from the market of a tobacco product undertaken by such manufacturer or importer if the removal or correction was undertaken—

“(A) to reduce a risk to health posed by the tobacco product; or “(B) to remedy a violation of this chapter caused by the tobacco product which may present a risk to health.

A tobacco product manufacturer or importer of a tobacco product who undertakes a corrective action or removal from the market of a tobacco product which is not required to be reported under this subsection shall keep a record of such correction or removal.

“(2) EXCEPTION.—No report of the corrective action or removal of a tobacco product may be required under paragraph (1) if a report of the corrective action or removal is required and has been submitted under subsection (a).

“SEC. 910. APPLICATION FOR REVIEW OF CERTAIN TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—

“(1) NEW TOBACCO PRODUCT DEFINED.—For purposes of this section the term ‘new tobacco product’ means—

“(A) any tobacco product (including those products in test markets) that was not commercially marketed in the United States as of February 15, 2007; or

“(B) any modification (including a change in design, any component, any part, or any constituent, including a smoke constituent, or in the content, delivery or form of nicotine, or any other additive or ingredient) of a tobacco product where the modified product was commercially marketed in the United States after February 15, 2007.

“(2) PREMARKET REVIEW REQUIRED.—

“(A) NEW PRODUCTS.—An order under subsection (c)(1)(A)(i) for a new tobacco product is required unless—

“(i) the manufacturer has submitted a report under section 905(j); and the Secretary has issued an order that the tobacco product—

“(I) is substantially equivalent to a tobacco product commercially marketed (other than for test marketing) in the United States as of February 15, 2007; and

“(II) is in compliance with the requirements of this Act; or “(ii) the tobacco product is exempt from the requirements of section 905(j) pursuant to a regulation issued under section 905(j)(3).

“(B) APPLICATION TO CERTAIN POST-FEBRUARY 15, 2007, PRODUCTS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to a tobacco product—

“(i) that was first introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce for commercial distribution in the United States after February 15, 2007, and prior to the date that is 21 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act; and “(ii) for which a report was submitted under section 905(j) within such 21-month period, except that subparagraph (A) shall apply to the tobacco product if the Secretary issues an order that the tobacco product is not substantially equivalent.

“(3) SUBSTANTIALLY EQUIVALENT DEFINED.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In this section and section 905(j), the term ‘substantially equivalent’ or ‘substantial equivalence’ means, with respect to the tobacco product being compared to the predicate tobacco product, that the Secretary by order has found that the tobacco product—

“(i) has the same characteristics as the predicate tobacco product; or

“(ii) has different characteristics and the information submitted contains information, including clinical data if deemed necessary by the Secretary, that demonstrates that it is not appropriate to regulate the product under this section because the product does not raise different questions of public health.

“(B) CHARACTERISTICS.—In subparagraph (A), the term ‘characteristics’ means the materials, ingredients, design, composition, heating source, or other features of a tobacco product.

“(C) LIMITATION.—A tobacco product may not be found to be substantially equivalent to a predicate tobacco product that has been removed from the market at the initiative of the Secretary or that has been determined by a judicial order to be misbranded or adulterated.

“(4) HEALTH INFORMATION.—

“(A) SUMMARY.—As part of a submission under section 905(j) respecting a tobacco product, the person required to file a premarket notification under such section shall provide an adequate summary of any health information related to the tobacco product or state that such information will be made available upon request by any person.

“(B) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—Any summary under subparagraph (A) respecting a tobacco product shall contain detailed information regarding data concerning adverse health effects and shall be made available to the public by the Secretary within 30 days of the issuance of a determination that such tobacco product is substantially equivalent to another tobacco product.

“(b) APPLICATION.—

“(1) CONTENTS.—An application under this section shall contain—

“(A) full reports of all information, published or known to, or which should reasonably be known to, the applicant, concerning investigations which have been made to show the health risks of such tobacco product and whether such tobacco product presents less risk than other tobacco products;

“(B) a full statement of the components, ingredients, additives, and properties, and of the principle or principles of operation, of such tobacco product;

“(C) a full description of the methods used in, and the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture, processing, and, when relevant, packing and installation of, such tobacco product;

“(D) an identifying reference to any tobacco product standard under section 907 which would be applicable to any aspect of such tobacco product, and either adequate information to show that such aspect of such tobacco product fully meets such tobacco product standard or adequate information to justify any deviation from such standard;

“(E) such samples of such tobacco product and of components thereof as the Secretary may reasonably require;

“(F) specimens of the labeling proposed to be used for such tobacco product; and “(G) such other information relevant to the subject matter of the application as the Secretary may require.

“(2) REFERRAL TO TOBACCO PRODUCTS SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—Upon receipt of an application meeting the requirements set forth in paragraph (1), the Secretary—

“(A) may, on the Secretary’s own initiative; or

“(B) may, upon the request of an applicant, refer such application to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee for reference and for submission (within such period as the Secretary may establish) of a report and recommendation respecting the application, together with all underlying data and the reasons or basis for the recommendation.

“(c) ACTION ON APPLICATION.—

“(1) DEADLINE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—As promptly as possible, but in no event later than 180 days after the receipt of an application under subsection (b), the Secretary, after considering the report and recommendation submitted under subsection (b)(2), shall—

“(i) issue an order that the new product may be introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce if the Secretary finds that none of the grounds specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection applies; or

“(ii) issue an order that the new product may not be introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce if the Secretary finds (and sets forth the basis for such finding as part of or accompanying such denial) that 1 or more grounds for denial specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection apply.

“(B) RESTRICTIONS ON SALE AND DISTRIBUTION.—An order under subparagraph (A)(i) may require that the sale and distribution of the tobacco product be restricted but only to the extent that the sale and distribution of a tobacco product may be restricted under a regulation under section 906(d).

“(2) DENIAL OF APPLICATION.—The Secretary shall deny an application submitted under subsection (b) if, upon the basis of the information submitted to the Secretary as part of the application and any other information before the Secretary with respect to such tobacco product, the Secretary finds that—

“(A) there is a lack of a showing that permitting such tobacco product to be marketed would be appropriate for the protection of the public health;

“(B) the methods used in, or the facilities or controls used for, the manufacture, processing, or packing of such tobacco product do not conform to the requirements of section 906(e);

“(C) based on a fair evaluation of all material facts, the proposed labeling is false or misleading in any particular; or “(D) such tobacco product is not shown to conform in all respects to a tobacco product standard in effect under section 907, and there is a lack of adequate information to justify the deviation from such standard.

“(3) DENIAL INFORMATION.—Any denial of an application shall, insofar as the Secretary determines to be practicable, be accompanied by a statement informing the applicant of the measures required to remove such application from deniable form (which measures may include further research by the applicant in accordance with 1 or more protocols prescribed by the Secretary).

“(4) BASIS FOR FINDING.—For purposes of this section, the finding as to whether the marketing of a tobacco product for which an application has been submitted is appropriate for the protection of the public health shall be determined with respect to the risks and benefits to the population as a whole, including users and nonusers of the tobacco product, and taking into account—

“(A) the increased or decreased likelihood that existing users of tobacco products will stop using such products; and

“(B) the increased or decreased likelihood that those who do not use tobacco products will start using such products.

“(5) BASIS FOR ACTION.—

“(A) INVESTIGATIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(A), whether permitting a tobacco product to be marketed would be appropriate for the protection of the public health shall, when appropriate, be determined on the basis of well-controlled investigations, which may include 1 or more clinical investigations by experts qualified by training and experience to evaluate the tobacco product.

“(B) OTHER EVIDENCE.—If the Secretary determines that there exists valid scientific evidence (other than evidence derived from investigations described in subparagraph (A)) which is sufficient to evaluate the tobacco product, the Secretary may authorize that the determination for purposes of paragraph (2)(A) be made on the basis of such evidence.

“(d) WITHDRAWAL AND TEMPORARY SUSPENSION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, upon obtaining, where appropriate, advice on scientific matters from the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee, and after due notice and opportunity for informal hearing for a tobacco product for which an order was issued under subsection (c)(1)(A)(i), issue an order withdrawing the order if the Secretary finds—

“(A) that the continued marketing of such tobacco product no longer is appropriate for the protection of the public health;

“(B) that the application contained or was accompanied by an untrue statement of a material fact;

“(C) that the applicant—

“(i) has failed to establish a system for maintaining records, or has repeatedly or deliberately failed to maintain records or to make reports, required by an applicable regulation under section 909;

“(ii) has refused to permit access to, or copying or verification of, such records as required by section 704; or

“(iii) has not complied with the requirements of section 905;

“(D) on the basis of new information before the Secretary with respect to such tobacco product, evaluated together with the evidence before the Secretary when the application was reviewed, that the methods used in, or the facilities and controls used for, the manufacture, processing, packing, or installation of such tobacco product do not conform with the requirements of section 906(e) and were not brought into conformity with such requirements within a reasonable time after receipt of written notice from the Secretary of nonconformity;

“(E) on the basis of new information before the Secretary, evaluated together with the evidence before the Secretary when the application was reviewed, that the labeling of such tobacco product, based on a fair evaluation of all material facts, is false or misleading in any particular and was not corrected within a reasonable time after receipt of written notice from the Secretary of such fact; or “(F) on the basis of new information before the Secretary, evaluated together with the evidence before the Secretary when such order was issued, that such tobacco product is not shown to conform in all respects to a tobacco product standard which is in effect under section 907, compliance with which was a condition to the issuance of an order relating to the application, and that there is a lack of adequate information to justify the deviation from such standard.

“(2) APPEAL.—The holder of an application subject to an order issued under paragraph (1) withdrawing an order issued pursuant to subsection (c)(1)(A)(i) may, by petition filed on or before the 30th day after the date upon which such holder receives notice of such withdrawal, obtain review thereof in accordance with section 912.

“(3) TEMPORARY SUSPENSION.—If, after providing an opportunity for an informal hearing, the Secretary determines there is reasonable probability that the continuation of distribution of a tobacco product under an order would cause serious, adverse health consequences or death, that is greater than ordinarily caused by tobacco products on the market, the Secretary shall by order temporarily suspend the authority of the manufacturer to market the product. If the Secretary issues such an order, the Secretary shall proceed expeditiously under paragraph (1) to withdraw such application.

“(e) SERVICE OF ORDER.—An order issued by the Secretary under this section shall be served—

“(1) in person by any officer or employee of the department designated by the Secretary; or

“(2) by mailing the order by registered mail or certified mail addressed to the applicant at the applicant’s last known address in the records of the Secretary.

“(f) RECORDS.—

“(1) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—In the case of any tobacco product for which an order issued pursuant to subsection (c)(1)(A)(i) for an application filed under subsection (b) is in effect, the applicant shall establish and maintain such records, and make such reports to the Secretary, as the Secretary may by regulation, or by order with respect to such application, prescribe on the basis of a finding that such records and reports are necessary in order to enable the Secretary to determine, or facilitate a determination of, whether there is or may be grounds for withdrawing or temporarily suspending such order.

“(2) ACCESS TO RECORDS.—Each person required under this section to maintain records, and each person in charge of custody thereof, shall, upon request of an officer or employee designated by the Secretary, permit such officer or employee at all reasonable times to have access to and copy and verify such records.

“(g) INVESTIGATIONAL TOBACCO PRODUCT EXEMPTION FOR INVESTIGATIONAL USE.—The Secretary may exempt tobacco products intended for investigational use from the provisions of this chapter under such conditions as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.

“SEC. 911. MODIFIED RISK TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—No person may introduce or deliver for introduction into interstate commerce any modified risk tobacco product unless an order issued pursuant to subsection (g) is effective with respect to such product.

“(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) MODIFIED RISK TOBACCO PRODUCT.—The term ‘modified risk tobacco product’ means any tobacco product that is sold or distributed for use to reduce harm or the risk of tobacco-related disease associated with commercially marketed tobacco products.

“(2) SOLD OR DISTRIBUTED.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—With respect to a tobacco product, the term ‘sold or distributed for use to reduce harm or the risk of tobacco-related disease associated with commercially marketed tobacco products’ means a tobacco product—

“(i) the label, labeling, or advertising of which represents explicitly or implicitly that—

“(I) the tobacco product presents a lower risk of tobacco-related disease or is less harmful than one or more other commercially marketed tobacco products;

“(II) the tobacco product or its smoke contains a reduced level of a substance or presents a reduced exposure to a substance; or

“(III) the tobacco product or its smoke does not contain or is free of a substance;

“(ii) the label, labeling, or advertising of which uses the descriptors ‘light’, ‘mild’, or ‘low’ or similar descriptors; or

“(iii) the tobacco product manufacturer of which has taken any action directed to consumers through the media or otherwise, other than by means of the tobacco product’s label, labeling, or advertising, after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, respecting the product that would be reasonably expected to result in consumers believing that the tobacco product or its smoke may present a lower risk of disease or is less harmful than one or more commercially marketed tobacco products, or presents a reduced exposure to, or does not contain or is free of, a substance or substances.

“(B) LIMITATION.—No tobacco product shall be considered to be ‘sold or distributed for use to reduce harm or the risk of tobacco-related disease associated with commercially marketed tobacco products’, except as described in subparagraph (A).

“(C) SMOKELESS TOBACCO PRODUCT.—No smokeless tobacco product shall be considered to be ‘sold or distributed for use to reduce harm or the risk of tobacco-related disease associated with commercially marketed tobacco products’ solely because its label, labeling, or advertising uses the following phrases to describe such product and its use: ‘smokeless tobacco’, ‘smokeless tobacco product’, ‘not consumed by smoking’, ‘does not produce smoke’, ‘smokefree’, ‘smoke-free’, ‘without smoke’, ‘no smoke’, or ‘not smoke’.

“(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of paragraph (2)(A)(ii) shall take effect 12 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act for those products whose label, labeling, or advertising contains the terms described in such paragraph on such date of enactment. The effective date shall be with respect to the date of manufacture, provided that, in any case, beginning 30 days after such effective date, a manufacturer shall not introduce into the domestic commerce of the United States any product, irrespective of the date of manufacture, that is not in conformance with paragraph (2)(A)(ii).

“(c) TOBACCO DEPENDENCE PRODUCTS.—A product that is intended to be used for the treatment of tobacco dependence, including smoking cessation, is not a modified risk tobacco product under this section if it has been approved as a drug or device by the Food and Drug Administration and is subject to the requirements of chapter V.

“(d) FILING.—Any person may file with the Secretary an application for a modified risk tobacco product. Such application shall include—

“(1) a description of the proposed product and any proposed advertising and labeling;

“(2) the conditions for using the product;

“(3) the formulation of the product;

“(4) sample product labels and labeling;

“(5) all documents (including underlying scientific information) relating to research findings conducted, supported, or possessed by the tobacco product manufacturer relating to the effect of the product on tobacco-related diseases and health-related conditions, including information both favorable and unfavorable to the ability of the product to reduce risk or exposure and relating to human health;

“(6) data and information on how consumers actually use the tobacco product; and “(7) such other information as the Secretary may require.

“(e) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—The Secretary shall make the application described in subsection (d) publicly available (except matters in the application which are trade secrets or otherwise confidential, commercial information) and shall request comments by interested persons on the information contained in the application and on the label, labeling, and advertising accompanying such application.

“(f) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall refer to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee any application submitted under this section.

“(2) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Not later than 60 days after the date an application is referred to the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee under paragraph (1), the Advisory Committee shall report its recommendations on the application to the Secretary.

“(g) MARKETING.—

“(1) MODIFIED RISK PRODUCTS.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall, with respect to an application submitted under this section, issue an order that a modified risk product may be commercially marketed only if the Secretary determines that the applicant has demonstrated that such product, as it is actually used by consumers, will—

“(A) significantly reduce harm and the risk of tobacco-related disease to individual tobacco users; and

“(B) benefit the health of the population as a whole taking into account both users of tobacco products and persons who do not currently use tobacco products.

“(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR CERTAIN PRODUCTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may issue an order that a tobacco product may be introduced or delivered for introduction into interstate commerce, pursuant to an application under this section, with respect to a tobacco product that may not be commercially marketed under paragraph (1) if the Secretary makes the findings required under this paragraph and determines that the applicant has demonstrated that—

“(i) such order would be appropriate to promote the public health;

“(ii) any aspect of the label, labeling, and advertising for such product that would cause the tobacco product to be a modified risk tobacco product under subsection (b) is limited to an explicit or implicit representation that such tobacco product or its smoke does not contain or is free of a substance or contains a reduced level of a substance, or presents a reduced exposure to a substance in tobacco smoke;

“(iii) scientific evidence is not available and, using the best available scientific methods, cannot be made available without conducting long-term epidemiological studies for an application to meet the standards set forth in paragraph (1); and

“(iv) the scientific evidence that is available without conducting long-term epidemiological studies demonstrates that a measurable and substantial reduction in morbidity or mortality among individual tobacco users is reasonably likely in subsequent studies.

“(B) ADDITIONAL FINDINGS REQUIRED.—To issue an order under subparagraph (A) the Secretary must also find that the applicant has demonstrated that—

“(i) the magnitude of the overall reductions in exposure to the substance or substances which are the subject of the application is substantial, such substance or substances are harmful, and the product as actually used exposes consumers to the specified reduced level of the substance or substances;

“(ii) the product as actually used by consumers will not expose them to higher levels of other harmful substances compared to the similar types of tobacco products then on the market unless such increases are minimal and the reasonably likely overall impact of use of the product remains a substantial and measurable reduction in overall morbidity and mortality among individual tobacco users;

“(iii) testing of actual consumer perception shows that, as the applicant proposes to label and market the product, consumers will not be misled into believing that the product—

“(I) is or has been demonstrated to be less harmful; or

“(II) presents or has been demonstrated to present less of a risk of disease than 1 or more other commercially marketed tobacco products; and

“(iv) issuance of an order with respect to the application is expected to benefit the health of the population as a whole taking into account both users of tobacco products and persons who do not currently use tobacco products.

“(C) CONDITIONS OF MARKETING.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Applications subject to an order under this paragraph shall be limited to a term of not more than 5 years, but may be renewed upon a finding by the Secretary that the requirements of this paragraph continue to be satisfied based on the filing of a new application.

“(ii) AGREEMENTS BY APPLICANT.—An order under this paragraph shall be conditioned on the applicant’s agreement to conduct postmarket surveillance and studies and to submit to the Secretary the results of such surveillance and studies to determine the impact of the order on consumer perception, behavior, and health and to enable the Secretary to review the accuracy of the determinations upon which the order was based in accordance with a protocol approved by the Secretary.

“(iii) ANNUAL SUBMISSION.—The results of such postmarket surveillance and studies described in clause (ii) shall be submitted annually.

“(3) BASIS.—The determinations under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be based on—

“(A) the scientific evidence submitted by the applicant; and “(B) scientific evidence and other information that is made available to the Secretary.

“(4) BENEFIT TO HEALTH OF INDIVIDUALS AND OF POPULATION AS A WHOLE.—In making the determinations under paragraphs (1) and (2), the Secretary shall take into account—

“(A) the relative health risks to individuals of the tobacco product that is the subject of the application;

“(B) the increased or decreased likelihood that existing users of tobacco products who would otherwise stop using such products will switch to the tobacco product that is the subject of the application;

“(C) the increased or decreased likelihood that persons who do not use tobacco products will start using the tobacco product that is the subject of the application;

“(D) the risks and benefits to persons from the use of the tobacco product that is the subject of the application as compared to the use of products for smoking cessation approved under chapter V to treat nicotine dependence; and “(E) comments, data, and information submitted by interested persons.

“(h) ADDITIONAL CONDITIONS FOR MARKETING.—

“(1) MODIFIED RISK PRODUCTS.—The Secretary shall require for the marketing of a product under this section that any advertising or labeling concerning modified risk products enable the public to comprehend the information concerning modified risk and to understand the relative significance of such information in the context of total health and in relation to all of the diseases and health-related conditions associated with the use of tobacco products.

“(2) COMPARATIVE CLAIMS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may require for the marketing of a product under this subsection that a claim comparing a tobacco product to 1 or more other commercially marketed tobacco products shall compare the tobacco product to a commercially marketed tobacco product that is representative of that type of tobacco product on the market (for example the average value of the top 3 brands of an established regular tobacco product).

“(B) QUANTITATIVE COMPARISONS.—The Secretary may also require, for purposes of subparagraph (A), that the percent (or fraction) of change and identity of the reference tobacco product and a quantitative comparison of the amount of the substance claimed to be reduced shall be stated in immediate proximity to the most prominent claim.

“(3) LABEL DISCLOSURE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may require the disclosure on the label of other substances in the tobacco product, or substances that may be produced by the consumption of that tobacco product, that may affect a disease or health-related condition or may increase the risk of other diseases or health-related conditions associated with the use of tobacco products.

“(B) CONDITIONS OF USE.—If the conditions of use of the tobacco product may affect the risk of the product to human health, the Secretary may require the labeling of conditions of use.

“(4) TIME.—An order issued under subsection (g)(1) shall be effective for a specified period of time.

“(5) ADVERTISING.—The Secretary may require, with respect to a product for which an applicant obtained an order under subsection (g)(1), that the product comply with requirements relating to advertising and promotion of the tobacco product.

“(i) POSTMARKET SURVEILLANCE AND STUDIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require, with respect to a product for which an applicant obtained an order under subsection (g)(1), that the applicant conduct postmarket surveillance and studies for such a tobacco product to determine the impact of the order issuance on consumer perception, behavior, and health, to enable the Secretary to review the accuracy of the determinations upon which the order was based, and to provide information that the Secretary determines is otherwise necessary regarding the use or health risks involving the tobacco product. The results of postmarket surveillance and studies shall be submitted to the Secretary on an annual basis.

“(2) SURVEILLANCE PROTOCOL.—Each applicant required to conduct a surveillance of a tobacco product under paragraph (1) shall, within 30 days after receiving notice that the applicant is required to conduct such surveillance, submit, for the approval of the Secretary, a protocol for the required surveillance. The Secretary, within 60 days of the receipt of such protocol, shall determine if the principal investigator proposed to be used in the surveillance has sufficient qualifications and experience to conduct such surveillance and if such protocol will result in collection of the data or other information designated by the Secretary as necessary to protect the public health.

“(j) WITHDRAWAL OF AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary, after an opportunity for an informal hearing, shall withdraw an order under subsection (g) if the Secretary determines that—

“(1) the applicant, based on new information, can no longer make the demonstrations required under subsection (g), or the Secretary can no longer make the determinations required under subsection (g);

“(2) the application failed to include material information or included any untrue statement of material fact;

“(3) any explicit or implicit representation that the product reduces risk or exposure is no longer valid, including if—

“(A) a tobacco product standard is established pursuant to section 907;

“(B) an action is taken that affects the risks presented by other commercially marketed tobacco products that were compared to the product that is the subject of the application; or

“(C) any postmarket surveillance or studies reveal that the order is no longer consistent with the protection of the public health;

“(4) the applicant failed to conduct or submit the postmarket surveillance and studies required under subsection (g)(2)(C)(ii) or subsection (i); or “(5) the applicant failed to meet a condition imposed under subsection (h).

“(k) CHAPTER IV OR V.—A product for which the Secretary has issued an order pursuant to subsection (g) shall not be subject to chapter IV or V.

“(l) IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS OR GUIDANCE.—

“(1) SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCE.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall issue regulations or guidance (or any combination thereof) on the scientific evidence required for assessment and ongoing review of modified risk tobacco products. Such regulations or guidance shall—

“(A) to the extent that adequate scientific evidence exists, establish minimum standards for scientific studies needed prior to issuing an order under subsection (g) to show that a substantial reduction in morbidity or mortality among individual tobacco users occurs for products described in subsection (g)(1) or is reasonably likely for products described in subsection (g)(2);

“(B) include validated biomarkers, intermediate clinical endpoints, and other feasible outcome measures, as appropriate;

“(C) establish minimum standards for postmarket studies, that shall include regular and long-term assessments of health outcomes and mortality, intermediate clinical endpoints, consumer perception of harm reduction, and the impact on quitting behavior and new use of tobacco products, as appropriate;

“(D) establish minimum standards for required postmarket surveillance, including ongoing assessments of consumer perception;

“(E) require that data from the required studies and surveillance be made available to the Secretary prior to the decision on renewal of a modified risk tobacco product; and “(F) establish a reasonable timetable for the Secretary to review an application under this section.

“(2) CONSULTATION.—The regulations or guidance issued under paragraph (1) shall be developed in consultation with the Institute of Medicine, and with the input of other appropriate scientific and medical experts, on the design and conduct of such studies and surveillance.

“(3) REVISION.—The regulations or guidance under paragraph (1) shall be revised on a regular basis as new scientific information becomes available.

“(4) NEW TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall issue a regulation or guidance that permits the filing of a single application for any tobacco product that is a new tobacco product under section 910 and which the applicant seeks to commercially market under this section.

“(m) DISTRIBUTORS.—Except as provided in this section, no distributor may take any action, after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, with respect to a tobacco product that would reasonably be expected to result in consumers believing that the tobacco product or its smoke may present a lower risk of disease or is less harmful than one or more commercially marketed tobacco products, or presents a reduced exposure to, or does not contain or is free of, a substance or substances.

“SEC. 912. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

“(a) RIGHT TO REVIEW.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after—

“(A) the promulgation of a regulation under section 907 establishing, amending, or revoking a tobacco product standard; or any person adversely affected by such regulation or denial may file a petition for judicial review of such regulation or denial with the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia or for the circuit in which such person resides or has their principal place of business.

“(B) a denial of an application under section 910(c).

“(2) REQUIREMENTS.—

“(A) COPY OF PETITION.—A copy of the petition filed under paragraph (1) shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court involved to the Secretary.

“(B) RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS.—On receipt of a petition under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall file in the court in which such petition was filed—

“(i) the record of the proceedings on which the regulation or order was based; and “(ii) a statement of the reasons for the issuance of such a regulation or order.

“(C) DEFINITION OF RECORD.—In this section, the term “record” means—

“(i) all notices and other matter published in the Federal Register with respect to the regulation or order reviewed;

“(ii) all information submitted to the Secretary with respect to such regulation or order;

“(iii) proceedings of any panel or advisory committee with respect to such regulation or order;

“(iv) any hearing held with respect to such regulation or order; and

“(v) any other information identified by the Secretary, in the administrative proceeding held with respect to such regulation or order, as being relevant to such regulation or order.

“(b) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—Upon the filing of the petition under subsection (a) for judicial review of a regulation or order, the court shall have jurisdiction to review the regulation or order in accordance with chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, and to grant appropriate relief, including interim relief, as provided for in such chapter. A regulation or denial described in subsection (a) shall be reviewed in accordance with section 706(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code.

“(c) FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—The judgment of the court affirming or setting aside, in whole or in part, any regulation or order shall be final, subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

“(d) OTHER REMEDIES.—The remedies provided for in this section shall be in addition to, and not in lieu of, any other remedies provided by law.

“(e) REGULATIONS AND ORDERS MUST RECITE BASIS IN RECORD.—To facilitate judicial review, a regulation or order issued under section 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, or 916 shall contain a statement of the reasons for the issuance of such regulation or order in the record of the proceedings held in connection with its issuance.

“SEC. 913. EQUAL TREATMENT OF RETAIL OUTLETS.

“The Secretary shall issue regulations to require that retail establishments for which the predominant business is the sale of tobacco products comply with any advertising restrictions applicable to retail establishments accessible to individuals under the age of 18.

“SEC. 914. JURISDICTION OF AND COORDINATION WITH THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.

“(a) JURISDICTION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except where expressly provided in this chapter, nothing in this chapter shall be construed as limiting or diminishing the authority of the Federal Trade Commission to enforce the laws under its jurisdiction with respect to the advertising, sale, or distribution of tobacco products.

“(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Any advertising that violates this chapter or a provision of the regulations referred to in section 102 of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, is an unfair or deceptive act or practice under section 5(a) of the Federal Trade Commission Act and shall be considered a violation of a rule promulgated under section 18 of that Act.

“(b) COORDINATION.—With respect to the requirements of section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act and section 3 of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986—

“(1) the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission shall coordinate with the Secretary concerning the enforcement of such Act as such enforcement relates to unfair or deceptive acts or practices in the advertising of cigarettes or smokeless tobacco; and

“(2) the Secretary shall consult with the Chairman of such Commission in revising the label statements and requirements under such sections.

“SEC. 915. REGULATION REQUIREMENT.

“(a) TESTING, REPORTING, AND DISCLOSURE.—Not later than 36 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations under this Act that meet the requirements of subsection (b).

“(b) CONTENTS OF RULES.—The regulations promulgated under subsection (a)—

“(1) shall require testing and reporting of tobacco product constituents, ingredients, and additives, including smoke constituents, by brand and subbrand that the Secretary determines should be tested to protect the public health, provided that, for purposes of the testing requirements of this paragraph, tobacco products manufactured and sold by a single tobacco product manufacturer that are identical in all respects except the labels, packaging design, logo, trade dress, trademark, brand name, or any combination thereof, shall be considered as a single brand; and

“(2) may require that tobacco product manufacturers, packagers, or importers make disclosures relating to the results of the testing of tar and nicotine through labels or advertising or other appropriate means, and make disclosures regarding the results of the testing of other constituents, including smoke constituents, ingredients, or additives, that the Secretary determines should be disclosed to the public to protect the public health and will not mislead consumers about the risk of tobacco-related disease.

“(c) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall have the authority under this chapter to conduct or to require the testing, reporting, or disclosure of tobacco product constituents, including smoke constituents.

“(d) SMALL TOBACCO PRODUCT MANUFACTURERS.—

“(1) FIRST COMPLIANCE DATE.—The initial regulations promulgated under subsection (a) shall not impose requirements on small tobacco product manufacturers before the later of—

“(A) the end of the 2-year period following the final promulgation of such regulations; and

“(B) the initial date set by the Secretary for compliance with such regulations by manufacturers that are not small tobacco product manufacturers.

“(2) TESTING AND REPORTING INITIAL COMPLIANCE PERIOD.—

“(A) 4-YEAR PERIOD.—The initial regulations promulgated under subsection (a) shall give each small tobacco product manufacturer a 4-year period over which to conduct testing and reporting for all of its tobacco products. Subject to paragraph (1), the end of the first year of such 4-year period shall coincide with the initial date of compliance under this section set by the Secretary with respect to manufacturers that are not small tobacco product manufacturers or the end of the 2-year period following the final promulgation of such regulations, as described in paragraph (1)(A). A small tobacco product manufacturer shall be required—

“(i) to conduct such testing and reporting for 25 percent of its tobacco products during each year of such 4-year period; and

“(ii) to conduct such testing and reporting for its largest-selling tobacco products (as determined by the Secretary) before its other tobacco products, or in such other order of priority as determined by the Secretary.

“(B) CASE-BY-CASE DELAY.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the Secretary may, on a case-by-case basis, delay the date by which an individual small tobacco product manufacturer must conduct testing and reporting for its tobacco products under this section based upon a showing of undue hardship to such manufacturer. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the Secretary shall not extend the deadline for a small tobacco product manufacturer to conduct testing and reporting for all of its tobacco products beyond a total of 5 years after the initial date of compliance under this section set by the Secretary with respect to manufacturers that are not small tobacco product manufacturers.

“(3) SUBSEQUENT AND ADDITIONAL TESTING AND REPORTING.—The regulations promulgated under subsection (a) shall provide that, with respect to any subsequent or additional testing and reporting of tobacco products required under this section, such testing and reporting by a small tobacco product manufacturer shall be conducted in accordance with the timeframes described in paragraph (2)(A), except that, in the case of a new product, or if there has been a modification described in section 910(a)(1)(B) of any product of a small tobacco product manufacturer since the last testing and reporting required under this section, the Secretary shall require that any subsequent or additional testing and reporting be conducted in accordance with the same timeframe applicable to manufacturers that are not small tobacco product manufacturers.

“(4) JOINT LABORATORY TESTING SERVICES.—The Secretary shall allow any 2 or more small tobacco product manufacturers to join together to purchase laboratory testing services required by this section on a group basis in order to ensure that such manufacturers receive access to, and fair pricing of, such testing services.

“(e) EXTENSIONS FOR LIMITED LABORATORY CAPACITY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The regulations promulgated under subsection (a) shall provide that a small tobacco product manufacturer shall not be considered to be in violation of this section before the deadline applicable under paragraphs (3) and (4), if—

“(A) the tobacco products of such manufacturer are in compliance with all other requirements of this chapter; and “(B) the conditions described in paragraph (2) are met.

“(2) CONDITIONS.—Notwithstanding the requirements of this section, the Secretary may delay the date by which a small tobacco product manufacturer must be in compliance with the testing and reporting required by this section until such time as the testing is reported if, not later than 90 days before the deadline for reporting in accordance with this section, a small tobacco product manufacturer provides evidence to the Secretary demonstrating that—

“(A) the manufacturer has submitted the required products for testing to a laboratory and has done so sufficiently in advance of the deadline to create a reasonable expectation of completion by the deadline;

“(B) the products currently are awaiting testing by the laboratory; and “(C) neither that laboratory nor any other laboratory is able to complete testing by the deadline at customary, nonexpedited testing fees.

“(3) EXTENSION.—The Secretary, taking into account the laboratory testing capacity that is available to tobacco product manufacturers, shall review and verify the evidence submitted by a small tobacco product manufacturer in accordance with paragraph (2). If the Secretary finds that the conditions described in such paragraph are met, the Secretary shall notify the small tobacco product manufacturer that the manufacturer shall not be considered to be in violation of the testing and reporting requirements of this section until the testing is reported or until 1 year after the reporting deadline has passed, whichever occurs sooner. If, however, the Secretary has not made a finding before the reporting deadline, the manufacturer shall not be considered to be in violation of such requirements until the Secretary finds that the conditions described in paragraph (2) have not been met, or until 1 year after the reporting deadline, whichever occurs sooner.

“(4) ADDITIONAL EXTENSION.—In addition to the time that may be provided under paragraph (3), the Secretary may provide further extensions of time, in increments of no more than 1 year, for required testing and reporting to occur if the Secretary determines, based on evidence properly and timely submitted by a small tobacco product manufacturer in accordance with paragraph (2), that a lack of available laboratory capacity prevents the manufacturer from completing the required testing during the period described in paragraph (3).

“(f) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in subsection (d) or (e) shall be construed to authorize the extension of any deadline, or to otherwise affect any timeframe, under any provision of this Act or the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act other than this section.

“SEC. 916. PRESERVATION OF STATE AND LOCAL AUTHORITY.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—

“(1) PRESERVATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (2)(A), nothing in this chapter, or rules promulgated under this chapter, shall be construed to limit the authority of a Federal agency (including the Armed Forces), a State or political subdivision of a State, or the government of an Indian tribe to enact, adopt, promulgate, and enforce any law, rule, regulation, or other measure with respect to tobacco products that is in addition to, or more stringent than, requirements established under this chapter, including a law, rule, regulation, or other measure relating to or prohibiting the sale, distribution, possession, exposure to, access to, advertising and promotion of, or use of tobacco products by individuals of any age, information reporting to the State, or measures relating to fire safety standards for tobacco products. No provision of this chapter shall limit or otherwise affect any State, tribal, or local taxation of tobacco products.

“(2) PREEMPTION OF CERTAIN STATE AND LOCAL REQUIREMENTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—No State or political subdivision of a State may establish or continue in effect with respect to a tobacco product any requirement which is different from, or in addition to, any requirement under the provisions of this chapter relating to tobacco product standards, premarket review, adulteration, misbranding, labeling, registration, good manufacturing standards, or modified risk tobacco products.

“(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) does not apply to requirements relating to the sale, distribution, possession, information reporting to the State, exposure to, access to, the advertising and promotion of, or use of, tobacco products by individuals of any age, or relating to fire safety standards for tobacco products. Information disclosed to a State under subparagraph (A) that is exempt from disclosure under section 552(b)(4) of title 5, United States Code, shall be treated as a trade secret and confidential information by the State.

“(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION REGARDING PRODUCT LIABILITY.—No provision of this chapter relating to a tobacco product shall be construed to modify or otherwise affect any action or the liability of any person under the product liability law of any State.

“SEC. 917. TOBACCO PRODUCTS SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall establish a 12-member advisory committee, to be known as the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee (in this section referred to as the ‘Advisory Committee’).

“(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—

“(A) MEMBERS.—The Secretary shall appoint as members of the Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee individuals who are technically qualified by training and experience in medicine, medical ethics, science, or technology involving the manufacture, evaluation, or use of tobacco products, who are of appropriately diversified professional backgrounds. The committee shall be composed of—

“(i) 7 individuals who are physicians, dentists, scientists, or health care professionals practicing in the area of oncology, pulmonology, cardiology, toxicology, pharmacology, addiction, or any other relevant specialty;

“(ii) 1 individual who is an officer or employee of a State or local government or of the Federal Government;

“(iii) 1 individual as a representative of the general public;

“(iv) 1 individual as a representative of the interests of the tobacco manufacturing industry;

“(v) 1 individual as a representative of the interests of the small business tobacco manufacturing industry, which position may be filled on a rotating, sequential basis by representatives of different small business tobacco manufacturers based on areas of expertise relevant to the topics being considered by the Advisory Committee; and

“(vi) 1 individual as a representative of the interests of the tobacco growers.

“(B) NONVOTING MEMBERS.—The members of the committee appointed under clauses (iv), (v), and (vi) of subparagraph (A) shall serve as consultants to those described in clauses (i) through (iii) of subparagraph (A) and shall be nonvoting representatives.

“(C) CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—No members of the committee, other than members appointed pursuant to clauses (iv), (v), and (vi) of subparagraph (A) shall, during the member’s tenure on the committee or for the 18-month period prior to becoming such a member, receive any salary, grants, or other payments or support from any business that manufactures, distributes, markets, or sells cigarettes or other tobacco products.

“(2) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not appoint to the Advisory Committee any individual who is in the regular full-time employ of the Food and Drug Administration or any agency responsible for the enforcement of this Act. The Secretary may appoint Federal officials as ex officio members.

“(3) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary shall designate 1 of the members appointed under clauses

(i), (ii), and (iii) of paragraph (1)(A) to serve as chairperson.

“(c) DUTIES.—The Tobacco Products Scientific Advisory Committee shall provide advice, information, and recommendations to the Secretary—

“(1) as provided in this chapter;

“(2) on the effects of the alteration of the nicotine yields from tobacco products;

“(3) on whether there is a threshold level below which nicotine yields do not produce dependence on the tobacco product involved; and

“(4) on its review of other safety, dependence, or health issues relating to tobacco products as requested by the Secretary.

“(d) COMPENSATION; SUPPORT; FACA.—

“(1) COMPENSATION AND TRAVEL.—Members of the Advisory Committee who are not officers or employees of the United States, while attending conferences or meetings of the committee or otherwise engaged in its business, shall be entitled to receive compensation at rates to be fixed by the Secretary, which may not exceed the daily equivalent of the rate in effect under the Senior Executive Schedule under section 5382 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) they are so engaged; and while so serving away from their homes or regular places of business each member may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

“(2) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Secretary shall furnish the Advisory Committee clerical and other assistance.

“(3) NONAPPLICATION OF FACA.—Section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act does not apply to the Advisory Committee.

“(e) PROCEEDINGS OF ADVISORY PANELS AND COMMITTEES.—The Advisory Committee shall make and maintain a transcript of any proceeding of the panel or committee. Each such panel and committee shall delete from any transcript made under this subsection information which is exempt from disclosure under section 552(b) of title 5, United States Code.

“SEC. 918. DRUG PRODUCTS USED TO TREAT TOBACCO DEPENDENCE.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall—

“(1) at the request of the applicant, consider designating products for smoking cessation, including nicotine replacement products as fast track research and approval products within the meaning of section 506;

“(2) consider approving the extended use of nicotine replacement products (such as nicotine patches, nicotine gum, and nicotine lozenges) for the treatment of tobacco dependence; and

“(3) review and consider the evidence for additional indications for nicotine replacement products, such as for craving relief or relapse prevention.

“(b) REPORT ON INNOVATIVE PRODUCTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary, after consultation with recognized scientific, medical, and public health experts (including both Federal agencies and nongovernmental entities, the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences, and the Society for Research on Nicotine and Tobacco), shall submit to the Congress a report that examines how best to regulate, promote, and encourage the development of innovative products and treatments (including nicotine-based and non-nicotine-based products and treatments) to better achieve, in a manner that best protects and promotes the public health—

“(A) total abstinence from tobacco use;

“(B) reductions in consumption of tobacco; and “(C) reductions in the harm associated with continued tobacco use.

“(2) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall include the recommendations of the Secretary on how the Food and Drug Administration should coordinate and facilitate the exchange of information on such innovative products and treatments among relevant offices and centers within the Administration and within the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and other relevant agencies.

“SEC. 919. USER FEES.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF QUARTERLY FEE.—Beginning on the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall in accordance with this section assess user fees on, and collect such fees from, each manufacturer and importer of tobacco products subject to this chapter. The fees shall be assessed and collected with respect to each quarter of each fiscal year, and the total amount assessed and collected for a fiscal year shall be the amount specified in subsection (b)(1) for such year, subject to subsection (c).

“(b) ASSESSMENT OF USER FEE.—

“(1) AMOUNT OF ASSESSMENT.—The total amount of user fees authorized to be assessed and collected under subsection (a) for a fiscal year is the following, as applicable to the fiscal year involved:

“(A) For fiscal year 2009, $85,000,000 (subject to subsection (e)).

“(B) For fiscal year 2010, $235,000,000.

“(C) For fiscal year 2011, $450,000,000.

“(D) For fiscal year 2012, $477,000,000.

“(E) For fiscal year 2013, $505,000,000.

“(F) For fiscal year 2014, $534,000,000.

“(G) For fiscal year 2015, $566,000,000.

“(H) For fiscal year 2016, $599,000,000.

“(I) For fiscal year 2017, $635,000,000.

“(J) For fiscal year 2018, $672,000,000.

“(K) For fiscal year 2019 and each subsequent fiscal year, $712,000,000.

“(2) ALLOCATIONS OF ASSESSMENT BY CLASS OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The total user fees assessed and collected under subsection (a) each fiscal year with respect to each class of tobacco products shall be an amount that is equal to the applicable percentage of each class for the fiscal year multiplied by the amount specified in paragraph (1) for the fiscal year.

“(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable percentage for a fiscal year for each of the following classes of tobacco products shall be determined in accordance with clause (ii):

“(I) Cigarettes.

“(II) Cigars, including small cigars and cigars other than small cigars.

“(III) Snuff.

“(IV) Chewing tobacco.

“(V) Pipe tobacco.

“(VI) Roll-your-own tobacco.

“(ii) ALLOCATIONS.—The applicable percentage of each class of tobacco product described in clause (i) for a fiscal year shall be the percentage determined under section 625(c) of Public Law 108–357 for each such class of product for such fiscal year.

“(iii) REQUIREMENT OF REGULATIONS.—Notwithstanding clause (ii), no user fees shall be assessed on a class of tobacco products unless such class of tobacco products is listed in section 901(b) or is deemed by the Secretary in a regulation under section 901(b) to be subject to this chapter.

“(iv) REALLOCATIONS.—In the case of a class of tobacco products that is not listed in section 901(b) or deemed by the Secretary in a regulation under section 901(b) to be subject to this chapter, the amount of user fees that would otherwise be assessed to such class of tobacco products shall be reallocated to the classes of tobacco products that are subject to this chapter in the same manner and based on the same relative percentages otherwise determined under clause (ii).

“(3) DETERMINATION OF USER FEE BY COMPANY.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The total user fee to be paid by each manufacturer or importer of a particular class of tobacco products shall be determined for each quarter by multiplying—

“(i) such manufacturer's or importer's percentage share as determined under paragraph (4); by “(ii) the portion of the user fee amount for the current quarter to be assessed on all manufacturers and importers of such class of tobacco products as determined under paragraph (2).

“(B) NO FEE IN EXCESS OF PERCENTAGE SHARE.—No manufacturer or importer of tobacco products shall be required to pay a user fee in excess of the percentage share of such manufacturer or importer.

“(4) ALLOCATION OF ASSESSMENT WITHIN EACH CLASS OF TOBACCO PRODUCT.—The percentage share of each manufacturer or importer of a particular class of tobacco products of the total user fee to be paid by all manufacturers or importers of that class of tobacco products shall be the percentage determined for purposes of allocations under subsections (e) through (h) of section 625 of Public Law 108–357.

“(5) ALLOCATION FOR CIGARS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (4), if a user fee assessment is imposed on cigars, the percentage share of each manufacturer or importer of cigars shall be based on the excise taxes paid by such manufacturer or importer during the prior fiscal year.

“(6) TIMING OF ASSESSMENT.—The Secretary shall notify each manufacturer and importer of tobacco products subject to this section of the amount of the quarterly assessment imposed on such manufacturer or importer under this subsection for each quarter of each fiscal year. Such notifications shall occur not later than 30 days prior to the end of the quarter for which such assessment is made, and payments of all assessments shall be made by the last day of the quarter involved.

“(7) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall request the appropriate Federal agency to enter into a memorandum of understanding that provides for the regular and timely transfer from the head of such agency to the Secretary of the information described in paragraphs (2)(B)(ii) and (4) and all necessary information regarding all tobacco product manufacturers and importers required to pay user fees. The Secretary shall maintain all disclosure restrictions established by the head of such agency regarding the information provided under the memorandum of understanding.

“(B) ASSURANCES.—Beginning not later than fiscal year 2015, and for each subsequent fiscal year, the Secretary shall ensure that the Food and Drug Administration is able to determine the applicable percentages described in paragraph (2) and the percentage shares described in paragraph (4). The Secretary may carry out this subparagraph by entering into a contract with the head of the Federal agency referred to in subparagraph (A) to continue to provide the necessary information.

“(C) CREDITING AND AVAILABILITY OF FEES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Fees authorized under subsection (a) shall be collected and available for obligation only to the extent and in the amount provided in advance in appropriations Acts, subject to paragraph (2)(D). Such fees are authorized to remain available until expended. Such sums as may be necessary may be transferred from the Food and Drug Administration salaries and expenses appropriation account without fiscal year limitation to such appropriation account for salaries and expenses with such fiscal year limitation.

“(2) AVAILABILITY.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Fees appropriated under paragraph (3) are available only for the purpose of paying the costs of the activities of the Food and Drug Administration related to the regulation of tobacco products under this chapter and the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act (referred to in this subsection as ‘tobacco regulation activities’), except that such fees may be used for the reimbursement specified in subparagraph (C).

“(B) PROHIBITION AGAINST USE OF OTHER FUNDS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), fees collected under subsection (a) are the only funds authorized to be made available for tobacco regulation activities.

“(ii) STARTUP COSTS.—Clause (i) does not apply until October 1, 2009. Until such date, any amounts available to the Food and Drug Administration (excluding user fees) shall be available and allocated as needed to pay the costs of tobacco regulation activities.

“(C) REIMBURSEMENT OF START-UP AMOUNTS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Any amounts allocated for the start-up period pursuant to subparagraph (B)(ii) shall be reimbursed through any appropriated fees collected under subsection (a), in such manner as the Secretary determines appropriate to ensure that such allocation results in no net change in the total amount of funds otherwise available, for the period from October 1, 2008, through September 30, 2010, for Food and Drug Administration programs and activities (other than tobacco regulation activities) for such period.

“(ii) TREATMENT OF REIMBURSED AMOUNTS.—Amounts reimbursed under clause (i) shall be available for the programs and activities for which funds allocated for the start-up period were available, prior to such allocation, until September 30, 2010, notwithstanding any otherwise applicable limits on amounts for such programs or activities for a fiscal year.

“(D) FEE COLLECTED DURING START-UP PERIOD.—Notwithstanding the first sentence of paragraph (1), fees under subsection (a) may be collected through September 30, 2009 under subparagraph (B)(ii) and shall be available for obligation and remain available until expended. Such offsetting collections shall be credited to the salaries and expenses account of the Food and Drug Administration.

“(E) OBLIGATION OF START-UP COSTS IN ANTICIPATION OF AVAILABLE FEE COLLECTIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, following the enactment of an appropriation for fees under this section for fiscal year 2010, or any portion thereof, obligations for costs of tobacco regulation activities during the start-up period may be incurred in anticipation of the receipt of offsetting fee collections through procedures specified in section 1534 of title 31, United States Code.

“(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For fiscal year 2009 and each subsequent fiscal year, there is authorized to be appropriated for fees under this section an amount equal to the amount specified in subsection (b)(1) for the fiscal year.

“(d) COLLECTION OF UNPAID FEES.—In any case where the Secretary does not receive payment of a fee assessed under subsection (a) within 30 days after it is due, such fee shall be treated as a claim of the United States Government subject to subchapter II of chapter 37 of title 31, United States Code.

“(e) APPLICABILITY TO FISCAL YEAR 2009.—If the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act occurs during fiscal year 2009, the following applies, subject to subsection (c):

"(1) The Secretary shall determine the fees that would apply for a single quarter of such fiscal year according to the application of subsection (b) to the amount specified in paragraph (1)(A) of such subsection (referred to in this subsection as the 'quarterly fee amounts')."

"(2) For the quarter in which such date of enactment occurs, the amount of fees assessed shall be a pro rata amount, determined according to the number of days remaining in the quarter (including such date of enactment) and according to the daily equivalent of the quarterly fee amounts. Fees assessed under the preceding sentence shall not be collected until the next quarter."

"(3) For the quarter following the quarter to which paragraph (2) applies, the full quarterly fee amounts shall be assessed and collected, in addition to collection of the pro rata fees assessed under paragraph (2)."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 9(1) of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 (15 U.S.C. 4408(i)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) The term 'smokeless tobacco' has the meaning given such term by section 900(18) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act."

SEC. 102. FINAL RULE.

(a) CIGARETTES AND SMOKELESS TOBACCO.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—On the first day of publication of the Federal Register that is 180 days or more after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall publish in the Federal Register a final rule regarding cigarettes and smokeless tobacco, which—

(A) is deemed to be issued under chapter 9 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by section 101 of this division; and

(B) shall be deemed to be in compliance with all applicable provisions of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, and all other provisions of law relating to rulemaking procedures.

(2) CONTENTS OF RULE.—Except as provided in this subsection, the final rule published under paragraph (1), shall be identical in its provisions to part 897 of the regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health and Human Services in the August 28, 1996, issue of the Federal Register (61 Fed. Reg. 44615–44618). Such rule shall—

(A) provide for the designation of jurisdictional authority that is in accordance with this subsection in accordance with this division and the amendments made by this division;

(B) strike Subpart C—Labels and section 897.32(c);

(C) strike paragraphs (a), (b), and (i) of section 897.3 and insert definitions of the terms "cigarette", "cigarette tobacco", and "smokeless tobacco" as defined in section 900 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act;

(D) insert "or roll-your-own paper" in section 897.34(a) after "other than cigarettes or smokeless tobacco";

(E) include such modifications to section 897.30(b), if any, that the Secretary determines are appropriate in light of governing First Amendment case law, including the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Lorillard Tobacco Co. v. Reilly (533 U.S. 525 (2001));

(F) become effective on the date that is 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(G) amend paragraph (d) of section 897.16 to read as follows:

"(d)(1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2), no manufacturer, distributor, or retailer may distribute or cause to be distributed any free samples of cigarettes, smokeless tobacco, or other tobacco products (as such term is defined in section 201 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act).

"(2)(A) Subparagraph (1) does not prohibit a manufacturer, distributor, or retailer from distributing or causing to be distributed free samples of smokeless tobacco in a qualified adult-only facility.

"(B) This subparagraph does not affect the authority of a State or local government to prohibit or otherwise restrict the distribution of free samples of smokeless tobacco.

"(C) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified adult-only facility' means a facility or restricted area that—

"(i) requires each person present to provide to a law enforcement officer (whether on or off duty) or to a security guard licensed by a governmental entity government-issued identification showing a photograph and at least the minimum age established by applicable law for the purchase of smokeless tobacco;

"(ii) does not sell, serve, or distribute alcohol;

"(iii) is not located adjacent to or immediately across from (in any direction) a space that is used primarily for youth-oriented marketing, promotional, or other activities;

"(iv) is a temporary structure constructed, designated, and operated as a distinct enclosed area for the purpose of distributing free samples of smokeless tobacco in accordance with this subparagraph;

"(v) is enclosed by a barrier that—

"(I) is constructed of, or covered with, an opaque material (except for entrances and exits);

"(II) extends from no more than 12 inches above the ground or floor (which area at the bottom of the barrier must be covered with material that restricts visibility but may allow airflow) to at least 8 feet above the ground or floor (or to the ceiling); and

"(III) prevents persons outside the qualified adult-only facility from seeing into the qualified adult-only facility, unless they make unreasonable efforts to do so; and

"(vi) does not display on its exterior—

"(I) any tobacco product advertising;

"(II) a brand name other than in conjunction with words for an area or enclosure to identify an adult-only facility; or

"(III) any combination of words that would imply to a reasonable observer that the manufacturer, distributor, or retailer has a sponsorship that would violate section 897.34(c).

"(D) Distribution of samples of smokeless tobacco under this subparagraph permitted to be taken out of the qualified adult-only facility shall be limited to 1 package per adult consumer containing no more than 0.53 ounces (15 grams) of smokeless tobacco. If such package of smokeless tobacco contains individual portions of smokeless tobacco, the individual portions of smokeless tobacco shall not exceed 8 individual portions and the collective weight of such individual portions shall not exceed 0.53 ounces (15 grams). Any manufacturer, distributor, or retailer who distributes or causes to be distributed free samples also shall take reasonable steps to ensure that the above amounts are limited to one such package per adult consumer per day.

"(3) Notwithstanding subparagraph (2), no manufacturer, distributor, or retailer may distribute or cause to be distributed any free samples of smokeless tobacco—

"(A) to a sports team or entertainment group;

or

"(B) at any football, basketball, baseball, soccer, or hockey event or any other sporting or entertainment event determined by the Secretary to be covered by this subparagraph.

"(4) The Secretary shall implement a program to ensure compliance with this paragraph and submit a report to the Congress on such compliance not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act.

"(5) Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to authorize any person to distribute or cause to be distributed any sample of a tobacco product to any individual who has not attained the minimum age established by applicable law for the purchase of such product."

(3) AMENDMENTS TO RULE.—Prior to making amendments to the rule published under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall promulgate a proposed rule in accordance with chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of the Secretary to amend, in accordance with chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, the regulation promulgated pursuant to this section, including the provisions of such regulation relating to distribution of free samples.

(5) ENFORCEMENT OF RETAIL SALE PROVISIONS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall ensure that the provisions of this division, the amendments made by this division, and the implementing regulations (including such provisions, amendments, and regulations relating to the retail sale of tobacco products) are enforced with respect to the United States and Indian tribes.

(6) QUALIFIED ADULT-ONLY FACILITY.—A qualified adult-only facility (as such term is defined in section 897.16(d) of the final rule published under paragraph (1)) that is also a retailer and that commits a violation as a retailer shall not be subject to the limitations in section 103(q) and shall be subject to penalties applicable to a qualified adult-only facility.

(7) CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW PROVISIONS.—Section 801 of title 5, United States Code, shall not apply to the final rule published under paragraph (1).

(b) LIMITATION ON ADVISORY OPINIONS.—As of the date of enactment of this Act, the following documents issued by the Food and Drug Administration shall not constitute advisory opinions under section 10.85(d)(1) of title 21, Code of Federal Regulations, except as they apply to tobacco products, and shall not be cited by the Secretary of Health and Human Services or the Food and Drug Administration as binding precedent:

(1) The preamble to the proposed rule in the document titled "Regulations Restricting the Sale and Distribution of Cigarettes and Smokeless Tobacco Products to Protect Children and Adolescents" (60 Fed. Reg. 41314–41372 (August 11, 1995)).

(2) The document titled "Nicotine in Cigarettes and Smokeless Tobacco Products is a Drug and These Products Are Nicotine Delivery Devices Under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act" (60 Fed. Reg. 41453–41787 (August 11, 1995)).

(3) The preamble to the final rule in the document titled "Regulations Restricting the Sale and Distribution of Cigarettes and Smokeless Tobacco to Protect Children and Adolescents" (61 Fed. Reg. 44396–44615 (August 28, 1996)).

(4) The document titled "Nicotine in Cigarettes and Smokeless Tobacco is a Drug and These Products are Nicotine Delivery Devices Under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act; Jurisdictional Determination" (61 Fed. Reg. 44619–45318 (August 28, 1996)).

SEC. 103. CONFORMING AND OTHER AMENDMENTS TO GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL FOOD, DRUG, AND COSMETIC ACT.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this section an amendment is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference is to a section or other provision of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.).

(b) SECTION 301.—Section 301 (21 U.S.C. 331) is amended—

(8) in subsection (k), by inserting “tobacco product,” after “device.”;

(9) by striking subsection (p) and inserting the following:

“(p) The failure to register in accordance with section 510 or 905, the failure to provide any information required by section 510(j), 510(k), 905(i), or 905(j), or the failure to provide a notice required by section 510(g)(2) or 905(i)(3).”;

(10) by striking subsection (q)(1) and inserting the following:

“(q)(1) The failure or refusal—

(A) to comply with any requirement prescribed under section 518, 520(g), 903(b), 907, 908, or 915;

(B) to furnish any notification or other material or information required by or under section 519, 520(g), 904, 909, or 920; or

(C) to comply with a requirement under section 522 or 913.”;

(11) in subsection (q)(2), by striking “device,” and inserting “device or tobacco product.”;

(12) in subsection (r), by inserting “or tobacco product” after the term “device” each time that such term appears; and

(13) by adding at the end the following:

“(oo) The sale of tobacco products in violation of a no-tobacco-sale order issued under section 303(f).”

“(pp) The introduction or delivery for introduction into interstate commerce of a tobacco product in violation of section 911.

“(qq)(1) Forging, counterfeiting, simulating, or falsely representing, or without proper authority using any mark, stamp (including tax stamp), tag, label, or other identification device upon any tobacco product or container or labeling thereof so as to render such tobacco product a counterfeit tobacco product.

“(2) Making, selling, disposing of, or keeping in possession, control, or custody, or concealing any punch, die, plate, stone, or other item that is designed to print, imprint, or reproduce the trademark, trade name, or other identifying mark, imprint, or device of another or any likeness of any of the foregoing upon any tobacco product or container or labeling thereof so as to render such tobacco product a counterfeit tobacco product.

“(3) The doing of any act that causes a tobacco product to be a counterfeit tobacco product, or the sale or dispensing, or the holding for sale or dispensing, of a counterfeit tobacco product.

“(rr) The charitable distribution of tobacco products.

“(ss) The failure of a manufacturer or distributor to notify the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury of their knowledge of tobacco products used in illicit trade.

“(tt) Making any express or implied statement or representation directed to consumers with respect to a tobacco product, in a label or labeling or through the media or advertising, that either conveys, or misleads or would mislead consumers into believing, that—

“(1) the product is approved by the Food and Drug Administration;

“(2) the Food and Drug Administration deems the product to be safe for use by consumers;

“(3) the product is endorsed by the Food and Drug Administration for use by consumers; or “(4) the product is safe or less harmful by virtue of—

(A) its regulation or inspection by the Food and Drug Administration; or

(B) its compliance with regulatory requirements set by the Food and Drug Administration; including any such statement or representation rendering the product misbranded under section 903.”.

(c) SECTION 303.—Section 303(f) (21 U.S.C. 333(f)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (5)—

(A) by striking “paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4)” each place such appears and inserting “paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (9)”;

(B) in subparagraph (A)—

(i) by striking “assessed” the first time it appears and inserting “assessed, or a no-tobacco-sale order may be imposed.”;

(ii) by striking “penalty” the second time it appears and inserting “penalty, or upon whom a no-tobacco-sale order is to be imposed.”;

(C) in subparagraph (B)—

(i) by inserting after “penalty,” the following: “or the period to be covered by a no-tobacco-sale order.”; and

(ii) by adding at the end the following: “A no-tobacco-sale order permanently prohibiting an individual retail outlet from selling tobacco products shall include provisions that allow the outlet, after a specified period of time, to request that the Secretary compromise, modify, or terminate the order.”; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

“(D) The Secretary may compromise, modify, or terminate, with or without conditions, any no-tobacco-sale order.”;

(2) in paragraph (6)—

(A) by inserting “or the imposition of a no-tobacco-sale order” after the term “penalty” each place such term appears; and

(B) by striking “issued.” and inserting “issued, or on which the no-tobacco-sale order was imposed, as the case may be.”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(8) If the Secretary finds that a person has committed repeated violations of restrictions promulgated under section 906(d) at a particular retail outlet then the Secretary may impose a no-tobacco-sale order on that person prohibiting the sale of tobacco products in that outlet. A no-tobacco-sale order may be imposed with a civil penalty under paragraph (1). Prior to the entry of a no-sale order under this paragraph, a person shall be entitled to a hearing pursuant to the procedures established through regulations of the Food and Drug Administration for assessing civil money penalties, including at a retailer’s request a hearing by telephone, or at the nearest regional or field office of the Food and Drug Administration, or at a Federal, State, or county facility within 100 miles from the location of the retail outlet, if such a facility is available.

“(9) CIVIL MONETARY PENALTIES FOR VIOLATION OF TOBACCO PRODUCT REQUIREMENTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), any person who violates a requirement of this Act which relates to tobacco products shall be liable to the United States for a civil penalty in an amount not to exceed $15,000 for each such violation, and not to exceed $1,000,000 for all such violations adjudicated in a single proceeding.

“(B) ENHANCED PENALTIES.—

“(i) Any person who intentionally violates a requirement of section 902(5), 902(6), 904, 908(c), or 911(a), shall be subject to a civil monetary penalty of—

“(I) not to exceed $250,000 per violation, and not to exceed $1,000,000 for all such violations adjudicated in a single proceeding; or

“(II) in the case of a violation that continues after the Secretary provides written notice to such person, $250,000 for the first 30-day period (or any portion thereof) that the person continues to be in violation, and such amount shall double for every 30-day period thereafter that the violation continues, not to exceed $1,000,000 for any 30-day period, and not to exceed $10,000,000 for all such violations adjudicated in a single proceeding.

“(ii) Any person who violates a requirement of section 911(g)(2)(C)(ii) or 911(i)(1), shall be subject to a civil monetary penalty of—

“(I) not to exceed $250,000 per violation, and not to exceed $1,000,000 for all such violations adjudicated in a single proceeding; or

“(II) in the case of a violation that continues after the Secretary provides written notice to such person, $250,000 for the first 30-day period (or any portion thereof) that the person continues to be in violation, and such amount shall double for every 30-day period thereafter that the violation continues, not to exceed $1,000,000 for any 30-day period, and not to exceed $10,000,000 for all such violations adjudicated in a single proceeding.

“(iii) In determining the amount of a civil penalty under clause (i)(II) or (ii)(II), the Secretary shall take into consideration whether the person is making efforts toward correcting the violation of the requirements of the section for which such person is subject to such civil penalty.”.

(d) SECTION 304.—Section 304 (21 U.S.C. 334) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2)—

(o) SECTION 409 OF THE FEDERAL MEAT INSPECTION ACT.—Section 409(a) of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 679(a)) is amended by striking “section 902(b)” and inserting “section 1002(b)”.

(p) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section is intended or shall be construed to expand, contract, or otherwise modify or amend the existing limitations on State government authority over tribal restricted fee or trust lands.

(q) GUIDANCE AND EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall issue guidance—

(A) defining the term “repeated violation”, as used in section 303(f)(8) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 333(f)(8)) as amended by subsection (e), as including at least 5 violations of particular requirements over a 36-month period at a particular retail outlet that constitute a repeated violation and providing for civil penalties in accordance with paragraph (2);

(B) providing for timely and effective notice by certified or registered mail or personal delivery to the retailer of each alleged violation at a particular retail outlet prior to conducting a followup compliance check, such notice to be sent to the location specified on the retailer’s registration or to the retailer’s registered agent if the retailer has provided such agent information to the Food and Drug Administration prior to the violation;

(C) providing for a hearing pursuant to the procedures established through regulations of the Food and Drug Administration for assessing civil money penalties, including at a retailer’s request a hearing by telephone or at the nearest regional or field office of the Food and Drug Administration, and providing for an expedited procedure for the administrative appeal of an alleged violation;

(D) providing that a person may not be charged with a violation at a particular retail outlet unless the Secretary has provided notice to the retailer of all previous violations at that outlet;

(E) establishing that civil money penalties for multiple violations shall increase from one violation to the next violation pursuant to paragraph (2) within the time periods provided for in such paragraph;

(F) providing that good faith reliance on the presentation of a false government-issued photographic identification that contains a date of birth does not constitute a violation of any minimum age requirement for the sale of tobacco products if the retailer has taken effective steps to prevent such violations, including—

(i) adopting and enforcing a written policy against sales to minors;

(ii) informing its employees of all applicable laws;

(iii) establishing disciplinary sanctions for employee noncompliance; and

(iv) requiring its employees to verify age by way of photographic identification or electronic scanning device; and

(G) providing for the Secretary, in determining whether to impose a no-tobacco-sale order and in determining whether to compromise, modify, or terminate such an order, to consider whether the retailer has taken effective steps to prevent violations of the minimum age requirements for the sale of tobacco products, including the steps listed in subparagraph (F).

(2) PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount of the civil penalty to be applied for violations of restrictions promulgated under section 906(d), as described in paragraph (1), shall be as follows:

(i) With respect to a retailer with an approved training program, the amount of the civil penalty shall not exceed—

(I) in the case of the first violation, $0.00 together with the issuance of a warning letter to the retailer;

(II) in the case of a second violation within a 12-month period, $250;

(III) in the case of a third violation within a 24-month period, $500;

(IV) in the case of a fourth violation within a 24-month period, $2,000;

(V) in the case of a fifth violation within a 36-month period, $5,000; and

(VI) in the case of a sixth or subsequent violation within a 48-month period, $10,000 as determined by the Secretary on a case-by-case basis.

(ii) With respect to a retailer that does not have an approved training program, the amount of the civil penalty shall not exceed—

(I) in the case of the first violation, $250;

(II) in the case of a second violation within a 12-month period, $500;

(III) in the case of a third violation within a 24-month period, $1,000;

(IV) in the case of a fourth violation within a 24-month period, $2,000;

(V) in the case of a fifth violation within a 36-month period, $5,000; and

(VI) in the case of a sixth or subsequent violation within a 48-month period, $10,000 as determined by the Secretary on a case-by-case basis.

(B) TRAINING PROGRAM.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term “approved training program” means a training program that complies with standards developed by the Food and Drug Administration for such programs.

(C) CONSIDERATION OF STATE PENALTIES.—The Secretary shall coordinate with the States in enforcing the provisions of this Act and, for purposes of mitigating a civil penalty to be applied for a violation by a retailer of any restriction promulgated under section 906(d), shall consider the amount of any penalties paid by the retailer to a State for the same violation.

(3) GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of subsection (c) shall take effect upon the issuance of guidance described in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(4) SPECIAL EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (c)(1) shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(5) PACKAGE LABEL REQUIREMENTS.—The package label requirements of paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 903(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (as amended by this division) shall take effect on the date that is 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act. The package label requirements of paragraph (2) of such section 903(a) for cigarettes shall take effect on the date that is 15 months after the issuance of the regulations required by section 4(d) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333), as amended by section 201 of this division. The package label requirements of paragraph (2) of such section 903(a) for tobacco products other than cigarettes shall take effect on the date that is 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act. The effective date shall be with respect to the date of manufacture, provided that, in any case, beginning 30 days after such effective date, a manufacturer shall not introduce into the domestic commerce of the United States any product, irrespective of the date of manufacture, that is not in conformance with section 903(a) (2), (3), and (4) and section 920(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

(6) ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS.—The advertising requirements of section 903(a)(8) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (as amended by this division) shall take effect on the date that is 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 104. STUDY ON RAISING THE MINIMUM AGE TO PURCHASE TOBACCO PRODUCTS.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall—

(1) convene an expert panel to conduct a study on the public health implications of raising the minimum age to purchase tobacco products; and

(2) not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, submit a report to the Congress on the results of such study.

SEC. 105. ENFORCEMENT ACTION PLAN FOR ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION RESTRICTIONS.

(a) ACTION PLAN.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (in this section referred to as the “Secretary”) shall develop and publish an action plan to enforce restrictions adopted pursuant to section 906 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by section 101(b) of this division, or pursuant to section 102(a) of this division, on promotion and advertising of menthol and other cigarettes to youth.

(2) CONSULTATION.—The action plan required by paragraph (1) shall be developed in consultation with public health organizations and other stakeholders with demonstrated expertise and experience in serving minority communities.

(3) PRIORITY.—The action plan required by paragraph (1) shall include provisions designed to ensure enforcement of the restrictions described in paragraph (1) in minority communities.

(b) STATE AND LOCAL ACTIVITIES.—

(1) INFORMATION ON AUTHORITY.—Not later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall inform State, local, and tribal governments of the authority provided to such entities under section 5(c) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, as added by section 203 of this division, or preserved by such entities under section 916 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by section 101(b) of this division.

(2) COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE.—At the request of communities seeking assistance to prevent underage tobacco use, the Secretary shall provide such assistance, including assistance with strategies to address the prevention of underage tobacco use in communities with a disproportionate use of menthol cigarettes by minors.

SEC. 106. STUDIES OF PROGRESS AND EFFECTIVENESS.

(a) FDA REPORT.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, and not less than every 2 years thereafter, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, a report concerning—

(1) the progress of the Food and Drug Administration in implementing this division, including major accomplishments, objective measurements of progress, and the identification of any areas that have not been fully implemented;

(2) impediments identified by the Food and Drug Administration to progress in implementing this division and to meeting statutory timeframes;

(3) data on the number of new product applications received under section 910 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and modified risk product applications received under section 911 of such Act, and the number of applications acted on under each category; and

(4) data on the number of full time equivalents engaged in implementing this division.

(b) GAO REPORT.—Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of, and submit to the Committees described in subsection (a) a report concerning—

(1) the adequacy of the authority and resources provided to the Secretary of Health and Human Services for this division to carry out its goals and purposes; and

(2) any recommendations for strengthening that authority to more effectively protect the public health with respect to the manufacture, marketing, and distribution of tobacco products.

(c) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Comptroller General of the United States, respectively, shall make the reports required under subsection (a) and (b) available to the public, including by posting such reports on the respective Internet websites of the Food and Drug Administration and the Government Accountability Office.

TITLE II—TOBACCO PRODUCT WARNINGS; CONSTITUENT AND SMOKE CONSTITUENT DISCLOSURE

SEC. 201. CIGARETTE LABEL AND ADVERTISING WARNINGS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333) is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 4. LABELING.

“(a) LABEL REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, package, sell, offer to sell, distribute, or import for sale or distribution within the United States any cigarettes the package of which fails to bear, in accordance with the requirements of this section, one of the following labels:

“WARNING: Cigarettes are addictive.

“WARNING: Tobacco smoke can harm your children.

“WARNING: Cigarettes cause fatal lung disease.

“WARNING: Cigarettes cause cancer.

“WARNING: Cigarettes cause strokes and heart disease.

“WARNING: Smoking during pregnancy can harm your baby.

“WARNING: Smoking can kill you.

“WARNING: Tobacco smoke causes fatal lung disease in nonsmokers.

“WARNING: Quitting smoking now greatly reduces serious risks to your health.

“(2) PLACEMENT; TYPOGRAPHY; ETC.—Each label statement required by paragraph (1) shall be located in the upper portion of the front and rear panels of the package, directly on the package underneath the cellophane or other clear wrapping. Each label statement shall comprise the top 50 percent of the front and rear panels of the package. The word ‘WARNING’ shall appear in capital letters and all text shall be in conspicuous and legible 17-point type, unless the text of the label statement would occupy more than 70 percent of such area, in which case the text may be in a smaller conspicuous and legible type size, provided that at least 60 percent of such area is occupied by required text. The text shall be black on a white background, or white on a black background, in a manner that contrasts, by typography, layout, or color, with all other printed material on the package, in an alternating fashion under the plan submitted under subsection (c).

“(3) DOES NOT APPLY TO FOREIGN DISTRIBUTION.—The provisions of this subsection do not apply to a tobacco product manufacturer or distributor of cigarettes which does not manufacture, package, or import cigarettes for sale or distribution within the United States.

“(4) APPLICABILITY TO RETAILERS.—A retailer of cigarettes shall not be in violation of this subsection for packaging that—

“(A) contains a warning label;

“(B) is supplied to the retailer by a license- or permit-holding tobacco product manufacturer, importer, or distributor; and

“(C) is not altered by the retailer in a way that is material to the requirements of this subsection.

“(b) ADVERTISING REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—It shall be unlawful for any tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer of cigarettes to advertise or cause to be advertised within the United States any cigarette unless its advertising bears, in accordance with the requirements of this section, one of the labels specified in subsection (a).

“(2) TYPOGRAPHY, ETC.—Each label statement required by subsection (a) in cigarette advertising shall comply with the standards set forth in this paragraph. For press and poster advertisements, each such statement and (where applicable) any required statement relating to tar, nicotine, or other constituent (including a smoke constituent) yield shall comprise at least 20 percent of the area of the advertisement and shall appear in a conspicuous and prominent format and location at the top of each advertisement within the trim area. The Secretary may revise the required type sizes in such area in such manner as the Secretary determines appropriate. The word ‘WARNING’ shall appear in capital letters, and each label statement shall appear in conspicuous and legible type. The text of the label statement shall be black if the background is white and white if the background is black, under the plan submitted under subsection (c). The label statements shall be enclosed by a rectangular border that is the same color as the letters of the statements and that is the width of the first downstroke of the capital ‘W’ of the word ‘WARNING’ in the label statements. The text of such label statements shall be in a typeface pro rata to the following requirements: 45-point type for a whole-page broadsheet newspaper advertisement; 39-point type for a half-page broadsheet newspaper advertisement; 39-point type for a whole-page tabloid newspaper advertisement; 27-point type for a half-page tabloid newspaper advertisement; 31.5-point type for a double page spread magazine or whole-page magazine advertisement; 22.5-point type for a 28 centimeter by 3 column advertisement; and 15-point type for a 20 centimeter by 2 column advertisement. The label statements shall be in English, except that—

“(A) in the case of an advertisement that appears in a newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other publication that is not in English, the statements shall appear in the predominant language of the publication; and “(B) in the case of any other advertisement that is not in English, the statements shall appear in the same language as that principally used in the advertisement.

“(3) MATCHBOOKS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), for matchbooks (defined as containing not more than 20 matches) customarily given away with the purchase of tobacco products, each label statement required by subsection (a) may be printed on the inside cover of the matchbook.

“(4) ADJUSTMENT BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may, through a rulemaking under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, adjust the format and type sizes for the label statements required by this section; the text, format, and type sizes of any required tar, nicotine yield, or other constituent (including smoke constituent) disclosures; or the text, format, and type sizes for any other disclosures required under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. The text of any such label statements or disclosures shall be required to appear only within the 20 percent area of cigarette advertisements provided by paragraph (2). The Secretary shall promulgate regulations which provide for adjustments in the format and type sizes of any text required to appear in such area to ensure that the total text required to appear by law will fit within such area.

“(c) MARKETING REQUIREMENTS.—

“(1) RANDOM DISPLAY.—The label statements specified in subsection (a)(1) shall be randomly displayed in each 12-month period, in as equal a number of times as is possible on each brand of the product and be randomly distributed in all areas of the United States in which the product is marketed in accordance with a plan submitted by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer and approved by the Secretary.

“(2) ROTATION.—The label statements specified in subsection (a)(1) shall be rotated quarterly in alternating sequence in advertisements for each brand of cigarettes in accordance with a plan submitted by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer to, and approved by, the Secretary.

“(3) REVIEW.—The Secretary shall review each plan submitted under paragraph (2) and approve it if the plan—

“(A) will provide for the equal distribution and display on packaging and the rotation required in advertising under this subsection; and

“(B) assures that all of the labels required under this section will be displayed by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer at the same time.

“(4) APPLICABILITY TO RETAILERS.—This subsection and subsection (b) apply to a retailer only if that retailer is responsible for or directs the label statements required under this section except that this paragraph shall not relieve a retailer of liability if the retailer displays, in a location open to the public, an advertisement that does not contain a warning label or has been altered by the retailer in a way that is material to the requirements of this subsection and subsection (b).

“(d) GRAPHIC LABEL STATEMENTS.—Not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the Secretary shall issue regulations that require color graphics depicting the negative health consequences of smoking to accompany the label statements specified in subsection (a)(1). The Secretary may adjust the type size, text and format of the label statements specified in subsections (a)(2) and (b)(2) as the Secretary determines appropriate so that both the graphics and the accompanying label statements are clear, conspicuous, legible and appear within the specified area.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect 15 months after the issuance of the regulations required by subsection (a). Such effective date shall be with respect to the date of manufacture, provided that, in any case, beginning 30 days after such effective date, a manufacturer shall not introduce into the domestic commerce of the United States any product, irrespective of the date of manufacture, that is not in conformance with section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333), as amended by subsection (a).

SEC. 202. AUTHORITY TO REVISE CIGARETTE WARNING LABEL STATEMENTS.

(a) PREEMPTION.—Section 5(a) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1334(a)) is amended by striking “No” and inserting “Except to the extent the Secretary requires additional or different statements on any cigarette package by a regulation, by an order, by a standard, by an authorization to market a product, or by a condition of marketing a product, pursuant to the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act (and the amendments made by that Act), or as required under section 903(a)(2) or section 920(a) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, no”.

(b) CHANGE IN REQUIRED STATEMENTS.—Section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333), as amended by section 201, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

“(d) CHANGE IN REQUIRED STATEMENTS.—The Secretary through a rulemaking conducted under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, may adjust the format, type size, color graphics, and text of any of the label requirements, or establish the format, type size, and text of any other disclosures required under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, if the Secretary finds that such a change would promote greater public understanding of the risks associated with the use of tobacco products.”

SEC. 203. STATE REGULATION OF CIGARETTE ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION.

Section 5 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1334) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(c) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subsection (b), a State or locality may enact statutes and promulgate regulations, based on smoking and health, that take effect after the effective date of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, imposing specific bans or restrictions on the time, place, and manner, but not content, of the advertising or promotion of any cigarettes.”

SEC. 204. SMOKELESS TOBACCO LABELS AND ADVERTISING WARNINGS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 3 of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 (15 U.S.C. 4402) is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 3. SMOKELESS TOBACCO WARNING.

“(a) GENERAL RULE.—

“(1) It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, package, sell, offer to sell, distribute, or import for sale or distribution within the United States any smokeless tobacco product unless the product package bears, in accordance with the requirements of this Act, one of the following labels:

“WARNING: This product can cause mouth cancer.

“WARNING: This product can cause gum disease and tooth loss.

“WARNING: This product is not a safe alternative to cigarettes.

“WARNING: Smokeless tobacco is addictive.

“(2) Each label statement required by paragraph (1) shall be—

“(A) located on the 2 principal display panels of the package, and each label statement shall comprise at least 30 percent of each such display panel; and

“(B) in 17-point conspicuous and legible type and in black text on a white background, or white text on a black background, in a manner that contrasts by typography, layout, or color, with all other printed material on the package, in an alternating fashion under the plan submitted under subsection (b)(3), except that if the text of a label statement would occupy more than 70 percent of the area specified by subparagraph (A), such text may appear in a smaller type size, so long as at least 60 percent of such warning area is occupied by the label statement.

“(3) The label statements required by paragraph (1) shall be introduced by each tobacco product manufacturer, packager, importer, distributor, or retailer of smokeless tobacco products concurrently into the distribution chain of such products.

“(4) The provisions of this subsection do not apply to a tobacco product manufacturer or distributor of any smokeless tobacco product that does not manufacture, package, or import smokeless tobacco products for sale or distribution within the United States.

“(5) A retailer of smokeless tobacco products shall not be in violation of this subsection for packaging that—

“(A) contains a warning label;

“(B) is supplied to the retailer by a license- or permit-holding tobacco product manufacturer, importer, or distributor; and

“(C) is not altered by the retailer in a way that is material to the requirements of this subsection.

“(b) REQUIRED LABELS.—

“(1) It shall be unlawful for any tobacco product manufacturer, packager, importer, distributor, or retailer of smokeless tobacco products to advertise or cause to be advertised within the United States any smokeless tobacco product unless its advertising bears, in accordance with the requirements of this section, one of the labels specified in subsection (a).

“(2)(A) Each label statement required by subsection (a) in smokeless tobacco advertising shall comply with the standards set forth in this paragraph.

“(B) For press and poster advertisements, each such statement and (where applicable) any required statement relating to tar, nicotine, or other constituent yield shall comprise at least 20 percent of the area of the advertisement.

“(C) The word ‘WARNING’ shall appear in capital letters, and each label statement shall appear in conspicuous and legible type.

“(D) The text of the label statement shall be black on a white background, or white on a black background, in an alternating fashion under the plan submitted under paragraph (3).

“(E) The label statements shall be enclosed by a rectangular border that is the same color as the letters of the statements and that is the width of the first downstroke of the capital ‘W’ of the word ‘WARNING’ in the label statements.

“(F) The text of such label statements shall be in a typeface pro rata to the following requirements: 45-point type for a whole-page broadsheet newspaper advertisement; 39-point type for a half-page broadsheet newspaper advertisement; 39-point type for a whole-page tabloid newspaper advertisement; 27-point type for a half-page tabloid newspaper advertisement; 31.5-point type for a double page spread magazine or whole-page magazine advertisement; 22.5-point type for a 28 centimeter by 3 column advertisement; and 15-point type for a 20 centimeter by 2 column advertisement.

“(G) The label statements shall be in English, except that—“(i) in the case of an advertisement that appears in a newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other publication that is not in English, the statements shall appear in the predominant language of the publication; and

“(ii) in the case of any other advertisement that is not in English, the statements shall appear in the same language as that principally used in the advertisement.

“(3)(A) The label statements specified in subsection (a)(1) shall be randomly displayed in each 12-month period, in as equal a number of times as is possible on each brand of the product and be randomly distributed in all areas of the United States in which the product is marketed in accordance with a plan submitted by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer and approved by the Secretary.

“(B) The label statements specified in subsection (a)(1) shall be rotated quarterly in alternating sequence in advertisements for each brand of smokeless tobacco product in accordance with a plan submitted by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer to, and approved by, the Secretary.

“(C) The Secretary shall review each plan submitted under subparagraphs (A) and (B) and approve it if the plan—

“(i) will provide for the equal distribution and display on packaging and the rotation required in advertising under this subsection; and

“(ii) assures that all of the labels required under this section will be displayed by the tobacco product manufacturer, importer, distributor, or retailer at the same time.

“(D) This paragraph applies to a retailer only if that retailer is responsible for or directs the label statements under this section, unless the retailer displays, in a location open to the public, an advertisement that does not contain a warning label or has been altered by the retailer in a way that is material to the requirements of this subsection.

“(4) The Secretary may, through a rulemaking under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, adjust the format and type sizes for the label statements required by this section; the text, format, and type sizes of any required tar, nicotine yield, or other constituent disclosures; or the text, format, and type sizes for any other disclosures required under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. The text of any such label statements or disclosures shall be required to appear only within the 20 percent area of advertisements provided by paragraph (2). The Secretary shall promulgate regulations which provide for adjustments in the format and type sizes of any text required to appear in such area to ensure that the total text required to appear by law will fit within such area.

“(c) TELEVISION AND RADIO ADVERTISING.—It is unlawful to advertise smokeless tobacco on any medium of electronic communications subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Communications Commission.”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act. Such effective date shall be with respect to the date of manufacture, provided that, in any case, beginning 30 days after such effective date, a manufacturer shall not introduce into the domestic commerce of the United States any product, irrespective of the date of manufacture, that is not in conformance with section 3 of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 (15 U.S.C. 4402), as amended by subsection (a).

SEC. 205. AUTHORITY TO REVISE SMOKELESS TOBACCO PRODUCT WARNING LABEL STATEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3 of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 (15 U.S.C. 4402), as amended by section 204, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

“(d) AUTHORITY TO REVISE WARNING LABEL STATEMENTS.—The Secretary may, by a rulemaking conducted under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, adjust the format, type size, and text of any of the label requirements, require color graphics to accompany the text, increase the required label area from 30 percent up to 50 percent of the front and rear panels of the package, or establish the format, type size, and text of any other disclosures required under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, if the Secretary finds that such a change would promote greater public understanding of the risks associated with the use of smokeless tobacco products.”.

(b) PREEMPTION.—Section 7(a) of the Comprehensive Smokeless Tobacco Health Education Act of 1986 (15 U.S.C. 4406(a)) is amended by striking “No” and inserting “Except as provided in the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act (and the amendments made by that Act), no”.

SEC. 206. TAR, NICOTINE, AND OTHER SMOKE CONSTITUENT DISCLOSURE TO THE PUBLIC.

Section 4 of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333), as amended by sections 201 and 202, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

“(e) TAR, NICOTINE, AND OTHER SMOKE CONSTITUENT DISCLOSURE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, by a rulemaking conducted under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, determine (in the Secretary’s sole discretion) whether cigarette and other tobacco product manufacturers shall be required to include in the area of each cigarette advertisement specified by subsection (b) of this section, or on the package label, or both, the tar and nicotine yields of the advertised or packaged brand. Any such disclosure shall be in accordance with the methodology established under such regulations, shall conform to the type size requirements of subsection (b) of this section, and shall appear within the area specified in subsection (b) of this section.

“(2) RESOLUTION OF DIFFERENCES.—Any differences between the requirements established by the Secretary under paragraph (1) and tar and nicotine yield reporting requirements established by the Federal Trade Commission shall be resolved by a memorandum of understanding between the Secretary and the Federal Trade Commission.

“(3) CIGARETTE AND OTHER TOBACCO PRODUCT CONSTITUENTS.—In addition to the disclosures required by paragraph (1), the Secretary may, under a rulemaking conducted under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, prescribe disclosure requirements regarding the level of any cigarette or other tobacco product constituent including any smoke constituent. Any such disclosure may be required if the Secretary determines that disclosure would be of benefit to the public health, or otherwise would increase consumer awareness of the health consequences of the use of tobacco products, except that no such prescribed disclosure shall be required on the face of any cigarette package or advertisement. Nothing in this section shall prohibit the Secretary from requiring such prescribed disclosure through a cigarette or other tobacco product package or advertisement insert, or by any other means under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

“(4) RETAILERS.—This subsection applies to a retailer only if that retailer is responsible for or directs the label statements required under this section.”.

TITLE III—PREVENTION OF ILLICIT TRADE IN TOBACCO PRODUCTS

SEC. 301. LABELING, RECORDKEEPING, RECORDS INSPECTION.

Chapter IX of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by section 101, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 920. LABELING, RECORDKEEPING, RECORDS INSPECTION.

“(a) ORIGIN LABELING.—

“(1) REQUIREMENT.—Beginning 1 year after the date of enactment of the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the label, packaging, and shipping containers of tobacco products other than cigarettes for introduction or delivery for introduction into interstate commerce in the United States shall bear the statement ‘sale only allowed in the United States’. Beginning 15 months after the issuance of the regulations required by section 4(d) of the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act (15 U.S.C. 1333), as amended by section 201 of Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act, the label, packaging, and shipping containers of cigarettes for introduction or delivery for introduction into interstate commerce in the United States shall bear the statement ‘Sale only allowed in the United States’.

“(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The effective date specified in paragraph (1) shall be with respect to the date of manufacture, provided that, in any case, beginning 30 days after such effective date, a manufacturer shall not introduce into the domestic commerce of the United States any product, irrespective of the date of manufacture, that is not in conformance with such paragraph.

“(b) REGULATIONS CONCERNING RECORDKEEPING FOR TRACKING AND TRACING.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall promulgate regulations regarding the establishment and maintenance of records by any person who manufactures, processes, transports, distributes, receives, packages, holds, exports, or imports tobacco products.

“(2) INSPECTION.—In promulgating the regulations described in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consider which records are needed for inspection to monitor the movement of tobacco products from the point of manufacture through distribution to retail outlets to assist in investigating potential illicit trade, smuggling, or counterfeiting of tobacco products.

“(3) CODES.—The Secretary may require codes on the labels of tobacco products or other designs or devices for the purpose of tracking or tracing the tobacco product through the distribution system.

“(4) SIZE OF BUSINESS.—The Secretary shall take into account the size of a business in promulgating regulations under this section.

“(5) RECORDKEEPING BY RETAILERS.—The Secretary shall not require any retailer to maintain records relating to individual purchasers of tobacco products for personal consumption.

“(c) RECORDS INSPECTION.—If the Secretary has a reasonable belief that a tobacco product is part of an illicit trade or smuggling or is a counterfeit product, each person who manufactures, processes, transports, distributes, receives, holds, packages, exports, or imports tobacco products shall, at the request of an officer or employee duly designated by the Secretary, permit such officer or employee, at reasonable times and within reasonable limits and in a reasonable manner, upon the presentation of appropriate credentials and a written notice to such person, to have access to and copy all records (including financial records) relating to such article that are needed to assist the Secretary in investigating potential illicit trade, smuggling, or counterfeiting of tobacco products. The Secretary shall not authorize an officer or employee of the government of any of the several States to exercise authority under the preceding sentence on Indian country without the express written consent of the Indian tribe involved.

“(d) KNOWLEDGE OF ILLEGAL TRANSACTION.—

“(1) NOTIFICATION.—If the manufacturer or distributor of a tobacco product has knowledge which reasonably supports the conclusion that a tobacco product manufactured or distributed by such manufacturer or distributor that has left the control of such person may be or has been—

“(A) imported, exported, distributed, or offered for sale in interstate commerce by a person without paying duties or taxes required by law; or

“(B) imported, exported, distributed, or diverted for possible illicit marketing, the manufacturer or distributor shall promptly notify the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury of such knowledge.

“(2) KNOWLEDGE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘knowledge’ as applied to a manufacturer or distributor means—

“(A) the actual knowledge that the manufacturer or distributor had; or “(B) the knowledge which a reasonable person would have had under like circumstances or which would have been obtained upon the exercise of due care.

“(e) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult with the Attorney General of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury, as appropriate.”.

SEC. 302. STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of cross-border trade in tobacco products to—

(1) collect data on cross-border trade in tobacco products, including illicit trade and trade of counterfeit tobacco products and make recommendations on the monitoring of such trade;

(2) collect data on cross-border advertising (any advertising intended to be broadcast, transmitted, or distributed from the United States to another country) of tobacco products and make recommendations on how to prevent or eliminate, and what technologies could help facilitate the elimination of, cross-border advertising; and

(3) collect data on the health effects (particularly with respect to individuals under 18 years of age) resulting from cross-border trade in tobacco products, including the health effects resulting from—

(A) the illicit trade of tobacco products and the trade of counterfeit tobacco products; and
(B) the differing tax rates applicable to tobacco products.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report on the study described in subsection (a).

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section:

(1) The term “cross-border trade” means trade across a border of the United States, a State or Territory, or Indian country.

(2) The term “Indian country” has the meaning given to such term in section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

(3) The terms “State” and “Territory” have the meanings given to those terms in section 201 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321).

“§8432d. Qualified Roth contribution program

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

“(1) the term ‘qualified Roth contribution program’ means a program described in paragraph (1) of section 402A(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which meets the requirements of paragraph (2) of such section; and

“(2) the terms ‘designated Roth contribution’ and ‘elective deferral’ have the meanings given such terms in section 402A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

“(b) AUTHORITY TO ESTABLISH.—The Executive Director shall by regulation provide for the inclusion in the Thrift Savings Plan of a qualified Roth contribution program, under such terms and conditions as the Board may prescribe.

“(c) REQUIRED PROVISIONS.—The regulations under subsection (b) shall include—

“(1) provisions under which an election to make designated Roth contributions may be made—

“(A) by any individual who is eligible to make contributions under section 8351, 8432(a), 8440a, 8440b, 8440c, 8440d, or 8440e; and

“(B) by any individual, not described in subparagraph (A), who is otherwise eligible to make elective deferrals under the Thrift Savings Plan;

“(2) any provisions which may, as a result of enactment of this section, be necessary in order to clarify the meaning of any reference to an ‘account’ made in section 8432(f), 8433, 8434(d), 8435, 8437, or any other provision of law; and

“(3) any other provisions which may be necessary to carry out this section.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 8432c the following:

“8432d. Qualified Roth contribution program.”.

SEC. 104. AUTHORITY TO ESTABLISH MUTUAL FUND WINDOW.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 8438(b)(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (D), by striking “and” at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (E), by striking the period and inserting “; and”; and

(3) by adding after subparagraph (E) the following:

“(F) a service that enables participants to invest in mutual funds, if the Board authorizes the mutual fund window under paragraph (5).”.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—Section 8438(b) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(5)(A) The Board may authorize the addition of a mutual fund window under the Thrift Savings Plan if the Board determines that such addition would be in the best interests of participants.

“(B) The Board shall ensure that any expenses charged for use of the mutual fund window are borne solely by the participants who use such window.

“(C) The Board may establish such other terms and conditions for the mutual fund window as the Board considers appropriate to protect the interests of participants, including requirements relating to risk disclosure.

“(D) The Board shall consult with the Employee Thrift Advisory Council (established under section 8473) before authorizing the addition of a mutual fund window or establishing a service that enables participants to invest in mutual funds.”.

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 8438(d)(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting “and options” after “investment funds”.

SEC. 105. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Board shall, not later than June 30 of each year, submit to Congress an annual report on the operations of the Thrift Savings Plan. Such report shall include, for the prior calendar year, information on the number of participants as of the last day of such prior calendar year, the median balance in participants’ accounts as of such last day, demographic information on participants, the percentage allocation of amounts among investment funds or options, the status of the development and implementation of the mutual fund window, the diversity demographics of any company, investment adviser, or other entity retained to invest and manage the assets of the Thrift Savings Fund, and such other information as the Board considers appropriate. A copy of each annual report under this subsection shall be made available to the public through an Internet website.

(b) REPORTING OF FEES AND OTHER INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall include in the periodic statements provided to participants under section 8439(c) of title 5, United States Code, the amount of the investment management fees, administrative expenses, and any other fees or expenses paid with respect to each investment fund and option under the Thrift Savings Plan. Any such statement shall also provide a statement notifying participants as to how they may access the annual report described in subsection (a), as well as any other information concerning the Thrift Savings Plan that might be useful.

(2) USE OF ESTIMATES.—For purposes of providing the information required under this subsection, the Board may provide a reasonable and representative estimate of any fees or expenses described in paragraph (1) and shall indicate any such estimate as being such an estimate. Any such estimate shall be based on the previous year’s experience.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term “Board” has the meaning given such term by 8401(5) of title 5, United States Code;

(2) the term "participant" has the meaning given such term by section 8471(3) of title 5, United States Code; and

(3) the term "account" means an account established under section 8439 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 106. ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF RISK.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 8439(d) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the matter after "who elects to invest in" and before "shall sign an acknowledgment" and inserting "any investment fund or option under this chapter, other than the Government Securities Investment Fund,"; and

(2) by striking "either such Fund" and inserting "any such fund or option".

(b) COORDINATION WITH PROVISIONS RELATING TO FIDUCIARY RESPONSIBILITIES, LIABILITIES, AND PENALTIES.—Section 8477(e)(1)(C) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (C)(i); and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) A fiduciary shall not be liable under subparagraph (A), and no civil action may be brought against a fiduciary—

"(I) for providing for the automatic enrollment of a participant in accordance with section 8432(b)(2)(A);

"(II) for enrolling a participant in a default investment fund in accordance with section 8438(c)(2); or

"(III) for allowing a participant to invest through the mutual fund window or for establishing restrictions applicable to participants' ability to invest through the mutual fund window."

SEC. 107. SUBPOENA AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 8479 the following:

"§8480. Subpoena authority

"(a) In order to carry out the responsibilities specified in this subchapter and subchapter III of this chapter, the Executive Director may issue subpoenas commanding each person to whom the subpoena is directed to produce designated books, documents, records, electronically stored information, or tangible materials in the possession or control of that individual.

"(b) Notwithstanding any Federal, State, or local law, any person, including officers, agents, and employees, receiving a subpoena under this section, who complies in good faith with the subpoena and thus produces the materials sought, shall not be liable in any court of any State or the United States to any individual, domestic or foreign corporation or upon a partnership or other unincorporated association for such production.

"(c) When a person fails to obey a subpoena issued under this section, the district court of the United States for the district in which the investigation is conducted or in which the person failing to obey is found, shall on proper application issue an order directing that person to comply with the subpoena. The court may punish as contempt any disobedience of its order.

"(d) The Executive Director shall prescribe regulations to carry out subsection (a)."

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 8479 the following:

"§8480. Subpoena authority."

SEC. 108. AMOUNTS IN THRIFT SAVINGS FUNDS SUBJECT TO LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

Section 8437(e)(3) of title 5, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking "or relating to the enforcement of a judgment for the physically, sexually, or emotionally abusing a child as provided under section 8467(a)" and inserting "the enforcement of an order for restitution under section 3663A of title 18, forfeiture under section 8432(g)(5) of this title, or an obligation of the Executive Director to make a payment to another person under section 8467 of this title".

SEC. 109. ACCOUNTS FOR SURVIVING SPOUSES.

Section 8433(e) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(e)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) Notwithstanding section 8424(d), if an employee, Member, former employee, or former Member dies and has designated as sole or partial beneficiary his or her spouse at the time of death, or, if an employee, Member, former employee, or former Member, dies with no designated beneficiary and is survived by a spouse, the spouse may maintain the portion of the employee's or Member's account to which the spouse is entitled in accordance with the following terms:

"(A) Subject to the limitations of subparagraph (B), the spouse shall have the same withdrawal options under subsection (b) as the employee or Member were the employee or Member living.

"(B) The spouse may not make withdrawals under subsection (g) or (h).

"(C) The spouse may not make contributions or transfers to the account.

"(D) The account shall be disbursed upon the death of the surviving spouse. A beneficiary or surviving spouse of a deceased spouse who has inherited an account is ineligible to maintain the inherited spousal account.

"(3) The Executive Director shall prescribe regulations to carry out this subsection."

SEC. 110. TREATMENT OF MEMBERS OF THE UNIFORMED SERVICES UNDER THE THRIFT SAVINGS PLAN.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) members of the uniformed services should have a retirement system that is at least as generous as the one which is available to Federal civilian employees; and

(2) Federal civilian employees receive matching contributions from their employing agencies for their contributions to the Thrift Savings Fund, but the costs of requiring such a matching contribution from the Department of Defense could be significant.

(b) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall report to Congress on—

(1) the cost to the Department of Defense of providing a matching payment with respect to contributions made to the Thrift Savings Fund by members of the Armed Forces;

(2) the effect that requiring such a matching payment would have on recruitment and retention; and

(3) any other information that the Secretary of Defense considers appropriate.

TITLE II—SPECIAL SURVIVOR INDEMNITY ALLOWANCE FOR SURVIVING SPOUSES OF ARMED FORCES MEMBERS

SEC. 201. INCREASE IN MONTHLY AMOUNT OF SPECIAL SURVIVOR INDEMNITY ALLOWANCE FOR WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS OF DECEASED MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES AFFECTED BY REQUIRED SURVIVOR BENEFIT PLAN ANNUITY OFFSET FOR DEPENDENCY AND INDEMNITY COMPENSATION.

(a) PAYMENT AMOUNT PER FISCAL YEAR.—Paragraph (2) of section 1450(m) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (E), by striking "and" after the semicolon; and

(2) by striking subparagraph (F) and inserting the following new subparagraphs:

"(F) for months during fiscal year 2014, $150; "(G) for months during fiscal year 2015, $200; "(H) for months during fiscal year 2016, $275; and

"(I) for months during fiscal year 2017, $310."

(b) DURATION.—Paragraph (6) of such section is amended—

(1) by striking "February 28, 2016" and inserting "September 30, 2017"; and

(2) by striking "March 1, 2016" both places it appears and inserting "October 1, 2017".

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DURBIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, this will be the last vote of the week. We have a lot of work going on in the committees and that will continue on Monday. The next vote will be Tuesday morning. I will confer with the distinguished Republican leader as to what time we will do that and what it is going to be on for sure. We think we know, but there will be a vote Tuesday morning.

Everyone has been notified, but to make sure that people understand, when we come back after the July 4 recess, we are going to be in session for 5 weeks. The House will be in session for only 4 weeks. We have 5 weeks and we are going to work very hard during that period of time. I have had requests from the managers of the bill, the health care bill, Senator BAUCUS and DODD, that we need every day of that break so there is only going to be 1 day that there will be no votes—Mondays and Fridays there will be votes—which is Friday, July 17.

The first day we get back we are going to have a Monday morning vote, to show everybody we are serious about this. So the day we get back there will be a Monday morning vote. We have a tremendous amount of work to do. We not only have health care, which is going to take so much of our time, but we are in the appropriations process. The House is going to pass all their appropriations bills by the end of the July recess. I don't know if we can meet that schedule—it is somewhat doubtful—but we are going to pass some bills. We are going to try to get to one this work period.

Without going into more detail, the next work period is going to be extremely long, arduous, and extremely important.

I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the leader withhold his request for a quorum call?

Mr. REID. I withhold. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I wish to propound a unanimous consent request. I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to executive session to consider Calendar No. 97, the nomination of Hilary Chandler Tompkins to be Solicitor of the Department of Interior, the nomination be confirmed, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table with no further motion to be in order, that any statements related to the nomination be printed in the RECORD, and upon confirmation the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action and the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. With all due respect to my colleague from New Mexico, I am advised that the nomination has not yet been cleared on this side. We are going to keep working on it, but at this time I must object and I do object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is noted.

The majority leader is recognized.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I know my friend, the distinguished Senator from Texas, wishes to speak for up to 20 minutes, is that right?

Mr. CORNYN. That is my wish.

Mr. REID. We have Senators on this side. What I would ask consent to do is have Senator BINGAMAN be recognized for up to 3 minutes, Senator CORNYN be recognized for up to 20 minutes, and then I will be recognized following his statement. Following me, Senator DORGAN be recognized.

I ask we proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes, with the exceptions I noted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

NOMINATION OF HILARY CHANDLER TOMPKINS

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, let me state I am disappointed to see the objection still raised to the confirmation of Hilary Chandler Tompkins to be the Solicitor for the Department of Interior. She is extremely well qualified. No one has raised any question about her qualifications. Our former colleague, now Secretary Salazar, needs a Solicitor in the Department of Interior.

We reported her nomination out of our committee on April 30, nearly 6 weeks ago now. There has been something of a rolling hold on her nomination.

I know Senator BENNETT had an objection at one point; that has been satisfied. Senator COBURN had an objection; that has been satisfied. Senator BUNNING had an objection; that has been satisfied. Now I am informed there are additional objections.

I hope very much my colleagues on the Republican side will go ahead and approve her for confirmation quickly so that Secretary Salazar can get on with the important business of the Department of Interior.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I want to spend a few minutes talking about the importance and challenge of health care reform, something that is on the fast track in the Senate.

Recently, as I traveled my State of 24 million people, I heard many similar themes from my constituents. What they told me is that our top priority ought to be reducing the cost of health care because, of course, by reducing the cost it becomes more affordable by more people and we attack what is one of the other principal concerns, and certainly one of mine, and that is too many people who are uninsured in this country.

We know cost is one reason why 46 million people are not insured in this country, some of whom have good jobs that pay well, but if they are young they would rather put the money in their pocket than pay for health care. Others have different circumstances, maybe small businesses that are priced out of the market.

It is a fact that American families have seen their health care premiums double over the last 10 years. My constituents and the American people generally are also very concerned about our future. As they see so much borrowing and so much spending here in Washington, they worry about the fact that Medicare, which is the health care program for seniors, has an unfunded liability of $38 trillion. So, to understand, while we have roughly $2 trillion in annual deficits running, we also have $38 trillion in unfunded Federal liabilities for Medicare and the trust fund is anticipated to go insolvent by the year 2017, less than 8 years from now.

I appreciate the urgency of focusing on health care reform. We have been working under Chairman BAUCUS and Ranking Member GRASSLEY on the Finance Committee. I know other Senators have been working hard at this as well—Senator KENNEDY and Senator ENZI on the HELP Committee.

I urge us to keep working very hard to work through all the complexities and moving parts of this very challenging problem. I also want to say that I think how we discuss health care reform is very important, but I am also concerned that some voices are greeted with derision or even implicit threats that suggest they better keep quiet if they know what is good for them.

A tremendous amount of work has gone into the series of three Finance Committee roundtables and walk-throughs. But I am disturbed by some reports that perhaps Senators, certainly staff, have urged key stakeholders in the health care reform debate to keep their mouths shut. Every American citizen has a right to petition their government. This is a right every American citizen has, and no American should be told to keep quiet on the subject of health care reform, in particular. We know reforming health care is an urgent priority, as I said, and more than 300 million Americans have a stake in our success.

The Congress needs to take the time given the fact that this represents 17 percent of our gross domestic product and is so complex. We need to take the time and get the input from everyone who has something to offer as we undertake this massive task. We have a highly complex, $2.6 trillion system, and we need to take time to get the reforms done right. I am not talking about peddling in place, I am not talking about wasting time, I am talking about doing what the American people expect us to do; that is, get it right, not try to rush according to some arbitrary timetable.

So I am pleased to say that some stakeholders are standing up against this notion that this deal ought to be cut in a closed back room somewhere. The American Medical Association, for example, has announced its opposition to a government-run plan. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Federation Of Independent Businesses have expressed concerns about some aspects of the legislation that has been proposed by the President and by leadership here in Congress. But more voices, not less—indeed all voices—deserve to be heard on something of such fundamental importance to our country. The American people deserve a transparent and open debate about the reforms, the various proposals that are on the table, so they can judge for themselves whether Washington elites have their best interest in mind or, to the contrary, whether they believe something else is going on.

I also express my appreciation for the professionals at the Congressional Budget Office for refusing to compromise their integrity and for continuing to provide objective analysis of all reform proposals. That is their job. Their job is not to make policy, but it is their job to give us unvarnished, objective information about costs so we can determine what policy makes sense and what policies we can afford.

In particular, I commend the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, Dr. Doug Elmendorf, who I read was quoted as saying that the Congressional Budget Office “will never adjust our views to make people happy.” That demonstrates the kind of integrity and objectivity we would want to inform our decisions. We are the ones who are elected to make those decisions on the part of the American people. We are the ones who should be held accountable for those policies. But we have to get good, objective, unbiased information from professionals with integrity such as Dr. Elmendorf and his staff at the CBO.

Some, it has been suggested, do not like the big price tag the Congressional Budget Office has put on some of their proposals. But the solution is not for the Congressional Budget Office to get creative, it is for Senators to get real and deal with the reality and to use that information in order to craft decisions that work.

I wish to speak in particular about the only bill that has actually been rolled out, more or less, or provisions, and that is the bill proffered by our colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY.

Senator KENNEDY has been a leader in the health care reform debate for more than four decades. I appreciate the fact that he is the first Democrat on either end of Pennsylvania Avenue who has actually put out a proposal with some detail for us to evaluate and react to. While more details are certainly needed, and I hope they will be forthcoming, we already know there are some red lines, some hot spots, some areas that, if embraced by the Democratic leadership, will result in failure, not in success. I think we all should be invested in the goal of bipartisan success. In fact, there are some provisions in the Kennedy bill that would make things worse, in my view and in the view of others.

I think there is one thing we should do; that is, take the Hippocratic Oath, the same oath medical practitioners take to “do no harm.” I think we should take a legislative Hippocratic Oath to first do no harm as we undertake this massive reform. For example, in the Kennedy bill, it describes a plan called “a public health insurance plan operated by the Federal Government with a payment scale that is set in statute and based on Medicare.” I believe “Medicare for all” or a government-run health plan is a disaster in the making for the millions of Americans who will depend upon us to get this right. Let me explain why.

First, a government-run plan will ultimately take away the health insurance people have right now. Last year, President Obama campaigned on the promise that if you like what you have, you will be able to keep it. I agree with him. That ought to be our goal. But with a so-called government plan, that will not happen because we all know that the government is not just the regulator, but it is also the one paying the bills; that ultimately, the government cannot be calling the balls and strikes even as it takes to the field to be a so-called competitor.

Let me put a finer point on it. One group of analysts, the Lewin Group, said a government plan would take away, ultimately, current health benefits from 119 million Americans and force 130 million into a Washington-run health care plan. How does that happen? Well, ostensibly you would have the government competing with the private sector to provide health care. But we know the government ultimately would provide a more generous package and could do so, of course, at taxpayer expense and save the difficulty of having to compete in the marketplace. Ultimately, as the Lewin Group concluded, it would undercut private competitors, leaving people with no choices and ultimately leaving everyone, or at least 130 million Americans, on a Washington-run health care plan—not a good idea, in my opinion.

Secondly, we know a government plan would drive up costs for those who remain with private insurance. How does that happen? Well, we know there is a phenomenon in health care called cost shifting. That is because Medicare and Medicaid pay submarket rates and health care providers have to make it up somewhere else. Where do they make it up? They end up making it up from people who have insurance. And how do they do that? By people who have insurance paying more than they ultimately receive because the costs are literally shifted from Medicare and Medicaid onto private insurance.

According to a respected actuary, Milliman, commercial payers subsidize the cost of Medicare and Medicaid by nearly $90 billion a year in cost shifting. This represents a hidden tax on American families and small businesses. Milliman estimates that the average private health care premium is more than $1,500 higher per family, more than 10 percent higher than it would be without this government cost-shifting phenomenon. A new government program would increase this cost shifting dramatically and increase the health care premiums of every American family who continues on their private health insurance plan.

Third, we know this Medicare-for-all or government-run plan would basically be like Medicare and Medicaid on steroids. Lest anybody be confused, that is not a good thing. I believe Medicare illustrates what happens when the government takes over health care delivery. For example, first of all, it is not fiscally sustainable. As I mentioned, Medicare is going to go insolvent in 2017 and currently has $38 trillion in unfunded liabilities.

Low reimbursement rates—and frankly, that is how Medicare and Medicaid try to deal with costs. They cut payments to providers—hospitals and doctors—below the otherwise market rates. These low reimbursement rates reduce patient choice and increase wait times for the physicians they see. Many providers, as I am sure the distinguished occupant of the chair, in his State, knows—we know many doctors are not even taking new Medicare patients and new Medicaid patients because lower reimbursement rates are the problem. Every year, Congress has to come back and reverse the cuts to physician payments under the Medicare sustainable growth rate formula, and those cuts, unless we act to reverse them, will cut physician payments by 20 percent this January.

According to the Washington Post last fall, taxpayers also pay up to $60 billion a year in fraudulent claims on Medicare. So in addition to being fiscally unsustainable, in addition to rationing or providing unrealistically low payments, denying people access to health care, we have $60 billion in fraud and waste in the Medicare Program—hardly a model for Medicare, for a government-run option.

Well, Medicaid has even more problems. Medicaid provides coverage, but it does a poor job of providing access. In one way, this is really a ruse that is being perpetrated on the American people under Medicare and Medicaid. We say: Yes, you have coverage. But if you cannot find a doctor or a health care provider who will provide you access at that price, then their coverage does not do you any good.

According to a recent Wall Street Journal article, Medicaid’s low reimbursement rates, which are actually lower than Medicare, have resulted in 40 percent of physicians restricting access to patients in the program. So it is no wonder, as the journal Health Affairs said last month, that “physicians typically have been less willing to take on new Medicaid patients than patients covered by other types of health insurance.”

Medicaid reimbursement rates, as I said, are even lower than Medicare, more than 25 percent lower than Medicare. The story of Pediatrix Medical Group, which has a significant presence in my State, illustrates the problem.

Pediatrix has more than 1,300 physicians and 500 advanced practice nurses. They specialize in the care of newborns and other very vulnerable children. Pediatrix has noted that “the lack of appropriate reimbursement is among the common reasons for physicians to refuse to accept new Medicaid patients.” They have noted that within their own national neonatal and hospitalist patient population, the current government rates pay an average of 28.7 percent less than rates from private insurers. No wonder it is hard for Medicaid beneficiaries—notwithstanding what Congress does, it is hard for them to find a physician who will actually see them at that kind of rate.

Pediatrics has said, "We believe a public plan structured [after Medicare and Medicaid] would ultimately erode the availability of private health and negatively impact patient access to needed health care."

The fourth problem I have with the plan in the Kennedy bill is that the government plan would ultimately lead to a rationing of health care. What does that mean? Well, that means delay or denying access to treatment. All we have to do is look at Canada.

A recent op-ed by Dr. David Gratzner in the Wall Street Journal this last week talked about what a government-run plan in Canada has done. Thousands of our friends to the north, of course, come to America each year for lifesaving surgery, if they can afford it, after their government has told them they will just have to wait. Various studies indicate that Canadians, especially the poor, are less healthy under socialized medicine than those in our country. More and more Canadians want to reduce the role of government and expand private options for health care, even as the elites in Washington want to move America in the opposite direction.

The fifth reason a government plan is not a good idea is it would lead to poorer health outcomes. Many Canadians are realizing that socialized medicine is not working for them, and so are many folks in Europe. According to a piece in the Washington Examiner this week, breast cancer rates in Europe, under nationalized health care systems, are significantly higher than they are here in the United States. European women are much more likely to have breast cancer than are American women. Currently, the United States leads the world in treating breast cancer. Women in our country with breast cancer have a 14-percent better chance of survival than those in Europe. Compared to the United States, breast cancer mortality is 52 percent higher in Germany and 88 percent higher in the United Kingdom. This is not something we should want to emulate.

We also see some poor health care outcomes in the United States under government-run health care. For example, numerous studies have documented the poor patient outcomes under the Medicaid Program relative to patients in private plans. For example, Medicaid patients are more than 50 percent more likely to die of coronary bypass surgery than patients with private coverage or Medicare.

There are other problems with the bill that the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts has proposed. Again, I credit him with being the first one to lay out a plan. We have not yet seen one from any other source. But the fact is, the Kennedy bill is not paid for. We don't know how much additional borrowing or how much higher our taxes will have to go up in order to pay the price. It also includes a concept known as pay or play for small businesses. In other words, if you don't have health care coverage for your employees and are a small business, you will have to pay a punitive tax.

The bill also provides very generous Federal subsidies to individuals making as much as $110,000 a year. We are all for a safety net for people who are low income and can't otherwise provide for themselves. But why should taxpayers be forced to pay higher taxes to subsidize health care for people making over $100,000 a year. It doesn't make sense.

The bill also includes an innocuous-sounding council called the Medical Advisory Council, which in effect would give the government power over personal health care decisions, particularly to unelected and unaccountable bureaucrats. Of course, the bill creates new entitlements, which we have no hope of paying for, at the same time when unfunded liabilities for so much of our entitlement programs remain unpaid for. Frankly, while I applaud the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts and his leadership on this issue, I worry that this is a bill that has no bipartisan input. I applaud Senator BAUCUS, chairman of the Finance Committee, and other Democrats on that committee who said we need to come up with a bipartisan solution. When I raised this concern this morning in the Finance Committee, the Kennedy bill was described as more of a wish list than anything else.

The bill reflects very few ideas from Republicans, which we have offered to discuss and would hope to include in any comprehensive health care reform. It includes several provisions which Republicans have made clear are off the table, if our colleagues want a truly bipartisan bill. I mentioned the government plan option which kills bipartisanship because Republicans cannot support a policy that will lead to a Washington takeover of our health care system. There are better alternatives, alternatives which empower individuals and preserve the individual choice each of us has to make health care decisions, in consultation with our physician or family doctor, in the best interest of our families. Empowering people rather than government is a much better solution than this proposal we see under the Kennedy bill.

Innovators in both government and the private sector have learned that by empowering patients and providing them some incentives, they can actually see costs lowered.

There are a lot of good ideas out there. Unfortunately, the partisan proposal we have from the HELP Committee is not one of them. We hope we can continue to work together, on a bipartisan basis, toward a successful outcome.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. UDALL of Colorado). The majority leader.

TRAVEL PROMOTION ACT OF 2009— MOTION TO PROCEED

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to proceed to Calendar No. 71, S. 1023, the Travel Promotion Act of 2009, and I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 71, S. 1023, the Travel Promotion Act of 2009.

Byron L. Dorgan, Tom Udall, Patrick J. Leahy, Barbara Boxer, Kay R. Hagan, Kirsten E. Gillibrand, Robert P. Casey, Jr., Roland W. Burris, Benjamin L. Cardin, Bill Nelson, John D. Rockefeller, IV, Daniel K. Inouye, Blanche L. Lincoln, Ron Wyden, Bernard Sanders, Sheldon Whitehouse, Ben Nelson.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday, June 16, following a period of morning business, the Senate resume consideration of the motion to proceed to S. 1023 and there be 1 hour of debate prior to a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed, with the time equally divided and controlled between the leaders or their designees; that upon the use or yielding back of that time, the Senate proceed to a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed, with the mandatory quorum waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, the legislation described by my colleague, the Travel Promotion Act, is legislation I wish to discuss. The Travel Promotion Act is a bipartisan piece of legislation I have introduced with Senators ENSIGN, INOUE, MARTINEZ, KLOBUCHAR, REID, and many others. I believe in the last session of Congress, when we introduced this, we had over 50 cosponsors. Let me describe what its purpose is.

Who can be against travel promotion? Here is what has happened to our country with respect to the jobs and economic growth that comes with a decline in foreigners traveling to the United States. Measures put in place quickly after the 2001 attack on 9/11 had a significant impact on travel to the United States by foreign travelers.

We, obviously, wanted to be careful about whom we allowed into our country. We still do. But what happened following that is, instead of reaching out to the world to say: Visit the United States, this is a great place, we encourage you to come here, to vacation here, to see what the United States is all about, we backed away from that. Other countries have not. Here is what we have experienced. I have a chart here showing overseas travel between 2000 and 2008.

Since 2000 and 2008, there has been a 3-percent decrease in foreign visitors to the United States. At the same time, there has been a 40-percent increase in visitors to other countries around the world. Think of the consequences of that to our economy. A foreign visitor, overseas visitor, coming to our country spends on average $4,500 per visit—that is a lot of economic activity, a lot of economic growth and jobs. But inbound travel has decreased in our country and substantially increased in others. Why is that the case?

The rest of the world is very anxious to attract destination visitors to their country, international travelers, to say: We want you to come to our country as a destination for your trip. Take India—one special reason to visit India is this advertisement saying:

“Incredible India, any time is a good time to visit the land of Taj, but there is no time like now.”

Not unusual to see this. It is not only India.

Australia’s says: “Arrived looking for an experience to remember. Departed with adventure we will never forget. Australia, come to Australia.” If you are an overseas traveler, deciding where to visit, be sure and come to Australia.

Ireland says: “Go where Ireland takes you.”

Pretty straightforward—makes you want to go to Ireland. Great Britain, Italy, Spain, France, Australia, India, Ireland, they say: Come to our country. Travel to our country. See what our country is about.

We are not doing that.

As a result, in the last 8 years, we have seen a 3-percent decrease in travel by foreign visitors to the United States, while the rest of the world has had a 40-percent increase in travelers destined to those other areas. It makes a big difference. It is very negative in terms of our country’s economic opportunity that comes from travel and tourism.

I showed the examples of what other countries are saying in their very explicit campaigns around the world, to say to people: If you are traveling abroad, if you are planning a vacation, a trip, come to our country. Come and see Italy, Great Britain, Ireland, India.

Let me show you what is happening with respect to our country. Headlines such as these: The Sydney Sunday Morning Herald: “Coming to America Isn’t Easy.” From The Guardian: “America: More Hassle Than It’s Worth?” From The Sunday Times in London: “Travel to America? No Thanks.”

There is a perception that it is difficult to come to our country, hard to get a visa, and tourists will experience long waiting lines. Many of these problems have been corrected or improved. In the construction of this legislation, we address the need to better communicate our entry and exit procedures and their improvements. We don’t want these negative headlines to be the message to the rest of the world—in fact, quite the opposite.

What a large group of us in the Congress want is for our country to be engaged internationally, to say to people around the world: Come to our country. To see the United States is to understand the wonder of this great country. Come here. Stay here. Vacation here. Understand what America is about.

I can’t think of anything better, in terms of our position in the world and how people think of this great country, than to invite them and encourage them to come here. That is why we have introduced this bipartisan piece of legislation called the Travel Promotion Act of 2009.

Interestingly enough, the Congressional Budget Office has said this piece of legislation will reduce the Federal budget deficit by $425 million between 2010 and 2019. We don’t bring many pieces of legislation to the floor of the Senate in which the Congressional Budget Office says:

This will make money. This is a net positive. This will reduce the Federal budget deficit. That is what this bill is about.

Let me explain, for a moment, what we are trying to do with the legislation. The Travel Promotion Act will attempt to create international travel opportunities for people from all around the world to come to this country. It will set up a nationally coordinated travel promotion campaign run in a public-private partnership to communicate to the world our country’s travel policies and, more importantly, communicate to the world: We want you here. We want you to explore what this great country has to offer. This public-private partnership is an ideal method for us to improve any negative perceptions out there, particularly as we work on visas and any remaining delays in entry procedures which we have corrected, in large part. This combines public sector accountability with private sector enterprise.

This bill establishes a Corporation for Travel Promotion, an independent, nonprofit corporation, with an 11-member board of directors appointed by the Secretary of Commerce. It creates an Office of Travel Promotion in the Department of Commerce to work with that nonprofit corporation. It sets up a travel promotion fund, financed by a public-private matching program. Federal contributions will be financed by a $10 fee paid by foreign travelers from visa waiver countries and collected in what is called the Electronic System for Travel Authorization.

Many other countries impose fees for people coming and going: Australia, $37 departure fee, an entry fee of $19 to $70; Mexico, an $11 departure fee, up to $38; New Zealand, $16 to $19 on the departure fee; United Kingdom, $80 to $160. There are a lot of fees around for people traveling internationally. We propose to fund this with a very modest fee of $10.

This is very simple. It should be non-controversial. There are many of us who have worked on this and worked very hard.

My colleague from Minnesota is here, Senator KLOBUCHAR, who has worked with us on this legislation. This is a piece of legislation Senator REID has worked on. Senator ENSIGN is the lead Republican cosponsor. Other cosponsors include Senator MARTINEZ and Senator NELSON of Florida. We have cosponsors across the political spectrum because this issue of asking people from around the world to come to America is not controversial and benefits every State. It cannot possibly be partisan, and it certainly is job creating.

Now here is what some newspapers around the country have said about the legislation.

The Sacramento Bee:

This country needs to reclaim its status as a global magnet for visitors . . . and Congress can help by passing the Travel Promotion Act.

The Los Angeles Times:

Considering that the U.S. spends hundreds of millions of dollars on public diplomacy with dubious results and nearly nothing on promoting tourism, we might do well to invest a little money in wooing travelers.

The Detroit Free Press:

Doesn’t it make sense to encourage—at no cost to taxpayers—foreign visitors to come here and leave us some money? There’s no good reason not to pass this bill.

The Dallas Morning News:

The Travel Promotion Act is a sensible first step toward putting the welcome mat back on America’s doorstep.

And the list goes on.

I do not come from Hawaii or Florida or California, I come from the northern Great Plains. And we have a lot of tourist destinations: the Badlands in North Dakota, some of the most beautiful areas in our country. Tourism is North Dakota’s second largest industry. There are so many destinations with such wonder to attract people to our region of the country.

It is where Lewis and Clark, in their epic adventure, decided to spend the winter in area about 40 miles north of Bismarck, ND. We celebrated the 200th anniversary, the bicentennial, of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, and we had a lot of people come from around the world to see that.

The fact is, every State in this country has something it is anxious to show the world, to say: Look at us. Look at what we are doing here. Look how beautiful this part of America is.

So what has happened is, we have been unilaterally disarmed since 9/11, to say: Well, we are worried about who is going to come into this country. We certainly want to keep terrorists out. We sure do, absolutely. But that message ought not be mixed with a message that we do not want to encourage foreign travelers to come to this country to vacation and to experience America.

So at long last a group of us, Republicans and Democrats, have said: If we disagree on so much, how about if we agree on tourism? Can we agree on promoting travel? To say to the English, the Italians, the Spaniards, the French, the folks from India and Thailand and China and elsewhere: You are welcome in this country. We want you to come to this country. We want you to see what our country is about?

To experience this country is to have a sense of wonder about the greatest democracy, the most significant and longest surviving democracy on Earth. We want them to go home with that understanding of what a great country this is. That is what we want.

By the way, we do not believe our nearest neighbors—Mexico and Canada—are irrelevant. We have a lot of people coming from Mexico and Canada, and God bless them. They are great neighbors. We welcome them. We are told they spend, on average, about $900 per trip.

The foreign travelers from overseas, by contrast, spend about $4,500 per trip. That is why this is such an unbelievable job generator. People who come here and spend significant money and purchase the hotel rooms and the rental cars and go to the tourist attractions and do the things people who want to experience America routinely do not only create a lot of jobs and boost economic activity, but their travel also gives us the opportunity to show the rest of the world this is an extraordinary place where they can go home and tell their neighbors they just went to one of the greatest places on Earth.

So as to the Travel Promotion Act of 2009, my hope is—after having battled here on so many different issues, and having cloture votes on everything, and then 30 hours post-cloture while we all stand around with our hands in our pockets and shuffling our shoes—my hope is, perhaps this is the issue, this is the one time, this is the occasion where everybody might say: Do you know something. There is something we can agree on that is noncontroversial, that makes sense. It creates jobs, it expands the economy, and represents the best of sending American values abroad; and that is, the Travel Promotion Act.

If, perhaps, next week we get to that point, I think the American people will have believed we have done something good. So I am pleased to be the lead sponsor. We introduced this in the last Congress and did not get it passed. In this Congress I believe we will.

I give my commendation to the majority leader and thank him for putting this on the agenda. I give my thanks to Senator ENSIGN as the lead cosponsor on the Republican side. But so many Republicans and Democrats have said: Yes, this makes sense. Count us in. We want to be part of expanding this economy and creating jobs and giving an opportunity for the people in the rest of the world to understand we welcome them here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I am here today to speak in support of the Travel Promotion Act, which is bipartisan legislation. I first want to thank Mr. DORGAN, the Senator from North Dakota. I have visited the Teddy Roosevelt Park, and I want to thank him for his great leadership on this bill over many years. I also want to thank Senator ENSIGN for his leadership. I believe this legislation will help our economy to do better, to create jobs without any taxpayer expense.

As the chair of the Commerce Subcommittee that includes tourism, I recently held a hearing—a well-attended hearing—with many Senators and people there to examine the state of our tourism industry during these troubled economic times. I want to thank my ranking Republican member, Senator MARTINEZ. We did it together. I also held a field hearing in Duluth, MN, to highlight the importance of tourism to midsize and smaller towns in the United States.

During the hearings, we heard about the importance of tourism and travel to our economy and the urgent need to increase international travel to the United States.

As the Presiding Officer, Senator UDALL, knows, coming from Colorado, America has so much to offer our travelers: whether it is the mountains of Colorado or—Senator KAUFMAN is here—the beaches of Delaware or the stunning national landmarks, such as the Grand Canyon, Mount Rushmore, and the Statue of Liberty or the oceans, lakes, and rivers or our mountains, forests, and beaches or our scenic country towns or the bright lights of the big cities or centers of fun and entertainment such as Las Vegas or Disney World or Duluth.

From the heartland to the coasts, every State has an economic stake in the tourism industry, which is now a major part of the American economy. Throughout the United States, many communities have discovered and developed the economic potential of travel and tourism.

I keep using the example of Duluth because at some point in the 1970s, the economy was so bad there they actually had a billboard, so when you drove out of town, it said: The last one to leave, please turn off the lights.

Well, that billboard is not there anymore, as tourism is the biggest part of their economy, on beautiful Lake Superior, with beautiful museums and an aquarium and a children's museum. It has changed the life of that town. Tourism creates good jobs that cannot be outsourced.

Mr. President, one out of every eight Americans is employed in our travel economy. Each year, travel and tourism contribute approximately $1.3 trillion to the American economy. International visitors, as Senator DORGAN just noted, spend an average of $4,500 per person.

In economic terms, international tourism to the United States counts as an export. Instead of shipping our product to a customer overseas, the customer is coming here to spend money on our goods and our services.

Last year, travel and tourism exports accounted for 8 percent of all U.S. exports and 26 percent of all U.S. services exports. In fact, tourism is one of the few economic sectors where we enjoy a substantial trade surplus.

Travel is a part of the fabric of our State and our country. But over the past decade, we know it has been stretched to the brink. While more people around the world are traveling, a smaller percentage of them are visiting the United States.

This is not just about our troubled economy right now. This was going on long before that. It actually started after 9/11, where, for good reasons, security measures were put in place. But some of those good reasons have turned into very difficult times for tourists to come to this country, and that needs to be fixed. That is part of this bill: to make it easier for tourists to visit our country.

Since 2000, the U.S. share of the world travel market has decreased by nearly 20 percent, costing us hundreds of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in revenue.

Last year, nearly 200,000 travel-related jobs were lost. The Commerce Department predicts we will lose another 247,000 jobs this year. Remember, this is not about airport CEOs. This is about the janitors who work at the airports. This is about the maids who are doing the beds. This is about the waitresses who are working at the restaurants. This is about the people who do the flowers for the hotels and for the banquets and for the business travelers. These are real jobs in America.

This has always been a country that has opened its arms to people from around the world. That is why we are so great. We have to bring that back. We have to bring people in to visit this country.

The Travel Promotion Act will do just that. By boosting travel to the United States it will also give a boost to our economy. So it is a win-win for the tourism industry, for jobs for America, and for the American people.

Senator DORGAN went through the bill. I do want to emphasize that not only will this consist of travel promotion and promoting our country, like other countries have been doing for years that have been leapfrogging us in this market, additionally, this legislation will establish the Office of Travel Promotion in the Department of Commerce to work with the Corporation for Travel Promotion and the Secretaries of State and Homeland Security to encourage travel and to make sure international visitors are processed efficiently.

It does not cost taxpayers a cent, as Senator DORGAN pointed out, and economists expect it to generate billions for our economy.

According to an analysis by Oxford Economics, this tourism program is estimated to attract 1.6 million new international visitors annually and create $4 billion in new spending in our country, creating 40,000 new jobs.

We know we need to bring back business travel. We should not let a few bad actors influence the decisions of good companies around this country. We know we have to look, this summer, for affordable deals for our families, and people are staying close to home. We want our Minnesotans to go fishing in Minnesota.

I say to the Presiding Officer, I would love to ask you if you know how much money people spend alone in Minnesota on bait and worms every year. I will tell you the answer. It has probably never been uttered before in this Chamber: $50 million a year. Minnesotans and visitors to our State spend $50 million a year on bait and worms for recreational fishing—just to give you an idea of what we are talking about when we talk about tourism spending.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this important piece of legislation. I am proud to be a cosponsor. I look forward to working on this bill on the floor in the days to come.

MORNING BUSINESS

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business for 25 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF SONIA SOTOMAYOR

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss President Obama's nomination of Sonia Sotomayor to be an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judge Sonia Sotomayor has impeccable legal credentials and a record of excellence and integrity. Equally important, she has the experience not only to make an excellent Justice but also to have a significant impact on a Court that today reflects too narrow a slice of America.

Judge Sonia Sotomayor's deep appreciation for how the law affects the lives of ordinary Americans is born from her compelling personal background, as well as her time as an assistant district attorney, a commercial litigator, and later as a judge.

Once confirmed, she will become the first Hispanic Justice, and just the third woman, to serve on the Nation's highest Court.

What are we to make, then, of the assaults on the character and record of this seemingly exemplary nominee?

Unfortunately, they seem to be a remnant of more than two decades of "culture wars" over Supreme Court nominees.

As someone who was present for the beginning of these wars, I have seen them develop into elaborate political dances, where both sides trade charges that are predictable and often baseless.

Some of these attacks, such as charges of racism and bigotry, deeply undermine our national dialog.

I am encouraged to note that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have chosen not to join in these attacks, and many, in fact, have condemned them.

Other attacks are equally predictable, from the general charge of "extremist" to particular instances of political "gotcha"—wrenching statements out of context in order to paint a distorted picture of the nominee's record.

At some level, partisan assaults are expected in the Supreme Court nomination process. But in the case of Judge Sotomayor, they are especially divorced from this body's good-faith exercise of its duty to advise and consent.

It is one thing to attack a nominee's judicial philosophy when the President is trying to reshape the Court based on judicial philosophy, when the balance of the Court is at stake, or when the Senate and the President are deeply divided.

None of those situations apply to this nomination.

Judge Sotomayor is a well-qualified, mainstream jurist who does not threaten to tip the balance of the Court and who is likely to be confirmed by a substantial majority.

Although these partisan attacks take many forms, today I would like to address one persistent, unhelpful, and often baseless charge—that of so-called "judicial activism."

What is especially unhelpful about calling someone a judicial activist is that many times it is an empty epithet, divorced from a real assessment of judicial temperament.

As conservative jurist Frank Easterbrook puts it, the charge is empty:

Everyone wants to appropriate and apply the word so that his favored approach is sound and its opposite "activist." Then "activism" just means judges behaving badly—and each person fills in a different definition of badly.

In other words, the term activist, when applied to the decisions of a Supreme Court nominee, is generally nothing more than politically charged shorthand for decisions that the accuser disagrees with.

That is not to say that the term "judicial activism" is necessarily without content. If we want to take it seriously, it might mean a failure to defer to the elected branches of government, it might mean disregard for long-established precedent, or it might mean deciding cases based on personal policy preferences rather than the law.

I think it is fair to say that based on any of these definitions, the Supreme Court's current conservative majority has been highly activist.

Let me give just a few examples.

In United States v. Morrison, decided in 2000, the Rehnquist court struck down a key provision of the Violence Against Women Act. Rather than deferring to the considered judgment and extensive fact-finding of a democratically elected Congress, the Court went out of its way to impose its own judgment. This body held extensive hearings, made explicit findings, and voted 95 to 4 in favor of the bill. An activist Court chose to ignore all that and substitute its own, constricted view of the proper role of the national government for that shared by both Congress and the States.

That same year, the Court decided Kimel v. Florida Board of Regents. The five-Justice majority concluded that States could not be sued by private citizens for age discrimination without their consent because of a general principle of sovereign immunity.

This is another decision that was, simultaneously, "conservative" in terms of policy outcome and "activist" in terms of judging.

It was conservative because it expanded States rights and contracted antidiscrimination rights.

It was activist both because it struck down the considered judgment of Congress and because it was based not at all on the text of the Constitution but instead on the policy preferences of five Justices.

In his dissent in Kimel, Justice Stevens said:

The kind of judicial activism manifested in such cases represents such a radical departure from the proper role of this Court that it should be opposed whenever the opportunity arises.

With the addition of Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Alito, the conservative majority of the current Court has continued to be highly activist, even though the two newest Justices are not always candid about what they are doing.

In fact, that charge has been leveled against Justices Alito and Roberts by no less an authority than Justice Scalia.

In the campaign finance case, Federal Election Commission v. Wisconsin Right to Life, the Court struck down key provisions of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act, again substituting its view of good public policy for that of Congress.

But this was more than a failure to defer to a democratically elected body. The Court effectively overruled controlling precedent—McConnell v. FEC—while pretending that it was doing no such thing. Justice Scalia called this “faux judicial restraint.”

In much the same vein, in a case called Hein v. Freedom from Religion Foundation, Justices Roberts and Alito were part of a majority that in effect overruled longstanding precedent on taxpayer standing, while again claiming that they were not doing so.

Again, Justice Scalia called their bluff, attacking Justice Alito’s opinion for falsely claiming to honor stare decisis.

Of course, in both cases Justice Scalia wanted to overrule the cases in question expressly, but at least he was honest about his intentions.

Then there’s Parents Involved in Community Schools v. Seattle School District No. 1.

In that case the Court rejected local community authority in the area of voluntary integration of public schools. Chief Justice Roberts’ plurality opinion for the four-person conservative bloc gave the back of the hand to a long line of desegregation precedents, beginning with Brown v. Board of Education.

Remember that this is the same Justice who, during his confirmation hearing, repeatedly professed his allegiance to stare decisis.

If not for the opinion concurring in the judgment by Justice Kennedy, communities that want some modest measure of racial integration in their schools would be virtually powerless to act.

Another recent case, this time in the anti-trust area, again shows that activism is in the eye of the beholder. In Leegin v. PSKS, the Court, with the addition of Justices Roberts and Alito, overruled 96 years of unbroken precedent on vertical price-fixing.

This case, plain and simple, represents the elevation of big manufacturers’ interests over those of the consumer. And this Court rejected nearly a century of precedent because the majority of its members decided to embrace a particular economic theory different from the one that prevailed at the time the Sherman Antitrust Act became law.

I want to mention one final example of conservative judicial activism, though there are plenty more I could cite.

Pending before the Supreme Court right now is a case that involves a constitutional challenge to section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. As my colleagues in this body know, section 5 requires some States and political subdivisions, because of a history of racial discrimination, to “pre-clear” new voting rules with either the Justice Department or a Federal court.

The claim made by the Texas voting district in the case seems to be that section 5 has outlived its usefulness.

Before voting to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act in 2006, the Congress undertook an extensive and thorough review of the current nature and extent of discrimination against minority voters, and of the continued need for section 5.

It held 21 hearings and accumulated 16,000 pages of testimony over the course of 10 months. And at the end of that process, Congress concluded that section 5 is still necessary, and passed the bill by a vote of 98-to-0 in the Senate and 390-to-33 in the House.

Though the Court has not yet ruled in this case, the questioning from the bench during oral argument should give us concern, and does give us more evidence of conservative judicial activism.

Some members of the conservative wing of the Court, including Justices Scalia and Roberts, suggested by their questions that they intend to disregard the entire CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

In discussing the provisions of the act that allow jurisdictions to “bail out” of section 5 coverage, by showing that they no longer need to be covered, Justice Scalia argued that bailing out was impractical.

When the attorney for the United States explained that Congress had considered and rejected that argument, Justice Scalia responded: “The question is whether it is right, not whether Congress rejected it.” So much for deference to legislative fact-finding.

What makes this apparent substitution of a justice’s assessment of the facts for that of Congress particularly troubling is the language of the Constitution itself.

Remember that congressional authority for the Voting Rights Act comes from the 15th amendment, which not only guarantees the right of citizens of the United States to vote, but also says in section 2. “The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.”

So here we have Congress operating at the height of its power, and members of the Supreme Court seeming to want to decide the case based on their own view of good policy.

I think I have given enough examples to suggest that judicial activism is a two-way street.

As my Judiciary Committee colleague from Oklahoma said during the confirmation hearing for Chief Justice Roberts, “We each have our own definition of judicial activism.”

So what does the “activism” charge add to the debate? I would say, very little.

Let’s take a look at the charge that Judge Sotomayor is a judicial activist.

To support that claim, critics point to a single, much-publicized case involving New Haven firefighters. But this attack is not only disingenuous it is upside down.

In that case, Judge Sotomayor was part of a 3-0 decision based on settled circuit court precedent.

Her panel’s decision supported the trial court judge’s ruling and the decision of the local government regarding the best way to determine promotions for firefighters.

Later, a majority of the entire court of appeals ruled to let the panel’s decision stand.

There is no doubt that the case addresses a difficult set of issues, and that the Supreme Court may come out the other way, though likely by a razor-thin margin.

But Judge Sotomayor’s decision to defer to the democratically accountable, local New Haven government and rule along with the majority of her court not to upset settled precedent cannot meet any definition of judicial activism. In fact, the complaint seems to be that she was not activist enough.

The truth of the matter is that Judge Sotomayor, far from being an extremist, is very much in the mainstream.

Other than the firefighters case, she has decided 88 cases involving claims of race discrimination while on the court of appeals. In 78 of those cases, Judge Sotomayor and the panel rejected the claim of discrimination.

Of the 10 cases favoring claims of discrimination, 9 were unanimous, and of those 9, in 7 the unanimous panel included at least one Republican-appointed judge.

I am not so naive as to believe we can eliminate entirely the partisan exploitation of the confirmation process.

Maybe, though, we can put to rest the tired and un-illuminating charge of judicial activism.

After all, that charge is rarely meant as a genuine claim about the exercise of judicial power. Instead, it is generally just an established part of an elaborate and tired script, a claim that we can expect no matter who the nominee may be.

So let’s focus on substance rather than empty code words. Let’s debate the quality and merits of Judge Sotomayor's judicial philosophy and approach rather than hurl epithets or engage in demagoguery.

Next month, the Judiciary Committee will hold a confirmation hearing, at which Senators from both sides of the aisle will be able to question Judge Sotomayor directly and publicly.

Because Supreme Court Justices are not elected but rather appointed for life, the qualifications of every nominee should be carefully examined, not only by Senators but also by the public at large.

This is the time when the public should be and will be paying close attention. We do not do ourselves, or the public, any favors if we rely on meaningless labels left over from the culture wars.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to reconsider what the charge of "judicial activism" brings to our debate.

Judge Sotomayor deserves our careful consideration, but I hope that my colleagues here in the Senate will continue to abstain from the culture wars and name calling that too often have characterized our judicial nominations over recent years.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I wish to speak today about reforming our health care system. As I said last week, most Americans are satisfied with the health care they receive, but if we want to maintain and improve the quality of affordable health care, we need to act now. We must get health care costs under control while preserving choice. We must reform health care to make it more affordable for businesses and patients and less cumbersome for providers. Health care reform has been delayed for too long, and it cannot wait any longer.

If anyone needs reasons as to why health care reform is necessary, all they have to do is read some of the studies that have been released recently that show the dire consequences for our health care system and our economy if we refuse to act. For example, if we allow the status quo to persist, the White House Council of Economic Advisers has estimated that the sheer gross domestic product devoted to health care will rise from 18 percent in 2009 to 28 percent in 2030 and 34 percent in 2040. This trajectory is simply unsustainable.

Businesses in America have to compete against companies from other countries. Many of these foreign companies pay nothing for health care for their workers or retirees. Others pay far less than what many of our larger corporations pay. This puts many of our businesses at a disadvantage in the global marketplace.

A recent report by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the Urban Institute reiterates the pressure that American businesses face in supplying health care benefits to their employees. These researchers prepared analyses using a simulation model estimating how coverage and cost trends would change between now and 2019. Looking at three different scenarios, the worst case would be where there is a slow growth in incomes and continuing high growth rates for health care costs; an intermediate case where there would be some faster growth in incomes but a lower growth rate for health care costs; and the best case would be where there is full employment, faster income growth, and even slower growth in health care costs.

Under all three scenarios, the report showed a tremendous strain on business owners and their employees over the next decade if no reform is enacted. If health care reform is not enacted, the report projects that within 10 years, the cost of health care of a business can double from approximately $430 billion for employee premiums in 2009 to $885 billion in 2019. Even in the best case scenario, employer spending on health insurance premiums would rise by 72 percent.

This would most likely result in fewer Americans being offered employer-sponsored insurance, with a likely drop from 56 percent of employees getting coverage through their employer in 2009 to as few as 49 percent by 2019.

If no changes are made, and the number of people with employer sponsored insurance continues to decrease, that also means the ranks of the uninsured will increase. And the projections are not pretty.

Under the same scenarios, the number of uninsured will reach just over 53 million under the best case and as high as 66 million under the worst case.

Unfortunately, when those without insurance do receive care—most likely in an emergency room—the costs for treating them are passed on to those of us who are fortunate enough to have health insurance.

Providers and hospitals charge insurers more for the services provided to patients who do have health insurance to make up for the cost of treating the uninsured.

These cost shifts result in a "hidden tax" of higher premiums for patients and businesses.

Right now, this hidden tax results in an increase of about $1,000 for premiums for family coverage.

It is time for reform.

Over the last decade, Americans have watched their health insurance premiums double at a growth rate six times faster than their wages, threatening their financial stability.

If we do not reform health care, if health care premiums continue to rise at 4 percent per year, in 2025 premiums for family coverage will cost more than $25,000 per year.

Can you imagine how that dollar amount will affect American families?

On top of this, a recent study published in the American Journal of Medicine showed that bankruptcies involving medical bills now account for more than 60 percent of U.S. personal bankruptcies, an increase of 50 percent in just 6 years. And it is not the uninsured that is driving this increase.

In fact, more than 75 percent of families needing to enter bankruptcy because of health care costs actually have health insurance. Most are middle class, well educated, and own their homes.

They just cannot keep up with the alarming rise in out-of-pocket costs associated with medical care.

It is time for reform.

Our current health care system is rampant with bureaucracy, inefficiency and waste.

An example of this is the amount of time physicians must spend filling out various forms required by insurance plans.

A national survey of physician practices found that, on average, doctors are spending 3 hours per week—the equivalent of 3 workweeks per year just on administrative tasks required by health plans.

The study showed that the cost of interacting with insurance plans amounts to $31 billion annually and approximately 7 percent of all U.S. expenditures for physician and clinical services.

More importantly, on a personal level, this is 3 weeks less time annually that physicians have to spend with their patients discussing their treatment options, explaining the pros and cons of various procedures, learning the fears and anxieties of their patients, furthering the patient-doctor relationship.

It is time for reform.

We have attempted to reform our health care system several times in the past to no avail. But this year it is different.

This time, the call for reform is coming from people and organizations that previously opposed reform.

This time, because of the reasons I have mentioned, businesses, along with unions that represent their workers, are asking for reform.

This time, patient advocacy organizations and provider groups are calling for health reform.

Make no mistake, reforming health care is not an easy task, and it is one that will require true compromise from everyone across the ideological spectrum.

But it is a task that must be done.

Our country, and the health of its citizens as well as the economy, cannot afford to maintain the status quo.

Next week, the members of the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee and the Senate Finance Committee will begin deliberations on legislation to reform health care.

As the members of these committees gather to discuss and ultimately mark up legislation, I want to take this opportunity to again voice my support for a public option in a menu of insurance options from which people may choose.

I believe a public option is imperative in providing a true choice for all Americans.

Let me stress: this would be a purely voluntary option.

If you like your current plan, you keep it.

But there are too many Americans who do not have real choices when it comes to health insurance, especially those who live in rural areas.

In addition, many large urban areas are dominated by one or two insurers that serve more than 60 percent of the market. In fact, there are seven states where one insurer has over 75 percent of the market share.

A public option can help Americans expand their choice of an insurance provider.

A public option could take various forms, and I think the committees are the proper place to determine the appropriate contours of a public option.

But I want to point out again that right now, today, there are more than 30 State governments that offer their employees a choice between traditional private insurance and a plan that is self-insured by the State. Some States have had them for more than 15 years.

In these 30 States, the market share of the self-funded plans within the market for State employees typically ranges from 25 to 40 percent. This shows a healthy competition between the public option and private insurers, not domination by either type of insurer.

And I want to point out that these arrangements do not seem to be a problem or incite ideological issues at the State level.

Why then, should it be so when discussing health reform on a national level?

A public option can go a long way in bringing more innovation to the delivery system and introducing new measures to reduce cost and improve quality.

A public option can serve as a benchmark for all insurers, setting a standard for cost, quality and access within regional or national marketplaces.

It can have low administrative costs and can have a broad choice of providers. It can give Americans a better range of choices, make the health care market more competitive, and keep insurance companies honest.

And again, the key to all this is that a public option will be just that, an option, not a requirement.

Some people will choose it; others will not. If you like the insurance plan you have now, you keep it.

If you are happy with the insurance you get with your employer, or even the individual insurance market, you stay enrolled in that insurance plan. And if you are unsatisfied with the public option, you have the option to switch back to private insurers.

Americans firmly support the ability to choose their own doctor and value their relationships with their providers. So do I. It is key to any health care plan that Americans have a right to choose their doctor.

An overriding goal of health reform is to increase a patient's access to affordable, quality health care—offering a public option can help increase Americans' choices.

Mr. President, it is time for reform that protects what works and fixes what is broken.

It is time to reform health care so that American businesses can afford to offer health care to their employees.

It is time to reform health care so that all Americans have access to quality, affordable care, regardless of pre-existing medical conditions.

It is time to reform health care so that physicians and other providers have less redtape to deal with and more time to spend with patients.

It is time to reform health care so we place a higher priority on prevention and wellness, saving lives as well as money.

It is time to reform health care so all Americans can compare the costs and benefits of different health insurance policies.

And, it is time to reform health care so Americans have more choices and can retain the right to choose their own doctors.

For all these reasons and more, it is time for health care reform.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MERKLEY). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the quorum call to be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURRIS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

SMALL NUCLEAR REACTORS

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I would like to report a tremendous historic development in the ability of our country to have clean air, an effective way to deal with climate change, and enough low-cost, reliable electricity to help keep jobs in this country. Yesterday I attended a press conference from a company, Babcock & Wilcox. Also included was the Tennessee Valley Authority. The company and TVA announced that Babcock & Wilcox will soon make an application to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for permission to start building and selling a small nuclear reactor that can be built in a factory, shipped by railway to a site, and put together like Lego blocks at the site. The nuclear reactor is a 125-megawatt reactor. That compares with the large nuclear plants, of which we have 104 today in the United States. Those plants produce, on average, 1,000 megawatts of electricity. This would be 125. So the real prospect exists that we will be able to have, in this country, nuclear reactors for electricity that might cost as little as one-tenth as much to build, can be built in 3 years instead of 6, and will produce, as I said, 125 megawatts instead of 1,000—making it easier to integrate them into our electric grid—and can be built in a factory and shipped to a customer.

The reason I am excited about this prospect is it has a real chance of happening. No one has built more small reactors in the world than Babcock & Wilcox, and the Tennessee Valley Authority is the largest public utility in the United States and the only utility in the United States that is currently building a nuclear powerplant.

Republicans and, I am sure, many Democrats, but certainly Republicans in the Senate and the House, unanimously believe our goal as a country ought to be to build 100 new large nuclear powerplants over the next 20 years, while we figure out renewable electricity. The reason we want to do that is we want to deal with climate change. We want clean air, but we want to be able to keep jobs here at the same time. If climate change is the inconvenient problem, nuclear power is the inconvenient solution.

Why is that? Climate change is caused by carbon that comes from coal plants and from a variety of other sources. Forty percent of the carbon that is produced in the United States comes from coal-fired powerplants. But if we are looking for a way to produce electricity in a way that is pollution free and carbon free, 70 percent of all the pollution-free, carbon-free electricity we have today comes from our nuclear plants. Six percent of our clean electricity comes from the Sun, the wind, and the Earth.

One day it may be that we are able to make more of our electricity from the Sun, the wind, and the Earth. But at the moment, not much is available. It is expensive and the Sun is only available when the Sun shines and the wind is only available when the wind blows. If you are wanting to operate your computer, or manufacture an automobile in Illinois or Tennessee, or turn on your light at night, you don't want to have to pray that the wind is blowing or that the Sun is shining. You want reliable, low-cost electricity.

In Tennessee, we are excited about the prospect of, one day, solar energy making a bigger difference in our electrical grid. In fact, two big new plants have moved into our State to make polysilicon, which is the product that goes into the solar cells that go on the top of your house. Each of those plants uses 120 megawatts of electricity. Where will they get that electricity? One reason they are in Tennessee is because the TVA supplies a lot of low-cost, reliable electricity. That comes from coal and nuclear power and a little bit from natural gas in our State. That is pretty much the way it is around the country. Solar power is not yet low-cost, reliable electricity. You can't run the plant making the solar energy products on solar power or wind power today. One day we may, but in the meantime, while we are trying to rebuild the auto industry in Michigan and Illinois and Wisconsin and Tennessee, we want low-cost, reliable electricity. We want our Alcoa plant to stay open in Blount County, in Maryville, where I am from in Tennessee. Why is it closed? The cost of the electricity. What will open it? A 20-year contract on low-cost, reliable electricity. If we say to the Alcoa plant: We will sell you a lot of wind power, they will say: But the wind doesn't blow in our area. If we say: We will sell you solar power, they will say: It is four times as much and we might like to operate a night shift and you can't store it.

But what we will be able to say, in light of this new development we heard about yesterday—we can say to the Alcoa plant, we can say it to Eastman Chemical in Kingsport, we can say it to the two plants making materials for solar cells: We can move in a 125-megawatt nuclear reactor, put it near your site, and supply all the low-cost, reliable electricity you need.

Another use for this new reactor could be to help us clean up our coal plants. We have a clean air problem in Tennessee, as does much of America. I am very much hopeful the Environmental Protection Agency or the Congress or some combination will reinstate the CAIR rule to deal with nitrogen and sulfur and mercury, for our health in this country.

The small reactor might be used as a substitute for coal plants. Some of the coal plants we have in the TVA system and around the country are very old and very dirty. The newest ones are much more efficient and a lot cleaner. It might make sense to take the nuclear reactor, the small one, and put two of them together where an existing coal plant is. There are a lot of possibilities for this. Instead of 100 nuclear plants in 20 years, we may have another option. We may be able to have 400 or 500 small nuclear reactors in 20 years. They may be 125 megawatts here or two together or three together.

My fellow Tennessean, Al Gore, who won the Nobel Prize for his campaign on the dangers of global warming, has a line he often uses about nuclear power. "Nuclear power may have a role to play," Al says, "but unfortunately, nuclear reactors come only in one size—extra large."

Until yesterday, you couldn't disagree with the former Vice President. Ever since President Eisenhower beached a 65-megawatt Navy submarine reactor at Shippingport, PA, in 1967, under the Atoms for Peace Program, we have been building reactors bigger and bigger. Most of the ones on the drawing board today, as I mentioned, are at least 1,200 megawatts. I believe we have 17 applications now for new nuclear powerplants. Also, one is being built right now and that is completing an old plant at Watts Bar.

We have not built a traditional large nuclear power plant from start to finish in the last 30 years in the United States. That is quite an irony. We invented the technology. We have used it successfully since the 1950s and without incident in our nuclear Navy. Twenty percent of our electricity comes from our older plants, the ones we built more than 30 years ago. They produce 20 percent of our electricity today and 70 percent of our clean electricity. But for 30 years we have not been building them.

In the meantime, France—that we don't usually like to emulate—has. France is 80 percent nuclear, and they have among the lowest carbon emissions—that contribute to global warming—in the European Union and among the lowest electric rates in the European Union. They are even selling electricity to Germany, which has invested money in solar energy and windmills and stopped nuclear but has found they do not have enough electricity to keep their jobs.

India and China, with our help, are building nuclear powerplants because they want clean, reliable electricity at a low cost.

We have appropriated money to help do that and sign treaties to help do that. Now even our President said the other day that Iran has a right to build nuclear powerplants. Well, if Iran has a right to do it, why don't we do it? We invented it. We are the ones who want low-cost, clean electricity. Let's go ahead and do it. So it will be 20 years, but it takes a long time to get one of those projects through the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. I mentioned there were 17 applications. It takes another 5 or 6 years after you get through the 2- or 3-year process at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to build these big plants. So that is a long ways.

If you are a utility and all you really need is 300 new megawatts to meet growing demand, this new, more flexible approach—this smaller reactor—is going to lower costs and open the door to more widespread use of nuclear power. It will help us achieve the goal of building 100 new nuclear powerplants in the next 20 years in order to deal with climate change.

To those who are still skeptical of nuclear power, we must say, if global warming is an inconvenient problem, then nuclear power is the inconvenient solution.

Babcock & Wilcox and TVA have shown us this new approach. They have proposed a reactor that can be built in a factory in 3 years, shipped to the site on rails, and fit together like Lego blocks. That is a very original idea. The larger reactors are still going to be necessary. We are going to need the power. But as B&W and the TVA have reminded us, there is more than one way to skin a cat. What we are seeing here today is what the business schools call a disruptive technology. I hope the public and the press will appreciate how the Tennessee Valley Authority is fulfilling its mission as a public utility by taking such a progressive stance on technology.

America's nuclear technology has been falling behind. Of that, there is no doubt. The French, the Japanese, and the Russians are all selling reactors out in the world, to India and China and other places. This is going to make them sit up and take notice because the concept we saw yesterday is perfect for developing nations that do not have the infrastructure to handle the larger reactors. It is perfect for small towns and factories all over America that may need only 125 megawatts and cannot afford something larger. It is what is called "distributed generation"—producing electricity onsite instead of wheeling it from deserts or mountaintops hundreds or thousands of miles away. As the old saying goes, "Small is beautiful."

One of the things we are going to have to face as we think about what kind of electricity we want for the future is the landscape of America. You know, landscape is a part of our environment as well, and the landscape becomes a real concern. When we look at the energy sprawl that could be created by some of the renewable energy projects, it takes a lot of space to produce a little bit of electricity.

For example, a big nuclear plant can be located on about 1 square mile. That is one that produces 1,000 megawatts. To get that much electricity from biomass, which means woodchips or dead trees, you would need a forest the size of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park—that is 550,000 acres—and the number of trucks that would be coming in and out to haul the stuff in and back out would be in the hundreds every day. You would be talking about millions of tons of woodchips and dead trees a year. So that is for just one big nuclear plant equivalent of electricity. On the other hand, to create the same amount of electricity from wind turbines that you would get from one nuclear plant, you would have to cover about 270 square miles.

In our part of the world, in the foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains, we do not really want to see these 50-story towers with blades that are as long as football fields, with flashing lights on top that can be seen for 20 miles. We do not want to see them along the foothills of the Smokies, and I doubt the people of Virginia want to see them along the Blue Ridge Parkway, and I doubt they want to see them in Pennsylvania or in the White Mountains. And in the Eastern United States, they only work on the ridgetops, and they do not work very well. That is why there is only one wind farm in the entire Southeastern United States. It is in Tennessee and only operates 18 percent of the time, and part of that time is at night when we have a lot of extra electricity. So that does not work very well.

The Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, with whom I work on the Appropriations Interior Subcommittee, has expressed her concern about the size of the solar thermal plants proposed for the Mojave Desert, which she has tried to protect for years. They would have to be 5 miles on each side in order to get a decent amount of electricity, and that is only during the daytime.

You have the wind and you have the Sun, but you still need either the coal plant or the nuclear plant. So I believe there is a place for wind: far offshore, the middle of Lake Michigan, or in parts of the wind corridor. I believe there is a great future for solar because solar power comes during the peak times, during the day when we can use it. Perhaps we can use our rooftops to provide the space. So we think that is more promising for our area. I think biomass is useful, but I have already expressed how large an area it would take to produce a little electricity. And we might be able to get a few hundred megawatts out of the Mississippi River by putting turbines in the water.

So how are we going to reindustrialize America over the next 25 years? How are we going to keep those auto suppliers and assembly plants and aluminum plants and even the new plants making solar in our country if we have sky-high costs of unreliable electricity? We need another option.

While we are cleaning up the coal plants, while we are figuring out renewable electricity, we now have another way to skin the cat; that is, the small nuclear reactor, 125 megawatts. That is about the size of electricity that is produced by Fort Loudoun Dam in our State. It is significant, but it is a lot smaller than the big ones we are used to.

What I really hope is that when Americans see this user-friendly reactor sitting underground—that is another aspect: A lot of it, including the storage of the waste, goes underground. Another aspect is it is only two stories tall. Most people think nuclear plants, the big ones—they see these big cooling towers. That is to cool the water that has to be used. But these small ones are air-cooled, so they don't use much water. That is a great advantage. And they are not an eyesore, they are two stories tall. I mean, remember, the wind turbines are 50-stories tall, producing almost no electricity in a consistent way. The nuclear reactor is producing low-cost energy 90 percent of the time, and it is two stories tall.

So I think with this development people may begin to rethink nuclear power. It is already happening out there. People are recognizing that the dangers of nuclear have been widely exaggerated, there is nothing to be fearful about, and once we realize that, we are going to see nuclear power for what it is: an appropriate technology that will enable us to meet our future energy needs without overwhelming the world with pollution and warming the planet.

So I hope my colleagues in the Senate will join me in saying congratulations to Babcock & Wilcox and especially to the Tennessee Valley Authority for leading the country in this renaissance of nuclear energy. Congratulations, good luck, and I hope there are many of these projects on the drawing boards.

This is the way for us to clean the air, deal with global warming, and at the same time have low-cost, reliable electricity in large amounts so that we can keep our jobs here.

There is one other aspect to this that I ought to mention. As we talk about the different forms of energy, people worry that so much of what it takes to build the wind turbines or the solar plants or even the large nuclear plants, and how they may be manufactured overseas and that the jobs are there and not here. All of the jobs for the small nuclear reactors will be in the United States—virtually all of them. So this is not only American-made energy, all of the parts that go to building what I hope will be hundreds of these small reactors over time can be made and will be made right here in the United States.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, I wish to say I have great concern not just about the ownership interests the Federal Government already has in financial institutions and in auto companies and in insurance companies but also about what we are hearing might happen with health care.

My view is, having a government plan, a government takeover of health care would again be an intervention into the marketplace on a scale and on a level I don't think most Americans want to see. It is referred to around here as a public plan option, but let's call it what it is: It is a government plan. It is a government-run health care system. The more you have the government involved in the decisions with respect to health care, the more the government is going to dictate many of the decisions that are going to be made and traditionally are made between a patient and a physician, in consultation with each other, between a consumer and a health care provider. Those types of interactions occur today in the marketplace. If the government is imposed into that particular situation, it seems to me at least we are going to have the government making more and more decisions with respect to health care: Which treatments are going to be approved; which ones are effective; which ones are cost-effective. And that critical, fundamental relationship between a physician and a patient, we could be creating barriers in that relationship that are not going to provide for the high quality, optimum level of health care and treatment we have experienced in this country for a long time.

Clearly, I think we all have to acknowledge there are things that need to improve in the health care system in this country. We need to reform our health care system. We need to bring the costs down. We need to figure out ways to make health care available and accessible to more Americans so that many of those who don't have health care have access to it and to get costs under control. But there are lots of ways that can be done by building upon the strengths we have in the current system; not throwing it completely away in exchange for a government-run system, which would ration health care, limit the amount of choices Americans would have, and cost the taxpayers an awful lot of money. Because I think, at the end of the day, most of the estimates that have been done—and it is hard to know because we don't have a specific proposal out there yet that has been costed or a revenue source that has been identified for it, but I think all the estimates we have seen so far suggest that this plan, the health care plan that is being proposed by the President and by the Democratic leadership in the Congress, is going to cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $1 trillion to $2 trillion. We don't know exactly. I have heard $1.2 trillion, $1.5 trillion. I have heard up to $2 trillion, but we know that is an enormous amount of money, and that revenue has to come from somewhere. One-sixth of the American economy today, one-sixth of our economy, entire economy in this country is health care, headed toward one-fifth. So we are going to hand the keys over to the Federal Government and allow them to control an enormously large component of the American economy—one-sixth of it today and it will be one-fifth in just a few years. It seems to me that would be a bad precedent and something, again, that would lead us further and further down a path of greater control for the Federal Government in our private economy. I don't think that is good for health care for Americans. I don't think that is good again for American business, for the economy or for our ability to create jobs.

The bill I introduced, as I said, is designed to get at the TARP moneys that are going to be paid back in and hopefully getting the government out of the car business, the government out of the banking business, and the government out of the insurance business, but I also view those as almost what I would characterize as gateway drugs that are going to lead the way for the nationalization or the government takeover of health care. A government plan is not a good way to do business, and it is certainly not in the best interests of Americans, who, I think, even though there may be those who want to see the costs of our current health care system come down, those who have coverage today, most of them would argue we have a system that is pretty effective; that when you need to get seen by a doctor, when you need to get treated, when you need to use some of the modern equipment and technology we have available and that is there today—and I think that is very much in jeopardy if you allow the government to intervene and to impose itself into that decision-making process and begin to ration care.

DEBT AND DEFICITS

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, one final point I wish to make is all of this sort of ties back to what I think is the pattern, the precedent we have seen so far in this Congress, and that is incredible amounts of spending, incredible amounts of borrowing. The stimulus bill started it off to the tune of about $800 billion. The budget we passed this year on the discretionary, nondefense domestic side was 8.9 percent more year over year than the previous year. The omnibus bill we passed—which was unfinished business from the last Congress—was 8.3 percent over the previous year, which, again, more than doubled the rate of inflation. We have all these Federal obligations and liabilities that are being created by virtue of these interventions in the marketplace. We have the TARP program; we have all this taxpayer exposure out there, all this spending, and this year we know we are going to have a $1.8 trillion deficit which dwarfs anything we have ever seen in history and as far as the eye can see. For the next decade, we are looking at about a $1 trillion, on average, annual deficit.

Our debt to GDP is headed to historically high levels if predictions are accurate. I think the predictions are optimistic in terms of what we are going to see in economic growth, unemployment, inflation, and interest rates. Even if the projections with respect to the economic indicators are accurate, we are going to see, 10 years from now, the public debt, as a percent of the GDP, reach over 80 percent—a rate we have not seen literally since the end of World War II.

These are very troubling signs. I think they should be warning flags, warning signs to the people in this country that this level of borrowing, the amount of spending, the amount of taxation, with the new obligations in the health care bill, is too much for our economy to bear and for the American taxpayer to bear.

What the President came out with earlier this week is a new announcement that, all of a sudden, we have gotten religion, and we are going to submit all of the new spending and all of these programs now to what is known as pay-go. I will submit for the RECORD an editorial from the Wall Street Journal from a couple days ago.

I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, June 11, 2009]

THE "PAYGO" COVERUP

Some things in politics you can't make up, such as President Obama's re-re-endorsement Tuesday of "pay-as-you-go" budgeting. Coming after $787 billion in nonstimulating stimulus, a $410 billion omnibus to wrap up fiscal 2009, a $3.5 trillion 2010 budget proposal, sundry bailouts and a 13-figure health-care spending expansion still to come, this latest vow of fiscal chastity is like Donald Trump denouncing self-promotion.

Check that. Even The Donald would find this one too much to sell.

But Mr. Obama must think the press and public are dumb enough to buy it, because there he was Tuesday re-selling the same "paygo" promises that Democrats roll out every election. Paygo is "very simple," the President claimed. "Congress can only spend a dollar if it saves a dollar elsewhere."

That's what Democrats also promised in 2006, with Nancy Pelosi vowing that "the first thing" House Democrats would do if they took Congress was reimpose paygo rules that "Republicans had let lapse." By 2008, Speaker Pelosi had let those rules lapse no fewer than 12 times, to make way for $400 billion in deficit spending. Mr. Obama repeated the paygo pledge during his 2008 campaign, and instead we have witnessed the greatest peacetime spending binge in U.S. history. As a share of GDP, spending will hit an astonishing 28.5% in fiscal 2009, with the deficit hitting 13% and projected to stay at 4% to 5% for years to come.

The truth is that paygo is the kind of budget gimmick that gives gimmickry a bad name. As Mr. Obama knows but won't tell voters, paygo only applies to new or expanded entitlement programs, not to existing programs such as Medicare, this year growing at a 9.2% annual rate. Nor does paygo apply to discretionary spending, set to hit $1.4 trillion in fiscal 2010, or 40% of the budget.

This loophole matters, because on the very day Mr. Obama was hailing paygo the House Appropriations Committee was gleefully approving a 12% increase in 2010 nondefense discretionary spending, the third year running that Democrats have proposed double-digit increases. Or consider that the 2010 budget resolution included a $2 billion increase for low-income heating assistance as an entitlement change that should be subject to paygo. But Congressional Democrats simply classified it as discretionary spending, thereby avoiding the need for $2 billion in cuts elsewhere. C'est-la-paygo.

Mr. Obama's new proposal includes even more loopholes. There's an exception for Congress's annual alternative-minimum tax "patch," which is worth at least $576 billion over 10 years; for any of the Bush tax cuts that Mr. Obama decides he wants to extend past 2010; and to protect against planned cuts in Medicare doctor payments. These carve-outs alone spare Democrats from having to come up with some $2.5 trillion in spending cuts or new taxes. To add insult to profligacy, the rules also allow the Administration to run huge early deficits for its looming health-care bonanza, and only pay for it later—say, after 2012.

The President also revived the myth that paygo was somehow responsible for eliminating budget deficits during the Clinton years. In fact, that brief era of balanced budgets was due to: mid-decade spending reductions by a GOP Congress elected on a balanced-budget pledge; an excessive cut in defense spending to 3% from 5% of GDP across the decade; and an unsustainable revenue boom due to the dot-com bubble. But harking back to the 1990s lets Mr. Obama avoid having to defend his own spending record.

The real game here is that the President is trying to give Democrats in Congress political cover for the health-care blowout and tax-increase votes that he knows are coming. The polls are showing that Mr. Obama's spending plans are far less popular than the President himself, and Democrats in swing districts are getting nervous. The paygo ruse gives Blue Dog Democrats cover to say they voted for "fiscal discipline," even as they vote to pass the greatest entitlement expansion in modern history. The Blue Dogs always play this double game.

The other goal of this new paygo campaign is to make it easier to raise taxes in 2011, and impossible to cut taxes for years after that. In the near term, paygo gives Mr. Obama another excuse to let the Bush tax cuts he dislikes expire after 2010, while exempting those (for lower-income voters) that he likes. In the longer term, if a GOP Congress or President ever want to cut taxes, paygo applies a straitjacket that pits those tax cuts against, say, spending cuts in Medicare. The Reagan tax reductions would never have happened under paygo.

The main political question now is when Americans will start to figure out Mr. Obama's pattern of spend, repent and repeat. The President is still sailing along on his charm and the fact that Americans are cheering for an economic recovery. But eventually they'll see that he isn't telling them the truth, and when they do, the very Blue Dogs he's trying to protect will pay the price. And they'll deserve what they get.

(Mr. BEGICH assumed the Chair.)

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I will make a couple of observations they made in that editorial, as well as similar observations made by some of my colleagues in the Senate, since this announcement was made—that pay-go is going to now be enforced—statutory pay-go.

This editorial from the Wall Street Journal said:

The truth is that paygo is the kind of budget gimmick that gives gimmickry a bad name. As Mr. Obama knows but won't tell voters, paygo only applies to new or expanded entitlement programs, not to existing programs such as Medicare, which this year is growing at a 9.2 percent annual rate. Nor does paygo apply to discretionary spending, set to hit $1.4 trillion in fiscal year 2010, or 40 percent of the entire [Federal] budget.

Mr. President, the thing that strikes me about this announcement is, it seems it is, as is often said, too much, too little, too late. We already passed an $800 billion stimulus bill, which we financed by borrowing from the next generation. That wasn't subject to pay-go nor have many of the spending programs in the past couple of years been subject to pay-go.

When the Democrats took control of the Congress after the 2006 elections, it was announced by Speaker PELOSI that they were going to enact pay-go—saying pay-go is going to be the policy, the rule followed in terms of the spending done by the Federal Government. But that was quickly ignored. As I said before, if we look at the reality of what happened in the last few years, despite all the lipservice paid to pay-go, it doesn't apply all that much. It applies to new entitlement programs and to tax cuts, but as far as I can tell, it doesn't apply to discretionary spending, to current entitlement spending, which, as I said earlier, is growing—Medicare at about a 9.2-percent annual clip. So what is it really good for?

Well, it seems to me it is a statutory excuse to raise taxes. If we continue to exempt more and more things—one of the things we debated in the last year or two is whether an extension or exemption will be afforded to taxpayers from the AMT, which would capture more taxpayers, and whether it ought to be offset and paid for and the pay-go rules ought to apply to it.

Well, the President, in his announcement a couple days ago, went so far as to say he is going to exempt the AMT fix from pay-go. That is a $576 billion ticket item over a 10-year period. The AMT would be exempted. The physician fee fix would be exempted, which is something we have had to do recently in Congress on a regular basis to protect doctors from the cuts that would occur under statutes passed many years ago. So we come in and we do what we call a physician fee fix. That will be exempted from the pay-go rules.

So we would be carving out big chunks of Federal spending, of tax relief, and there were a couple of other exemptions that were mentioned that would be exempt from pay-go. If we take them off the table, and if we take entitlement spending off the table—at least current, present entitlement spending—and we take discretionary spending off the table, it seems to me all we have done is, again, created this gimmick that is trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the American people that we are really doing something serious about fiscal responsibility which, in fact, we all know is not the case.

Mr. President, I hope we get serious about fiscal responsibility here. It means we have to get our arms around spending. We cannot fix the fiscal problems in this country when we exempt everything and say we are going to continue to spend—in fact, the appropriations bill passed in the House of Representatives the other day; they passed one of their appropriations bills with a 12-percent increase over last year. How can we justify that when we have a $1.8 trillion deficit this year and an economy that is in recession? The Federal Government is supposed to be leading the way, setting the example, and we cannot even live within our means. We say we are going to implement pay-go and, boom, before the ink is even dry on whatever statement they may have signed, we have a House Appropriations subcommittee passing an appropriations bill with a 12-percent year-over-year increase. And, again, because discretionary spending is exempt from pay-go, what difference does this announcement on pay-go really make, other than to try to pull the wool over the eyes of the American people?

I hope the American people figure that out. I think they will. I certainly know, around here at least, we get new data all the time about the size of the deficit and what we are going to look at in the foreseeable future. It is a very disturbing picture. That is why I think it is so important we get spending under control, that we get the Federal Government out of the private ownership of American business, and let American business do what it does best: create jobs and make their own management decisions, not the Federal Government, because it controls such a big part of these businesses, intervening and trying to impose their political will on this decisionmaking process, and that we do everything we can to prevent a government takeover of our health care system, at a cost of somewhere between $1 trillion and $2 trillion, which will inevitably lead to much higher taxes.

Somebody has to pay. These things all have to be paid for or we can borrow it, which is what we did with the stimulus bill. So we can have higher taxes or more borrowing. I argue the spending has to stop. That is the only way we are going to get our fiscal house in order and make it clear to the American people we are serious in Washington about getting spending under control. I hope we get a vote on my exit plan, my bill. I think we need a plan to exit the scene and get government out of the ownership of large parts of the private economy and private businesses in this country. I hope we will do everything we can to prevent a government takeover of our health care system, which is one-sixth of our economy.

I also hope we will not fall for dumb gimmicks like pay-go, which do nothing to address, fundamentally, the financial and fiscal problems our country faces, but that we will get serious about getting spending under control and putting America on a fiscal path toward fiscal discipline that is fair and responsible to the people in this country, who pay these bills, the American taxpayers.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I walked in the Chamber and saw you presiding. And I said to Lula Davis, who helps us so much here, what a terrific addition you have been to the Senate. That is really true. The people of Alaska are so fortunate to have you in the Senate.

You are very constructive. You protect the State of Alaska like no one I have ever seen look out for the interests of a State.

And I think everyone in the Senate recognizes what a fine person you are, and as the days go on, you are going to get even better. So on a personal note, I appreciate all of your good work.

(At the request of Mr. REID, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.)

FLAG DAY

• Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, our flag is the most recognizable symbol of the United States, an instant wordless message freighted with history and meaning. The Stars and Stripes is much more than a war banner. Each flag carries visions of smoke-clouded battles, to be sure, but also visions of brave explorers venturing into new lands, astronauts landing on the moon, athletes celebrating Olympic victories, and of coffins carried on somber caissons to a final honored resting place. Old Glory also marks every great American moment, from presidential inaugurations that celebrate the peaceful transition of power in our democracy to the defiant unfurling of flags over the battered ruins of the Pentagon and the Twin Towers.

June 14 is Flag Day. Although flags fly every day in front of many Federal, State and local office buildings every day, and many flags are displayed on other holidays such as the Fourth of July, Memorial Day, and Veterans Day, only on Flag Day do we honor the flag itself.

The first national observance of Flag Day was in 1877, though it was not until 1949 that President Truman signed into law legislation recognizing the anniversary of the adoption, on June 14, 1777, by the Continental Congress, of the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of the United States.

In earlier years, much more was done to mark the occasion of Flag Day. Schools educated students on the rituals and principles of citizenship, and held patriotic programs to honor the flag. These days, it is enough to mark the day by flying the flag. I hope that many Americans will do so, and do it properly—hoisting the flag up smartly, bringing it down reverently, and folding it away again properly. Once it is up and flapping in the breeze, take just a moment to admire it, or to say the Pledge of Allegiance.

On June 14, 1777, a congressional committee established the design of our flag in a few short words. The record notes simply that “. . . the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.” In the years since, the number of stars in that constellation has expanded, but the brave ideals that it represents—that all men were created equal, endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights including life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—shine as true today as they have since 1776.

Our flag is a symbol that goes well beyond the cloth out of which it is fashioned. It is America, and long may it wave.

I close with a favorite poem of mine, by Henry Holcomb Bennett, that I like to recite on Flag Day. It never fails to stir my spirits, as I hope it does for those listening.

THE FLAG GOES BY

(By Henry Holcomb Bennett)

Hats off!
 Along the street there comes
 A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,
 A flash of color beneath the sky:
 Hats off!
 The flag is passing by!
 Blue and crimson and white it shines,
 Over the steel-tipped, ordered lines.
 Hats off!
 The colors before us fly;
 But more than the flag is passing by.
 Sea-fights and land-fights, grim and great,
 Fought to make and to save the State:
 Weary marches and sinking ships;
 Cheers of victory on dying lips;
 Days of plenty and years of peace;
 March of a strong land's swift increase;
 Equal justice, right, and law,
 Stately honor and reverend awe;
 Sign of a nation, great and strong
 Toward her people from foreign wrong:
 Pride and glory and honor,—all
 Live in the colors to stand or fall.
 Hats off!
 Along the street there comes
 A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums;
 And loyal hearts are beating high:
 Hats off!
 The Flag is passing by!•

XLIV COMPLIANCE

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, paragraph 4 of rule XLIV of the Standing Rules of the Senate provides that, “If during consideration of a bill or joint resolution, a Senator proposes an amendment containing a congressionally directed spending item, limited tax benefit, or limited tariff benefit which was not included in the bill or joint resolution as placed on the calendar or as reported by any committee, in a committee report on such bill or joint resolution, or a committee report of the Senate on a companion measure, then as soon as practicable, the Senator shall ensure that a list of such items (and the name of any Senator who submitted a request to the Senator for each respective item included in the list) is printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.”

The term “congressionally directed spending item” is broadly defined to include “a provision or report language included primarily at the request of a Senator providing, authorizing, or recommending a specific amount of discretionary budget authority, credit authority, or other spending authority for a contract, loan, loan guarantee, grant, loan authority, or other expenditure with or to an entity, or targeted to a specific State, locality or Congressional district, other than through a statutory or administrative formula-driven or competitive award process.” In accordance with rule XLIV, I provide the following information relating to my amendment. No. 1181, that was adopted by the Senate during consideration of H.R. 2346. The amendment will modify interest limitations allowable in a State, as defined in 12 USC 1831 u(f), where the maximum rate of interest is not more than 5 percent above the Federal Reserve discount rate—Arkansas. Specifically, it will relax the maximum rate of interest allowed, increasing it to seventeen percent, effective from date of enactment through December 31, 2010. The provision is generally applicable to any lending occurring within that state that is not conducted by an insured depository institution. I am the principal sponsor of the amendment.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I submit pursuant to paragraph 4(a) of rule XLIV of the Standing Rules of the Senate the following congressionally directed spending item that I requested during consideration of H. R. 2346, the fiscal year 2009 supplemental appropriations bill, and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows.

For purposes of qualification for loans made under the Disaster Assistance Direct Loan Program as allowed under Public Law 111-5 relating to disaster declaration DR-1791 (issued September 13, 2008) the base period for tax determining loss of revenue may be fiscal year 2009 or 2010.

Mr. President, I submit pursuant to paragraph 4(a) of rule XLIV of the Standing Rules of the Senate the following congressionally directed spending item that I requested during consideration of H. R. 2346, the fiscal year 2009 supplemental appropriations bill, and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows.

For areas affected under FEMA-1791-DR, 100 percent federal funding under the Public Assistance Program for debris removal, 90 percent federal funding for all other categories of public assistance, and 90 percent federal funding for Hazard Mitigation.

SBIR/STTR REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2009

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on support of S. 1233, the SBIR/STTR Reauthorization Act of 2009, a bipartisan measure I recently introduced with Senator LANDRIEU. As former chair and now ranking member of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I have long championed critical small business programs such as the Small Business Administration's Small Business Innovation Research, SBIR, and Small Business Technology Transfer, STTR, programs, which direct more than $2 billion in Federal research and development—R&D—funding each year to small businesses across our nation to encourage them to innovate and commercialize new technologies, products, and services. Our legislation would provide key improvements to the SBIR and STTR programs, which were last reauthorized in 2000 and 2001, respectively.

As our Nation emerges from this devastating recession, the worst since World War II, we must ensure that America once again brings to bear the kind of ingenuity, creativity, and innovation that made America and our free market economy the greatest, most powerful on Earth. Indeed, innovation is the “space race” of the 21st century—only this time it is not the U.S. versus Russia; it is the U.S. versus every nation that is jockeying for the lead position and an economic foothold.

The bill we have introduced will greatly help America win this race. It is structured upon a comprehensive measure that our committee passed unanimously, on a bipartisan basis in both the 109th and 110th Congresses. Our legislation includes commonsense enhancements intended to incentivize more small businesses to participate in these vital programs. The bill would increase the size of phase I program awards from $100,000 to $150,000, and phase II awards from $750,000 to $1 million. It would also peg future award increases to inflation. These pivotal reforms represent a well-spring of indispensable technological-fuel to the small business engines that drive our Nation’s innovation.

Since the SBIR program was created in 1982, small technology firms have received more than 77,000 awards worth approximately $24 billion. The SBIR program has tremendous job creation potential. A recent National Academy of Sciences study, which focused on firms winning phase II SBIR awards in fiscal years 1992 through 2002 found that, as a result of their SBIR award, small firms were able to hire an average of 2.4 employees, retain 2.1 more, and over time these firms, on average, each generated 30 jobs.

Our legislation would increase the SBIR allocation—currently 2.5 percent of Federal agencies’ extramural R&D funds—by 1 percent over 10 years and double the STTR allocation over 5 years to 0.6 percent. By doubling the percentage of Federal R&D dollars that the STTR program receives each year, and increasing the SBIR percentage by 1 percent over 10 years, we will infuse another $1 billion into the small business economy. With our economy reeling, the SBIR and STTR programs are more essential than ever, if we are to capitalize on the groundbreaking capacities of our Nation’s pioneering small businesses.

While innovation in areas such as genomics, biotechnology, and nanotechnology present new opportunities, converting these ideas into marketable products involves substantial funding challenges. Many small businesses simply cannot afford the exorbitant cost of developing and bringing a product into the marketplace. In order to confront this challenge, this legislation offers a compromise solution to the venture capital issue that has recently divided members of this committee and the SBIR community. Last Congress, I worked with Senators KERRY, BOND, LIEBERMAN, COLEMAN, and others, to develop a key compromise on this issue that would permit limited venture capital investment in the SBIR program.

Our bill retains this bipartisan compromise and would allow limited involvement of firms majority-owned by venture capital companies in the SBIR program. Specifically, a maximum of 18 percent of SBIR funding at the National Institutes of Health and 8 percent at all other qualifying agencies may be directed to small firms majority-owned by venture capital companies. Our compromise was strongly supported by the stakeholder community, and is consistent with the recent findings of the National Academy of Sciences and Government Accountability Office regarding venture capital investment in SBIR awardees. Additionally, we leave in place well-established SBA “affiliation” rules designed to preserve the intent of the SBIR program by limiting participation to small businesses.

Other key provisions in this vital legislation include the reauthorization and enhancement of my SBIR Defense Commercialization Pilot Program. Senator KERRY and I created this program in the 108th Congress to encourage the award of contracts to SBIR firms. In addition, we would offer this program to all other participating agencies. The bill also would reauthorize and increase funding from $2 million to $5 million for the Federal and State partnership program which would allow each state—including Maine—to receive funding in the form of a grant to make available an array of services in support of the SBIR program.

Now, more than ever, we in Congress must do everything within our power to help small businesses drive the recovery of our economy. It is imperative that we reauthorize the SBIR and STTR programs, particularly before the program terminates at the end of July. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to pass this vital measure in the committee and full Senate, as we move forward to reauthorize these vital programs.

NOMINATION OF STANLEY MCCHRYSAL

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I oppose the nomination of LTG Stanley McChrystal to command U.S. forces in Afghanistan for two reasons. The first relates to a classified matter about which I have serious concerns. I have conveyed those concerns in a letter to the President. The second issue is interrogation.

At his public confirmation hearing, General McChrystal responded to a question from Chairman LEVIN regarding interrogation policies that “included stress positions, the use of dogs and nudity” by stating that “[s]ome of them were in use when I took over, sir, and then, as we immediately began to reduce that.” When asked whether he was “uncomfortable with some of the techniques” in use, he replied “[w]hen I took over, I was.”

However, following the hearing, Chairman LEVIN sent General McChrystal a question for the record describing many of the 14 interrogation techniques not listed in the Army Field Manual that were authorized under General McChrystal’s command, up until May 6, 2004, when CENTCOM Commander General John Abizaid suspended the use of all such techniques. Chairman LEVIN’s question then described a request from General McChrystal, submitted 3 weeks after the suspension, to continue using a number of these techniques, including “sleep management,” “environmental manipulation,” and “control positions.” The request defined “control positions” as “requiring the detainee to stand, sit, kneel, squat, maintain sitting position with back against the wall, bend over chair, lean with head against wall, lie prone across chairs, stand with arms above head or raised to shoulders, or other normal physical training positions” and requested that “in the most exceptional circumstances, and on approval from [the commander]” interrogators be allowed to “use handcuffs to enforce the detainee’s position.”

Asked to square his public testimony with this record, General McChrystal responded that, when he took command in 2003, he reviewed the interrogation program and, in March 2004, “reduc[ed] the frequency of use of several of the techniques” by requiring high-level approval. He also looked to “increase the effectiveness of the entire process and make it more humane” but offered no specifics other than “improved facilities” and improvements in the use of other, non-“enhanced” techniques. General McChrystal then acknowledged that he personally requested approval from General Abizaid to continue using several of the techniques that had just been suspended, including “control positions.” General Abizaid rejected the use of “control positions,” and, according to the Senate Armed Services Committee report, the use of “hooding.”

I have numerous concerns, both about this history and about General McChrystal’s public testimony. I have long opposed any interrogation techniques, whether conducted by the U.S. military or the intelligence community, that are not authorized by the Army Field Manual. I am thus dismayed by General McChrystal's personal support for the use of some of these techniques, particularly the so-called control positions, and by his efforts to continue the techniques after they had been suspended. And, while I have no reason to believe that General McChrystal would not adhere to current law and policy, I am troubled by his failure to express any regret for his previous positions. Finally, I am concerned about General McChrystal's public testimony, which sought to convey that he was "uncomfortable" with various interrogation techniques and sought to "reduce" their use. Given the full history of his approach to interrogations, this testimony appears to be incomplete, at best.

NORTHWESTERN'S NCAA CHAMPIONS

Mr. BURRIS. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure and sincere pride that I congratulate the Northwestern University women's lacrosse team on winning another NCAA Championship.

As a lifelong Illinoisan and an avid sports fan, I am happy to celebrate the tremendous accomplishments of these young women.

In a crowded field of worthy contenders from across the Nation, this Wildcat team rose to the occasion and claimed a fifth straight national title.

Their consistency, grit, and determination is exemplified by their perfect record for the season: 23 to 0, capped off by a resounding victory over the third-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels.

The Northwestern women's lacrosse team also consistently ranks in the top 10 to 15 percent of academic achievement in the NCAA's Annual Academic Report.

It is clear from their record that the Wildcats excelled every time they took the field, but, more importantly, they excelled in the classroom and in the community.

I am proud of this team because they recognized that "student" is supposed to come before "athlete" in the phrase "student athlete."

For many athletes, college sports have become a launching pad for fame and fortune, but on this team you may find doctors, lawyers, and maybe even a senator or two.

Although the games may not have been broadcast to a national audience or as widely covered by the media, the women's lacrosse team deserves just as much recognition as their male counterparts.

They have sacrificed sleep for early morning workouts, weekends for competition, and played a sport that practically requires the commitment of a full-time job, but all the while, they continued to attend class and maintain their studies.

College athletics require a remarkable amount of dedication, and this team deserves notable recognition even if their scores weren't reported on the nightly news or the front page of newspapers. Their demonstrated character and sportsmanship marks them as role models for aspiring athletes throughout the State. Their athletic performance and strong record of academic achievement place them at the pinnacle of intercollegiate success. Although several players may be honored with individual awards, this national title belongs to each and every member of the team.

This victory reminds us that we have the chance to shine only with the support of our comrades, our friends, our teammates. It is through persistent and concerted effort that we reach our potential, and when we inevitably fall, it is only through the strength and grace of our friends that we can pick ourselves up and journey onward.

The teamwork displayed by these young women throughout the season, even under mounting pressure and enormous expectations, allowed them to carry the day. They have done their university, and their State, proud. We should all draw inspiration from their fine example.

With this championship, the Northwestern Wildcats have cemented their position as the top Lacrosse program in the country. They are quickly approaching the record of seven consecutive titles currently held by Maryland, and, like many Illinoisans, I can hardly wait for what will surely be an exciting season next year.

It is with great pride that Senator DURBIN and I come together to celebrate this national championship. And we are proud to offer a Senate resolution congratulating these talented athletes.

In the spirit of good sportsmanship displayed by the Northwestern women's lacrosse team throughout the season, I ask my colleagues to join with us in congratulating these student athletes on their remarkable accomplishment.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

COMMENDING JOSHUA FAIRLEY

• Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I would like to continue the efforts of Senator KAUFMAN and the Partnership for Public Service by honoring an outstanding federal employee in Mississippi.

Public servants fulfill remarkable duties in the government, and their accomplishments deserve grateful recognition.

Mr. Joshua Fairley, an employee at the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Engineer Research and Development Center, USACE-ERDC, in Vicksburg, is a distinguished public servant for his development of new technology to improve the detection accuracy of improvised explosive devices for our Armed Forces. Improvised explosive devices are commonly used in terrorist attacks and have become a principal source of fatalities for men and women in the U.S. Armed Forces.

Mr. Fairley's new technology has resulted in a 75 percent improvement rating for detection accuracy. This Mississippian has used his intelligence to serve our country and protect our troops.

Mr. Fairley was inspired to become a Federal employee because of his desire to make a difference, and he has done so by recognizing challenges and using his skills to overcome them.

I am glad that Senator KAUFMAN has initiated this effort; our Federal employees deserve recognition for the important role they fill.

Mr. Fairley is committed to our Nation, and his contributions have made him the prime example of an outstanding Federal employee.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF BLUNT, SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I recognize the community of Blunt, SD, on reaching the 125th anniversary of its founding. Blunt is a rural community infused with hospitality, beauty, and an exceptional quality of life.

The city of Blunt was settled in 1884 and named after the chief engineer of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, Mr. John E. Blunt. Few early railroad towns in South Dakota were able to boast of the wide variety of early establishments, including 6 hotels, 12 grocers, 9 lumber yards, 5 saloons, and 4 bakeries.

Today, Blunt has come a long way from its days as a railroad supply center. The town still boasts a variety of businesses, including those in both the service and manufacturing sectors. The Graham Mentor Museum and the REA building are just two examples of continuous efforts to bring the community closer.

The people of Blunt celebrate this momentous occasion on the weekend of June 26-28, 2009. South Dakota's small communities are the bedrock of our economy and vital to the future of our State. It is especially because of our small communities, and the feelings of loyalty and familiarity that they engender, that I am proud to call South Dakota home. Towns like Blunt and its citizens are no different and truly know what it means to be South Dakotan. One hundred and twenty-five years after its founding, Blunt remains a vital community and a great asset to the wonderful State of South Dakota. I am proud to honor Blunt on this historic milestone.●

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF ELK
POINT, SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to the 150th anniversary of the founding of the community of Elk Point, SD. After 150 years, this historic community will have a chance to reflect on its past accomplishments and its future goals, and I congratulate this thriving community for all it has done.

Elk Point's colorful history begins with the Lewis & Clark expedition of 1804 when the explorers camped in this area in 1804 and again in 1806. Eli Wixson built a cabin in 1859, becoming the first citizen of Elk Point.

Today, Elk Point's location makes it an ideal location for a variety of businesses with two Interstate 29 exits, a railway hub with service in three directions, and close proximity to the Missouri River for both economic and entertainment purposes. This thriving town is the county seat of Union County, the ninth fastest growing county in the United States in terms of family income.

Elk Point exemplifies a traditional South Dakota community with its close-knit community with a high quality of life. The citizens are independent and welcoming, and the educational system is advanced with modern technology and advanced placement classes.

The citizens of Elk Point will be celebrating their rich heritage June 26-28, 2009 with an All-Class Reunion, Amy's Race for breast cancer research, and various games and entertainment. I congratulate the citizens of Elk Point on their accomplishments over the last 150 years and look forward to seeing their future endeavors.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF IMMANUEL
LUTHERAN CHURCH OF

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I recognize Immanuel Lutheran Church of Canova, SD, on reaching the 125th anniversary of its founding. This historic church has been a cornerstone of both the community and the Synod. Immanuel Lutheran Church has seen its share of struggles, but has always grown stronger from them. Today, I pay tribute to both the anniversary of the church and to the members who have kept its traditions of service and faith alive for 150 years.

The church was founded in 1884 with Rev. J. Reyhout as its pastor. The members, mainly German immigrants, joined the Ohio Synod and built the first church in 1891. The current church was completed in 1914. Known as the "German Church" or "German Lutheran", the congregation's welcome spirit for recent immigrants led to services being held in German. In 1940, they transitioned to every other week in English and German. In 1952, German services were discontinued. Immanuel joined the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America in 1988 on its founding.

Although changes have been coming to this community since its founding, Immanuel Lutheran Church has held steady to the core values that it was founded on. With outreach to the prison, food shelters, and the community, these members have maintained the initial ideals of service and devotion. I congratulate this congregation on reaching this monumental anniversary, and look forward to the future as they continue their traditions.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF LEBANON,
SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I recognize the community of Lebanon, SD, on reaching the 125th anniversary of its founding. This historic anniversary gives the community the chance to reflect on their strong history as well as their optimistic future.

Lebanon was founded by farmers in 1883. Small businesses quickly sprung up in the town and continued to grow for 50 years. In 1926, they built an outdoor swimming pool, which is the oldest of its type today. Lebanon was given two cedar trees by the government of the Country of Lebanon, one of which still lives today.

To celebrate the town's achievement, there will be a weekend of festivities from June 20-21, 2009, with a parade, tractor pull, and various entertainers. While the population of Lebanon has declined, the spirit of the town maintains their strong work ethic and united spirit. Small towns like Lebanon are the backbone of South Dakota, and the people of this community make me proud to represent them.●

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF McLAUGHLIN, SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I rise in order to pay tribute to the community of McLaughlin on reaching its 100th year. This strong town was founded as a railroad community for refueling and replenishment, as well as a center for Indian trade. In celebration of their centennial, there will be a tractor pull, parade, and entertainment throughout the weekend of June 18-21, 2009.

The citizens created a thriving business community soon after it was settled. Large cattle operations were run through the area and McLaughlin became a center for many activities, including trade with residents, both Indian and non-Indian. In 1889, the Standing Rock Reservation was formed, with McLaughlin at the center of the reservation on the South Dakota side. The town was named after MAJ James McLaughlin, a superintendent of Standing Rock, and the town was officially incorporated October 7, 1909. This community now has a grain elevator complex as well as a livestock auction market in town and continues as a traditional hub for its residents. The home of the Mighty Midgets has long been successful, both in the classroom and athletics.

As they reach this monumental anniversary, McLaughlin will have the opportunity to reflect on its diverse and enriched past as well as the opportunities for its future. This community has been noted for its shared history and I congratulate them on reaching their centennial.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF REVILLO,
SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I recognize the community of Revillo, SD, on reaching the 125th anniversary of its founding. Revillo is a warm community, filled with historical beauty and a strong sense of hospitality.

The town of Revillo was founded on the homestead of John Hillstrom in 1884 when the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway entered the area. The Revillo flour mill was built in 1904, where farmers would bring their wheat crop to have it made into Monogram flour to meet their annual needs. In the years before World War I, Revillo was booming with businesses, including two implement dealers, a drug store, two banks, three elevators, and an Opera House.

Today, Revillo is maintaining its history with four churches in town, many members having a lineal connection to those who first established the churches. This thriving community is also looking forward with a modern school and lighted athletic field, the Revillo Farmers Co-op elevator, and a maintainer for the Grant County highway department.

The people of Revillo are celebrating their heritage and their accomplishments June 20-21, 2009. One hundred and twenty-five years after its founding, Revillo holds its history close while continually looking to the future, demonstrating what is great about South Dakota, and why I am proud to call this great State home.●

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF SENECA,
SOUTH DAKOTA

• Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to the 125th anniversary of the founding of the community of Seneca, South Dakota. After 125 years, this agrarian community will have the chance to reflect on both its industrious history as well as the potential of its future.

Beginning with a sod shanty that served as a stopping post as well as the local post office, Seneca began to thrive after the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad pushed west and created the town in 1886. After drawing the name Seneca from a hat, the town immediately began to boom with local businesses being brought in from the surrounding towns. Seneca transitioned from a cattle range to a farming community, with progressive modern conveniences including a notable water system.

This strong town has bound together throughout the years to accomplish whatever came their way. From sending engraved gold rings with their soldiers to World War I in 1917, to building a community center for one thousand dollars in 1937, the citizens of Seneca support their town and its people. This spirit of unity has sustained Seneca through one hundred and twenty-five years of changes and will support them as they move forward. I congratulate the people of Seneca on reaching this historic anniversary.●

COMMENDING 153RD INFANTRY OF THE ARKANSAS NATIONAL GUARD

● Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the outstanding humanitarian assistance recently provided by Company C, 153rd Infantry of the Arkansas National Guard.

In early April, Mena, AR, was hit by an F3 tornado which devastated this small town in western Arkansas. These severe storms killed 3, injured more than 100, and left thousands of residents without power. The tornado also damaged important emergency response centers in the town and county, including the hospital, the police and fire departments, and the courthouse, which houses the 911 emergency dispatch center.

However, under the leadership of CPT Rodney Lay, Company C of the 153rd Infantry, including team leaders 1LT Brian Lawrence Inman, 1SG Eric Schnell, SSG James Schnell, SSG Jacob Sullivan, SSG Neal Badger, and WO Jeffrey Shores, helped to immediately restore order to the devastated community. Company C provided downtown security during the aftermath of the tornado and went door to door to check on area citizens. In addition, they provided aid to victims of the storm that could not be transported to the city's hospital.

Our military simply could not function without the thousands of reservists and guardsmen on bases and armories in communities across this country. Since September 11, 2001, they have been called upon to serve in unprecedented numbers. We honor the tremendous service they provide in preserving our freedoms, but we must also not forget the critical role they play in responding on the homefront in communities like Mena that desperately need their help in restoring order and stability in their time of need.

I am honored to recognize the outstanding service of these citizen soldiers to the State of Arkansas and to the thousands of others who have helped provide assistance and support to communities in need.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Mrs. BOXER):

S. 1236. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to transition to the use of metropolitan statistical areas as fee schedule areas for the physician fee schedule in California under the Medicare program; to the Committee on Finance.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation to correct a longstanding flaw in the Medicare Geographic Practice Cost Index, GPCI, system that negatively impacts physicians in California and several other states.

This legislation will base California physician payments on Metropolitan Statistical Areas, MSAs. Hospital payments are developed this way, and it makes sense to pay our doctors in the same manner.

It holds harmless the counties, predominately rural ones, whose locality average would otherwise drop as other counties are reclassified.

Congressman SAM FARR, along with several California colleagues, is introducing companion legislation.

The Medicare Geographic Practice Cost Index measures the cost of providing a Medicare covered service in a geographic area. Medicare payments are supposed to reflect the varying costs of rent, malpractice insurance, and other expenses necessary to operate a medical process. Counties are assigned to "payment localities" that are supposed to accurately capture these costs.

Here is the problem. Some of these payment localities have not changed since 1997. Others have been in place since 1966. Many areas that were rural even 10 years ago have experienced significant population growth, as metropolitan areas and suburbs have spread. Many counties now find themselves in payment localities that do not accurately reflect their true practice costs.

These payment discrepancies have a real and serious impact on physicians and the Medicare beneficiaries they are unable to serve. My home State of California has been hit particularly hard.

San Diego County physicians are underpaid by 4 percent. A number of physicians have left the county and 60 percent of remaining San Diego physicians report that they cannot recruit new doctors to their practices.

Santa Cruz County receives an 8.6 percent underpayment, and as a result, no physicians are accepting new Medicare patients. Instead, they are moving to neighboring Santa Clara, which has similar practice cost expense, but is reimbursed at a much higher rate. This means that seniors often need to travel at least 20 miles to see a physician.

Sacramento County, a major metropolitan area, is underpaid by 2.7 percent. The county's population has grown by 9.6 percent, while the number of physicians has declined by 11 percent.

Sonoma County physicians are paid at least 6.2 percent less than their geographic practice costs. They have experienced at 10 percent decline in specialists and a 9 percent decline in primary care physicians.

Health care coverage is not the same as access to health care. Seniors' Medicare cards are of no value if physicians in their community cannot afford to provide them with health care.

Physicians deserve to be fairly compensated for the work they perform. California doctors simply want to be compensated at the correct rate for the practice expenses they face.

This is not too much to ask.

The underpayment problem grows more severe every year, and the longer we wait to address it, the more drastic the solution will need to be. This legislation provides a common sense solution, increasing payment for those facing the most drastic underpayments, while protecting other counties from cuts in the process.

This is an issue of equity. It costs more to provide health care in expensive areas, and physicians serving our seniors must be fairly compensated.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1236

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “GPCI Justice Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) From 1966 through 1991, the Medicare program paid physicians based on what they charged for services. The Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1989 required the establishment of a national Medicare physician fee schedule, which was implemented in 1992, replacing the charge-based system.

(2) The Medicare physician fee schedule currently includes more than 7000 services together with their corresponding payment rates. In addition, each service on the fee schedule has three relative value units (RVUs) that correspond to the three physician payment components of physician work, practice expense, and malpractice expense.

(3)(A) Each geographically adjusted RVU measures the relative costliness of providing a particular service in a particular location referred to as a locality. Physician payment localities are primarily consolidations of the carrier-defined localities that were established in 1966.

(B) When physician payment localities were redesignated in 1997, the Administrator of the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services acknowledged that the new payment locality configuration had not been established on a consistent geographic basis. Some were based on zip codes or Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs) while others were based on political boundaries, such as cities, counties, or States.

(C) The Medicare program has not revised the geographic boundaries of the physician payment localities since the 1997 revision.

(4) Medicare’s geographic adjustment for a particular physician payment locality is determined using three GPCIs (Geographic Practice Cost Indices) that also correspond to the three Medicare physician payment components of physician work, practice expense, and malpractice expense.

(5) The major data source used in calculating the GPCIs is the decennial census which provides new data only once every 10 years.

(6) This system of geographic payment designation has resulted in more than half of the current physician payment localities having counties within them with a large payment difference of 5 percent or more. A disproportionate number of these underpaid counties are located in California, Georgia, Minnesota, Ohio, and Virginia.

(7) For purposes of payment under the Medicare program, hospitals are organized and reimbursed for geographic costs according to MSAs.

(8) Studies by the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC) in 2007, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) in 2007, the Urban Institute in 2008, and Acumen LLC in 2008 have all documented this physician GPCI payment discrepancy—specifically that more than half of the current physician payment localities had counties within them with a large payment difference (that is, a payment difference of 5 percent or more) between GAO’s measure of physicians’ costs and Medicare’s geographic adjustment for an area. All these objective studies have recommended changes to the locality system to correct the payment discrepancies.

(9) A common recommendation among the GPCI payment discrepancy studies referred to in paragraph (8) is to eliminate the county-based locality and replace it with one determined by Metropolitan Statistical Area.

SEC. 3. REDESIGNATING THE GEOGRAPHICAL PRACTICE COST INDEX (GPCI) LOCALITIES IN CALIFORNIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1848(e) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C.1395w-4(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(6) TRANSITION TO USE OF MSAS AS FEE SCHEDULE AREAS IN CALIFORNIA.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—

“(i) REVISION.—Subject to clause (ii) and notwithstanding the previous provisions of this subsection, for services furnished on or after January 1, 2010, the Secretary shall revise the fee schedule areas used for payment under this section applicable to the State of California using the Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) iterative Geographic Adjustment Factor methodology as follows:

“(I) The Secretary shall configure the physician fee schedule areas using the Core-Based Statistical Areas-Metropolitan Statistical Areas (each in this paragraph referred to as an ‘MSA’), as defined by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, as the basis for the fee schedule areas. The Secretary shall employ an iterative process to transition fee schedule areas. First, the Secretary shall list all MSAs within the State by Geographic Adjustment Factor described in paragraph (2) (in this paragraph referred to as a ‘GAF’) in descending order. In the first iteration, the Secretary shall compare the GAF of the highest cost MSA in the State to the weighted-average GAF of the group of remaining MSAs in the State. If the ratio of the GAF of the highest cost MSA to the weighted-average GAF of the rest of State is 1.05 or greater then the highest cost MSA becomes a separate fee schedule area.

“(II) In the next iteration, the Secretary shall compare the MSA of the second-highest GAF to the weighted-average GAF of the group of remaining MSAs. If the ratio of the second-highest MSA’s GAF to the weighted-average of the remaining lower cost MSAs is 1.05 or greater, the second-highest MSA becomes a separate fee schedule area. The iterative process continues until the ratio of the GAF of the highest-cost remaining MSA to the weighted-average of the remaining lower-cost MSAs is less than 1.05, and the remaining group of lower cost MSAs form a single fee schedule area. If two MSAs have identical GAFs, they shall be combined in the iterative comparison.

“(iii) TRANSITION.—For services furnished on or after January 1, 2010, in the State of California, after calculating the work, practice expense, and malpractice geographic indices described in clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of paragraph (1)(A) that would otherwise apply through application of this paragraph, the Secretary shall increase any such index to the county-based fee schedule area value on December 31, 2009, if such index would otherwise be less than the value on January 1, 2010.

“(B) SUBSEQUENT REVISIONS.—

“(i) PERIODIC REVIEW AND ADJUSTMENTS IN FEE SCHEDULE AREAS.—Subsequent to the process outlined in paragraph (1)(C), not less often than every three years, the Secretary shall review and update the California Rest-of-State fee schedule area using MSAs as defined by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the iterative methodology described in subparagraph (A)(i).

“(ii) LINK WITH GEOGRAPHIC INDEX DATA REVISION.—The revision described in clause (i) shall be made effective concurrently with the application of the periodic review of the adjustment factors required under paragraph (1)(C) for California for 2012 and subsequent periods. Upon request, the Secretary shall make available to the public any county-level or MSA derived data used to calculate the geographic practice cost index.

“(C) REFERENCES TO FEE SCHEDULE AREAS.—Effective for services furnished on or after January 1, 2010, for the State of California, any reference in this section to a fee schedule area shall be deemed a reference to an MSA in the State.”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO DEFINITION OF FEE SCHEDULE AREA.—Section 1848(j)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395w(j)(2)) is amended by striking “The term” and inserting “Except as provided in subsection (e)(6)(C), the term”.

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself,
Mr. THUNE, and Mrs. GILLI-BRAND):

S. 1239. A bill to amend section 340B of the Public Health Service Act to revise and expand the drug discount program under that section to improve the provision of discounts on drug purchases for certain safety net providers; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleague from South Dakota, Sen. THUNE, to introduce the 340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009. This legislation is designed to address the growing burden faced by our Nation’s health care safety net institutions in being able to provide adequate pharmaceutical care to the most vulnerable patient populations.

Communities across the country rely on public and non-profit hospitals to serve as the health care “safety net” for low-income, uninsured, and underinsured patients. With the ever-increasing cost of pharmaceuticals, these institutions are struggling more and more to provide basic pharmaceutical care to those least able to afford it.

Fortunately, many safety net hospitals are currently able to participate in the federal 340B Drug Discount Program, which enables them to purchase outpatient drugs for their patients at discounted prices. These hospitals, known as “covered entities” under the 340B statute, include high-Medicaid disproportionate share hospitals, DSH, large and small urban hospitals, and certain rural hospitals.

I am introducing legislation today, the 340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009, which would extend discounted drug prices currently mandated only for outpatient drugs to inpatient drugs purchased by covered entities under the 340B program. Although the Medicare Modernization Act (MMA) of 2003 permitted pharmaceutical manufacturers to offer 340B drug discounts to covered entities, this legislation did not include a mandate. Without a mandate we have seen very little willingness on the part of manufacturers to offer 340B drug discounts for inpatient drugs. As the prices of pharmaceutical drugs continue to increase sharply, the need for these inpatient discounts grows more and more acute.

My legislation would also allow expanded participation in the program to a subset of rural hospitals that, for a variety of reasons, cannot currently access 340B discounts. These newly eligible rural hospitals include: critical access hospitals, sole community hospitals, and rural referral centers. In proposing this modest expansion to the program, we have struck an important balance between ensuring a close nexus with low-income and indigent care, ensuring that a significant portion of savings are passed on to the Medicaid program, and strengthening the integrity of the program.

Specifically, newly eligible rural hospitals would have to meet appropriate standards demonstrating their "safety net" status, as do all hospitals that currently participate in the program. For example, sole community hospitals and rural referral centers, all of which are paid under the prospective payment system, would be required under this legislation to serve a significant percentage of low-income and indigent patients, have public or non-profit status, and, if privately owned and operated, to have a contract with state or local government to provide a significant level of indigent care. All standards are designed to reinforce the obligation of these covered entities to continue serving low-income and uninsured patients.

This legislation would also generate savings for the Medicaid program by requiring participating hospitals to credit to their State Medicaid program a percentage of their savings on inpatient drugs. It would address the overall efficiency and integrity of the 340B program through improved enforcement and compliance measures with respect to manufacturers and covered entities. This is designed to improve program administration and to prevent and remedy instances of program abuse.

The 340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009 would help safety net providers stretch their limited resources through increased access to discounted pharmaceuticals, enhance 340B program integrity by making sure participants are complying with program rules, and improve the care provided to this Nation's most vulnerable populations.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1239

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009".

SEC. 2. EXPANDED PARTICIPATION IN SECTION 340B PROGRAM.

(a) EXPANSION OF COVERED ENTITIES RECEIVING DISCOUNTED PRICES.—Section 340B(a)(4) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(a)(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(M) A children's hospital excluded from the Medicare prospective payment system pursuant to section 1886(d)(1)(B)(iii) of the Social Security Act which would meet the requirements of subparagraph (L), including the disproportionate share adjustment percentage requirement under clause (ii) of such subparagraph, if the hospital were a subsection (d) hospital as defined by section 1886(d)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act.

"(N) An entity that is a critical access hospital (as determined under section 1820(c)(2) of the Social Security Act), and that meets the requirements of subparagraph (L)(1).

"(O) An entity that is a rural referral center, as defined by section 1886(d)(5)(C)(i) of the Social Security Act, or a sole community hospital, as defined by section 1886(d)(5)(C)(iii) of such Act, and that both meets the requirements of subparagraph (L)(i) and has a disproportionate share adjustment percentage equal to or greater than 8 percent."

(b) EXTENSION OF DISCOUNTS TO INPATIENT DRUGS.—Section 340B of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "outpatient" each place that such appears in paragraphs (2), (5), (7), and (9); and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking "In this section" and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In this section"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(B) COVERED DRUG.—In this section, the term 'covered drug'—

"(i) means a covered outpatient drug (as defined in section 1927(k)(2) of the Social Security Act); and

"(ii) includes, notwithstanding paragraph (3)(A) of such section 1927(k), a drug used in connection with an inpatient or outpatient service provided by a hospital described in subparagraph (L), (M), (N), or (O) of subsection (a)(4) that is enrolled to participate in the drug discount program under this section.

"(C) PURCHASING ARRANGEMENTS FOR INPATIENT DRUGS.—The Secretary shall ensure that a hospital described in subparagraph (L), (M), (N), or (O) of subsection (a)(4) that is enrolled to participate in the drug discount program under this section shall have multiple options for purchasing covered drugs for inpatients including by utilizing a group purchasing organization or other group purchasing arrangement, establishing and utilizing its own group purchasing program, purchasing directly from a manufacturer, and any other purchasing arrangements that the Secretary may deem appropriate to ensure access to drug discount pricing under this section for inpatient drugs taking into account the particular needs of small and rural hospitals."

(c) PROHIBITION ON GROUP PURCHASING ARRANGEMENTS.—Section 340B(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4)(L)—

(A) in clause (i), by adding "and" at the end;

(B) in clause (ii), by striking ";" and inserting a period; and

(C) by striking clause (iii); and

(2) in paragraph (5)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (D) and (E); respectively; and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (B), the following:

"(C) PROHIBITING THE USE OF GROUP PURCHASING ARRANGEMENTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A hospital described in subparagraphs (L), (M), (N), or (O) of paragraph (4) shall not obtain covered outpatient drugs through a group purchasing organization or other group purchasing arrangement, except as permitted or provided for pursuant to clauses (ii) or (iii).

"(ii) INPATIENT DRUGS.—Clause (i) shall not apply to drugs purchased for inpatient use.

"(iii) EXCEPTIONS.—The Secretary shall establish reasonable exceptions to clause (i)—

"(I) with respect to a covered outpatient drug that is unavailable to be purchased through the program under this section due to a drug shortage problem, manufacturer noncompliance, or any other circumstance beyond the hospital's control;

"(II) to facilitate generic substitution when a generic covered outpatient drug is available at a lower price; or

"(III) to reduce in other ways the administrative burdens of managing both inventories of drugs subject to this section and inventories of drugs that are not subject to this section, so long as the exceptions do not create a duplicate discount problem in violation of subparagraph (A) or a diversion problem in violation of subparagraph (B)."

(d) MEDICAID CREDITS ON INPATIENT DRUGS.—Section 340B(a)(5) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(a)(5)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(E) MEDICAID CREDITS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of filing of the hospital's most recently filed Medicare cost report, the hospital shall issue a credit as determined by the Secretary to the State Medicaid program for inpatient covered drugs provided to Medicaid recipients."

(e) INTEGRITY IMPROVEMENTS.—Subsection (c) of section 340B of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) IMPROVEMENTS IN PROGRAM INTEGRITY.—

"(1) MANUFACTURER COMPLIANCE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—From amounts appropriated under paragraph (4), the Secretary shall provide for improvements in compliance by manufacturers with the requirements of this section in order to prevent overcharges and other violations of the discounted pricing requirements specified in this section.

"(B) IMPROVEMENTS.—The improvements described in subparagraph (A) shall include the following:

"(i) The development of a system to enable the Secretary to verify the accuracy of ceiling prices calculated by manufacturers under subsection (a)(1) and charged to covered entities, which shall include the following:

"(I) Developing and publishing through an appropriate policy or regulatory issuance, precisely defined standards and methodology for the calculation of ceiling prices under such subsection.

"(II) Comparing regularly the ceiling prices calculated by the Secretary with the quarterly pricing data that is reported by manufacturers to the Secretary.

"(III) Performing spot checks of sales transactions by covered entities.

"(IV) Inquiring into the cause of any pricing discrepancies that may be identified and either taking, or requiring manufacturers to take, such corrective action as is appropriate in response to such price discrepancies.

“(ii) The establishment of procedures for manufacturers to issue refunds to covered entities in the event that there is an overcharge by the manufacturers, including the following:

“(I) Providing the Secretary with an explanation of why and how the overcharge occurred, how the refunds will be calculated, and to whom the refunds will be issued.

“(II) Oversight by the Secretary to ensure that the refunds are issued accurately and within a reasonable period of time, both in routine instances of retroactive adjustment to relevant pricing data and exceptional circumstances such as erroneous or intentional overcharging for covered drugs.

“(iii) The provision of access through the Internet website of the Department of Health and Human Services to the applicable ceiling prices for covered drugs as calculated and verified by the Secretary in accordance with this section, in a manner (such as through the use of password protection) that limits such access to covered entities and adequately assures security and protection of privileged pricing data from unauthorized re-disclosure.

“(iv) The development of a mechanism by which—

“(I) rebates and other discounts provided by manufacturers to other purchasers subsequent to the sale of covered drugs to covered entities are reported to the Secretary; and “(II) appropriate credits and refunds are issued to covered entities if such discounts or rebates have the effect of lowering the applicable ceiling price for the relevant quarter for the drugs involved.

“(v) Selective auditing of manufacturers and wholesalers to ensure the integrity of the drug discount program under this section.

“(vi) The imposition of sanctions in the form of civil monetary penalties, which—

“(I) shall be assessed according to standards established in regulations to be promulgated by the Secretary within 180 days of the date of enactment of the 340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009;

“(II) shall not exceed $5,000 for each instance of overcharging a covered entity that may have occurred; and

“(III) shall apply to any manufacturer with an agreement under this section that knowingly and intentionally charges a covered entity a price for purchase of a drug that exceeds the maximum applicable price under subsection (a)(1).

“(2) COVERED ENTITY COMPLIANCE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—From amounts appropriated under paragraph (4), the Secretary shall provide for improvements in compliance by covered entities with the requirements of this section in order to prevent diversion and violations of the duplicate discount provision and other requirements specified under subsection (a)(5).

“(B) IMPROVEMENTS.—The improvements described in subparagraph (A) shall include the following:

“(i) The development of procedures to enable and require covered entities to regularly update (at least annually) the information on the Internet website of the Department of Health and Human Services relating to this section.

“(ii) The development of a system for the Secretary to verify the accuracy of information regarding covered entities that is listed on the website described in clause (i).

“(iii) The development of more detailed guidance describing methodologies and options available to covered entities for billing covered drugs to State Medicaid agencies in a manner that avoids duplicate discounts pursuant to subsection (a)(5)(A).

“(iv) The establishment of a single, universal, and standardized identification system by which each covered entity site can be identified by manufacturers, distributors, covered entities, and the Secretary for purposes of facilitating the ordering, purchasing, and delivery of covered drugs under this section, including the processing of chargebacks for such drugs.

“(v) The imposition of sanctions, in appropriate cases as determined by the Secretary, additional to those to which covered entities are subject under subparagraph (a)(5)(E), through one or more of the following actions:

“(I) Where a covered entity knowingly and intentionally violates subparagraph (a)(5)(B), the covered entity shall be required to pay a monetary penalty to a manufacturer or manufacturers in the form of interest on sums for which the covered entity is found liable under paragraph (a)(5)(E), such interest to be compounded monthly and equal to the current short term interest rate as determined by the Federal Reserve for the time period for which the covered entity is liable.

“(II) Where the Secretary determines a violation of subparagraph (a)(5)(B) was systematic and egregious as well as knowing and intentional, removing the covered entity from the drug discount program under this section and disqualifying the entity from re-entry into such program for a reasonable period of time to be determined by the Secretary.

“(III) Referring matters to appropriate Federal authorities within the Food and Drug Administration, the Office of Inspector General of Department of Health and Human Services, or other Federal agencies for consideration of appropriate action under other Federal statutes, such as the Prescription Drug Marketing Act.

“(3) ADMINISTRATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION PROCESS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the 340B Program Improvement and Integrity Act of 2009, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations to establish and implement an administrative process for the resolution of claims by covered entities that they have been overcharged for drugs purchased under this section, and claims by manufacturers, after the conduct of audits as authorized by subsection (a)(5)(D), of violations of subsections (a)(5)(A) or (a)(5)(B), including appropriate procedures for the provision of remedies and enforcement of determinations made pursuant to such process through mechanisms and sanctions described in paragraphs (1)(B) and (2)(B).

“(B) DEADLINE AND PROCEDURES.—Regulations promulgated by the Secretary under subparagraph (A) shall—

“(i) designate or establish a decision-making official or decision-making body within the Department of Health and Human Services to be responsible for reviewing and finally resolving claims by covered entities that they have been charged prices for covered drugs in excess of the ceiling price described in subsection (a)(1), and claims by manufacturers that violations of subsection (a)(5)(A) or (a)(5)(B) have occurred;

“(ii) establish such deadlines and procedures as may be necessary to ensure that claims shall be resolved fairly, efficiently, and expeditiously;

“(iii) establish procedures by which a covered entity may discover and obtain such information and documents from manufacturers and third parties as may be relevant to demonstrate the merits of a claim that charges for a manufacturer's product have exceeded the applicable ceiling price under this section, and may submit such documents and information to the administrative official or body responsible for adjudicating such claim;

“(iv) require that a manufacturer conduct an audit of a covered entity pursuant to subsection (a)(5)(D) as a prerequisite to initiating administrative dispute resolution proceedings against a covered entity;

“(v) permit the official or body designated under clause (i), at the request of a manufacturer or manufacturers, to consolidate claims brought by more than one manufacturer against the same covered entity where, in the judgment of such official or body, consolidation is appropriate and consistent with the goals of fairness and economy of resources; and

“(vi) include provisions and procedures to permit multiple covered entities to jointly assert claims of overcharges by the same manufacturer for the same drug or drugs in one administrative proceeding, and permit such claims to be asserted on behalf of covered entities by associations or organizations representing the interests of such covered entities and of which the covered entities are members.

“(C) FINALITY OF ADMINISTRATIVE RESOLUTION.—The administrative resolution of a claim or claims under the regulations promulgated under subparagraph (A) shall be a final agency decision and shall be binding upon the parties involved, unless invalidated by an order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

“(4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection, such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2010, and each succeeding fiscal year.”

(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) SOCIAL SECURITY ACT.—Section 1927 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396r-8), is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)(5)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking “covered outpatient drugs” and inserting “covered drugs (as defined in section 340B(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act)”;

(ii) by striking subparagraph (D); and

(iii) by redesignating subparagraph (E) as subparagraph (D);

(B) in subsection (c)(1)(C)(i), by redesignating subclauses (II) through (IV) as subclauses (III) through (V), respectively and by inserting after subclause (I) the following new subclause:

“(II) any prices charged for a covered drug (as defined in section 340B(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act);”;

(C) in subsection (k)(1)—

(i) in subparagraph (A), by striking “subparagraph (B)” and inserting “subparagraphs (B) and (D)”;

(ii) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(D) CALCULATION FOR COVERED DRUGS.—With respect to a covered drug (as defined in section 340B(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act), the average manufacturer price shall be determined in accordance with subparagraph (A) except that, in the event a covered drug is not distributed to the retail pharmacy class of trade, it shall mean the average price paid to the manufacturer for the drug in the United States by wholesalers for drugs distributed to the acute care class of trade, after deducting customary prompt pay discounts. The Secretary shall establish a mechanism for collecting the necessary data for the acute care class of trade from manufacturers.”.

(2) PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT.—Section 340B(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(a)) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)(1), by adding at the end the following: “Each such agreement shall require that the manufacturer furnish the Secretary with reports, on a quarterly basis, of the price for each covered drug subject to the agreement that, according to the manufacturer, represents the maximum price that covered entities may permissibly be required to pay for the drug (referred to in this section as the ‘ceiling price’), and shall require that the manufacturer offer each covered entity covered drugs for purchase at or below the applicable ceiling price if such drug is made available to any other purchaser at any price.”; and

(B) in the first sentence of subsection (a)(5)(E), as so redesignated by subsection (c)(2), by inserting “after an audit as described in subparagraph (D), and” after “finds.”.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on January 1, 2010, and shall apply to drugs purchased on or after January 1, 2010.

(b) EFFECTIVENESS.—The amendments made by this Act shall be effective, and shall be taken into account in determining whether a manufacturer is deemed to meet the requirements of section 340B(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 256b(a)) and of section 1927(a)(5) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396r-8(a)(5)), notwithstanding any other provision of law.

By Mr. INHOFE (for himself and Mr. TESTER):

S. 1241. A bill to amend Public Law 106-206 to direct the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture to require annual permits and assess annual fees for commercial filming activities on Federal land for film crews of 5 persons or fewer; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today with Senator TESTER to lessen the burdens for small commercial filming on public lands. Specifically, this legislation provides special permitting to small film crews, defined in the bill as 5 persons or fewer, to simply pay a reasonable annual fee to be able to film on public lands.

Our Nation’s public lands are an incredible natural resource, and the professional outdoor media industry is a valuable way to bring awareness to our Nation’s resources and bring about awareness of the value of conservation of our Nation’s land and resources through documentaries, sporting programs, and other productions. Small filming crews can be negatively affected by the current permitting and fee schedule because the business of wildlife filming is done on a speculative basis and often relies on unpredictable factors requiring much patience and time. Last Congress, Chairman RAHALL held a Natural Resources Committee hearing on the fees for filming and photography on public lands. At that hearing, Steve Scott, an independent television producer from Norman, OK, and Chairman of the Professional Outdoor Media Association, probably best described the work of small outdoor filming operations. He testified, “By its very nature, wildlife photography is extremely time consuming, often done in the harshest conditions. . . . While large film and television production crews need relatively little time on public lands to complete their project, our nation’s professional outdoor media may spend weeks or months in the field in order to capture a few magic seconds of unstaged Nature in its pristine state. And when outdoor media members spend time in the field, under the current fee structure, we also spend money, and lots of it.” The small professional outdoor filming industry has enough natural barriers; The Federal Government should not impose itself as another through daily fees adding to the expense.

Last Congress, my colleague from Oklahoma, Congressman DAN BOREN, and DON YOUNG, introduced H.R. 5502 to accomplish the same aim of the legislation Senator TESTER and I are introducing today. That legislation was supported by nearly 30 outdoors and sportsmen’s organizations.

Those organizations supporting last Congress’ legislation include the American Fisheries Society, the American Sportfishing Association, the Archery Trade Association, Bass Pro Shops, the Berkley Conservation Institute, Boone and Crockett Club, Bowhunting Preservation Alliance, Campfire Club of America, Catch-A-Dream Foundation, the Congressional Sportsmen’s Foundation, Conservation Force, Dallas Safari Club, Mule Deer Foundation, the National Assembly of Sportsmen’s Caucuses, the National Rifle Association, the National Shooting Sports Foundation, the National Wild Turkey Federation, the North American Bear Foundation, the North American Grouse Partnership, Pheasants Forever, Pure Fishing, Quality Deer Management Association, Quail Forever, the Ruffed Grouse Society, Safari Club International, the Texas Wildlife Association, the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership, the U.S. Sportsmen’s Alliance, the Wild Sheep Foundation, and Wildlife Forever.

This Congress, Congressmen BOREN, RYAN, COURTNEY, MILLER, PUTNAM, and ROSS introduced H.R. 2031 on April 22, 2009, which is identical legislation to the legislation Senator TESTER and I are introducing today. I am sure it will enjoy the same support from our outdoor and sportsmen’s organizations, and I look forward to its consideration in the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1241

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Act is to provide commercial film crews of 5 persons or fewer access to film in areas designated for public use during public hours on Federal lands and waterways.

SEC. 2. ANNUAL PERMIT AND FEE FOR FILM CREWS OF 5 PERSONS OR FEWER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section (1)(a) of Public Law 106-206 (16 U.S.C. 4601-6d) is amended by—

(1) redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively;

(2) striking “The Secretary of the Interior” and inserting “(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by paragraph (3), the Secretary of the Interior”;

(3) inserting “(2) OTHER CONSIDERATIONS.—” before “The Secretary may include other factors”; and

(4) adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR FILM CREWS OF 5 PERSONS OR FEWER.—

“(A) For any film crew of 5 persons or fewer, the Secretary shall require a permit and assess an annual fee of $200 for commercial filming activities or similar projects on Federal lands and waterways administered by the Secretary. The permit shall be valid for commercial filming activities or similar projects that occur in areas designated for public use during public hours on all Federal lands and waterways administered by the Secretary for a 12-month period beginning on the date of issuance of the permit.

“(B) For persons holding a permit described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall not assess, during the effective period of the permit, any additional fee for commercial filming activities and similar projects that occur in areas designated for public use during public hours on Federal lands and waterways administered by the Secretary.

“(C) In this paragraph, the term ‘film crew’ includes all persons present on Federal land under the Secretary’s jurisdiction who are associated with the production of a certain film.

“(D) The Secretary shall not prohibit, as a mechanized apparatus or under any other purposes, use of cameras or related equipment used for the purpose of commercial filming activities or similar projects in accordance with this paragraph on Federal lands and waterways administered by the Secretary.”.

(b) RECOVERY OF COSTS.—Section (1)(b) of Public Law 106-206 (16 U.S.C. 4601-6d) is amended by—

(1) striking “collect any costs” and inserting “recover any costs”; and

(2) striking “similar project” and inserting “similar projects”.

By Mr. THUNE (for himself, Mr. COBURN, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. VITTER, Mr. JOHANNIS, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. KYL, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. BARRASSO, and Mr. ENSIGN):

S. 1242. A bill to prohibit the Federal Government from holding ownership interests, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, over the past 15 months, the Federal Government has taken unprecedented actions to stabilize the U.S. economy. Unfortunately, these actions include the Federal Government acquiring direct ownership stakes in private companies, which exposes the American taxpayer to significant liabilities and creates a dangerous conflict of interest between the Federal Government and the private sector.

Thanks to the fact that the government has intervened in all these private companies, we now have about 500 banks, we have auto manufacturers, financial institutions, and insurance companies that the government now has an ownership interest in. President Obama has become a de facto CEO managing large segments of our economy, and Congress is now acting as a 535-Member board of directors.

I think it is fair to say when you combine business with politics, it inevitably leads to harmful conflicts of interest—which we are already beginning to see—because political decisions get substituted for business decisions.

As everyone in this Chamber knows all too well, government control of private business hampers investments. It hampers innovation, job creation. It diminishes the entrepreneurial spirit on which our economy is based.

Having the Federal Government call the shots for private industry is plain bad for business. It is bad for the economy, and it is bad for the American taxpayer.

So today I am introducing a piece of legislation, S. 1242, which gives the Federal Government an exit plan, a way of exiting the scene from the ownership that the Federal Government now has in all these various private companies in our economy. It essentially has four basic provisions.

The first provision is that upon enactment of the legislation, the Treasury Department may not purchase any additional ownership stake of private entities, such as warrants, preferred stock, or common stock purchased through the TARP program.

The second provision is this: The legislation would require the Treasury to sell any ownership stake of a private entity by July 1, 2010. Any revenue that comes in from the sale of those TARP assets would have to be used for debt reduction.

The third provision of the bill is that if the Treasury Secretary determines the assets are undervalued and there is a reasonable expectation that the assets will increase to their original purchase value, the Secretary may hold the assets for up to 1 additional year.

Finally, the fourth provision of the bill is that beyond July 1 of 2011, the Treasury Secretary may not hold any direct ownership of private companies unless Congress grants additional authority.

Essentially, what we are doing is saying that all this ownership interest the Federal Government now has acquired in all these private companies would have to be wound down, if you will, divested, by that July 1 deadline in the year 2010. If the Treasury Department determines that, in fact, doing so would impair the ability of the Treasury to recover the full value of those assets or if those assets are expected to appreciate, there is an additional year, up to a year of flexibility—essentially a waiver—from the July 1, 2010, deadline that would extend it to July 1, 2011. So it buys an additional year. But it does put a time certain out there, a deadline, if you will, by which the Federal Government has to dispose of and divest itself of all these ownership interests it has in our private economy.

The other issue I think is important is it prevents the Federal Government from acquiring an ownership stake going into the future. As I said before, any funds that are returned to the Treasury as a result of these assets being sold would have to be used for debt reduction. They cannot be recycled; they cannot be reused; they cannot go into some fund that is going to be used for additional acquisition of private sector assets.

I think the reason why this is important is if you look at what Secretary Geithner has said, he has indicated before that their intention is that when some of these funds come back into the Treasury—and we saw this recently with banks that agreed to pay this money back—they are going to reuse it. I don't believe that is what was intended in the first place. I don't think this was at any point designed to become a slush fund that could be used for the acquisition of other assets; it was designed to be used—at least initially, the way it was presented—for the purchase of toxic assets, illiquid assets on the balance sheets of many of our financial institutions. It quickly evolved into something else. It became a fund that was used to acquire an equity stake, equity interest in many of these companies. So I don't think that was the purpose for which it was intended.

I think a lot of people who made votes assumed at the time it wouldn't be used to buy toxic assets. It ended up being used to buy an ownership interest in these companies, and I think, again, the American people are uncomfortable with the notion of the Federal Government owning a big share of our private economy. I also do not think it was intended in the first place to be used to buy the assets of other types of industries—essentially, to do industrial policy, as some people have referred to it—to acquire assets of auto manufacturers, for example; it was designed specifically for the financial services industry.

There is no real exit strategy out there. In fact, Secretary Geithner was asked in front of the Senate Banking Committee a couple weeks ago about whether there was a plan to dispose of some of these assets, and he said there isn't a plan; it is not necessary at this point.

Well, I think we need to have an exit strategy. Everybody talks about an exit strategy. The President needs an exit strategy in Iraq. It seems to me we need to have an exit strategy that would allow the American taxpayer to recover funds they have been investing through the TARP program in all these various companies that would get the Federal Government out of the way of these companies and out of the day-to-day decisionmaking and management of these companies. My bill would prohibit that as well, in addition to some of these other provisions I mentioned.

It would prohibit or bar the Federal Government from dictating to these companies with respect to hiring decisions when it comes to senior executives, when it comes to boards of directors, when it comes to where to relocate or locate or close certain plants. Those are decisions that should not be made by politicians in Washington. They should not be made by bureaucrats in Washington, DC. They ought to be business decisions and not political decisions.

The bill, as I said, is very straightforward.

There are a number of folks who have commented on, made observations about what is happening in the economy right now, and this sort of proliferation of companies in which the Federal Government now has an ownership share. I wish to read for my colleagues some of what has been said by folks who I think know a lot about the private economy and whether it is a good idea to have the Federal Government owning and controlling as much as they do currently of some of these companies. If you look at the various percentages, they are significant. Of course, we know most recently General Motors, a $50 billion investment there gets the taxpayer ownership interest to about 60 percent; Chrysler, about 12 percent; Citibank, about 36 percent, and you can go down the list of all these various private companies in which the government now has an ownership interest.

There was an editorial in the Kansas City Star that said that:

What's worrisome is that while the administration said it isn't interested in running car companies, it has said little on an exit strategy.

It went on to say:

Any government bailout of private industry should be temporary and as brief as possible.

Anne Mulcahy, chief executive of Xerox—I am sure I just butchered the name—said recently:

I think all of us understand the need for the government to intervene and to take the actions they did, but I also think there's a need for an exit plan.

Jim Owens, who is the chief executive at Caterpillar, said:

I think that's fundamentally unhealthy. The Federal Government needs to be in and out.

Google's Eric Schmidt noted that the U.S. stimulus package was designed to cover a 2-year period. He said:

It's very important that government get out of business and let business do its thing. The most important thing to remember, I think, is that jobs, wealth, are created in the private sector. That's about capitalism.

In a Wall Street Journal opinion piece, Paul Ingrassia argues:

... must have a clear exit timetable for the government to sell its shares for both Chrysler and GM and get the companies back in the hands of private investors. Mr. Obama has an exit strategy for Iraq; he needs one for Detroit, too.

So there are a lot of people who have a lot of experience when it comes to running companies who have concluded that the government does, in fact, need an exit strategy. I think, as I said before, it is fair to say that one doesn't exist today, and when Secretary Geithner testified in front of the Senate Banking Committee a couple weeks back he admitted as much, that there isn't an exit plan.

What my bill does is it gives us an exit plan. It gives us an exit plan with a deadline, with a little flexibility in the deadline, some ability to provide a waiver for the Treasury Department that would allow for an additional year, if necessary; if those assets the government holds are considered to be assets that could appreciate over time and, therefore, yield a higher return for the Federal Government but, at some point, we have to say enough is enough. We have to put an end to this practice we have gotten involved with, this precedent we have now created of having the Federal Government own more and more of our private economy.

I would argue, again, that is not good for business, it is not good for the economy, it is not good for job creation; it stifles the entrepreneurial spirit which has built this country and made it great, and I don't think it does anything to create jobs and get our economy back on track.

I hope we will have an opportunity to debate this. It seems to me at least that in the days ahead there will be various bills that will be debated on the floor of the Senate that would give us a chance to debate this issue. I intend to offer this, if I can't get some interest in moving it as a freestanding bill, as an amendment to other vehicles that might be moving through the Senate in the days and the weeks and the months ahead. But I do think it is important. I think it is important to the American taxpayer. I think it is important to the American economy. I think it is important to American business that the Federal Government have an exit strategy. We have a plan whereby we can move and get away from this practice we have undertaken now with great regularity and great frequency of acquiring even more and more interests in American business.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mrs. LINCOLN):

S. 1243. A bill to require repayments of obligations and proceeds from the sale of assets under the Troubled Asset Relief Program to be repaid directly into the Treasury for reduction of the public debt; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Stop TARP Asset Recycling Act, or the STAR Act, a bill that would require any funds returned to the Treasury Department that were originally allocated under the Troubled Asset Relief Program, TARP, to be placed in the general fund rather than being put back into TARP. I am proud to say that this is a bipartisan bill, cosponsored by my friend from Arkansas, Senator LINCOLN.

It is apparent that TARP has become a slush fund for the Obama administration to acquire banks, insurance companies and auto manufacturers. We need to ensure that the original purpose of TARP is maintained and Treasury is prevented from unilaterally and arbitrarily nationalizing our nation's private sector.

The Emergency Economic Stabilization Act, which was signed into law last October, created TARP. This act authorized TARP to purchase up to $700 billion in troubled assets from financial institutions "to restore liquidity and stability to the financial system." However, since its inception, TARP has taken on a different role in our free enterprise system. It seems to have become the go-to solution for all of our problems. It has been used to bail out banks, insurance companies and automobile manufacturers. What is next, Mr. President?

Some of our healthier banks are now returning this money because, I believe, of the unreasonable regulations that have been and could be placed on firms with TARP funds. While it is clear that proceeds from TARP sales must be placed in the general fund to pay down our increasing debt, it is unclear under the law whether or not the original investment from TARP must be placed in the general fund or can be recycled back into TARP. The latter option would result in an ever-revolving slush fund for TARP and could provide this administration with the means to pick and choose which company it would next like to nationalize.

For example, the Treasury Department recently used $30 billion to purchase up to 60 percent of General Motors' shares. If, in the future, Treasury sells these shares at a gain, let us say $32 billion, the $2 billion profit must be put back into the general fund, but it is unclear whether the original $30 billion investment recovered from the sale can be put back into TARP.

I do not believe any of my colleagues intended TARP to get this out of control. It is time that we reestablish the purpose of TARP by requiring Treasury to put the original investment back into the general fund. Congress must no longer stand by and watch Treasury amass an everlasting fund it can use to bail out any industry it deems "too big to fail" without congressional approval.

Ten large banks have recently received Treasury approval to repay $68 billion received under TARP. I believe now is the time to start restricting Treasury's access to these funds. My bill would force Treasury to put this money back into the general fund once it is used. It would not prevent Treasury from using up to $700 billion already authorized under TARP, but it would force Treasury to make sure that the taxpayers' investment is spent wisely.

The American taxpayer has been told to foot the bill for rescuing the financial sector, but now they are being forced to bail out any company at the discretion of the Department of Treasury. Many Utahns are saying it is time to be fiscally conservative, and I agree. So do millions elsewhere across the Nation.

I hope my colleagues would agree as well and support this legislation; otherwise, we have not only written a blank check to Treasury, but we have delegated an enormous amount of power over our free enterprise system. This money belongs to the people, not the Obama administration. I think it is time Congress acts to ensure that TARP is being used for its intended purpose.

By Mr. MERKLEY:

S. 1244. A bill to amend the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to protect breastfeeding by new mothers, to provide for a performance standard for breast pumps, and to provide tax incentives to encourage breastfeeding; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss a bill to help promote and protect breastfeeding in the workplace.

The science is undisputable—babies who are breastfed the first 6 months of life have a greatly reduced risk for acute and chronic disease—yet only ten percent of all infants receive this nourishment that they need to remain healthy. One of the primary reasons for this is that working moms face real and serious challenges to expressing milk when they return to work.

Well, today is a day to change that. In Oregon, we have enacted strong legislation to make sure that working moms are afforded the time and space they need at work to express milk. In fact, my first event as a candidate for U.S. Senate was at a luncheon celebrating the success of Oregon's breastfeeding promotion law. I said that day that I would work to expand Oregon's efforts nationwide, and today we take the important first step towards enacting legislation to protect working moms across the country.

First, I want to thank Representative CAROLYN MALONEY of New York for her strong leadership on this issue. For years, she has been a champion for working moms everywhere, and I applaud her determination to make it easier for women.

We know that 72 percent of moms work full time, and that number is growing. In fact, according to the Center on Work and Family at Boston College, the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. workforce is women with children under three years of age.

Women who decide to breastfeed often face unique challenges and at times, social stigmas, for trying to give their baby the healthiest start in life.

In an environment where mothers return to work as early as 3 to 6 weeks post-partum, often driven by economic necessity, it is simply an act of human decency to protect their right to continue breastfeeding after they return to work to help meet their basic needs with regard to the care and nourishment of their children. But for most, it is an unachievable goal.

If we are to have any hope of increasing the number of babies being breastfed, we need to implement a strategy that addresses workplace conditions.

The Breastfeeding Promotion Act that Representative MALONEY and I are introducing today is a measured step in this direction.

It protects breastfeeding women from discrimination in the workplace, provides tax credits to employers who make accommodations for breastfeeding moms, and most importantly, it affords working moms with the time, space, and privacy they need to express milk.

Many of these changes have been successfully implemented in my home State of Oregon where we have seen a tremendous difference in the experiences of mothers, as well as positive impacts for employers, as a result of this type of legislation.

Tonya Hirte, a senior customer service representative in Portland, said that before the law took effect, she had to express breast milk in a bathroom on a separate floor from her worksite, but that after implementation of the law, her company converted a storage closet into a private, simply-furnished room, bringing dignity to her experience as a mother, and helping her feel valued as an employee.

A Lane County employee said that having a breastfeeding-friendly workplace allowed her to focus better on her work, knowing her daughter's needs were being met emotionally and physically because the work breaks to express breast milk facilitated their breastfeeding relationship when they were together.

But it's not just the employees who are seeing positive changes as a result of the Oregon law. Jim Rochs, General Manager of Carinos Italian Restaurant in Bend, Oregon, says that they create a better team overall if they take care of one another. The time and space his employee needed to express breast milk was not difficult to provide.

Gretchen Peterson, Human Resources Manager for Hanna Andersson clothing design, manufacturer and retail store, said that "legislation to encourage longer-term breastfeeding by eliminating potential workplace barriers has been successfully passed and implemented in Oregon with no negative impact to business." She goes on to say, "Without this opportunity, our employees may have made the choice to stay at home or choose to work for another company which would have caused a significant disruption to our business."

Research from the Maternal Child Health Bureau demonstrates a significant return on investment when businesses support worksite lactation programs.

The Mutual of Omaha insurance company conducted a study that found health care costs for newborns to be three times lower for babies whose mothers participate in their company's maternity and lactation program. Per person health care costs were $2,146 more for employees who did not participate in the program, with a yearly savings of $115,881 in health care claims for the breastfeeding mothers and babies.

This is truly a public health issue. Encouraging breastfeeding for working mothers will help alleviate the negative effects of low breastfeeding rates, including a 21 percent greater infant mortality rate for babies not exclusively breastfed for 6 months, and greater risk over a lifetime for many illnesses including asthma, diabetes, obesity, and certain cancers.

Finally, the timing could not be better as we ramp up our efforts to reform our health care system and work to contain costs. A 2001 USDA study found that if half of the babies in the U.S. were exclusively breastfed for 6 months, we would realize a savings of $3.6 billion in health care costs for the three leading childhood illnesses alone. According to the U.S. Breastfeeding Committee, if we replicate that study based on current breastfeeding statistics, the savings could reach nearly $14 billion in health care costs for all childhood illnesses.

Colleagues, I look forward to passing the Breastfeeding Promotion Act to help make it easier for moms to breastfeed, which will lead to healthier babies, stronger families, and happier workers.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE (for himself and Ms. SNOWE):

S. 1245. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide a tax credit for property owners who remove lead-based paint hazards; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today along with my friend Senator WHITEHOUSE to introduce the Home Lead Safety Tax Credit Act. Unfortunately, lead paint remains a serious risk to families across the country and poses an especially dangerous hazard for children. According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, HUD, 23 million homes in the United States currently have a significant amount of lead-based paint, and exposure has caused 240,000 children under the age of six to have blood-lead levels high enough to cause irreversible neurological damage and learning disabilities.

The current Federal abatement programs are simply inadequate to address the home repair requirements of millions of families who remain exposed to lead. In fiscal year 2008, HUD's Lead Hazard Control Program provided for lead abatement of only 12,600 homes. It doesn't take an advanced degree in mathematics to know that 12,600 is an insufficient abatement number when 240,000 children have already been exposed to harmful levels of lead-based paint.

The tax credit in the Whitehouse-Snowe bill would be worth up to $3,000 per eligible housing unit for abatement costs or up to $1,000 for each unit for interim control costs—which reduce but do not eliminate the hazard. These incentives will encourage property owners to make their homes and properties lead-safe. According to the Maine Indoor Air Quality Council, almost 80 percent of homes and apartments in Maine built before 1978 could have lead paint. That being said, the tax credit in our legislation will help greatly reduce that number and in turn reduce the number of children who require medical treatment as a result of lead exposure.

The Whitehouse-Snowe bill will provide a powerful tax incentive to landlords and make a much greater impact in reducing household lead exposure. It is no surprise that many of our poorest residents are the most affected by lead-based paint illnesses. Whatever their economic situation, no family should be forced to choose between affordability and the safety of their children. Our citizens are facing a multitude of difficult financial decisions in the midst of the current recession, and many people are unable to bear the costs of lead abatement.

It is not news that health care costs are spiraling out of control, and Congress is working hard to find a solution to this complicated problem. Lead-based paint does not require such a complicated solution, and the Home Lead Safety Tax Credit Act takes a proactive role in preventing an illness that doesn't have to exist at all. Children exposed to lead-based paint will pay thousands of dollars in health care costs. Our legislation will not only save the lives of children across our country, but help mitigate the unnecessary burden of lead-based paint poisoning on our health care system. We must do everything in our power to encourage landlords and property owners to rid homes of harmful lead-based paint and I hope my colleagues will join us in supporting this legislation.

By Mr. SANDERS:

S. 1246. A bill to establish a home energy retrofit finance program; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce legislation to establish a Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program. My office has worked closely with a number of stakeholders and experts in developing this Program. It is supported by the Vermont Energy Investment Corporation, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Green for All, the Apollo Alliance, and the Union of Concerned Scientists, because they know that improving residential sector energy use is a strategy to address global warming, save families on their utility bills, and create jobs.

Households across the Nation will be able to lower their energy bills and generate their own renewable energy through the Program. It would provide initial capital to States, according to the established State energy program formula, to set up state revolving finance funds. These State funds would in turn provide financial support for local government programs, such as clean energy district financing, and energy utility programs, such as on-bill financing.

There are already a number of innovative programs to help finance residential energy efficiency and renewable energy across the country. For example, States such as Vermont, New Mexico, California, Virginia, Texas, and Maryland have authorized local governments to provide financing to homeowners for energy improvements. Homeowners then can pay back the cost of the improvements over time on their property tax bills.

The Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program would give these efforts a boost by supporting local government and utility programs that provide households with cost-effective financing for energy efficiency measures and renewable energy. This Program offers a win-win situation where we can achieve our economic and environmental goals. I ask that my colleagues consider the merits of the Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program as we move forward with comprehensive energy and climate change legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1246

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) many families lack access to upfront capital to make cost-effective energy improvements to homes and apartments;

(2) a number of States, local governments, and energy utilities are considering enacting, or have already enacted, innovative energy efficiency and renewable energy finance programs;

(3) home retrofits create and support jobs in the United States in a number of fields, including jobs for electricians, heating and air conditioning installers, carpenters, construction, roofers, industrial truck drivers, energy auditors and inspectors, construction managers, insulation workers, renewable energy installers, and others;

(4) cost-effective energy improvements pay for themselves over time and also save consumers energy, reduce energy demand and peak electricity demand, move the United States towards energy independence, reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and improve the value of residential properties;

(5) modeling has shown that—

(A) energy efficiency and renewable energy upgrades in just 15 percent of residential buildings in the United States would require $280,000,000,000 in financing; and

(B) the upgrades described in subparagraph (A) could reduce carbon dioxide emissions by more than a gigaton; and

(6) home retrofits—

(A) are a key strategy to reducing global warming pollution; and

(B) create and support green jobs.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) ELIGIBLE PARTICIPANT.—The term "eligible participant" means a homeowner, apartment complex owner, residential cooperative association, or condominium association that finances energy efficiency measures and renewable energy improvements to homes and residential buildings under this Act.

(2) ENERGY EFFICIENCY MEASURE AND RENEWABLE ENERGY IMPROVEMENT.—The term "energy efficiency measure and renewable energy improvement" means any installed measure (including products, equipment, systems, services, and practices) that would result in a reduction in—

(A) end-use demand for externally supplied energy or fuel by a consumer, facility, or user; and

(B) carbon dioxide emissions, as determined by the Secretary.

(3) PROGRAM.—The term "program" means the Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program established under section 4(a).

(4) QUALIFIED PROGRAM DELIVERY ENTITY.—The term "qualified program delivery entity" means a local government, energy utility, or any other entity designated by the Secretary that administers the program for a State under this Act.

(5) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy.

SEC. 4. HOME ENERGY RETROFIT FINANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall provide Home Energy Retrofit Finance Program grants to States for the purpose of establishing or expanding a State revolving finance fund to support financing offered by qualified program delivery entities for energy efficiency measures and renewable energy improvements to existing homes and residential buildings (including apartment complexes, residential cooperative associations, and condominium buildings under 5 stories).

(b) FUNDING MECHANISM.—In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall provide funds to States, for use by qualified program delivery entities that administer finance programs directly or under agreements with collaborating third party entities, to capitalize revolving finance funds and increase participation in associated financing programs.

(c) ELIGIBILITY OF QUALIFIED PROGRAM DELIVERY ENTITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide guidance to the States on application requirements for a local government or energy utility that seeks to participate in the program, including criteria that require, at a minimum—

(A) a description of a method for determining eligible energy professionals who can be contracted with under the program for energy audits and energy improvements, including a plan to provide preference for entities that—

(i) hire locally;

(ii) partner with State Workforce Investment Boards, labor organizations, community-based organizations, and other job training entities; or

(iii) are committed to ensuring that at least 15 percent of all work hours are performed by participants from State-approved apprenticeship programs; and

(B) a certification that all of the work described in subparagraph (A) will be carried out in accordance with subchapter IV of chapter 31 of title 40, United States Code.

(2) REPAYMENT OVER TIME.—To be eligible to participate in the program, a qualified program delivery entity shall establish a method by which eligible participants may pay over time for the financed cost of allowable energy efficiency measures and renewable energy improvements.

(d) ALLOCATION.—In making funds available to States for each fiscal year under this Act, the Secretary shall use the allocation formula used to allocate funds to States to carry out State energy conservation plans under part D of title III of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6321 et seq.).

(e) USE OF FUNDS.—Of the amounts in a State revolving finance fund—

(1) not more than 20 percent may be used by qualified program delivery entities for interest rate reductions for eligible participants; and

(2) the remainder shall be available to provide direct funding or other financial support to qualified program delivery entities.

(f) STATE REVOLVING FINANCE FUNDS.—On repayment of any funds made available by qualified program delivery entities under the program, the funds shall be deposited in the applicable State revolving finance fund to support additional financing to qualified program delivery entities for energy efficiency measures and renewable energy improvements.

(g) COORDINATION WITH STATE ENERGY EFFICIENCY RETROFIT PROGRAMS.—Home energy retrofit programs that receive financing through the program shall be carried out in accordance with all authorized measures, performance criteria, and other requirements of any applicable Federal home energy efficiency retrofit programs.

(h) PROGRAM EVALUATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a program evaluation to determine—

(A) how the program is being used by eligible participants, including what improvements have been most typical and what regional distinctions exist, if any;

(B) what improvements could be made to increase the effectiveness of the program; and

(C) the quantity of verifiable energy savings and renewable energy deployment achieved through the program.

(2) REPORTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report that describes the results of the program evaluation required under this subsection, including any recommendations.

(B) STATE REPORTS.—Not less than once every 2 years, States participating in the program shall submit to the Secretary reports on the use of funds through the program that include any information that the Secretary may require.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act for each of fiscal years 2010 through 2015.

(b) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—An amount not exceeding 5 percent of the amounts made available under subsection (a) shall be available for each fiscal year to pay the administrative expenses necessary to carry out this Act.

By Mr. CASEY:

S. 1248. A bill to establish a program in the Department of Energy to encourage consumers to trade in older vehicles for more fuel-efficient vehicles and motorcycles, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Green Transportation Efficiency Act of 2009. This bill would establish a voucher program in the Department of Energy to encourage American consumers to trade in their older, less fuel-efficient vehicles for new, more fuel-efficient vehicles, including motorcycles.

This act is very similar to other “cash for clunkers” bills offered in the House and Senate in that it will help stimulate the economy by providing a much needed boost to our struggling automobile industry, but will go a step further by bolstering the U.S. motorcycle industry as well. After 14 straight years of growth, sales of motorcycles in the U.S. declined eight percent in 2007, and, 10 percent in 2008. Due in large part to the downturn in our economy, motorcycle sales have dropped 30 percent in the first quarter of 2009, according to the Motorcycle Industry Council. In my home State of Pennsylvania, Harley-Davidson has had to cut production and reduce its work force as a result of these declines in motorcycle sales. Established in 1973, the Harley-Davidson assembly plant in York, PA, is the company’s largest manufacturing facility and is the third largest employer in York County, PA, employing over 2,200 people. It has been reported that it is probably the leanest time that Harley has faced since the company went public in 1986. Harley-Davidson, like the auto makers and other manufacturing sectors, is fighting hard to maintain its workforce and to continue to produce a high quality, American-made product during these tough economic times. However, the specter of further reductions in motorcycle sales could lead to further job losses in my State, a State already hard hit by the current economic crisis.

Indeed, the economic impact of the American motorcycle industry also extends far beyond the direct employment at facilities such as the Harley-Davidson manufacturing plants in Pennsylvania, Missouri, or Wisconsin. Many of the same parts suppliers that provide the critical supply chain for our American auto manufacturers, in States such as Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and many others, also rely upon motorcycle manufacturers as critical customers. These parts manufacturers and suppliers will also be aided by increased motorcycle sales. The effect of increased motorcycle sales will be immediate and meaningful. For example, Harley-Davidson utilizes “Just In Time” manufacturing principles, meaning they do not hold parts inventories. So, every new bike ordered triggers new orders for parts—there is very little elasticity in the supply chain, so the economic benefit down the line is immediate.

Finally, in terms of economic activity, this act recognizes the challenges faced by our auto dealerships and the best way to help those dealerships is to encourage the purchasing of new, more fuel-efficient vehicles. The same principle applies to our motorcycle dealers.

In addition to helping to spur economic recovery and protect manufacturing jobs in Pennsylvania and other parts of the country where motorcycles and motorcycle parts are manufactured and assembled, the inclusion of motorcycles in this act will help America move away from its dependence on foreign sources of oil. Motorcycles are inherently fuel efficient. Average miles-per-gallon for motorcycles ranges from 40–50 MPG, even higher for smaller bikes.

Allowing consumers the option of trading in their older, inefficient vehicles for newer, more fuel efficient cars, trucks, and motorcycles will help the Nation achieve the dual goals of reducing our demand for imported oil and reducing our emissions of greenhouse gases—both critical components of our energy future. Just as importantly, the act will provide a much needed jump start to the auto and motorcycle industries at a time when their sales are at historic lows, plants are closing, and jobs are being lost.

I urge all of my colleagues to join me in support of this Act so that consumers are given a strong signal from Washington to trade in their older, inefficient vehicles and purchase new, high-fuel-efficient cars, trucks, or motorcycles.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1248

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Green Transportation Efficiency Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) AUTOMOBILE.—The term “automobile” has the meaning given the term in section 32901(a) of title 49, United States Code.

(2) CATEGORY 1 TRUCK.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term “category 1 truck” means a non-passenger automobile that has a combined fuel economy value of at least 18 miles per gallon.

(B) EXCLUSION.—The term “category 1 truck” does not include a category 2 truck.

(3) CATEGORY 2 TRUCK.—The term “category 2 truck” means a non-passenger automobile that is a large van or a large pickup, as categorized by the Secretary using the method used by the Environmental Protection Agency and described in the report entitled “Light-Duty Automotive Technology and Fuel Economy Trends: 1975 through 2008”.

(4) CATEGORY 3 TRUCK.—The term “category 3 truck” means a work truck.

(5) COMBINED FUEL ECONOMY VALUE.—The term “combined fuel economy value” means—

(A) in the case of a qualifying vehicle, the number, expressed in miles per gallon, centered below the term “Combined Fuel Economy” on the label required to be affixed or caused to be affixed on a qualifying vehicle pursuant to part 600 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (or comparable regulations);

(B) in the case of an eligible trade-in vehicle, the equivalent of the number described in subparagraph (A) that is posted—

(i) under the term “Estimated New EPA MPG” and above the term “Combined” for vehicles of model years 1984 through 2007; or

(ii) under the term “New EPA MPG” and above the term “Combined” for vehicles of model year 2008 or later on the fuel economy website of the Environmental Protection Agency for the make, model, and year of the vehicle; or

(C) in the case an eligible trade-in vehicle manufactured during model years 1978

through 1984, the equivalent of the number described in subparagraph (A), as determined by the Secretary (and posted on the website of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration) using data maintained by the Environmental Protection Agency for the make, model, and year of the eligible trade-in vehicle.

(6) DEALER.—The term “dealer” means a person licensed by a State who engages in the sale of new automobiles to ultimate purchasers.

(7) ELIGIBLE TRADE-IN VEHICLE.—The term “eligible trade-in vehicle” means an automobile, work truck, or motorcycle that, at the time the automobile, work truck, or motorcycle is presented for trade-in under this Act—

(A) is in drivable condition;

(B) has been continuously insured consistent with the applicable State law and registered to the same owner for a period of not less than 1 year immediately prior to the trade-in;

(C) was manufactured less than 25 years before the date of the trade-in; and

(D) in the case of an automobile, has a combined fuel economy value of 18 miles per gallon or less.

(8) MOTORCYCLE.—The term “motorcycle” means a motor vehicle with motive power having a seat or saddle for the use of the rider and designed to travel on not more than 3 wheels in contact with the ground.

(9) NEW FUEL-EFFICIENT AUTOMOBILE.—The term “new fuel-efficient automobile” means a passenger automobile, category 1 truck, category 2 truck, or category 3 truck—

(A) the equitable or legal title of which has not been transferred to any person other than the ultimate purchaser;

(B) that carries a manufacturer’s suggested retail price of $45,000 or less;

(C) that—

(i) in the case of a passenger automobile, category 1 truck, or category 2 truck, is certified to applicable standards established under section 86.1811–04 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (or a successor regulation); or

(ii) in the case of a category 3 truck, is certified to the applicable vehicle or engine standards established under section 86.1816–08, 86.007–11, or 86.008–10 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations (or successor regulations); and

(D) that has the combined fuel economy value of—

(i) in the case of a passenger automobile, 22 miles per gallon;

(ii) in the case of a category 1 truck, 18 miles per gallon; and

(iii) in the case of a category 2 truck or a category 3 truck, 15 miles per gallon.

(10) NEW FUEL-EFFICIENT MOTORCYCLE.—The term “new fuel-efficient motorcycle” means a motorcycle—

(A) the equitable or legal title of which has not been transferred to any person other than the ultimate purchaser;

(B) that carries a manufacturer’s suggested retail price of not less than $7,000 and not more than $20,000; and

(C) that has a manufacturer’s estimated combined fuel economy of at least 40 miles per gallon.

(11) NON-PASSENGER AUTOMOBILE.—The term “non-passenger automobile” has the meaning given the term in section 32901(a) of title 49, United States Code.

(12) PASSENGER AUTOMOBILE.—The term “passenger automobile” means a passenger automobile (as defined in section 32901(a) of title 49, United States Code) that has a combined fuel economy value of at least 22 miles per gallon.

(13) PROGRAM.—The term “Program” means the Green Transportation Efficiency Program established by section 3.

(14) QUALIFYING LEASE.—The term “qualifying lease” means a lease of an automobile for a period of not less than 5 years.

(15) QUALIFYING VEHICLE.—The term “qualifying vehicle” means—

(A) a new fuel-efficient automobile; or

(B) a new fuel-efficient motorcycle.

(16) SCRAPPAGE VALUE.—The term “scrappage value” means the amount received by the dealer for a vehicle on transferring title of the vehicle to the person responsible for ensuring the dismantling and destroying of the vehicle.

(17) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Energy.

(18) ULTIMATE PURCHASER.—The term “ultimate purchaser” means, in the case of any qualifying vehicle, the first person who in good faith purchases the qualifying vehicle for purposes other than resale.

(19) VEHICLE IDENTIFICATION NUMBER.—The term “vehicle identification number” means the 17-character number used by the automobile industry to identify individual automobiles.

(20) WORK TRUCK.—The term “work truck” has the meaning given the term in section 32901(a) of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. 3. GREEN TRANSPORTATION EFFICIENCY PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Department of Energy a voluntary program to be known as the “Green Transportation Efficiency Program” under which the Secretary, in accordance with this section and regulations issued under subsection (h), shall—

(1) authorize the issuance of an electronic voucher in accordance with subsection (c) to offset the purchase price, or lease price for a qualifying lease, of a qualifying vehicle on the surrender of an eligible trade-in vehicle to a dealer participating in the Program;

(2) certify dealers for participation in the Program—

(A) to accept vouchers in accordance with this section as partial payment or down payment for the purchase or qualifying lease of any qualifying vehicle offered for sale or lease by the dealer; and

(B) in accordance with subsection (c)(2), to transfer each eligible trade-in vehicle surrendered to the dealer to an entity for disposal;

(3) in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, make electronic payments to dealers for vouchers accepted by the dealers, in accordance with the regulations issued under subsection (h);

(4) in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, provide for the payment of rebates to persons who qualify for a rebate under subsection (c)(3); and

(5) in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Inspector General of the Department of Energy, establish and provide for the enforcement of measures to prevent and penalize fraud under the Program.

(b) QUALIFICATIONS FOR AND VALUE OF VOUCHERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A voucher issued under the Program shall have a value that may be applied to offset the purchase price, or lease price for a qualifying lease, of a qualifying vehicle in accordance with this subsection.

(2) NEW FUEL-EFFICIENT AUTOMOBILES.—

(A) $3,500 VALUE.—A voucher may be used to offset the purchase price or lease price of a new fuel-efficient automobile by $3,500 if the new fuel-efficient automobile is—

(i) a passenger automobile and the combined fuel economy value of the passenger automobile is at least 4 miles per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle;

(ii) a category 1 truck and the combined fuel economy value of the category 1 truck is at least 2 miles per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle;

(iii) a category 2 truck that has a combined fuel economy value of at least 15 miles per gallon and—

(I) the eligible trade-in vehicle is a category 2 truck and the combined fuel economy value of the new fuel-efficient automobile is at least 1 mile per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle; or

(II) the eligible trade-in vehicle is a category 3 truck of model year 2001 or earlier; or

(iv) a category 3 truck and the eligible trade-in vehicle is a category 3 truck of model year of 2001 or earlier and is of similar size or larger than the new fuel-efficient automobile, as determined in a manner prescribed by the Secretary.

(B) $4,500 VALUE.—A voucher may be used to offset the purchase price or lease price of the new fuel-efficient automobile by $4,500 if the new fuel-efficient automobile is—

(i) a passenger automobile and the combined fuel economy value of the passenger automobile is at least 10 miles per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle;

(ii) a category 1 truck and the combined fuel economy value of the category 1 truck is at least 5 miles per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle; or

(iii) a category 2 truck that has a combined fuel economy value of at least 15 miles per gallon and the combined fuel economy value of the category 2 truck is 2 miles per gallon higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle and the eligible trade-in vehicle is a category 2 truck.

(3) NEW FUEL-EFFICIENT MOTORCYCLES.—A voucher may be used to offset the purchase price of the new fuel-efficient motorcycle by $2,500 if—

(A) the new fuel-efficient motorcycle is street-use approved; and

(B) the manufacturer’s estimated combined fuel economy is at least 15 miles higher than the combined fuel economy value of the eligible trade-in vehicle.

(c) PROGRAM SPECIFICATIONS.—

(1) LIMITATIONS.—

(A) GENERAL PERIOD OF ELIGIBILITY.—A voucher issued under the Program shall be used only for the purchase or qualifying lease of a qualifying vehicle that occurs during the period—

(i) beginning on January 1, 2009; and

(ii) ending on the date that is 3 years after the date on which the regulations issued under subsection (h) are issued.

(B) NUMBER OF VOUCHERS PER PERSON AND PER TRADE-IN VEHICLE.—

(i) SINGLE PERSON.—Not more than 1 voucher may be issued for a single person.

(ii) JOINT REGISTERED OWNERS.—Not more than 1 voucher may be issued for the joint registered owners of a single eligible trade-in vehicle.

(C) NO COMBINATION OF VOUCHERS.—Only 1 voucher issued under the Program may be applied toward the purchase or qualifying lease of a qualifying vehicle.

(D) LIMITATION ON FUNDS FOR CATEGORY 3 TRUCKS AND MOTORCYCLES.—Not more than

7.5 percent and 15 percent of the total funds made available for the Program shall be used for vouchers for the purchase or qualifying lease of category 3 trucks and motorcycles, respectively.

(E) COMBINATION WITH OTHER INCENTIVES PERMITTED.—The availability or use of a Federal, State, or local incentive or a State-issued voucher for the purchase or lease of a qualifying vehicle shall not limit the value or issuance of a voucher under the Program to any person otherwise eligible to receive the voucher.

(F) NO ADDITIONAL FEES.—A dealer participating in the Program may not charge a person purchasing or leasing a qualifying vehicle any additional fees associated with the use of a voucher under the Program.

(G) NUMBER AND AMOUNT.—The total number and value of vouchers issued under the Program may not exceed the amounts made available for vouchers under subsection (i).

(2) DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE TRADE-IN VEHICLES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), for each eligible trade-in vehicle surrendered to a dealer under the Program, the dealer shall certify to the Secretary, in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation, that the dealer—

(i) has not and will not sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of the eligible trade-in vehicle for use as an automobile in the United States or in any other country; and

(ii) will transfer the eligible trade-in vehicle (including the engine and drive train), in such manner as the Secretary prescribes, to an entity that will ensure that the eligible trade-in vehicle—

(I) will be crushed or shredded within such period and in such manner as the Secretary prescribes; and

(II) has not been, and will not be, sold, leased, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of for use as an automobile in the United States or in any other country.

(B) SALE OF PARTS.—Nothing in subparagraph (A) prevents a person who dismantles or disposes of an eligible trade-in vehicle from—

(i) selling any parts of the disposed eligible trade-in vehicle other than the engine block and drive train (unless the engine or drive train has been crushed or shredded); or

(ii) retaining the proceeds from the sale.

(C) COORDINATION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall coordinate with the Attorney General and the Secretary of Transportation to ensure that the National Motor Vehicle Title Information System and other publicly accessible systems are appropriately updated on a timely basis to reflect the crushing or shredding of eligible trade-in vehicles under this section and appropriate reclassification of the titles of the eligible trade-in vehicles.

(ii) ACCESS TO VINS.—The commercial market shall have electronic and commercial access to the vehicle identification numbers of eligible trade-in vehicles that have been disposed of on a timely basis.

(3) ELIGIBLE PURCHASES OR LEASES PRIOR TO DATE OF ENACTMENT.—A person who purchased or leased a qualifying vehicle after January 1, 2009, and before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall be eligible for a cash rebate equivalent to the amount described in subsection (b)(2)(A) if the person proves to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

(A)(i) the person was the registered owner of an eligible trade-in vehicle; or

(ii) if the person leased the qualifying vehicle, the lease was a qualifying lease; and

(B) the eligible trade-in vehicle has been disposed of in accordance with paragraph (2)(A).

(d) ANTI-FRAUD PROVISIONS.—

(1) VIOLATION.—It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly violate this section (including a regulation issued pursuant to subsection (h)).

(2) PENALTIES.—Any person who commits a violation described in paragraph (1) shall be liable to the United States Government for a civil penalty of not more than $15,000 for each violation.

(e) INFORMATION TO CONSUMERS AND DEALERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and promptly on the updating of any applicable information, the Secretary shall make available on an Internet website and through other means determined by the Secretary information about the Program, including—

(A) how to determine if a vehicle is an eligible trade-in vehicle;

(B) how to participate in the Program, including how to determine participating dealers; and

(C) a comprehensive list, by make and model, of qualifying vehicles meeting the requirements of the Program.

(2) PUBLIC AWARENESS CAMPAIGN.—Once information described in paragraph (1) is available, the Secretary shall conduct a public awareness campaign to inform consumers about the Program and where to obtain additional information.

(f) RECORDKEEPING AND REPORT.—

(1) DATABASE.—The Secretary, in coordination with the Secretary of Transportation, shall maintain a database of the vehicle identification numbers of all qualifying vehicles purchased or leased and all eligible trade-in vehicles disposed of under the Program.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 60 days after the termination date described in subsection (c)(1)(A)(ii), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report that describes the efficacy of the Program, including—

(A) a description of Program results, including—

(i) the total number and amount of vouchers issued for purchase or lease of qualifying vehicles by manufacturer (including aggregate information concerning the make, model, model year, and category of automobile and motorcycle);

(ii) aggregate information regarding the make, model, model year, and manufacturing location of eligible trade-in vehicles traded in under the Program; and

(iii) the location of sale or lease;

(B) an estimate of the overall increase in fuel efficiency in terms of miles per gallon, total annual oil savings, and total annual greenhouse gas reductions, as a result of the Program; and

(C) an estimate of the overall economic and employment effects of the Program.

(g) EXCLUSION OF VOUCHERS AND REBATES FROM INCOME.—

(1) FOR PURPOSES OF ALL FEDERAL PROGRAMS.—A voucher issued under the Program or a cash rebate issued under subsection (c)(3) shall not be regarded as income and shall not be regarded as a resource for the month of receipt of the voucher or rebate and the following 12 months, for purposes of determining the eligibility of the recipient of the voucher or rebate (or the spouse or other family or household member of the reipient) for benefits or assistance, or the amount or extent of benefits or assistance, under any Federal program.

(2) FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION.—A voucher issued under the Program or a cash rebate issued under subsection (c)(3) shall not be considered as gross income for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(h) REGULATIONS.—Notwithstanding section 553 of title 5, United States Code, not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall issue final regulations to implement the Program, including regulations that—

(1) provide for a means of certifying dealers for participation in the Program;

(2) establish procedures for the reimbursement of dealers participating in the Program to be made through electronic transfer of funds for both the amount of the vouchers and any reasonable administrative costs incurred by the dealer as soon as practicable but not later than 10 days after the submission to the Secretary of a voucher for a qualifying vehicle;

(3) allow the dealer to use the voucher in addition to any other rebate or discount offered by the dealer or the manufacturer for a qualifying vehicle and prohibit the dealer from using the voucher to offset any such other rebate or discount;

(4) require dealers to disclose to the person trading in an eligible trade-in vehicle the best estimate of the scrappage value of the vehicle and to permit the dealer to retain $50 of any amounts paid to the dealer for scrappage of the eligible trade-in vehicle as payment for any administrative costs to the dealer associated with participation in the Program;

(5) establish a process by which persons who qualify for a rebate under subsection (c)(3) may apply for the rebate;

(6) consistent with subsection (c)(2), establish requirements and procedures for the disposal of eligible trade-in vehicles and provide such information as may be necessary to entities engaged in the disposal to ensure that the eligible trade-in vehicles are disposed of in accordance with the requirements and procedures, including—

(A) requirements for the removal and appropriate disposition of refrigerants, anti-freeze, lead products, mercury switches, and such other toxic or hazardous vehicle components prior to the crushing or shredding of an eligible trade-in vehicle, in accordance with procedures established by the Secretary in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and in accordance with other applicable Federal and State requirements;

(B) a mechanism for dealers to certify to the Secretary that each eligible trade-in vehicle will be transferred to an entity that will ensure that the eligible trade-in vehicle is disposed of, in accordance with the requirements and procedures, and to submit the vehicle identification numbers of the vehicles disposed of and the qualifying vehicle purchased with each voucher; and

(C) a list of entities to which dealers may transfer eligible trade-in vehicles for disposal;

(7) consistent with subsection (c)(2), establish requirements and procedures for the disposal of eligible trade-in vehicles and provide such information as may be necessary to entities engaged in the disposal to ensure that the eligible trade-in vehicles are disposed of in accordance with the requirements and procedures; and

(8) provide for the enforcement of the penalties described in subsection (d).

(i) FUNDING.—From the amounts made available under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (Public Law 111-5), the Director of the Office of Management and Budget may allocate such sums as the Director determines are necessary to carry out this Act.

By Mr. NELSON, of Florida (for himself, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BENNET, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. CARDIN, and Mr. BROWNBACK):

S. 1250. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue code of 1986 to expand the definition of cellulosic biofuel to include algae-based biofuel for purposes of the cellulosic biofuel producer credit and the special allowance for cellulosic biofuel plant property; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce, with several of my colleagues, the Algae-based Renewable Fuel Promotion Act.

The energy, environmental, and food supply challenges confronting our nation are immense. The United States imports roughly 60 percent of the crude oil consumed domestically, much of it from unstable parts of the world. As global demand continues to rise, price shocks in oil markets are increasingly common, causing economic pain and hardship for American consumers. Our overwhelming reliance on traditional fossil fuels contributes to unsustainable greenhouse gas emissions levels and the damaging effects of global warming. Ethanol made from corn or soybean—also called first generation biofuels—serve an important function in diversifying our energy base, but their benefits are largely offset by their adverse effects on food prices and the environment.

Addressing these challenges requires a multi-faceted strategy that invests in renewable and alternative energy sources, green technology, and conservation measures. If we succeed, the payoff will be a cleaner, healthier, and more economically prosperous future.

I was pleased that the economic stimulus legislation enacted earlier this year included important investments in renewable energy and green technology programs. It also included a number of expanded tax incentives, including tax credits for renewable energy sources, such as wind, geothermal, hydropower, and biomass; energy-efficient home improvements; and plug-in electric vehicles, to name just a few.

The legislation I am introducing today with six of my colleagues in the Senate—three on each side of the aisle—builds on these investments and incentives by recognizing the powerful potential of a new and emerging energy source, algae.

After years of basic research at the academic and governmental level, new algae-based fuels are poised to move from the experimentation stage to commercial development. These fuels have the potential to make a significant contribution to our energy future. Algae are one of nature's most prolific and efficient photosynthetic organisms. They have a short growing cycle, high oil content, and can require little land or potable water. An algae-based fuel needs only sunlight, CO₂, and in some cases, other nutrient inputs to produce biomass that can be converted into readily usable liquid transportation fuels—gasoline, jet fuel, and diesel. Unlike some of the other energy sources currently under development, algae-based fuels are “drop-in” fuels, that is to say, they can be incorporated into our existing energy infrastructure, including our pipelines, terminals, and our fleet of trucks, cars and jets.

For example, over the past several months, commercial airlines have flown four successful test flights using a variety of biofuel jet fuel blends, including a Continental Airlines flight using a blend of algae- and jatropha-derived biofuel and a Japan Airlines flight using a similar blend that also included camelina.

Moreover, some algae-based fuel production processes even sequester and consume CO₂. Algae production facilities can use CO₂ emitted by a coal-fired electric utility as a feedstock for the production of the fuel. As a result, algae-based fuels can help transform the energy landscape by shifting our energy consumption to a renewable, home-grown fuel that is carbon neutral or better.

Unfortunately, current Federal tax policy inhibits the production of algae-based fuels by failing to provide a level playing-field relative to other alternative and renewable fuels. Tax incentives currently apply to the production of liquefied petroleum gas, compressed or liquefied natural gas, ethanol, liquefied hydrogen, biodiesel, liquid fuels derived from coal, and other alternative fuels. Many of these incentives were added to the tax code well before recent technological developments demonstrated the extraordinary promise of algae as a renewable fuel source. In order to ensure that Federal tax incentives stimulate the most promising and environmentally beneficial energy sources available, the tax code should be updated to incorporate and promote algae-based fuel production.

The Algae-based Renewable Fuel Promotion Act would make two modest changes to the tax code to promote the development and commercialization of algae-based fuels in the U.S. First, the bill would expand the $1.01 per gallon income tax credit for cellulosic biofuels to cover algae-based biofuels. The bill retains the current law December 31, 2012, expiration date for the cellulosic biofuel producer credit. Second, the bill would extend the capital investment tax incentives for cellulosic biofuels to cover equipment used to produce algae-based fuels. Specifically, the bill would modify the 50 percent bonus depreciation provision for property used to produce cellulosic biofuel by extending the provision to qualified algae-based biofuel plant property. The bill retains the current law requirement that qualified property must be placed in service before January 1, 2013. By ensuring that algae-based fuels fully benefit under Federal tax policies that promote renewable and alternative fuels, the legislation will encourage investment in this sustainable energy source and make an important contribution to our energy landscape for years to come.

Algae-based fuels are just one of the many renewable and alternative energy sources under development by aggressive and entrepreneurial start-up firms. These firms seek to capitalize on the commercial opportunities presented by the transition away from reliance on fossil fuels. It is critical that we regularly review the tax code to ensure that it encourages and promotes the most promising renewable energy sources available. The Algae-based Renewable Fuel Promotion Act is one step in this direction. I encourage my colleagues to support it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1250

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Algae-based Renewable Fuel Promotion Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. INCLUSION OF ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL IN DEFINITION OF CELLULOSIC BIOFUEL.

(a) CELLULOSIC BIOFUEL PRODUCER CREDIT.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Paragraph (4) of section 40(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting “and algae-based” after “cellulosic”.

(2) DEFINITIONS.—Paragraph (6) of section 40(b) of such Code is amended—

(A) by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading,

(B) by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The cellulosic and algae-based biofuel producer credit of any taxpayer is an amount equal to the applicable amount for each gallon of—

“(i) qualified cellulosic biofuel production,

and

“(ii) qualified algae-based biofuel production.”,

(C) by redesignating subparagraphs (F), (G), and (H) as subparagraphs (I), (J), and (K), respectively,

(D) by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading of subparagraph (I), as so redesignated,

(E) by inserting “or algae-based biofuel, whichever is appropriate,” after “cellulosic biofuel” in subparagraph (J), as so redesignated,

(F) by inserting “and qualified algae-based biofuel production” after “qualified cellulosic biofuel production” in subparagraph (K), as so redesignated, and

(G) by inserting after subparagraph (E) the following new subparagraphs:

“(F) QUALIFIED ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL PRODUCTION.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘qualified algae-based biofuel production’ means any algae-based biofuel which is produced by the taxpayer, and which during the taxable year—

“(i) is sold by the taxpayer to another person—

“(I) for use by such other person in the production of a qualified algae-based biofuel mixture in such other person’s trade or business (other than casual off-farm production),

“(II) for use by such other person as a fuel in a trade or business, or

“(III) who sells such algae-based biofuel at retail to another person and places such algae-based biofuel in the fuel tank of such other person, or “(ii) is used or sold by the taxpayer for any purpose described in clause (i).

The qualified algae-based biofuel production of any taxpayer for any taxable year shall not include any alcohol which is purchased by the taxpayer and with respect to which such producer increases the proof of the alcohol by additional distillation.

“(G) QUALIFIED ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL MIXTURE.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘qualified algae-based biofuel mixture’ means a mixture of algae-based biofuel and gasoline or of algae-based biofuel and a special fuel which—

“(i) is sold by the person producing such mixture to any person for use as a fuel, or “(ii) is used as a fuel by the person producing such mixture.

“(H) ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL.—For purposes of this paragraph—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘algae-based biofuel’ means any liquid fuel, including gasoline, diesel, aviation fuel, and ethanol, which—

“(I) is produced from the biomass of algal organisms, and “(II) meets the registration requirements for fuels and fuel additives established by the Environmental Protection Agency under section 211 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7545).

“(ii) ALGAL ORGANISM.—The term ‘algal organism’ means a single- or multi-cellular organism which is primarily aquatic and classified as a non-vascular plant, including microalgae, blue-green algae (cyanobacteria), and macroalgae (seaweeds).

“(iii) EXCLUSION OF LOW-PROOF ALCOHOL.—Such term shall not include any alcohol with a proof of less than 150. The determination of the proof of any alcohol shall be made without regard to any added denaturants.”

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Subparagraph (D) of section 40(d)(3) of such Code is amended—

(i) by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading,

(ii) by inserting “or (b)(6)(F)” after “(b)(6)(C)” in clause (ii), and

(iii) by inserting “or algae-based” after “such cellulosic”.

(B) Paragraph (6) of section 40(d) of such Code is amended—

(i) by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading, and

(ii) by striking the first sentence and inserting “No cellulosic and algae-based biofuel producer credit shall be determined under subsection (a) with respect to any cellulosic or algae-based biofuel unless such cellulosic or algae-based biofuel is produced in the United States and used as a fuel in the United States.”

(C) Paragraph (3) of section 40(e) of such Code is amended by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading.

(D) Paragraph (1) of section 4101(a) of such Code is amended—

(i) by inserting “or algae-based” after “cellulosic”, and

(ii) by inserting “and 40(b)(6)(H), respectively” after “section 40(b)(6)(E)”.

(b) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE FOR CELLULOSIC BIOFUEL PLANT PROPERTY.—Subsection (1) of section 168 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(1) by inserting “AND ALGAE-BASED” after “CELLULOSIC” in the heading,

(2) by inserting “and any qualified algae-based biofuel plant property” after “qualified cellulosic biofuel plant property” in paragraph (1),

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (4) through (8) as paragraphs (6) through (10), respectively,

(4) by inserting “or qualified algae-based biofuel plant property” after “cellulosic biofuel plant property” in paragraph (7)(C), as so redesignated,

(5) by striking “with respect to” and all that follows in paragraph (9), as so redesignated, and inserting “with respect to any qualified cellulosic biofuel plant property and any qualified algae-based biofuel plant property which ceases to be such qualified property.”,

(6) by inserting “or qualified algae-based biofuel plant property” after “cellulosic biofuel plant property” in paragraph (10), as so redesignated, and

(7) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraphs:

“(4) QUALIFIED ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL PLANT PROPERTY.—The term ‘qualified algae-based biofuel plant property’ means property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation—

“(A) which is used in the United States solely to produce algae-based biofuel, “(B) the original use of which commences with the taxpayer after December 31, 2008,

“(C) which is acquired by the taxpayer by purchase (as defined in section 179(d)) after December 31, 2008, but only if no written binding contract for the acquisition was in effect on or before such date, and “(D) which is placed in service by the taxpayer before January 1, 2013.

“(5) ALGAE-BASED BIOFUEL.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘algae-based biofuel’ means any liquid fuel which is produced from the biomass of algal organisms.

“(B) ALGAL ORGANISM.—The term ‘algal organism’ means a single- or multi-cellular organism which is primarily aquatic and classified as a non-vascular plant, including microalgae, blue-green algae (cyanobacteria), and macroalgae (seaweeds).”

(c) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) CELLULOSIC BIOFUEL PRODUCER CREDIT.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to fuel produced after December 31, 2008.

(2) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE FOR CELLULOSIC BIOFUEL PLANT PROPERTY.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to property purchased and placed in service after December 31, 2008.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of the Algae-based Renewable Fuel Promotion Act.

I would first like to thank Senator BILL NELSON for his leadership on this extraordinary piece of legislation, which gives algae-based biofuels the same tax incentives that cellulosic biofuels currently enjoy. Specifically, the bill would provide a $1.01 per gallon tax credit and offer 50 percent bonus depreciation for property used in the production of algae-based biofuels. In short, this legislation will level the playing field for algae, resulting in enhanced development and commercialization.

Recent technological advances have showcased the tremendous potential of algae as a renewable fuel source. Algae-based biofuels can be refined into gasoline, jet fuel and diesel. These fuels are renewable, have a low-carbon footprint, and can fit seamlessly into our existing energy infrastructure. Additionally, algae does not compete for arable land or potable water. Algae grows best in very sunny climates, making the desert an ideal place for production, and it utilizes saltwater, not freshwater, to grow. It also has a short-life cycle and high oil content.

Algae-based renewable fuels will play an important role in America’s clean energy portfolio, and provide an answer to the question of how we will decrease our dependence on foreign oil and increase our domestic security. Again, I thank my colleague, Senator BILL NELSON, and I look forward to working with my colleagues in the Senate on this important piece of legislation.

By Mr. WARNER:

S. 1251. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for advanced illness care management services for Medicare beneficiaries, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to help seniors navigate through a complicated and often overwhelming health care delivery system. Because of the fragmented nature of our healthcare system, we often fail to provide patients, their families, and caregivers with the necessary tools, information, and support to age well and with dignity in the setting of their preference. I believe that if we provide patients with better information about advance care planning in non-crisis situations, they will make decisions for themselves and their families that result in better care and better quality of life.

Our health care system is in need of sweeping reforms that will not only provide broader coverage but will also increase value and efficient access to quality care. As we provide meaningful reforms for the healthcare system, we should take the opportunity to refine and enhance those parts of the Medicare system that work well for seniors.

Currently, Medicare beneficiaries with advanced illnesses have a good option in the Medicare hospice benefit to receive care, family support, and counseling during the last six months of life. For those who are ill or in need of advanced illness care, but are not eligible for the hospice benefit, there are very few options for counseling and services that would help them make informed choices about their care options. Often, they are left in the dark about their treatment alternatives and without the support they and their family members need to prepare and plan for the care they want and need. Frankly, it is unconscionable to leave it to families to resolve these extraordinarily difficult decisions, often in moments of crisis, without appropriate information, materials and supportive services. The Senior Navigation and Planning Act of 2009 will help seniors and their families navigate through an extremely complex system and will help them make informed medical decisions.

My legislation would provide access to an advanced illness care management benefit, increase the awareness of advance care planning through a national education campaign and clearinghouse, reduce legal hurdles to the enforcement of advance directives, create incentives for hospitals and physicians to get accredited and certified in palliative care, increase compliance with medical orders and discharge instructions, educate entities including faith-based organizations on advance care planning issues, and increase integration and coordination between the Medicare and Medicaid programs. Collectively, these initiatives will create a more accessible environment for seniors to receive the care they need, when they need it, in the setting they prefer.

Specifically, the advanced illness care management benefit would allow Medicare beneficiaries who have been diagnosed with a life expectancy of 18 months or less to have access to the guidance and expertise of a hospice team and receive services such as consultations on palliative care, advance care planning that is patient-centered, and counseling, respite, and care giving training for their family members. This new advanced illness care management benefit will provide seniors with the support they need to make informed decisions.

This initiative builds upon the efforts of the hospice community and the private sector. For example, United Health Group has created an Advanced Illness model in their benefit design and offers this program to the seniors they serve in Medicare Advantage and Special Needs Plans. They have found by providing access to the hospice and palliative care teams earlier, patients experience an increase in the quality of their life and duplicative or futile care is reduced. Aetna and Kaiser Permanente have also implemented these types of programs with similar results.

In addition to the impact a lack of advance care planning and access to supportive services has on a patient's quality of life, inadequate access to advance care planning services contributes to 27 percent of Medicare costs spent in the last year of life. Advanced illness, palliative, and hospice care have been shown to improve quality of care at a reduced cost. Specifically, studies demonstrate that if an additional 2 percent of hospitalized Medicare beneficiaries received palliative care, direct cost savings to the Medicare program would be $1.57 billion. Given health care costs are growing at an alarming rate and that seniors may not be getting the necessary information they need to make appropriate treatment decisions, we need to act now to provide them with access to advanced illness and advance care planning services.

I believe that rather than deny or withhold healthcare services, overall health reform should include a thoughtful process that informs patients, their families, and caregivers on how to navigate and think through decisions about when and how long to pursue treatments at the end-of-life. By doing this, we will provide a culture in which all of us will have the ability to age well, with dignity, in the setting of our choosing.

It is my hope that this legislation will be incorporated into the broader health care reform effort that is underway in the Finance and Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committees. I look forward to working with Chairmen BAUCUS and KENNEDY to implement these meaningful reforms so seniors have access to the information and services they need to receive the care they deserve.

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself, Mr. INOUE, and Ms. CANTWELL):

S. 1252. A bill to promote ocean and human health and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, oceans affect human health both directly and indirectly from the water quality at our beaches to the safety of seafood at U.S. markets; therefore, it is important to understand the relationship between environmental stressors, coastal conditions, climate change, and human health. Over the last several decades ocean and coastal waters have become channels for environmental threats to human health including infectious disease, harmful toxins from algae, and chemical pollutants from contact with contaminated seafood, polluted drinking water, and dirty beaches. Since the 1960s, scientists have realized that marine plants, animals, and microbes can also produce substances that benefit human health, such as anticancer, anti-inflammatory, and antibiotic medicines.

Through well designed research and monitoring programs, we can maximize the health benefits derived from the oceans, improve the safety of American seafood, reduce beach closures, and detect emerging threats to human health in a proactive rather than reactive manner.

In 2004, Congress enacted the Oceans and Human Health Act which authorized the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, and the National Institutes of Health to conduct research to improve understanding of the connection between the oceans and public health. Today, Senator INOUE, Senator CANTWELL, and I are introducing the Oceans and Human Health Reauthorization Act of 2009.

This legislation would direct the President, working through the National Science and Technology Council, to coordinate a national research program to improve understanding of the role of the oceans, coasts and Great Lakes in human health and deliver information, products, and services to assist the nation in reducing public health risks, including those related to climate change, and enhancing health benefits from the ocean. It would establish the Oceans and Human Health Task Force that will include a number of federal agencies, such as the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation, the National Institute for Environmental Health Science, and the Center for Disease Control. It would direct the Interagency Oceans and Human Health Task Force to develop an implementation plan that: establishes the goals and priorities for federal research that advance scientific understanding of the connections between oceans and human health; provides information for the prediction, surveillance, and forecasting of marine-related public health problems, including those related to climate change; and uses the biological and chemical potentials of the oceans to develop new products for the prevention and treatment of diseases and to increase our understanding of the biological properties of ocean resources. The legislation would also reauthorize the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Oceans and Human Health Initiative and establish a Distinguished Scholars program for scientists to work with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration on the oceans and human health initiative.

Importantly, this bill would recognize the effects of climate change on oceans and human health. The effects of climate change do not stop with sea level rise and increased water temperatures. Without physical and ecological boundaries, climate change causes a cascade of effects throughout ocean environments that can result in surprising impacts on ocean and human health. This reauthorization bill would include climate change and oceans and human health as a new research area.

Our oceans impact every American and they are a foundation of America's economy. The research and monitoring supported by this bill will help make sure we have healthy oceans where people can swim, fish, play, and eat seafood. It will also help us develop new blue jobs in marine natural products and lead to new discoveries in medicines to cure deadly diseases.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1252

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Oceans and Human Health Reauthorization Act of 2009".

SEC. 2. INTERAGENCY OCEANS AND HUMAN HEALTH RESEARCH PROGRAM.

(a) COORDINATION.—Subsection (a) of section 902 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3101) is amended by striking "in human health." and inserting ", coasts, and Great Lakes in human health and deliver information, products, and services to assist the nation in reducing public health risks, including those related to climate change, and enhancing health benefits from the ocean."

(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Subsection (b) of section 902 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3101) is amended—

(1) by amending the matter preceding paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Not later than 5 years after the date of the enactment of the Oceans and Human Health Reauthorization Act of 2009, an Interagency Oceans and Human Health Task Force or working group established by the National Science and Technology Council, through the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, shall revise and update the 2007 'Interagency Oceans and Human Health Research Implementation Plan' and submit to the Congress the updated Plan. Nothing in this subsection is intended to duplicate or supersede the activities of the Inter-Agency Task Force on Harmful Algal Blooms and Hypoxia established under section 603 of the Harmful Algal Bloom and Hypoxia Research and Control Act of 1998 (Public Law 105-383; 16 U.S.C. 1451 note). The updated plan shall—

(2) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by inserting ", surveillance, and forecasting" after "prediction";

(B) by inserting ", including problems related to climate change," after "health problems";

(C) by inserting "and chemical" after "biological"; and

(D) by inserting "products for the prevention and" after "new";

(3) in paragraph (2), by striking "and participation;" and all that follows through the end and inserting "participation in national and international research and outreach efforts, and outreach to the medical community and the public;";

(4) in paragraph (3), by inserting ", including joint efforts," after "departments";

(5) in paragraph (4), by striking "preventive" and inserting "preventing";

(6) in paragraph (5), by inserting "Resources" after "the Ocean";

(7) in paragraph (6), by striking "and" at the end;

(8) by amending paragraph (7) to read as follows:

"(7) estimate funding needed for research, surveillance, education, and outreach activities to be conducted within or supported by Federal agencies and departments under the program."; and

(9) by at the end the following:

"(8) build on, and complement, the research, surveillance, and outreach activities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, and other departments and agencies.".

(c) PROGRAM SCOPE.—Subsection (c) of section 902 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3101) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(1) Interdisciplinary research among the ocean, atmospheric, and medical sciences, and coordinated research and activities to improve understanding of processes within the ocean that may affect human and marine animal health and to explore the potential contribution of marine organisms to medicine and research, including—

"(A) vector-, water-, and food-borne diseases of humans and marine organisms, including marine mammals, corals, and fish;

"(B) health effects for both humans and marine animals associated with harmful algal blooms and hypoxia (in collaboration with the Inter-Agency Task Force on Harmful Algal Blooms and Hypoxia);

"(C) health effects for humans and marine organisms associated with climate change impacts in ocean, coastal, and Great Lakes waters;

"(D) marine-derived pharmaceuticals and other natural products;

"(E) marine organisms and habitats as models for biomedical research and as indicators of human health and well being and marine environmental health;

"(F) marine environmental microbiology;

"(G) legacy and emerging chemicals of concern, including bioaccumulative and endocrine-disrupting chemical contaminants;

"(H) predictive models based on indicators of marine environmental health or public health threats; and

"(I) social, economic, and behavioral studies of relationships between the condition of oceans, coasts, and Great Lakes and human health and well-being.";

(2) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) Coordination with any appropriate interagency working group of the Joint Subcommittee on Ocean Science and Technology, or its successor body, through the National Science and Technology Council, to ensure that any integrated ocean and coastal observing system provides information necessary to monitor and reduce marine public health problems, including climate change information, health-related data on biological populations, and detection of toxins and contaminants in marine waters and seafood."; and

(3) in paragraph (3)—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking "genomics and proteomics" and inserting "genomics, proteomics, metabolomics, and other related sciences";

(B) by amending subparagraph (C) to read as follows:

"(C) in situ, laboratory, and remote sensors—

"(i) to detect, quantify, and predict the presence, distribution, concentration, toxicity, or virulence of infectious microbes, harmful algae, toxins, and chemical contaminants in ocean, coastal, and Great Lakes waters, sediments, organisms, and seafood; and

"(ii) to identify new genetic resources for biomedical purposes;"; and

(C) in subparagraph (E), by striking "equipment and technologies" and inserting "equipment, technologies, and methodologies".

(d) BIENNIAL REPORT.—Subsection (d) of section 902 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3101) is amended—

(1) in the heading, by striking "ANNUAL" and inserting "BIENNIAL";

(2) in the material preceding paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "24 months after the date of enactment of this Act" and inserting "12 months after the date of the enactment of the Oceans and Human Health Reauthorization Act of 2009";

(B) by striking "each year an annual" and inserting "alternate years a biennial"; and

(C) by striking "year," and inserting "years.";

(3) in paragraph (1), by striking "year;" and inserting "years;";

(4) in paragraph (4), by striking "that preceding fiscal year;" and inserting "the preceding two fiscal years;" and

(5) in paragraph (5), by inserting ", funding needs," after "action".

SEC. 3. NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION OCEANS AND HUMAN HEALTH INITIATIVE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Subsection (a) of section 903 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3102) is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking the second sentence, and inserting "In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall consult with other Federal agencies and departments conducting integrated oceans and human health research and disease surveillance activities and research in related areas, including the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, and other agencies and departments."; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by inserting "external" after "an".

(b) ADVISORY PANEL.—Subsection (b) of section 903 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3102) is amended—

(1) by striking "is authorized to" and inserting "shall"; and

(2) by striking "sciences," and inserting "sciences, including public health practitioners.".

(c) NATIONAL CENTERS.—Subsection (c) of section 903 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3102) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "for"; and

(2) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) The centers shall focus on—

"(A) areas related to agency missions, including use of marine organisms and habitats as indicators for marine environmental health, impacts of climate change on ocean health threats, ocean pollutants, marine toxins and pathogens, harmful algal blooms, hypoxia, seafood safety and quality, identification of potential marine products, and biology and pathobiology of marine mammals, corals, and other marine organisms; and “(B) supporting disciplines including marine genomics, marine environmental microbiology, ecological chemistry, and conservation medicine.”.

(d) EXTRAMURAL RESEARCH GRANTS.—Subsection (d) of section 903 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3102) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(3) Grants under this subsection shall support research to improve understanding of processes within the ocean that may affect human and marine animal health and to explore the potential contribution of marine organisms to medicine and research, including—

“(A) vector-, water-, and food-borne diseases of humans and marine organisms, including marine mammals, corals, and fish;

“(B) health effects for humans and marine organisms associated with climate change impacts in ocean, coastal, and Great Lakes waters;

“(C) marine-derived pharmaceuticals and other natural products;

“(D) marine organisms and habitats as models for biomedical research and as indicators of human health and well being and marine environmental health;

“(E) marine environmental microbiology;

“(F) legacy and emerging chemicals of concern, including bioaccumulative and endocrine-disrupting chemical contaminants;

“(G) predictive models based on indicators of marine environmental health or public health threats;

“(H) cataloging and interpreting microbes and understanding microbial functions in ecosystems and impacts on human and marine health; and

“(I) social, economic, and behavioral studies of relationships between the condition of oceans, coasts, and Great Lakes, and human health and well-being.”.

(e) DISTINGUISHED SCHOLARS; COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—Section 903 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3102) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(f) DISTINGUISHED SCHOLARS.—The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to establish a competitive program to recognize highly distinguished external scientists in any area of oceans and human health research and to involve those scientists in collaborative work with the Oceans and Human Health Initiative of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

“(g) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary of Commerce may execute and perform such contracts, leases, grants, or cooperative agreements as may be necessary to carry out this section.”.

SEC. 4. PUBLIC INFORMATION AND OUTREACH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 904 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3103) is amended by striking “program,” and inserting “and institutions of higher education.”.

(b) REPORT.—Subsection (b) of section 904 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3103) is amended to read as follows:

“(b) REPORT.—

“(1) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of Commerce shall submit to Congress a biennial report reviewing the results of the research, assessments, and findings developed under the Oceans and Human Health Initiative of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Each such report shall—

“(A) describe the projects, products, and programs funded under the Initiative;

“(B) describe the work of the Advisory Committee and the manner in which the program is meeting development and implementation recommendations for the program; and “(C) include recommendations for improving or expanding the program.

“(2) COMBINED REPORTS.—Each report required by paragraph (1) may be combined with the National Ocean and Atmospheric Administration’s input to the biennial inter-agency report required by section 902(d).”.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Subsection (a) of section 905 of the Oceans and Human Health Act (33 U.S.C. 3104) is amended—

(1) by striking “2005 through 2008” and inserting “2010 through 2014”; and

(2) by inserting “, distinguished scholar,” after “grant”.

By Mr. CORKER (for himself, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. ISAKSON, and Mr. WICKER):

S. 1253. A bill to address reimbursement of certain costs to automobile dealers; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CORKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1253

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Automobile Dealers Assistance Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. REIMBURSEMENT OF AUTOMOBILE DISTRIBUTORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any funds provided by the United States Government, or any agency, department, or subdivision thereof, to an automobile manufacturer or a distributor thereof as credit, loans, financing, advances, or by any other agreement in connection with such automobile manufacturer’s or distributor’s proceeding as a debtor under title 11, United States Code, shall be conditioned upon use of such funds to fully reimburse all dealers of such automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor for—

(1) the cost incurred by such dealers during the 9-month period preceding the date on which the proceeding under title 11, United States Code, by or against the automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor is commenced, in acquisition of all parts and inventory in the dealer’s possession on on the same basis as if the dealers were terminating pursuant to existing franchise agreements or dealer agreements; and

(2) all other obligations owed by such automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor under any other agreement between the dealers and the automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor arising during that 9-month period, including, without limitation, franchise agreement or dealer agreements.

(b) INCLUSION IN TERMS.—Any note, security agreement, loan agreement, or other agreement between an automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor and the Government (or any agency, department, or subdivision thereof) shall expressly provide for the use of such funds as required by this section. A bankruptcy court may not authorize the automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor to obtain credit under section 364 of title 11, United States Code, unless the credit agreement or agreements expressly provided for the use of funds as required by this section.

(c) EFFECTIVENESS OF REJECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any rejection by an automobile manufacturer or manufacturer’s distributor that is a debtor in a proceeding under title 11, United States Code, of a franchise agreement or dealer agreement pursuant to section 365 of that title, shall not be effective until at least 180 days after the date on which such rejection is otherwise approved by a bankruptcy court.

By Ms. CANTWELL (for herself and Mr. KOHL):

S. 1256. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to establish financial incentives for States to expand the provision of long-term services and supports to Medicaid beneficiaries who do not reside in an institution, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Home and Community Balanced Incentives Act of 2009, together with my colleague from Wisconsin, Senator KOHL. As we in the Senate embark on reforming America’s health care system, we cannot forget those who are dependent on daily care in order to survive: those in long-term care. Long-term care provides health care and daily living services to the elderly and disabled population, providing them with the ability to live happy, productive lives that age, illness and disability would otherwise prevent.

In 2007, the U.S. spent close to $109 billion on long term institutional care services under the Medicaid program; in my state of Washington it was approximately $2 billion. This amount represents more than 30 percent of all Medicaid payments, and is a number we can easily reduce. This legislation seeks to rebalance how states handle long term care by providing the tools they need to shift people out of expensive institutional care facilities and into home and community based care, where they can remain vibrant, active members of their community.

As Dorothy from the Wizard of Oz once said: There is no place like home. I could not agree more, which is why I believe in providing individuals and families with the option to remain in their home, where studies have shown the overall quality of life is far superior to that in an institutional facility. Additionally, home and community based care is far more cost efficient than institutional care; by diverting just 5 percent of the long term care community away from institutional care and into home and community based services, we would see a net savings of more than $10 billion dollars over five years. In a time when rising health care spending plays such a pivotal role in the health of the overall economy, these savings represent a giant step towards reining in unnecessary health care spending.

The Home and Community Balanced Incentives Act would achieve the goal of transitioning to home and community based services by offering states modest increases to their federal medical assistance payment, FMAP, for home and community based services. States would have to use these increases to develop the programs needed to provide effective home and community based services. These services will reduce barriers that currently prohibit people from accessing home and community based services.

This bill succeeds in not only saving the Medicaid program a significant amount of money, but it will empower families to make informed decisions about their long term care needs.

Specifically, this bill would: improve case management to help people remain in their homes and communities and out of nursing homes; provide consumer empowerment helping to put individuals in charge of their care; provide a coordinated transition structure for those wishing to leave institutional care and return to their homes and communities; create a clear and well coordinated system for providing long term care information and support; improve methodology for determining eligibility and tracking provider data on services and quality outcomes.

Senator KOHL and I are excited to introduce this important legislation and to begin working with our colleagues on improving the long term care system in America.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1256

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the “Home and Community Balanced Incentives Act of 2009”.

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

TITLE I—BALANCING INCENTIVES

Sec. 101. Enhanced FMAP for expanding the provision of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports.

TITLE II—STRENGTHENING THE MEDICAID HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED STATE PLAN AMENDMENT OPTION

Sec. 201. Removal of barriers to providing home and community-based services under State plan amendment option for individuals in need.

Sec. 202. Mandatory application of spousal impoverishment protections to recipients of home and community-based services.

Sec. 203. State authority to elect to exclude up to 6 months of average cost of nursing facility services from assets or resources for purposes of eligibility for home and community-based services.

TITLE III—COORDINATION OF HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED WAIVERS

Sec. 301. Streamlined process for combined waivers under subsections (b) and (c) of section 1915.

TITLE I—BALANCING INCENTIVES

SEC. 101. ENHANCED FMAP FOR EXPANDING THE PROVISION OF NON-INSTITUTIONALLY-BASED LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS.

(a) ENHANCED FMAP TO ENCOURAGE EXPANSION.—Section 1905 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence of subsection (b)—
 (A) by striking “, and (4)” and inserting “, (4)”;

(B) by inserting before the period the following: “, and (5) in the case of a balancing incentive payment State, as defined in subsection (y)(1), that meets the conditions described in subsection (y)(2), the Federal medical assistance percentage shall be increased by the applicable number of percentage points determined under subsection (y)(3) for the State with respect to medical assistance described in subsection (y)(4)”;

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(y) STATE BALANCING INCENTIVE PAYMENTS PROGRAM.—For purposes of clause (5) of the first sentence of subsection (b):

“(1) BALANCING INCENTIVE PAYMENT STATE.—A balancing incentive payment State is a State—

“(A) in which less than 50 percent of the total expenditures for medical assistance for fiscal year 2009 for long-term services and supports (as defined by the Secretary, subject to paragraph (5)) are for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B);

“(B) that submits an application and meets the conditions described in paragraph (2); and

“(C) that is selected by the Secretary to participate in the State balancing incentive payment program established under this subsection.

“(2) CONDITIONS.—The conditions described in this paragraph are the following:

“(A) APPLICATION.—The State submits an application to the Secretary that includes the following:

“(i) A description of the availability of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) available (for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 2009).

“(ii) A description of eligibility requirements for receipt of such services.

“(iii) A projection of the number of additional individuals that the State expects to provide with such services to during the 5-fiscal year period that begins with fiscal year 2011.

“(iv) An assurance of the State’s commitment to a consumer-directed long-term services and supports system that values quality of life in addition to quality of care and in which beneficiaries are empowered to choose providers and direct their own care as much as possible.

“(v) A proposed budget that details the State’s plan to expand and diversify medical assistance for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) during such 5-fiscal year period, and that includes—

“(I) a description of the new or expanded offerings of such services that the State will provide; and “(II) the projected costs of the services identified in subclause (I).

“(vi) A description of how the State intends to achieve the target spending percentage applicable to the State under subparagraph (B).

“(vii) An assurance that the State will not use Federal funds, revenues described in section 1903(w)(1), or revenues obtained through the imposition of beneficiary cost-sharing for medical assistance for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) for the non-federal share of expenditures for medical assistance described in paragraph (4).

“(B) TARGET SPENDING PERCENTAGES.—

“(i) In the case of a balancing incentive payment State in which less than 25 percent of the total expenditures for home and community-based services under the State plan and the various waiver authorities for fiscal year 2009 are for such services, the target spending percentage for the State to achieve by not later than October 1, 2015, is that 25 percent of the total expenditures for home and community-based services under the State plan and the various waiver authorities are for such services.

“(ii) In the case of any other balancing incentive payment State, the target spending percentage for the State to achieve by not later than October 1, 2015, is that 50 percent of the total expenditures for home and community-based services under the State plan and the various waiver authorities are for such services.

“(C) MAINTENANCE OF ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS.—The State does not apply eligibility standards, methodologies, or procedures for determining eligibility for medical assistance for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) that are more restrictive than the eligibility standards, methodologies, or procedures in effect for such purposes on December 31, 2010.

“(D) USE OF ADDITIONAL FUNDS.—The State agrees to use the additional Federal funds paid to the State as a result of this subsection only for purposes of providing new or expanded offerings of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) (including expansion through offering such services to increased numbers of beneficiaries of medical assistance under this title).

“(E) STRUCTURAL CHANGES.—The State agrees to make, not later than the end of the 6-month period that begins on the date the State submits and application under this paragraph, such changes to the administration of the State plan (and, if applicable, to waivers approved for the State that involve the provision of long-term care services and supports) as the Secretary determines, by regulation or otherwise, are essential to achieving an improved balance between the provision of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) and other long-term services and supports, and which shall include the following:

“(i) ‘NO WRONG DOOR’—SINGLE ENTRY POINT SYSTEM.—Development of a statewide system to enable consumers to access all long-term services and supports through an agency, organization, coordinated network, or portal, in accordance with such standards as the State shall establish and that—“(I) shall require such agency, organization, network, or portal to provide—

“(aa) consumers with information regarding the availability of such services, how to apply for such services, and other referral services; and

“(bb) information regarding, and make recommendations for, providers of such services; and “(II) may, at State option, permit such agency, organization, network, or portal to—

“(aa) determine financial and functional eligibility for such services and supports; and

“(bb) provide or refer eligible individuals to services and supports otherwise available in the community (under programs other than the State program under this title), such as housing, job training, and transportation.

“(ii) PRESUMPTIVE ELIGIBILITY.—At the option of the State, provision of a 60-day period of presumptive eligibility for medical assistance for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) for any individual whom the State has reason to believe will qualify for such medical assistance (provided that any expenditures for such medical assistance during such period are disregarded for purposes of determining the rate of erroneous excess payments for medical assistance under section 1903(u)(1)(D)).

“(iii) CASE MANAGEMENT.—Development, in accordance with guidance from the Secretary, of conflict-free case management services to—

“(I) address transitioning from receipt of institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(A) to receipt of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B); and “(II) in conjunction with the beneficiary, assess the beneficiary’s needs and, if appropriate, the needs of family caregivers for the beneficiary, and develop a service plan, arrange for services and supports, support the beneficiary (and, if appropriate, the caregivers) in directing the provision of services and supports, for the beneficiary, and conduct ongoing monitoring to assure that services and supports are delivered to meet the beneficiary’s needs and achieve intended outcomes.

“(iv) CORE STANDARDIZED ASSESSMENT INSTRUMENTS.—Development of core standardized assessment instruments for determining eligibility for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B), which shall be used in a uniform manner throughout the State, to—

“(I) assess a beneficiary’s eligibility and functional level in terms of relevant areas that may include medical, cognitive, and behavioral status, as well as daily living skills, and vocational and communication skills;

“(II) based on the assessment conducted under subclause (I), determine a beneficiary’s needs for training, support services, medical care, transportation, and other services, and develop an individual service plan to address such needs;

“(III) conduct ongoing monitoring based on the service plan; and “(IV) require reporting of collect data for purposes of comparison among different service models.

“(F) DATA COLLECTION.—Collecting from providers of services and through such other means as the State determines appropriate the following data:

“(i) SERVICES DATA.—Services data from providers of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) on a per-beneficiary basis and in accordance with such standardized coding procedures as the State shall establish in consultation with the Secretary.

“(ii) QUALITY DATA.—Quality data on a selected set of core quality measures agreed upon by the Secretary and the State that are linked to population-specific outcomes measures and accessible to providers.

“(iii) OUTCOMES MEASURES.—Outcomes measures data on a selected set of core population-specific outcomes measures agreed upon by the Secretary and the State that are accessible to providers and include—

“(I) measures of beneficiary and family caregiver experience with providers;

“(II) measures of beneficiary and family caregiver satisfaction with services; and “(III) measures for achieving desired outcomes appropriate to a specific beneficiary, including employment, participation in community life, health stability, and prevention of loss in function.

“(3) APPLICABLE NUMBER OF PERCENTAGE POINTS INCREASE IN FMAP.—The applicable number of percentage points are—

“(A) in the case of a balancing incentive payment State subject to the target spending percentage described in paragraph (2)(B)(i), 5 percentage points; and “(B) in the case of any other balancing incentive payment State, 2 percentage points.

“(4) ELIGIBLE MEDICAL ASSISTANCE EXPENDITURES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), medical assistance described in this paragraph is medical assistance for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) that is provided during the period that begins on October 1, 2011, and ends on September 30, 2015.

“(B) LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS.—In no case may the aggregate amount of payments made by the Secretary to balancing incentive payment States under this subsection during the period described in subparagraph (A), or to a State to which paragraph (6) of the first sentence of subsection (b) applies, exceed $3,000,000,000.

“(5) LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term ‘long-term services and supports’ has the meaning given that term by Secretary and shall include the following:

“(A) INSTITUTIONALLY-BASED LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS.—Services provided in an institution, including the following:

“(i) Nursing facility services.

“(ii) Services in an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded described in subsection (a)(15).

“(B) NON-INSTITUTIONALLY-BASED LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS.—Services not provided in an institution, including the following:

“(i) Home and community-based services provided under subsection (c), (d), or (i), of section 1915 or under a waiver under section 1115.

“(ii) Home health care services.

“(iii) Personal care services.

“(iv) Services described in subsection (a)(26) (relating to PACE program services).

“(v) Self-directed personal assistance services described in section 1915(j)’. ”

(b) ENHANCED FMAP FOR CERTAIN STATES TO MAINTAIN THE PROVISION OF HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.—The first sentence of section 1905(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d (b)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended—

(1) by striking “, and (5)” and inserting “, (5)”;

(2) by inserting before the period the following: “, and (6) in the case of a State in which at least 50 percent of the total expenditures for medical assistance for fiscal year 2009 for long-term services and supports (as defined by the Secretary for purposes of subsection (y)) are for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in subsection (y)(5)(B), and which satisfies the requirements of subparagraphs (A) (other than clauses (iii), (v), and (vi)), (C), and (F) of subsection (y)(2), and has implemented the structural changes described in each clause of subparagraph (E) of that subsection, the Federal medical assistance percentage shall be increased by 1 percentage point with respect to medical assistance described in subparagraph (A) of subsection (y)(4) (but subject to the limitation described in subparagraph (B) of that subsection)”.

(c) GRANTS TO SUPPORT STRUCTURAL CHANGES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall award grants to States for the following purposes:

(A) To support the development of common national set of coding methodologies and databases related to the provision of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) of section 1905(y) of the Social Security Act (as added by subsection (a)).

(B) To make structural changes described in paragraph (2)(E) of section 1905(y) to the State Medicaid program.

(2) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants for the purpose described in paragraph (1)(A), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall give priority to States in which at least 50 percent of the total expenditures for medical assistance under the State Medicaid program for fiscal year 2009 for long-term services and supports, as defined by the Secretary for purposes of section 1905(y) of the Social Security Act, are for non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) of such section.

(3) COLLABORATION.—States awarded a grant for the purpose described in paragraph (1)(A) shall collaborate with other States, the National Governor’s Association, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National Association of State Medicaid Directors, the National Association of State Directors of Developmental Disabilities, and other appropriate organizations in developing specifications for a common national set of coding methodologies and databases.

(4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection, such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2010 through 2012.

(d) AUTHORITY FOR INDIVIDUALIZED BUDGETS UNDER WAIVERS TO PROVIDE HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.—In the case of any waiver to provide home and community-based services under subsection (c) or (d) of section 1915 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n) or section 1115 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1315), that is approved or renewed after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall permit a State to establish individualized budgets that identify the dollar value of the services and supports to be provided to an individual under the waiver.

(e) OVERSIGHT AND ASSESSMENT.—

(1) DEVELOPMENT OF STANDARDIZED REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(A) STANDARDIZATION OF DATA AND OUTCOME MEASURES.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall consult with States and the National Governor's Association, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National Association of State Medicaid Directors, the National Association of State Directors of Developmental Disabilities, and other appropriate organizations to develop specifications for standardization of—

(i) reporting of assessment data for long-term services and supports (as defined by the Secretary for purposes of section 1905(y)(5) of the Social Security Act) for each population served, including information standardized for purposes of certified EHR technology (as defined in section 1903(t)(3)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(t)(3)(A)) and under other electronic medical records initiatives; and

(ii) outcomes measures that track assessment processes for long-term services and supports (as so defined) for each such population that maintain and enhance individual function, independence, and stability.

(2) ADMINISTRATION OF HOME AND COMMUNITY SERVICES.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate regulations to ensure that all States develop service systems that are designed to—

(A) allocate resources for services in a manner that is responsive to the changing needs and choices of beneficiaries receiving non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) of section 1905(y) of the Social Security Act (as added by subsection (a)) (including such services and supports that are provided under programs other than the State Medicaid program), and that provides strategies for beneficiaries receiving such services to maximize their independence;

(B) provide the support and coordination needed for a beneficiary in need of such services (and their family caregivers or representative, if applicable) to design an individualized, self-directed, community-supported life; and

(C) improve coordination among all providers of such services under federally and State-funded programs in order to—

(i) achieve a more consistent administration of policies and procedures across programs in relation to the provision of such services; and

(ii) oversee and monitor all service system functions to assure—

(I) coordination of, and effectiveness of, eligibility determinations and individual assessments; and

(II) development and service monitoring of a complaint system, a management system, a system to qualify and monitor providers, and systems for role-setting and individual budget determinations.

(3) MONITORING.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall assess on an ongoing basis and based on measures specified by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, the safety and quality of non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) of section 1905(y) of that Act provided to beneficiaries of such services and supports and outcomes with regard to such beneficiaries' experiences with such services. Such oversight shall include examination of—

(A) the consistency, or lack thereof, of such services in care plans as compared to those services that were actually delivered; and

(B) the length of time between when a beneficiary was assessed for such services, when the care plan was completed, and when the beneficiary started receiving such services.

(4) GAO STUDY AND REPORT.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall study the longitudinal costs of Medicaid beneficiaries receiving long-term services and supports (as defined by the Secretary for purposes of section 1905(y)(5) of the Social Security Act) over 5-year periods across various programs, including the non-institutionally-based long-term services and supports described in paragraph (5)(B) of such section, PACE program services under section 1894 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395eee, 1396u–4), and services provided under specialized MA plans for special needs individuals under part C of title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

TITLE II—STRENGTHENING THE MEDICAID HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED STATE PLAN AMENDMENT OPTION

SEC. 201. REMOVAL OF BARRIERS TO PROVIDING HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES UNDER STATE PLAN AMENDMENT OPTION FOR INDIVIDUALS IN NEED.

(a) PARITY WITH INCOME ELIGIBILITY STANDARD FOR INSTITUTIONALIZED INDIVIDUALS.—Paragraph (1) of section 1915(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(i)) is amended by striking “150 percent of the poverty line (as defined in section 2110(c)(5))” and inserting “300 percent of the supplemental security income benefit rate established by section 1611(b)(1)”.

(b) ADDITIONAL STATE OPTIONS.—Section 1915(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(i)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

“(6) STATE OPTION TO PROVIDE HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES TO INDIVIDUALS ELIGIBLE FOR SERVICES UNDER A WAIVER.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A State that provides home and community-based services in accordance with this subsection to individuals who satisfy the needs-based criteria for the receipt of such services established under paragraph (1)(A) may, in addition to continuing to provide such services to such individuals, elect to provide home and community-based services in accordance with the requirements of this paragraph to individuals who are eligible for home and community-based services under a waiver approved for the State under subsection (c), (d), or (e) or under section 1115 to provide such services, but only for those individuals whose income does not exceed 300 percent of the supplemental security income benefit rate established by section 1611(b)(1).

“(B) APPLICATION OF SAME REQUIREMENTS FOR INDIVIDUALS SATISFYING NEEDS-BASED CRITERIA.—Subject to subparagraph (C), a State shall provide home and community-based services to individuals under this paragraph in the same manner and subject to the same requirements as apply under the other paragraphs of this subsection to the provision of home and community-based services to individuals who satisfy the needs-based criteria established under paragraph (1)(A).

“(C) AUTHORITY TO OFFER DIFFERENT TYPE, AMOUNT, DURATION, OR SCOPE OF HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.—A State may offer home and community-based services to individuals under this paragraph that differ in type, amount, duration, or scope from the home and community-based services offered for individuals who satisfy the needs-based criteria established under paragraph (1)(A), so long as such services are within the scope of services described in paragraph (4)(B) of subsection (c) for which the Secretary has the authority to approve a waiver and do not include room or board.

“(7) STATE OPTION TO OFFER HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES TO SPECIFIC, TARGETED POPULATIONS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A State may elect in a State plan amendment under this subsection to target the provision of home and community-based services under this subsection to specific populations and to differ the type, amount, duration, or scope of such services to such specific populations.

“(B) 5-YEAR TERM.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—An election by a State under this paragraph shall be for a period of 5 years.

“(ii) PHASE-IN OF SERVICES AND ELIGIBILITY PERMITTED DURING INITIAL 5-YEAR PERIOD.—A State making an election under this paragraph may, during the first 5-year period for which the election is made, phase-in the enrollment of eligible individuals, or the provision of services to such individuals, or both, so long as all eligible individuals in the State for such services are enrolled, and all such services are provided, before the end of the initial 5-year period.

“(C) RENEWAL.—An election by a State under this paragraph may be renewed for additional 5-year terms if the Secretary determines, prior to beginning of each such renewal period, that the State has—

“(i) adhered to the requirements of this subsection and paragraph in providing services under such an election; and

“(ii) met the State's objectives with respect to quality improvement and beneficiary outcomes.”.

(c) REMOVAL OF LIMITATION ON SCOPE OF SERVICES.—Paragraph (1) of section 1915(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(i)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by striking “or such other services requested by the State as the Secretary may approve”.

(d) OPTIONAL ELIGIBILITY CATEGORY TO PROVIDE FULL MEDICAID BENEFITS TO INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES UNDER A STATE PLAN AMENDMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(A)(ii)) is amended—

(A) in subclause (XVIII), by striking “or” at the end;

(B) in subclause (XIX), by adding “or” at the end; and

(C) by inserting after subclause (XIX), the following new subclause:

“(XX) who are eligible for home and community-based services under needs-based criteria established under paragraph (1)(A) of section 1915(i), or who are eligible for home and community-based services under paragraph (6) of such section, and who will receive home and community-based services pursuant to a State plan amendment under such subsection;”.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Section 1903(f)(4) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(f)(4)) is amended in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by inserting “1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(XX),” after “1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(XIX),”.

(B) Section 1905(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(a)) is amended in the matter preceding paragraph (1)—

(i) in clause (xii), by striking “or” at the end;

(ii) in clause (xiii), by adding “or” at the end; and

(iii) by inserting after clause (xiii) the following new clause:

“(xiv) individuals who are eligible for home and community-based services under needs-based criteria established under paragraph (1)(A) of section 1915(i), or who are eligible for home and community-based services under paragraph (6) of such section, and who will receive home and community-based services pursuant to a State plan amendment under such subsection.”.

(e) ELIMINATION OF OPTION TO LIMIT NUMBER OF ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS OR LENGTH OF PERIOD FOR GRANDFATHERED INDIVIDUALS IF ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA IS MODIFIED.—Paragraph (1) of section 1915(i) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(i)) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following:

“(C) PROJECTION OF NUMBER OF INDIVIDUALS TO BE PROVIDED HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.—The State submits to the Secretary, in such form and manner, and upon such frequency as the Secretary shall specify, the projected number of individuals to be provided home and community-based services.”; and

(2) in subclause (II) of subparagraph (D)(ii), by striking “to be eligible for such services for a period of at least 12 months beginning on the date the individual first received medical assistance for such services” and inserting “to continue to be eligible for such services after the effective date of the modification and until such time as the individual no longer meets the standard for receipt of such services under such pre-modified criteria”.

(f) ELIMINATION OF OPTION TO WAIVE STATEWIDENESS; ADDITION OF OPTION TO WAIVE COMPARABILITY.—Paragraph (3) of section 1915(i) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(3)) is amended by striking “1902(a)(1) (relating to statewideness)” and inserting “1902(a)(10)(B) (relating to comparability)”.

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section take effect on the first day of the first fiscal year quarter that begins after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 202. MANDATORY APPLICATION OF SPOUSAL IMPOVERISHMENT PROTECTIONS TO RECIPIENTS OF HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1924(h)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396r-5(h)(1)(A)) is amended by striking “(at the option of the State) is described in section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(VI)” and inserting “is eligible for medical assistance for home and community-based services under subsection (c), (d), (e), or (i) of section 1915”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) takes effect on October 1, 2009.

SEC. 203. STATE AUTHORITY TO ELECT TO EXCLUDE UP TO 6 MONTHS OF AVERAGE COST OF NURSING FACILITY SERVICES FROM ASSETS OR RESOURCES FOR PURPOSES OF ELIGIBILITY FOR HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1917 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396p) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(i) STATE AUTHORITY TO EXCLUDE UP TO 6 MONTHS OF AVERAGE COST OF NURSING FACILITY SERVICES FROM HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED SERVICES ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—Nothing in this section or any other provision of this title, shall be construed as prohibiting a State from excluding from any determination of an individual’s assets or resources for purposes of determining the eligibility of the individual for medical assistance for home and community-based services under subsection (c), (d), (e), or (i) of section 1915 (if a State imposes an limitation on assets or resources for purposes of eligibility for such services), an amount equal to the product of the amount applicable under subsection (c)(1)(E)(ii)(II) (at the time such determination is made) and such number, not to exceed 6, as the State may elect.”.

(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in the amendment made by subsection (a) shall be construed as affecting a State’s option to apply less restrictive methodologies under section 1902(r)(2) for purposes of determining income and resource eligibility for individuals specified in that section.

TITLE III—COORDINATION OF HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED WAIVERS

SEC. 301. STREAMLINED PROCESS FOR COMBINED WAIVERS UNDER SUBSECTIONS (B) AND (C) OF SECTION 1915.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall create a template to streamline the process of approving, monitoring, evaluating, and renewing State proposals to conduct a program that combines the waiver authority provided under subsections (b) and (c) of section 1915 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n) into a single program under which the State provides home and community-based services to individuals based on individualized assessments and care plans (in this section referred to as the “combined waivers program”). The template required under this section shall provide for the following:

(1) A standard 5-year term for conducting a combined waivers program.

(2) Harmonization of any requirements under subsections (b) and (c) of such section that overlap.

(3) An option for States to elect, during the first 5-year term for which the combined waivers program is approved to phase-in the enrollment of eligible individuals, or the provision of services to such individuals, or both, so long as all eligible individuals in the State for such services are enrolled, and all such services are provided, before the end of the initial 5-year period.

(4) Examination by the Secretary, prior to each renewal of a combined waivers program, of how well the State has—

(A) adhered to the combined waivers program requirements; and

(B) performed in meeting the State’s objectives for the combined waivers program, including with respect to quality improvement and beneficiary outcomes.

By Ms. CANTWELL (for herself and Ms. STABENOW):

S. 1257. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to build on the aging network to establish long-term services and supports through single-entry point systems, evidence based disease prevention and health promotion programs, and enhanced nursing home diversion programs; to the Committee on Finance.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce Project 2020: Building on the Promise of Home and Community-Based Services Act with my colleague from Michigan, Senator STABENOW. By the year 2020, almost 1 in 6 Americans will be over the age of 65 and the population of people over the age of 85, the fastest growing segment of the population, will double. Our current long term care financing structure is unsustainable as the population in need of such services rapidly increases. As such, we must turn our focus to reforming the long term care system to provide the best care available to this vulnerable population.

The average cost of a nursing home in this country is $70,000 a year, making this an unrealistic option for most Americans. In fact, most people who end up in a nursing home last just six months before they have spent so much they become poor enough to qualify for Medicaid. This situation is expensive for consumers, for states, and for the federal government. Fortunately, there is a clear answer. It costs Medicaid one third as much to provide someone with home and community based care as it would cost to care for them in a nursing home. In addition, most people want to stay in their own home or community whenever possible. An independent analysis conducted by the Lewin Group shows that Project 2020 would reach over 40 million Americans, while simultaneously reducing Medicare and Medicaid costs by more than $2.8 billion over 5 years.

Project 2020 addresses the urgent need to shift away from institutional care and towards home and community based services in three distinct ways: through enhanced nursing home diversion; by increasing the use of person-centered access to information; and by utilizing evidence-based disease and injury prevention. As I previously mentioned, increased nursing home diversion will not only provide significant savings to the Medicaid program, it will also allow families to stay together and let people be active members of their communities. Through the creation of a person-center access point to information, consumers, family members, and caregivers will be given the tools necessary to make well informed decisions about long term care. Finally, this bill will provide for programs that help consumers get proven education about avoiding preventable diseased and injuries, such as falls and malnutrition, which result in thousands of unnecessary hospitalizations every year.

As you can see, these three programs constitute a common-sense, multifaceted approach to improving the quality of life of individuals and their families, while providing a substantial amount of savings to the health care system.

I am pleased to introduce this important legislation along with my colleague Senator STABENOW and I look forward to working with the rest of my Senate colleagues to provide families with the long term care services and support they need.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1257

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Project 2020: Building on the Promise of Home and Community-Based Services Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS.

The Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“TITLE XXII—LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS“SEC. 2201. DEFINITIONS.

“Except as otherwise provided, the terms used in this title have the meanings given the terms in section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002).

“Subtitle A—Single-Entry Point System Program“SEC. 2211. STATE SINGLE-ENTRY POINT SYSTEMS.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this title:

“(1) LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS.—The term ‘long-term services and supports’ means any service (including a disease prevention and health promotion service, an in-home service, or a case management service), care, or item (including an assistive device) that is—

“(A) intended to assist individuals in coping with, and, to the extent practicable, compensating for, functional impairment in carrying out activities of daily living;

“(B) furnished at home, in a community care setting, including a small community care setting (as defined in section 1929(g)(1)) and a large community care setting (as defined in section 1929(h)(1)), or in a long-term care facility; and “(C) not furnished to diagnose, treat, or cure a medical disease or condition.

“(2) SINGLE-ENTRY POINT SYSTEM.—The term ‘single-entry point system’ means any coordinated system for providing—

“(A) comprehensive information to consumers and caregivers on the full range of available public and private long-term services and supports, options, service providers, and resources, including information on the availability of integrated long-term care, including consumer directed care options;

“(B) personal counseling to assist individuals in assessing their existing or anticipated long-term care needs, and developing and implementing a plan for long-term care designed to meet their specific needs and circumstances; and

“(C) consumers and caregivers access to the range of publicly supported and privately supported long-term services and supports that are available.

“(b) PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a single-entry point system program. In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall make grants to States, from allotments described in subsection (c), to pay for the Federal share of the cost of establishing State single-entry point systems.

“(c) ALLOTMENTS.—

“(1) ALLOTMENTS TO INDIAN TRIBES AND TERRITORIES.—

“(A) RESERVATION.—The Secretary shall reserve from the funds made available under subsection (g)—

“(i) for fiscal year 2010, $1,962,456; and

“(ii) for each subsequent fiscal year, $1,962,456, increased by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers, between October of the fiscal year preceding the subsequent fiscal year and October, 2007.

“(B) ALLOTMENTS.—The Secretary shall use the funds reserved under subparagraph (A) to make allotments to—

“(i) Indian tribes; and

“(ii) Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the United States Virgin Islands.

“(2) ALLOTMENTS TO STATES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—

“(i) AMOUNT.—The Secretary shall allot to each eligible State for a fiscal year the sum of the fixed amount determined under subparagraph (B), and the allocation determined under subparagraph (C), for the State.

“(ii) SUBGRANTS TO AREA AGENCIES ON AGING.—

“(I) IN GENERAL.—Each State agency receiving an allotment under clause (i) shall use such allotment to make subgrants to area agencies on aging that can demonstrate performance capacity to carry out activities described in this section whether such area agency on aging carries out the activities directly or through contract with an aging network or disability entity. An area agency on aging desiring a subgrant shall establish or designate a collaborative board to ensure meaningful involvement of stakeholders in the development, planning, implementation, and evaluation of a single-entry point system consistent with the following:

“(aa) The collaborative board shall be composed of—

“(AA) individuals representing all populations served by the agency’s single-entry point system, including older adults and individuals from diverse backgrounds who have a disability or a chronic condition requiring long-term support;

“(BB) a representative from the local center for independent living (as defined in section 702 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 796a)), and representatives from other organizations that provide services to the individuals served by the system and those who advocate on behalf of such individuals; and “(CC) representatives of the government and non-governmental agencies that are affected by the system.

“(bb) The agency shall work in conjunction with the collaborative board on—“(AA) the design and operations of the single-entry point system;

“(BB) stakeholder input; and

“(CC) other program and policy development issues related to the single-entry point system.

“(cc) An advisory board established under the Real Choice Systems Change Program or for an existing single-entry point system may be used to carry out the activities of a collaborative board under this subclause if such advisory board meets the requirements under item (aa).

“(II) SUBGRANTS TO OTHER ENTITIES.—A State agency may make subgrants described in subclause (I) to other qualified aging network or disability entities only if the area agency on aging chooses not to apply for a subgrant or is not able to demonstrate performance capacity to carry out the activities described in this section.

“(III) SUBGRANTEE RECIPIENT SUBGRANTS.—An administrator of a single-entry point system established by a State receiving an allotment under clause (i) shall make any necessary subgrants to key partners involved in developing, planning, or implementing the single-entry point system. Such partners may include centers for independent living (as defined in section 702 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 796a)).

“(B) FIXED AMOUNTS FOR STATES.—

“(i) RESERVATION.—The Secretary shall reserve from the funds made available under subsection (g)—

“(I) for fiscal year 2010, $15,759,000; and

“(II) for each subsequent fiscal year, $15,759,000, increased by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index for All

Urban Consumers, between October of the fiscal year preceding the subsequent fiscal year and October, 2007.

“(ii) FIXED AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall use the funds reserved under clause (i) to provide equal fixed amounts to the States.

“(C) ALLOCATION FOR STATES.—The Secretary shall allocate to each eligible State for a fiscal year an amount that bears the same relationship to the funds made available under subsection (g) (and not reserved under paragraph (1) or subparagraph (B)) for that fiscal year as the number of persons who are either older individuals or individuals with disabilities in that State bears to the number of such persons or individuals in all the States.

“(D) DETERMINATION OF NUMBER OF PERSONS.—

“(i) OLDER INDIVIDUALS.—The number of older individuals in any State and in all States shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available from the Bureau of the Census, and other reliable demographic data satisfactory to the Secretary.

“(ii) INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES.—The number of individuals with disabilities in any State and in all States shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available from the American Community Survey, and other reliable demographic data satisfactory to the Secretary, on individuals who have a sensory disability, physical disability, mental disability, self-care disability, go-outside-home disability, or employment disability.

“(3) ELIGIBILITY.—In addition to the States determined by the Secretary to be eligible for a grant under this section, a State that receives a Federal grant for an aging and disability resource center is eligible for a grant under this section.

“(4) DEFINITION.—In this subsection, the term ‘State’ shall not include any jurisdiction described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii).

“(d) APPLICATIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive an initial grant under this section, a State agency shall, after consulting and coordinating with consumers, other stakeholders, centers for independent living in the State, if any, and area agencies on aging in the State, if any, submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing the following information:

“(A) Evidence of substantial involvement of stakeholders and agencies in the State that are administering programs that will be the subject of referrals.

“(B) The applicant’s plan for providing—

“(i) comprehensive information on the full range of available public and private long-term services and supports options, providers, and resources, including building awareness of the single-entry point system as a resource;

“(ii) objective, neutral, and personal information, counseling, and assistance to individuals and their caregivers in assessing their existing or anticipated long-term care needs, and developing and implementing a plan for long-term care to meet their needs;

“(iii) for eligibility screening and referral for services;

“(iv) for stakeholder input;

“(v) for a management information system; and

“(vi) for an evaluation of the effectiveness of the single-entry point system.

“(C) A specification of the period of the grant request, which shall include not less than 3 consecutive fiscal years in the 5-fiscal-year-period beginning with fiscal year 2010.

“(D) Such other information as the Secretary determines appropriate.

“(2) APPLICATION FOR CONTINUATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives an initial grant under this section shall apply, after consulting and coordinating with the area agencies on aging, for a continuation of the initial grant, which includes a description of any significant changes to the information provided in the initial application and such data concerning performance measures related to the requirements in the initial application as the Secretary shall require.

“(B) EFFECT.—The requirement under subparagraph (A) shall be in effect through fiscal year 2020.

“(e) USE OF FUNDS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives a grant under this section shall use the funds made available through the grant to—

“(A) establish a State single-entry point system, to enable older individuals and individuals with disabilities and their caregivers to obtain resources concerning long-term services and supports options; and “(B) provide information on, access to, and assistance regarding long-term services and supports.

“(2) SERVICES.—In particular, the State single-entry point system shall be the referral source to—

“(A) provide information about long-term care planning and available long-term services and supports through a variety of media (such as websites, seminars, and pamphlets);

“(B) provide assistance with making decisions about long-term services and supports and determining the most appropriate services through options counseling, future financial planning, and case management;

“(C) provide streamlined access to and assistance with applying for federally funded long-term care benefits (including medical assistance under title XIX, Medicare skilled nursing facility services, services under title III of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3021 et seq.), the services of Aging and Disability Resource Centers), and State-funded and privately funded long-term care benefits, through efforts to shorten and simplify the eligibility processes for older individuals and individuals with disabilities;

“(D) provide referrals to the State evidence-based disease prevention and health promotion programs under subtitle B;

“(E) allocate the State funds available under subtitle C and carry out the State enhanced nursing home diversion program under subtitle C; and “(F) and provide information about, other services available in the State that may assist an individual to remain in the community, including the Medicare and Medicaid programs, the State health insurance assistance program, the supplemental nutrition assistance program established under the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.), and the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program under the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621 et seq.), and such other services, as the State shall include.

“(3) COLLABORATIVE ARRANGEMENTS.—

“(A) CENTER FOR INDEPENDENT LIVING.—Each entity receiving an allotment under subsection (c) shall involve in the planning and implementation of the single-entry point system the local center for independent living (as defined in section 702 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 796a)), which provides information, referral, assistance, or services to individuals with disabilities.

“(B) OTHER ENTITIES.—To the extent practicable, the State single-entry point system shall enter into collaborative arrangements with aging and disability programs, service providers, agencies, the direct care work force, and other entities in order to ensure that information about such services may be made available to individuals accessing the State single-entry point system.

“(f) FEDERAL SHARE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost described in subsection (b) shall be 75 percent.

“(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The State may provide the non-Federal share of the cost in cash or in-kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. The State may provide the non-Federal share from State, local, or private sources.

“(g) FUNDING.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use amounts made available under paragraph (2) to make the grants described in subsection (b).

“(2) FUNDING.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

“(A) $30,900,000 for fiscal year 2010;

“(B) $38,264,000 for fiscal year 2011;

“(C) $48,410,000 for fiscal year 2012;

“(D) $53,560,000 for fiscal year 2013;

“(E) $63,860,000 for fiscal year 2014;

“(F) $69,010,000 for fiscal year 2015;

“(G) $74,160,000 for fiscal year 2016;

“(H) $79,310,000 for fiscal year 2017;

“(I) $84,460,000 for fiscal year 2018;

“(J) $89,610,000 for fiscal year 2019; and

“(K) $95,790,000 for fiscal year 2020.

“(3) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated under paragraph (2) shall remain available until expended.

“Subtitle B—Healthy Living Program

“SEC. 2221. EVIDENCE-BASED DISEASE PREVENTION AND HEALTH PROMOTION PROGRAMS.

“(a) PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a healthy living program. In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall make grants to State agencies, from allotments described in subsection (b), to pay for the Federal share of the cost of carrying out evidence-based disease prevention and health promotion programs.

“(b) ALLOTMENTS.—

“(1) ALLOTMENTS TO INDIAN TRIBES AND TERRITORIES.—

“(A) RESERVATION.—The Secretary shall reserve from the funds made available under subsection (g)—

“(i) for fiscal year 2010, $1,500,952; and

“(ii) for each subsequent fiscal year, $1,500,952, increased by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers, between October of the fiscal year preceding the subsequent fiscal year and October, 2007.

“(B) ALLOTMENTS.—The Secretary shall use the reserved funds under subparagraph (A) to make allotments to—

“(i) Indian tribes; and

“(ii) Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the United States Virgin Islands.

“(2) IN GENERAL.—

“(A) AMOUNTS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), the Secretary shall allot to each eligible State for a fiscal year an amount that bears the same relationship to the funds made available under this section and not reserved under paragraph (1) for that fiscal year as the number of older individuals in the State bears to the number of older individuals in all the States.

“(ii) OLDER INDIVIDUALS.—The number of older individuals in any State and in all States shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available from the Bureau of the Census, and other reliable demographic data satisfactory to the Secretary.

“(B) SUBGRANTS.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Each State agency that receives an amount under subparagraph (A) shall award subgrants to area agencies on aging that can demonstrate performance capacity to carry out activities under this section whether such area agency on aging carries out the activities directly or through contract with an aging network entity.

“(ii) SUBGRANTS TO OTHER ENTITIES.—A State agency may make subgrants described in clause (i) to other qualified aging network entities only if the area agency on aging chooses not to apply for a subgrant or is not able to demonstrate performance capacity to carry out the activities described in this section.

“(3) MINIMUM ALLOTMENT.—No State shall receive an allotment under this section for a fiscal year that is less than 0.5 percent of the funds made available to carry out this section for that fiscal year and not reserved under paragraph (1).

“(4) ELIGIBILITY.—In addition to the States determined by the Secretary to be eligible for a grant under this section, a State that receives a Federal grant for evidence-based disease prevention is eligible for a grant under this section.

“(c) APPLICATIONS.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State agency shall, after consulting and coordinating with consumers, other stakeholders, and area agencies on aging in the State, if any, submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing the following information:

“(1) A description of the evidence-based disease prevention and health promotion program.

“(2) Sufficient information to demonstrate that the infrastructure exists to support the program.

“(3) A specification of the period of the grant request, which shall include not less than 3 consecutive fiscal years in the 5 fiscal year period beginning with fiscal year 2010.

“(4) Such other information as the Secretary determines appropriate.

“(d) APPLICATION FOR CONTINUATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives an initial grant under this section shall apply, after consulting and coordinating with the area agencies on aging, for a continuation of the initial grant, which application shall include—

“(A) a description of any significant changes to the information provided in the initial application; and

“(B) such data concerning performance measures related to the requirements in the initial application as the Secretary shall require.

“(2) EFFECT.—The requirement under paragraph (1) shall be in effect through fiscal year 2020.

“(e) USE OF FUNDS.—A State that receives a grant under this section shall use the funds made available through the grant to carry out—

“(1) an evidence-based chronic disease self-management program;

“(2) an evidence-based falls prevention program; or

“(3) another evidence-based disease prevention and health promotion program.

“(f) FEDERAL SHARE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost described in subsection (a) shall be 85 percent.

“(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The State may provide the non-Federal share of the cost in cash or in-kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. The State may provide the non-Federal share from State, local, or private sources.

“(g) FUNDING.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use amounts made available under paragraph (2) to make the grants described in subsection (a).

“(2) FUNDING.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

“(A) $36,050,000 for fiscal year 2010;

“(B) $41,200,000 for fiscal year 2011;

“(C) $56,650,000 for fiscal year 2012;

“(D) $77,250,000 for fiscal year 2013;

“(E) $92,700,000 for fiscal year 2014;

“(F) $103,000,000 for fiscal year 2015;

“(G) $118,450,000 for fiscal year 2016;

“(H) $133,900,000 for fiscal year 2017;

“(I) $149,350,000 for fiscal year 2018;

“(J) $157,590,000 for fiscal year 2019; and

“(K) $173,040,000 for fiscal year 2020.

“(3) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated under paragraph (2) shall remain available until expended.

“Subtitle C—Diversion Programs

“SEC. 2231. ENHANCED NURSING HOME DIVERSION PROGRAMS.

“(a) DEFINITION.—In this section:

“(1) LOW-INCOME SENIOR.—The term ‘low-income senior’ means an individual who—

“(A) is age 75 or older; and

“(B) is from a household with a household income that is not less than 150 percent, and not more than 300 percent, of the poverty line.

“(2) NURSING HOME.—The term ‘nursing home’ means—

“(A) a skilled nursing facility, as defined in section 1819(a); or “(B) a nursing facility, as defined in section 1919(a).

“(b) PROGRAM.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish and carry out a diversion program. In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall make grants to States, from allotments described in subsection (c), to pay for the Federal share of the cost of carrying out enhanced nursing home diversion programs.

“(2) COHORTS.—The Secretary shall make the grants to—

“(A) a first year cohort consisting of one third of the States, for fiscal year 2010;

“(B) a second year cohort consisting of the cohort described in subparagraph (A) and an additional one third of the States, for fiscal year 2011; and

“(C) a third year cohort consisting of all the eligible States, for fiscal year 2012 and each subsequent fiscal year.

“(3) READINESS.—In determining whether to include an eligible State in the first year, second year, or third year and subsequent year cohort, the Secretary shall consider the readiness of the State to carry out an enhanced nursing home diversion program under this section. Readiness shall be determined based on a consideration of the following factors:

“(A) Availability of a comprehensive array of home- and community-based services.

“(B) Sufficient home- and community-based services provider capacity.

“(C) Availability of housing.

“(D) Availability of supports for consumer-directed services, including whether a fiscal intermediary is in place.

“(E) Ability to perform timely eligibility determinations and assessment for services.

“(F) Existence of a quality assessment and improvement program for home and community-based services.

“(G) Such other factors as the Secretary determines appropriate.

“(c) ALLOTMENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—

“(A) AMOUNT.—The Secretary shall allot to an eligible State (within the applicable cohort) for a fiscal year an amount that bears the same relationship to the funds made available under subsection (1) for that fiscal year as the number of low-income seniors in the State bears to the number of low-income seniors within States in the applicable cohort for that fiscal year.

“(B) LOW-INCOME SENIORS.—The number of low-income seniors in any State and in all States shall be determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available from the American Community Survey, and other reliable demographic data satisfactory to the Secretary.

“(2) ELIGIBILITY.—In addition to the States determined by the Secretary to be eligible for a grant under this section, a State that receives a Federal grant for a nursing home diversion is eligible for a grant under this section.

“(d) APPLICATIONS.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State agency shall, after consulting and coordinating with consumers, other stakeholders, and area agencies on aging in the State, if any, submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including a specification of the period of the grant request, which shall include not less than 3 consecutive fiscal years in the 5 fiscal year period beginning with the fiscal year prior to the year of application.

“(e) APPLICATION FOR CONTINUATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives an initial grant under this section shall apply, after consulting and coordinating with the area agencies on aging, for a continuation of the initial grant, which application shall include—

“(A) a description of any significant changes to the information provided in the initial application; and

“(B) such data concerning performance measures related to the requirements in the initial application as the Secretary shall require.

“(2) EFFECT.—The requirement under paragraph (1) shall be in effect through fiscal year 2020.

“(f) USE OF FUNDS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives a grant under this section shall carry out the following:

“(A) Use the funds made available through the grant to carry out an enhanced nursing home diversion program that enables eligible individuals to avoid admission into nursing homes by enabling the individuals to obtain alternative long-term services and supports and remain in their communities.

“(B) Award subgrants to area agencies on aging that can demonstrate performance capacity to carry out activities under this section whether such area agency on aging carries out the activities directly or through contract with an aging network entity. A State may make subgrants to other qualified aging network entities only if the area agency on aging chooses not to apply for a subgrant or is not able to demonstrate performance capacity to carry out the activities described in this section.

“(2) CASE MANAGEMENT.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The State, through the State single-entry point system established under subtitle A, shall provide for case management services to the eligible individuals.

“(B) USE OF EXISTING SERVICES.—In carrying out subparagraph (A), the State agency or area agency on aging may utilize existing case management services delivery networks if—

“(i) the networks have adequate safeguards against potential conflicts of interest; and “(ii) the State agency or area agency on aging includes a description of such safeguards in the grant application.

“(C) CARE PLAN.—The State shall provide for development of a care plan for each eligible individual served, in consultation with the eligible individual and their caregiver, as appropriate. In developing the care plan, the State shall explain the option of consumer directed care and assist an individual, who so requests, with developing a consumer-directed care plan that shall include arranging for support services and funding. Such assistance shall include providing information and outreach to individuals in the hospital, in a nursing home for post-acute care, or undergoing changes in their health status or caregiver situation.

“(g) ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.—In this section, the term ‘eligible individual’ means an individual—

“(1) who has been determined by the State to be at high functional risk of nursing home placement, as defined by the State agency in the State agency’s grant application;

“(2) who is not eligible for medical assistance under title XIX; and

“(3) who meets the income and asset eligibility requirements established by the State and included in such State’s grant application for approval by the Secretary.

“(h) FEDERAL SHARE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost described in subsection (b) shall be, for a State and for a fiscal year, the sum of—

“(A) the Federal medical assistance percentage applicable to the State for the year under section 1905(b); and “(B) 5 percentage points.

“(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The State may provide the non-Federal share of the cost in cash or in-kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, or services. The State may provide the non-Federal share from State, local, or private sources.

“(i) FUNDING.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use amounts made available under paragraph (2) to make the grants described in subsection (b).

“(2) FUNDING.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

“(A) $111,825,137 for fiscal year 2010;

“(B) $337,525,753 for fiscal year 2011;

“(C) $650,098,349 for fiscal year 2012;

“(D) $865,801,631 for fiscal year 2013;

“(E) $988,504,887 for fiscal year 2014;

“(F) $1,124,547,250 for fiscal year 2015;

“(G) $1,276,750,865 for fiscal year 2016;

“(H) $1,364,488,901 for fiscal year 2017;

“(I) $1,466,769,052 for fiscal year 2018;

“(J) $1,712,755,702 for fiscal year 2019; and

“(K) $1,712,755,702 for fiscal year 2020.

“(3) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated under paragraph (2) shall remain available until expended.

“Subtitle D—Administration, Evaluation, and Technical Assistance

“SEC. 2241. ADMINISTRATION, EVALUATION, AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.

“(a) ADMINISTRATION AND EXPENSES.—For purposes of carrying out this title, there are authorized to be appropriated for administration and expenses—

- “(1) of the area agencies on aging—
- “(A) $16,825,895 for fiscal year 2010;
- “(B) $39,246,141 for fiscal year 2011;

- “(J) $15,414,118 for fiscal year 2019; and
- “(K) $16,651,981 for fiscal year 2020.

“(b) EVALUATION AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—

“(1) CONDITIONS TO RECEIPT OF GRANT.—In awarding grants under this title, the Secretary shall condition receipt of the grant for the second and subsequent grant years on a satisfactory determination that the State agency is meeting benchmarks specified in the grant agreement for each grant awarded under this title.

“(2) EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall measure and evaluate, either directly or through grants or contracts, the impact of the programs authorized under this title. Not later than June 1 of the year that is 6 years after the year of the date of enactment of the Project 2020: Building on the Promise of Home and Community-Based Services Act of 2009 and every 2 years thereafter, the Secretary shall—

“(A) compile the reports of the measures and evaluations of the grantees;

“(B) establish benchmarks to show progress toward savings; and “(C) present a compilation of the information under this paragraph to Congress.

“(3) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.—The Secretary shall award technical assistance grants, including State specific grants whenever practicable, to carry out the programs authorized under this title.

“(4) TRANSFER.—There are authorized to be appropriated for such evaluation and technical assistance under this subsection—

- “(K) $22,202,641 for fiscal year 2020.

“(c) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated under this section shall remain available until expended.”.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 183—CELEBRATING THE LIFE AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF MILLARD FULLER, THE FOUNDER OF HABITAT FOR HUMANITY

Mr. SHELBY (for himself, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. ISAKSON, and Mr. CHAMBLISS) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 183

Whereas Millard Fuller was born on January 3, 1935, in the small cotton-mill town of Lanett, in Chambers County, Alabama, and would later graduate from Auburn University and the University of Alabama School of Law;

Whereas Millard Fuller became a self-made millionaire by the age of 29 and could have lived out the rest of his life in comfort, but instead he and his wife sold all of their possessions, donated the proceeds to the poor, and began searching for a new purpose for their lives;

Whereas Millard Fuller and his wife established Habitat for Humanity in Americus, Georgia, in 1976;

Whereas Habitat for Humanity has constructed more than 300,000 homes for 1,500,000 people and has a presence in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and more than 90 countries around the world;

Whereas Habitat for Humanity's noteworthy accomplishments include building 263 houses across the United States in 1 week and massive rebuilding efforts in New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina;

Whereas in 2005, Millard Fuller established The Fuller Center for Housing, which works with local organizations to provide support and guidance to repair and build homes for impoverished individuals and is located in 24 States and 15 countries on 5 continents;

Whereas Millard Fuller provided 3 decades of leadership and service to Habitat for Humanity and The Fuller Center for Housing, committing his life to philanthropy and service to others while raising global concern for homelessness and poverty;

Whereas Millard Fuller was honored with over 50 honorary doctorate degrees by colleges and universities throughout the United States and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the Nation's highest civilian honor, by President William Jefferson Clinton in 1996; and

Whereas Millard Fuller passed away on February 3, 2009, leaving behind a loving wife, a proud family, and a legacy that will extend far beyond his life: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) celebrates the life and achievements of Millard Fuller;

(2) acknowledges the millions of people he and his organization have served and the inspiration he has given to so many; and

(3) encourages all the people of the United States to recognize and pay tribute to Millard Fuller's life by following the example of service that he set.

SENATE RESOLUTION 184—OFFERING DEEPEST CONDOLENCES TO THE FAMILY AND FRIENDS OF OFFICER STEPHEN T. JOHNS AND CALLING ON THE LEADERS OF ALL NATIONS TO SPEAK OUT AGAINST THE MANIFESTATIONS OF ANTI-SEMITISM, BIGOTRY, AND HATRED

Mr. CARDIN (for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. BARRASSO, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. BAYH, Mr. BEGICH, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BOND, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BROWN, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. BURR, Mr. BURRIS, Mr. BYRD, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. CARPER, Mr. CASEY, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. COBURN, Mr. COCHRAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. CORKER, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. DEMINT, Mr. DODD, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. ENSIGN, Mr. ENZI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. GREGG, Mrs. HAGAN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. HATCH, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. INOUE, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. JOHANNIS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. KAUFMAN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Ms. KLOBUCHAR, Mr. KOHL, Mr. KYL, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MCCAIN, Mrs. McCASKILL, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. MERKLEY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. PRYOR, Mr. REED, Mr. REID, Mr. RISCH, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANDERS, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SESSIONS, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. SHELBY, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. TESTER, Mr. THUNE, Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mr. UDALL of New Mexico, Mr. VITTER, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. WARNER, Mr. WEBB, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. WICKER, and Mr. WYDEN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 184

Whereas the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum was established as a “living memorial that stimulates leaders and citizens to confront hatred, prevent genocide, promote human dignity, and strengthen democracy”;

Whereas, since the dedication of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in 1993, the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum has welcomed nearly 30,000,000 visitors, including more than 8,000,000 school children and 85 heads of state;

Whereas, on June 10, 2009, in an assault at the entrance of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, Officer Stephen T. Johns of Temple Hills, Maryland, was fatally wounded and died heroically in the line of duty;

Whereas, in the wake of this heinous act of violence, the people of the United States should renew the commitment to end bigotry, intolerance, and hatred; and

Whereas there is no place in the society of the United States for individuals who seek to harm or deny rights to others, especially based on religion, race, or ethnic identity: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) offers deepest condolences to the family and friends of Officer Stephen T. Johns;

(2) commends the staff members of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum for their courage and bravery in responding to the attack on June 10, 2009;

(3) condemns anti-Semitism and all forms of religious, ethnic, and racial bigotry;

(4) condemns acts of physical violence against, and harassment of, people based on race, gender, ethnicity, or religious affiliation; and

(5) calls on the leaders of all Nations to speak out against the manifestations of anti-Semitism, bigotry, and hatred.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 26—APOLOGIZING FOR THE ENSLAVEMENT AND RACIAL SEGREGATION OF AFRICAN AMERICANS

Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. BOND, and Mr. COCHRAN) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was ordered held at the desk:

S. CON. RES. 26

Whereas, during the history of the Nation, the United States has grown into a symbol of democracy and freedom around the world;

Whereas the legacy of African Americans is interwoven with the very fabric of the democracy and freedom of the United States;

Whereas millions of Africans and their descendants were enslaved in the United States and the 13 American colonies from 1619 through 1865;

Whereas Africans forced into slavery were brutalized, humiliated, dehumanized, and subjected to the indignity of being stripped of their names and heritage;

Whereas many enslaved families were torn apart after family members were sold separately;

Whereas the system of slavery and the visceral racism against people of African descent upon which it depended became enmeshed in the social fabric of the United States;

Whereas slavery was not officially abolished until the ratification of the 13th amendment to the Constitution of the United States in 1865, after the end of the Civil War;

Whereas after emancipation from 246 years of slavery, African Americans soon saw the fleeting political, social, and economic gains they made during Reconstruction eviscerated by virulent racism, lynchings, disenfranchisement, Black Codes, and racial segregation laws that imposed a rigid system of officially sanctioned racial segregation in virtually all areas of life;

Whereas the system of de jure racial segregation known as “Jim Crow”, which arose in certain parts of the United States after the Civil War to create separate and unequal societies for Whites and African Americans, was a direct result of the racism against people of African descent that was engendered by slavery;

Whereas the system of Jim Crow laws officially existed until the 1960’s—a century after the official end of slavery in the United States—until Congress took action to end it, but the vestiges of Jim Crow continue to this day;

Whereas African Americans continue to suffer from the consequences of slavery and Jim Crow laws—long after both systems were formally abolished—through enormous damage and loss, both tangible and intangible, including the loss of human dignity and liberty;

Whereas the story of the enslavement and de jure segregation of African Americans and the dehumanizing atrocities committed against them should not be purged from or minimized in the telling of the history of the United States;

Whereas those African Americans who suffered under slavery and Jim Crow laws, and their descendants, exemplify the strength of the human character and provide a model of courage, commitment, and perseverance;

Whereas, on July 8, 2003, during a trip to Goree Island, Senegal, a former slave port, President George W. Bush acknowledged the continuing legacy of slavery in life in the United States and the need to confront that legacy, when he stated that slavery “was . . . one of the greatest crimes of history . . . The racial bigotry fed by slavery did not end with slavery or with segregation. And many of the issues that still trouble America have roots in the bitter experience of other times. But however long the journey, our destiny is set: liberty and justice for all.”;

Whereas President Bill Clinton also acknowledged the deep-seated problems caused by the continuing legacy of racism against African Americans that began with slavery, when he initiated a national dialogue about race;

Whereas an apology for centuries of brutal dehumanization and injustices cannot erase the past, but confession of the wrongs committed and a formal apology to African Americans will help bind the wounds of the Nation that are rooted in slavery and can speed racial healing and reconciliation and help the people of the United States understand the past and honor the history of all people of the United States;

Whereas the legislatures of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the States of Alabama, Florida, Maryland, and North Carolina have taken the lead in adopting resolutions officially expressing appropriate remorse for slavery, and other State legislatures are considering similar resolutions; and

Whereas it is important for the people of the United States, who legally recognized slavery through the Constitution and the laws of the United States, to make a formal apology for slavery and for its successor, Jim Crow, so they can move forward and seek reconciliation, justice, and harmony for all people of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the sense of the Congress is the following:

(1) APOLOGY FOR THE ENSLAVEMENT AND SEGREGATION OF AFRICAN-AMERICANS.—The Congress—

(A) acknowledges the fundamental injustice, cruelty, brutality, and inhumanity of slavery and Jim Crow laws;

(B) apologizes to African Americans on behalf of the people of the United States, for the wrongs committed against them and their ancestors who suffered under slavery and Jim Crow laws; and

(C) expresses its recommitment to the principle that all people are created equal and endowed with inalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and calls on all people of the United States to work toward eliminating racial prejudices, injustices, and discrimination from our society.

(2) DISCLAIMER.—Nothing in this resolution—

(A) authorizes or supports any claim against the United States; or

(B) serves as a settlement of any claim against the United States.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday, June 18, following a period of morning business, the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Con. Res. 26, a concurrent resolution submitted earlier today, and relating to slavery apology; that the concurrent resolution be held at the desk; that there be 60 minutes for debate with respect to the concurrent resolution, with the time equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees; that no amendments be in order to the concurrent resolution or preamble; that upon the use or yielding back of time, the Senate proceed to vote on adoption of the concurrent resolution; that upon adoption, the preamble be agreed to; and the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we expect this resolution to be voted on by voice.

CELEBRATING THE LIFE AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF MILLARD FULLER

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 183.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 183) celebrating the life and achievements of Millard Fuller, the founder of Habitat for Humanity.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 183) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 183

Whereas Millard Fuller was born on January 3, 1935, in the small cotton-mill town of Lanett, in Chambers County, Alabama, and would later graduate from Auburn University and the University of Alabama School of Law;

Whereas Millard Fuller became a self-made millionaire by the age of 29 and could have lived out the rest of his life in comfort, but instead he and his wife sold all of their possessions, donated the proceeds to the poor, and began searching for a new purpose for their lives;

Whereas Millard Fuller and his wife established Habitat for Humanity in Americus, Georgia, in 1976;

Whereas Habitat for Humanity has constructed more than 300,000 homes for 1,500,000 people and has a presence in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and more than 90 countries around the world;

Whereas Habitat for Humanity's noteworthy accomplishments include building 263 houses across the United States in 1 week and massive rebuilding efforts in New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina;

Whereas in 2005, Millard Fuller established The Fuller Center for Housing, which works with local organizations to provide support and guidance to repair and build homes for impoverished individuals and is located in 24 States and 15 countries on 5 continents;

Whereas Millard Fuller provided 3 decades of leadership and service to Habitat for Humanity and The Fuller Center for Housing, committing his life to philanthropy and service to others while raising global concern for homelessness and poverty;

Whereas Millard Fuller was honored with over 50 honorary doctorate degrees by colleges and universities throughout the United States and was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the Nation's highest civilian honor, by President William Jefferson Clinton in 1996; and

Whereas Millard Fuller passed away on February 3, 2009, leaving behind a loving wife, a proud family, and a legacy that will extend far beyond his life: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) celebrates the life and achievements of Millard Fuller;

(2) acknowledges the millions of people he and his organization have served and the inspiration he has given to so many; and

(3) encourages all the people of the United States to recognize and pay tribute to Millard Fuller's life by following the example of service that he set.

OFFERING CONDOLENCES TO THE FAMILY AND FRIENDS OF OFFICER STEPHEN T. JOHNS

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 184.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 184) offering deepest condolences to the family and friends of Officer Stephen T. Johns and calling on the leaders of all Nations to speak out against the manifestations of anti-Semitism, bigotry, and hatred.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, today I have submitted a resolution condemning yesterday's heinous, horrific act of violence at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum.

I want to offer my deepest condolences to the family and friends of Officer Stephen Tyrone Johns. Officer Johns, of Temple Hills, in Prince George's County, MD, died in the line of duty. He ably served as a guard of the museum for 6 years. He was just 39 and leaves behind a grieving family. He gave his life to save the lives of numerous others. We must perpetually honor that ultimate sacrifice. I also want to commend all the staff of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum and the authorities who responded to the scene for their bravery.

I have visited the Holocaust Memorial Museum many times with my family and friends. It is clear that the gunman's despicable rampage was intended to frighten and intimidate all people who care about equality and liberty.

I introduced this resolution to affirm my commitment to ending the bigotry and hatred that led to this heinous act. There is no place in our society for individuals who would harm or deny rights to others, especially based on religion, race, gender, or ethnic identity. It is heartening that each and every U.S. Senator has cosponsored this resolution.

Let there be no mistake about it, anti-Semitism and other hate crimes remain a pressing problem in our society. Anti-Semitism spawns from centuries of hatred, persecution, and the repeated attempts to destroy the Jewish people from their early days of slavery, through the Inquisition to the Holocaust and beyond. Hate crimes send a powerful message because they affect more than the individual victims; they are meant to intimidate and instill fear in entire groups of people. They create a sense of vulnerability and insecurity in others who may share characteristics with the victims. And that is precisely the intent of those who commit these crimes.

I am privileged to be chairman of the Helsinki Commission and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. In those capacities, and as a U.S. Senator generally, I am afforded numerous opportunities to speak out against the scourge of anti-Semitism, racial bigotry, and ethnic hatred worldwide. Part of the battle is to publicize the intolerance and hateful activity. As Oliver Wendell Holmes remarked,

The mind of a bigot is like the pupil of an eye. The more light you shine on it, the more it will contract.

This resolution is meant to be such a light and I am grateful that each and every other Senator has seen fit to cosponsor it. We truly speak as one in our anguish at the tragic event yesterday and in our determination to root out its causes so that it will not be repeated.

Mr. BURRIS. Mr. President, it is with deep sadness that I rise to mark the death of security guard Stephen Tyrone Johns, whose senseless murder yesterday afternoon at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum shocked us all.

My heart goes out to his family and friends on this tragic day and to his colleagues and fellow security officers who must return to a workplace that will surely never be quite the same.

Even as we mourn his death, we must commend Officer Johns, his colleagues, and all emergency personnel who responded quickly to prevent additional violence and protect the safety of museum visitors.

In the aftermath of this killing, how can we make sense of that which can only be described as senseless?

How can we comprehend the forces that would drive a person to such hatred, to such violence?

The simple truth is that most of us will never be able to fully understand this tragedy. We can only comfort one another as we struggle to confront a world in which Officer Johns has been taken from us far before his time.

The same incomprehensible hatred to which the Holocaust Memorial Museum bears silent witness.

We must honor the memory of Officer Johns by continuing the work he supported at the museum, preventing further violence, and standing tall in the face of intolerance.

It will not be easy to move on, but we can start by asking ourselves what we can do to prevent guns from falling into the hands of killers, to stop those who would commit hate crimes before more innocent people are slain. That is what we owe the legacy of Officer Stephen Tyrone Johns. That is how we can celebrate his memory, honor his sacrifice, and pay tribute to the spirit of his work and the continuing mission of the place where he died.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 184) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 184

Whereas the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum was established as a "living memorial that stimulates leaders and citizens to confront hatred, prevent genocide, promote human dignity, and strengthen democracy";

Whereas, since the dedication of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in 1993, the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum has welcomed nearly 30,000,000 visitors, including more than 8,000,000 school children and 85 heads of state;

Whereas, on June 10, 2009, in an assault at the entrance of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, Officer Stephen T. Johns of Temple Hills, Maryland, was fatally wounded and died heroically in the line of duty;

Whereas, in the wake of this heinous act of violence, the people of the United States should renew the commitment to end bigotry, intolerance, and hatred; and

Whereas there is no place in the society of the United States for individuals who seek to harm or deny rights to others, especially based on religion, race, or ethnic identity: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) offers deepest condolences to the family and friends of Officer Stephen T. Johns;

(2) commends the staff members of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum for their courage and bravery in responding to the attack on June 10, 2009;

(3) condemns anti-Semitism and all forms of religious, ethnic, and racial bigotry;

(4) condemns acts of physical violence against, and harassment of, people based on race, gender, ethnicity, or religious affiliation; and

(5) calls on the leaders of all Nations to speak out against the manifestations of anti-Semitism, bigotry, and hatred.

ORDERS FOR MONDAY, JUNE 15, 2009

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until 1:45 p.m., Monday, June 15; that following the prayer and pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and there be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, earlier today I filed a cloture motion on the motion to proceed to S. 1023, the travel promotion legislation. That cloture vote will occur prior to the recess for the caucus luncheons on Tuesday, June 16. As previously announced, there will be no rollcall votes next Monday.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY, JUNE 15, 2009, AT 1:45 P.M.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that it adjourn under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:15 p.m., adjourned until Monday, June 15, 2009, at 1:45 p.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, June 11, 2009

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

We confess, Lord God Almighty, that we often accept countless blessings in life and forget to give You thanks. Faithfully surrounded with the support of family and friends, we do not always remember to be grateful. We enjoy food on our tables and cherish freedom, yet we can easily neglect those around this land and other parts of the world who have neither.

Fulfilling our daily duties and responsibilities on Capitol Hill can make such a difference in this world and provide a sense of personal satisfaction because each day grants us great opportunities. Remind us, ever-present God, to be grateful and gracious. Help us to find ways to show our appreciation by sharing our many blessings with others and never forgetting to offer thanksgiving to You each day for every day.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House her approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. TAUSCHER). Will the gentlewoman from Massachusetts (Ms. TSONGAS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ms. TSONGAS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain up to 10 requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

REMEMBERING JOHN HENNING

(Ms. PELOSI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. PELOSI. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a leader for working men and women, a distinguished diplomat and a great American

John Henning, known to us as Jack, who passed away on June 4, 2009. Jack Henning will be long remembered for his distinguished career on the front lines of the labor movement, fighting passionately for justice, equality, human rights and jobs in California, across America and throughout the world.

A native San Franciscan, Jack began his career working for the Association of Catholic Unionists. He joined his first union, the United Federal Workers of the CIO, after graduation from college. Jack served for decades as a dedicated leader of working people, rising to be the president of the California Labor Federation. In that role, Jack represented millions of California's workers with great distinction. Not only union members, but millions of Americans who never belonged to a union enjoy better wages, safer workplaces, greater rights and more secure retirements because of the battles waged by union leaders such as Jack Henning.

Jack was a close ally of legendary farm worker organizers Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta. He cited among his proudest accomplishments the passage in 1975 of the landmark Agricultural Labor Relations Act, which our colleague Mr. HOWARD BERMAN was so much a part of, and provided tough labor protections for those who have been abused and mistreated for decades in California's pastures of plenty.

Jack Henning ended his farewell speech from the California Labor Federation in 1996 with, And if by a suspension of the laws of nature I were young again, I would follow no other course, no other flag, but the flag of America and the flag of labor. The labor movement was blessed to have him as a leader.

As distinguished as he was on behalf of workers, Jack made many other contributions to his State and this Nation for which we are all grateful. Before taking the presidency of the California Federation of Labor, Jack served Presidents Kennedy and Johnson as Under Secretary of Labor and was appointed by President Johnson as Ambassador to New Zealand in 1967. Jack was also a distinguished regent at the University of California for a dozen years during which he helped lead the fight for expanded opportunities for minority students and demanded that the university divest its investments in apartheid South Africa. That divestment initiative helped bring about the peaceful end of apartheid and the new day of majority rule in South Africa.

We will all miss Jack greatly, but none more than his sons Brian, Daniel, John Jr., Patrick and Thomas; his daughters Mary and Nancy; his 12 grandchildren and his great-grandchildren. We also remember his beloved wife Betty, who preceded him in death. I hope it is a comfort to his family that so many people mourn their loss and are praying for them at this sad time.

Jack Henning was a proud American, a devout Catholic, passionate about his Irish roots and a great friend and mentor to many of us. Mr. Speaker, I join Jack Henning's family, friends and workers worldwide to honor his legacy, celebrate his life and remember his illustrious contributions to the State of California and to our great Nation. Later today, thousands of people will gather in California to do just that, celebrate his life and pay tribute to him.

PROTECTING PRIVATE HEALTH INSURANCE

(Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Many Americans don't have access to affordable health care, and we can and need to do better for all Americans. I support a system that gives Americans more affordable health care choices so they can pick the coverage that best fits their needs. The core part of the Democrat proposal is a new government-run program that will not only put bureaucrats between you and your doctor but would force more than 100 million people, Americans, out of the health coverage they currently receive through their jobs.

We need a plan that really does let Americans who like their health care coverage keep it, a plan that doesn't add new taxes or new mandates or drive up costs or drive people out of health care. We must give all Americans the freedom to choose their health plan, not force them into a government-run, one-size-fits-all plan. Private plans are great. Let's protect them.

INTRODUCTION OF THE SAFETY IN DEFENSE CONTRACTING ACT OF 2009

(Ms. SHEA-PORTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. SHEA-PORTER. Madam Speaker, today I am introducing the Safety

□ This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., □ 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

in Defense Contracting Act of 2009. When our servicemembers or civilian personnel put their lives at risk while deployed overseas, they should not have to worry about the safety of their living and working quarters. Unfortunately, due to shoddy contractor work, they do. American personnel have been injured or killed by electric shocks. That same deficient work has resulted in hundreds of fires, one which destroyed the largest dining hall in Iraq. Gross negligence by contractors is unacceptable.

That is why I am introducing the Safety in Defense Contracting Act to protect our military and civilian personnel by debarring grossly negligent or reckless defense contractors found guilty of causing death or injury to our personnel. Such contractors do not deserve further government contracts worth millions of dollars for performing the same work.

To make matters worse, defense contractors who are guilty of dangerously deficient work have been receiving award and incentive fees. My bill denies them these fees. They should no longer be rewarded for poor performance at the expense of the taxpayers. It will take time to rebuild our contractor oversight capabilities, but I ask my colleagues to join me in this bill.

CLEAN ENERGY—NUCLEAR POWER

(Mr. POE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. POE of Texas. Madam Speaker, many countries, including China and European nations, are continuing to move to clean energy, such as nuclear power. The United States, the nuclear power pioneer, lags far behind in the development of new generating plants. The United States could and should move to the licensing and development of more nuclear power plants.

Nuclear power is an efficient and a cheaper way of providing clean energy to America's manufacturing sector. We should streamline the long cumbersome process of power plant applications that use safe reactor designs, designs that have already been approved by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Progress, safety and costs have advanced to a state that America can safely store spent nuclear fuel rods and also recycle fuel. One of America's most impressive plants is the North Anna Nuclear Station here in nearby Virginia. Nuclear power is responsible for 20 percent of our energy, but in France 80 percent of their energy comes from nuclear energy. Nuclear power will keep jobs in America and help free us from the shackles of foreign control of our energy.

And that's just the way it is.

OUR CLEAN AND SUSTAINABLE ENERGY FUTURE

(Ms. TSONGAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. TSONGAS. Madam Speaker, global warming is no longer an academic question for scientists to ponder. It's a very real crisis that requires our leadership. This is not a political issue. This is a critical generational responsibility that will take a commitment from Congress and from every person in our society. We have a real opportunity this year to prove our commitment by voting for H.R. 2454, the American Energy and Security Act.

The renewable technologies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions exist. The societal will and desire to go clean have been demonstrated, and the political climate to finally create sound public policy is now present. The cost of inaction on this critical challenge is unacceptable and the price too high. A recent study concluded that unchecked effects of climate change could result in a cost of $271 billion per year by 2025. Failure to act is intolerable when considering the economic and job creation opportunities a clean energy economy presents. The American Energy and Security Act provides a path that leads us to a clean, sustainable energy future.

THE REPUBLICAN ANSWER TO THE ENERGY CHALLENGES WE FACE

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. The American economy is hurting. Gasoline prices are on the rise. Utility rates threaten to go higher, imposing even greater hardship on working families. The American people are looking for answers in these times to the challenges we face in energy. The Democrat answer you have just heard is a national energy tax that will lead to higher energy prices and massive job losses for the American people.

The President said it best a year ago when he said, if the cap-and-trade plan were to pass, utility rates—his words now—would, quote, necessarily skyrocket.

Some estimates suggest job losses between 1.8 and 7 million. Well, Republicans have a better plan, the American Energy Act. It's an all-of-the-above plan that offers energy independence, more jobs and a cleaner environment without imposing a national energy tax. Our energy solution focuses on more domestic exploration for oil and natural gas, a renewed commitment to build 100 nuclear power plants in the next 20 years, investments in renewables, alternative energy technologies and creating incentives for conservation. You can read all about it on the editorial page of the Wall Street Journal today.

The American people want energy independence and a cleaner environment without a national energy tax. The American Energy Act offered by House Republicans is the answer the American people are looking for.

EXPRESSING OUTRAGE FOR THE MURDER OF OFFICER STEPHEN T. JOHNS

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, as an advisory board member of the Holocaust Museum of Houston, I rise with a deep sense of sympathy and outrage for the terrible tragic incident that happened, as The Washington Post reported, at a monument of sorrow and also a standing edifice for peace.

I offer my deepest sympathy to the family of Security Officer Stephen T. Johns. As a believer and an advocate of our Constitution and our First Amendment rights, I stand here in outrage to express my opposition to the idea that protected speech equals protected violence. This was a dastardly act, and we don't know how many other targets this hateful-minded person might have been engaged in.

We must continue to stand against hate. We must continue to promote the passage of the hate crimes legislation; but frankly, we must say to those who we mourn, by putting forward a Holocaust Museum, many across the Nation and in my town of Houston, that we stand with them in solidarity.

To my good friend Peter Berkowitz and Fred Zeidman, who chairs the Holocaust Museum here in Washington, a Houstonian, you have my deepest sympathy, my respect, and I stand in solidarity with you.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO THE STATE CHAMPION NEEDVILLE BLUE JAYS GIRLS HIGH SCHOOL SOFTBALL TEAM

(Mr. OLSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLSON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Needville Blue Jays, who defeated the Celina Bobcats 3-1 at McCombs Field in Austin to win the Texas class 3A girls high school championship last week.

The Blue Jays played their hearts out and have made all Texas proud. Only 3 years ago, six members of the Needville team played in the 2006 Junior Softball World Series, where they finished third overall. This State championship victory was the result of exceptional teamwork and years of practice and dedication.

The Blue Jays' defense was superb in the finals. Celina had five hits, but Needville made no errors and kept the Bobcats' base runners in check.

I would also like to compliment the coach of the Blue Jays, C.J. Mazac. The best teams are always the result of exceptional coaching, and Coach Mazac has clearly inspired and motivated his players.

I would like to send a big congratulations to the graduating seniors, and I would also like to recognize all of the team members who made this victory possible. Great job to each of you.

The Blue Jays' final record for the season was an impressive 34-8. All residents of Needville and Fort Bend County, Texas, are extremely proud of our Blue Jays, and I extend my congratulations to these talented young athletes.

SOLVING THE CRISIS IN AMERICAN MEDICINE

(Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Forty-nine years ago, the 1960 October Harpers Magazine cover story was "The Crisis in American Medicine." Well, we are still in crisis, but change is in the air.

The facts are clear: High costs, more procedures, tests, and hospitalization is not better care; it is a symptom of poor care. Every major Nation spends less, and most have better outcomes than the United States.

Getting 50 million Americans health insurance and giving the rest of Americans with insurance, stability, will cost more, but about half of this cost can be achieved by reforming the system, and having the government pay the balance will cost far less for business and people with insurance over the next 10 years than business as usual.

With a President who gets it, a Congress listening to what the people want and a public plan to keep the system honest, it means that there won't be a cover story 50 years from now about American medicine still in crisis.

A LACK OF BIPARTISANSHIP IN HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Madam Speaker, an overhaul of our Nation's health care system is under way, and I am glad that people in my district are engaged in this critical issue. Unfortunately, the Democrats have shared very few details of the plan, except that there will be a public plan, which I have to tell you most people are frightened of.

While I realize that we are in the minority party, I still have nearly 1 million constituents to represent, including more Medicare beneficiaries than any other Member of Congress. My Republican colleagues and I have made numerous attempts to reach across the aisle to share our ideas on how to improve the health care system and make it more affordable. So we are drafting our own bill.

When President Obama invites Members of Congress to the White House to craft health care bills, he invites only Democrats. He has met with industry representatives but never with Republicans. Recently, the President sent a letter saying he expects a bureaucratic-run health system to be included in the final option, but again, he sent the letter only to Democrats. Hardly a gesture of bipartisanship.

THE NEED FOR PASSING HATE CRIMES LEGISLATION

(Mr. COHEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. COHEN. Madam Speaker, like Representative JACKSON-Lee before me, I was shocked at hearing of the shooting at the Holocaust Museum yesterday. Indeed, it is a place of special reverence and a place where you wouldn't think violence would occur, but deranged minds do deranged things, and the man who did the shooting had a history of hate towards African Americans and toward Jews and toward our government, it appears, even though he served in our Armed Forces.

It reminds me of the need for passing hate crimes legislation because hate today still exists in people's hearts, and when people hate any group, they generally hate all different minorities. They don't understand the America of tolerance and inclusion that we celebrate and upon which we were founded.

It also reminds me of the need to have a COPS bill passed to have more protection, and the cops that were approved in the ARRA protect our society from these types of attacks.

Yesterday there was to be a play debuted at the Holocaust Museum by Janet Langhart Cohen, wife of former Secretary of Defense Bill Cohen, about an imaginary conversation between Emmett Till and Anne Frank. It will debut on Friday at George Washington University and talk about tolerance and peace and the results of hate.

SUPPORT AN ALL-OF-THE-ABOVE ENERGY PLAN

(Mr. BROWN of South Carolina asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN of South Carolina. Madam Speaker, for years my Republican colleagues and I have focused on implementing an all-of-the-above energy plan to cut the ties of foreign oil and create affordable American energy. However, the Democrat cap-and-tax plan will actually serve as a national energy tax, resulting in fewer jobs and more government control.

More than $3,100 will be added to the annual energy costs of American families, a financial hardship that will greatly impact the poor, who spend a large part of their income on energy. These taxes will directly impact farmers in South Carolina as everyday costs of fuel and fertilizer become too expensive for them to afford.

Additionally, our State's clean-energy production will be excessively taxed, forcing companies to move to countries with less stringent standards, resulting in little progress towards protecting our environment. The relocation of these businesses could result in the loss of up to 7 million jobs, increasing unemployment and placing further economic strains on the American families, all for a policy that won't even achieve its initial goal of reducing carbon emissions.

Americans are sick of this energy roller coaster. I encourage my colleagues to support an all-of-the-above energy plan that will not tax us to death.

COMMENDING HODGDON YACHTS OF EAST BOOTHBAY, MAINE

(Ms. PINGREE of Maine asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Madam Speaker, I want to talk to you this morning about Hodgdon Yachts of East Boothbay, Maine. Hodgdon Brothers opened for business in 1816 and is the oldest continually operated shipyard in the United States. Tim Hodgdon is a fifth-generation boat builder, continuing a long and proud tradition.

Hodgdon has taken Maine's tradition of world-class craftsmanship and combined it with new technology and advances in composites to build their business and create good paying, sustainable jobs in our State.

For example, in the small town of Richmond, Maine, Hodgdon has created a facility to build boat interiors. Between 60 and 70 new jobs have been created there in the last 6 months alone, and Hodgdon believes they can double the size of that operation in the next year.

And just this week, Hodgdon was given a Maine Technology Institute grant for nearly $4 million to take the first steps towards building a 30,000-square-foot facility that would create hundreds of more jobs building high-speed patrol boats of the future.

Hodgdon Yachts is just one example of the innovative companies doing business in Maine, aggressively using new technology to create good, quality jobs that can't be exported.

CAP-AND-TRADE

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Madam Speaker, in a couple of weeks the House is going to consider the cap-and-trade legislation that has enormous implications for our economy. This 926-page bill, as introduced and considered by the committee, has 50 pages on lightbulbs and two sentences on nuclear power.

Recently, I saw a Rasmussen poll of likely voters that indicates 30 percent of likely voters have no idea what cap-and-trade means. Twenty-nine percent of them also thought it was some sort of Wall Street regulation, and 17 percent thought it had to something to do with health care. Only 24 percent had any idea of what it was.

Cap-and-trade puts a cap or a limit on greenhouse gas emissions, including CO₂, carbon dioxide. When you breathe in, that is oxygen. When you breathe out, that is carbon dioxide, CO₂.

According to this legislation, CO₂ is pollution. According to the bill, if foreign countries don't cap emissions, their goods can be hit with tariffs which they call "border adjustments." The loss of jobs that will go overseas as a result of this bill is being called "leakage."

Breathing as pollution, border adjustments, leakage—this bill is a massive, bureaucratic, regulatory taxation scheme on energy, linguistic obfuscation to cover up the harmful impacts it will have on our economy.

LEADERSHIP CHANGES IN HENDERSON, NEVADA

(Ms. TITUS asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. TITUS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Henderson Mayor Jim Gibson who, after 12 years of excellent service to our community, led his final city council meeting on Tuesday night. I also want to thank Jack Clark, who has served not only as a Henderson council member for the past 16 years, but also as a member of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department.

Jim Gibson guided Henderson during a critical time in its history when it experienced unprecedented growth. Under his leadership, the city met the challenges and the opportunities that growth brings.

Mayor Gibson provided a vision and a plan for the city that promoted development while also preserving valuable open space and recreation areas. In addition, he was instrumental in bringing Nevada State College to Henderson.

As the City of Henderson turns a page after more than a decade of leadership from these two outstanding public servants, I want to congratulate our new mayor, Andy Hafen, and new City Councilwoman Kathleen Boutin. I look forward to working closely with them and wish them all the best in their new positions.

THE WAR SUPPLEMENTAL BILL

(Mr. COFFMAN of Colorado asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COFFMAN of Colorado. Madam Speaker, I rise today to share my concerns about H.R. 2346, the war supplemental bill. Our troops deserve nothing less than a clean war supplemental bill, free from unrelated spending. We must give our troops the resources necessary to ensure victory in Iraq and Afghanistan.

I visited Iraq over the Memorial Day recess, my first trip back since having served there with the United States Marine Corps in al Anbar province. I cannot, with that trip still fresh in my memory, allow the needed support for our troops to be used as the hook to carry unneeded and distasteful spending.

The bill now requires the United States to borrow money that we don't have to loan it to the International Monetary Fund. The International Monetary Fund can then loan this money to nations like Iran and Venezuela.

Madam Speaker, it is inappropriate to use our troops to cram through overseas bailouts. I will vote against this and ask my colleagues to join me.

BRINGING DOWN HEALTH CARE COSTS

(Mr. ALTMIRE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ALTMIRE. Madam Speaker, this week, both Houses of Congress put forward the initial draft of a long-overdue effort to cut health care costs in this country. And while we still have to come to agreement on all the details, there can be no doubt that the American people expect us to act to bring down health care costs.

The cost of health care affects every business and every family in this country. It is one of the leading drivers of our long-term deficit, it makes our businesses less globally competitive, and it adds uncertainty to millions of American families who are one accident, illness or job loss away from losing everything. And while we debate how best to fix what doesn't work in our health care system, we must preserve what works and build upon the best aspects of our uniquely American system.

We will spend the summer debating the details of the plan, but one thing is certain: the American people will not accept the status quo as health care costs continue to skyrocket. "No" is not an answer.

MEDIA GIVING PRESIDENT OBAMA PASS ON ECONOMY

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Madam Speaker, the national media have given President Obama a free pass on the economy. Earlier this year, the Obama administration said Congress needed to pass the President's stimulus package to keep the unemployment rate below 8 percent. Since Congress has passed the President's nonstimulus stimulus, the economy has lost more than 1.5 million jobs, and unemployment has jumped to 9.4 percent.

Despite the massive layoffs, the President claimed this week that the stimulus has saved jobs. The national media have allowed the Obama administration to get away with spinning jobs lost as jobs saved, and the national media have continued to ignore the Congressional Budget Office's conclusion that the stimulus bill actually would reduce output—reduce output.

The media should scrutinize the President's words and actions, not give him a free pass.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

(Mr. TONKO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TONKO. Madam Speaker, we make great strides towards solving our future energy needs by focusing on a process that has been virtually ignored for the past 8 years, research and development. Time and again, our economy has been pushed forward by a spirit of innovation. It has been pushed forward by a spirit that a century ago ignited an energy revolution started right in the heart of the 21st Congressional District with General Electric. Less than half a century ago, President Kennedy announced the space race in response to Sputnik. We now have that opportunity again. But when one considers the global context, it's easy to see that the United States is falling woefully behind.

The House of Representatives is considering the American Clean Energy and Security Act, which would create millions of clean energy jobs, put America on the path to energy independence, and cut global warming pollution. China is investing $12.6 million every hour towards clean energy. With this kind of deficit, we stand to lose our place in the world as it relates to our energy security, and that is a finished product we simply cannot afford to import.

QUALITY HEALTH CARE COVERAGE

(Mr. BLUNT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BLUNT. Madam Speaker, earlier this week I talked about the principles that we need to follow for Americans to have a better health care system. The first of those principles was to make quality health care coverage affordable and accessible for every American, regardless of preexisting conditions.

Today I want to talk for a minute, now less than a minute, about why we need to protect our system from a government-run health care alternative. What that alternative would do would eliminate coverage for more than 100 million Americans who currently receive their coverage through their job. It would limit your choice of doctors and medical treatment options, and it would result in the Federal Government taking control of health care.

Yesterday, the American Medical Association embraced all of those reasons not to have a public option, not to have a government-run option, not to have a government takeover of health care.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS TO HOUSE DEMOCRACY ASSISTANCE COMMISSION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 4(b) of House Resolution 5, 111th Congress, and the order of the House of January 6, 2009, the Chair announces the Speaker's appointment of the following Members of the House to the House Democracy Assistance Commission:

Mr. PRICE, North Carolina, Chairman
Mrs. CAPPS, California
Mr. HOLT, New Jersey
Mr. SCHIFF, California
Ms. SCHWARTZ, Pennsylvania
Mr. PAYNE, New Jersey
Mr. POMEROY, North Dakota
Mr. FARR, California
Mr. ELLISON, Minnesota
Ms. HIRONO, Hawaii
Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, California

COMMUNICATION FROM THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Honorable JOHN A. BOEHNER, Republican Leader:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, June 4, 2009.

Hon. NANCY PELOSI,
*Speaker, U.S. Capitol,
Washington, DC.*

DEAR SPEAKER PELOSI: Pursuant to section 4(b) of House Resolution 5, 111th Congress, I am pleased to appoint the following Members to the House Democracy Assistance Commission.

The Honorable David Dreier of California.
The Honorable John Boozman of Arkansas.
The Honorable Jeff Fortenberry of Nebraska.
The Honorable Judy Biggert of Illinois.
The Honorable Bill Shuster of Pennsylvania.
The Honorable Kay Granger of Texas.
The Honorable Charles W. Boustany, Jr. of Louisiana.

The Honorable K. Michael Conaway of Texas.

The Honorable Vern Buchanan of Florida.
All Members have expressed interest in serving in this capacity and I am pleased to fulfill their requests.

Sincerely,

JOHN A. BOEHNER,
Republican Leader.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES ON H.R. 2346, SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2009

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2346) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2009, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.
Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I have a motion at the desk.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:
Mr. Lewis of California moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 2346 be instructed as follows:

- (1) To agree, within the scope of conference, to funding levels that will result in a total funding level in the conference report that does not exceed the total funding level provided in the Senate amendment.
- (2) To insist on the House funding levels for each account under title I of the House bill (related to defense matters).
- (3) To insist on the House funding levels for each account under chapter 9 of title II of the House bill (related to military construction).
- (4) To recede to section 1305 of the Senate amendment (related to detainee photographic records protection).
- (5) To not record their approval of the final conference agreement (within the meaning of clause 12(a)(4) of House rule XXII) unless the text of such agreement has been available to the managers in an electronic, searchable, and downloadable form for at least 48 hours prior to the time described in such clause.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 7 of rule XXII, the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Madam Speaker, let me begin my remarks by saying that I'm pleased that until last week, we appeared to be following regular order by actually having an open meeting of House and Senate conferees.

As I and the vast majority of Republicans have suggested several times through this process, we want this troop funding bill to be an up-and-down vote and, ideally, a bipartisan vote.

I want to commend my colleagues, Chairman OBEY and Chairman MURTHA, for producing a bill that accurately reflected the real needs and priorities of the troops deployed in Iraq and Afghanistan. While the House-passed bill wasn't perfect, it did garner bipartisan support, including that of 168 Republican Members.

Unfortunately, what I'm hearing and reading about, the final "deal" that was struck between Chairman OBEY and Senator INOUE leads me to believe that the final package will not enjoy the same bipartisan support. As reported, the deal struck by the two Appropriations chairmen would do the following:

First, cut over $4.6 billion from Defense and MilCon from the House-passed levels.

Further, it would increase foreign operations funding by $5.2 billion over the House-passed levels, and $2.6 billion over the Senate-passed bill.

Further, it would include $5 billion in funding for the IMF to secure a whopping $108 billion of loans; in essence, the IMF would be funded at levels some $30 billion above the troop funding level. So we have troop funding, on the one hand, that has been reduced, and we've got a sizable expansion of foreign aid.

Further, the bill includes $1 billion of new spending for what we have been calling "Cash for Clunkers" on the floor. That amount was not in the bill as it passed the House either.

Now, let me shift gears and briefly explain the motion before us. It's a straightforward motion that insists on the House funding levels of $84.5 billion for the defense and military construction portions of the supplemental.

Further, it also insists on the lower top line for overall funding levels of $91.3 billion contained in the Senate-passed bill for the entire supplemental.

Further, it requires the text of the conference agreement be available in an electronic, downloadable and searchable form for 48 hours prior to consideration by the House. This language is identical to the motion unanimously adopted and subsequently ignored by my friends in the majority when considering our massive stimulus bill.

Finally, this motion insists on the Senate position regarding prohibition on the release of detainee photos sponsored by Senators GRAHAM and LIEBERMAN.

Clearly, the focus of this supplemental funding bill should be on the troops, not IMF, not foreign aid funding, not Cash for Clunkers, or just using the emergency circumstances to buy down fiscal year 2010 spending.

Madam Speaker, I urge the adoption of the motion.

I reserve my time.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Madam Speaker, I don't particularly care how people vote on this motion. Motions to instruct conferees are notorious, and they have been for many years, for simply being a device by which we either make political statements around here or express first preferences. I don't really have any objection to either. I think it's a legitimate thing to do in a legislative body.

I intend to vote "no" on the amendment, but I don't have any problem with any Member who decides that there are certain pieces of this motion that they would like to send a message to the conferees on. And so, as far as I'm concerned, people can vote any way they want.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. Sure.

Mr. LEWIS of California. In view of your delightful mood today, we could probably bypass all this discussion and, as you've said, expedite the schedule. I do want to recognize my friend, Mr. LUNGREN, but if you want to, you know—

Mr. OBEY. I think that would be a very good idea. It would give us more time to do our real work, which is to prepare for the conference this afternoon.

Mr. LEWIS of California. You've got the floor, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. OBEY. I thank the gentleman for his very wise comments.

Let me simply say that I don't have any objection to several provisions in this motion. I do have to say one thing, however. The effect of this motion would be to substantially increase the likely amount of money approved by the conference for the Defense Department, and to substantially reduce the amount of money provided for the State Department.

I have always had difficulty understanding why people are willing to spend hundreds of billions of dollars to wage war but are resistant to spending a tiny amount in comparison in order to prevent war or to extricate ourselves from war. In fact, the conference report that is likely to come back will probably exceed the numbers in this motion for bringing State Department personnel more immediately into Iraq, into Afghanistan and into Pakistan. We are trying to convert that operation from, essentially, a military operation to a much more balanced operation, which includes much greater effort on the diplomatic side to extricate ourselves from that war. That requires money. It requires facilities. As many military experts have said, you cannot win this if you just deal with it militarily.

So, with that one point, I would simply say, Madam Speaker, that I would reserve the balance of my time until the gentleman is ready to close.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to recognize the gentleman from California, DAN LUNGREN, for 4 minutes.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. I thank my ranking member.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of this motion to instruct for the reasons articulated by the gentleman from California.

□ 1045

But let me talk about another subject that is covered in this bill and one that is of extreme importance. It goes to the question of how we handle those who are at Guantanamo at the present time.

This issue has erupted around this country because people are beginning to understand the ramifications of closing Guantanamo and bringing people here to the United States whose only connection to the United States is that they were caught on the battlefield with the intention of killing Americans. Now, why is it important whether or not we keep Guantanamo open or whether we bring these people to the United States?

We got a little bit of an insight into why it's important by the report by a colleague of ours, Mr. ROGERS from Michigan, who, when he was in Afghanistan recently and visited our base there, went to the prison there where we are holding people who we actually captured on the battlefield. He observed the fact that now we have FBI agents Mirandizing, that is, giving Miranda rights statements to those we have found on the battlefield.

In other words, Madam Speaker, what we have done is we have transposed the universe in which these people are being detained from one of a combat atmosphere to one of a criminal proceeding in the United States.

Now, why is that important? It's important because this is happening for the first time in the history of the United States. We did not do this, obviously, during the Revolutionary War. We did not do it during any war we fought, not the Civil War, not World War I, not World War II. If we had followed this same thinking in World War II, our courts would have been overwhelmed. People forget we have had 2 million POWs that we held during World War II, over 400,000 of them in the United States. Never was it thought that they had all of the rights under the Constitution.

But this question has basically been treated by Federal courts in the past with this perspective: the connection you have to the United States is what determines your coverage under the Constitution. That's why someone coming over the border illegally doesn't have the right to all of the constitutional protections because the only connection to the United States is trying to get in illegally.

Here we have people sitting at Guantanamo whose only connection to the United States is that we have reason to believe that they wanted to kill Americans anywhere in the world. So now what we're saying is if we take them from Guantanamo and put them in the United States, they have a connection to the United States. They were brought here involuntarily. And the legal arguments that for years have presented a barrier from their obtaining all constitutional rights, that barrier is pulled down.

So while this bill has language in it, this conference report, as it's being worked on, has language in it with respect to Guantanamo, I don't think we have focused in on what this means. Yes, there's a concern about the threat they may pose to Americans, and that arises out of the fact that some say, well, they could escape from the prisons and then we're told, oh, we've got these prisons they can't escape from.

But it is more than that. It is that they may be released at the direction of Federal judges, and the only reason they would be released is that they somehow now have access to all of our constitutional rights.

So the American people need to understand that we may have a President who says, no, we don't want to release them. We have an Attorney General who testified, no, we're going to make sure they're not released based on everything we do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I yield the gentleman another 2 minutes.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. The Attorney General can testify before our committee, as he did 2 weeks ago, that they're going to take all steps to make sure people aren't released in the United States who are suspected terrorists. They cannot promise that. Once they bring them to the United States and the judgment of the Federal courts is they are now under the protection of all constitutional rights, we are no longer talking about them as illegal enemy combatants, who never before have gotten the protection of the Geneva Convention. The Geneva Convention, in part, says you will have these protections so long as you act under the laws that have been recognized for warfare. One of them is wear a uniform. One of them is don't attack innocent civilians as a particular strategy and tactic.

So what we're doing is we're turning it all upside down and we're saying somehow we are protecting our values by doing something we have never done before. We are jeopardizing the national security interests of the United States. We are putting Americans, innocent Americans, at risk by doing this.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. LEWIS of California. I very much appreciate the point that the gentleman is making. It's an important one. The issue, per se, has almost been denied by the other side when we had these discussions in committee and otherwise.

It should be known by your public and my public that four of these people were released to Bermuda just this morning, we've learned. Now, that's a British entity. But, indeed, what's next? Our territories? And indeed further, we know that Ghailani was sent to New York for trial. So these people, very dangerous people, could be in serial released in the United States.

Madam Speaker, I would be glad to yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. I appreciate that.

And here's what people have to understand. There is a difference between holding someone to try them for war crimes or any other crime, and then you do have them within a criminal justice system. In the past it's been a military tribunal. Remember what happened when Abraham Lincoln was assassinated. We established a military tribunal here in the District of Columbia that actually tried those individuals, and they were executed. That was a military tribunal. For what? Murdering a President of the United States in time of war. Now what we are saying is those rights were not sufficient. If that were to happen today, suddenly we would say we have to do it now within the context of the full panoply of constitutional rights, and we are directing that by voluntarily saying we're going to close down Guantanamo.

If anybody has looked at the prisons and jail systems across the United States and compared it with Guantanamo, it is of the highest standard of any of our incarceration units there is. Guantanamo happens to be a place that is not sovereign American territory. That's the important distinction.

I thank the gentleman for his time.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, it's my intention to yield to Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, but I would like to make this point to the Speaker as well as to the Members: the words just spoken were the words of the former Attorney General of California, DAN LUNGREN. I would suggest that all of us read them with care in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Madam Speaker, I am proud to yield 4 minutes to my colleague RODNEY FRELINGHUYSEN of New Jersey.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of the motion to instruct conferees providing for supplemental appropriations for ongoing operations in Afghanistan and Iraq.

I support the portion of these instructions that would require the Secretary of Defense to certify if the release of photographs of detainees would endanger citizens of the U.S. or members of the armed services. We send our soldiers, sailors, marines, and airmen abroad to protect our security. We owe it to them to make sure that we do not do anything that puts them in needless jeopardy.

And I also strongly support the notion that we need to endorse the higher House funding levels for defense and military construction. Absolutely needed. If we are going to believe the administration and congressional leadership, this will be the last supplemental bill to fund the needs of our soldiers in Iraq and, may I add, their mission, those soldiers' mission, expanded mission, in Afghanistan. Personally, I find that hard to believe.

This supplemental should not be considered in a vacuum. What should not be lost in all of this is that our President is proposing a defense budget that barely keeps up with inflation and specifically contains a significant cut in our ballistic missile program, at a time when North Korea and Iran are testing their capabilities and, quite honestly, testing our resolve.

And, lastly, Madam Speaker, I have concerns about the expanded spending authority of the International Monetary Fund, who would be eligible to tap that fund in terms of drawing rights. And what's more bizarre is that under the recent agreements that we've been reading about, the United States of America now is eligible, shall we say, like other Third World countries, to have its own drawing rights, which is totally bizarre and inappropriate.

Madam Speaker, our first responsibility as Members is to protect our constituents, including those in the military. This motion to instruct helps achieve that mission and other important missions.

Mr. OBEY. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to my colleague from the committee, JACK KINGSTON.

Mr. KINGSTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I stand in support of this amendment and certainly appreciate the gentleman for introducing it. But I wanted to talk specifically about the Guantanamo Bay prison and why that's important because I strongly believe that if we did not have it, we would need to invent it. It is that important to American security. Mr. LUNGREN has talked about it a little bit.

We have had about 500 prisoners there who have been processed and released and sent back to their countries either to be detained in their countries or to be watched by host countries. Twelve percent of those have actually gone back into combat, which is disturbing. But we have had 500 prisoners move in and out. We have got about 240 left, and they're the worst of the worst. These are folks who were basically caught in an act of war trying to kill American citizens.

Our foreign allies, particularly those in Europe, who have given so much criticism about closing Guantanamo Bay, none of them have opened up their doors and said, hey, we'll take these Sunday school teachers and Boy Scouts, because they know that they're not Sunday school teachers and Boy Scouts. So I think that not closing down Guantanamo Bay is the right thing to do. But I also wanted to talk about the points Mr. LUNGREN made about the Miranda rights of prisoners.

Prior to 9/11, America generally treated acts of terrorism as breaking the law. Case in point: the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center and the USS Cole. These were not seen as acts of war. Therefore, the perpetrators of those crimes got lawyers. They had Miranda rights. They had all the courtesies of the U.S. Government, the U.S. justice system. That is not what we need to be doing right now. After 9/11 we realized that these acts of terrorism weren't just tactical but strategic acts of war, and therefore we have moved over to let's treat soldiers as they are, war criminals.

Mr. LUNGREN had mentioned that the assassins of Abraham Lincoln were tried by a military tribunal. It's the same situation when President Roosevelt was President: we found six Nazi spies on Long Island, and I believe five of them were actually executed, the sixth one cooperated, but it was all through a military tribunal. So what is it that President Obama sees that President Lincoln and President Roosevelt and really all our entire U.S. judicial history, all the judges have signed off on it? Why is it that suddenly we want to go over to Afghanistan and Iraq and give Miranda rights to prisoners of war?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I am glad to yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. KINGSTON. I thank the chairman.

Therefore, the first thing they're going to be trying to say is, I am not going to say anything until you give me a lawyer. And then they're going to come home to America and they're going to be all lawyered up. It's going to cost taxpayers money. It's going to hurt our investigations and interrogations. We're not going to be able to get the intelligence that we need, the background information that will prevent future terrorist attacks.

There was a lot of criticism by this administration about the Bush-Cheney administration, but I will say one thing about it: during 9/11, and I think those of us on the floor, most of us, were here then, we felt assured that we would have another attack on American soil. That did not happen. And I remember those dark days. We all felt like there would be another domestic attack. That was prevented, in part, because of what we were able to find out from prisoners who were being held and detainees at Guantanamo Bay.

So I wanted to make those points, Madam Speaker, and I thank the gentleman for yielding the floor.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I am proud to yield 3 minutes to my colleague from Missouri, ROY BLUNT.

□ 1100

Mr. BLUNT. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I certainly want to talk about the comments that have already been made on Guantanamo. It's a facility that should be kept open. Clearly, a campaign promise is easier to make than is the reality of the world we live in. Nobody wants these people. Nobody in my State, nobody in any neighboring State. Other countries don't want these people. They are dangerous. They are enemies of the United States. They are not people who have a right, with the actions they've taken, to have the protections that have already been so well-discussed by Mr. KINGSTON, by Mr. LUNGREN and by others. Frankly, the fact that there is not money in this supplemental, at least as I understand at this point, to close that facility is a good thing. I'm glad the chairman and the others worked to see that that was not in there. This is a debate that suddenly is a lot harder, from the administration's point of view, than it was during the campaign.

Troops in the field need our support. The House acted quickly. It was a large bipartisan vote to support the troops in the field. Where is that bill now? That bill is in a committee somewhere. They're trying to figure out what else can be added to a bill designed to support our troops. People talking on those topics understand that Members of Congress have a history of supporting our troops in the field—our troops in Iraq, our troops in Afghanistan.

So, suddenly, well, maybe, we could also put more money in the International Monetary Fund, a fund in which we would put that money by increasing our debt. We all know that one of the sources of that debt right now is foreign borrowing, borrowing from foreign countries. Some of those countries we borrow from, like China, actually would then qualify to get the money back under the IMF. To borrow money from China to give it to China is not what we ought to be doing. If we were even going to talk about that, it shouldn't be in a military supplemental. It should be in a bill focused on that specific promise that the President apparently has recently made, and it deserves a debate of its own.

I hope it does not come back to the floor as part of this bill. I hope we get the job done of supporting our troops.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CONAWAY).

Mr. CONAWAY. Thank you. I appreciate that.

Madam Speaker, I want to speak briefly about the narrow aspect of the motion to instruct that would require us to recede to the Senate language in the Senate amendment that would restrict access to the photographs of detainees that have been swept up in the field of battle since 2001. These photographs are of a sensational nature. They will be used to spur actions by radical jihadists that will be dangerous to our troops.

If you will remember back recently, there was a cartoon that was very disrespectful to Mohammed. The reaction to that cartoon was irrational given the nature of what went on. How much worse would the reaction be to these actual photographs of the detainees and of their being treated however they were treated? Our own commanders on the ground, General Petraeus and General Odierno, have both said, in their professional judgment, that the release of these photographs will help recruit additional terrorists—additional jihadists—to the team and that the release of these photographs will be used to spur actions against our military and against our troops in the field, who might not otherwise be there. So I don't think it's too much of a stretch to say that the release of these photographs, in all likelihood, will result in additional deaths and injuries to American troops that don't have to occur.

The Senate language would restrict access to these photographs, which is the right issue, and the White House has agreed that these photographs should not be released. I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support our motion to instruct because it does make sense not to release these photographs.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHMERT).

Mr. GOHMERT. Madam Speaker, I would like to touch on the issue of Gitmo as well. I've been there a couple of times. Those people are well-treated, particularly when you consider that they are enemy combatants, that they are part of a group that has declared war on this country. Throughout the history of mankind, when a group declares war on another group and the group on which they've declared war is humane enough to take prisoners, then they are held until the group of which they're a part says that we're no longer at war.

Here, there are people in this country and in the administration who do not understand that these people still want to kill us. Look at the pleading of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. In his words: We are terrorists to the bone.

You release those people. You bring them into the United States. We've already heard that the Supreme Court majority is wanting to give them rights to which they're not or should not be entitled. That is why Justice Scalia said in his dissent, This opinion will cost American lives. That was a bold statement by Scalia, but he is right. We should not allow this to hurt American soldiers and American people and put innocent lives at risk even though it may get some applause overseas from people who would not mind seeing America disappear.

I want to touch very quickly on the photographs. We believe in America that guilty people should be punished and that people who torture prisoners inhumanely have been punished and are being punished; but if those photographs are released, there will be blood on this administration's hands for punishing innocent soldiers who had nothing to do with it, and we should not have or allow this administration to hurt innocent soldiers.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to a member of the Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. AKIN).

Mr. AKIN. Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on the supplemental. It's actually something that I voted on not so long ago, but things have changed. Things have changed radically. In fact, it seems that the Obama administration has included in this supplemental a request for $108 billion, taking money away from defense and putting it into the International Monetary Fund. Now, they call that the IMF. A lot of people don't know what the IMF is, but here we are taking money away from our defense spending, away from our soldiers and away from our taxpayers, and we're going to put it into this International Monetary Fund.

Exactly what does that do?

Well, that allows some of our good friends, like Iran and Venezuela, to access this money to build their country and their programs and to use it according to the dictates of the way they run their countries. These are not only our competitors, but they are the countries that do the most they can to cause us trouble. So why in the world do we want to levy more taxes on our taxpayers, take the money that was for defense and give it away to our enemies? It doesn't make any sense.

This should not be included in the defense supplemental. This should be about taking care of our men and women in uniform. It should be about taking care of their equipment, their needs, their education, and the training that they need, not about giving money away to the international community to be used in who knows what way by who knows what country.

So as strong as I am on defense—and I've always been a strong defender. I've been on the Armed Services Committee for 9 years. I have three sons who've graduated from the Naval Academy. This will not stand. I will not vote for a supplemental that is giving money to some foreign country, money that should go to our soldiers.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the motion to instruct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, if I could inquire of my colleague: Do you have any additional speakers?

Mr. OBEY. Just one briefly, myself.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I had not wanted to take a lot of time here today, but I am moved to take a couple of minutes to respond to a couple of things that I've heard on the floor today.

We have heard several lectures about the President's fiscal policy and about his economic policy and about his international economic policy. I find it kind of difficult to take economic lectures from the same folks who have driven this country's economy into the ditch.

The President has inherited a very dicey situation both internationally and domestically. It is always hard in life to clean up other people's messes. It is especially hard to do that when you have the responsibilities as heavy as those that weigh on the shoulders of the President of the United States.

I don't understand why he should be expected to take lectures from the people who helped put the economy into the ditch or, for that matter, to take lectures from the same people who brought us the most unnecessary war in America's history, the people who took $6 trillion in projected budget surpluses and turned them into the largest deficits in the history of the Republic, the people who are now sniping at virtually everything that the President does to try to deal with both his international challenges and his domestic challenges.

I don't think anybody wants to see any of those prisoners at Guantanamo "released" into the United States. I do think we have a legitimate question about where they should be tried and about where they should be imprisoned after they are found guilty. Because we wanted to have more specific answers from the administration on that score, this committee has already removed all of the money that could be used to close Guantanamo until we do get a specific plan from the administration.

Having said that, I would suggest that the average American family is much more in danger of being hit by the flu pandemic than they are of actually being hit by any person who would be imprisoned in a maximum security prison here in the United States. I, frankly, would be kind of interested to see some of those terrorists exposed to the wonderful "charms" of some of our prison inmates in our own prisons. I don't think they would like the experience very much; but nonetheless, that is not what is at issue here.

What is at issue is simply whether or not we will go about our business of going to conference and of producing a supplemental appropriation bill that will meet the basic needs of our troops and that will meet our basic diplomatic necessities as well. That's why I think there is a problem with this motion.

This motion, by the time it sets aside money for military construction and defense, would not leave us with enough money on the table to respond sufficiently to the pandemic flu problem. It would not leave us with enough money on the table to deal with the necessity to provide assistance to Mexico in order to deal with the drug problem there, which is certainly a national security threat to us, and it certainly would not leave us with sufficient funds to strengthen and buttress our political and diplomatic activities in Afghanistan and in Pakistan. It would not leave us with enough money, for instance, to fully fund the funding for the new Embassy in Pakistan, which is desperately needed given the fact that we just had a bombing in Peshawar of the Pearl Hotel where most of the American diplomats stayed. We need to protect diplomats just as much as we need to protect soldiers. That's what the conference will try to do if we can ever get to it.

So I would simply say, Madam Speaker, as I said earlier, I intend to vote against this motion, but I am not going to be particularly bothered if other people want to vote for it because they supported one piece or another of this proposal. I, myself, would probably support two of the provisions in here but not all of them. So Members are certainly free to vote however they prefer. This is a place where we like to state our first preferences as often as possible, but sooner or later, we have to compromise. That means most of us, including the ranking member and the Chair, will not be able to get all of the first preferences that we would prefer.

So, if the gentleman is prepared to close, I will yield back my time.

□ 1115

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I, for one, am looking forward to a number of celebrations. One of those celebrations that I hope to very much participate in in the near future will involve the gentle lady who happens to be the Speaker at this moment.

But having talked about celebrations, I think it would be most interesting when we reach the point where the leadership on the other side of the aisle, including my own committee, would stop presuming that every problem in the world can easily be set aside because you can blame the past President about this. As I remember, I think we had a vote in the House in which there was broadly based bipartisan support, for example, for the incursion of Iraq in support of the then-President.

I must say we have had a lot of conversation about items that are not directly in this bill today having to do with Guantanamo. If I'm not mistaken, that issue would not be before us if the current President had not decided that he was going, and publicly committed, to his closing of Guantanamo. That's creating this horrendous problem.

Setting all that aside as I close, Madam Speaker, the bill before us or the item before us is an item that involves the conference that's about to take place between the Senate and the House having to do with the supplemental funding that was designed originally to give support for our efforts in Afghanistan and Iraq and, indeed, a very bipartisan support here in the House.

My consternation is that it appears as though we've set aside that bipartisan support for the convenience of the leadership and, indeed, will have a conference with the Senate that involves two things: a significant reduction of about $5 billion in the money available to support our troops; and, above and beyond that, for all intents and purposes, about that sum of money is transferred for foreign aid, for funding for IMF, for providing access to all kinds of countries who are not friendly to the United States by way of funding that would be supported by our taxpayers.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the President's decision not to make these photographs public for the reasons he has already expressed. Namely, the publication of these photos would not provide us with any additional benefit and may inflame anti-American sentiment and endanger our troops. However, the proper mechanism for this is through the courts or by issuing a Presidential Executive order, not through Congress.

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) has been an essential tool for promoting a more open, transparent, and accountable government. The Congress should not be addressing each separate FOIA request on an ad hoc basis. Amending FOIA through the legislative process sets an unwise precedent. I would urge my colleagues to allow the courts to rule on this very important matter.

Mr. SHERMAN. Madam Speaker, I voted against the motion. One of my concerns about the Supplemental as passed by the Senate is the fact that it contains funding for the International Monetary Fund without language designed to ensure that the IMF provide no assistance to countries that support terrorism, raise proliferation concerns, or are major human rights abusers, most notably Iran. Proponents of the motion mentioned their objections to the IMF funding; some raised similar concerns that the IMF could assist some of the worst regimes. However, a close reading of the motion reveals that conferees could implement the instructions without any cut to IMF funding and without adding any preconditions that the IMF would have to meet before obtaining $109 billion. Given the political realities, I believe that this is the direction the conferees would take to implement these instructions in the event they did not ignore them altogether. Thus this motion does not instruct conferees to do anything at all to IMF funding and, if implemented will lead to cuts to worthy domestic and international accounts. For these reasons, I could not support the motion.

Mr. LEWIS of California. With that, Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to instruct.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to instruct offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 18 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

□ 1155

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. ALTMIRE) at 11 o'clock and 55 minutes a.m.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, proceedings will resume on questions previously postponed.

Votes will be taken in the following order: motion to instruct on H.R. 2346, and motion to suspend on H.R. 1687.

The first electronic vote will be conducted as a 15-minute vote. The remaining electronic vote will be conducted as a 5-minute vote.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES ON H.R. 2346, SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2009

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the question on the motion to instruct on H.R. 2346, offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) which the Chair will put de novo.

The Clerk will designate the motion.

The Clerk designated the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to instruct.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 267, nays 152, not voting 14, as follows:

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate.

(2) COUNTERINSURGENCY.—The term “counterinsurgency” means efforts to defeat organized movements that seek to overthrow the duly constituted Governments of Pakistan and Afghanistan through the use of subversion and armed conflict.

(3) COUNTERTERRORISM.—The term “counterterrorism” means efforts to combat—

- (A) al Qaeda; and
- (B) other terrorist organizations, as such term is defined in section 212(a)(3)(B)(vi) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(vi)).

(4) FATA.—The term “FATA” means the Federally Administered Tribal Areas of Pakistan.

(5) FCR.—The term “FCR” means the Frontier Crimes Regulation, codified under British law in 1901, and applicable to the FATA.

(6) NWFP.—The term “NWFP” means the North West Frontier Province of Pakistan, which has Peshawar as its provincial capital.

SEC. 3. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) The Islamic Republic of Pakistan has been a critical ally of the United States for more than 4 decades.

(2) With the free and fair election of February 18, 2008, Pakistan returned to civilian rule after almost 9 years under a military dictatorship.

(3) After the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks against the United States, Pakistan chose to partner with the United States in the fight against al Qaeda, the Taliban, and other extremist and terrorist groups.

(4) Since 2001, the United States has contributed more than $12,000,000,000 to Pakistan to strengthen Pakistan’s governance, economy, education system, healthcare services, and military, so as to bring freedom and opportunities to the people of Pakistan while helping to combat terrorism and to counter a domestic insurgency.

(5) The United States requires a balanced, integrated, countrywide strategy that provides assistance throughout Pakistan and does not disproportionately focus on military assistance or one particular area or province.

(6) Despite killing or capturing hundreds of al Qaeda operatives and other terrorists—including major al Qaeda leaders, such as Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi bin al-Shibh, and Abu Faraj al-Libi—Pakistan’s FATA, parts of the NWFP, Quetta in Balochistan, and Muridke in Punjab remain a sanctuary for al Qaeda, the Afghan Taliban, and affiliated groups from which these groups organize terrorist actions against Pakistan and other countries.

(7) Pakistan’s security forces have recently begun taking concerted action against those who threaten Pakistan’s security and stability, with military operations in the Bajour agency in the FATA and in the Swat, Buner, and Dir districts in the NWFP.

(8) The displacement of over 1,000,000 Pakistanis poses a grave humanitarian crisis and requires the immediate attention of the United Nations, and the strong support of donor nations, to provide food, water, shelter, medicine, sanitation and other emergency services and supplies to the displaced, along with longer-term development assistance. The humanitarian crisis highlights the need for Pakistan to develop an effective national counterinsurgency strategy, in order to mitigate such displacement.

SEC. 4. DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

Congress declares that the relationship between the United States and Pakistan should be based on the following principles:

(1) Pakistan is a critical friend and ally to the United States, both in times of strife and in times of peace, and the two countries share many common goals, including combating terrorism and violent radicalism, solidifying democracy and rule of law in Pakistan, and promoting the social and material well-being of the people of Pakistan.

(2) United States assistance to Pakistan is intended to supplement, not supplant, Pakistan’s own efforts in building a stable, secure, and prosperous Pakistan, and United States assistance will be wholly ineffective without Pakistan’s own serious efforts to improve the health, education, and living standards of its population, including maintaining or increasing the financial resources devoted to such efforts.

(3) The United States supports Pakistan’s struggle against extremist elements and recognizes the profound sacrifice made by Pakistan in the fight against terrorism, including the loss of more than 1,600 soldiers since 2001 in combat with al Qaeda, the Taliban, and other extremist and terrorist groups.

(4) The United States intends to work with the Government of Pakistan—

(A) to build mutual trust and confidence by actively and consistently pursuing a sustained, long-term, multifaceted relationship between the two countries, devoted to strengthening the mutual security, stability, and prosperity of both countries;

(B) to support the people of Pakistan and their democratic government in their efforts to consolidate democracy, through strengthening Pakistan’s parliament, helping Pakistan reestablish an independent and transparent judicial system, and working to extend the rule of law in all areas in Pakistan;

(C) to promote long-term development and infrastructure projects, including in healthcare, water management, and energy programs, in all areas of Pakistan, that are sustained and supported by each successive democratic government in Pakistan;

(D) to encourage sustainable economic development in Pakistan and the integration of Pakistan into the global economy in order to improve the living conditions of the people of Pakistan;

(E) to ensure that the people of Pakistan, including those living in areas governed by the FCR, have access to public, modernized education and vocational training to enable them to provide for themselves, for their families, and for a more prosperous future for their children;

(F) to expand people-to-people engagement between the two countries, through increased educational, technical, and cultural exchanges and other methods;

(G) to ensure transparency of and provide effective accountability for all United States assistance and reimbursements provided to Pakistan;

(H) to take steps to improve Pakistan’s counterterrorism financing and anti-money laundering laws to comply with international standards, to include applying for “Financial Action Task Force” observer status and adhering to the United Nations International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism;

(I) to establish a counterinsurgency and counterterrorism strategy to prevent any territory of Pakistan from being used as a base or conduit for terrorist attacks in Pakistan, or elsewhere, and ensure that madrasas in Pakistan are not used to incite terrorism;

(J) to ensure that Pakistan has strong and effective law enforcement and national defense forces, under civilian leadership, with sufficient and appropriate security equipment and training to effectively defend Pakistan against internal and external threats;

(K) to ensure access of United States investigators to individuals suspected of engaging in worldwide proliferation of nuclear materials, as necessary, and restrict such individuals from travel or any other activity that could result in further proliferation;

(L) to help Pakistan meet its commitment to not support any person or group that conducts violence, sabotage, or other activities meant to instill fear or terror in Pakistan's neighboring countries; and

(M) to help Pakistan gain control of its undergoverned areas and stop any support, direction, guidance to, or acquiescence in the activities of, any person or group that engages in acts of violence or intimidation against civilians, civilian groups, or governmental entities.

TITLE I—DEMOCRATIC, ECONOMIC, AND SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE FOR PAKISTAN

SEC. 101. PURPOSES OF ASSISTANCE.

The purposes of assistance under this title are—

(1) to demonstrate unequivocally the long-term commitment of the United States to the people of Pakistan and Pakistan's democratic institutions;

(2) to support the consolidation of democracy, good governance, and the rule of law in Pakistan;

(3) to help build the capacity of law enforcement forces in Pakistan to combat terrorism and violent militancy and expeditiously investigate, arrest, and prosecute alleged criminals, consistent with the rule of law and due process;

(4) to further the sustainable and effective economic and social development of Pakistan and the improvement of the living conditions of the people of Pakistan, especially in areas of direct interest and importance to their daily lives;

(5) to strengthen regional ties between Pakistan and its neighbors by offering concrete non-military assistance for issues of mutual economic and social concern;

(6) to strengthen Pakistan's public education system, increase literacy, expand opportunities for vocational training, and help create an appropriate national curriculum for all schools in Pakistan;

(7) to expand people-to-people engagement between the United States and Pakistan, through increased educational, technical, and cultural exchanges and other methods;

(8) to strengthen respect for internationally recognized human rights in efforts to stabilize the security environment in Pakistan; and

(9) to promote the rights and empowerment of women and girls in Pakistan, including efforts to increase access to basic healthcare services to address Pakistan's high maternal mortality rate and to increase girls' and women's access to education.

SEC. 102. AUTHORIZATION OF ASSISTANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To carry out the purposes of section 101, the President is authorized to provide assistance for Pakistan to support the activities described in subsection (b).

(b) ACTIVITIES SUPPORTED.—Activities that may be supported by assistance under subsection (a) include the following:

(1) FORTIFYING DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS.—To support, notwithstanding any other provision of law, democratic institutions in Pakistan in order to strengthen civilian rule and long-term stability, including assistance such as—

(A) support for efforts to strengthen the National Parliament of Pakistan, including—

(i) assistance to parliamentary committees to enhance the capacity to conduct public hearings and oversee government activities, including national security issues and the military budget, to solicit input on key public policy issues, and to oversee the conduct of elections;

(ii) support for the establishment of constituency offices and otherwise promote the responsibility of members of parliament to respond to constituents; and

(iii) strengthening of the role of parliamentary leadership;

(B) support for voter education and civil society training, including training with grassroots organizations to enhance the capacity of the organizations to advocate for the development of public policy;

(C) support for political parties, including increasing their capacity and protecting their right to carry out political activities without restriction (other than reasonable administrative requirements commonly applied in democratic countries) and fostering the responsiveness of such parties to the needs of the people of Pakistan;

(D) support for strengthening the capacity of the civilian Government of Pakistan to carry out its responsibilities, including supporting the establishment of frameworks that promote government transparency and criminalize corruption in both the government and private sector, audit offices, inspectors general offices, third party monitoring of government procurement processes, whistle-blower protections, and anti-corruption agencies; and

(E) in particular, support for efforts by the Government of Pakistan to promote governance reforms in the FATA, including—

(i) extension of the Political Parties Act;

(ii) local experimentation with methods to transition from the FCR; and

(iii) long-term development of durable and responsive political institutions.

(2) ENHANCEMENT AND STRENGTHENING OF THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM AND LAW ENFORCEMENT.—To support, notwithstanding any other provision of law, Pakistan's efforts to expand the rule of law and build the capacity, transparency, and trust in government institutions, at the national, provincial, and local levels, including assistance such as—

(A) support for the rule of law and systemic improvement of judicial and criminal justice institutions, including—

(i) management of courts;

(ii) enhanced career opportunities and professional training for judges, public defenders, and prosecutors; and

(iii) efforts to enhance the rule of law to all areas in Pakistan where the writ of the government is under heightened challenge by terrorists and militants, including through innovations in the delivery of judicial services that enhance the legitimacy of state institutions;

(B) support for professionalization of the police, including—

(i) training regarding use of force;

(ii) education and training regarding human rights;

(iii) training regarding evidence preservation and chain of custody; and

(iv) training regarding community policing;

(C) support for independent law enforcement agencies, such as the Intelligence Bureau of the Ministry of Interior, responsive to civilian control, including—

(i) enhanced coordination with judicial processes;

(ii) enhancement of forensics capabilities;

(iii) data collection and analyses;

(iv) case tracking and management;

(v) financial intelligence functions; and

(vi) maintenance of data systems to track terrorist of criminal activity; and

(D) strengthening the capacity of the police and other civilian law enforcement agencies to provide a robust response to threats from extremists and terrorists along the frontier and elsewhere in Pakistan, including—

(i) the development of an elite rapid reaction force which could be deployed on short notice to secure areas that are threatened by militancy; and

(ii) facilitating improved counterterrorism and counterinsurgency coordination between local government officials, the police, paramilitary, and military leaders.

(3) SUPPORT FOR BROAD-BASED AND SUSTAINABLE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT.—To support economic development in Pakistan by—

(A) promoting energy sector reform and development;

(B) expanding assistance for agricultural and rural development, including farm-to-market roads, systems to prevent spoilage and waste, and other small-scale infrastructure improvements that will enhance supply and distribution networks;

(C) increasing employment opportunities, including support to small and medium enterprises, microfinance and microenterprise activities, and in particular programs to improve the lives of women and girls;

(D) preventing youth from turning to extremism and militancy, and promoting the renunciation of such tactics and extremist ideologies, by providing economic, social, educational, and vocational opportunities and life-skills training to at-risk youth; and

(E) increasing investment in infrastructure, including construction of roads, water resource management systems, irrigation channels, and continued development of a national aviation industry and aviation infrastructure.

(4) SUPPORT TO INCREASE LOCAL CAPACITY.—To increase the capacity and improve the sustainability of Pakistan's national, provincial, and local governmental and nongovernmental institutions, including assistance to—

(A) increase and improve the capacity of Pakistan's national, provincial, and local governmental institutions by—

(i) providing technical assistance to all ministries to improve transparency and ability to respond to the needs of the people of Pakistan; and

(ii) promoting the implementation of fiscal and personnel management, including revenue tracking and expenditure systems; and

(B) enhance the capacity of Pakistan's nongovernmental and civil society organizations to respond to the needs of the people of Pakistan by—

(i) increasing support for local nongovernmental organizations with demonstrated experience in delivering services to the people of Pakistan, particularly to women, children, and other vulnerable populations in Pakistan;

(ii) providing training and education to local nongovernmental and civil society organizations on ways to identify and improve the delivery of services to the people of Pakistan; and

(iii) promoting local ownership and participation, including encouraging communities to contribute a percentage of the value of United States projects or activities carried out under this title in the form of labor, in-kind materials, or other provisions.

(5) SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC EDUCATION SYSTEM.—To support Pakistan's public education system, including—

(A) implementation of a national education strategy, to include both primary and secondary education, focused on literacy and civic education, including—

(i) programs to assist development of modern, nationwide school curriculums for public, private, and religious schools that incorporate relevant subjects, such as math, science, literature, and human rights awareness, in addition to agricultural education and training;

(ii) enhancement of civic education programs focused on political participation, democratic institutions, and tolerance of diverse ethnic and religious groups; and

(iii) support for the proper oversight of all educational institutions, including madrasas, as required by Pakistani law, including registration with the Ministry of Education and regular monitoring of curriculum by the Ministry of Education to ensure students in Pakistan receive a comprehensive education;

(B) initiatives to enhance the access to education for women and girls, and to increase women's literacy, with special emphasis on helping girls stay in school;

(C) funding to the Government of Pakistan to use to increase immediately teacher salaries and to recruit and train teachers and administrators, as well as develop formalized salary scales with merit-based pay increases;

(D) establishment of vocational and technical programs to enhance employment opportunities;

(E) encouragement of United States and Pakistani public-private partnerships to increase investment in higher education and technical training opportunities;

(F) construction and maintenance of libraries and public schools, including water sanitation, perimeter walls, and recreation areas;

(G) provision of textbooks and other learning materials and food assistance for student meals; and

(H) provision of software to educational institutions and students at the lowest possible cost, specifically targeting universities that specialize in information technology, and women's colleges and women's secondary schools.

(6) SUPPORT FOR HUMAN RIGHTS.—To promote respect for and compliance with internationally recognized human rights, including assistance such as—

(A) programs to strengthen civil society organizations that promote internationally recognized human rights, including religious freedom, freedom of expression, and freedom of association, and that support human rights monitoring;

(B) promotion of education regarding internationally recognized human rights;

(C) programs designed to end traditional practices and punishments that are inconsistent with internationally recognized human rights norms and protections, such as honor killings and other forms of cruel and unusual punishments;

(D) promotion of freedom of religion and religious tolerance, protection of religious minorities, and promotion of freedom of expression and association, including support for responsible independent media;

(E) promotion of nongovernmental organizations that focus on the protection of women and girls, including women-led organizations and programs that support the participation of women in the national, provincial, and local political process, and programs to end violence against women, including rape;

(F) technical, legal, and law enforcement assistance for the investigation of past disappearances of individuals in Pakistan and the development of a national data base of such individuals; and

(G) programs in support and protection of the rights of ethnic minorities in Pakistan, including Baluchis, Sindhis, and Pashtuns, to preserve their language, culture, traditional areas of inhabitancy, and to fight any direct or indirect discrimination.

(7) SUPPORT FOR REFUGEES AND INTERNALLY DISPLACED PERSONS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(A) counterinsurgency operations being carried out by the Government of Pakistan should be designed to minimize civilian casualties and collateral damage to the people of Pakistan and to provide security for the delivery of humanitarian assistance to the affected civilian population;

(B) the United States should continue to provide robust assistance to the people of Pakistan who have been displaced as a result of ongoing conflict and violence;

(C) the United States should support international efforts to coordinate assistance to refugees and internally displaced persons in Pakistan, including by providing support to international and nongovernmental organizations for this purpose;

(D) the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development should support the development objectives of the Refugee Affected and Host Areas (RAHA) Initiative in Pakistan to address livelihoods, health, education, infrastructure development, and environmental restoration in identified parts of the country where Afghan refugees have lived; and

(E) the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development should evaluate the effectiveness of the livelihoods projects in the FATA in order to determine whether systems need to be put into place to improve programming in this key sector.

(8) SUPPORT FOR HEALTHCARE EFFORTS.—To provide urgently needed healthcare assistance to the people of Pakistan, including assistance to supplement the Government of Pakistan's efforts to eliminate diseases, including hepatitis, and to reduce the nation's high maternal and under-five mortality rates, including—

(A) support for repairing and building healthcare infrastructure, including purchase of equipment and training of health professionals, to ensure adequate access to healthcare for Pakistan's population, especially among its rural, poor, marginalized and disadvantaged segments; and

(B) promotion of efforts by the Government of Pakistan to reduce maternal mortality, including through the provision of maternal and newborn health services and development of community-based skilled birth attendants.

(9) SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC DIPLOMACY.—To implement a more effective public diplomacy strategy in Pakistan in order to ensure that the Pakistani public recognizes that it is in Pakistan's own interest to partner with the United States and other like-minded countries to combat militant extremism, as well as to promote a better understanding of the United States, including through the following:

(A) Partnering with the Government of Pakistan to highlight the negative behavior of insurgent groups and to encourage civil society, respected scholars, and other leaders to speak out against militancy and violence.

(B) Providing technical assistance to the Government of Pakistan to both disrupt and provide alternatives to the illegal FM radio stations used by insurgent groups in the FATA and adjacent districts of the NWFP.

(C) Expanded exchange activities under the Fulbright Program, the International Visitor Leadership Program, the Youth Exchange and Study Program, and related programs administered by the Department of State designed to promote mutual understanding and interfaith dialogue.

(D) Expansion of sister institution programs between United States and Pakistani schools and universities, towns and cities, and other organizations in such fields as medicine and healthcare, business management, environmental protection, information technology, and agriculture.

(E) Additional scholarships to enable students to study in the United States.

SEC. 103. MULTILATERAL SUPPORT FOR PAKISTAN.

To the extent that Pakistan continues to evolve toward civilian control of the government and to develop and implement comprehensive economic reform programs, the President should do the following:

(1) MULTILATERAL SUPPORT.—Take the lead in mobilizing international financial institutions, in particular the International Monetary Fund and affiliated institutions in the World Bank group, to provide timely and appropriate resources to help Pakistan.

(2) STABILIZATION ASSISTANCE.—In conjunction with other governments and international financial institutions (including the International Monetary Fund), support the implementation of a plan of the Government of Pakistan to attack structural economic problems, address pressing social problems, carry out comprehensive economic reform, and relieve immediate and urgent balance of payments requirements in Pakistan.

(3) CURRENCY STABILIZATION LOANS.—Provide leadership in supporting multilateral agreements to provide government-to-government loans for currency stabilization in Pakistan if the loans can reduce inflation and thereby foster conditions necessary for the effective implementation of economic reforms.

SEC. 104. PAKISTAN DEMOCRACY AND PROSPERITY FUND.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF FUND.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States a fund to be known as the "Pakistan Democracy and Prosperity Fund" (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Fund"), consisting of such amounts as may be appropriated or transferred to the Fund as provided in this section and which may be used for purposes of this title.

(b) TRANSFERS TO FUND.—The Fund shall consist of the following:

(1) Amounts appropriated to carry out this title.

(2) Amounts appropriated on or after the date of the enactment of this Act for "Development Assistance", "Global Health and Child Survival", and the "Economic Support Fund" for assistance for Pakistan under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 et seq.) that are transferred by the President to the Fund pursuant to subsection (d).

(3) To the extent or in the amounts provided in advance in appropriations Acts, amounts accepted by the President under subsection (c) that are transferred by the President to the Fund pursuant to subsection (d).

(c) ACCEPTANCE OF AMOUNTS FROM OUTSIDE SOURCES.—The President may accept funds from non-United States Government sources, including foreign governments, nongovernmental organizations, private business entities, and private individuals, for purposes of carrying out this title.

(d) STATUS OF AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS IN FUND.—The President is authorized to transfer to the Fund amounts under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b). Such amounts shall be merged with and shall be available for any purpose for which any of the amounts so transferred are available.

(e) REPORT.—The President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 180 days thereafter until September 30, 2018, a report on programs, projects, and activities carried out using amounts obligated and expended from the Fund.

SEC. 105. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President to carry out this title $1,500,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2013.

(b) AVAILABILITY.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title for a fiscal year are—

(1) authorized to remain available until September 30 of the succeeding fiscal year; and

(2) in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

(c) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that United States assistance provided under this title should be made available on a proportional and equitable basis between the FATA and other regions of Pakistan.

TITLE II—SECURITY ASSISTANCE FOR PAKISTAN

SEC. 201. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) United States security assistance for Pakistan should be used to improve relationships between United States military and Pakistani military personnel, including outreach to the “lost generation” of Pakistan’s officers who did not attend United States-sponsored training as a result of restrictions placed on United States assistance for Pakistan due to Pakistan’s possession of a nuclear device; and

(2) United States security assistance for Pakistan should be fully accountable, should be contingent on Pakistan ending support for terrorist groups, and should meet the national security needs of Pakistan.

SEC. 202. PURPOSES OF ASSISTANCE.

The purposes of assistance under this title are—

(1) to support Pakistan’s paramount national security need to fight and win the ongoing counterinsurgency within its borders;

(2) to work with the Government of Pakistan to protect and secure Pakistan’s borders and prevent any Pakistani territory from being used as a base or conduit for terrorist attacks in Pakistan, or elsewhere;

(3) to work in close cooperation with the Government of Pakistan to coordinate action against extremist and terrorist targets; and

(4) to develop knowledge of and appreciation for democratic governance and a military that is controlled by and responsible to democratically elected civilian leadership.

SEC. 203. AUTHORIZATION OF ASSISTANCE.

(a) INTERNATIONAL MILITARY EDUCATION AND TRAINING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title not less than $4,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2011 through 2013 are authorized to be made available for assistance under chapter 5 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2347 et seq.; relating to international military education and training) for Pakistan, including expanded international military education and training (commonly known as “E-IMET”).

(2) USE OF FUNDS.—Not less than 30 percent of the amount made available to carry out this subsection for a fiscal year may be used to pay for courses of study and training in counterinsurgency and civil-military relations.

(b) FOREIGN MILITARY FINANCING PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title, not less than $300,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2011 through 2013 are authorized to be made available for grant assistance under section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763; relating to the Foreign Military Financing program) for the purchase of defense articles, defense services, and military education and training for Pakistan.

(2) USE OF FUNDS.—Not less than 75 percent of the amount made available to carry out this subsection for a fiscal year may be used for the purchase of defense articles, defense services, and military education and training for activities relating to counterinsurgency and counterterrorism operations in Pakistan. Such articles, services, and military education and training may include the following:

(A) Aviation maintenance and logistics support for United States-origin and United States-supported rotary wing aircraft and upgrades to such aircraft to include modern night vision and targeting capabilities.

(B) Intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance (ISR) ground and air manned and unmanned platforms, including sustainment.

(C) Command and control capabilities.

(D) Force protection and counter improvised explosive device capabilities, including protection of vehicles.

(E) Protective equipment, such as body armor and helmets, night vision goggles, and other individual equipment, including load-bearing equipment, individual and unit level first aid equipment, ballistic eye protection, and cold weather equipment.

(F) Appropriate individual and unit level medical services and articles for the Pakistan Army, the Pakistan Frontier Corps, and other appropriate security forces.

(G) Assistance to enable the Pakistani military to distribute humanitarian assistance and establish a tactical civil-military operations capability, including a civil affairs directorate.

(3) RESTRICTION RELATING TO F-16 PROGRAM.—

(A) CONGRESSIONAL FINDING.—In accordance with the Letters of Offer and Acceptance signed between the United States and Pakistan in 2006, Congress finds that the Government of Pakistan is responsible for making the remaining payments on the 2006 sales relating to F-16 fighter aircraft and associated equipment with its own national funds, including the mid-life updates and munitions for such aircraft included in such Letters of Offer and Acceptance.

(B) RESTRICTION.—Subject to subparagraph (C), amounts authorized to be made available under this subsection for a fiscal year may not be used for the purchase of, or upgrade to, F-16 fighter aircraft or munitions for such aircraft.

(C) EXCEPTION.—Amounts authorized to be made available under this subsection for a fiscal year are authorized to be used for military construction pursuant to the security plan contained in the Letters of Offer and Acceptance signed between the United States and Pakistan in 2006.

(D) WAIVER.—The President may waive the restriction under subparagraph (B) with respect to amounts authorized to be made available under this subsection for a fiscal year, other than amounts authorized to be made available under paragraph (2) of this subsection, if the President certifies to the appropriate congressional committees not later than 15 days prior to exercising the authority of this subparagraph that the waiver is important to the national security interests of the United States.

(4) SECURITY ASSISTANCE PLAN.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a plan for the proposed use of amounts authorized to be made available under this subsection for each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2013. Such plan shall include an assessment of how the use of such amounts complements or otherwise is related to amounts described in section 204.

(5) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—Except as provided in section 3(a)(2) of the Arms Export Control Act and except as otherwise provided in this title, amounts authorized to be made available to carry out paragraph (2) for fiscal years 2010 and 2011 are authorized to be made available notwithstanding any other provision of law.

(6) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms “defense articles”, “defense services”, and “military education and training” have the meaning given such terms in section 644 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2403).

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should facilitate Pakistan’s establishment of a program to enable the Pakistani military to provide reconstruction assistance in areas damaged by combat operations.

SEC. 204. PAKISTAN COUNTERINSURGENCY CAPABILITY FUND.

(a) FOR FISCAL YEAR 2010.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For fiscal year 2010, the Department of State’s Pakistan Counterinsurgency Capability Fund, hereinafter in this section referred to as the “Fund”, shall consist of the following:

(A) Amounts appropriated to carry out this subsection.

(B) Amounts otherwise available to the Secretary of State to carry out this subsection.

(2) PURPOSES OF FUND.—Amounts in the Fund made available to carry out this subsection for any fiscal year are authorized to be used by the Secretary of State, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Defense, to build and maintain the counterinsurgency capability of Pakistan under the same terms and conditions (except as otherwise provided in this subsection) that are applicable to amounts made available under the Fund for fiscal year 2009.

(3) TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State is authorized to transfer amounts in the Fund made available to carry out this subsection for any fiscal year to the Department of Defense’s Pakistan Counterinsurgency Fund.

(B) TREATMENT OF TRANSFERRED FUNDS.—Subject to the requirements of paragraph (4), transfers from the Fund under the authority of subparagraph (A) shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as amounts in the Department of Defense’s Pakistan Counterinsurgency Fund.

(C) RELATION TO OTHER AUTHORITIES.—The authority to make transfers from the Fund under subparagraph (A) is in addition to any other transfer of funds authority of the Department of State. The authority to provide assistance under this subsection is in addition to any other authority to provide assistance to foreign countries.

(D) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary of State shall, not less than 15 days prior to making transfers from the Fund under subparagraph (A), notify the appropriate congressional committees in writing of the details of any such transfer.

(4) RESTRICTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), amounts in the Fund made available to carry out this subsection for any fiscal year may not be used to purchase F-16 fighter aircraft, to purchase mid-life updates for such aircraft, or to make payments on the sales of F-16 fighter aircraft and associated equipment described in section 203(b)(3)(A).

(B) EXCEPTION.—Amounts in the Fund made available to carry out this subsection for any fiscal year are authorized to be used for military construction activities.

(C) WAIVER.—The President may waive the restriction under subparagraph (A) with respect to amounts described in subparagraph (A) if the President certifies to the appropriate congressional committees not later than 15 days prior to exercising the authority of this subparagraph that the waiver is important to the national security interests of the United States.

(5) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For fiscal year 2010, $300,000,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection.

(b) SUBMISSION OF NOTIFICATIONS.—Any notification required by this section shall be submitted in classified form, but may include a unclassified annex if necessary.

(c) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES DEFINED.—In this section, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(1) the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives; and

(2) the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

SEC. 205. EXCHANGE PROGRAM BETWEEN MILITARY AND CIVILIAN PERSONNEL OF PAKISTAN AND CERTAIN OTHER COUNTRIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State is authorized to establish an exchange program between—

(1) military and civilian personnel of Pakistan, and

(2)(A) military and civilian personnel of countries determined by the Secretary of State to be in transition to democracy, or

(B) military and civilian personnel of North Atlantic Treaty Organization member countries, in order to foster greater respect for and understanding of the principle of civilian rule of Pakistan’s military. The program established under this subsection shall be known as the “Pakistan Military Transition Program”.

(b) ELEMENTS OF PROGRAM.—The program authorized under subsection (a) may include—

(1) conferences, seminars, and other events;

(2) distribution of publications; and

(3) reimbursement of expenses of foreign military personnel participating in the program, including transportation expenses, translation services expenses, and administrative expenses relating to the program.

(c) ROLE OF NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title for a fiscal year are authorized to be made available for nongovernmental organizations to facilitate the implementation of the program authorized under subsection (a).

SEC. 206. LIMITATION ON UNITED STATES MILITARY ASSISTANCE TO PAKISTAN.

(a) PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS.—None of the funds authorized to be appropriated for military assistance to Pakistan for fiscal year 2011 and each fiscal year thereafter may be obligated or expended if the President has not made the determinations described in subsection (b) for such fiscal year.

(b) DETERMINATIONS REGARDING ENHANCED COOPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND PAKISTAN.—The determinations referred to in subsection (a) are—

(1) a determination by the President at the beginning of each fiscal year that the Government of Pakistan is continuing to cooperate with the United States in efforts to dismantle supplier networks relating to the acquisition of nuclear weapons-related materials, including, as necessary, providing direct access to Pakistani nationals associated with such networks; and

(2) a determination by the President at the beginning of each fiscal year that the Government of Pakistan during the preceding fiscal year has demonstrated a sustained commitment to and making progress towards combating terrorist groups, including taking into account the progress the Government of Pakistan has made with regard to—

(A) ceasing support, including by any elements within the Pakistan military or its intelligence agency, to extremist and terrorist groups, particularly to any group that has conducted attacks against United States or coalition forces in Afghanistan, or against the territory or people of neighboring countries;

(B) closing terrorist camps in the FATA, dismantling terrorist bases of operations in other parts of the country, including Quetta and Muridke, and taking action when provided with intelligence about high-level terrorist targets;

(C) preventing cross-border attacks into neighboring countries; and

(D) strengthening counter-terrorism and anti-money laundering laws.

(c) WAIVER.—The President may waive the restriction under subsection (a) for any fiscal year if the President certifies to the appropriate congressional committees 15 days before the President exercises the authority of this subsection that the provision of military assistance to Pakistan is important to the national security interests of the United States.

(d) CONSULTATION AND WRITTEN JUSTIFICATION.—Not later than 5 days prior to making a determination described in subsection (b), the President shall consult with the appropriate congressional committees and, upon making such determination, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a written justification that specifies the basis upon which the President made such a determination, including an acknowledgment of the extent to which the Government of Pakistan has made progress with regard to subsection (b)(2). The justification shall be unclassified but may include a classified annex.

(e) GAO ANALYSIS AND REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the President makes the determinations described in subsection (b), the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct an independent analysis of each of the determinations under subsection (b) and written justifications for such determinations under subsection (d) and shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report containing the results of the independent analysis.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term “appropriate congressional committees” means—

(A) the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Committee on Armed Services, the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives; and

(B) the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate; and

(2) the term “military assistance”—

(A) means assistance authorized under section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763; relating to the Foreign Military Financing program), including assistance authorized under section 203(b) of this Act and assistance authorized under part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.), other than assistance authorized under chapter 5 of part II of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2347 et seq.); but

(B) does not include assistance authorized under any provision of law that is funded from accounts within budget function 050 (National Defense).

SEC. 207. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the President to carry out this title, other than section 204, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2010 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2011 through 2013.

(b) RELATION TO OTHER AVAILABLE FUNDS.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title for a fiscal year are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

TITLE III—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. COMPREHENSIVE REGIONAL SECURITY STRATEGY.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the achievement of United States national security goals to eliminate terrorist threats and close safe havens in Pakistan requires the development of a comprehensive plan that utilizes all elements of national power, including in coordination and cooperation with other concerned governments, and that it is critical to Pakistan’s long-term prosperity and security to strengthen regional relationships among India, Pakistan, and Afghanistan.

(b) COMPREHENSIVE REGIONAL SECURITY STRATEGY.—The President shall develop a comprehensive regional security strategy to eliminate terrorist threats and close safe havens in Pakistan, including by working with the Government of Pakistan and other relevant governments and organizations in the region and elsewhere, as appropriate, to best implement effective counterinsurgency and counterterrorism efforts in and near the border areas of Pakistan and Afghanistan, including the FATA, NWFP, parts of Balochistan, and parts of Punjab.

(c) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the comprehensive regional security strategy required under subsection (b).

(2) CONTENTS.—The report shall include a copy of the comprehensive regional security strategy, including specifications of goals, and proposed timelines and budgets for implementation of the strategy.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Foreign Relations and Armed Services of the Senate.

SEC. 302. MONITORING AND EVALUATION OF ASSISTANCE.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) IMPACT EVALUATION RESEARCH.—The term “impact evaluation research” means the application of research methods and statistical analysis to measure the extent to which change in a population-based outcome can be attributed to program intervention instead of other environmental factors.

(2) OPERATIONS RESEARCH.—The term “operations research” means the application of social science research methods, statistical analysis, and other appropriate scientific methods to judge, compare, and improve policies and program outcomes, from the earliest stages of defining and designing programs through their development and implementation, with the objective of the rapid dissemination of conclusions and concrete impact on programming.

(3) PROGRAM MONITORING.—The term “program monitoring” means the collection, analysis, and use of routine program data to determine how well a program is carried out and how much the program costs.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) to successfully enhance democracy and the rule of law in Pakistan, defeat extremist elements, and ensure the protection of human rights, the President should establish a program to conduct impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring to ensure effectiveness of assistance provided under title I of this Act;

(2) long-term solutions to Pakistan’s security problems depend on increasing the effectiveness and responsiveness of civilian institutions in Pakistan, including the parliament and judicial system;

(3) a specific program of impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring, established at the inception of the program, is required to permit assessment of the operational effectiveness of impact of United States assistance towards these goals; and

(4) the President, in developing performance measurement methods under the impact evaluation research, operations research, and program monitoring, should consult with the appropriate congressional committees as well as the Government of Pakistan.

(c) IMPACT EVALUATION RESEARCH, OPERATIONS RESEARCH AND PROGRAM MONITORING OF ASSISTANCE.—The President shall establish and implement a program to assess the effectiveness of assistance provided under title I of this Act through impact evaluation research on a selected set of programmatic interventions, operations research in areas to ensure efficiency and effectiveness of program implementation, and monitoring to ensure timely and transparent delivery of assistance.

(d) REQUIREMENTS.—The program required under subsection (c) shall include—

(1) a delineation of key impact evaluation research and operations research questions for main components of assistance provided under title I of this Act;

(2) an identification of measurable performance goals for each of the main components of assistance provided under title I of this Act to be expressed in an objective and quantifiable form at the inception of the program;

(3) the use of appropriate methods, based on rigorous social science tools, to measure program impact and operational efficiency; and

(4) adherence to a high standard of evidence in developing recommendations for adjustments to the assistance to enhance the impact of the assistance.

(e) ASSISTANCE TO ENHANCE THE CAPACITY OF PAKISTAN.—In carrying out the program required under subsection (c), the President is authorized to provide assistance to enhance the capacity of the Government of Pakistan to monitor and evaluate programs carried out by the national, provincial, and local governments in Pakistan in order to maximize the long-term sustainable development impact of such programs.

(f) CONSULTATION WITH CONGRESS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall brief and consult with the appropriate congressional committees regarding the progress in establishing and implementing the program required under subsection (c).

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 105 for each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2013, up to 5 percent of such amounts for such fiscal year is authorized to be made available to carry out this section for the fiscal year.

SEC. 303. AUDITING.

(a) ASSISTANCE AUTHORIZED.—The Inspector General of the Department of State and the Inspector General of the United States Agency for International Development shall audit, investigate, and oversee the obligation and expenditure of funds to carry out title I of this Act.

(b) REQUIREMENT FOR IN-COUNTRY PRESENCE.—The Inspector General of the Department of State and the Inspector General of the United States Agency for International Development, after consultation with the Secretary of State and the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development, are authorized to establish field offices in Pakistan with sufficient staff from each of the Offices of the Inspector General in Pakistan respectively to carry out subsection (a).

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 105 for each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2013, not less than $2,000,000 for each fiscal year is authorized to be made available to the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of State and not less than $2,000,000 for each fiscal year is authorized to be made available to the Office of the Inspector General of the United States Agency for International Development to carry out this section.

(2) RELATION TO OTHER AVAILABLE FUNDS.—Amounts made available under paragraph (1) are in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes.

SEC. 304. REQUIREMENTS FOR CIVILIAN CONTROL OF UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE FOR PAKISTAN.

(a) REQUIREMENTS.—Any direct assistance provided or payments made on or after January 1, 2010, by the United States to the Government of Pakistan, and any information required by the United States prior to providing the assistance or making the payments, may only be provided or made to, or received from, civilian authorities of a government of Pakistan constituted through a free and fair election. For purposes of this subsection, a government of Pakistan constituted through a free and fair election is a government that is determined by the President to have been elected in a free and fair manner, taking into account the laws and constitution of Pakistan and internationally recognized standards.

(b) WAIVER.—The President may waive—

(1) the requirements under subsection (a), or

(2) the requirements under any other provision of law that restricts assistance to the government of any country whose duly elected head of government is deposed by military coup or decree, as such provision of law applies with respect to the Government of Pakistan, if the President certifies to the appropriate congressional committees that the waiver is important to the national security interests of the United States.

(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall apply with respect to any activities subject to reporting requirements under title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413 et seq.).

(d) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Foreign Relations of the Senate.

SEC. 305. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of State, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Defense, should establish a coordinated, strategic communications strategy to engage the people of Pakistan—one that is fully funded, staffed, and implemented—to help ensure the success of the measures authorized by this Act; and

(2) the strategy should have clear and achievable objectives, based on available resources, and should be overseen by the United States Chief of Mission in Pakistan.

SEC. 306. REPORTS.

(a) REPORT BY PRESIDENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on assistance provided under titles I and II of this Act during the preceding fiscal year. The first report shall be transmitted not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and subsequent reports shall be transmitted not later than December 31 of each year thereafter.

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The report required under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(A) A detailed description of the assistance by program, project, and activity, as well as by geographic area.

(B) A general description of the performance goals established under section 302 and the progress made in meeting the goals.

(C) An evaluation of efforts undertaken by the Government of Pakistan to—

(i) disrupt, dismantle, and defeat al Qaeda, the Taliban, and other extremist and terrorist groups in the FATA and settled areas;

(ii) close terrorist camps, including those of Jamaat-ud-Dawa, Lashkar-e-Taiba, and Jaish-e-Mohammed;

(iii) cease all support for extremist and terrorist groups;

(iv) prevent cross-border attacks;

(v) increase oversight over curriculum in madrasas, including closing madrasas with direct links to the Taliban or other extremist and terrorist groups; and

(vi) improve counter-terrorism financing and anti-money laundering laws, apply for observer status for the Financial Action Task Force, and steps taken to adhere to the United Nations International Convention for the Suppression of Financing of Terrorism.

(D) A detailed description of Pakistan’s efforts to prevent proliferation of nuclear-related material and expertise.

(E) An assessment of whether assistance provided to Pakistan pursuant to this Act has directly or indirectly aided the expansion of Pakistan’s nuclear weapons program, whether by the diversion of United States assistance or the reallocation of Pakistan financial resources that would otherwise be spent for programs and activities unrelated to its nuclear weapons program.

(F) A description of the transfer or purchase of military equipment pursuant to title II of this Act, including—

(i) a list of equipment provided; and

(ii) a detailed description of the extent to which funds obligated and expended pursuant to section 203(b) meet the requirements of such section.

(G) An analysis of a suitable replacement for the AH-1F and AH-1S Cobra attack helicopters, which includes recommendations for sustainment, training, and any other matters determined to be appropriate.

(H) An assessment of the extent to which the Government of Pakistan exercises effective civilian control of the military, including a description of the extent to which civilian executive leaders and parliament exercise oversight and approval of military budgets, the chain of command, the process of promotion for senior military leaders, civilian involvement in strategic guidance and planning, and military involvement in civil administration.

(b) REPORT BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than April 1, 2011, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report evaluating the effectiveness of security assistance provided to Pakistan under title II of this Act during fiscal years 2010 and 2011.

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—The report required under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(A) A detailed description of the expenditures made by Pakistan pursuant to grant assistance under section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763; relating to the Foreign Military Financing program).

(B) An assessment of the impact of the assistance on the security and stability of Pakistan.

(C) An evaluation of any issues of financial impropriety on behalf of personnel implementing the assistance.

(D) An assessment of the extent to which civilian authorities are involved in administration of the assistance provided by the United States.

SEC. 307. SUNSET.

The authority of this Act, other than section 104 and title IV of this Act, shall expire after September 30, 2013.

TITLE IV—DUTY-FREE TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN GOODS FROM RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES IN AFGHANISTAN AND PAKISTAN

(A) a natural person, corporation, company, business association, partnership, society, trust, any other nongovernmental entity, organization, or group, whether or not for profit;

(B) any governmental entity or instrumentality of a government; and

(C) any successor, subunit, or subsidiary of any entity described in subparagraph (A) or (B).

(6) HTS.—The term “HTS” means the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States.

(7) NAFTA.—The term “NAFTA” means the North American Free Trade Agreement concluded between the United States, Mexico, and Canada on December 17, 1992.

(8) RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONE.—The term “Reconstruction Opportunity Zone” means any area that—

(A) solely encompasses portions of the territory of—

(i) Afghanistan; or

(ii) 1 or more of the following areas of Pakistan:

(I) the Federally Administered Tribal Areas;

(II) areas of Pakistan-administered Kashmir that the President determines were harmed by the earthquake of October 8, 2005;

(III) areas of Baluchistan that are within 100 miles of Pakistan’s border with Afghanistan; and

(IV) the North West Frontier Province;

(B) has been designated by the competent authorities in Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, as an area in which merchandise may be introduced without payment of duty or excise tax; and

(C) has been designated by the President as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone pursuant to section 403(a).

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to stimulate economic activity and development in Afghanistan and the border region of Pakistan, critical fronts in the struggle against violent extremism;

(2) to reflect the strong support that the United States has pledged to Afghanistan and Pakistan for their sustained commitment in the global war on terrorism;

(3) to support the 3-pronged United States strategy in Afghanistan and the border region of Pakistan that leverages political, military, and economic tools, with Reconstruction Opportunity Zones as a critical part of the economic component of that strategy; and

(4) to offer a vital opportunity to improve livelihoods of indigenous populations of Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, promote good governance, improve economic and commercial ties between the people of Afghanistan and Pakistan, and strengthen the Governments of Afghanistan and Pakistan.

SEC. 403. DESIGNATION OF RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES.

(a) AUTHORITY TO DESIGNATE.—The President is authorized to designate an area within Afghanistan or Pakistan described in section 402(a)(8) (A) and (B) as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone if the President determines that—

(1) Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, meets the eligibility criteria set forth in subsection (b);

(2) Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, meets the eligibility criteria set forth in subsection (c) of section 502 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462(c)) for designation as a beneficiary developing country under that section and is not ineligible under subsection (b) of such section; and

(3) designation of the area as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone is appropriate taking into account the factors listed in subsection (c).

(b) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, meets the eligibility criteria set forth in this subsection if that country—

(1) has established, or is making continual progress toward establishing—

(A) a market-based economy that protects private property rights, incorporates an open rules-based trading system, and minimizes government interference in the economy through measures such as price controls, subsidies, and government ownership of economic assets;

(B) the rule of law, political pluralism, and the right to due process, a fair trial, and equal protection under the law;

(C) economic policies to—

(i) reduce poverty;

(ii) increase the availability of health care and educational opportunities;

(iii) expand physical infrastructure;

(iv) promote the development of private enterprise; and

(v) encourage the formation of capital markets through microcredit or other programs;

(D) a system to combat corruption and bribery, such as ratifying and implementing the United Nations Convention Against Corruption; and

(E) protection of core labor standards and acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational health and safety;

(2) is eliminating or has eliminated barriers to trade and investment, including by—

(A) providing national treatment and measures to create an environment conducive to domestic and foreign investment;

(B) protecting intellectual property; and

(C) resolving bilateral trade and investment disputes;

(3) does not engage in activities that undermine United States national security or foreign policy interests;

(4) does not engage in gross violations of internationally recognized human rights;

(5) does not provide support for acts of international terrorism; and

(6) cooperates in international efforts to eliminate human rights violations and terrorist activities.

(c) ADDITIONAL FACTORS.—In determining whether to designate an area in Afghanistan or Pakistan as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone, the President shall take into account—

(1) an expression by the government of the country of its desire to have a particular area designated as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone under this title;

(2) the capability of the country to establish a program in the area meeting the requirements of section 407(d)(3) based on assessments undertaken by the Secretary of Labor and the government of the country of such factors as—

(A) the geographical suitability of the area for such a program;

(B) the nature of the labor market in the area;

(C) skills requirements and infrastructure needs for operation of such a program in the area; and

(D) all other relevant information;

(3) whether the government of the country has provided the United States with a monitoring and enforcement plan outlining specific steps the country will take to cooperate with the United States to—

(A) facilitate legitimate cross-border commerce;

(B) ensure that articles for which duty-free treatment is sought pursuant to this title satisfy the applicable rules of origin described in section 404 (c) and (d) or section 405 (c) and (d), whichever is applicable; and

(C) prevent unlawful transshipment, as described in section 406(b)(4);

(4) the potential for such designation to create local employment and to promote local and regional economic development;

(5) the physical security of the proposed Reconstruction Opportunity Zone;

(6) the economic viability of the proposed Reconstruction Opportunity Zone, including—

(A) whether there are commitments to finance economic activity proposed for the Reconstruction Opportunity Zone; and

(B) whether there is existing or planned infrastructure for power, water, transportation, and communications in the area;

(7) whether such designation would be compatible with and contribute to the foreign policy and national security objectives of the United States, taking into account the information provided under subsection (d); and

(8) the views of interested persons submitted pursuant to subsection (e).

(d) INFORMATION RELATING TO COMPATIBILITY WITH AND CONTRIBUTION TO FOREIGN POLICY AND NATIONAL SECURITY OBJECTIVES OF THE UNITED STATES.—In determining whether designation of a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone would be compatible with and contribute to the foreign policy and national security objectives of the United States in accordance with subsection (c)(7), the President shall take into account whether Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has provided the United States with a plan outlining specific steps it will take to verify the ownership and nature of the activities of entities to be located in the proposed Reconstruction Opportunity Zone. The specific steps outlined in a country’s plan shall include a mechanism to annually register each entity by a competent authority of the country and—

(1) to collect from each entity operating in, or proposing to operate in, a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone, information including—

(A) the name and address of the entity;

(B) the name and location of all facilities owned or operated by the entity that are operating in or proposed to be operating in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone;

(C) the name, nationality, date and place of birth, and position title of each person who is an owner, director, or officer of the entity; and

(D) the nature of the activities of each entity;

(2) to update the information required under paragraph (1) as changes occur; and

(3) to provide such information promptly to the Secretary of State.

(e) OPPORTUNITY FOR PUBLIC COMMENT.—Before the President designates an area as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone pursuant to subsection (a), the President shall afford an opportunity for interested persons to submit their views concerning the designation.

(f) NOTIFICATION TO CONGRESS.—Before the President designates an area as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone pursuant to subsection (a), the President shall notify Congress of the President's intention to make the designation, together with the reasons for making the designation.

SEC. 404. DUTY-FREE TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN NONTTEXTILE AND NONAPPAREL ARTICLES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President is authorized to proclaim duty-free treatment for—

(1) any article from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone that the President has designated as an eligible article under section 503(a)(1)(A) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2463(a)(1)(A));

(2) any article from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone located in Afghanistan that the President has designated as an eligible article under section 503(a)(1)(B) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2463(a)(1)(B)); or

(3) any article from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone that is not a textile or apparel article, regardless of whether the article has been designated as an eligible article under section 503(a)(1)(A) or (B) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2463(a)(1) (A) or (B)), if, after receiving the advice of the International Trade Commission pursuant to subsection (b), the President determines that such article is not import-sensitive in the context of imports from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone.

(b) ADVICE CONCERNING CERTAIN ELIGIBLE ARTICLES.—Before proclaiming duty-free treatment for an article pursuant to subsection (a)(3), the President shall publish in the Federal Register and provide the International Trade Commission a list of articles which may be considered for such treatment. The provisions of sections 131 through 134 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2151 through 2154) shall apply to any designation under subsection (a)(3) in the same manner as such sections apply to action taken under section 123 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2133) regarding a proposed trade agreement.

(c) GENERAL RULES OF ORIGIN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The duty-free treatment proclaimed with respect to an article described in paragraph (1) or (3) of subsection (a) shall apply to any article subject to such proclamation which is the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones if—

(A) that article is imported directly from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone into the customs territory of the United States; and

(B)(i) with respect to an article that is an article of a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in Pakistan, the sum of—

(I) the cost or value of the materials produced in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Pakistan or Afghanistan,

(II) the direct costs of processing operations performed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Pakistan or Afghanistan, and

(III) the cost or value of materials produced in the United States, determined in accordance with paragraph (2), is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of the article at the time it is entered into the United States; or

(ii) with respect to an article that is an article of a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in Afghanistan, the sum of—

(I) the cost or value of the materials produced in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Pakistan or Afghanistan,

(II) the cost or value of the materials produced in 1 or more countries that are members of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation,

(III) the direct costs of processing operations performed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Pakistan or Afghanistan, and

(IV) the cost or value of materials produced in the United States, determined in accordance with paragraph (2), is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of the article at the time it is entered into the United States.

(2) DETERMINATION OF 35 PERCENT FOR ARTICLES FROM RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES IN PAKISTAN AND AFGHANISTAN.—If the cost or value of materials produced in the customs territory of the United States is included with respect to an article described in paragraph (1)(B), for purposes of determining the 35-percent appraised value requirement under clause (i) or (ii) of paragraph (1)(B), not more than 15 percent of the appraised value of the article at the time the article is entered into the United States may be attributable to the cost or value of such United States materials.

(d) RULES OF ORIGIN FOR CERTAIN ARTICLES OF RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES IN AFGHANISTAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The duty-free treatment proclaimed with respect to an article described in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) shall apply to any article subject to such proclamation which is the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan if—

(A) that article is imported directly from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in Afghanistan into the customs territory of the United States; and

(B) with respect to that article, the sum of—

(i) the cost or value of the materials produced in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan,

(ii) the cost or value of the materials produced in 1 or more countries that are members of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation,

(iii) the direct costs of processing operations performed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan, and

(iv) the cost or value of materials produced in the United States, determined in accordance with paragraph (2), is not less than 35 percent of the appraised value of the product at the time it is entered into the United States.

(2) DETERMINATION OF 35 PERCENT FOR ARTICLES FROM RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES IN PAKISTAN AND AFGHANISTAN.—If the cost or value of materials produced in the customs territory of the United States is included with respect to an article described in paragraph (1)(B), for purposes of determining the 35-percent appraised value requirement under paragraph (1)(B), not more than 15 percent of the appraised value of the article at the time the article is entered into the United States may be attributable to the cost or value of such United States materials.

(e) EXCLUSIONS.—An article shall not be treated as the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, and no material shall be included for purposes of determining the 35-percent appraised value requirement under subsection (c)(1) or (d)(1), by virtue of having merely undergone—

(1) simple combining or packaging operations;

or

(2) mere dilution with water or with another substance that does not materially alter the characteristics of the article or material.

(f) DIRECT COSTS OF PROCESSING OPERATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As used in subsections (c)(1)(B)(i)(II), (c)(1)(B)(ii)(III), and (d)(1)(B)(ii), the term "direct costs of processing operations" includes, but is not limited to—

(A) all actual labor costs involved in the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the article, including—

- (i) fringe benefits;
(ii) on-the-job training; and
(iii) costs of engineering, supervisory, quality control, and similar personnel; and
(B) dies, molds, tooling, and depreciation on machinery and equipment which are allocable to the article.

(2) EXCLUDED COSTS.—As used in subsections (c)(1)(B)(i)(II), (c)(1)(B)(ii)(III), and (d)(1)(B)(iii), the term "direct costs of processing operations" does not include costs which are not directly attributable to the article or are not costs of manufacturing the article, such as—

- (A) profit; and
(B) general expenses of doing business which are either not allocable to the article or are not related to the growth, production, manufacture, or assembly of the article, such as administrative salaries, casualty and liability insurance, advertising, and salesmen's salaries, commissions, or expenses.

(g) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the United States Trade Representative, shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section. The regulations may provide that, in order for an article to be eligible for duty-free treatment under this section, the article—

(1) shall be wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones; or

(2) shall be a new or different article of commerce which has been grown, produced, or manufactured in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones.

SEC. 405. DUTY-FREE TREATMENT FOR CERTAIN TEXTILE AND APPAREL ARTICLES.

(a) DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—The President is authorized to proclaim duty-free treatment for any textile or apparel article described in subsection (b), if—

(1) the article is a covered article described in subsection (b); and

(2) the President determines that the country in which the Reconstruction Opportunity Zone is located has satisfied the requirements set forth in section 406.

(b) COVERED ARTICLES.—A covered article described in this subsection is an article in 1 of the following categories:

(1) ARTICLES OF RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES.—An article that is the product of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones and falls within the scope of 1 of the following textile and apparel category numbers, as set forth in the HTS (as in effect on September 1, 2007):

(c) RULES OF ORIGIN FOR CERTAIN COVERED ARTICLES.—

(1) GENERAL RULES.—Except with respect to an article listed in paragraph (2) of subsection (b), duty-free treatment may be proclaimed for an article listed in subsection (b) only if the article is imported directly into the customs territory of the United States from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone and—

(A) the article is wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones;

(B) the article is a yarn, thread, twine, cordage, rope, cable, or braiding, and—

(i) the constituent staple fibers are spun in, or (ii) the continuous filament fiber is extruded in, 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones;

(C) the article is a fabric, including a fabric classifiable under chapter 59 of the HTS, and the constituent fibers, filaments, or yarns are woven, knitted, needled, tufted, felted, entangled, or transformed by any other fabric-making process in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones; or

(D) the article is any other textile or apparel article that is cut (or knit-to-shape) and sewn or otherwise assembled in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones from its component pieces.

(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

(A) CERTAIN MADE-UP ARTICLES, TEXTILE ARTICLES IN THE PIECE, AND CERTAIN OTHER TEXTILES

AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D) and except as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D) of this paragraph, subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (1), as appropriate, shall determine whether a good that is classifiable under 1 of the following headings or subheadings of the HTS shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection: 5609, 5807, 5811, 6209.20.50.40, 6213, 6214, 6301, 6302, 6303, 6304, 6305, 6306, 6307.10, 6307.90, 6308, and 9404.90.

(B) CERTAIN KNIT-TO-SHAPE TEXTILES AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D) and except as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D) of this paragraph, a textile or apparel article that is wholly formed on seamless knitting machines or by hand-knitting in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection.

(C) CERTAIN DYED AND PRINTED TEXTILES AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D), an article classifiable under subheading 6117.10, 6213.00, 6214.00, 6302.22, 6302.29, 6302.52, 6302.53, 6302.59, 6302.92, 6302.93, 6302.99, 6303.92, 6303.99, 6304.19, 6304.93, 6304.99, 9404.90.85, or 9404.90.95 of the HTS, except for an article classifiable under 1 of such subheadings as of cotton or of wool or consisting of fiber blends containing 16 percent or more by weight of cotton, shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection if the fabric in the article is both dyed and printed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, and such dyeing and printing is accompanied by 2 or more of the following finishing operations: bleaching, shrinking, fulling, napping, decating, permanent stiffening, weighting, permanent embossing, or moireing.

(D) FABRICS OF SILK, COTTON, MAN-MADE FIBER, OR VEGETABLE FIBER.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), a fabric classifiable under the HTS as of silk, cotton, man-made fiber, or vegetable fiber shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection if the fabric is both dyed and printed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, and such dyeing and printing is accompanied by 2 or more of the following finishing operations: bleaching, shrinking, fulling, napping, decating, permanent stiffening, weighting, permanent embossing, or moireing.

(d) RULES OF ORIGIN FOR COVERED ARTICLES THAT ARE PRODUCTS OF 1 OR MORE RECONSTRUCTION OPPORTUNITY ZONES IN AFGHANISTAN.—

(1) GENERAL RULES.—Duty-free treatment may be proclaimed for an article listed in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) only if the article is imported directly into the customs territory of the United States from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in Afghanistan and—

(A) the article is wholly the growth, product, or manufacture of 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan,

(B) the article is a yarn, thread, twine, cordage, rope, cable, or braiding, and—

(i) the constituent staple fibers are spun in, or (ii) the continuous filament fiber is extruded in, 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan;

(C) the article is a fabric, including a fabric classifiable under chapter 59 of the HTS, and the constituent fibers, filaments, or yarns are woven, knitted, needled, tufted, felted, entangled, or transformed by any other fabric-making process in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan; or

(D) the article is any other textile or apparel article that is cut (or knit-to-shape) and sewn or otherwise assembled in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan from its component pieces.

(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

(A) CERTAIN MADE-UP ARTICLES, TEXTILE ARTICLES IN THE PIECE, AND CERTAIN OTHER TEXTILES AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D) and except as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D) of this paragraph, subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (1), as appropriate, shall determine whether a good that is classifiable under 1 of the following headings or subheadings of the HTS shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection: 5609, 5807, 5811, 6209.20.50.40, 6213, 6214, 6301, 6302, 6303, 6304, 6305, 6306, 6307.10, 6307.90, 6308, and 9404.90.

(B) CERTAIN KNIT-TO-SHAPE TEXTILES AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D) and except as provided in subparagraphs (C) and (D) of this paragraph, a textile or apparel article that is wholly formed on seamless knitting machines or by hand-knitting in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection.

(C) CERTAIN DYED AND PRINTED TEXTILES AND TEXTILE ARTICLES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(D), an article classifiable under subheading 6117.10, 6213.00, 6214.00, 6302.22, 6302.29, 6302.52, 6302.53, 6302.59, 6302.92, 6302.93, 6302.99, 6303.92, 6303.99, 6304.19, 6304.93, 6304.99, 9404.90.85, or 9404.90.95 of the HTS, except for an article classifiable under 1 of such subheadings as of cotton or of wool or consisting of fiber blends containing 16 percent or more by weight of cotton, shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection if the fabric in the article is both dyed and printed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan, and such dyeing and printing is accompanied by 2 or more of the following finishing operations: bleaching, shrinking, fulling, napping, decating, permanent stiffening, weighting, permanent embossing, or moireing.

(D) FABRICS OF SILK, COTTON, MAN-MADE FIBER OR VEGETABLE FIBER.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), a fabric classifiable under the HTS as of silk, cotton, man-made fiber, or vegetable fiber shall be considered to meet the rules of origin of this subsection if the fabric is both dyed and printed in 1 or more Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan, and such dyeing and printing is accompanied by 2 or more of the following finishing operations: bleaching, shrinking, fulling, napping, decating, permanent stiffening, weighting, permanent embossing, or moireing.

(E) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the United States Trade Representative, shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 406. PROTECTIONS AGAINST UNLAWFUL TRANSSHIPMENT.

(a) DUTY-FREE TREATMENT CONDITIONED ON ENFORCEMENT MEASURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The duty-free treatment described in section 405 shall not be provided to covered articles that are imported from a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in a country unless the President determines that country meets the following criteria:

(A) The country has adopted—

(i) an effective visa or electronic certification system; and

(ii) domestic laws and enforcement procedures applicable to covered articles to prevent unlawful transshipment of the articles and the use of false documents relating to the importation of the articles into the United States.

(B) The country has enacted legislation or promulgated regulations that would permit U.S. Customs and Border Protection verification teams to have the access necessary to investigate thoroughly allegations of unlawful transshipment through such country.

(C) The country agrees to provide U.S. Customs and Border Protection with a monthly report on shipments of covered articles from each producer of those articles in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in that country.

(D) The country will cooperate fully with the United States to address and take action necessary to prevent circumvention, as described in Article 5 of the Agreement on Textiles and Clothing.

(E) The country agrees to require each producer of a covered article in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in that country to register with the competent government authority, to provide that authority with the following information, and to update that information as changes occur:

(i) The name and address of the producer, including the location of all textile or apparel facilities owned or operated by that producer in Afghanistan or Pakistan.

(ii) The telephone number, facsimile number, and electronic mail address of the producer.

(iii) The names and nationalities of the producer's owners, directors, and corporate officers, and their positions.

(iv) The number of employees the producer employs and their occupations.

(v) A general description of the covered articles of the producer and the producer's production capacity.

(vi) The number and type of machines the producer uses to produce textile or apparel articles at each facility.

(vii) The approximate number of hours the machines operate per week.

(viii) The identity of any supplier to the producer of textile or apparel goods, or fabrics, yarns, or fibers used in the production of textile or apparel goods.

(ix) The name of, and contact information for, each of the producer's customers in the United States.

(F) The country agrees to provide to U.S. Customs and Border Protection on a timely basis all of the information received by the competent government authority in accordance with subparagraph (E) and to provide U.S. Customs and Border Protection with an annual update of that information.

(G) The country agrees to require that all producers and exporters of covered articles in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone in that country maintain complete records of the production and the export of covered articles, including materials used in the production, for at least 5 years after the production or export (as the case may be).

(H) The country agrees to provide, on a timely basis, at the request of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, documentation establishing the eligibility of covered articles for duty-free treatment under section 405.

(2) DOCUMENTATION ESTABLISHING ELIGIBILITY OF ARTICLES FOR DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(H), documentation establishing the eligibility of a covered article for duty-free treatment under section 405 includes documentation such as production records, information relating to the place of production, the number and identification of the types of machinery used in production, the number of workers employed in production, and certification from both the producer and the exporter.

(b) CUSTOMS PROCEDURES AND ENFORCEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the United States Trade Representative, shall promulgate regulations setting forth customs procedures similar in all material respects to the requirements of article 502(1) of the NAFTA as implemented pursuant to United States law, which shall apply to any importer that claims duty-free treatment for an article under section 405.

(B) DETERMINATION.—In order for articles produced in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone to qualify for the duty-free treatment under section 405, there shall be in effect a determination by the President that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be—

(i) has implemented and follows, or

(ii) is making substantial progress toward implementing and following, procedures and requirements similar in all material respects to the relevant procedures and requirements under chapter 5 of the NAFTA.

(2) CERTIFICATE OF ORIGIN.—A certificate of origin that otherwise would be required pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (1) shall not be required in the case of an article imported under section 405 if such certificate of origin would not be required under article 503 of the NAFTA, as implemented pursuant to United States law, if the article were imported from Mexico.

(3) PENALTIES.—If the President determines, based on sufficient evidence, that an entity has engaged in unlawful transshipment described in paragraph (4), the President shall deny for a period of 5 years beginning on the date of the determination all benefits under section 405 to the entity, any successor of the entity, and any other entity owned, operated, or controlled by the principals of the entity.

(4) UNLAWFUL TRANSSHIPMENT DESCRIBED.—For purposes of this section, unlawful transshipment occurs when duty-free treatment for a covered article has been claimed on the basis of material false information concerning the country of origin, manufacture, processing, or assembly of the article or any of its components. For purposes of the preceding sentence, false information is material if disclosure of the true information would mean or would have meant that the article is or was ineligible for duty-free treatment under section 405.

(5) MONITORING AND REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—U.S. Customs and Border Protection shall monitor and the Commissioner responsible for U.S. Customs and Border Protection shall submit to Congress, not later than March 31 of each year, a report on the effectiveness of the visa or electronic certification systems and the implementation of legislation and regulations described in subsection (a) and on measures taken by Afghanistan and Pakistan to prevent circumvention as described in article 5 of the Agreement on Textile and Clothing.

(c) ADDITIONAL CUSTOMS ENFORCEMENT.—U.S. Customs and Border Protection shall—

(1) make available technical assistance to Afghanistan and Pakistan—

(A) in the development and implementation of visa or electronic certification systems, legislation, and regulations described in subsection (a)(1)(A) and (B); and

(B) to train their officials in anti-transshipment enforcement;

(2) send production verification teams to Afghanistan and Pakistan as necessary; and

(3) to the extent feasible, place Afghanistan and Pakistan on a relevant e-certification program.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—To carry out subsection (c), there are authorized to be appropriated to U.S. Customs and Border Protection $10,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2010 through 2023.

SEC. 407. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, CAPACITY BUILDING, COMPLIANCE ASSESSMENT, AND REMEDIATION PROGRAM.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The term "appropriate congressional committees" means—

(A) the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate; and

(B) the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives.

(2) TEXTILE OR APPAREL PRODUCER.—The term “textile or apparel producer” means a producer of a covered article described in section 405(b) that is located in a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—

(1) PRESIDENTIAL CERTIFICATION OF COMPLIANCE BY AFGHANISTAN OR PAKISTAN WITH REQUIREMENTS.—Upon the expiration of the 16-month period beginning on the date on which the President designates an area within Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, as a Reconstruction Opportunity Zone under section 403(a), duty-free treatment proclaimed under section 404(a) or 405(a) for articles from such Reconstruction Opportunity Zone may remain in effect only if the President determines and certifies to Congress that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be—

(A) has implemented the requirements set forth in subsections (c) and (d) with respect to such Reconstruction Opportunity Zone; and

(B) has agreed to require textile or apparel producers in such Reconstruction Opportunity Zone to participate in the program described in subsection (d) and has developed a system to ensure participation in such program by such producers, including by developing and maintaining the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A).

(2) EXTENSION.—

(A) INITIAL EXTENSION.—The President may extend the period for compliance by Afghanistan or Pakistan under paragraph (1) for an initial 6-month period if the President—

(i) determines that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has made a good faith effort toward implementing the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B) and has agreed to take additional steps towards implementing such requirements that are satisfactory to the President; and

(ii) provides to the appropriate congressional committees, not later than 30 days before the last day of the 16-month period specified in paragraph (1), a report identifying the additional steps that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has agreed to take as described in clause (i).

(B) SUBSEQUENT EXTENSIONS.—The President may extend the period for compliance by Afghanistan or Pakistan under paragraph (1) for subsequent 6-month periods if, with respect to each such extension, the President—

(i) provides an opportunity for public comment and a public hearing on the possible extension not later than 45 days before the last day of the existing 6-month extension;

(ii) consults with the Secretary of Labor and the appropriate congressional committees with respect to the possible extension not later than 45 days before the last day of the existing 6-month extension;

(iii) determines, taking into account any public comments and input received during the public hearing described in clause (i) and the consultations described in clause (ii), that extraordinary circumstances exist that preclude Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, from meeting the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B); and

(iv) publishes in the Federal Register a notice that describes—

(I) the extraordinary circumstances described in clause (iii);

(II) the reasons why the extraordinary circumstances preclude Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, from meeting the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B); and

(III) the steps Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, will take during the 6-month period of the extension to implement the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B).

(3) CONTINUING COMPLIANCE.—

(A) TERMINATION OF DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—If, after making a certification under paragraph (1), the President determines that Afghanistan or Pakistan is no longer meeting the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B), the President shall terminate the duty-free treatment proclaimed under section 404(a) or 405(a).

(B) CONTINUATION OF DUTY-FREE TREATMENT NOTWITHSTANDING NONCOMPLIANCE.—

(i) INITIAL 6-MONTH CONTINUATION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), if, after making a certification under paragraph (1), the President determines that Afghanistan or Pakistan is no longer meeting the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B), the President may extend the duty-free treatment proclaimed under section 404(a) or 405(a) for an initial 6-month period if the President—

(I) determines, after consultation with the Secretary of Labor and the appropriate congressional committees, that extraordinary circumstances exist that preclude Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, from continuing to meet the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B); and

(II) publishes in the Federal Register a notice, not later than 30 days after making the determination under subclause (I), that describes—

(aa) the extraordinary circumstances described in subclause (I); and

(bb) the reasons why the extraordinary circumstances preclude Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, from continuing to meet the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B).

(ii) SUBSEQUENT 6-MONTH CONTINUATION.—The President may extend the duty-free treatment proclaimed under section 404(a) or 405(a) for a subsequent 6-month period if, with respect to such extension, the President makes a determination that meets the requirements of clause (i)(I) and publishes in the Federal Register a notice that meets the requirements of clause (i)(II).

(C) SUBSEQUENT COMPLIANCE.—If the President, after terminating duty-free treatment under subparagraph (A), determines that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, is implementing the requirements set forth in paragraph (1) (A) and (B) and meets the requirements of section 403, the President shall reinstate the application of duty-free treatment proclaimed under section 404(a) or 405(a).

(c) LABOR OFFICIAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirement under this subsection is that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has designated a labor official within the national government that—

(A) reports directly to the President of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be;

(B) is chosen by the President of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, in consultation with labor unions and industry associations; and

(C) is vested with the authority to perform the functions described in paragraph (2).

(2) FUNCTIONS.—The functions of the labor official shall include—

(A) developing and maintaining a registry of textile or apparel producers, and developing, in consultation and coordination with any other appropriate officials of the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, a system to ensure participation by such producers in the program described in subsection (d);

(B) overseeing the implementation of the program described in subsection (d);

(C) receiving and investigating comments from any interested party regarding the conditions described in subsection (d)(2) in facilities of textile or apparel producers listed in the registry described in subparagraph (A) and, where appropriate, referring such comments or the result of such investigations to the appropriate authorities of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, and to the entity operating the program described in subsection (d);

(D) assisting, in consultation and coordination with any other appropriate authorities of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, textile or apparel producers listed in the registry described in subparagraph (A) in meeting the conditions set forth in subsection (d)(2); and

(E) coordinating, with the assistance of the entity operating the program described in subsection (d), a tripartite committee comprised of appropriate representatives of government agencies, employers, and workers, as well as other relevant interested parties, for the purposes of evaluating progress in implementing the program described in subsection (d), and consulting on improving core labor standards and working conditions in the textile and apparel sector in Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, and on other matters of common concern relating to such core labor standards and working conditions.

(d) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, CAPACITY BUILDING, COMPLIANCE ASSESSMENT, AND REMEDIATION PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirement under this subsection is that Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, in cooperation with the entity designated by the Secretary of Labor under paragraph (3)(A)(i), has established a program meeting the requirements under paragraph (3)—

(A) to assess compliance by textile or apparel producers listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A) with the conditions set forth in paragraph (2) and to assist such producers in meeting such conditions; and

(B) to provide assistance to improve the capacity of the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be—

(i) to inspect facilities of textile or apparel producers listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A); and

(ii) to enforce national labor laws and resolve labor disputes, including through measures described in paragraph (5).

(2) CONDITIONS DESCRIBED.—The conditions referred to in paragraph (1) are—

(A) compliance with core labor standards; and

(B) compliance with the labor laws of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, that relate directly to core labor standards and to ensuring acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational health and safety.

(3) REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements for the program are that the program—

(A) is operated by an entity that—

(i) is designated by the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with appropriate officials of the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be;

(ii) operates independently of the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be;

(iii) has expertise relating to monitoring of core labor standards;

(iv) if the entity designated under clause (i) is an entity other than the International Labor Organization, is subject to evaluation by the International Labor Organization at the request of the Secretary of Labor, including—

(I) annual review of the operation of the program; and

(II) annual recommendations to the entity operating the program, the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, and the Secretary of Labor to improve the operation of the program;

(v) prepares the annual report described in paragraph (4);

(B) is developed through a participatory process that includes the labor official described in subsection (c) of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, and appropriate representatives of government agencies, employers, and workers;

(C) assess compliance by each textile or apparel producer listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A) with the conditions set forth in paragraph (2) and identify any deficiencies by such producer with respect to meeting such conditions, including by—

(i) conducting site visits to facilities of the producer;

(ii) conducting confidential interviews with workers and management of the facilities of the producer; and

(iii) providing to management and workers, and where applicable, worker organizations of the producer, on a confidential basis—

(I) the results of the assessment carried out under this subparagraph; and

(II) specific suggestions for remediating any such deficiencies;

(D) assist the textile or apparel producer in remediating any deficiencies identified under subparagraph (C);

(E) conduct prompt follow-up site visits to the facilities of the textile or apparel producer to assess progress on remediation of any deficiencies identified under subparagraph (C); and

(F) provide training to workers and management of the textile or apparel producer, and where appropriate, to other persons or entities, to promote compliance with paragraph (2).

(4) ANNUAL REPORT.—The annual report referred to in paragraph (3)(A)(v) is a report, by the entity operating the program, that is published (and available to the public in a readily accessible manner) on an annual basis, beginning 1 year after Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has implemented a program under this subsection, covering the preceding 1-year period, and that includes the following:

(A) The name of each textile or apparel producer listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A) that has been in operation in the Reconstruction Opportunity Zone for at least 1 year and has been identified as having met the conditions under paragraph (2).

(B) The name of each textile or apparel producer listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A) that has been in operation in the Reconstruction Opportunity Zone for at least 1 year and has been identified as having deficiencies with respect to the conditions under paragraph (2), and has failed to remedy such deficiencies.

(C) For each textile or apparel producer listed under subparagraph (B)—

(i) a description of the deficiencies found to exist and the specific suggestions for remediating such deficiencies made by the entity operating the program;

(ii) a description of the efforts by the producer to remediate the deficiencies, including a description of assistance provided by any entity to assist in such remediation; and

(iii) with respect to deficiencies that have not been remediated, the amount of time that has elapsed since the deficiencies were first identified in a report under this subparagraph.

(D) For each textile or apparel producer identified as having deficiencies with respect to the conditions described under paragraph (2) in a prior report under this paragraph, a description of the progress made in remediating such deficiencies since the submission of the prior report, and an assessment of whether any aspect of such deficiencies persists.

(5) CAPACITY BUILDING.—The assistance to the Government of Afghanistan or Pakistan referred to in paragraph (1)(B) shall include programs—

(A) to review the labor laws and regulations of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be,

and to develop and implement strategies for improving such labor laws and regulations;

(B) to develop additional strategies for protecting core labor standards and providing acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational safety and health, including through legal, regulatory, and institutional reform;

(C) to increase awareness of core labor standards and national labor laws;

(D) to promote consultation and cooperation between government representatives, employers, worker representatives, and United States importers on matters relating to core labor standards and national labor laws;

(E) to assist the labor official of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, designated pursuant to subsection (c) in establishing and coordinating operation of the committee described in subsection (c)(2)(E);

(F) to assist worker representatives in more fully and effectively advocating on behalf of their members; and

(G) to provide on-the-job training and technical assistance to labor inspectors, judicial officers, and other relevant personnel to build their capacity to enforce national labor laws and resolve labor disputes.

(e) COMPLIANCE WITH ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—

(1) COUNTRY COMPLIANCE WITH CORE LABOR STANDARDS ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA.—In making a determination of whether Afghanistan or Pakistan is meeting the eligibility requirement set forth in section 403(b)(1)(E) relating to core labor standards, the President shall consider any reports produced under subsection (d)(4) and acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational health and safety.

(2) PRODUCER ELIGIBILITY.—

(A) IDENTIFICATION OF PRODUCERS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), beginning 2 years after the President makes the certification under subsection (b)(1), the President shall identify on a biennial basis whether a textile or apparel producer listed in the registry described in subsection (c)(2)(A) and in operation for at least 1 year has failed to comply with core labor standards and with the labor laws of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, that directly relate to and are consistent with core labor standards.

(ii) EXCEPTION.—The President may identify a textile or apparel producer at any time under clause (i) if the evidence warrants such a review.

(B) ASSISTANCE TO PRODUCERS; WITHDRAWAL, ETC., OF DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—For each textile or apparel producer that the President identifies under subparagraph (A), the President shall seek to assist such producer in coming into compliance with core labor standards and with the labor laws of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, that directly relate to and are consistent with core labor standards. If, within a reasonable period of time, such efforts fail, the President shall withdraw, suspend, or limit the application of duty-free treatment to textile and apparel covered articles of such producer.

(C) REINSTATING DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—If the President, after withdrawing, suspending, or limiting the application of duty-free treatment under subparagraph (B) to articles of a textile or apparel producer, determines that such producer is complying with core labor standards and with the labor laws of Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, that directly relate to and are consistent with core labor standards, the President shall reinstate the application of duty-free treatment under section 405 to the textile and apparel covered articles of such producer.

(D) CONSIDERATION OF REPORTS.—In making the identification under subparagraph (A) and the determination under subparagraph (C), the President shall consider the reports made available under subsection (d)(4).

(f) REPORTS BY THE PRESIDENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the implementation of this section during the preceding 1-year period.

(2) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED.—Each report required by paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) An explanation of the efforts of Afghanistan and Pakistan, the President, and entity designated by the Secretary of Labor to carry out this section.

(B) A summary of each report produced under subsection (d)(4) during the preceding 1-year period and a summary of the findings contained in such report.

(C) Identifications made under subsection (e)(2)(A) and determinations made under subsection (e)(2)(C).

(g) EVALUATION AND REPORT BY SECRETARY OF LABOR.—

(1) EVALUATION.—The Secretary of Labor shall evaluate the monitoring program established under this section to determine ways to improve adoption and adherence to core labor standards and acceptable conditions of work with respect to minimum wages, hours of work, and occupational health and safety. To the extent that producers of nontextile or nonapparel articles described in section 404 have established operations in Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, the report shall also evaluate options for expanding the program to include such producers.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which Afghanistan or Pakistan, as the case may be, has implemented a program under this section, the Secretary of Labor shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains the results of the evaluation required under paragraph (1) and recommendations to improve the program under this section and, if applicable, to expand the program to include producers of nontextile or nonapparel articles.

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor such sums as may be necessary to carry out this subsection.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section (other than subsection (g)) $20,000,000 for the period beginning on October 1, 2009, and ending on September 30, 2023.

SEC. 408. PETITION PROCESS.

Any interested party may file a request to have the status of Afghanistan or Pakistan reviewed with respect to the eligibility requirements listed in this title, and the President shall provide for this purpose the same procedures as those that are provided for reviewing the status of eligible beneficiary developing countries with respect to the designation criteria listed in subsections (b) and (c) of section 502 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462 (b) and (c)).

SEC. 409. LIMITATIONS ON PROVIDING DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) PROCLAMATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), and subject to subsection (b) and the conditions described in sections 403 through 407, the President shall exercise the President's authority under this title, and the President shall proclaim any duty-free treatment pursuant to that authority.

(2) WAIVER.—The President may waive the application of this title if the President determines that providing such treatment is inconsistent with the national interests of the United States. In making such determination, the President shall consider—

(A) obligations of the United States under international agreements;

(B) the national economic interests of the United States; and

(C) the foreign policy interests of the United States, including the economic development of Afghanistan and the border region of Pakistan.

(b) WITHDRAWAL, SUSPENSION, OR LIMITATION OF DUTY-FREE TREATMENT.—The President may withdraw, suspend, or limit the application of the duty-free treatment proclaimed under this title upon consideration of the factors set forth in section 403 (b) and (c) of this Act, and section 502 (b) and (c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462 (b) and (c)). In taking any action to withdraw, suspend, or limit duty-free treatment with respect to producers receiving benefits under section 404 or 405, the President shall consider the information described in section 403(d) relating to verification of the ownership and nature of the activities of such producers and any other relevant information the President determines to be appropriate.

(c) NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—The President shall advise Congress—

(1) of any action the President takes to waive, withdraw, suspend, or limit the application of duty-free treatment with respect to Reconstruction Opportunity Zones in Afghanistan or Pakistan or enterprises receiving benefits under section 404 or 405; and

(2) if either Afghanistan or Pakistan fails to adequately take the actions described in section 403 (b) and (c) of this Act or section 502 (b) and (c) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2462 (b) and (c)).

SEC. 410. TERMINATION OF BENEFITS.

Duty-free treatment provided under this title shall remain in effect through September 30, 2024.

SEC. 411. CUSTOMS USER FEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall increase the amount of fees charged and collected under section 13031(a) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(a)) for the provision of customs services in connection with imports and travel from Afghanistan and Pakistan as necessary to meet the requirements of subsection (b).

(b) MINIMUM AMOUNT.—The amount of the increase in fees charged and collected under the authority of subsection (a)—

(1) shall not be less than $12,000,000 for the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending at the close of September 30, 2014; and

(2) shall not be less than $105,000,000 for the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act and ending at the close of September 30, 2019.

(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The amount of the increase in fees charged and collected under the authority of subsection (a) shall be in addition to the amount of fees that would otherwise be charged and collected under section 13031(a) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(a)) for the provision of customs services in connection with imports and travel from Afghanistan and Pakistan.

(d) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority provided under subsection (a) terminates at the close of the date on which the aggregate amount of the increase in fees charged and collected under the authority of subsection (a) equals $105,000,000.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. After 1 hour of debate on the bill, as amended, it shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in part B of the report, if offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) or her designee, which shall be considered read, and shall be debatable for 30 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.

The gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 1886.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, at this time I would like, for purposes of opening general debate, to yield to the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, whom we have worked very closely with in putting together a bill that we can now bring to the floor, a very good bill. His help and the help of his staff, working with our staff, has really been just indispensable to the progress of this effort.

I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

Mr. SKELTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this measure before the House today is very well one of the most important pieces of legislation that we will pass regarding national security.

I first must compliment the chairman, compliment his staff, as well as the staff of the Armed Services Committee, who worked diligently to craft this piece of legislation. It's very important because Pakistan is very important. Pakistan is important to the Middle East and our intentions there. Their cooperation, of course, is so very, very important. This legislation gives economic and democratic development assistance to that country.

What is, of course, of great interest to me is the security assistance that we have given Pakistan, some $400 million. I will leave it to the chairman, the very able chairman, to go into the details, but I must say that it not only provides for training and financing, one part that seems to be overlooked so often is the part that deals with the international military education, which has for a period of time missed out with this country of Pakistan, which again is back on our radar, and hopefully will be of great benefit to them as well as to us. It requires certain milestones to be met.

Under the able leadership of this chairman, this is an excellent bill. I wholly endorse it. I certainly hope that we will get a very, very strong vote because the future of Pakistan is a centerpiece that we need to be successful for our efforts in that part of the world.

With that, I again thank the chairman and compliment him, as well as all those who worked on it.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Missouri, the chairman of the committee, for his kind comments, and I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the United States has an enormous stake in the security and stability of Pakistan. We can't allow al Qaeda or any other terrorist group that threatens our national security to operate with impunity in the tribal regions or any other part of Pakistan. Nor can we permit the Pakistani state and its nuclear arsenal to be taken over by the Taliban.

To help prevent this nightmare scenario, we need to forge a true strategic partnership with Pakistan and its people, strengthen Pakistan's democrat government, and work to make Pakistan a source of stability in a volatile region. H.R. 1886 is designed to help achieve these critical goals.

This legislation would significantly expand democratic, economic, and social development assistance to help lay the foundation for a stronger, more stable Pakistan. The bill provides funding to strengthen the capacity of Pakistan's democratic institutions including its Parliament, judicial system, and law enforcement agencies. It calls for increased assistance for Pakistan's public education system, emphasis on access for women and girls. To help ensure that U.S. assistance actually reaches the Pakistani people, it requires increased auditing, greater monitoring, and better evaluation.

H.R. 1886 also provides critical security assistance to help the government of Pakistan in its fight against the extremists that threaten the national security of both Pakistan and the United States. To strengthen civilian control of the military, H.R. 1886 requires that all assistance flow through the Pakistan's elected civilian government. And to support the administration's request for additional flexibility to address Pakistan's urgent security needs, the bill authorizes funds for the Pakistan Counterinsurgency Capability Fund, or PCCF. The legislation includes some important accountability provisions to ensure that Pakistan is using our security assistance in a manner consistent with U.S. national security interests. An annual Presidential determination is required that determines whether or not Pakistan is cooperating with the United States on nonproliferation, is meeting its commitment to combat terrorist groups, and has made progress towards that end.

Contrary to what some have suggested, these are not rigid or inflexible conditions that severely constrain the military. We appreciate the urgency of the situation in Pakistan and the need for appropriate flexibility. We are simply asking Pakistan to follow through with the commitments it has already made. If their President is unable to make these determinations, then we should be asking ourselves much deeper questions about what we really hope to achieve in Pakistan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield myself 1 additional minute.

If their President is unable to make these determinations, as I mentioned, we should be asking the deeper question of why are we doing this. By including these accountability provisions in this bill, we lay down an important marker that Congress will no longer provide a blank check. We've had extensive conversation with the administration, with the Armed Services Committee, as I mentioned earlier, and have made a number of changes to make this legislation and this effort work better.

I want to re-enforce the notion this is not a partisan product. This is a bipartisan bill. We are honored to have two of the most thoughtful and experienced Members from the minority side, Mr. ROYCE and Mr. KIRK, as original cosponsors of this legislation, and we hope that their actions and this debate will persuade a majority of both parties that this is an effort worth supporting.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1886, the Pakistan Enduring Assistance and Cooperation Enhancement Act of 2009, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of this debate, it's important to emphasize that Congress and the administration are united in our goals toward Pakistan. We want a long-term partnership with a modern, a prosperous, a democratic Pakistan that is at peace with itself and at peace with its neighbors. And we want a Pakistan that does not provide safe haven to al Qaeda, the Taliban, and other militant extremist groups.

□ 1245

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the hard work that has gone into my good friend Chairman BERMAN's bill. I also recognize that both amendments in committee, as well as the manager's amendment, have made this a somewhat less objectionable instrument than it was at the outset, but it is still worthy of being objected to.

However, concerns remain, and these are not just my concerns, but they are concerns that, I understand, the White House, the Defense Department and our own intelligence agencies continue to have with H.R. 1886. These concerns are particularly acute in light of the current Pakistani military offensive against the Taliban and against other extremists in the North-West Frontier Province as well as the fact that the new policy is still evolving.

Rather than a forward-looking bill that addresses the current leadership and the current dynamics in Pakistan, this bill before us, H.R. 1886, focuses on past actions and failures attributed to the Pakistani Government, punishing the new leadership for the sins of its predecessors. That is why I will be offering a comprehensive substitute which parallels the results of the administration's strategic review and which fully funds its request for critical nonmilitary and certain military assistance to Pakistan.

Unlike the underlying bill, our measure provides the necessary flexibility for all U.S. agencies to respond quickly and to respond effectively to rapidly unfolding developments on the ground while still retaining robust accountability and congressional oversight of these programs.

As Members will recall, on March 27, the President announced a new strategy to guide U.S. policy in Afghanistan and Pakistan. This strategy focused our efforts, the U.S. efforts, toward meeting a core goal: to disrupt, to dismantle and to defeat al Qaeda and its safe havens in Pakistan, and to prevent their return to Afghanistan or Pakistan.

As our intelligence agencies have made clear, the threats emanating from al Qaeda and from their allies in Pakistan directly endanger our homeland security, the survival of Pakistan as a modern nation-state and the security of our friends and allies around the world.

The President as well as all of his top advisers, including Secretary of State Clinton and Secretary of Defense Gates, insist that this new strategy is intended to be a framework, not a straitjacket, for U.S. policy. That is why Secretary Clinton has emphasized that the democratically-elected government in Pakistan shares our goals with respect to tackling militancy, and that is why she urged that Congress not legislate onerous conditionality that might undercut our efforts to work with Pakistanis who share the interests of the United States. That is also why Ambassador Holbrooke noted before our committee this May that certain legislative conditionality could prove seriously counterproductive.

While the authors of H.R. 1886 may have sought to empower our Pakistani partners to undertake the formidable task of fighting and winning against violent extremists, it does the opposite. Further, accountability measures for Afghanistan and Pakistan must be tightly linked to the new U.S. strategy for the region rather than outdated assessments of the situation in Pakistan and preconceived notions about the response from our Pakistani partners.

Mr. Speaker, we have gone down this road before. I recall during the Iraq debate in the last Congress Members expressed great distrust for the judgment of General Petraeus, and they sought to prejudice the surge strategy before it could even be implemented. Let us hope that this will not be repeated with respect to Pakistan and Afghanistan, as General Petraeus is now the chief of Central Command, leading the efforts of the Department of Defense in these countries and, in fact, in the broader theater.

Why does the executive branch need great flexibility in trying to execute a strategy in Pakistan? Look what is happening on the ground right now. Six weeks of fighting between the Pakistani troops and the Taliban insurgencies have forced 2 million people from their homes in the Swat Valley and in other northwestern areas.

According to Islamabad, since the operation began on April 26, 1,305 militants have been killed; 120 have been arrested; 105 soldiers have died; and 306 have been injured. In response, the extremists have launched a wave of suicide bombings and other attacks in Lahore and elsewhere across the country.

As one Pakistani writer noted, "The terrorist backlash is principally aimed at draining public support from the army's offensive in Swat and to rattle the political and military establishments, weaken national resolve and erode public support for the anti-militancy campaign."

Fortunately, Pakistan's democratic government has responded with firmness and with new resolve to persevere and to succeed in our mission. Perhaps even more importantly, anti-Taliban sentiment among the Pakistani people appears to be increasing in response to the mayhem that has been unleashed by the militants. But these gains are fragile, Mr. Speaker. Winning the peace could yet prove elusive. There could be little doubt that the political and military challenges ahead for the government and for the people of Pakistan are, indeed, profound.

That is why it is so important to provide this administration with flexible authorities to carry out its new strategy for Afghanistan and Pakistan, focusing on the strategic importance of Pakistan to the United States and to the world and focusing on the need for increased security, for increased governance and for development assistance to help us meet these vitally important goals.

Finally, the rule for this bill made in order a self-executing mechanism whereby House Resolution 1318, a bill to provide duty-free treatment for certain goods from designated Reconstruction Opportunity Zones, ROZs, in Afghanistan and Pakistan, will be incorporated into the text of H.R. 1886 even though that legislation has never even been marked up in committee.

While I support the concept of ROZs, this highly irregular maneuver is not the appropriate approach to take on this serious matter. Although we share the majority's goal, we believe that the Republican substitute that I will offer later in this debate affords the best means for the United States Congress and for the U.S. administration to work together to develop an integrated and effective assistance plan to advance our mutual interests in a democratic, stable and prosperous Pakistan that is a strong partner in the struggle against extremism and that maintains responsible controls over its nuclear weapons technology.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of our time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 3 minutes to the chairman of the Middle East and South Asia Subcommittee, the gentleman with whom I just traveled to Pakistan, the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN).

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the legislation before us. I want to thank Chairman BERMAN for allowing me to work closely with him on this bill and, more importantly, for his producing such an excellent piece of legislation.

Some may be surprised that I am an enthusiastic supporter of this bill to assist Pakistan. Over the years, I have been, unashamedly, one of the most persistent and aggressive critics of Pakistan's government and of the previous administration's policies for dealing with it. I remain deeply concerned about much of Islamabad's behavior, ranging from its cozy relations with native terrorist groups to its obsessive belief that India intends to devour Pakistan. None of Pakistan's governments have demonstrated a persuasive commitment to internal political or economic reform or to anything approaching real acceptance of the rule of law.

Pakistan has been, at best, an obstreperous partner on the subject of proliferation, and like many, I fail to understand what possible reason they could have that could justify the stonewalling we've faced regarding the A.Q. Khan proliferation network. I continue to believe that Pakistan's interest in F-16 aircraft is akin to a fetish.

Nevertheless, I am a strong supporter of the bill. Why? Very simply, it is time our partnership with Pakistan connects directly to the Pakistani people. Our previous strategy of depending wholly upon the government of Pakistan to fight a war most of its people detest is not sustainable, and I believe it has contributed significantly to the political instability in that country.

This bill sets the stage for the United States to work with Pakistan to promote long-term development and infrastructure projects in all areas of Pakistan, to establish a real counterinsurgency and counterterrorism strategy and to ensure U.S. access to individuals suspected of engaging in nuclear proliferation. This legislation will help Pakistan gain control of its under-governed areas, and it will ensure accountability for all U.S. assistance to Pakistan.

In addition to requiring the President to develop a real security strategy and to regularly report back to Congress on the effectiveness of our military assistance, the act prohibits such assistance until Pakistan demonstrates its commitment to shared security goals. There are also strong oversight and audit requirements for the State Department and for USAID, and there is a requirement for the U.S. Comptroller General to report independently on the effectiveness of our security assistance.

This bill is a tremendous step forward for us in our efforts to bring peace and stability to South Asia. I would hope that every Member would support this legislation. I thank the chairman.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), the ranking member of the Subcommittee on the Middle East and South Asia.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, first of all, let me congratulate our chairman on crafting a bill that, in large part, is very good. It increases aid to Pakistan by triple in some areas, and I think it's very positive. It deals with economic and humanitarian assistance that will help Pakistan build schools, roads and hospitals, and it will help Pakistan's economic infrastructure. All of that is good. I know that the President and the administration support that as well.

But unfortunately—here comes the “but” part—unfortunately, the chairman and our Democrat colleagues decided to load this bill up with ill-conceived provisions to micromanage U.S. security assistance to Pakistan, as the ranking member just said. This is not just my opinion. The Secretary of Defense, Mr. Gates, and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Mr. Mullen, wrote the Armed Services Committee last month. Here is what they said:

“The degree of conditionality and limitations on security assistance to Pakistan” in H.R. 1886 “severely constrains the flexibility necessary for the executive branch and the Department of Defense given the fluid and dynamic environment that exists in Pakistan.”

Mr. BERMAN. Will the gentleman yield? After yesterday, why wouldn't you?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I will in a minute. Do you remember last night when I asked you to yield? But that's okay. I will yield to you in a minute just to show you what kind of a guy I am.

Anyhow, this is a very difficult time over there. I would like to say to my chairman, if he could see this—Mr. Chairman, I hope that you can see this. It's very important that we look at the situation on the ground in Pakistan right now.

The green area is the area that the government controls. The brown area is the area that the Taliban controls. The tan area is where there is a strong Taliban presence. The yellow is where there are federally supported tribal areas. Of course, up here in the north is the blue North-West Frontier Province.

If we lose this, if we lose this here, you've got a heck of a problem in Afghanistan. That's the entire border with Afghanistan. If you lose that, then the President's goal to stabilize and to win the war in Afghanistan is going to go right down the tubes, and this micromanaging that you're doing in this bill is not going to be helpful.

Now, in the past, I have not agreed with Senator KERRY. In fact, I can't remember ever agreeing with Senator KERRY. But just to let you know that there is some bipartisan opposition, I want to read to you what he said. Senate Foreign Relations Chairman JOHN KERRY, Democrat of Massachusetts, the author of similar Senate legislation, Senate bill 962, said, it's “overly restrictive” and “counterproductive.”

“It sends a message in the Pakistani body politic that the people of Pakistan say, ‘Well . . . we're just doing their (U.S.) bidding, we're their lackeys, we're not in control.’”

I think that's counter to the kind of message that we want to send to Pakistan right now.

□ 1300

This is a very difficult time. This is not just a debate between the chairman and the ranking member and me. This is war and peace. It's the survivability of Pakistan as an independent country. It's winning or losing the war in Afghanistan. And we have to remember that Pakistan is a nuclear power. If the Taliban is successful in this area, not only will Afghanistan go down the tubes, but in likelihood, they will have control of some nuclear weapons. I know we've got precautions that are being taken to stop that. But in the event this takes place and we lose control of those nuclear weapons, we've got a real possible conflagration for the whole area in that part of the world.

So I would like to say to the chairman, and I hope in conference committee this is changed, that this micromanaging that you're doing to try the tell the Pakistani Government how to conduct its military operations in Pakistan, that that is limited or stopped.

Mr. BERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. BERMAN. This isn't for a polemic. It's really just to take what you said.

Number one, I agree completely with the urgency of it. If I didn't—we don't have a lot of money—we would not be authorizing these sums. We share your sense of the urgency of the situation.

Secondly, the letter you cite is correct. The letter is not correct, but the existence of the letter is correct. But it was addressed to a bill that had been introduced. Since the introduction of the bill, we have gone through elaborate negotiations with the House Armed Services Committee. To deal with some of the issues that letter was concerned about, we have worked through, both in the supplemental and in the authorizing committee—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. I will give the gentleman an additional 1 minute because we do want to clarify Senator KERRY's statements.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Let me just say to my colleague that there is an unnecessary limitation relating to Pakistan's F-16 program that could be dealt with by nonlegislative means, which you're dealing with that in this bill. It shows that there is no trust: a limitation on State Department-funded assistance unless Pakistan meets certain conditions relating to non-proliferation, counterterrorism, and other issues.

Mr. BERMAN. Good things.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I don't understand you.

Mr. BERMAN. Ensuring that the mission that we are equipping and training for is committed to a counterinsurgency, not an arms race in South Asia.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. All I can say, if you read the bill and you listen to the debate and listen to even what Senator KERRY says, with whom I don't agree with very much, you see that there is too much micromanaging in this bill.

This is a war over there, and we should be supporting our ally in every way possible so the Taliban isn't victorious.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield to someone who, like the previous speaker, the gentleman from Indiana, has spent a great deal of time in Pakistan looking at the situation. She chairs the Pakistan Caucus. She joined our congressional delegation in Pakistan in the month of April and speaks with great knowledge and experience on this subject, the gentlelady from Texas, Ms. SHEILA JACKSON-LEE, for 3 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I thank very much the distinguished chairman of the full committee for both his insight and his leadership, and my good friend, the subcommittee chairman, Mr. ACKERMAN, and my doubly good friend, Mr. BURTON, who was just on the floor of the House who shares with me this commitment to Pakistan.
