I think what we've done today is fair and honorable. We've talked about a problem. We've talked about a potential answer. First of all, an answer is that, since we do not have a workable program without bringing it back to the Congress, we ought to work with the administration. I think we've been responsible. But we have heard feedback from the administration, in a hearing, that said, we can't make that program work; we cannot make that program work.

So I think that what we are doing today is the fiscally responsible thing, to end the program, to end a program that is not going to work and was not designed to work, and then start back over, if we choose to, and put it into a workable mode. But only to have a false hope out there of something that cannot be sustained and something that the managers of the government cannot make work is a bad idea.

We've got another trillion-dollar deficit that is facing this country, another $1 trillion. We know who that is. That's Pin the Tail on the Donkey, Mr. Speaker. They are the ones responsible. They are the ones that are happy with that, and they are the ones that try to justify that.

Today we are coming together to find the solution to a long-term care issue in this country by talking about it, doing something that cannot be sustained, and then admitting, as Mr. BOUSTANY did, that we need to do something better. And we should not throw the idea away. Today we are going to vote on something that will do no further harm.

I applaud my colleague from Louisiana. Congressman Boustany, for introducing the bill. I appreciate him coming before us. I respect and appreciate my committee, the Rules Committee, and the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) for bringing this debate here in such an open and transparent process. I encourage a "yes" vote on the rule.

I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall 12, I was away from the Capitol due to prior commitments to my constituents. Had I been present, I would have voted "nay."

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent for a vote in the House Chamber today. Had I been present, I would have voted "nay" on rollcall vote No. 12.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, under rule XXII, clause 7(c), I hereby announce my intention to offer a motion to instruct on H.R. 3630, the conference report to extend the payroll tax, unemployment insurance, and SGR payments for doctors.

The form of the motion is as follows:

Mr. Michaud moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 3630 be instructed to recede from section 2123 of the House bill, relating to allowing a waiver of requirements under section 3304(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, including a requirement that all money withdrawn from the unemployment fund of the State shall be used solely in the payment of unemployment compensation.

PRESIDENT'S ACTIONS THREATEN OUR NATIONAL SECURITY

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, last Thursday, the President's plans were revealed to cut almost 80,000 army troops and 20,000 marines. This action will weaken our military's ability to protect us from increasing global threats.

This decision is another prime example of how the President and his administration continue to put American families at risk. Throughout our history, we have learned the consequences of downsizing our military, leading to surprise attacks.

I look forward to working with House Armed Services Committee Chairman BUCK McKeon to stop the execution of these drastic cuts which will decimate our military capabilities and threaten the security of America's servicememhers

I would also like to offer my sympathy to the family of Aiken Public Safety Master Corporal Sandra Rogers, who sacrificed her life while on duty Saturday.

In conclusion, God bless our troops and we will never forget September the 11th in the global war on terrorism.

TISSUE ENGINEERING AT TEXAS CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

(Mr. OLSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. OLSON. Mr. Speaker, over the past 50 years, engineers, scientists, and clinicians have made amazing advances in the design and implementation of artificial organs. However, despite these advances, the gap between the organ transplant and the number of available organs is widening.

The next great medical breakthrough will come from tissue engineering where organs are grown in a laboratory, in some cases with the patient's own cells, and then implanted.

My wife, Nancy, and I recently visited Texas Children's Hospital, one of the amazing institutions in the Texas Medical Center. By bringing scientists and engineers together who are developing tissue-engineered solutions with pediatric-focused clinicians, they spur more pediatric-focused research. Nancv and I are proud of the innovative work being done at Texas Children's Hospital. We saw firsthand that Texas Children's Hospital is leading the way on the most important component of this research—pediatric tissue engineering, new organs for kids.

Leaders lead, and Texas Children's is leading the way.

CELEBRATING THE 100TH ANNI-VERSARY OF THE GIRL SCOUTS OF THE USA

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to commend the Girl Scouts of the USA on its 52nd annual convention and its 100th anniversary. Since 1912, America's Girl Scouts have contributed significantly to the advancement of women in our society. For generations, Girl Scouts of America have actively promoted initiatives to help young women develop positive values, a sense of service, and other virtues that turn girls into productive contributors to their community, the country, and the world. Not only that, they've advanced the Nation by instilling courage, confidence, and character that young girls draw on to become leaders and make the world a better place.

Today, there are 3.2 million Girl Scouts-2.3 million girl members and 800,000 adult members working primarily as volunteers—all dedicated to inspiring generations of girls to reach for their goals and discover their full potential.

I want to commend each Girl Scout of each generation for their hard work and inspiring accomplishments, and I wish them well as the organization embarks on the next 100 years of service. Congratulations, Girl Scouts.

CELEBRATING AMERICAN HEART MONTH

(Mr. PAULSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAULSEN. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow is February 1, and I want to recognize the month of February as being American Heart Month. Contrary to popular belief, heart disease does not discriminate by gender. It is the number one killer of both men and women and accounts for nearly one-quarter of all deaths in the United States.

Every 34 seconds—every 34 seconds someone in America is stricken by a heart attack, and every 60 seconds, someone in this country will die as a result of heart disease.

As cochair of the Congressional Wellness Caucus, this is an issue that is near and dear to my heart-pun intended, Mr. Speaker. Living a healthy lifestyle is one of the easiest ways to reduce your risk of heart disease. It's as simple as abstaining from tobacco, maintaining your body weight, eating healthy, and exercising every day, along with regular visits to your doctor. We should all do our part to raise awareness, staying healthy and staying heart healthy.

MAKE IT IN AMERICA: MANUFACTURING MATTERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 5, 2011, the gentleman from California (Mr. GARAMENDI) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority

Mr. GARAMENDI. Mr. Speaker. I want to join with my colleagues this evening to take up an extremely important subject. This is about the heart and soul and the opportunity of the middle class of America. This is about, once again, rebuilding the great American manufacturing machine. Through the last century, America came to prominence for many reasons. But one of the most important was that we knew how to make things. This was the manufacturing heart of the world.

Just 20 years ago, nearly 20 million American workers were employed in manufacturing, and that gave rise to the great middle class and the stability of this Nation, and the opportunity for an individual to get an education, go into the manufacturing sector as an engineer or as a line worker and earn enough money to buy a home, take care of their family, and pay for their education-lead and live that good middle class life.

But that was yesterday. Today, we have about 11 million people in manufacturing. We've seen the decline of manufacturing in the United States keeping pace with the decline of the middle class.

It doesn't have to be that way. Tonight, my colleagues and I are going to talk about policies that we can put in place here in Congress—policies that we must put in place—to rebuild the American manufacturing machine.

Joining me is Mr. Blumenauer of Oregon, Ms. Jan Schakowsky from Illinois, and a couple other of my colleagues who are coming in a little later.

What this is all about is government policy. We already, on the Democratic side, have taken steps to begin the process of reversing this very awesome and dangerous trend. For example, a year ago December, we introduced and passed a piece of legislation that took away from American corporations over $12 billion of tax breaks that they received for off-shoring jobs. I know it's hard to believe, but they were actually getting a tax break for every job that they off-shored. Those days are significantly reduced. That's just but one example of what we have been working on.

I'd like now to just point out to you this logo. Those of us in the Democratic Party here in the caucus keep this on our desk, and we've got it on our coffee cups, to remind us that it is our mission in the Democratic Caucus to push for legislation to create American manufacturing jobs. And we're going to talk about some of these tonight.

Mr. Blumenauer from Oregon, I know that you're very interested in an important piece of this. I see you've got a bicycle on your lapel. Perhaps that has to do with transportation. And I will note that we do have a major transportation bill coming up here in the House later this week, or later, on the new transportation program for the next 6 years. I know you have some concerns about this, so please share those with us.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Thank you. I deeply appreciate your courtesy in permitting me to speak, and I appreciate your leadership in coming to the floor this evening and focusing on the importance of our being able to make goods and services in this country, particularly manufacturing. There is an element, as you referenced, that is the quickest way to jump-start the economy, that would be the largest source of family-wage jobs and which would tie into a whole host of contractors and subcontractors of people who make equipment operations in this country.

You're right. Our Republican colleagues have offered up a proposal to reauthorize the Surface Transportation Act. I'm pleased to at least see something come to the floor, because the act expired 850 days ago.

The notion of our transportation legislation used to be an area of bipartisan cooperation. It was something that people from both sides of the aisle worked on and came together to focus on how we strengthen our communities, how we put people to work and how we improve the environment, transportation, and mobility. Sadly, one of the casualties of the hyperpartisan environment was this notion that we worked together cooperatively in the legislation. My Democratic colleagues did not see the legislation. At first, I was concerned that they weren't brought in to be a part of this process that I always enjoyed as a minority party member back in the day. But now when we see the legislation, we understand perhaps why it wasn't as open and transparent.

This is a piece of legislation that for the next 5 years is going to dramatically underinvest in infrastructure. It is claimed that it's a $260 billion piece of legislation, but the revenues that they anticipate from oil and gas drilling in the Arctic are ephemeral. CBO tells us it may be 50, so it's going to have a $50 billion to $60 billion shortfall.

It guts environmental protections. It removes the power of local communities to plan cooperatively on this legislation and to be able to make sure that it meets their needs.

It is appalling to me, at a time when we are looking for ways to make things in America, to strengthen the manufacturing base, to move goods and services and put people to work at family wage jobs, that we are seeing a piece of legislation come forward that represents a failure of imagination. It doesn't even comport with what bipartisan commissions from the Bush administration recommended that it be funded at. It loses a chance for us to be able to have Americans deal with the steel, Americans deal with the equipment. Americans putting these pieces together. And over the course of the evening tonight we may be able to perhaps return to this, but I think it's important to look at this failure of vision, failure of will, failure of imagination in a way that's going to dramatically undercut the proposals to make it in America and put Americans to work.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Thank you very much, Mr. Blumenauer, and your work on this has been noted for a long, long time. You've been a leader across this Nation on providing all types of transportation well beyond just the bicycle, which you happen to have on your lapel. But this is a very important moment.

This week, this House, in the Transportation Committee, is taking up a long-term transportation bill. You've described all the shortcomings, but I do believe there's an alternative. Now, our colleague from Pennsylvania (Mr. Altmire) would like to talk about an alternative, which is basically the Democratic alternative.

And so, as we look at this transportation bill, is there some way that we can write a piece of legislation that would give us the infrastructure and the ability to move goods and services and people and, simultaneously, enhance American manufacturing?

Please share with us your thoughts.

Mr. ALTMIRE. I thank the gentleman from California for leading the hour and for yielding some time.

I come from a region of the country in western Pennsylvania—the Pittsburgh area and surrounding regionthat knows a little bit about manufacturing. And just as important, we know a little bit about the policies that have led to the loss of manufacturing, not just in western Pennsylvania, but in this country: policies that have given a preferred tax treatment for companies that outsource jobs, that transfer physical assets overseas and then can claim a tax deduction for the cost of moving expenses. We understand that those policies have failed. They do not lead, certainly, to job and economic growth. It's quite the opposite. But they do not help America become more competitive in the global economy, which is what this House is debating right now.

And, yes, I do serve on the Transportation Committee, and we are talking about a long-overdue reauthorization of the transportation funding reauthorization.

We also, in western Pennsylvania, we have locks and dams. The roads and bridges that we have are in serious decay. Our waterways infrastructure, just as an example, with locks and dams averages 85 years old. Locks and dams that were built to withstand 50 years before they would need to be replaced are now rated in imminent threat of failure by the Army Corps of Engineers

On the transportation side, we in the State of Pennsylvania have over 6,000 structurally deficient bridges. And in western Pennsylvania, my region, we have 1,000 structurally deficient bridges. Our infrastructure is literally crumbling around us, and we must do something about it. And that presents a wonderful opportunity for the Make It in America agenda, because when these roads and bridges and locks and dams are rebuilt, we want it to be American workers. And when the American taxpayer pays their tax dollars to fund infrastructure improvements, we want it to be done here in America. And we're going to talk more about that tonight.

I know the gentleman from California understands there's a bridge project, which is leading the discussion on this, across the country. I believe it's a $400 million renovation. The gentleman can correct me.

Mr. GARAMENDI. That's billion dollars, $4 billion.

Mr. ALTMIRE. A $4 billion bridge project. And the American taxpayer is funding the Chinese to give the steel to California to rebuild this bridge. And the infrastructure improvements that are being made, certainly we'll see some benefit, but those are American jobs. And American tax dollars are going overseas for something that ciently here at home.

So I know the gentleman wants to talk about that, but I appreciate his leadership.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Well, Mr. ALT-MIRE, you're raising the San Francisco Bay Bridge fiasco, which is one that gets the adrenaline flowing in California because the State of California decided they would put it out to bid. And there were two bids that came out by the same contractor. One was a bid that said the steel would be coming from China and the other was a bid that the steel would be coming from America. So that is not just the steel, but the formation of it and the structure itself.

So the Bridge Authority, in its infinite wisdom, decided to go with the 10 percent cheaper. Well, be careful if it's too good to believe. In this case what happened is the steel was manufactured in China. The bridge sections were welded together there. And it turns out that the welds were faulty; the inspections were faulty; the steel was not up to, and the overruns were well more than the 10 percent savings. Not only that, but you're employing some several thousand Chinese steelworkers. And mills in China are just revved up to get the steel going, and the mills in America shut down and American bridge and ironworkers were out of a job. We cannot let that happen anymore.

And so, as this transportation bill moves forward, one of the key elements in it—and this is beingproposed, I understand, by Mr. RAHALL, and I think you want to talk about this in more detail—is that, associated with the program, not only is there more revenue and better in dealing with the issues that Mr. Blumenauer raised, but also a very, very important policy that the money will be spent on American-made products.

Please continue.

Mr. ALTMIRE. I thank the gen-

And I would just say briefly, I am an original cosponsor of that bill. I don't know that my colleagues are. I presume they're cosponsors.

But it's very simple, actually. All it says is we're going to do this infrastructure. We're going to come up with the resources in this country to rebuild America, to invest in our infrastructure. It's long overdue in this country. And it just says, if you're going to do that, you have to seek out American workers and American products to do that. You have to use manufacturing from American workers to rebuild our infrastructure. It just sounds so simple. And our colleagues listening today and others might be surprised to know that that's not already in the law, that we would have a preference in this country for American workers and American steel and American goods to ments.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Well. that's exactly what we should do.

About 2 months ago, the gentlelady from Illinois spoke on the floor about a history lesson that I was unaware of. I'm not sure she wants to go into that today, but it dates back to the Presidency of George Washington. If she doesn't cover it, I'll remind her and we'll have her cover that piece of it. But I know she wants to jump in here. Illinois, a great manufacturing sector of America, as well as finance and commerce.

Ms. Schakowsky.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Well, I thank the gentleman not only for yielding, but for day after day, week after week coming to the floor and talking about something that resonates with every American, that in the United States of America it is time for us to bring jobs home and to have things that we make here stamped with "Made in America."

I also want to thank my colleague. Representative Blumenauer came to Chicago and convened, oh, it was maybe 100 people from all aspects of the transportation industry, contractors and actual workers, people who made the cement and people who were the engineers and would be involved in his project, Americans who are ready

And, yes, at the very dawn of this country we had an industrial policy. President George Washington made sure that we thought about and created a policy for not only importing from England, who we had just split from, but actually making things. He insisted that the suit that he wore for his inauguration be made in the United States of America. And it wasn't that easy to find that suit, but he did so that he would be wearing something made in America.

Mr. GARAMENDI. If I might interrupt just a second, I'm going to complete the story you told on the floor here just by my memory. If I'm wrong, please correct me.

But he told Alexander Hamilton to develop an industrial policy for Amer-

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. That's correct.

Mr. GARAMENDI. So those free traders who say get government out of the way need to go back to the very history, the very beginning of history of this where President George Washington told his Treasury Secretary to develop an industrial policy for America so that we can make it in America.

□ 1920

This is not new. We need policies that do it.

Please excuse me for interrupting.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Understanding the future of this country, that if we are going to compete in a global marketplace, we cannot just be a service could be done better and more cost effi- perform our infrastructure improve- economy. We can't just have people working and making beds and flipping hamburgers and selling in retail stores. All these industries, all these jobs could be better jobs if they were better paid.

We need to manufacture things. We are the center of innovation. We can educate our young people to become innovators. In fact, I had a meeting this week with educators and the founder of the Austin Polytechnical Academy where they are teaching young people how to work in advanced manufacturing and the new kinds of steel mills and talking about ownership of those plants.

I wanted to say just a couple of things about what the President raised at the State of the Union address:

So we have a huge opportunity, at this moment, to bring manufacturing back. But we have to seize it. Tonight, my message to business leaders is simple: Ask yourselves what you can do to bring jobs back to your country, and your country will do everything we can to help you succeed. My message is simple. It is time to stop rewarding businesses that ship jobs overseas, and start rewarding companies that create jobs right here in America.

I have a piece of legislation called Patriot Corporations of America that would reward those patriot companies that hire 90 percent of their workers as American workers. They would get tax breaks. They would be able to jump the line for government contracts, and it would be paid for by taking away those

I want to return to the issue of transportation that you raised, that my colleagues Mr. ALTMIRE and Mr. BLU-MENAUER were talking about. In fact, we have done something on transportation. My home State of Illinois, along with Iowa, Michigan, Missouri, California, and Washington State, received $782 million, my State did, for the purchase of 33 quick-acceleration locomotives and 120 bilevel passenger cars that will run on rail corridors in our States. Those trains will be designed to travel at more than 110 miles per hour between cities, will follow high-speed rail standards established by State-led Next Generation Equipment Committee. The committee will provide manufacturers with consistent specifications, reducing costs for manufacturers and customers. It is exactly the kind of coordinated government effort needed to address our transportation needs.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Excuse me. That is called the Patriot Act?

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. No. This is highspeed rail, money that has gone to States.

I want to point out that we hear a lot from the Republicans about how the President hasn't created jobs, which, of course, he has—3 million new jobs, 22 consistent months of private sector jobs. But Wisconsin, I would like to point out, refused to accept the money from the Federal Government for highspeed rail, $810 million to construct a new high-speed rail line between Milwaukee and Madison. As a consequence, a company called Talgo America, which was going to actually build trains in Milwaukee-and the City of Milwaukee invested over $10 million to prepare a facility for Talgo. The company hired about 100 union workers, and 80 percent of those had been out of work for more than 2 years. That factory is going to close down this year because Governor Walker told the Federal Government that Wisconsin did not want the $110 million in Federal investment. We are hoping that that company is going to move to Illinois to build those trains where we are more than willing to move ahead.

What I am saying here is that, in a partnership between government at all levels, Federal and State, and partnerships with private industry, like a company like Talgo, we can create millions of jobs and billions of dollars in economic activity in this country. Why we would see a reluctance, as Mr. BLU-MENAUER pointed out, by the Republicans to fill this gap that we have between our need for infrastructure development and the millions of people who want to work, to make our country so much better and stronger and safer so we don't have the bridges collapsing-Mr. ALTMIRE mentioned the thousands of bridges in his State that are not safe. We have thousands of them in Illinois as well. We can do this. We can do this together. Why the reluctance to partner, I can't understand. We can make it in America and America can make it in the world, continuing as a world leader.

I thank you.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Well, don't leave us, because we are going to go around on this subject again.

Mr. BLUMENAUER, you were kind of anxious to jump in with some ideas.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I really appreciate what my colleagues have focused on.

Mr. ALTMIRE referenced the infrastructure deficit in this country. The American Society of Civil Engineers does a 5-year assessment. The latest assessment gave American infrastructure grades of C, C minus, D, with a total unmet need over the next 5 years of $2.2 trillion just to bring it up to standard.

They have done another interesting study talking about the cost of not dealing with the improvements. Hundreds of billions of dollars of cost are going to be visited upon the American public because we don't bring our water infrastructure up to standard.

I see from my friend from western Pennsylvania that we leak from our underwater pipes in this country 6 billion gallons a day, enough to fill 9,000 olympic-sized swimming pools that would stretch from the Capitol, where we are standing, to my friend's district in western Pennsylvania. We can do better.

The notion of talking about the consequences of not investing in American companies—I appreciate both of you talking about that bridge segment. The $400 million that was invested for an inferior product was money that didn't deal with our manufacturing infrastructure here. It meant not only we were giving money to our competitors, but there were thousands of American workers who didn't have the work and the suppliers and subcontractors that would have been part of the manufacturing chain.

In my district, we are constructing the first American-built streetcar in 58 years. These streetcars are going to be running in Portland, Oregon, in their streetcar system. It is going to be in Tucson, with our dear friend Gabby Giffords in the system she fought for, and in Washington, DC. It is not just that these streetcars are manufactured in Portland, Oregon, but there are dozens of subcontractors' manufacturing operations throughout the Midwest that get components to build as part of this.

It is part of the virtuous cycle where, when we focus, when we invest in making it in America, we are rebuilding and renewing our communities, meeting vast unmet needs that will not just revitalize the economy but make our communities safer and healthier. Remember, each billion dollars that is invested in infrastructure creates 30,000 jobs in America.

We can make it in America. We should start with rebuilding and renewing America.

Mr. GARAMENDI. And the transportation system goes with it.

Mr. BLUMENAUER, you are rightfully talking about the glories of Portland, Oregon; however, I want to bring to your attention that streetcars are now being manufactured in Sacramento, California, near my district. I will not let you get away with boosterism without mentioning my own State and what is happening there.

□ 1930

Now, the reason that both of these plants are operating goes back to a very important action that the Democrats took here in January of 2009. Shortly after President Obama came into office, the American Recovery Act was voted on. I wasn't here at the time, but my colleagues on the Democratic side did. You voted for the American Recovery Act; and in the American Recovery Act; there was a provision for streetcars and rail systems, locomotives, that they be manufactured in America.

The direct result of that—not speaking of Oregon, because I don't know—but in California the direct result of that is that one of the largest manufacturing companies in the world, Siemans, came to Sacramento, built a factory to manufacture streetcars, and now they're producing eight locomotives for Amtrak as a direct result of a specific provision built into the American Recovery Act, the stimulus bill, that said you get the money but you've got to spend it in America on American-made products. That's what we need to do.

Joining me now, I see my colleague in part of the East-West program here, my colleague from New York (Mr. Tonko). Welcome.

Mr. TONKO. Thank you, Representative GARAMENDI. Thank you for bringing us together for a very thoughtful hour of discussion about the need to invest in America's infrastructure.

What I like about the comments made here are that we have the tools within our grasp to make a difference, to invest in the infrastructure, whether it's safety on the highways, whether it's dealing with environmental soundness as an outcome, by promoting public transportation, or by enhancing energy efficiency at our water treatment facilities, which is something I worked on when I was president and CEO in NYSERDA, New York State Energy Research and Development Authority.

But prime in the focus of this investment in infrastructure is an outcome that speaks to the reigniting of the American Dream. We have work to do.

This dream should not be beyond the grasp of Americans, certainly not beyond the grasp of America's middle class. The underpinnings of the support for reigniting the American Dream, embrace small business, which is the pulse of American enterprise that speaks to the moms-and-pops that raised a family based on a business that they developed, and they can feed this plan to rebuild America's infrastructure.

It's also driven by the dynamic of entrepreneurs, the doers, the believers, the dreamers. Those pioneers that made things happen in this country are out there ready to respond to a present-day, modern-day, cutting-edge retrofit of infrastructure in this country.

It speaks to empowering the middle class.

Those three legs of the stool are what reigniting the American Dream is all about. We have work to do. Unfortunately, it's not being done in this Chamber. We need a progressive agenda, embraced aggressively, to bring about an outcome that grows jobs driven by reigniting the American Dream.

I represent a district in the upstate reaches of New York that was impacted in 1987 by the collapse of the interstate highway bridge, brought down by the flood waters of April of '87, equal to the flow of Niagara Falls. We lost, I believe, 10 lives in that incident. We saw what economic crippling occurred in that given region. You could not transport your products, the area lost volumes of visitors, and there was an economic consequence to that failed infrastructure caused by Mother Nature. There are samplings of that around this Nation.

That incident and the data that are assembled based on similar experiences should motivate us, inspire us to invest in our infrastructure. Water, an essential for industry, for residents, water efficiency, energy efficiency as you're dealing with water treatment facilities, can be upgraded in a way that addresses the bigger picture of energy policy inextricably linked to the economic comeback, linked to the grasping of the American Dream.

When you look at a number of our communication and energy retrofits that are required to provide for energy self-sufficiency for enabling cottage industries to be developed in remote places, if you broadband out to those areas, great things can happen.

So, Representative GARAMENDI, my statement is let's reignite the American Dream. We have work to do; and we can do it through small business, entrepreneurs, and a thriving middle class. The thriving middle class is the pulse of the Nation. If the middle class is doing well, America does well.

Any democracy around the world is most effective, most strong if it has a thriving middle class. Let's go forward with the agenda. It's possible. We have the intellect. Let's embrace America's intellect as the intellectual capacity, and let's get it done.

Mr. GARAMENDI. You've used some very, very challenging words for us, reigniting the American Dream.

We have an opportunity. It's this week. This House is going to take up in the Transportation Committee an extraordinarily important bill that speaks to the transportation infrastructure. The way that bill is currently structured, A, it's underfunded—it can only add to the deficit or not fulfill its mission and its purpose—and, B, has nowhere in it requirements that will cause jobs to be in America.

For example, here's what we presently do. We presently use our tax dollars. We send them overseas to buy buses and rail cars and ferry boats and the like. When this bill leaves that committee, and certainly if it were to leave this floor, it must have a makeit-in-America provision so that our tax dollars are spent on American-made equipment, buses, trains, steel, bridges, whatever. Why in the world we would export our money and our jobs is beyond my understanding.

But the bill as presently composed has no make-it-in-America provisions. It can be done. Those ideas have been presented.

I'm going to take just one more second and put up one more of my favorite charts, which happens to be my legislation, H.R. 613. It simply says: "If you're goingto use American taxpayer money to do a high-speed rail or build a bridge or a bus, then it's going to be made in America."

Mr. ALTMIRE, you were talking about this earlier. Let's reignite the American Dream and build the middle class by making things in America.

Mr. ALTIMRE. I thank the gentleman.

The gentleman leads me directly into what I was going to talk about. I wanted to make a couple of points.

One is we talked about the transportation bill, which we're going to be debating in the Transportation Committee, later on the floor of this House. maybe as soon as next week. Funding is a key issue. We've all referenced funding—where is the money going to come from-and that's a discussion that we're going to have as a country. Justifiably, we've had hours, days, months of discussion and intense debate in this Chamber and in both sides of this Capitol and around the country about spending, about what are our national priorities. Have we been spending money inefficiently? Are there things that we can redirect spending towards or away from, whatever the case may be?

But with regard to infrastructure, when I'm back home and I talk about spending, I talk about setting priorities, and I use the example that any family in America is going to understand, any business in America: if you have a leak in the roof that you discover, that leak is not going to fix itself.

Mr. GARAMENDI. How did you know my problem?

Mr. ALTMIRE. Right. You have to find a way to pay for it because it's only going to get worse if you ignore the problem.

Now, you might say as a family, you know what, we can't take the kids out for that steak dinner. We can't go out to see the movies this month like we were talking about. But we have to find a way to fix this leak because it's only going to get more expensive, it's only going to get worse, and it's only going to create more damage if we ignore that problem.

I talked earlier about the state of our roads and bridges, the state of our locks and dams; and the gentleman's chart shows the first word on that chart is "airports." Our aviation infrastructure in this country is as out of date as any other developed nation on the planet.

□ 1940

Our air traffic control system literally operates with 1950s technology.

One of the debates that we are having with infrastructure and aviation is this NextGen system, which is where we would utilize what has become commonplace everywhere else in the country: the system of satellites and GPS. It just makes common sense. The reason we have such bottlenecks at the major hub airports in the country, which affect everybody in this country, is that even if you don't live in that city, you're affected by it because that plane is going to be coming to your city; and if it's delayed, it affects you. We have those delays worse than anywhere else on the planet because of the state of our infrastructure with aviation and with airports.

It touches every type of transportation infrastructure you can think of—waterways, rail, roads, bridges. It is critically important.

This is a tremendous opportunity for America. In using American workers, in using American resources, we're all going to win from this; and that's why I support the gentleman's plan.

Mr. GARAMENDI. I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania very much.

It's about jobs, isn't it?

Mr. ALTMIRE. Yes.

Mr. GARAMENDI. At the end of the day, it's about jobs.

Those jobs, if they're in the manufacturing sector, will be middle-American jobs, and it will reignite the American Dream. Men and women can see the opportunity. They can see the opportunity to buy a house, to educate their kids, to take care of their families, to put food on the table. That's the American Dream, and we intend to reignite it.

Ms. Schakowsky, if you would carry on here, you have more things, and I know you were talking earlier about some of them. So, please.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I wanted to go back to this theme of a robust middle class. It's really in the manufacturing sector. It's really making it in America that built the middle class in our country. Yet there are people—and you hear it all the time—who say, you know what, these jobs are never going to come back. Just forget about it. We're not going to do this kind of manufacturing in America anymore.

Why would that be?

That is a myth that we have to bust. Of course, we can make it in America. We're not going to necessarily see factories where people are doing those kinds of repetitive jobs, and we don't want to see those dirty smokestacks come back. It's the vast manufacturing, the manufacturing for the 21st century and beyond, of clean jobs and of creating energy-storing batteries that we need and that we can export all around the world—the wind turbines that need to be built all over the world. Those innovators are here. Instead of turning it over to some other country—to China or some other country to then make the stuff or create the supply chain, we should make it right here. With transportation costs going up as they have been, it's actually becoming economically advantageous to make it in America. That's why manufacturers are actually coming back, and we want to encourage that at every step

So the idea that somehow making it in America—factory work—is passé is absolutely wrong. That's what the Democrats have been saying, and that's what our Make It in America agenda is all about, that we are going to be the creators, the thinkers, the engineers, the factory owners.

And do you know what? We actually have a succession problem in the factories that we have right now. Instead of thinking, in order to make it, you have to go into the financial sector, where absolutely nothing is made, we have to encourage our young people: go into business, the business of making things. Start figuring out how you can be a leader in a manufacturing plant, in the manufacturing process, which is going to lead this country in the 21st century.

It is all there, waiting for us, if government will be a partner, not just creating the jobs but partnering with the private sector to make it all happen.

Mr. GARAMENDI. That history of partnership goes back to the very first President of this Nation. George Washington set up an industrial policy: Mr. Hamilton, Go out and develop an industrial policy because we're going to make things in America.

So at the very earliest day of this Nation, government and the private sector became partners to make things in America and to make a great manufacturing sector.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. President George Washington knew if we didn't do that, that we would not see the United States of America becoming a world leader or even putting its own people to work and being able to grow.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Mr. Tonko, a few moments ago, you talked about reigniting the American Dream. So how are you going to do that?

Mr. TONKO. I think there are a great number of things that we need to invest in in order to make it happen; but let me preface that response with a description, if you will, of the 21st Congressional District.

As I stated earlier, we are a chain of mill towns given birth to by the Erie Canal. The waterways of the 21st Congressional District can easily be defined as the ink that wrote the history of the Industrial Revolution. They were the gateway to the Westward Movement. What you had there were ideas from people working in factories, oftentimes the immigrant patterns entering this Nation, the very first stages of immigrants. So that American Dream was ignited there in a scenario that was very much deemed rags to riches. People came here with nothing but an idea and the hope to build for their families. They provided the fuel that created the Industrial Revolution, and so America became this promised land.

Our best days lie ahead of us. We, as a sophisticated society, based on our humble roots, developed some of the products that primary are nowmanufactured in other nations; but we need, as a sophisticated society, to step up to the plate and do those product deliveries now that are not yet on the radar screen. We have it within our intellect to be able to do that; but when it comes to the infrastructure, we need capital; we need physical infrastructure; and we need human infrastructure. That's what we're looking to do with our Make It in America agenda, produced by the Democratic Caucus in this House, and we need action on these legislative items in order to make things happen.

Let me just close with this statement for now.

My district was ravaged by storms this past August. In late August, we were hit with Irene and Lee, and the infrastructure was devastated. People lost homes, homes that were entirely swept into the waters. People are still repairing homes that we hope will be recoverable. The infrastructure needs of taking a navigation channel like the Erie Canal and retrofitting it for flood design purposes so that it can be there as flood control infrastructure is an enormous mission. It's not just the engineers and the teams of construction workers who will put this together. You will need hydrogeologists to determine what the best patterns are. If we're going to simply build bridges at the same height and at the same span as currently exists when all the forecasts are that you're going to have greater amounts of water flowing, based on historic data now that are available, then that is foolish government. We need smart government. People want thoughtful government.

There is a way to embrace a recovery for these flood-torn areas and to rebuild their infrastructure by reaching to all elements of manufacturing and intellect that can build an agenda, that builds this Nation—and that is going back to our pioneer roots, to a rags-toriches scenario that is driven by the initial American Dream. We need to reignite that American Dream. We need to do it with innovation, education, higher education, and research, research into how best to do things so that we are ahead of the curve, not constantly reacting to issues with a Band-Aid approach.

Mr. GARAMENDI. We have work to

Mr. TONKO. We have work to do.

Mr. GARAMENDI. We need to put these things in place.

Let's see, we've had the Northeast, New York. We've had the Midwest. We've had western Pennsylvania. How about Texas? Let's go to Texas.

SHEILA JACKSON LEE, thank you for joining us tonight.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. It's a pleasure to join the gentleman from California and my colleagues from the great State of Oregon, the great State of Illinois, and the great State of New York. I heard earlier this evening that it's okay to say happy new year up until the end of January, which happens to be today; and I certainly wanted to start the year off right by joining you again and really pleading with our colleagues.

I just want to briefly talk about what my good friend from New York mentioned with regard to reigniting the American Dream, which I am zealously advocating, really, across my State and across the Nation; and I am adding to that: building ladders and removing obstacles.

I also see the work of the gentleman from California as really focusing in on an age-old problem. I want to call up a dear friend who is the former chairman of the Transportation Committee, Chairman Oberstar.

□ 1950

Just a few years ago he watched his own community have a horrific incident that many of us in America continue to be shocked at, the collapsing of a bridge, the literal collapsing of a bridge and, of course, there was loss of life, devastation and fear, and an economic loss for people who could not be connected. That's not the America we know and love.

So why this is so important—and let me just suggest that there are so many variables—there are thousands of soldiers coming home from Iraq who are willing to sacrifice their lives for us, and those who have come back are now seeking opportunity. That's another component of individuals who want to work, although this administration, this Congress has been excellent in veterans preferences and seeking to employ them.

Every one of them will say they don't want a handout. They have been able to do massive work overseas that gives them the skills so they could be engaged in the reconstruction, the infrastructure work of airports, highways, high-speed rail, trains and transit, and we can give them the opportunity of reigniting the American Dream.

We know that what we must do is build on the working class and middle class. We must build on opportunities for young people who may choose a 4-year college, but as the President said last Tuesday, may choose a community college that gets them into job skills. So most economists will say that this is not a time to be, in essence, Scrooge.

When times are hard, you invest in human capital. And as someone who represents one of the largest airports in the country, George Bush Intercontinental Airport, and is also in a community that has Ellington Airfield and Hobby Airport, it is truly key to be able to work on the infrastructure. As someone who comes from the coastal areas—and I want to present to the gentleman my legislation that talks about deficit reduction and restoration of coastal areas using the energy industry—but looking at it from a positive sense, all dealing with manufacturing, because manufacturing does matter.

Let me just say this in conclusion: Our friends or those who want to speak negatively are absolutely wrong that we don't have the genius of manufacturing. In fact, I can document that factories are coming back to America, that the high cost of labor for our friend and sometimes challenging ally, China, is going up, that the cost of having factories there is difficult, and there are obstacles such that now our American companies who are even thinking of going are looking at the agility of the skills of American workers.

You cannot underestimate the genius of American workers, the enthusiasm of American workers, the willingness to go into factories, the ability to build them, and I take on anyone who has suggested that our logistical or supply chain does not work. Frankly, let some of our military personnel who are now coming back, who are going into civilian life, let them show you how to do a logistical supply chain.

So I believe that manufacturing is here to stay. Just a news clip today talked about an individual who, with tears in his eyes, was talking about bringing back manufacturing of furniture in the Carolinas. I think in this instance it was North Carolina. He was excited. He was emotional about the fact that his father had left him this legacy. He was bringing it back.

Despite some of our friends who are talking about they can't make certain iPhones here in the United States, I frankly believe that our technology sector is alive and well, and that we're going to be building more, and certainly the infrastructure begs out, in tribute to our dear friend, Chairman Oberstar, and many others who have talked for years, as I joined him, and as I join my colleagues, to say that I believe we live in the greatest country in the world. I believe that there is nothing better than reigniting that American Dream, and I believe that once we move the obstacles and build the ladders, we'll be building airports. We'll be talking about high-speed rail.

Thank you to this administration for not abandoning it. We'll be doing the trains, we'll be doing the infrastructure, and we'll be putting people back to work. I can't imagine a better way to start off the new year.

I must leave this in tribute to a pastor's words I heard on Sunday: 2012 will be the year of uncommon favor. That's because we are not going to give up on the American worker and this great Nation.

I thank the gentleman for coming to the floor and allowing me to share with him.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Ms. SHEILA JACK-SON LEE, thank you very much for once again joining us in these dialogues and how America can make it. Certainly if we make it in America, we'll be well on our way. Manufacturing does matter.

Just this last weekend I was in one of the small communities of California, the town of Colusa, very small, 6,000 people. There was a General Motors-Chevy-GMC truck dealer that came up to me—it was a crab feed—and we were chatting, and he came up and he said, I just want you to know that I'm still in business.

I thought about that, well, that's a strange way to start a conversation. I'm still in business. And I said, it was President Obama that made a very courageous decision to bail out General Motors, and in doing so, not only does General Motors survive, but maybe tens of thousands of the supply chain manufacturers survived. And way off in California, a little town, up in the Sacramento Valley, an auto dealer said, I'm still in business.

He would have been gone, along with tens of thousands of other manufacturers and hundreds of thousands of jobs, if President Obama, together with this House, with the American Recovery Act providing the money, President Obama had not stood forward and said, I will not allow General Motors and Chrysler to die, not on my watch. Those two companies are now in business and profitable.

There is a partnership that needs to exist throughtime, beginning with George Washington and carried through, as you described the Erie Canal which was, what, 30 years after that, a partnership of business and private sector working together to create opportunity, to create the American Dream. Our task is to reunite it.

Mr. TONKO, why don't you pick it up.
Mr. TONKO. Representative
GARAMENDI, thank you again for bringing us together.

But when you speak to the history of the Erie Canal, it was devised because of economic tough times. This Nation was struggling at the moment, and we responded by building. We didn't walk away and cut our way through; we built our way to opportunity and prosperity.

And so as we look at the present moment, reigniting the American Dream begins with those underpinnings of support, investing in capital infrastructure so that there are the dollars available for research and retrofitting America's business community, its manufacturing base, which was for far too long ignored. It also requires the investment in human infrastructure. It is totally unacceptable to develop jobs in our Nation that will grow as we develop automation with advanced manufacturing, to not invest in the nurturing of skill sets within the American worker, totally unacceptable to not do that.

So I tell people now, as we tour with our roundtables on manufacturing, that there are thousands of jobs across this country waiting to be filled because there is an automated process that has been engaged in for manufacturing. And I have, at my community college base, training that is done for automated manufacturing.

I have within my technical 4-year college base and grad school base in the region—RPI and Hudson Valley Community College come to mind. But they allow, through incubator programs, to develop automated response to a particular manufacturer that we visited, Kintz Plastics. And Win Kintz reminded us that he has now been able to compete internationally by not necessarily doing it cheaper but smarter, and that's what the tools we require here are all about.

It's putting the capital, human, physical infrastructure demands into working order so that we're realistic about providing hope to America's working families, all by reigniting the American Dream. And yes, Representative GARAMENDI, we have work to do. Let's do it in this Chamber.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Mr. Tonko, thank you very much for your leadership and your steadfastness on this issue of rebuilding the American middle class. The President spoke here less than 2 weeks ago on the issue of manufacturing, on the issue of jobs and making it in America. We need to follow up with that.

We have an opportunity this week, and I would ask my Republican colleagues to pay attention to what we're saying here, in the transportation bill that should be marked up, put together in the Transportation Committee, there is an enormous opportunity to put in place policies that allow the American manufacturing sector to thrive as we spend our tax money on infrastructure issues, on buses, on trains, highways, and bridges. All of those essential transportation needs we ought to couple that with the notion that that money must be spent on American-made equipment.

It's a simple concept, but it is so powerful and it will create jobs, and that is our task, to reignite the American Dream, to put in place all of the ladders so that the middle class can once again succeed, eliminate the barriers that exist and get on with building America. Make it in America so that America can make it.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I believe my hour is nearly up. I thank my colleagues for joining us, and I turn this over to our Republican colleagues and hope that they will be responsive to our plea that we use the transportation cars and light trucks would have to inbill to make it in America. crease their fuel economy to 54.5 miles

I yield back the balance of my time.

REGULATIONS STIFLING AMERICAN ECONOMY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 5, 2011, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CARTER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, that was an interesting conversation we just heard. I was very impressed by that. And I agree, we need to expand infrastructure. Everything that was said there is important.

You know, I've been talking on the floor of the House about regulations recently; and as I listened to my Democratic colleagues talk about infrastructure, I was reminded that we have a bunch of new regulations on cement that are going to drive our cement industry out of the country. It's going to be a little tough to build bridges without cement. We have moratoriums on oil and gas. Asphalt is made with oil, so we need to think out these projects as we go forward.

Today I'm going to talk about some regulations, and I'm very grateful to be joined by numerous of my colleagues; and we are going to be talking about some new regulations that are going to attempt to be imposed upon an industry that is struggling and will, quite honestly, be a setback, in my opinion.

I'm going to start off by recognizing Mr. Guinta and letting him tell us his comments on the subject of the new 54-mile-per-gallon rules that are being proposed for our automobiles.

Mr. GUINTA. I thank the gentleman from Texas, and I thank you for your hard work in trying to protect small job creators, not just in your State but all across the country, in your proposal and amendments and legislation to try to address what I think is an unjust, overregulated approach to negatively affecting not just the auto industry but also the consumer.

Earlier last year, the EPA and California regulators, of course under the guidance and direction of President Obama and his White House, proposed the most expansive regulations ever on the auto industry. Estimates suggest that the cost will be $157 billion. This is at a time, I remind you, when we have a debt and deficit of about $16 trillion and $1.3 trillion to $1.5 trillion, respectively. This is not a time when this administration should impose greater oversight, greater regulatory challenges to job creators in America.

I want to remind those who are listening, as I take a look at an article written in The Wall Street Journal back in September of last year, September 14, it talks specifically about this piece of legislation and how new cars and light trucks would have to increase their fuel economy to 54.5 miles a gallon. And the White House officials actually commented in that article. They commented that the proposed fuel efficiency target could raise average vehicle prices by about $3,000. This administration acknowledges that their overregulation will increase the cost of an average vehicle by $3,000.

Now, if you think about that, when an individual goes to purchase or lease a vehicle, they sometimes use a 3-year window, maybe a few more months, 39 months, and I find it interesting that we are about to extend the payroll tax for the balance of the year, which would give the average American $1,000 back in their pocket. And the Obama administration would like to take that $1,000 from the consumer pocket and put it back into the coffers of the Treasury.

I find that bad public policy, to say the least, not in the direction of trying to reduce our debt and deficit and have a pro-growth economy, and I think it stifles the auto industry. And most importantly, it stifles small business owners across the country.

I just want to share with you, briefly, statistical information about this industry in my State of New Hampshire. We have about 800 different businesses within this industry; 25,000 employees in New Hampshire, alone, that would be affected by this regulation.

I'm concerned about the job loss around the country. I'm concerned about small business owners having access to capital, being able to continue to survive through this down economy. And I'm concerned about those employees who work for those job creators, our friends and our neighbors. They're not Democrats or Republicans or Independents. They're Americans, and they're demanding that this Congress stop the regulatory oversight from President Obama and his administration and the EPA. We are trying to do that on behalf of the American public. I think it is a smart way for us to give back to not just the consumer but the job creators who we so desperately rely on for a pro-growth economy.

The final point that I would like to make is that, in addition to the $3,200 estimated increase in the cost of the vehicle acknowledged by the President and his White House, this regulation would also essentially take the $15,000 vehicle out of existence. We would not be able to, as consumers, access an affordable vehicle for ourselves or for anybody who's purchasing a vehicle, for that matter. The very middle class that our friends on the other side of the aisle talk about preserving and protecting are being targeted by this regulation.

It's time that the country hears more about how this administration chooses to take money from one entity and give it to another. They're taking money from hardworking Americans and putting it in the coffers of the Treasury so they can expand the size and scope of government.

The people of New Hampshire have had enough. They've sent me here to fight for those middle class families, those hardworking job creators who in New Hampshire provide 25,000 jobs in this industry. And I will continue to work with you and anybody else in this body who shares the opinion of enough with regulation. Let the free market work. Let the consumer win for a change.

I thank you for yielding to me and, again, I look forward to working with you on future legislation that you seek to address on the floor of this House.

Mr. CARTER. I thank you, and I agree with absolutely everything you've said. I think it's a real eyeopener to realize that we sit here and we have a State of the Union address where the middle class was referenced, I don't know, a dozen times probably, how it is all about the middle class and how we are going to do things for the middle class. I guess we can start off by saying that the first thing we are going to do is raise the price of a car for you by $3,200, not because we have to, not because it fits our plan of coming up with fuel standards, which we had in place before the EPA in California interfered, no. We're going to do it now even though it was supposed to be 3 years from now that we start looking at these standards, and we're going to take $3,200 out of your pocket when you buy that first car. That doesn't seem to be looking out for the middle class.

I think this House ought to be looking out for the middle class. I think they ought to be looking out for the buyer. I think we ought to realize that in a time when we have an industry which we had to pour literally billions and billions and billions of dollars in to save—and we've done it. We've got it, at least we hope, back on its feet—and then all of a sudden we impose standards upon that industry which, quite honestly, will probably harm them. you raise the price of your product $3,200 that you weren't expecting to raise, you're not ready for that kind of problem.

Finally, and most importantly for Texans, the pickup truck capital of the world, I'm told this will eliminate SUVs and pickup trucks. And them's fightin' words where we come from. So that's the other thing that we ought to be concerned about. The lifestyle of Americans is going to be changed by requiring standards that some certain vehicles, quite honestly the engineers tell us, just can't get there. We're not thinking these things out. We're too busy. There's too many people around this town that are too busy trying to get the government in control of your entire life that they're not thinking out what they're doing. Thank you for your comments.

a ting the most expensive regulations ever. You get three different agencies sometimes setting different standards, creating uncertainty in the auto indus-

My co-partner of sorts from Ohio (Mr. Austria) is here. He and I have been in this battle a good while, and we have done some stuff on the Appropriations Committee to raise this issue. We've got folks who came here ahead of you, but we're kind of co-chairing this thing, so you can make an opening if you would like, STEVE.

Mr. AUSTRIA. I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding, and I thank Congressman Carter for his hard work and commitment with this very important issue, in addressing this very important issue that directly impacts hardworking Americans. Judge Carter and I have worked on an amendment together in committee to try to stop these duplicate government tasks that are going on right now. And I think you've done a good job in articulating the importance of having that amendment.

I can tell you, Judge, I fly home every weekend to Ohio, back to my district, number one, to be home with my family, but also to be out in the district and get what I call my reality check, to talk to the hardworking Ohioans, the small businessowners and farmers. And like many other Members of Congress, I do town halls, and I attend different events and meetings.

What I do hear from those hardworking families and those small businesses is that, number one, we have got to stop this out-of-control spending. And part of that includes wasting hardearned taxpayers' dollars because of duplicate services that are going on with different agencies in the government; and, number two, we've got to get government out of the way. We've got to stop these unnecessary, burdensome regulations that are hurting small businesses and that are killing jobs.

Back in 1975, Congress, this body, tasked NHTSA, the National Highway Transit Service Authority, under the Department of Transportation, that agency, with the task of setting those standards. And those standards were called the Corporate Average Fuel Economy standards, or the CAFE standards. And they were enacted, again, in 1975 with accountability and transparency with Congress to gradually and responsibly increase the fuel economy in America. And they've been reinforced and raised by Congress repeatedly, as recently as 2007.

And what we saw shortly after this administration came in was that EPA expanded its authority to start setting its own standards. And then they expanded it even further allowing California to create its own State standards. And what's happened here is we've created duplicate services, wasting taxpayers' hard-earned dollars creating the most expensive regulations ever. You get three different agencies sometimes setting different standards, creating uncertainty in the auto industry, and raising the cost of vehicles for hardworking families to pay for this, hurting our small businesses and killing jobs.

Last year, we saw the EPA, again without authorization from Congress, propose rules to regulate the fuel economy of cars and light trucks for model years 2017 to 2025. This is last year, in 2011 they're doing this. They increased the required average fuel economy over 54 miles per gallon. Because the EPA is not accountable to Congress for this, because they don't have any substantive guidance on how to create these regulations and they don't have to follow the same rules that were put in place, they're not required to take into account factors like job losses. We're going through one of the most difficult economies we've seen in decades. Unemployment is at one of the highest levels it's been, and they don't have to include job losses or consumer demand or safety. It became very apparent to myself and many of our colleagues that these regulations are out of touch with the American people. They're out of line with Main Street. USA, with small businesses that are the backbone of this economy. And in some cases, they're irresponsible.

I was proud to join you last July in offering an amendment during our full committee consideration of the Interior, Environment and Related Agencies bill that simply just put a 1-year time-out on the EPA's rulemaking process so that Congress and our constituents could have time to determine what's the most responsible path here to move forward. And the amendment also prevented the EPA from granting permission to California to create their own regulations, State regulations, that would lead to an impossible patchwork of State laws. So what this could lead to is, think about this, if you have an activist State, they could actually hijack Federal policy with regulations they're putting in place.

Our amendment was included in the Interior appropriations bill. It was reported out of committee. I joined you again in October, Judge CARTER, in sending a letter to the committee, along with 64 of our colleagues, bipartisan support on this, encouraging that this amendment be included as part of the final appropriations package that passed last year.

Unfortunately, this administration and their allies in the Senate, the Democrat majority, blocked this commonsense amendment, leaving the EPA with the authority to go out and continue to move forward with this harmful and ill-conceived rule.

I think the facts are, and you pointed this out, number one, it's the most expensive regulation ever on the auto industry, $210 billion in new regulations. It's going to raise the average cost of a vehicle for a hardworking family by roughly $3,200. It's going to regulate cheaper vehicles that are under $15,000 pretty much out of existence. And the EPA has already wasted over $24 million creating these duplicate regulations.

This is out of control what's happening right now. It's a waste of the taxpayers' dollars. And we have to, at some point, understand what's happening here. We're accountable for the taxpayers' dollars. We have to ensure that the way things are being done are being done properly. The EPA, again, has already spent 24 million, as I mentioned, on these duplicate services with the largest budget deficit in history. Congress and the administration should focus on eliminating the duplicate government programs and protecting the taxpayers' dollars. The redundant regulations of the fuel economy by the EPA is simply just a magnitude of the government waste that we're seeing today.

With that, Judge Carter, I appreciate, again, your leadership on this very important issue. I know we have a lot of Members here to speak on this.

Mr. CARTER. I would now like to have you hear from my colleague from Virginia, SCOTT RIGELL, who has been waiting to talk. I learned in a conversation before we started here tonight he's been in the car, the automobile business, and so he brings a good perspective to this conversation.

Mr. RIGELL. I thank the gentleman for yielding and bringing this to our attention. It's a critical matter facing our country. It has a direct impact on job creation, and I regret the way it's headed. That impact is adverse. And so we rise tonight, I believe all of us do, in defense of the folks who would be most directly impacted by it, the folks who are producing our cars, the folks who are selling and servicing our cars and the related industries.

I come to this body, and I know we all do, regardless of political affiliation, with the idea that we are first Americans. And I always try to find where do we agree. I start out tonight thinking we surely agree that it's a good idea for fuel economy standards and performance to increase over time. We share that with our colleagues on the other side. Yet that is also regrettably the point of demarcation because there is a sharp contrast, I believe, between where the administration is headed with this.

This is yet a third level of regulation on an industry that is already highly regulated. The Department of Transportation, the State of California itself, and now, and I believe unwisely so, the administration is allowing, in fact, encouraging the EPA to inject itself into this. There are multiple flaws in this path that I believe the administration is on through the EPA.

I just want to touch on one, Judge. Because as you noted, I've had the privilege of being in this great industry for a long time. Since I was about the age of 23, I've had the privilege of being a retail automobile dealer for about 21 of those years, and through our organizations had the great pleasure of retailing over 100,000 automobiles in our market and have spent a tremendous amount of time on the sales floor.

You know, we know this instinctively, that as the price increases, demand will drop. Now, this may be, I think, some noteworthy news to some who are in the regulatory business here, but an additional $30 a month, I've seen it oftentimes, it becomes the stopping point for families, and rightfully so. As they try to live within a budget, $30 a month—$1 dollar a day you could say—that is in and of itself enough for a family to make a different purchasing decision. The math is pretty easy. With over a $3,000 increase in a vehicle over 60 months—I think my math is pretty good here—it would be at least $50, not to include interest, on a monthly basis. So on the margin we would see in dealerships across this country decisions to not buy cars. The higher the price, the fewer the buyers.

Now, that which seems so obvious to us—let me read from the regulation itself here. The administration's proposed regulation states: "Since the impact of this proposal on sales is unknown and sales have the largest potential effect on employment"-here's the point of note—"the impact of this proposal on employment is also unknown." Judge, I'd submit to you tonight, well, the EPA and the Obama administration may not understand the impact of these regulations on employment, but I do. I think the American people do. Sales go down, employment follows. The only thing that increases is the pain, real pain and suffering, of American families on the margin. Some employers have to tighten up, some manufacturers have to tighten up because of the decreased demand.

So Judge, I stand with you tonight. I applaud your leadership in this matter. And I hope that the EPA will reconsider—in fact, come to a full stop and allow the CAFE standards that have been in place since 2007 to guide us going forward. They're doing a good job. Manufacturers are improving in their fuel economy standards. It's a wise course of action to stay where we are. And I thank you again for your leadership.

Mr. CARTER. Reclaiming my time, and thanking my colleague for his comments—you know, we're talking this whole year of how we're going to get this economy back on its feet, how we're going to put people back to work, how we're going to make our decisions make sense to put people to work and make our economy grow. And I'm concerned, where we already have the NHTSA—or whatever it's called—setting these standards, we had CAFE standards established—gosh, that's 8 years ago-with a plan to study on down the road, looking at the economic consequences and the job consequences. as well as the environmental consequences. And the EPA chose to make a decision based solely on their global warming view of the world and not take into effect the job—in fact, they say in their statement, we don't even know what the job consequences are going to be, and we don't know what the economic consequences are going to be. And we don't know if you can sell a car, $3,200, but we're passing this regulation anyway. That's not the kind of decisions we ought to be making around this place. So I really thank you for raising those economic points, Scott. It helps a lot.

The next person I believe was here, ALAN NUNNELEE was the next one. I yield to my good friend from Mississippi.

Mr. NUNNELEE. Thank you, Mr. CARTER, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I have to confess, when Judge Carter started talking about Texans loving their pickup trucks and the EPA coming to take our pickup trucks away, that got my attention. Because the judge would know that while Texans love their pickup trucks, the only reason that you love them more is because there's more Texans than there are Mississippians. I love my truck as well, and I don't want anybody to come get it.

The EPA, California regulators, and the Obama White House have combined forces to show how far the left will go. They'll use any means at their disposal to ram through its liberal agenda. I'm convinced that this administration is driven by a radical environmental agenda, and that this environmental agenda will use the threat of allowing California to impose its own set of regulations as a way to strong-arm auto manufacturers into going along with the new and unnecessary fuel economy standards. As has already been described here tonight, Mr. Speaker, this action would drive up the cost of a vehicle by an average of $3,200.

Now, my concern is that young family in Mississippi that's trying to make it on their own, that needs to go out and purchase a new vehicle. For that young family, $3,200 is a lot of money. My concern is the senior citizen that needs to go out and purchase a new vehicle, and they're trying to make ends meet on a limited income. For that senior citizen, $3,200 is a lot of money.

Also, my concern is for those manufacturing workers in Mississippi that are making vehicles tonight. And when the cost of those vehicles goes up by $3,200, common sense says there's going to be less demand. And we've got automobile manufacturers and their suppliers that are a vital part of Mississippi's economy.

Now, Congress has granted sole authority to regulate fuel economy to the Department of Transportation. And all this proposal is is a backdoor attempt to implement cap-and-trade. there's even a larger issue here. The larger issue is about a President and the ideology he represents being obsessed with expanding Washington's control over every facet of our life. They've dictated what kind of light bulbs we use. Now they're trying to say what kind of vehicles we drive, what kind of health insurance we purchase, whether you can be forced to provide medical services that even violate your religious beliefs. Their attitude is that regulators know more about what families need than individuals.

Mr. Speaker, it's time to stand up. It's time tosay no more. When they're coming for my pickup truck, the answer is "no."

Mr. CARTER. I would now like to recognize my good friend, STEVE PEARCE from New Mexico, Texas' good neighbor to the west.

Mr. PEARCE. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and thanks for his leader-ship on this work.

To adequately assess exactly what the effects are going to be of increasing the CAFE standards from 35 to 54 miles per gallon requires that we take a look at the increase that we had just in 2007. the increase that moved us to 35 miles per gallon. We had testimony that declared that at least one auto manufacturer would go out of business, would file bankruptcy if that law was actually implemented. That was because we do not have the technical capability to enforce and to build the vehicles that would take us to 35 miles per gallon. In order to reach that objective then, the auto manufacturers were going to have to arbitrarily price their lower mileage vehicles—they raise the price on them to drive demand down. That is, they'd sell fewer. It's not that we're actually increasing the mileage; it's that we're selling fewer of the larger vehicles, vehicles like pickup trucks that are used in the oil field, on ranching operations. So we wanted to depress down the demand for them while simultaneously adding stimulus to the lower cost vehicles. Now, the problem with that for a business is that the profits are made from those vehicles that are like pickup trucks and the SUVs.

So this government was in the process of mandating that the manufacturers would build fewer of the high-profit vehicles and more of the low-profit vehicles. That's the only way they could comply with the government standards. And it was therefore going to decrease profits enough to put at least one of the manufacturers into bankruptcy. As it turned out, two of the three manufacturers in America filed for bankruptcy, two of the three.

The taxpayers went in and had to bail them out.

When the President in his State of the Union last week talked about not bailing out companies, he spoke out of the other side of his mouth later in the speech by saying that the company we bailed out in General Motors was such a great success when taxpayers have to subsidize the processes declared by the U.S. Government. If that is what happened when we moved the mileage from 20 to 35 miles per gallon, imagine the distress in the auto industry when we move it to 54.

The Prius does not even qualify. It does not reach 54 miles per gallon. The Toyota Yaris only gets 38 miles per gallon. The technology does not exist. The same geniuses in the White House that brought us Cash for Clunkers, are now going to bring us 54-mile-per-gallon requirements for fuel standards.

The reason that the United States economy is faltering and suffering is because of what is happening by government agencies. The unfairness for the lower-class people in this country is ghastly.

The President stood on this floor last week and talked about fairness to everyone, economic fairness. Let the President hear his own words. He made fun of one of his agencies that declared milk to be a hazardous substance. He made fun of the regulation which got so much attention that it was rolled back. Let the President make fun of this regulation, because it is going to kill the car manufacturers. They cannot make cars that go 54 miles to the gallon.

For those who say just make the rule, and they will develop it, I simply say let's pay our EPA workers, all of those involved in this process, let's simply start paying them with General Motors' stock. Let them find out in their own lives exactly what the value of their opinions and their designs are.

The final problem with the implementation of this rule is the constitutionality. Our Founding Fathers set up a system of checks and balances. The President would sign legislation. The Senate and the House would pass the legislation, but they had to pass exactly the same bill. No one House, no one branch could dominate the others. What the President is doing is taking his beliefs, his agendas outside that set up by the Founding Fathers that would guarantee voters would have input. He is moving it into extraterritorial agencies that have no controls by the taxpayers and no controls by the voters.

The President should be ashamed of what he is suggesting. The President is causing our Constitution to be set on a shelf. The Constitution is here not for the rich; the Constitution is here for the poor. The Constitution is that which gives the poor standing in this country. The rich can always have their way; the powerful can always get their way; but the Constitution defends and protects the poor. When the President crassly sets aside the Constitution, he is working against the fairness economically and the fairness constitutionally of this Nation towards 99 percent of its inhabitants.

I think that it is time for this Congress and this House to stand up and tell the President no more, you will bypass the Constitution no more. We need to mean business, and we need to back our words up with actions.

I thank my friend from Texas.

Mr. CARTER. I thank my friend from New Mexico for a very strong statement.

I want to recognize Mr. ROSCOE BART-LETT, my friend from Maryland. He wants to get up here with some of his own charts, and I'm going to step aside and let him do it.

Mr. BARTLETT. Thank you very much for yielding.

I sat and listened to this discussion, and I am reminded of how futile efforts are to try to get something done by doing it wrong two different ways.

The President believes that we need higher CAFE standards, and he is going to impose those through regulations from the EPA. He is also assuming that the American people don't have the sense to understand that they need to have higher CAFE standards, so he is going to force them on them. Without trying to educate the American people. he is just going to tell them you need to trust me, you need higher CAFE standards, and this is what it is going to be. What the President is doing is illegal and illogical, and I don't think that the American people are going to stand for it.

I just have a couple of charts here that put in context why we need to look at CAFE standards. If the President would use this approach, the American people would do the right thing relative to the kind of car they buy when they understand the environment that the United States and the world is in.

Here I have two charts and they are from the IEA, the International Energy Association. This is a creature of the OECD. It is perhaps, maybe along with our Energy Information Administration, a part of our Department of Energy, the best followers and prognosticators of energy in the world. This is their world-energy outlook.

This one is in 2008. I just want to point to a couple of things here. First of all, the oil that we are now pumping—and you could go back here 150 years with this blue thing here. It started back at zero, and it pumped more and more and more and more we are today pumping this much oil. These are the conventional oil fields that we are pumping oil from now. We are also getting some natural gas liquids, and you see that curve is growing and growing. This is not gas in your gas tank. This is propane and butane and gases like that.

The green here is nonconventional oil. We are having a lot of discussion of nonconventional oil now about the Keystone pipeline and bringing the oil from the tar sands of Alberta, Canada. We are going to build a pipeline. It is either going to be in this country, or it is going to be across Canada through the Rocky Mountains. If the environmentalists are worried about environmental impact, they ought to be thinking about what is going to happen to the environment when they put a pipeline through the Rocky Mountains.

Either we're going to get that cheap oil, or the Chinese are going to get that cheap oil. They're going to have a pipeline. We're not going to avoid a pipeline. There's going to be a pipeline.

I just think that commonsense comes down on the side of, gee, I would like that oil, I would like the jobs that go with getting that oil. And I am concerned about the environment, but there is going to be a pipeline. That is a given. It is either going to be here, or it is going to be in Canada. I think it is going to be more of an environmental insult going through the Rocky Mountains than down through the Mississippi Valley with that pipeline.

That green area is nonconventional oil, and that is increasing. It will increase. You see it is not a big fraction of what we get. Notice that we have been stagnated here for 5 years now at 84 million barrels. We call it oil, but it is more than oil because it is natural gas liquids too. The world has not been able to produce any more oil than 84 million barrels a day, which is why oil is about $100 a barrel and we are in a recession, and it is still stuck at about $100 a barrel.

They prognosticate that the production from current fields is going to go down fairly dramatically. You see it dropping off there. Not to worry, because we are going to get a lot of oil from the fields that we discovered, the light blue here that are too tough to develop. Then we are going to get a fair amount of oil from fields we have vet to discover, the bright red there. This is kind of a nice dream, isn't it? By the way, the dark red here is enhanced oil recovery. It really ought to be a part of this. That is putting  $CO_2$  down there or live steam or something down there to get a little bit more oil out.

Note that by 2030 they are prognosticating that we are going to be up at 106 million barrels of oil a day. This chart has disappeared. If you go on the Internet and try to find that chart, it is not there. It was there. That's where we got it. They're a little embarrassed by its presence because just 2 years later in 2010, they made this prognostication, the same people. By 2035, 5 years later, instead of having 106 million barrels a day, they are up to only 96 million barrels of oil a day.

Notice they've now incorporated the enhanced oil recovery here with conventional oil and notice a fairly precipitous drop-off. Now they're telling you that the production of oil is not going to decrease because we're going to get huge amounts of oil from the fields that we have now discovered that are too tough to develop like under 7,000 feet of water and 30,000 feet of rock in the Gulf of Mexico. A lot of discoveries like that, and fields yet to be discovered

I think there is little probability that these two wedges are going to occur. I think what's going to happen is that this curve is going to tip over and start down. Let me tell you why I think that's true.

Because the United States reached its plateau, which is called "peak oil," in 1970, and that was predicted in 1956 in what I think was the most important speech in the last century, given by M. King Hubbert in 1956. He says, 14 years from now, in 1970, the United States will reach its maximum oil production. After that, it will drop off. It

Now, he didn't predict the discovery of any oil in the Gulf of Mexico and in Alaska, and here we see there was a little blip in the slide down with the huge amounts of oil we found in Alaska. Remember the fabled discoveries of oil in the Gulf of Mexico, the yellow there. That's all it did.

We now produce half the oil that we did in 1970. I do not think the world is any more resourceful or creative than the United States. If we could not reverse this downtrend in our country. I do not think that the world will be able to reverse it worldwide, which is why I say that the world is going to follow the United States. By the way, this was predicted by M. King Hubbert. He said that the world would be peaking about now.

Your government has paid for four studies that said this is going to happen. I quote here from one of those studies. This was the first big study. This was the SAIC report called the Hirsch report.

World oil peaking is going to happen, they said. Peaking is when you reach this plateau, and after that, it falls off. They said the peaking of oil is going to happen. Oil peaking presents a unique challenge. The world has never faced a problem like this.

I just have one more chart here, and these are some quotes from what I think is the most insightful speech of the last century. The most important one I think was given by M. King Hubbert on March 6, 1956. This speech was given just a bit later, the 15th day of May in 1957, a speech given by Hyman Rickover, the creator of our says, No. If you live in California, these nuclear submarines:

"There is nothing man can do to rebuild exhausted fossil fuel reserves. They were created by solar energy 500 million years ago and took eons to grow to their present volume. In the face of the basic fact that fossil fuel reserves are finite, the exact length of time these reserves will last is important in only one respect: The longer they last, the more time do we have to invent ways of living off of renewable or substitute energy sources"-we've been trying to do that, haven't we?— "and to adjust our economy to the vast changes which we can expect from such a shift."

By the way, this talk was given to a group of physicians in St. Paul, Minnesota. If you simply Google for "Rickover energy speech." his speech will come up. They lost it for several years. It's now back on the Internet.

In another place in this speech he said, in the 8,000-year recorded history of man, the age of oil would be but a blip. And, wow, what a ride it's been. The quality of life that we have as a result of using these fossil fuels has just been incredible.

Just one last quote from what I think was the most insightful speech of the last century. I love this quote:

Fossil fuels resemble capital in the bank. A prudent and responsible parent will use this capital sparingly in order to pass on to his children as much as possible of his inheritance. A selfish and irresponsible parent will squander it in riotous living and care not one wit how his offspring will fare.

I think what our President needs to do is educate the American people to the situation we're in. If these charts truly represent that situation, the American people will voluntarily say, Mr. President, we need to respond to that in a responsible way. The President doesn't need to assume that you're ignorant and can't understand or assume that he has to tell us what we ought to do.

Mr. CARTER. I would now like to recognize Mr. Manzullo from Illinois. who is a champion of starting up the manufacturing again in this country. He understands the economy and how it works.

Mr. MANZULLO. I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, we have something very interesting going on in this administration, and it's called "Who's in Charge?" At one time, we believed that the National Highway Transportation Safety Agency, NHTSA, as part of DOT was in charge of regulating the corporate average fuel economy standards. In fact, it's always been that way. Well, then, all of a sudden the EPA gets involved, gets its nose under the tent and decides that, well, because there are emissions that they're going to get involved in it. Then along comes the California Air Resources Board and are the standards.

So we have the automobile manufacturers taking a look at which agency is in control, if any, and what they have to follow, although they have been forced to follow the standard that's been set down by the EPA to have this amazing 54.5 miles per gallon fuel economy for model years beginning in 2017.

In the district that I'm proud to represent, Chrysler has a plant in Belvedere that's going to house the body shop for the new Dodge Dart. I saw that automobile at the auto show here in Washington this past week, and it's a beauty. It's beautiful. It represents more than a $600 million investment in the community and workforce in northern Illinois, and Chrysler had more than 1,600 production workers at the same assembly plant started in July when they had the third shifts. This is another signal of the increase in automobile sales that we're seeing in this country from the zenith of 17 million that were sold years ago to where we are now.

But this car starts at $16,000, and with the average price of a vehicle to increase by $3,200 and the source of that is the government itself, I just don't know what these people are thinking. In fact, if you take a look at the EPA rule, that says the estimate is that the mandate will cost $157 billion, which always means the number is vastly greater. That's a lot of money. That's a huge amount of money. I mean, this is classic Obama EPA.

But you ask yourself. What is the $157 billion for? The great scientists, mathematicians, and bureaucrats over at EPA said, well, this is the cost that it's going to take in investing in new technology. I hear those words, "investing in new technology," as if people that don't even know the sweet smell of machine oil who sit in offices in Washington, D.C., can sit there with their calculators and their green clerks hats and come to an estimate of what it's going to cost to increase the technology to come up to that 54.5-mileper-gallon standard.

We all know government figures are wrong. I mean, $157 billion, that's a huge amount of money. I think the total amount of the bailout, if anybody was interested in that, was around $15 billion. Now, this is 10 times the amount.

You ask yourselves, where is this money coming from? Obviously, if manufacturers have to gear up for this major expense, they're not going to wait until 2017. They're going to start doing it now. And so the increase in prices of automobiles will be directly related to this new mandate from the EPA.

So to the gentleman from Texas, I want to thank you for having the courage of speaking out here, and I thank you for the opportunity to help explain to the American people of the folly of into this idea knowing that each electhis latest EPA action. tric car that they build, which is sub-

Mr. CARTER. I thank my friend for his great comments. One of the things I like to say about Washington is to show us the common sense, and, Mr. MANZULLO, I think you made a good, commonsense argument that we can understand.

I'd now like to introduce my friend, Mr. KELLY from Pennsylvania, and hear what he has to say on this interesting new challenge the Obama administration has given us.

$\square$ 2050

Mr. KELLY. I thank the gentleman from Texas.

I come from a family that in 1953 started in the automobile business. My father came from being a parts picker in a warehouse for General Motors, surviving World War II and then coming back home and starting his own dealership in 1953. So, not only can I talk the talk, but I've actually walked the walk.

When we sit back and when we see what this administration is doing, while they say on one side they're very concerned with jobs and that they're very concerned with the recovery of the automobile industry, they propose legislation that will take 7 million buyers out of the market. That is a staggering number of cars that we will not be able to build. If we can't build them, we don't need folks there in the factories. We don't want to mess with the fragile recovery that the automobile industry has right now. Again, as I said, in having walked that walk and in understanding the cost of these vehicles as they go up, it is a terrible thing that this administration is considering. It does not surprise me because we are talking about people who have never in their lives actually had their own skin in the game. So, when they talk about these measures that they're taking, when they talk about all these well-intentioned ideas, they forget that the ultimate sacrifice made is by the buyers, by the American consumer. We are going to raise the average cost of these vehicles by $3,200. As I said earlier, 7 million prospective buyers will not be in the market. We have jumped the standards that we had by 3 years.

I was there in the early seventies when the CAFE standards came into existence. The corporate average fuel economy had nothing to do with green energy; it had nothing to do with a carbon footprint. What it had to do with was our reliance on foreign oil. We are making great strides to that effect. Now, I do know that my friends in the automobile manufacturing business have agreed to these new standards. I also know that there are so many resets in this new standard that they opted to go along with this administration's directions and that they bought into this idea knowing that each electric car that they build, which is subsidized by $7,500 in taxpayer funds—hardworking American families who have paid their taxes will not have the same benefit that people buying these electric cars—the metrics on that is $175,000. That is their average income.

Now, who are we appealing to?

We give the industry a double count on those. That's how they get to the 54.5 miles per gallon, and they understand with the resets that it's much easier to go along with this administration than to try to fight them up front. I will tell you, of my friends in the automobile dealer business, who are the folks who go to work every day, who have to put bread on the table, in my dealership there are 110 folks who come in there every day to solve the transportation needs of the people in our community.

The other side of this is safety. When my wife and my four children get in their cars—and keep in mind there are five grandchildren involved now—we're going to start asking those folks to start driving lighter cars, cars that will not be as safe as the cars we have on the road right now. And why? Because we are catering to an administration that puts its agenda ahead of the American public's safety.

So I appreciate what the gentleman from Texas is doing. I understand the unintended consequences of this, so it's time for us to blow the whistle on an administration that refuses to acquiesce to what the public needs and continues to drive its own agenda. I appreciate what you've done.

Mr. CARTER. In reclaiming my time, I'd like to ask the gentleman a question because it just dawned on me the economics that you're describing here.

What they're doing now is not saying, Okay, we're going to make a Chevrolet pickup or a Ford pickup that gets 54.5 miles per gallon. What they're saying is, Yeah, we've still got a Ford pickup or a Chevrolet pickup or a Chrysler pickup that gets 18 to 20 miles a gallon. But, hey, look at all these electric cars that don't use any gasoline, so we get an offset for those.

You also said the market for these is the rich people, that 1 percent that everybody is complaining about. No one is going to be able to afford to buy these electric cars. They're the market, and yet that's how they get this number down, but it's not real—it's imaginary.

Mr. KELLY. Yes, absolutely. We talked about that.

The loopholes in this program are not for the hardworking American families that go to work every day to support their kids and their families and their well-being. The folks really don't buy these cars to drive; they buy them because they can. We are giving people $7,500 in Federal loopholes. Then in my State of Pennsylvania, it throws another $3,500 towards the purchase of an electric car. Those cars, by the way, are 200,000 cars per manufacturer. It's not 200,000 cars in total, but 200,000 cars per manufacturer. The cost of this and as you see the trajectory of this expense, it goes off the charts. The answer is it is not going to improve fuel economy. What really drives fuel economy is the number of miles you drive each year and the cost of gasoline. Yet they start to talk about, No, no. We've got to tell people that they can only drive a car that gets 54.5 miles per gallon.

You know, sir, as well as I do, that that is not the case. We've been gamed again. I think there should be an outrage over this with the American people now. This is a regulation that does nothing but push an agenda and does not push the well-being of the American citizen.

Mr. CARTER. That is a real eyeopener, and I thank you for explaining that. I didn't really get that concept.

So, in addition to playing games with numbers, the Federal Government is subsidizing the playing games with numbers, and then your State also subsidizes it. I hope Texas doesn't—but heck, who knows.

Mr. KELLY. Again, I appreciate the gentleman for bringing this topic up. We have to understand that, if we are really going to get this economy back on track, it is the people who make things—and we talk about making it in America. If we're really trying to support the domestic automakers, then you don't raise the price of the car by $3,200. With each price increase, we eliminate somebody who would have bought a new car. As we eliminate the purchase of new cars, we also affect the long-range market for used cars. A new car eventually becomes a used car.

We are eliminating personal transportation in this country by upping the bar in a systematic way, and people aren't noticing it. There should be an outrage among the hardworking American families of whom sometimes Dad works two jobs and Mom works a joball to put food on the table, to educate their children, and to somehow get them from where they live to where they need to be, whether it be for their jobs or for education or for after-school activities. We are eliminating private transportation in this country by upping the price and by making it impossible for the average American to own his own car.

Mr. CARTER. That's shocking.

I do remember that the car that my wife and I are driving right now cost more than our first three-bedroom, two-bath house that we purchased when our first two children were born. That's kind of shocking as to how all that gamesmanship can drive that price up.

I did have a person in the transportation business who was telling me—and I'm not going to disclose who it and self-governing people and tell them an easy call for the administration. Apwas—they do studies on selling tickets for the planes. It was the air industry. The ticket price is the price at which they know people will fly. They have done studies to determine, if they were to add $10, in some instances, to that price of the ticket that people will fly. you'd lose like 18 percent. Add $50, and you could lose half of your flying public. That's how much the margin is. and you have the same kind of deal in the automobile industry.

Mr. KELLY. It's all price point and it's all affordability, and it comes down to: How much per month does it cost for the average, hardworking American family to keep private transportation?

We are raising the price by $3,200 per car. We are eliminating 7 million people from having the opportunity to own their own cars, their own transportation, which has been the hallmark of this country and which has driven this economy for many, many years. It has allowed the people to move out of the cities and into the suburbs because they had a way to get to work, and they didn't have to rely on public transportation.

In this country, what is very unique is that you can get up in the morning, and you can drive to wherever it is you want to go, and you can get there by yourself or with your friends; but that's the uniqueness and that's the greatness of America, and it has always been. It is the one thing that the rest of the world looks at. Private transportation is absolutely critical, and we are going to eliminate the ability for 7 million Americans to have that opportunity.

Mr. CARTER. In reclaiming my time, there is an agenda that is being sold

In testimony we had before the Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation, which I happen to serve on, we talked to our former colleague about this administration's vision of the world it wants us to live in. It wants us all to live in high-rise apartments and to take public transportation. They will tell you straight out that's the future of America—concentrate. There have been at least some in the administration who have said the days of the two-story home in the suburbs are over.

I don't know if America knows that. This is a perfect example of part of the plan to drive us out of the suburbs and into concentrated populations where the only solution is public transportation. Quite honestly, where I live, that's not going to be very popular.

Mr. KELLY. I agree with the gentleman, and I will tell you that I join in your fight. This is not only a fight that we must fight; this is a battle we must win.

□ 2100

I will fight with you every step of the way. We cannot continue to take a free not only what foods they can eat, what houses they can live in, what light bulb they can use, or what car and truck they can drive.

So I thank you for being a champion of the American people and the hardworking Americans that pay for every single thing that this government does.

Mr. CARTER. I thank you, Representative Kelly. I will be glad to have you in the fight. You are a man I stand back-to-back with.

Mr. Speaker, we have been here talking about something that many of us realize is a shocking change of our world. It seems a small thing, but 54.5 miles per gallon, everyone will tell you the kinds of cars we drive in Texas, which is pickup trucks, they can never get there. They can't gear and torque to get to that number, 54.5. Therefore, unless you pull a scam that was being talked about, every electric car offsets the pickup trucks, we're in trouble.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. STUTZMAN). Members are reminded to refrain from engaging in personalities toward the President.

KEYSTONE XL PIPELINE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 5, 2011, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. WOODALL) is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. WOODALL. Mr. Speaker, I have got energy on my mind tonight too. It's a wonder, or I should say it's not a wonder, that everybody who comes to the floor of the House has this common theme. Mr. Speaker, that we have an economy that's in trouble, we have a regulatory network that is going out of control. And we have energy needs in this country that feed, that feed the economic heart of this country, and we're struggling to find that food.

Mr. Speaker, I have here, you can't see it, but it's an editorial from The Washington Post. It's January 19 of this year. Now, you know, Mr. Speaker, and as folks do who have a chance to read The Washington Post, it is one of the most liberal newspapers in this entire Nation. Now there are a few, San Francisco Chronicle or others, that might able to compete, but one of the most liberal newspapers in this coun-

And they put an editorial in their newspaper speaking on behalf of the newspaper editorial board on January 19, the day after President Obama announced his decision to block the Kevstone pipeline, and this is what it said. It's entitled, "A Kink in the Pipeline," and the headline reads—you won't be able to see this on the screen, Mr. Speaker-but it says, Approving the Keystone XL project should have been proving the Keystone XL project should have been an easy call for the administration.

This is from one of the most liberal newspapers in the country, Mr. Speaker, saying why, Mr. President, why did you choose to stand in the way, and they've got some ideas. The Washington Post has some ideas about that. The editorial begins like this: On Tuesday, President Obama's jobs council reminded the Nation that it is hooked on fossil fuels and will be for a long time. The council said this—it's going to require the United States to optimize all of its natural resources and for states to construct pathways, pipelines, transmission, and distribution to deliver electricity and fuel.

But that's what it's going to take, Mr. Speaker, to get the economy back on track. It's going to require that the United States optimize all of its natural resources.

It added that the regulatory and permitting obstacles that threaten the development of some energy projects negatively impact jobs and weaken our energy infrastructure. Mr. Speaker, you wonder why it is that I have to read this. You would say, ROB, that's common sense. Don't folks know that in the great State of Georgia?

I would tell you, Mr. Speaker, they do know that in the great State of Georgia. Where they don't know it is here in Washington, D.C., in this regulatory environment where if folks see a problem, they throw more rulemaking at it. The President's jobs council sees a problem. It's a problem—there's not enough energy infrastructure. Is the United States not maximizing its energy production?

Here's what the jobs council says. Mr. Speaker. It added, the regulatory permitting obstacles that could threaten the development of some energy projects, negatively impact jobs, and weaken our energy infrastructure need to be addressed immediately. And this is what The Washington Post says. Mr. Obama's jobs council could have started out by calling, well, the Obama administration to help in this effort.

On Wednesday the State Department announced that it had recommended rejecting the application of the Trans-Canada Corporation to build the pipeline, rejecting it. The President's jobs council, Mr. Speaker, says we need to maximize every energy opportunity that we have. If we are to see our economy succeed, we must access every bit of energy that we can domestically. We must find transportation mechanisms for it, pipelines, transmission facilities. And the White House says no, no.

The editorial goes on. Environmentalists have fought the Keystone pipeline furiously, and in November, the State Department tried to put off the politically dangerous issue until after next year's election.

Mr. Speaker, you came here for the same reason that I came here, and that is to take on the politically dangerous issues. We didn't run for Congress so that we could dodge the tough questions. We came to Congress so we could speak out on the tough questions. We came to Congress because we represent folks back home who view these issues with the common sense that America always does.

If you have an energy crisis, what do you need? You need more energy. Do you need energy efficiency? Of course. Do you need energy conservation? Of course.

But we have resources, Mr. Speaker, in this country. We have been so blessed. God has blessed this Nation with energy resources, and we have to harvest them

The State Department wants to put the decision off because it's politically dangerous. When do they want to put it off to, Mr. Speaker? Until after the next election. So it's unconscionable. The Washington Post makes that point and goes on.

Listen to the cynicism that's here, Mr. Speaker. This is what it's come to in Washington, D.C. The Washington Post says this: We almost hope this was a political call because on the substance there should be no question. The Washington Post says, we hope it was the President just playing politics, Mr. Speaker. We hope it was the President just playing to the radical, leftist wing of its party. We hope that it was because if he's looking at the substance, if he's looking at the same facts that we are, it should have been no question, an easy call.

Hear this, Mr. Speaker. Without the pipeline, Canada will still export its oil. And with the long-term transglobal market, it's far too valuable to keep in the ground. But it would go to China, Mr. Speaker.

You're from a part of the world like I am, Mr. Speaker, where we care about the environment. We're hunters, we're fishermen, we're farmers. No one plays outside more than you and I do, Mr. Speaker. No one works outside more than you and I do.

We care about our communities, and you tell me which community is going to treat the world's environment the best, Mr. Speaker. Is it going to be your community back home? Is it going to be my community back home? Or is it going to be the industrial machine that is mainland China? Mr. Speaker, we can either bring this oil from Canada to America and use it responsibly, or we can ship that oil from Canada to China, where it would surely go, so says the Washington Post.

We go on: Environmentalists and Nebraska politicians say the route the TransCanada pipeline proposed might threaten the State's ecologically sensitive areas. And in consultation with Nebraskan officials, they decide to proceed, even though the government announces last year, concluded that the original path would have had limited adverse environmental impact. Hear that. Here it is, a private pipeline going to go through America, Mr. Speaker, going to try to feed America's energy needs so we don't have to import oil from folks who hate us overseas. Folks said we have some concerns about the original pipeline path. The Federal Government does a study, they say we don't see any problem. We see very limited environmental impact, but if it's a concern to you, we'll move it. Willing to move it.

Environmentalists go on to argue that some of the fuel in U.S. refineries that produce China's bitumin might be exported elsewhere.

Don't bring the oil to America, Mr. Speaker. Why? Because it might get refined in American refineries by American companies, using American workers, and we might sell that to another nation at a profit. For whom? For Americans.

Don't do it. Don't do it, Mr. Speaker. In this tough economy, don't you bring those products back to America. Don't you bring them to American factories. Don't you put American workers back to work. Why? Because we might export it to a foreign land to make a profit.

Mr. Speaker, that's what we need to be doing, and The Washington Post knows it to be true.

Here's how The Washington Post concludes, Mr. Speaker: There are far fairer, far more rational ways to discourage oil use in America, the first of which is establishing higher gasoline taxes. Environmentalists should fight for policies that might actually do substantial good instead of tilting against Keystone XL, and President Obama should have the courage to say so.

Those are not my words, Mr. Speaker. That comes from The Washington Post editorial board. President Obama should have the courage to say so. He should have the courage to stand up to the radical left. He should have the courage to stand up for American job creators. He should have the courage to stand up for American, North American, energy independence.

The headline, Washington Post, Mr. Speaker: Approving the Keystone XL project should have been an easy call for the administration. The Washington Post, Mr. Speaker. We hope it was a political call because on the substance, there should have been no question. And if you believe it happened for environmental reasons, Mr. Speaker, instead of political reasons, there are far fairer, far more rational ways to discourage oil use. President Obama should have had the courage to say so.

We're not done with this issue in the House, Mr. Speaker. You know, we're going to continue to bring this issue back because we know where the American people stand on it. They stand for energy independence. They stand for American jobs. They stand for American manufacturing, and we can achieve those goals with that all-of-the-above energy policy that harnesses all of the God-given bounty that America has and puts it to work for the American worker.

Mr. Speaker, let me go on to the President's State of the Union address. He rejected the Keystone pipeline a week before the State of the Union. Here's what he said in the State of the Union: It's time to double down on a clean energy industry that never has been more promising.

Mr. Speaker, we have an opportunity to do something today about rising energy costs. We have an opportunity to do something today with the Keystone pipeline. We can put 20,000 workers to work today. We can bring $70 million worth of oil into this country a day. We can do that with Keystone pipeline. The President says no, I'm canceling Keystone pipeline. I'm going to double down on clean energy because it's never been more promising.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in clean energy. I believe in clean energy. What I believe in even more, though, is energy independence, and we can't get to energy independence with the clean energy resources that we have today. We have to use the resources that we have here in this country. And once we achieve energy independence, Mr. Speaker, the entire conversation in America will change. The entire conversation will change from how much to from where, and we can do the doubling down on green energy. But the President wants to double down on green energy today. Why? Because it's been his calculation in his 3 years in office, Mr. Speaker, that the environment has never been more promising.

Let's see.

The President's promising environment, Mr. Speaker: Solyndra, bankrupt. Loans guaranteed by the taxpayer, $535 million; a half-billion dollars, Mr. Speaker, sent out the door through crony capitalism and this administration. Down the drain, Solyndra, bankrupt.

What about Enerl? Guaranteed loans by the taxpayer, $118 million. How'd that project work out? Bankrupt. That's okay, Mr. Speaker. Maybe there are some successes.

What about Beacon Power? No, $43 million from taxpayers, Mr. Speaker. How'd that project work out? Bankrupt.

President Obama says the environment has never been more promising. If he's looking at the same financials you and I are looking at, Mr. Speaker, he sees bankrupt project after bankrupt project after bankrupt project after bankrupt we're doing this why? We're sending out government dollars, why? These taxpayer dollars, why, Mr. Speaker? A half-billion to Solvndra: $100 million to Ener1; $43 million to Beacon Power. We're sending those out why? Because we have energy needs in this country that cannot be satisfied because the President has stopped the Keystone XL pipeline, which was going to be built with what? Half a billion dollars in government loans? No, with private sector initiatives, private sector initiatives, to bring fuel that we know that we can use today to refineries where we know we can process it, whether we use it here or whether we export it abroad.

The President thinks there has never been a better time than now, Mr. Speaker, to double down on the green energy projects funded by the tax-payer.

We see here, Mr. Speaker, those have all been busts. And it's not that we can't do green energy, Mr. Speaker, it's that we have to let the marketplace choose those things. Crony capitalism doesn't work. Government picking winners and losers doesn't work. You know who picks winners and losers? The American consumer. You know who picks winners and losers well? The American marketplace, not the American government. We've got to take that power out of Washington, D.C., and return it to industry, and we will succeed.

The President knows this in his heart. Listen to what he says, Mr. Speaker: "We have a supply of natural gas that can last America nearly 100 years, and my administration will take every possible action to safely develop this energy. Experts believe this will supportmore than 600,000 jobs by the end of the decade."

Do you know when he said that, Mr. Speaker? That was in his State of the Union speech. That was right here. Right here from where we are tonight, Mr. Speaker. He spoke these words just a week ago. He knows we have a supply of natural gas that can fuel this country for 100 years, that will support 600,000 new American jobs.

Well, golly, I bet we're going to go right after that today. We're going to start right now. Why, Mr. Speaker, because it's 84 trillion cubic feet of undiscovered natural gas. Who has that? Is it Saudi Arabia? No, it's America. Is it Iran or Iraq? No, it's America. Is it Venezuela and Hugo Chavez? No, it's America. We have 84 trillion cubic feet of undiscovered natural gas, 3.4 billion barrels of undiscovered natural gas liquids. These are the fuels, Mr. Speaker, that will fuel the American economy for the next decade.

The President knows it. The President says we can fuel 100 years of America; 600,000 jobs in America. We know where it is. Let's talk about how we're going to get it, Mr. Speaker.

The good news about America, and I say this, Mr. Speaker, as I know you say to all of your constituents who are struggling: The good news about America is there is nothing wrong with America that we didn't do to ourselves. There's nothing. There is no worker who produces more than the American worker. There is no system of government that's more responsive to the people than ours. There is no engine of economic growth more powerful than the American entrepreneurial system. The President, though, knows that we have these resources. The question is, is he going to let Americans get them?

Here's where they are, off the coast: The Outer Continental Shelf: 2.28 trillion cubic feet in Washington and Oregon; 3.5 trillion cubic feet in northern California; 2.49 in central California; 7.76 in southern California.

It continues here along the east coast. In my home State of Georgia, Mr. Speaker, 2.4 trillion off the coast. Here in the Mid-Atlantic, right off the coast of Washington, D.C., 19.36 trillion cubic feet.

In the Gulf of Mexico, 16 trillion cubic feet.

We know, Mr. Speaker, this is the assessment of undiscovered but technically recoverable oil and gas resources on the Nation's Outer Continental Shelf. This comes from the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management. We know where these resources are.

And they're not just there, Mr. Speaker. They are where Americans often turn for energy resources, in Alaska. In Alaska, 76 trillion cubic feet. Over in the Beaufort Sea, 27 trillion cubic feet. All around the coast of Alaska, Mr. Speaker, you see opportunity after opportunity after opportunity. Again, not to send money to folks who hate us, not to send American dollars to overseas enemies because of the hook that they have in us because of our oil needs.

Mr. Speaker, we have the ability to meet these needs with American production harvested by whom? American workers. Done through what? American companies. Whose dollars go where? To the American way of life. We can do those things. It's a national security issue, and it's an economic issue. The question is. Why aren't we. Mr. Speaker? And that is a political issue. You saw it in The Washington Post. The Washington Post said we hope the decision to cancel the Keystone XL pipeline was just a political issue because of the facts, there's no reason not to move forward. It must just be a political issue. Well, we saw that the President, in the State of the Union speech, said. I want to go after it all. I know that we've got 100 years of energy in natural gas. We can fuel 600,000 American jobs.

Well, what do the politicians say? Let's look just here in Alaska. LISA MURKOWSKI said, Americans can benefit from the tremendous resources in Alaska's Outer Continental Shelf. She votes "yes." Congressman Don Young here in the House said that the OCS would provide 1.2 million new jobs. Why are we continuing to send our hard-earned money overseas? Don Young votes "yes." The other Senator from Alaska says, My message to the President is that as America's energy storehouse, our State of Alaska can and should responsibly supply a significant portion of our country's energy needs. That's three for three, Mr. Speaker. Every Federal elected official from the State of Alaska says we've got energy here, and we want to harvest energy here to help fuel America, to help fuel America. We're in. We're

Mr. Speaker, do you know who's not in? President Barack Obama. He said all the right things in the State of the Union speech, Mr. Speaker. As the words were coming out of his mouth, I thought, I'm with you, I'm with you, time after time thinking that's the right thing to do. Now, sadly, I thought the same thing a year ago when so many of those same things were said. I said, I'm with you, it's the right thing to do

We talked about abolishing corporate tax rates in this country so that we'll be able to bring more American companies here so we can create more jobs. I said, I'm with you. I voted for a budget here in the House last year that would do just that. I introduced a bill here in the House, a Fair Tax, that would do just that; and I got no support at all, Mr. Speaker, from the White House—not on our budget, not on the Fair Tax, not on any corporate tax reform bill whatsoever.

We had that Joint Select Committee at the end of the year, Mr. Speaker. They could have done anything—anything—to reform our economy, to get our fiscal house in order and to put American job creation back on track. They could have done anything. It was guaranteed to come to the floor of the House for a vote, and they produced nothing at all. And the President supported that effort not at all.

Here we are on the Outer Continental Shelf, 1.76 billion acres, Mr. Speaker, 1.76 billion acres—38 million open for exploration, 97 percent off limits. Do I need to go back, Mr. Speaker, to what the President said? We have a supply of natural gas that can last America nearly 100 years. My administration will take every possible action to safely develop this energy. Experts believe, he says, this will support more than 600,000 American jobs by the end of the decade—97 percent off limits.

Now, good news, Mr. Speaker. The Department of the Interior controls so many of these resources. They put out a 5-year plan. They talk about when it is we're going to be able to open up these areas. I'll just take you back to Alaska, Mr. Speaker, Alaska where so much of America's energy production comes from. Right here in the Beaufort Sea, 27.64 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. The Department of the Interior under the Obama administration, Mr. Speaker, said we're going to let you start leasing up there in 2015—2015.

I looked at my watch before I came down here, Mr. Speaker. It's 2012 and just barely into that-2012. You heard in the State of the Union speech: we have a supply of natural gas that can last America 100 years, and my administration will take every possible action to safely develop this energy because it can provide 600,000 American jobs. We know where the energy is, Mr. Speaker. The President's agency in charge says, just wait another 3 years, we'll let you in. Right here in this Chamber, Mr. Speaker, the President said he would do everything-everything—in his power. I'm asking you, Mr. Speaker, has he done anything? Has he done anything?

There is nothing wrong with America that we didn't do to ourselves. God blessed us with these resources. It's man's law that won't let us get them out of the ground. Our friends in Canada, Mr. Speaker, want to open up a pipeline to bring hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil into America every day, the market price of which is $70 million a day. Mr. Speaker, we're using the oil anyway in our cars, our factories, plastics—all of our products. We're already using the oil. The question is where do we get it? And today we send that same $70 million to Iraq, to Venezuela, and to Oman.

Mr. Speaker, we could have energy independence in this Nation if we applied ourselves to it, and it would change our foreign policy forever. If not in this Nation, Mr. Speaker, we could have energy independence on this continent. Our friends in Mexico, our friends in Canada, and we could collectively have energy independence. Why don't we? Why don't we, Mr. Speaker? And the answer is, as The Washington Post said, because in terms of leadership in this Nation, we lack the courage.

I just want to make that clear. Mr. Speaker. Let's go back to an issue that's going to come up over and over and over again until the President gets it right. It's the Keystone pipeline. When I say we lack the courage, Mr. Speaker, you and I both voted to move this Keystone project along. The AFL-CIO has endorsed moving this project along. It's not a Republican-Democratic issue, Mr. Speaker. It is an American jobs versus radical leftist agenda issue. The Washington Post. the most liberal newspaper in the area, one of the most liberal inthe country, Mr. Speaker, said on its face there is no question that approving the Keystone XL project should have been an easy call for the administration. The courage that we're asking for from the President, Mr. Speaker, is to stand up to the most radical, most leftist, and most anti-jobs segment of his party. That's the ask.

When The Washington Post here says President Obama should have had the courage to say so, they weren't saying. shake up the apple cart, Mr. Speaker. They weren't saying, take some dangerous untrodden path through the woods. They were saying, approve the project that on its face there could be no question about. Approve the project that our friends in Canada have already endorsed; approve the project that brings North American oil to America instead of shipping it to China; approve the project that saves $70 million a day keeping it in North America instead of shipping it to the Middle East: approve the project that will improve 20,000 jobs today and more going forward; approve the project, as the President said, through our natural gas resources and through our oil resources that could support 600,000 new jobs by the end of the decade.

Who is the beneficiary, Mr. Speaker? You have the same town hall meetings I do. Who is the beneficiary of lower fuel prices?

□ 2130

Is it ExxonMobil? No. Is it the big plastics plant? Well, I'm sure they'll do better, but that's not who it is. The big beneficiary, Mr. Speaker, of lower oil prices are American families. The big beneficiary, when American energy prices drop, are American workers. The big beneficiary, when we make these easy decisions to look to America's energy resources first, the beneficiary is the American economy. Should have been an easy call, Mr. Speaker. Should have been an easy call. I know you believe that. I believe that. The Washington Post believes that.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know how we'll find that true voice in the President's State of the Union speech. You know, there's so much double-speak in this town. It's sometimes tough to know what folks are actually saying. Rather than guess at what folks are actually saying, I blew it up in big words and put it right here because I wanted to be able to see it: I wanted to be able to remember it. Here's what the President says: "We have a supply of natural gas that can last America nearly 100 years. And my administration will take every possible action to safely develop this energy because experts believe this will support more than 600,000 jobs by the end of the decade."

Mr. Speaker, it's up to you and me. We have to hold the President accountable for these words. You cannot say these words when you're speaking to the American people in the State of the Union. You cannot say these words when you speak to the House and Senate here in joint session in the State of the Union. You cannot say these words while canceling the largest opportunity we have for energy independence in this country. You cannot say these words when you're actually focusing your energy, your efforts, taxpayer money on these projects that we've proven time and time again don't work. You cannot say these words, Mr. Speaker, when you know we have 1.76 billion acres that we could explore, but only 38 million are open for exploration, meaning 97 percent are off limits.

Mr. Speaker, this debate does not end tonight. This debate begins tonight. You, me, and the American people, we can make a difference; and we owe it to the American people to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the time.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Under clause 9 of rule XXI, lists or statements on congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits were submitted as follows:

OFFERED BY MR. CAMP

The provisions that warranted a referral to the Committee on Ways and Means in H.R. 3567, the Welfare Integrity Now for Children and Families Act of 2011, do not contain any congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits as defined in clause 9 of rule XXI.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 8 of rule XVIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 1173

OFFERED BY: Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas

AMENDMENT No. 1: At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. 3. ENSURING MARKET PENETRATION FOR PRIVATE LONG-TERM CARE INSUR-ANCE.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2 shall not take effect until such date as the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies to the Congress that at least 60 percent of individuals in the United States who are 25 years of age or older have private long-term care insurance.
- EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding section (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

H.R. 1173

OFFERED BY: Ms. JACKSON LEE OF TEXAS

AMENDMENT No. 2: Page 5, after line 19, add the following:

SEC. 3. STUDY ON THE IMPACT OF NOT HAVING LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE ON THE FEDERAL, STATE, AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

- (a) STUDIES.—Section 2 shall not take effect until-
- (1) the Director of the Congressional Budget Office completes a macroeconomic study and submits a report to the Congress on the impact on the Federal, State, and local governments of not having long-term care insurance; and
- (2) the Secretary of Health and Human Services completes a study and submits a report to the Congress on the best practices necessary to have a viable, financially secure, and solvent long-term care insurance program.
- EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding section (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

H.R. 1173

OFFERED BY: MRS. CHRISTENSEN

SEC. 3. ENSURING AVAILABILITY OF AN AFFORD-ABLE NATIONAL LONG-TERM CARE PROGRAM IN PLACE OF CLASS PRO-GRAM.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2 shall not take effect until such date as the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies that an affordable national long-term care program for community living assistance services and supports (other than the CLASS Program under title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 30011 et seq.)) is in effect.
- EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding section (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

H.R. 1173

OFFERED BY: MR. DEUTCH

AMENDMENT No. 4: At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 3. PREVENTING AN INCREASE IN MEDICAID SPENDING.

Section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect until 90 days after the date on which the Comptroller General of the United States certifies to Congress that failure to implement the CLASS program established under title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act will not increase State and Federal spending for long-term care under the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act.

H.R. 1173

OFFERED BY: MR. DEUTCH

AMENDMENT No. 5: At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 3. CLASS PROGRAM FLEXIBILITY.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect until such date on which each of the following has been satisfied:
- (1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services submits to Congress a report including a determination made by the Secretary on whether or not the Secretary has the authority to implement the CLASS program under title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act and develop and implement the benefit plans described in subsection (c).
- (2) In the case the Secretary determines the Secretary does not have the authority described in paragraph (1), the Secretary includes in the report described in such paragraph recommendations for statutory changes needed, and a recommended list of statutory provisions that would need to be waived, to provide the Secretary with such authority.
- (3) In the case the Secretary determines the Secretary does not have the authority described in paragraph (1), not later than 90 days after the submission of such report and recommendations, Congress has considered and rejected such recommendations.

(b) Exceptions.-

(1) Section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect if the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines under subsection (a)(1) that the Secretary has the authority described in such subsection and the Secretary develops the 3 benefit plans described in subsection (c)

- (2) In the case the Secretary determines under subsection (a)(1) that the Secretary does not have the authority described in such subsection and Congress has not considered and rejected the recommendations described in subsection (a)(2) by the deadline described in subsection (a)(3), section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect and the Secretary shall have the authority to waive the provisions recommended by the Secretary to be waived under the report described in subsection (a)(2).
- (c) ACTUARIALLY SOUND BENEFIT PLANS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall develop 3 actuarially sound benefit plans as alternatives for consideration for designation as the CLASS Independence Benefit Plan described in section 3203 of the Public Health Service Act that address adverse selection and have market appeal, regardless of whether such plans satisfy the requirements described in subsection (a)(1) of such section.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

RECOGNIZING MARK WASSERMAN AND THE HOUSES FOR CHANGE PROGRAM

HON. ALCEE L. HASTINGS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, Houses for Change is an innovative new campaign garnering support for the fight against homelessness. This new program is quickly becoming a popular way to help communities across the country support the less fortunate. The program's founder, Mark Wasserman, recently visited Capitol Hill to share his ideas with Members of Congress and their staff. I would like to recognize Mr. Wasserman's dedication and thank him for working to improve his community.

Looking for a way to help the homeless, Mark came up with the Houses for Change program. This innovative program allows children to use their imagination and creativity to support homeless people. The children decorate pre-ordered boxes so that they look like small homes, and then they take their homes around the community to collect loose change. On a selected date, the children and parents bring the boxes back to Houses for Change, and all of the proceeds go directly to a charity selected by the participants. Similar to the Jewish tradition of the tzedakah box, this unique method allows all of the money raised to go directly towards helping the homeless.

Mark's original idea was extremely successful in Palm Beach County, Florida. As a result, the program is now being launched nationwide. With the help of Family Promise, Houses for Change is quickly being adopted by schools, church congregations, and homeless organizations across the country. Additionally, organizations such as the YMCA and United Way are going to begin using this program to help youth get involved in this meaningful community service project. Due to his hard work and dedication, Mark's original idea is now a national effort to help the less fortunate members of our society.

Mr. Speaker, people like Mark Wasserman are a shining example of those selfless individuals who have committed their life to helping their communities become a better place. I am so proud that the Houses for Change program started in South Florida, and I hope that the program continues to thrive across the nation.

RECOGNIZING MARK WASSERMAN IN MEMORY OF JAMES I. THACKER

HON. HAROLD ROGERS

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. ROGERS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to James I. Thacker, a dedicated public servant and brave member of the Pike County Sheriff's Department in Pikeville, Kentucky. His passing is a great loss and he will be deeply missed in Pike County.

For law enforcement officers and other first responders, a routine assignment can become dangerous at any moment. On Monday, January 23rd, James was serving papers at the end of his shift, when a vehicle crossed the center line on U.S. 460 and hit him head on. His comrades rushed to his aid, just the same as he had done so many times before for them.

James will always be remembered for his service to Pike County, both for his time as a Deputy Sheriff and his faithful years as a Constable. He served with compassion, loyalty and the utmost integrity. James' comrades highly respected him, and described him as someone who treated others as he wanted to be treated. He was an excellent officer and was always prepared to answer the call of duty.

James was a loving husband, a father of four, a grandfather and a former road foreman. His loss will be felt across the county and his legacy will carry on in the hearts and lives of those who love him.

Let us remember that everyday our law enforcement officers are putting their lives on the line and that a routine day is never routine. On behalf of my wife Cynthia and myself, I want to extend our deepest heartfelt sympathies to the Thacker family.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring a brave, public servant for the people of Pike County, Kentucky, the late James Thacker.

IN HONOR OF JOANNE B. "JOEY" LASNIK

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Joanne B. "Joey" Lasnik, who passed away January 4, 2012. Lasnik was a longtime community activist, volunteer, leader, daughter, grandmother, and friend.

Lasnik was an active member of the Monterey County Commission on the Status of Women, the Monterey County Overall Economic Development Commission, the Monterey County Democratic Women's Club, a leader on the National and local level of the Girl Scouts, the Salinas branch of NAACP, and the American Association of University Women, she served on the committee for the Fort Ord Task Force, and the advisory Board of KHDC. In 1981 Joanne was the first woman ever to be named foreman of the Monterey County Grand Jury. Joey proudly served four terms on the Hartnell College Board of Trustage

Joey always strived to enhance the status of women and seniors throughout her professional life as the Executive Director of the Volunteer Center for Salinas, Executive Director of the Alliance on Aging, a Board member of the Salinas Senior Center, and Executive Director of Meals on Wheels of Salinas Valley. She was instrumental in developing the vision to build a one-step state of the art Senior Center in Salinas. Joey had a talent for grant writing, passion for education, and beliefs in fairness and equality. She helped to train others to continue and expand on her work. She is considered an important mentor to many women.

Joanne had many tremendous accomplishments from her Bachelors in Education for the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Masters in Science from Purdue University, to all of her volunteer work, helping to organize women's shelters and partaking in numerous community groups. In addition, she was an accomplished needle-pointer, seamstress, and creative cook, but most of all she was a proud parent to Leslie, Jay, Mark, her daughter in law and beloved grandchildren as well as her "adopted" sons from Japan she hosted for over 10 years.

Mr. Speaker, I know I speak for the whole House in mourning the passing of this dedicated and loving woman. Her life was a gift to her community, a shining example to be emulated by those who she inspired to continue her work.

A TRIBUTE TO ONOREVOLE ALESSANDRO PAGANO

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY

of PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Alessandro Pagano. Mr. Pagano, a member of the Italian National Parliament, has worked extensively to strengthen Italian American relations.

As a member of the Italian Parliament, Mr. Pagano works tirelessly to improve the fields of health, education, and budget. He has served as Regional Minister of Health, Regional Minister for Budget and Finance, Regional Councilor for Cultural Heritage, and Regional Minister for Education.

As the Regional Minister of Health, Mr. Pagano has served under various committees in an effort to improve both Italian healthcare systems and improve quality of life for the Italian people.

With his extensive educational background in both economics and banking, Mr. Pagano has impressively increased revenues without raising taxes and recovered financial resources of over one billion Euros per year, earning a positive rating with the international rating agency Fitch.

Mr. Pagano also has as history of teaching. He holds two degrees earned with honors in both banking and economics from the University of Messina, and has dedicated well over a decade of his life to teaching in higher education. He continues to serve as a member of the Scientific Committee of the weekly tax legislation, titled "The Taxes."

Under his position of Regional Minister for Education, Mr. Pagano has begun multi-million Euro programs to help keep Sicilian schools safe.

In his continued efforts to preserve cultural heritage, Mr. Pagano was appointed as Regional Minister for Cultural Heritage, and has begun projects to renovate and restore priceless buildings and cultural artifacts.

Mr. Pagano's long and impressive career showcases his commitment to a better society, his profession, and his community. Mr. Speaker, I ask that you, and my other distinguished colleagues join me in thanking Alessandro Pagano for his work and his continued service to both Italy and the United States of America.

REVENUE ESTIMATE

HON. ALCEE L. HASTINGS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, on January 30, 2012, the Joint Committee on Taxation produced a revenue estimate for a bill that I introduced today. The Joint Committee estimates that my bill, which amends the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to disallow a deduction for amounts paid or incurred by a responsible party relating to a discharge of oil, would save hardworking American taxpayers an average of $1.3 billion per year.

I revise and extend my remarks today to include that revenue estimate for the RECORD.

Congress of the United States, Joint Committee on Taxation, Washington, DC, Jan 30, 2012.

Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. HASTINGS: This letter is in response to your request, dated January 26, 2012, for a revenue estimate of a proposal that would disallow the deductibility of amounts paid or incurred by a responsible party relating to the discharge of oil.

Your proposal would amend Internal Revenue Code (the "Code") section 162 by disallowing the ability to deduct expenses incurred as a consequence of the discharge of oil into navigable waters, other than an incident caused by an act of God or an act of war. For definitional purposes, any term used in the proposal that is also used in the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 is to have the same meaning as in the Oil Pollution Act of 1990. Based on our discussion with Ian Wolf McCormick of your staff, we have assumed that the tax base includes direct and indirect clean up costs, compensatory and punitive damages, associated legal fees, and other amounts associated with the discharge and paid by responsible parties. In addition, any casualty losses associated with the responsible party's own property incurred as a result of the oil spill are not included in the tax base nor are any of the responsible party's voluntary mitigation payments.

Your proposal would be effective for returns of tax the extended due date of which is after the date of enactment (regardless of whether any extension had been requested). For purposes of the revenue estimate, we have assumed a date of enactment of April 1, 2012

As incidents resulting in the discharge of oil of sizeable proportions do not occur with a frequency that creates a pattern that can be modeled, this estimate is primarily based on known discharges of oil that have occurred as of this date.

IN HONOR OF DR. RAMA KHALSA

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the career of Dr. Rama Khalsa, who retired as the Director of Health Services of Santa Cruz County in the state of California. Not only was she a leader in the field of health services, but also in mental health. During her 35 years of service in the health care field, Rama was an advocate for reducing the costs and improving the quality of health services for low-income and uninsured residents of the county.

Her career began in 1976 as a Juvenile Court Psychologist in the San Bernardino County Probation Department, and then segued into mental health which has been her career. She has won numerous awards, participated in many research projects, has been awarded honors and doctorate degree, but is most proud of her accomplishments in the field of community access to mental health services.

She was a founder and first Chair of the Health Safety Net Clinic Coalition of Santa Cruz County, promoted the potential of health information technology in the last decade, and was a key leader in the development of the local children's health coverage program for Santa Cruz, Monterey, and Merced Counties.

During my tenure in the California State Legislature we worked together on the revision of the California Mental Health Master Plan Act to upgrade services and make mental health treatment more accessible in our state.

Rama has been an active member of the Board of Directors of Central Coast Alliance for Health, served on various committees, and has given her time for the Health Services Agency, Health Improvement Partnership Council, Safety Net Clinic Coalition, Health Information Technology, and Santa Cruz Health Information Exchange.

After 35 years of public service, Rama hopes to spend more time painting, traveling, volunteering, enjoying classical and Celtic music and spending more time with her two children, Siri and Dayal, in her retirement. She also plans to continue with health advocacy, grant writing and policy work.

Mr. Speaker, I know I speak for the whole House and the entire mental health community in California as I commend Rama Khalsa for all she has done and all she will undoubtedly continue to do. I extend my most sincere thanks and warmest wishes for her success and much happiness in her retirement. We are all blessed by her public service.

CELEBRATING EDITH COLEMAN'S 95TH BIRTHDAY

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY

OF INDIANA

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure and honor that I congratulate

Mrs. Mary Edith Brown Coleman on a momentous milestone, her 95th birthday, which will be on February 13, 2012. Edith will be celebrating this milestone with family and friends on Saturday, February 11, 2012. Throughout the past 72 years, Edith's presence in Northwest Indiana has allowed her the opportunity to touch the lives of countless people.

Edith Brown was born on February 13, 1917 in Muskogee, Oklahoma. She was one of four children born to Luther Albert Brown and Dora Rozolia Draper Brown. Having gone on to live in Kansas City, Kansas and Chicago, Illinois, Edith finally relocated to Gary, Indiana in 1940. Quite the accomplished student, Edith completed her Bachelor of Science and Master of Science degrees in education at Indiana University in Bloomington. From there, she decided to go into the teaching profession. As a teacher at Frederick Douglass Elementary School in Gary for over 27 years, Edith was able to enrich the lives of so many young people in the Gary community. For her commitment to the youth of northwest Indiana, she is worthy of the highest praise.

Equally as impressive, Edith has always been seen as the foundation of her family. She and her husband, the late William Henry Coleman, were blessed with the births of two wonderful children: Norma Louise Coleman and Merle Jean Coleman. Edith's family, as well as those whose lives she has touched, admire her for devoting unselfish love, time, dedication, guidance, and spirit to her family, her students, and her friends.

As well as being dearly loved and respected by her family, her students, and her community, Edith is also well known for her involvement with her church, the First Church of God in Gary, and several other organizations. For years, Edith has been a distinguished member of the American Association of University Women, the Women's Association of the Northwest Indiana Symphony Society, the Red Hat Society, and the Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority. Since her arrival in Northwest Indiana, Edith has always been known as a goodhearted woman who is always willing to help the people in her community. For her selflessness, she is to be commended and admired.

Mr. Speaker, Mary Edith Brown Coleman has always given her time and efforts self-lessly to the youth and the community in northwest Indiana throughout her illustrious life. She has taught every member of her family and extended family the true meaning of service to others. I respectfully ask that you and my other distinguished colleagues join me in wishing Edith a very happy 95th birthday.

HONORING ST. COLUMBKILLE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

HON. BRUCE L. BRALEY

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the outstanding results achieved by St. Columbkille Elementary School, Dubuque, Iowa by being named a 2011 No Child Left Behind-Blue Ribbon School.

The program honors elementary, middle and high schools that are superior academically or that demonstrate dramatic gains in student achievement to high levels.

INTRODUCING EXCEPTIONS TAXES ACT

St. Columbkille Elementary is one of only seven schools out of 1,633 in lowa and one of 304 schools out of 132,656 nationwide to achieve Blue Ribbon status this year. Less than 1 percent of schools nationwide were chosen for the award. This is a true credit to the staff and teachers who continually challenge students to want more and be better.

Mr. Speaker, I am extremely proud of the accomplishments of St. Columbkille Elementary School and its Principal, Barb Roling. Earning this award shows strength and persistence and I am proud to serve these fine students in Congress.

MR. PATRICK J. SOLANO

HON. LOU BARLETTA

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BARLETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Patrick J. Solano, the 2012 Community Leadership Award recipient at Leadership Wilkes-Barre. Mr. Solano has a long history of dedicated service to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and his country.

Pat Solano was a member of the United States Air Force during World War II. While in the military, he was lauded many times for his exemplary service, which included more than 20 combat missions. His military awards include a Group Presidential Citation, the Air Force Medal with two oak leaf clusters, and the European Combat Theatre Medal with two bronze stars.

After retiring from military service, Pat Solano dedicated himself to serving the great commonwealth in which he was born. He held many positions in state government, including serving as senior counselor to Governor Tom Ridge and Governor Mark Schweiker. Even today, at age 85, Pat Solano continues to serve as a counselor and advisor to many of Pennsylvania's legislators.

In addition to his work as a philanthropist and his role as a decorated war veteran, family has always come first for Mr. Solano. He and his wife Marie have six daughters and 11 grandchildren. He and his family have lived for years in Hughestown, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Speaker, it is fitting that Leadership Wilkes-Barre honors a man who has donated so much of his time and effort to furthering the success of the Commonwealth. I am certain that his efforts will not end here. The work of Patrick J. Solano has ensured the continued success of Pennsylvania, and it is my pleasure to acknowledge all of his efforts here today.

NTRODUCING THE NARROWING EXCEPTIONS FOR WITHHOLDING TAXES ACT

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Narrowing Exceptions for Withholding Taxes Act. This legislation will close a loophole in existing tax law that allows certain self-employed individuals to avoid paying their fair share of Medicare payroll taxes.

Medicare is financed in part by a payroll tax paid by employers and employees. The total tax is 2.9 percent split between workers and employers. Self-employed individuals pay the full 2.9 percent themselves.

Under current law, the S corporation structure allows certain self-employed individuals a way to avoid paying full Medicare taxes. Income received as compensation for services to that S corporation will be subject to the Medicare payroll tax, but any income classified as a distribution of profits will be exempt. This loophole in our tax law encourages income manipulation. These individuals pay themselves a nominal income for their services to the S corporation and classify most of their income as profits and dividends, to avoid paying the 2.9 percent payroll tax.

The House Democrats first tried to close this loophole in December 2009 with H.R. 4213, the American Jobs and Closing Tax Loopholes Act. That bill passed the House, but did not pass the Senate. At the time, the Joint Committee on Taxation scored this provision as raising $11.2 billion in revenue over 10 years.

The IRS does not have the resources to audit all 4 million S corporations to ensure that there is no underreporting of income. The Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, the Joint Committee on Taxation and the GAO have all highlighted the systematic underreporting of income. The GAO estimated that pass-through organizations underpaid $15 billion in 2001, with a median payroll tax underpayment of $20.127.

Teachers, firefighters, and nurses can't structure their income to avoid payroll taxes. This is a strategy for lawyers, lobbyists, and investment managers. This legislation would close this loophole by targeting the individuals most likely to take advantage of this loophole. These are professional service businesses built on the reputation and skill of three or fewer employees in the fields of health. law. lobbying, engineering, architecture, accounting, investment advice or management, or brokerage services. Under this provision, all of the profits someone gets from an S corporation they own would be subject to the payroll tax. These shareholders will no longer be able to underreport wage income to exclude the rest of their earnings from the payroll tax.

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich took advantage of this loophole. When he filed his 2010 taxes, he reported earnings from his two S corporations of just $444,327 in income but $2.4 million in profits and dividends. This nearly $3 million was just earnings in the same year from the same two organizations. However, by choosing to report only $444,327 as wage income, the Wall Street Journal estimated that Mr. Gingrich saved himself $69,000 in Medicare payroll taxes. His $2.4 million in profits and dividends was exempt from the 2.9 percent payroll taxes due to a flaw in our tax laws.

This legislation would put our workers on an even playing field. Self-employed individuals would no longer have the option to avoid the taxes with the creative use of a pass-through entity. Just like those individuals who work in an ordinary partnership or sole-proprietorship, or work for a larger institution, every taxpayer would pay his or her fair share toward the Medicare trust fund.

HONORING THE AMERICAN BUREAU OF SHIPPING ON THEIR 150TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. GENE GREEN

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the American Bureau of Shipping for their 150 years at the forefront of setting the standard of excellence in marine and offshore classification in the United States and around the world.

From its world headquarters in Houston, Texas, the American Bureau of Shipping, or ABS, manages the third largest class society on the globe, with a classed fleet of over 10,000 commercial vessels, in more than 150 offices in 70 countries.

From the time it was first chartered in the State of New York in 1862 as the American Shipmasters' Association, ABS has been committed to the maritime industry and deeply involved in its technical development and the improvement of its safety standards.

Born out of a need for industry self-regulation, ABS published its first technical standards, Rules for Survey and Classing Wooden Vessels, in 1870. When the era of wooden ships gave way to iron, ABS established standards for these structures, and later for steel vessels.

ABS was officially recognized by the U.S. Government in the Merchant Marine Act of 1920, requiring that in work involving a classification organization, every governmental agency in the United States would turn to ABS.

ABS has continued its tradition of leading the classification and maritime safety industry through the 20th and 21st centuries by being the first society to publish rules for the construction and classing of offshore drilling units, submersibles, and aluminum vessels, as well as the first society to classify small-waterplane-area twin hull (or SWATH) vessels, floating production storage and offloading (or FPSO) vessels.

I congratulate ABS, its board of directors, and its hard-working employees for their commitment to the Houston community and for 150 more years of success as the world leader in maritime classification and safety.

CONGRESS SALUTES AMERICAN HERO AND PURPLE HEART RECIPIENT CHARLES HENRY KLINGELHOEFER

HON. BILL POSEY

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. POSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to my colleagues' attention to the Posthumous Purple Heart Ceremony of WW I Veteran Mr. Charles Henry Klingelhoefer born April 16, 1876 in Baltimore, Maryland, taking place in Brevard County, Florida, He is survived by his niece Ms. Diane Roberts Vess of Melbourne. More specifically, on February 6, 2012, the United States Coast Guard will honor the memory of the brave men who served on the United States Coast Guard Cutter Tampa. Mr. Klingelhoefer, one of five brothers, was assigned to the United States Coast Guard Cutter Tampa, and served as a Warrant Carpenter.

The Purple Heart was presented in honor of those who received fatal wounds in the sinking of the United States Coast Guard Cutter Tampa at 8:45 p.m. on September 26, 1918—the largest known loss of life by any U.S. naval combat unit during World War I. Under the command of Captain Charles Satterlee, the Tampa served as a convoy escort protecting ships carrying critical Allied war materiel in European waters. The officers and crew earned the praise of the commander of the United States Naval Forces based at Gibraltar for the ship's wartime operational effectiveness.

On that fateful evening, having just completed another successful escort mission from Gibraltar to the United Kingdom, the Tampa departed the convov and proceeded toward the port of Milford Haven, Wales. A short time later, the shock of an explosion was felt by several of those remaining in the convoy. U.S. destroyers and British patrol craft conducted a three-day search of the Tampa's last known position, but found only two unidentified bodies and a small amount of wreckage identified as belonging to the Tampa. German records suggest that the Tampa was sunk by U-Boat 91 because it had reported sinking an American warship fitting the Tampa's description at that time and date.

One hundred-fifteen people, including 111 Coast Guardsmen and four Navy men, perished that evening. The distinguished record of the officers and crew of the Tampa is most heartily commended and is in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Coast Guard.

Mr. Charles Henry Klingelhoefer and the crew of the Tampa laid their lives on the altar of freedom for the benefit our Nation and our way of life. On behalf of the United States Congress I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the sacrifices endured by Mr. Charles Henry Klingelhoefer and the crew of the United States Coast Guard Cutter Tampa.

HONORING GRAPEVINE SENIOR OFFICER WARREN ORR

HON. KENNY MARCHANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I recognize retiring Grapevine Senior Officer Warren Orr for his 24 years of service as a police officer.

Senior Officer Orr began his law enforcement career with the Bonham, Texas Police Department. He served as a Bonham police officer from December 1987 to November 1994.

In November 1994, Senior Officer Orr joined the Grapevine Police Department where he continued his career until he retired in January 2012. During his tenure at the Grapevine Police Department, Senior Officer Orr served as a patrol officer, motorcycle officer and detective. In addition to his normal duties, Senior Officer Orr served as a hostage negotiator for many years and obtained a Master of Peace Officer certification from the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Education. While assigned as a motorcycle officer, Senior Officer Orr received extensive training in crash reconstruction and became one of only three hundred worldwide members of the International Network of Collision Reconstructionists.

Senior Officer Orr and his wife, Grapevine Police Department Senior Officer Darcey Sutton, own a ranch in east Texas. Senior Officer Orr plans to spend his retirement raising cattle and shoeing horses, a trade he learned from his father and has passed on to his son, Bruce Orr. Bruce is a junior in the honors program at Tarleton State University.

I am very proud of the Grapevine Police Department, and I am honored to recognize Senior Officer Orr for his contribution to the community. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the 24th Congressional District of Texas, I ask all my distinguished colleagues to join me in thanking Warren Orr for his service as a police officer.

IN COMMEMORATION OF CORPORAL KEVIN REINHARD

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the life of Marine Corporal Kevin J. Reinhard of Colonia, New Jersey. On January 19, 2012, Corporal Reinhard was on a helicopter mission in the southern Afghanistan province of Helmand, Afghanistan, when his aircraft went down, killing the Corporal and five of his fellow Marines. He was 25 years old. Corporal Reinhard's valiant and heroic actions during his deployment in Afghanistan are truly worthy of this body's recognition.

Marine Corporal Kevin Reinhard is remembered as a loving son who was committed to his family and friends. A resident of the Colonia section of Woodbridge, New Jersey, Corporal Reinhard is a proud alumnus of St. Joseph's High School in Metuchen, New Jersey. He attended Ramapo College and later transferred to Middlesex County College in Edison, New Jersey where he majored in Criminal Science. In the spring of 2008, he admirably enlisted in the United States Marine Corps and was stationed in Hawaii. He soon rose to the rank of Corporal and proudly served as a Crew Chief, flying on a Sikorsky Sea Stallion with HMEI 363, also known as the "Lucky Red Lions." In January 2012, Corporal Reinhard was serving his second deployment in Afghanistan when his helicopter crashed, tragically taking his life and the lives of five other Marines. Corporal Reinhard leaves behind his mother, Kathleen Rose, his father, James, sister, Kathleen Marie, as well as his paternal grandparents, James and Mary Ann Reinhard. He is pre-deceased by his maternal grandparents, John and Veronica Gerrity of Colonia. Corporal Reinhard was an outstanding individual who proudly embodied the motto of the United States Marine Corps.

Mr. Speaker, once again, please join me in commemorating the life of Corporal Kevin J. Reinhard, an American hero who courageously served his country. His legacy has served as an inspiration to us all and he will truly be missed.

Today, it is $15,295,052,578,718.01. We've added $10,493,647,403,423.73 to our debt in 16 years. This is $10 trillion in debt our Nation, our economy, and our children could have avoided with a balanced budget amendment.

LILLY LEDBETTER FAIR PAY ACT ANNIVERSARY

HON. DEBBIE WASSERMAN SCHULTZ

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Speaker, this weekend we celebrated an important anniversary in our nation's history.

Three years ago, only nine days after taking the oath of office, President Barack Obama signed the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act into law. It was the first bill he signed into law as President, solidifying this Administration's commitment to women's equality.

I met Lilly Ledbetter during a Judiciary Committee hearing in 2007. She told us then how after working at her company for more than twenty years, she learned of the long-standing pay discrimination against her based on gender. Unfortunately, this type of workplace discrimination occurs all too frequently across our country. Women still make just three-quarters of a man's salary for the same work. Fortunately, for women all across the country, Lilly Ledbetter found out about the discrimination carried out against her and took action.

As a result of her courage and strength, President Obama and the Democratic-led Congress passed this important piece of legislation that protects women and addresses a critical aspect of the wage gap in our country.

critical aspect of the wage gap in our country. The Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act closes numerous loopholes and clarifies that an employee is discriminated against each and every time she receives an unfair paycheck. It also makes modest, common-sense reforms that hold employers accountable for their actions.

But our fight is not over. We have a long way to go until women reach true wage equality, which is why we must support legislation like the Paycheck Fairness Act, which builds on previous efforts and continues to address wage disparities.

Lilly's story is proof that progress can be made on this front, and just as importantly, she is a testament to how one person can create a lasting legacy of change.

Today, we celebrate Lily Ledbetter's courage by commemorating the anniversary of this essential legislation becoming law, and by remembering that in America, one person can make a difference.

CONGRATULATING NDSU BISON ON WINNING 2011 FCS CHAMPIONSHIP

HON. RICK BERG

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BERG. Mr. Speaker, today I want to congratulate the North Dakota State Bison on an incredible football season that led to winning the 2011 FCS championship.

More than 10,000 Bison fans cheered on NDSU in Frisco, Texas, where the Bison capped off a 14–1 season and defeated the Sam Houston Bearkats in the championship game 17–6 on January 7, 2012.

game 17–6 on January 7, 2012.

The Bison, Coach Craig Bohl and his staff worked hard this season, and their determination resulted in NDSU's 9th football championship, and the first at the Division I level.

These student athletes represent NDSU's commitment to both academic and athletic excellence. Their character and perseverance truly exemplify the North Dakota spirit, and they have made our state proud. These young men will be remembered for a lifetime. Their efforts brought our state closer together, and we celebrate their athletic and academic successes.

Congratulations to the Bison players, coaches, NDSU staff, and Bison fans everywhere on an excellent season. You've made North Dakota proud!

Thank you, and Go Bison!

HONORING THE ARTESIA-CERRITOS LIONS CLUB 65TH AN-NIVERSARY

HON. LINDA T. SANCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and congratulate the Artesia-Cerritos Lions Club for their 65th anniversary. This is a remarkable milestone that deserves our recognition and praise.

For 65 years, the Artesia-Cerritos Lions Club has maintained the reputation of being a keystone in local communities due to their steadfast response of donations and services to residents in need. The Lions Club has been at the forefront of health and safety, offering their services to local public safety fairs and Relay for Life events. They have also organized support efforts for the needy by arranging food and toy drives. In addition, the Lions Club has been vital in building the morale and closeness of the community by hosting the Miss Artesia Royal Court Contest, the Miss Cerritos Scholarship Contest, Flag Day events, and annual Easter Egg Hunts.

The Artesia-Cerritos Lions Club has provided life changing services and opportunities for youth of Artesia and Cerritos. The Lions Club has provided eyeglasses for children in the ABC Unified School District, sponsored the annual track meet for all of the elementary schools in the school district, and have hosted a student speaker contest for local high schools. In addition, The Lions Club has been a sponsor of the Cerritos High School Leos Club, a youth volunteer group, which has inspired young people to assume leadership roles by giving them a chance to learn, grow, and serve by participating in community service projects.

The Artesia-Cerritos Lions Club, driven by their motto "We Serve", has been a model for organizing and empowering volunteers in Artesia and Cerritos to serve their community. The contributions and achievements of the Lions Club members are far too many to count, but the enrichment and sense of community they have created is something to be acknowledged. For that reason, I would like to recognize the Artesia-Cerritos Lions Club for 65 years of honorable deeds and good work.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE CENTRAL VALLEY FLOOD PROTECTION BOARD

HON. DORIS O. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Ms. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the Central Valley Flood Protection Board as they celebrate their 100th Anniversary. It is a great pleasure to recognize the Board's long standing dedication to flood protection projects and flood management in the Central Valley. As Board members, staff and agency partners gather to celebrate this milestone, I ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring the key role the organization plays in protecting millions of Californians from a potentially devastating flood.

The Central Valley Flood Protection Board was created by the California Legislature in 1911. The Board's role is to serve as a liaison between the State of California, local residents, property owners, cities and counties, and the United States government. The Board works closely with the Army Corps of Engineers to ensure that the Central Valley receives the highest level of flood protection possible, while addressing a number of financial, environmental, and engineering challenges.

Over the last century, the Board has maintained a wide variety of Central Valley flood protection systems and infrastructure along the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers, and their tributaries. This encompasses 1,600 miles of levees, 107 million acres of land, and 1,300 miles of designated floodways. The Congressional District that I represent is home to the City of Sacramento, which sits at the confluence of the American and Sacramento Rivers. It is without doubt that the Board's investment decisions have helped improve the safety for each of us that call Sacramento home.

In 2007, the California Legislature and the governor signed legislation that changed the name of the Central Valley Flood Protection and expanded the Board's responsibilities and authorities. The Board remains responsible to the citizens of California to ensure that the flood management system within the Central Valley meets the ever-mounting challenges of the 21st Century. This includes working with the Corps of Engineers on vegetation management and the California Department of Water Resources on a new Central Valley Flood Protection Plan.

The Board is led by Chair Benjamin Carter, who serves alongside Jane Dolan, Teri Rice, Francis "Butch" Hodgkins, Emma Suarez, John Brown and Michael Villines. The Board's Executive Officer is Jay Punia.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to pay tribute to the Central Valley Flood Protection Board and their continuous commitment to providing the Central Valley with ever-improving levels of flood protection. The Board has contributed immensely to the safety and vitality of California's Central Valley. As Board members and staff gather to celebrate their 100th anniversary, I ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring their outstanding work in providing flood protection for the residents of the Central Valley.

SISTERS OF LORETTO CELEBRATE 200TH JUBILEE YEAR

HON. SILVESTRE REYES

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of a truly American story of faith and service, a tradition that has served, educated, and upheld true values in my district of EI Paso, Texas. During this Catholic Schools Week, I would like to congratulate the Sisters of Loretto celebrating their 200th Jubilee Year this April.

On April 25, 1812, three frontier women, Sisters Mary Rhodes, Nancy Havern and Christina Stuart, with the help of their Catholic pastor, the Rev. Charles Nerinckx, came together to found the Sisters of Loretto at the Foot of the Cross, on Hardin's Creek in central Kentucky, marking the beginning of a uniquely American community of faith and service. Motivated by faith and charity, they were soon joined by many others, taking as their purpose the instruction of girls and young women of every faith and economic means, even welcoming enslaved persons.

The Sisters of Loretto expanded the work of education westward, first by steamboat to Missouri and Louisiana, and then by wagon train to New Mexico, by mail-coach to Colorado, and by train to Texas, Arizona, and California, ultimately contributing to American education in more than 40 states. In the 20th century, they reached out to girls in Asia, South America, and Central America. Their members now serve throughout the United States, as well as in Europe, Guatemala, Bolivia, Nicaragua, Uganda, Ghana, and Pakistan.

In their 200 years of work, the Sisters of Loretto and their colleagues have founded nearly 300 schools in the United States. The first Texas site of the Sisters of Loretto was established by Mother Praxedes in 1879 in El Paso County, and has educated thousands of El Paso and Juarez students through St. Joseph's Academy, Sacred Heart, St. Ignatius, Guardian Angel, Holy Family, Assumption, St. Mary's, St. Patrick's, Cathedral School, St. Joseph's School, and Loretto Academy.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all of the educators and administrators who continue this important legacy. Having reached nearly one million people, the Loretto Community of Sisters continues to educate and foster values of faith, justice, community, and respect in students at Loretto Academy, to teach adult education and GED classes, to work as chaplains at Nazareth Hall Nursing Center, and to run a homeless center for women at the Villa Maria Shelter.

MR. JOHN DELEO

HON. LOU BARLETTA

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BARLETTA. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor and acknowledge John "Jack" DeLeo on his being named "UNICAN of the Year" by the Scranton Chapter of UNICO National.

Jack DeLeo was born in Scranton on December 8, 1947, to Angelo and Irene DeLeo. Jack graduated from West Scranton High School and entered the United States Army. He served his country in Vietnam from 1967 to 1968 with the 1st Battalion, 8th Artillery, 25th Infantry Division, rising to the rank of sergeant. Jack's business career began in sales in the pressure-sensitive labeling industry. After several years, Jack was elevated to general manager of Scranton Label, Inc., until 1992, and is now the company's vice president.

An active member of St. Lucy's Church, West Scranton, Jack is a member of the Holy Name Society and has served as its vice president since 1992. Jack is also active in many community activities and events in the region. He serves the City of Scranton as a member of the Board of Directors on the Parks and Recreation Authority, where he has worked diligently to clean and enhance the beauty and the awareness of Nay Aug Park. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the American Red Cross, Scranton Chapter, where he chairs the Blood Services Committee and several blood drives throughout the year. Jack serves on the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army in Scranton and the Tripps Park Girls Pony League, and he was an assistant coach from 2000 to 2004. Jack served as president of the Columbus Day Association of Lackawanna County in 2002, and is now on its Board of Directors. He was the force in the creation of the Paul Bordi Memorial Scholarship Fund, which serves high school seniors throughout Lackawanna County.

He is an active member of the Scranton Chapter of UNICO National, the largest chapter in the country. He has been extremely active in chapter causes and chaired many fundraising events. He served as president in 2007–08 and presently serves as the chairman of the Board of Directors. Jack has always had a passion for the care and wellbeing of United States veterans. He helped create the UNICO Veteran's Assistance Community (UVAC) Fund. He is now chairman of this fund, which accepts donations from individuals and donates to area veterans wounded in recent years.

He and his wife, Patty, have been married for 21 years and are the proud parents of two daughters: Brittany, a sophomore at Scranton Prep, and Tia, a fifth-grade student at All Saints Academy in Scranton.

UNICO was founded on October 10, 1922, in Waterbury, Connecticut. A group of 15 men, led by Dr. Anthony P. Vastola, came together to create an Italian-American service organization to engage in charitable works, support higher education, and perform patriotic deeds. The name "UNICO" was selected as best representing the nature and the character of this fledging organization. The name is the Italian word for "unique, one of a kind." The founders believed that UNICO would be the only one of its kind because it placed service to the community before and above fraternity. In later years, UNICO became an acronym that stands for "Unity. Neighborliness. Integrity. Charity, and Opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, Jack DeLeo espouses the values of community that Dr. Vastola dreamed of when he helped found UNICO. Mr. DeLeo's steadfast dedication to his Italian-American heritage, community, and country is what makes organizations like UNICO a pillar in our community. I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing and congratulating John "Jack" DeLeo for being named "UNICAN of the Year" by the Scranton Chapter of UNICO National.

RECOGNIZING THE TENAHA TI-GERS FOR WINNING THE TEXAS 1A DIVISION II FOOTBALL CHAM-PIONSHIP

HON. LOUIE GOHMERT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES  $Tuesday, January\ 31,\ 2012$

Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Speaker, it is with enormous pride that I recognize and congratulate the Tenaha Tigers on an amazing 2011 football season in which they captured the Texas State Class 1A Division II Football Championship. These ferocious Tenaha Tigers have reached the pinnacle of success in Texas football for the second time in the last 15 years, having achieved that great title back in 1998.

A series of victories in which the Tigers crushed their opponents led them into the playoffs, where they demonstrated just how powerful they were as a team, playing as one well-tuned machine. The final game saw the Tenaha Tigers ultimately defeat the Munday Moguls 52–28. Although both Munday and Tenaha showed why they were in the finals during the first half, the Tigers pulled ahead in the second half scoring 21 points with little response from the Moguls.

The Tigers strong offensive and defensive lines dominated other teams exhibiting the result of grueling strength and endurance programs that showed how driven the Tigers were individually to excel. Clearly a team does not get to such a level of excellence without a coaching staff that knows its players, what they can accomplish and just how far they can be pushed.

The proof of their preparation and drive to be the best can be found in a number of statistics including the fact that the Tigers consistently maintained a 37.6 point lead over their opponents. Additionally, the defensive line often refused to allow its opposition to score a single touchdown.

There is no doubt that each of the individual players, coaches, and supporting personnel involved with the success of the Tigers will benefit from having witnessed the level of success that is achieved when each individual gives all they have while working together with such dedication and passion.

This tribute goes out to all of the athletic staff including Athletic Director/Head Football Coach Terry Ward and his Assistant Coaches Ian White, Mike Barber, Kevin Cates, Scott Tyner, Todd Bodden and Antonio Holmes.

The team members achieving this memorable accomplishment included T.J. Thomas, Reginald Davis, Demon Horton, Vincent Walton, Edgar Flores, Jacoby Ivy, Shaquille Mitchell, J.R. Hill, Octavius Griffith, Chavis Gregory, Keontas Davis, Damarcus Perry, Jaquarius Williams, Cobe Carraway, Seth Wyatt, Brady Tovar, Assuntay Cleaver, Jose Campos, Marqevius Reed, Alex Horton, JaKelvin Cooper, Izikel Flores, Damiem Reese, DeAaron Roland, Derek Jones, LaDarren Cooks, Edgar Pineda, Cody Richardson, Aaron Harris, Leon Aguilar, Donald Smith, Dustin Davis, and Tim Hafford.

No football team ever becomes a champion without unwavering support, and that is exactly what the Tigers had from the Tenaha Independent School District staff and the entire community. That is why congratulations go to all who contributed in any way to the success of the Tigers in for the 2011 season. May God continue to bless all of their efforts both in school and as they one day finish high school and use that same drive and determination to make this country even stronger. Congratulations go to the State Champion Tenaha Tigers, as their legacy is now recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that will endure as long as there is a United States of America.

CONGRATULATORY REMARKS FOR OBTAINING THE RANK OF EAGLE SCOUT

HON. SANDY ADAMS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mrs. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate Talon M. Falconer for achieving the rank of Eagle Scout.

Throughout the history of the Boy Scouts of America, the rank of Eagle Scout has only been attained through dedication to concepts such as honor, duty, country and charity. By applying these concepts to daily life, Talon has proven his true and complete understanding of their meanings, and thereby deserves this honor.

I offer my congratulations on a job well done and best wishes for the future.

IN HONOR OF LISA MANTARRO MOORE

HON. DENNIS A. CARDOZA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. CARDOZA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Lisa Mantarro Moore for being honored by the Ceres Chamber of Commerce with its Citizen of the Year Lifetime Achievement Award. Lisa, also a valued member of my staff, has long been a tireless advocate for the city of Ceres, California, and its surrounding communities, and I am honored to pay tribute to her achievement today.

A lifelong resident of Ceres, Lisa's public

A lifelong resident of Ceres, Lisa's public service career began when she was elected as a student body officer at Ceres High School. After graduating from the California State University, Stanislaus, Lisa started her career with the U.S. House of Representatives as an aide to Congressman Gary Condit. For the past twenty years, she has served the constituents of California's 18th Congressional District as a Field Representative and a District Director, and currently, as my Deputy Chief of Staff. Lisa's leadership and skill have truly made a difference in the lives of those she has helped.

Lisa has long been a leader in the Ceres community. From 2001 to 2005, Lisa served the city as a councilmember as well as Vice Mayor. She has also served as an officer on the Ceres Street Faire Committee for the past ten years. In addition, she worked to form the Ceres Youth Commission, helped lead campaigns for passage of school bonds in Measures J and U as well as the Measure H halfcent sales tax for public safety. Further, she serves on the board at the Ceres Whitmore Mansion and on the Sam Vaughn and Mae Hensley Junior High School Site Councils.

In addition to her leadership in Ceres, Lisa is also a strong advocate for women. She is a longtime member of Soroptimist International of Ceres, which serves to better the lives of women and girls both locally and around the world. She was also instrumental in the development of the Stanislaus County Family Justice Center and serves on its Board of Directors.

It is my great privilege to honor Lisa Mantarro Moore on being recognized as the Ceres Chamber of Commerce's Citizen of the Year Lifetime Achievement Award recipient. She is certainly most deserving of this high acknowledgement. Her dedication to the city of Ceres and her passion for public service has truly made a difference in bettering her community. It is a true pleasure to have her on my staff and as my personal friend. Please join me in recognizing her work and her lifelong achievements.

HONORING THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE OF GENERAL PETER CHIARELLI

HON. JAY INSLEE

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor General Peter W. Chiarelli, who is retiring today as Vice Chief of Staff of the U.S Army, a position he has held with distinction since 2008. General Chiarelli's retirement is hardearned and well-deserved, coming after 40 years of brave service to his country. He enlisted in 1972 as a 2nd lieutenant of armor, served two combat tours in Iraq, and eventually became the second-highest-ranking general at the Pentagon. We are indebted to the service of General Chiarelli, and I am proud to say that he is a native Washingtonian.

General Chiarelli was born in Seattle, Washington and graduated with a bachelor's degree in political science from Seattle University, where he was a Distinguished Military Graduate of Seattle University's Army ROTC program. He received his masters from the University of Washington, and also led several different units at Fort Lewis, in Washington state. In addition to his service at Fort Lewis, General Chiarelli served as commander of the First Calvary Division at Fort Hood, Texas, as Director of Operations, Readiness and Mobilization at U.S. Army Headquarters, and led the Multi-National Corps in Irag.

Beyond simply acknowledging his service and expressing the gratitude of myself and my constituents, I would also like to acknowledge the General's longstanding advocacy on behalf of behavioral health issues in the Army. At a time when many of our young men and women are returning from service abroad suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injury, and other issues related to their service, General Chiarelli has called attention to the obligation we have to provide these heroes with the care they need and deserve

General Chiarelli, even in your retirement, myself, my colleagues, and my constituents remain inspired by your unwavering commitment to this nation, which will long serve as a shining example of the spirit of service and sacrifice that future generations will aspire to equal.

IN MEMORY OF LYMAN L. HUBBARD, SR.

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the life of an American hero from Springfield. Illinois.

Lyman L. Hubbard, Sr. passed away on January 12, 2012 at the age of 85. One of the Tuskegee Airmen, Mr. Hubbard graduated as a command pilot from Tuskegee Army Air Base during World War II, and he dedicated his life to serving our great Nation. Known as a strong leader, Mr. Hubbard flew in multiple combat tours in Southeast Asia and earned numerous U.S. and foreign military decorations. Upon retiring in 1970, Mr. Hubbard had flown nearly 7,000 hours over a more than 20-year career in the Air Force.

Mr. Hubbard was also dedicated to the history of his community and his nation, as shown in 2005, when he saved from potential destruction one of the first African-American orphanages in the nation, the Lincoln Colored Home in Springfield.

I want to extend my condolences, and those of my colleagues in this House, to the family and friends of Lyman Hubbard, Sr., a patriot and true hero who will be missed by all who knew him.

IN HONOR OF CONGRESSMAN GLENN THOMPSON IN RECOGNITION OF HIS DISTINGUISHED EAGLE SCOUT AWARD

HON. PETE SESSIONS

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, last night, Congressman GLENN "GT" THOMPSON was honored by the Boy Scouts of America with the Distinguished Eagle Scout Award. This award is the highest honor the Boy Scouts bestow, and is awarded to a deserving Eagle Scout for distinguished service in his profession and to his community for a period of at least 25 years after attaining the level of Eagle Scout.

A lifelong resident of North Central Pennsylvania, Congressman THOMPSON earned his Eagle Scout in May of 1977 from Boy Scout Troop 52 in Walker Township, Pennsylvania. Since then, Congressman THOMPSON has served his community as a volunteer fireman, member of the Bald Eagle Area School District Board of Education, and in 2008 was elected to serve his constituents as their voice in the U.S. House of Representatives.

I was proud to be with GLENN last night to help those closest to him honor his achievements. GLENN embodies the virtues of public service, duty to country and moral integrity that serve as the pillars of Scouting.

Therefore, today I wish to recognize Congressman GLENN THOMPSON and thank him for his service to his community and our country.

A TRIBUTE TO RAUF RAIF DENKTAS

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Rauf Raif Denktaş, the Turkish Cypriot leader who formerly served as the Vice President of the Republic of Cyprus and President of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus. Mr. Denktaş passed away on January 13, 2012.

Mr. Denktas had a career of service to Turkish Cypriots that spanned six decades. As far back as 1958, he attended the United Nations General Assembly as a representative of Turkish Cypriots. In 1960, Cyprus won independence from Britain and an impassioned debate and conflict over the future of that island has continued to this day. Cyprus has been divided since 1974. Mr. Denktas was elected President of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus in 1976 and was reelected in 1981. He was subsequently elected President of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus on four separate occasions between 1985 and 2000, and served through April 25, 2005. He was also a prolific writer and photographer, and his works have been publicly displayed.

Mr. Denktaş was a colorful, effective leader and spokesman for Turkish Cypriots. Despite the tensions that have existed on the island of Cyprus for decades, the two sides have maintained a largely peaceful existence. Let us hope that a peaceful, prosperous, long-term solution can be found for the future of Cyprus.

INTRODUCTION OF A BILL TO AMEND THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE OF 1986 TO DISALLOW A DEDUCTION FOR AMOUNTS PAID OR INCURRED BY A RESPONSIBLE PARTY RELATING TO A DISCHARGE OF OIL

HON. ALCEE L. HASTINGS

OF FLORIDA

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today Exxon announced annual earnings of $41.1 billion, a 35 percent increase from the previous year. Recently, ConocoPhillips announced $12.4 billion profits for 2011. Chevron's earnings for the year also rose 41 percent to $26.9 billion. These enormous figures indicate that these global corporations no longer need charity from the United States government. For this reason. I rise today to introduce a bill that has been needed at least since the Exxon Valdez spilled 750,000 barrels of oil into Prince William Sound, My bill closes a loophole that permits these big oil companies to pad their bottom lines with tax deductions for cleaning up their oil spills. While the high price of gasoline continues to burden American families, oil companies are raking in such huge profits. Why should the American taxpayer pay for what the oil companies are supposed to do anyway?

Through clever accounting, a big oil company can actually deduct from its tax liability the money it spends cleaning up after an oil spill as an "ordinary cost of doing business." These big oil companies used to pay their fair share of taxes on their massive profits. Corporate taxes used to account for 40 percent of Federal revenues, but that now has fallen to around 7 percent, with many companies paying no taxes at all. At the same time that families, as well as Federal, State and local governments, are tightening their budgets, we're letting big oil and gas companies profit from valuable tax revenue that they don't deserve.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that closing this loophole in the tax code will save the American taxpayer an average $1.3 billion per year. With massive cuts to hundreds of essential programs and organizations dedicated to ensuring access to education, affordable health care, homeownership assistance, unemployment insurance, veterans benefits, loans for small businesses, food assistance to prevent hunger, support for farmers growing essential crops, and a middle class that is struggling more than ever, that billion dollars per year would ensure that these programs are not losing tax dollars because exceedingly wealthy companies are reaping the benefits. By eliminating a loophole that lets the largest oil and gas companies benefit from their own mistakes, this bill makes the tax code fair again for hardworking Americans and will put our country on track to develop a clean, sustainable, and sensible energy policy.

These tax dollars are not lost only when there's a rare catastrophic spill like the BP Deepwater Horizon or Exxon Valdez. In fact, oil spills happen all the time and oil companies can just write off the costs. Right now, there's a Chevron gas rig blowout burning at 1400 degrees Fahrenheit off the coast of Nigeria that Chevron has been unable to extinguish for over a week. Two people are dead and there is a sheen in the water. There were also recent blowouts at the Macondo well in the Gulf, the Montara well in the Timor Sea, as well as major accidents and spills in Bohai Bay, China and off the coast of Brazil.

I believe the tax code should reflect our country's need to end our reliance on fossil fuels by discouraging blowouts and oil spills and providing incentives for responsible and efficient energy use, and sustainable, clean energy sources.

We can no longer afford a 20th century energy policy when the rest of the world is well into the 21g century. From the Keystone pipeline debate to subsidies for oil and gas companies, our antiquated energy policy is replacted in our outdated tax code containing many provisions that have long since outgrown their usefulness. My bill will put our country on the right track.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) defines an "ordinary business expense" as a cost that is both ordinary and necessary. Why are we allowing the cost of an oil spill to be treated as ordinary as purchasing a stapler or paying a phone bill? An oil spill should not be ordinary. From a fiscal standpoint, from a policy standpoint, and from a moral standpoint, even a small oil spill is an extraordinary and terrible mistake with farreaching consequences. Oil and gas corporations should not be allowed to benefit from their own extraordinary mistakes at the expense of the American taxpayer.

I urge my colleagues to support a 21st century energy policy, and a sensible tax code by supporting this bill.

HONORING THE SAINT FRANCIS
BORGIA HIGH SCHOOL
CHEERLEADING SQUAD

HON. BLAINE LUETKEMEYER

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. LUETKEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the Saint Francis Borgia High School cheerleading squad on its state championship.

On October 1, 2011, the squad took first place in the Class 4 division small at the Missouri Cheerleading Coaches Association's state competition. They competed against 16 other terrific teams, but with all their training and preparation, they were able to claim the number one spot. These young women and their coaches should be commended for all their hard work and dedication.

I ask that you join me in recognizing the tremendous effort of the Saint Francis Borgia High School's cheerleaders and congratulating them on a job well done.

A TRIBUTE TO FRANKIE MUSE FREEMAN, NATIONALLY-ACCLAIMED CIVIL RIGHTS ATTORNEY, PUBLIC EDUCATION ADVOCATE, SOCIAL JUSTICE CHAMPION

HON. WM. LACY CLAY

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a great American—a nationally acclaimed civil rights attorney, public education advocate and a true champion of social justice . . . my dear friend and constituent, Frankie Muse Freeman.

Frankie Freeman has been a practicing attorney in state and federal courts for more than 60 years. After graduating Hampton Institute and Howard University Law School, she began her career serving the state of Missouri and the City of St. Louis. During this time she helped the NAACP in the case of Brewton v. St. Louis Board of Education, and later represented the NAACP in the landmark case, Davis v. the St. Louis Housing Authority, which ended racial discrimination in public housing.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson appointed Frankie Freeman as the first female member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

From 1967–1971, Frankie Muse Freeman served with distinction as the 14th National President of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. During this turbulent time period, she used her talents and skills as an attorney to enhance the Sorority's efforts to gain full civil rights for African-Americans. She spoke out often and effectively for social action and ensured that the Sorority continued to lead efforts to secure human rights for all people. She also used her tenure as National President to lead the Sorority in supporting the college education of a record breaking number of African-American students.

Last July, Ms. Freeman became the 96th recipient of the coveted Spingarn Medal, the highest honor bestowed on a citizen by the NAACP. In the official announcement issued by the NAACP Board of Directors Chairman Roslyn M. Brock, she noted, "Frankie Muse Freeman has dedicated her life's work to the civil rights movement. She broke down barriers as a member of the NAACP's brain trust during the 1950s and as the first woman to serve on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. Her determination to end racial discrimination in American society for more than half a century serves as an inspiration to us all."

Mr. Speaker, Frankie Freeman has been a personal mentor of mine for almost 30 years. Her inspired advocacy laid the groundwork for the Federal Voting Rights Act, ended racial discrimination in public housing, and provided dedicated oversight of the St. Louis Public Schools and the voluntary desegregation plan. She is truly a national treasure and is most deserving of congressional recognition. I urge my colleagues to join me in honoring her remarkable service to the United States, the State of Missouri and the St. Louis community.

HON. FREDERICA S. WILSON

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Ms. WILSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to voice my strong opposition to the legislative efforts across the nation aimed at suppressing voter turnout. Democracy is not a spectator sport. It is something we should encourage every American to engage in. A vibrant democracy is a healthy democracy, and back home in my district we take that lesson to heart. I come from Miami, one of the most vibrant cities in the world, and I intend to keep it that way. Unfortunately, some of my former colleagues in the state legislature feel differently and are doing their best to ensure that some people don't enjoy the same access to the polls this November as they did last November.

In Florida, we have enacted a series of changes to our voting laws, and I wanted to make this Chamber aware of them. I want you to hear personally, Mr. Speaker, the reasons why I feel that these new laws are not only uncalled for, but a detriment to American democracy. I feel that the letter the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators, and the Florida State Conference of the NAACP submitted to Chris Herren of the Department of Justice on June 17, 2011 regarding the voting changes in Florida states my feelings clearly and succinctly. I'd like to read that letter for you now, Mr. Speaker:

COMMENT UNDER SECTION 5 OF THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT

Re: Section 5 Submission No. 2011-2187 (Submission by the State of Florida Regarding Omnibus Elections Law Bill, Laws of Florida 2011, Chapter 2011-40)

CHRIS HERREN.

Chief, Voting Section, Civil Rights Division, Room 7254-NWB, U.S. Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. HERREN:

INTRODUCTION

The NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF), the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators, and the Florida State Conference of the NAACP, urge the Attorney General to object to the pending Section 5 submission of the State of Florida's omnibus elections law bill, Laws of Florida, Chapter 2011-40 / HB 1355 (hereinafter "Chapter 2011-40"), which provides for, inter alia: (1) a reduction in the number of days for early voting from 14 days to 8 days; (2) a requirement that registered voters who have moved between counties cast provisional ballots rather than regular ballots; and (3) unprecedented restrictions on volunteer thirdparty voter registration efforts. The state has failed to meet its burden of showing either that Chapter 2011-40 will not have a retrogressive effect, or that its adoption was free of discriminatory purpose.

Each of the measures described above will have a retrogressive effect on minority voting rights. Moreover, Chapter 2011-40 was enacted despite strong and measured concerns presented by a majority of members of the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators about the bill, and the justifications proffered by the State do not help the State satisfy its burden of showing the absence of discriminatory purpose.

ANALYSIS I. BACKGROUND

The implementation of all proposed statewide voting changes in Florida is subject to the requirements of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. 1973c(a). Because five counties in Florida are covered by Section 5 (Collier, Hardee, Hendry, Hillsborough, and Monroe Counties), statewide voting changes in Florida are subject to Section 5's preclearance requirements. See Lawyer v. Dep't of Justice, 521 U.S. 567, 570 (1997) (Section 5 applies to statewide voting changes in Florida); see also Lopez v. Monterey County, 525 U.S. 266, 283-84 (1999) (statewide voting changes are subject to Section 5 review where a state is partially covered by Section Laws of Florida, Chapter 2011-40, the Omnibus Elections Law Bill that is the subject of this Section 5 submission, was signed into law by the Governor of Florida on May 19, 2011, and submitted for review to the Department of Justice pursuant to Section 5 on June 8, 2011. See Section 5 Submission No. 2011-2187.

RETROGRESSIVE EFFECT

Section 5 prohibits voting changes that would result in "a retrogression in the position of racial minorities with respect to their effective exercise of the electoral franchise." Beer v. United States, 425 U.S. 130, 141 (1976). This Comment Letter focuses on the retrogressive effect of three provisions of Chapter 2011-40: (1) reductions in Florida's early voting period; (2) new provisional ballot requirements for registered voters who move across county lines; and (3) new restrictions with attendant penalties on third party organizations engaged in independent voter registration efforts. As documented below, each of these proposed voting changes will have a retrogressive effect.

A. Early Voting

Section 39 of Chapter 2011-40 ("Section 39") amends Florida Statutes section 101.657(1) to reduce the number of early voting days from 14 to 8, and gives local supervisors of elections discretion over early voting hours, changing the hours that early voting sites must operate from a mandatory 8 hours per day (other than weekends), to a discretionary range of 6 to 12 hours per day. Thus, Section 39 not only essentially eliminates the first week of early voting in Florida, by decreasing the total number of days of early voting from the benchmark practice of 14 early voting days to only 8 days, it also makes possible a reduction in total hours of early voting from a mandatory 96 hours to a minimum of only 48 hours. Moreover, by providing for wide discretion in early voting hours, Section 39, as compared to the benchmark practice, will likely result in substantial inconsistency in early voting hours across the 5 covered counties, risking confusion amongst minority voters in these areas.

Significantly, African Americans make up a disproportionate percentage of early voters in Florida's covered counties. African Americans constitute only 12.15% of the voting age population in the five covered jurisdictions in Florida, but were 18.86% of early voters during the 2008 General Election, with over 41,000 African Americans voting early.

Additionally, Section 39 essentially eliminates the first week of early voting, which will have a clear retrogressive effect on minority voters in the covered counties. During the first week of early voting in the 2008 General Election, African Americans constituted an even higher percentage of early voters, 20.08% in the covered counties.

A total of over 17,000 African Americans voted during the first week of early voting in the covered counties during the 2008 General Election. We note that the percentages vary from county to county, and, as the table above demonstrates, Hillsborough County of featured the highest level racial disproportionality among voters during the first week of early voting in the 2008 General Election with African Americans constituting only 14.63% of the voting age population, but 27.70% of early voters.

The figures in our independent analysis are confirmed by at least one news report indicating that, during the 2008 general election, African Americans were 22% of voters during the first week of early voting in Florida statewide, despite being only 13% of the Florida electorate. Overall, nearly 54% of Florida's African-American voters in 2008 voted at early-voting sites. In other words, African Americans were significantly overrepresented in the pool of early voters overall, and were much more likely than white voters to take advantage of the first week of early voting. Under Section 39, however, the first week of early voting would be eliminated, and the total number of mandatory early voting hours potentially reduced substantially, with inevitable retrogressive ef-

It is unsurprising that, as a group, African-American voters have taken advantage of the access currently afforded by the existing early voting period in Florida, given that, as this Department has noted, minorities in the Section 5-covered counties in Florida have lower rates of vehicle ownership and therefore benefit from the flexibility afforded by a wider range of early voting days. More recent Census data shows that 17.6% of African Americans in Florida's covered counties live in homes without a vehicle, as compared to only 4.8% of whites. These disparities in access to transportation mean that African American voters are more likely to encounter greater difficulties obtaining transportation on Election Day, such that an elimination of early voting days would substantially curtail existing levels of access to the polls with a resulting retrogressive effect on minority voters.

These concerns were confirmed by Leon Russell of the Florida State Conference of the NAACP. Mr. Russell stated the Florida NAACP's Get-Out-the-Vote efforts will likely "be impacted by" Section 39. He added that the benchmark practice of two weeks of early voting is essential because [t]wo weeks provided folks with options and allowed them to coordinate voting with other reasons for being in the vicinity of an early voting location. Even though you may provide the same number of hours of operation, those hours don't automatically equate to the same opportunity. With a limited number of locations, time of day and transportation are important.

Joyce Russell, African-American Affairs Liaison for the Hillsborough County Government, echoed these concerns. She stated, "[t]he fact that [the proposed law is] going to shorten [early voting] is going to affect African-American voters" in Hillsborough County, where many African-American voters "work different hours of the day, so they can't always get into the regular voting hours. Many have non-traditional working She noted that in Hillsborough hours." County. "[w]e've seen African-American voter participation soar because of the early voting days." Ms. Russell stated that a longer early voting period "gives you more flexibility" for transportation, explaining that "Black churches have gotten involved" in helping African-American voters get to the polls, and that it is "easier to arrange church buses on a Saturday" than it is on Election Day

State Senator Arthenia Joyner, whose district encompasses part of Hillsborough County, stated that "[e]arly voting has changed the landscape of voting" by making possible broader participation among minority votand that the proposed reduction of ers." early voting days would have a "dramatic impact" on Black voters in Hillsborough County. She noted that the total number of early voting hours in each County will be left to the discretion of each Supervisor of Elections, who could set the number of early voting hours as low as 48. Senator Joyner also stated that, even if the number of early voting hours remained the same, "compressing into 8 days will not do what we had before-we're losing an entire weekend, including the Sunday before the election.'

State Representative Darryl Rousson. whose district also encompasses part of Hillsborough County, raised similar concerns, stating that, for his African-American constituents, "[c]utting back the number of [early voting] days erodes access and absolutely chips away at a person's opportunities to vote." He explained that despite statements to the contrary, Section 49 does not ensure that the same number of early voting hours will be "available, because local election officials will have discretion" to reduce the number of early voting hours significantly. Representative Rousson added that "Black leaders in my community," such as pastors, will now have a harder time

"gather[ing] up members" for Get-Out-the-Vote efforts. He further stated that, in his opinion, Section 39 is "aimed at minorities black folks and Hispanics—whose job restrictions do not permit them to vote at normal hours."

This Department has previously objected to changes to Florida's absentee voting rules based on data showing that, in at least some covered jurisdictions, "minority voters disproportionately avail themselves of the absentee voting option because they often do not have accessible transportation to the polling place on election day and/or have jobs that do not permit time off to vote." These same considerations should guide the Department's Section 5 review here.

To put the significance of early voting into perspective, we note that, in the 2008 General Election, over 2.6 million votes were cast during Florida's early in-person voting period, accounting for an estimated 31.25% of all ballots cast. Most significantly, the percentage of early voters was even higher in four of the five Section 5-covered counties: specifically, the percentage of voters who voted early in the Section 5-covered counties were as follows: Collier (36.85%); Hardee (43.75%); Henry (44.39%);Hillsborough (28.41%); Monroe (33.50%).

In recent elections, Florida has been beset by "hours-long lines" to vote on Election Day. Nowhere was this more true than in Hillsborough County, the largest Section 5covered jurisdiction in Florida, where, during the 2008 General Election, "[h]undreds waited for more than four hours to vote,' and "where poll workers failed to give hundreds of voters the second page of their ballot. . . ." At the University of South Florwhich is ranked 14th among undergraduate institutions nationally in awarding degrees to African Americans, waited in lines for in excess of three-hours' during the 2008 General Election." Senator Joyner noted that, in Hillsborough County, "we have long lines at the inner city polls on Election Day," and that the lines at the polls were "long enough when early voting was 14 days, and they will be even longer now.

Given these realities, early voting is a crucial means of participation for African-American voters in the covered counties. It is therefore clear that a reduction in early voting days as proposed in Section 39 would have a retrogressive effect on minority voters.

B. Provisional Ballot Requirements

Section 26 of Chapter 2011-40 (Section 26) amends Florida Statutes section 101.045 to eliminate the right of registered voters in Florida who move from one Florida county to another to change their addresses at the time of voting. Under the benchmark practice, Florida permitted voters who have moved to update their address information in person at the polls at the time of voting by swearing an affirmation as to their new address. In such cases, the voters' existing registrations are carefully cross-checked in a state database before the voters are given a regular ballot. Section 26 eliminates that right, so that voters who move among Florida's 67 counties will be forced to cast provisional ballot. According to one estimate based on 2008 election figures, the resultwill be that nearly 34,000 additional Florida voters will be required to cast provisional bal-

This law will have a clear retrogressive effect on minority voters in the 5 covered counties. For one, the impacted group of voters will be disproportionately comprised of minorities, who tend to move more frequently than do white Americans. According to a study by the Pew Research Center, 43% of African Americans and 48% of Latinos reported moving during the previous 5 years, as compared to only 27% of whites. African Americans and Latinos similarly report a higher likelihood of moving within the next 5 years; 59% for African Americans and 43% for Latinos, as compared to only 35% for whites.

These numbers are consistent with statistics from the Census Bureau showing that, in Florida's covered counties, African Americans have lower rates of home ownership (41.62% living in owner-occupied homes) than do non-Hispanic whites (74.31%), and other data showing that non-homeowners move three to four times more frequently than do homeowners. We note that this Department has previously relied on statistics indicating that minorities have lower rates of homeownership in the Section 5-covered counties in arriving at a determination to object to voting changes in Florida.

Furthermore, Florida has the nation's highest foreclosure rate, with three of the Section 5-covered counties in Florida continuing to experience foreclosure rates that are substantially higher than the national average. In our assessment, there are currently higher relative rates of mobility amongst minorities as compared to whites in the covered jurisdictions in Florida, and this trend is one that is likely to continue in the coming years.

Given these facts, the expected result of Section 26 is that more minority voters will be forced to cast provisional ballots, and at disproportionately higher rates. State Representative Rousson confirmed that this was the likely result for his minority constituents, explaining that, under Section 26, "people who change addresses-which often happens in minority low-income communities-[will] have[] to cast provisional ballots' frequently. Ms. Russell, Hillsborough County Government, also explained that this change will "affect African Americans disproportionately." She explained that "African Americans, like other minorities, are often working class people . . . and sometimes they have to move." She noted that Section 26 is particularly problematic because African Americans in Hillsborough County "have higher rates of unemployment and being laid off," and that, '[w]ith the economy like it is, now people are having to move because of layoffs, or they lose their home or can't pay their rent, through no fault of their own, but they are still eligible to vote.

Thus, we anticipate that, if implemented, Section 26 would force a disproportionate number of African-American voters to a different process for casting a ballot during elections, which will be retrogressive because provisional ballots are counted less frequently than are normal ballots, particularly in the covered jurisdictions. During the 2010 general election, the number of provisional ballots counted statewide was 74.27%, but only 55.64% of provisional ballots were counted in Florida's Section 5-covered counties, with particularly low numbers in Collier (58.71%) and Hillsborough (54.35%) Counties.

Statewide, the number of provisional ballots counted during the 2008 General Election was even worse, with fewer than half (only 48.59%) of all provisional ballots cast in Florida actually counted. Of particular worry is that there was substantial variation within the State with respect to the treatment of provisional ballots: for instance, during the 2008 General Election, 80% of provisional ballots were counted in majority-white Duval County, whereas only 60% were counted in Section 5-covered Hillsborough County. Numbers were even lower in Section 5-covered Collier County: 36.45%.

This suggests that the rules governing the counting of provisional ballots are not being implemented uniformly. Ms. Russell, of the Hillsborough County Government noted that, in her County, forcing voters to use provisional ballots can become "so confusing that people will get discouraged and stay home," and that, even if voters do cast provisional ballots, "[w]e know that those provisional ballots are not always counted. State Senator Joyner also noted that it 'takes additional work by a voter' to make sure that a provisional ballot is counted, because voters will often have to return to the local election authority after Election Day in order to provide supporting documentation to ensure that their ballots are counted. In Senator Joyner's view, this will have a retrogressive impact on minority voters in Hillsborough County, "whose incomes are limited, who don't have transportation, who'll have to make an additional trip to verify their information."

In sum, given the disproportionately high rate of mobility and high foreclosure rate among minority communities within the 5 covered counties, Section 26 would result in more minority voters in the covered counties casting provisional ballots, which would in turn result in fewer ballots cast by minority voters being counted. The retrogressive effect of Section 26 would be particularly pronounced in Collier and Hillsborough Counties

C. Restrictions on Third Party Volunteer Voter Registration Efforts

Section 4 of Chapter 2011–40 ("Section 4") amends Florida Statutes section 97.0575 to require that any third party organization engaging in voter registration efforts submit any completed voter registration applications within 48 hours, or face penalties of $50 per application per day late. Section 4 represents a substantial change from the benchmark practice, which permitted volunteers working for third party organizations engaged in voter registration drives to submit completed voter registration applications up to 10 days after receipt.

The 48 hour time period and the threat of substantial financial sanctions for failure to comply with this new restriction will severely hamper or completely deter voter registration efforts by volunteer third party organizations whose mission is to provide voter registration opportunities to minority communities. Leon Russell, of the Florida State Conference of the NAACP, stated that Section 4 "would likely discourage participation in voter registration efforts." sell noted that the NAACP's voter registration events take place in many different locations during various days of the week, but that volunteers from individual NAACP units frequently "may not be able to turn in documents until the unit meets" which could be several days after a planned registration event. The fact that these efforts are volunteer-based and uncompensated makes speedier transmittal of the forms especially onerous on the minority communities within the covered jurisdictions, many of which suffer from higher rates of socioeconomic disparities and higher poverty levels. Mr. Russell added, "[t]he threat of fines will also keep people from volunteering.

Harold Weeks, President of the Collier County branch of the NAACP, which regularly conducts voter registration drives in Collier County, stated, in reference to the fines contemplated by Section 4, that he "wouldn't want to subject anyone to those kind of consequences," particularly "young people" who may mistakenly fail to turn paperwork in on time. He added, "[w]e don't have much money to help pay somebody's fines."

Ms. Russell, of the Hillsborough County Government, observed that, in her County, "[t]here are a lot of African Americans, voting age individuals, who are not registered," but that Section 4 is "going to intimidate a lot of African-American groups that would love to register people as first time voters." She added.

You want to do your civic duty to register people, and now . . . it's very difficult to do. . . . Most people will feel like it's not worth the trouble. It's really going to hamper African-American Greek organizations (fraternities and sororities) that work on voter registration efforts. . . . It makes it more difficult to do that.

State Senator Joyner also noted that the "48 hour cap will cripple voter registration efforts." She stated that, "[i]n the Black churches there's ongoing voter registration," but under the proposed change, "you have to have someone every day" turn in registration forms, which is an onerous administrative burden on churches serving low-income communities. State Representative Rousson echoed these concerns, stating that "by making it 48 hours to get registration forms in, you're stifling" voter registration.

This is no trivial matter for minority citizens in Florida, who have substantially lower voter registration rates than average. As of 2008, the U.S. Census Bureau reported that, in Florida, African Americans had a registration rate of 53.6%, Latinos a rate of 47.4%, and Asians a rate of 35.3%, as compared with an overall average registration rate in Florida of 62.4%, and an average for white Floridians of 69.2%. Voter registration drives are a crucial means of addressing these inequalities, as studies show that African-American and Latino voters are more than twice as likely to register in these drives.

The implementation of Section 4 would therefore have the effect of only worsening these registration disparities.

III. DISCRIMINATORY PURPOSE

Assessing a jurisdiction's motivation in enacting voting changes is a complex task requiring a "sensitive inquiry into such circumstantial and direct evidence as may be available." The "important starting point" for assessing discriminatory intent under Arlington Heights is "the impact of the official action whether it 'bears more heavily on one race than another." Other considerations relevant to the purpose inquiry include, among other things, "the historical background of the [jurisdiction's] decision'';
"[t]he specific sequence of events leading up to the challenged decision"; "[d]epartures from the normal procedural sequence"; and "[t]he legislative or administrative history, especially . . . [any] contemporary statements by members of the decisionmaking body." Numerous cases arising under Section 5 have employed this standard to help ferret out discriminatory intent in the Section 5

As noted above, various features of Chapter 2011-40 will have retrogressive effects on minority voters in the 5 covered counties. These concerns were no secret as Chapter 2011-40 was debated. To the contrary, they were raised often by members of the public.

And, without exception, every single member of the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators voted against this legislation.

It is noteworthy that these broad changes to long-standing voting laws—some of which have been in place for decades—are being proposed so recently after the last General Election, when African Americans in Florida turned out and exercised their political power in record numbers. One news report noted that the changes to early voting, and in particular the elimination of early voting on the Sunday before Election Day, "appear[] to be aimed directly at discouraging Florida's black voters." State Senator Joyner stated, "we view this as an effort to marginalize the votes of minorities in our County because we had tremendous turnout in recent elections." State Representative Rousson added, "in my mind, and in the minds of the Black leaders in my community, there is no question about the motives behind this. This is absolutely voter suppression and subversion. The perception is that it is aimed directly at [the Black] population. My constituents feel under siege.

Chapter 2011-40 was enacted in spite of these and other objections, but we note that the state's proffered interests in enacting Chapter 2011-40 do not withstand even casual scrutiny. Although the State claims that these voting changes are necessary to prevent voter fraud, there is no evidence of a problem of voter fraud in Florida, as even the Florida Secretary of State has "acknowledged that there is little voter fraud in the state." Nor is there any indication of how shortening the early voting period, requiring validly registered voters to cast provisional ballots, or imposing heavy fines on voter registration organizations would actually prevent fraud. Moreover, as this Department has acknowledged in response to a previous Section 5 submission by the State of Florida, "procedures used to eliminate voter fraud should not unnecessarily burden the rights of minority voters." Finally, while legislators also claimed that these changes are necessary for the sake of reducing "cost," an interest in administrative efficiency has not been recognized as a sufficient justification for voting procedures that otherwise violate the VRA.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons identified above, we urge the Attorney General to interpose an objection to Chapter 2011-40, as the state has failed to meet its burden of showing that it will not have a retrogressive effect, nor that it was adopted free of discriminatory purpose. Indeed, the state's submission contains no analysis whatsoever concerning the retrogressive effect of Chapter 2011-40 on minority voters, simply asserting without any substantiation that the proposed voting changes "will apply equally to all voters. . . ." That is not, however, sufficient to satisfy the state's burden to show the absence of retrogressive effect under Section 5 analysis. See Beer, 425 U.S. at 141. At a minimum, the Attorney General should issue a More Information Request (MIR) concerning the various issues raised in this letter as they affect minority voters in the five Florida Counties covered by Section 5.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think I could lay out my objections to the new voting laws in Florida any more clearly. I thank the authors of the letter I just read for their fine work, I only wish it wasn't necessary. Mr. Speaker, as we progress through this election season I would urge this Chamber and all of my colleagues to remember that every vote is important. Every American should be valued, and any effort to circumvent the right to vote, which some of us in this Chamber have fought so hard for, is a tragedy.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION FOR INDEPENDENT REDISRICTIING ACT OF 2012

HON. EARL BLUMENAUER

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, over the last few months, we have seen one opinion survey after another showing that Congress is facing record low approval ratings, hovering around 12 percent.

It's no coincidence that at the same time we've seen a surge in political activity from both the Tea Party and the Occupy Wall Street movements, expressing a shared frustration and distrust of Washington.

Underpinning America's disapproval of Congress is a broken political system, ranging from anachronistic Senate procedure to the recent Citizens United ruling. The budget battles of this Congress extend and amplify this trend.

While there is no silver bullet to "fix" what's ailing our Government, many experts and the public agree that we need comprehensive redistricting reform as a means to tone down the partisanship and make it possible to enact change. Under the current system, redrawing Congressional district boundaries every 10 years continuously sends Congress down the path to partisan gridlock.

It's the worst kept secret in Washington that our current redistricting process too often gives incumbent politicians more influence over picking their voters, than voters have in picking their politicians.

Both political parties have developed the redistricting process into an art form, punishing opponents and protecting incumbents. Just last week, House Speaker JOHN BOEHNER told POLITICO that Republicans will hold the House for the next decade thanks to the once-in-a-decade redistricting process that has made the GOP's hold on the majority "ironclad."

I don't know about you, but I don't think the American public wants elections to be precooked, a decade at a time. Politicians should not be allowed to achieve through the redistricting process what they can't accomplish a the ballot box. And regardless of whether the Speaker is right or not, the optics are disheartening and more than enough to further depress voter turnout.

Outside the beltway, there is very little that separates the average person in their political beliefs. But when you have a redistricting system where incumbents don't feel accountable in general elections, but fear attack in the primary, politicians are forced further and further to the left or right, ultimately skewing the membership of Congress. This is a system that rewards ideological extremes, punishes those who have nuanced or moderate positions, and closes the door on compromise before anyone even gets to Washington.

Even though elections are just around the corner, only 22 states have approved final district maps, leaving voters uncertain about who their candidate will be and furthering the already substantial incumbent advantage. There is hope, however, in states that have adopted independent redistricting commissions. All but one of these 13 states have already finalized their Congressional districts, making up a majority of the national total, and representing a small fraction—two of the 11 states—that are duking it out in court.

Redistricting reform isn't a Democrat or Republican idea. Indeed, it's bipartisan as seen in California and Florida where in 2010, both states—California controlled by Democrats in both chambers, and Florida controlled by Republicans in both chambers—enacted bipartisan redistricting reform.

While reform is slowly taking hold, the process remains woefully inadequate and subject to political abuse. The temptation to place partisan objectives above the public interest is just too enticing.

To make Congress more representative, all districts in all states should follow the same balanced metrics and criteria for redistricting, instead of the corrupt system we have today that's makes some states less fair and representative than others. That is why I have introduced legislation that would create the National Commission for Independent Redistricting.

The Commission would be composed of respected leaders with a proven commitment to public service and strengthening our future, such as ex-Presidents, retired Federal justices, previous congressional leaders, and electoral experts from academia. The Commission would oversee an independent, professional agency, tasked with establishing uniform criteria and congressional district lines for each State that respects the communities of interest, and geographic, ethnic, cultural, and historic boundaries, rather than just partisan affiliation.

The Commission would also inject greater transparency and accountability into the process by requiring robust public consultation and commentary that must be taken into account, and a website where all maps, hearings, votes with concurring and dissenting opinions, and materials would be made public in a timely fashion.

Congress would then approve or disapprove of the proposal put forward by the Commission with a simple up-or-down vote, free from procedural gridlock.

Congress should enact this legislation now, well before the next census in 2020. With six elections and nearly a decade standing between current politicians and the next Census, now is the time to reform our redistricting process and act in a way that reflects broad public interests rather than narrow and immediate partisanship.

Meaningful political reform is seldom easy and it takes time. Instead of each state passing their own version of what might as well be called "The Incumbent Protection Act" every 10 years, I am hopeful that there will be careful consideration of this proposal as a way to make the House of Representatives fairer, more representative, and more effective for this new century.

RECOGNIZING ALEX LESSER, SAM DIXON, AND JOSH FIXLER

HON. JAMES P. MORAN

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, I have the good fortune of representing many bright and promising young people. When they speak self-lessly about the need to help those less fortunate and recognize that the federal government has a responsibility to address this need, it renews my hope for a better future.

Yesterday was one such occasion. A young man, Alex Lesser, accompanied by Josh Fixler, Assistant Educator and Youth Director of the Temple B'Nai Shalom Congregation, came to my office on behalf of the Religious, Action Center and the Union for Reform Judaism. Alex presented my office with a paper he and his friend, Sam Dixon, wrote jointly on the topic of economic justice and the importance of extending unemployment benefits. Alex's and Sam's eloquent words of reason deserve to be heard by my colleagues. I ask that they be submitted in today's CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

ECONOMIC JUSTICE

Hello, I am Alex Lesser, and I am Sam Dixon, here on behalf of the Religious Action Center and the Union for Reform Judaism. We come from Temple B'nai Shalom in Fairfax Station, and we are here to talk to vou about unemployment insurance. The economy is still recovering from the economic downturn of 2008. Since the recession started, a total of approximately 8.8 million jobs have been lost. Despite the fact that 2.7 million jobs have been recovered, 6.1 million workers have not gotten jobs back. The economy is still not in a good situation. The group that is struggling the most is the unemployed. And this group is not small: the national rate is still at 8.5%. Many of these people are food insecure. Being food insecure means a family or individual does not have the physical, economic, and social access to safe and nutritious food and drink. This is an important problem that YOU can help fix.

As a country that is currently in an economic crisis, it is not only our duty-but our responsibility to ensure that all citizens, regardless of economic status, are not at an unfair disadvantage to one another. However, this does not always seem to be the case in this nation. We have unfortunately seen a significant increase in poverty and unemployment over the past few years, with 3.2 million impoverished Americans in 2009. and 3.3 million in 2010. With unemployment insurance, not only will these unemployed individuals be supported and sustained, but our country as a whole will also benefit. A recent estimate from the Congressional Budget Office concluded that for every $1.00 that the government invests in unemployment benefits, approximately $1.90 will be added to the U.S. Economy. It seems to me that not only is this an important step in combating poverty for Americans, but also a necessary step to get the nation's economy back on track.

We are here today because Judaism teaches us that this is a vitally important issue. God commands us in the book of Deuteronomy that "if there is a needy person among you . . . do not harden your heart and shut your hand against your kin. Rather. you must open your hand and lend whatever is sufficient" (Deuteronomy 15:7-11). It teaches us that providing for the needy is not just a matter of charity, but an obligation. Judaism also teaches that the highest form of tzedakah, the Jewish value of charity, is to help a person achieve self-sufficiency. Unemployment insurance is that exact type of support that the homeless need to help them get back on their feet. I think that we can all agree that poverty is one of the worst fates imaginable. It is one of the most terrible sufferings. The Union for Reform Judaism has consistently fought against attempts to weaken the social safety net. This is clearly a moral choice as well as a political one.

This past Friday night, we attended a presentation from the National Coalition for the Homeless, which struck a very resonant chord in our hearts, all because of one man's story. Steve, a native Washingtonian and former homeless man, told us about how he was involved with drugs from a very early age. As a result of this drug abuse, he lost several high-paying jobs and his home. Steve mentioned that when he was at his lowest point, someone offered to help him in his path to sobriety, and he finally got his life together. After getting back on his feet, he is now in danger of going back on the streets due to a debilitating and degenerative disorder. His story reminded us that this is an extremely important issue because he was a prime example of a good person whose bad decisions impacted the rest of his life, making it hard for him to avoid homelessness. This reminds us that even when it seems as though someone has hit rock-bottom, the right help can put them back on the path to success. Part of the reason that this resonates with me is that we want to make sure that if our friends and family, as well as those who we will never meet, will not fall too far if they fall through the cracks.

Clearly, this is an important and timely issue that must be addressed. Extending unemployment benefits and insurance will not only help struggling Americans survive this economic downturn, but will also help the economy grow. We urge Representative Moran to support legislation that would extend unemployment insurance for a year.

JIM BARNETTE

HON. FRED UPTON

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, today I bid farewell and best wishes to Jim Barnette, the incomparable Energy and Commerce Committee General Counsel.

When I became Chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, everyone told me I needed someone like Jim Barnette to serve as General Counsel. He served under three Chairmen before me and, though he was no longer in government service, his legacy of jurisdictional tenacity and seemingly limitless institutional knowledge remained.

Not content with a mere likeness, I informed Jim I was revoking his leave of absence and he was to report for duty promptly. Much to my delight, like any true public servant, he obliged.

As a veteran of the procedural, political, and policy battlefield, there was no one better suited to take the reins as General Counsel for the Committee when I began my tenure as Chairman at the outset of the 112th Congress.

Jim styles himself a country lawyer, but he brings a level of experience and wisdom to our Committee that is quite simply unmatched on Capitol Hill. He helped assemble and mentor the strongest team on Capitol Hill, building a backbone for our Committee staff that will stand the test of time.

He is a General Counsel in the fullest sense of the title: a faithful counselor to Members and staff and a forceful advocate for the issues before the Committee.

He has been a trusted partner, an expert negotiator, a skilled tactician, and a true friend. I wish Jim and his wife Chelo well, extending my sincere thanks for the year they set aside that allowed me to bring Jim back to the Committee. As we say at the Energy and Commerce Committee, Jim is the best.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE RETIREMENT OF MR. JACK CLINE

HON. MIKE ROGERS

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. ROGERS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize a constituent of mine, Mr. Jack Cline, who retires from the Anniston Army Depot in April.

Jack Cline is a native of Anniston, Alabama. Upon his honorable discharge from the United States Navy in 1979, he came to work at Anniston Army Depot March 1981.

Jack began his career at the depot as an Electronics Worker in the Missile Guidance Branch, Directorate of Maintenance. He also worked in Directorate of Mission Plans and Operations as a Planner. In 1991, he became the Division Chief for Weapon Systems. In 1996, he became the Deputy Director for Production, and in 1999 served as the Division Chief for Tracked Systems. In 2001, he was promoted to Director of Production and Jack currently serves today as the Deputy to the Commander.

Among many educational and professional accomplishments, Mr. Cline attended Army Management Staff College in Fort Belvoir, VA; and the Depot and Arsenal Executive Leadership Program at UNC. Chapel Hill.

Married to the former Jeni Guthrie of Oxford, Alabama, Jack has one daughter Beth Williams, a teacher, married to Brad who serves as a Youth Minister. They have one granddaughter Savannah. Jack also has one step-son, Matthew, who is a Chemical Engineer. Jack and Jeni are active members of the Harvest Church of God in Anniston.

We congratulate Jack on his retirement today and thank him for his steadfast and dedicated service to our nation. On behalf of everyone at Anniston Army Depot, we wish him the best.

CONGRATULATIONS TO CARMELL F. ANDERSON FOR HER YEARS OF SERVICE

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, January 31, 2012

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in congratulating Carmell F. Anderson on her retirement from the U.S. Department of Labor.

Carmell F. Anderson was born in Detroit, Michigan in 1944 and resided most of her life in Bay City, Michigan. She was a 1962 graduate of T. L. Handy High School, and after attending Delta College, and later Northern Michigan University, she earned her Bachelor and Master's degrees in secondary education. In 1984, Carmell earned her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan in Adult Education and Labor Studies.

Along the way, Carmell taught driver's education and business classes for the Bay City Public Schools, worked at General Motors Saginaw Steering Gear, and the University of Missouri—Kansas City. In 1988, Carmell moved to Washington D.C. where she worked for the AFL-CIO—Human Resources Development, Inc. (H.R.D.I.) at the George Meany Center in Silver Spring, Maryland, followed by a position as Executive Assistant to Congressman Bob Traxler.

In 1991, she accepted a position as a researcher with the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington D.C. While working at the U.S. Department of Labor—Employment and Training Administration, Carmell and her husband, Jim Hoppenjan, volunteered during the first administration of the Clinton White House serving in the Correspondence Office, Personnel, and the NAFTA War Room. In 1994 she transferred to the Department of Labor Office of Apprenticeship in Detroit, Michigan. Carmell retired from the U.S. Department of Labor in 2012 after 21 years' service.

Mr. Speaker I would like to congratulate Carmell F. Anderson on her retirement. We are fortunate to have such a dedicated public servant in the U.S. Department of Labor and I wish her well in her future endeavors.

SENATE—Wednesday, February 1, 2012

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable RICH-ARD J. DURBIN, a Senator from the State of Illinois.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Lord, the Earth belongs to You, the world and everything in it. You are an awesome and majestic God. When we have anxieties about what the future holds, remind us that the hearts of Kings, Queens, and Presidents are in Your hands and You guide them wherever You please. You are sovereign.

Today, bless our lawmakers. Give them a positive attitude regarding the challenges they face. Lord, help them believe that You guard this Nation and will empower them with exactly what they need to lead with excellence.

We pray in Your great Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable RICHARD J. DURBIN led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. INOUYE).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

> U.S. SENATE. PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE, Washington, DC, February 1, 2012.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable RICHARD J. DURBIN, a Senator from the State of Illinois, to perform the duties of the Chair.

DANIEL K. INOUYE, President pro tempore.

Mr. DURBIN thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

ELIZABETH MACDONOUGH

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as the Presiding Officer and all Senators should the Senate now. And we wish Elizabeth MacDonough well. She is certainly well qualified for this job. She has proven that in the decade she has been here, her fairness and astuteness of Senate rules. Let everyone understand that a new boss is in the Senate now.

This morning, following any leader remarks, the Senate will be in a period of morning business for 1 hour. The Republicans will control the first half and the majority will control the final half. Following morning business, we will resume consideration of the STOCK

THE STOCK ACT

Mr. President, it is my understanding that the Republicans are going to have a luncheon today. I hope they discuss what they want to do here on the Senate floor. Last night we had a situation where two of our fine Senators, Mr. LIEBERMAN and Ms. COLLINS, who have a reputation of being fair and bipartisan, did their best to work through some amendments, to set up votes on them, and they couldn't do it because we had Senators who offered amendments that had nothing to do with this bill—nothing. But Republican Senators said they would not allow a vote on germane and relevant amendments until they were guaranteed a vote on their nongermane amendments. So that is not a good situation, and we cannot legislate in that fashion. It is one thing to offer an amendment that is not germane, but to demand a vote on it out of order before any other amendments? So the minority has to make a decision whether they want to legislate or have people give speeches all day that have nothing to do with the legislation.

I hope the leadership and the Senators generally on the other side of the aisle will work together to help us move this piece of legislation out of here. It is an important piece of legislation. We were told it is bipartisan. Only two Senators voted against breaking the filibusters so we could start debating this bill.

SPENDING

The Republicans in Congress often claim they are the only thing standing against a wave of deficit spending. But where were these Republicans when President Bush pushed for trillions in unpaid tax cuts for the rich? Where were they? They were right here in Congress, that is where. So instead of pointing the finger at us, Republicans should examine their own track record of extravagant spending: a prescription drug plan, unpaid for; two unpaid wars; tax breaks for the rich, unpaid for. And understand, we have a new sheriff in they were paid for—borrowed money, money borrowed from American taxpayers. Trillions of dollars. In fact, President Bush's tax cuts were the single largest contributor to the ballooning budget deficits during his administration. There were plenty of others, but that was No. 1. And no one benefited from these tax breaks more than billionaires and millionaires. breaks for the richest Americans piled nearly $1 trillion on our debt over the last decade. The tax bill was far more than that, but that is just people making more than $1 million a year.

> Yesterday the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office released a report showing that these tax cuts will continue to push deficits to unsafe levels. We know that, but in addition to doing that, what it does is it makes the poor poorer, the rich richer, and squeezes the middle class every day. Extending the Bush tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans—people making more than $1 million a year—would add another $1 trillion to the deficit over the next decade. We can no longer afford to bankrupt our Nation to give more tax breaks to people who do not need them. People are putting up accounts in the Cayman Islands, stashing money in Switzerland.

> Republicans are right about one thing: We do have a deficit problem in this country. And there are two ways to ease this crisis. We could cut more jobs for teachers, firefighters, police, and Federal employees. We could cut Social Security and Medicare benefits for seniors after a lifetime of hard work. We could put off repairing our crumbling roads, bridges, and schools. We could continue to let our schools fall into disrepair and our students fall further behind. We could continue talking about what really does not matter.

> The House keeps talking about bills they have passed that create jobs. Everyone, every pundit who has looked at those knows it is just a subterfuge. They want to cut regulations, and that would make people sicker, that would make our air dirtier and our water less pure and our food less safe. That is what they are doing to create jobs.

The other way to cut spending would be to take care of those unnecessary tax breaks for millionaires and billion-

So this is the choice we face: cutting the heart out of America or having the richest of the rich contribute just a little bit to the problems we have in America today as it relates to spending. The choice we face should not be a very difficult choice.

This country has limited resources, and we must use those resources wisely. Investing in the middle class is a wise use of those resources. When you put money back in the pockets of the middle class, they spend it. They spend it on groceries and gas and buying new cars, paying their mortgages, paying their rent, maybe repairing their family car, or spending it to fix the roof on their house that has become dilapidated. That spending boosts business, spurs hiring, and helps the economy. Rigging the tax system to favor the richest of the rich does not do that. Rigging the system does not create jobs. It does not spur growth. It is not a wise use of our resources.

RECOGNITION OF THE REPUBLICAN LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

HEALTH CARE

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, later this morning President Obama is scheduled to speak in Virginia on the economy. I have not seen the speech, but I expect he will not be talking about the negative impact his health care bill is already having on job creation, and I guarantee he will not be talking about one provision in particular, the CLASS Act, which the House of Representatives is voting to repeal today.

Like so many of his policies, the CLASS Act has not turned out the way the American people were told it would. At the time of its passage, Americans were told it would be a long-term care cost saver. Proponents of the CLASS Act said it would account for nearly half of the deficit reduction they claimed the health care bill would somehow miraculously bring about.

More recently, however, the administration has admitted that government officials knew their projections about the CLASS Act could not possibly be true. They knew it would not work as advertised. Yet the Obama administration went ahead with it anyway.

In 2009, the Chief Medicare Actuary wrote that, based on his 36 years of actuarial experience, he believed the CLASS Act would "collapse in short order, and require significant Federal subsidies to continue" and that it would lead to what he called an insurance death spiral since only the sickest people would sign up, making it impossible for the program to remain solvent. Another health care policy official said that the program "seemed like a recipe for disaster."

So last October the Obama administration was finally forced to admit what they refused to admit when the health care bill first passed: that the CLASS Act was indeed unsustainable. As HHS Secretary Sebelius put it, there is no viable path forward for the program. Yet for some reason the President is unwilling to follow through on that conclusion by his own administration. He opposes today's vote over in the House.

Most people would conclude that the administration would support repealing a portion of the health care bill that they now acknowledge is not financially viable, but they would be wrong. Despite admitting this program is doomed to fail, the Obama administration refuses to take it off the books. This refusal is all the more remarkable given the fact that President Obama has repeatedly said he is willing to listen to critics of his health care bill if they come up with ways to improve it. When it comes to the CLASS Act, the President does not even appear to be willing to listen to himself.

Well, it should be obvious what is going on here. The President is so determined to distract people from his own legislative record that he does not even want to have a conversation about it. He is so determined to convince people that the ongoing economic crisis is someone else's fault that he is acting as though the first 3 years of his Presidency never even happened. He refuses to admit the central role his policies have played in prolonging the economic mess we are in. Instead of leading, the President is biding his time, hoping the public will blame someone else for the jobs crisis. Instead of acknowledging the effects of his own policies, he is hoping he can change the subject. The problem is, the longer we wait to tackle these problems, the harder they will be to solve. And, frankly, most Americans think the President should be leading that charge, not avoiding it.

In 2009, President Obama said that rising health care costs were the most pressing fiscal challenge we faced as a nation. Yesterday, the Congressional Budget Office said government health care costs will double over the next decade. So the verdict is in. The administration looked at an area that both parties agree was in critical need of reform, and they made it worse, and now they will not even admit it. Why? Because it interferes with the President's reelection strategy. If it is about him or his policies, he does not want to talk about it. And when it comes to the CLASS Act, it is easy to see why.

So I would encourage our friends over in the House in their efforts today. I hope they send this bill over to the Senate with a strong bipartisan vote. If the President will not listen to his own advisers, let's hope he listens to Congress on the failures of his health care bill and in particular the failures of the CLASS Act.

If we are going to replace the President's health care bill with the kind of commonsense reform that the American people want, repealing the CLASS Act is a good place to start. As the House is showing today, if the President refuses to act on this important issue, Congress will.

I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with time divided equally between the two leaders or their designees, with the Republicans controlling the first half and the majority controlling the final half.

The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to enter into a colloquy with my colleagues from North Dakota and Nebraska.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

KEYSTONE XL PIPELINE

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, President Obama has said that every morning when he gets up, he thinks about what he can do to create jobs. Yet just in the last couple weeks, he turned thumbs down on a project that would create 20,000 shovel-ready jobs, the Keystone XL Pipeline, which is a project that is teed up and ready to go. It would invest $7 billion initially and create 20,000 jobs immediately. It will address a very important issue for this country—energy.

We talk about getting away from the dependence on foreign sources of energy and becoming more energy independent, and we have an opportunity to do that and, at the same time, create economic opportunity in this country and get people back to work. It is a mystery as to why the administration and the President would not find this particular project to be in America's national interest.

It comes down to whether we are going to continue to import the oil, the energy we need, from unfriendly nations—we get about 700,000 barrels a day from Venezuela-or whether we will get that oil from a friendly neighbor such as Canada. When we look at that juxtaposition, that comparison, and ask should we get that 700,000 barrels of oil from Hugo Chavez or from Canada, most Americans would say it makes more sense to do business with our friendly ally to the north. Also, we would have that come down into this country in a 1,700-mile pipeline, which would transport that oil to refineries in the United States, where it would be refined and create jobs there as well.

In almost all respects, as we look at the project and the attributes that come with it, they are job creation, investment, energy security, not to mention the State and local tax revenue, which is something that is important to a lot of people whom I represent in South Dakota. In fact, I had someone from western South Dakota in my office last week, and he said: We care about the energy security issue, the jobs issue, and all that, but we need the tax revenue for our school districts and county governments that would be generated.

So we have all these positive benefits associated with this particular project. Yet after having studied it for 3 years, about 1,200 days, and having done multiple environmental impact statements—the last one concluded in August of last year—lo and behold, the President decides he is not going to move forward with this project.

We think that is terribly unfortunate, not in the national interest. We believe it is in the national interest to move forward to address the important energy security needs, as well as the needs for job creation and economic growth.

Two of my colleagues, former Governors, now Senators from Nebraska and North Dakota, are people who are well acquainted with these types of projects. The Governor from North Dakota was very involved when the first Keystone Pipeline that was built from Canada through North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and points south. That project went through a permitting process. It was a couple years in the making and it was approved. The construction process was concluded and it is now operational. That is an example of how this particular project can work.

This pipeline would cross the State of the Senator from Nebraska. There were concerns about whether it had the right route in order for this to be done in the best environmental way. Those issues have been addressed. The Nebraska legislature met in special session, and they and the Governor came up with an alternative idea about how to do this. They have been supportive of moving forward with this project as well.

The question before the House is if the President of the United States determines this is not in the national interest, notwithstanding the support of lots of Members of Congress on both sides of the aisle and I think overwhelming support of the States through which this line would traverse and the labor unions which represent a lot of people who are involved. Many editorial pages support this, including the Chicago Tribune, which said:

Obama's decision will cost the U.S. jobs. . . . He seems to think those jobs will still be there when he gets around to making decision on the pipeline. But they may well be gone for good.

They go further and say his decision "will deny the U.S. a reliable source of oil."

They recognize the importance of this project and doing business with a friendly country, the importance of energy independence, and the fact that if we don't benefit from this, it will go somewhere else. They have made it abundantly clear this is not something—if the United States turns it down—they will continue to wait around for until sometime in the future when we might consider it. They will go somewhere else—probably China—with it.

For those reasons, we believe we need to do everything we can do to move this project forward. My colleagues came up with legislation that recognizes the role of the Congress under the commerce clause and our ability to approve this project. I hope we will get an opportunity to discuss and debate this issue in the Senate and get a vote and perhaps get a vote as well in the House of Representatives, where Congress could weigh in and perhaps change the President's mind about this important project.

I am glad to be with my colleagues today. I will yield to the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from Nebraska, two great leaders on this particular issue and all issues relating to energy security. They understand the history of this, as well as its importance to America's future.

I ask the Senator from North Dakota if he would like to give us an insight about the first Keystone Pipeline, built through his State a few years ago, the history of that, and the history of how this particular project was put forward as well and why we think it ought to go forward.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from South Dakota for organizing the colloquy and I also thank the good Senator from Nebraska for joining us as well. I appreciate working with them on this project, which is not only vital to our State but to our country.

As the Senator from South Dakota said, this project is critically important to our country for a number of reasons. First, it will create tens of thousands of jobs. There will be a $7 billion investment, not one penny of which will be Federal Government spending but all private sector investment. The Perryman Group projected, when they did a study on the job creation, that it would create 20,000 construction jobs right away; it would create upward of 100,000 spinoff jobs as they expand refineries and with the other economic activity that is created. Some might dispute those job numbers, but any way we look at it, tens of thousands of jobs will be created by the private sector, which is why it has strong union support at a time when we have 13-plus million people out of work and we need the jobs.

As the Senator from South Dakota said, it will generate hundreds of millions in tax revenues from a growing economy, from more economic activity. The last I checked, it is pretty important at the local, State, and Federal levels to have those revenues coming in. In addition, it will reduce our dependence on oil from the Middle East. With what is going on in Iran—and they are threatening to blockade the Strait of Hormuz—and with gas prices at $3.50 a gallon, roughly, and going up, it is important to consumers and the businesses of this country that we use the oil in this country and from our closest ally. Canada, rather than relying on the Middle East.

The third point is, this oil will be produced. If we don't build the pipeline capacity to bring it to our refineries to be refined, it goes to China. That is a fact. It will be produced. It will either go to China or it will come to us.

I have this chart to give a history of the project because, as the good Senator from South Dakota said, this has been under review for more than 3 years. TransCanada, the company that is trying to build the pipeline, built this Keystone Pipeline already. That is this red line on the chart. That project was approved in 2 years. Again, Keystone XL has been under study more than 3 years. The sister pipeline has already been built, and that was approved in 2 years. It comes from Alberta, Canada, to the refineries in the Patoka, IL, area.

The existing project, as we can see, comes through North Dakota-that was when I was Governor—through South Dakota, and down through Nebraska. The Keystone XL comes just to the west. I point that out because of the Bakken oil play in North Dakota and Montana, it is very important we have the ability to put oil into this pipeline. We are looking at putting 100,000 barrels a day of U.S. crude into this pipeline so it can get to our refineries. In other words, it is not just about bringing Canadian crude to our refineries: it is about bringing our own crude to them. It also saves wear and tear on our roads, and it is a safety issue because it reduces truck traffic. We are talking 500 truckloads a day and 17 million truck miles a year that we don't have to put on our roads. We don't have to have the traffic issues. the safety issues or the road issues in our country because we have the ability to move the product with this pipeline.

Let's look at this timeline. September, 2008. I know this is hard to read. I will make an important point. In September 2008, TransCanada applied for a permit for the Keystone XL Pipeline. In November of 2008, the current administration was elected. For the entire time the current administration has been in office, they have held up this project. It has gone through the full NEPA process. It had the full environmental impact studies done. Even the State Department said there would be a decision before the end of last year. For the entire time this administration has been in office, TransCanada was working to go through the process with EPA and the Department of State, and the Department of State said they would have a decision before the end of last year, but we still don't have a decision. We have to ask why. Why don't we have a decision? That is what we are talking about. It is long past time to act.

Let's look at this chart. What are we talking about? What we are talking about is this—another pipeline. We are talking about another pipeline just like the one that has already been built. How about the hundreds or maybe I should say thousands of pipelines we already have, and somehow we cannot build this pipeline? That doesn't make any sense. Somebody needs to explain this to us.

We have legislation, with 45 Senators, 45 sponsors, who are saying: Hey, it is time to move forward and build the project. As a matter of fact, we are doing everything we can to address any and all problems or concerns the administration has raised.

That is why I am going to turn it over now to my good colleague from Nebraska, because when the administration says there is an issue or a State or the EPA says there is an issue, we stepped up in our legislation and solved it. We say: Great, let's address it, but let's move forward for the good of our economy and the good of our country. I defer now to the good Senator from Nebraska.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem-

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. JOHANNS. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments that have been offered by my colleagues from South Dakota and North Dakota. They absolutely have it right in terms of the importance of constructing this pipeline. There is no question that we are in a dire situation in this Nation. We need the jobs, we need the oil, and this pipeline can take a significant step forward in both regards.

I think the pipeline will be a huge help in those areas. But let me start by noting that I was a cosponsor of the first Keystone bill. I am also a cosponsor of the bill that Senators HOEVEN, LUGAR, and VITTER introduced just this past Monday, the bill we are talking about today.

Here is a very important point for my State. In both cases, and specifically in reference to this bill, the effort was specifically crafted to safeguard the route selection process that is occurring in Nebraska. I thank my colleagues for recognizing that work and recognizing that Nebraska has a process that will near completion this August or September. They have worked very hard to take into account our issues, and their bill recognizes that the Nebraska effort will continue.

They decided in our State—the Governor, the legislature, and Trans-Canada—to work on an alternative to the proposed route. Recognition occurred that the route through Nebraska involved some very sensitive land—the Sand Hills—and a very sensitive water supply—the Ogallala aquifer. The Governor called a special session, and, as we do in Nebraska, everybody sat down and said: How do we solve this problem?

So they came to an agreement that the best way to solve the problem was to do an environmental impact statement, which will be no cost to the Federal Government. It will be paid for by Nebraskans. That was part of the provision of this agreement. And Trans-Canada agreed they would work to reroute the pipeline through our State. Everybody shook hands. We are now in agreement. Our problem is solved in Nebraska.

For months and months, the Federal Government has been saying to the State of Nebraska: You have the power to route this pipeline through your State. And that is exactly what we are doing. So this legislation recognizes that agreement and says: Great, we are going to allow Nebraska to move forward. But very wisely this legislation also recognizes there is no need whatsoever for any delay on the remainder of this pipeline. This was the only segment—and it is a handful of miles in our State-that anybody was contesting. So why not issue the permit? Why not get the project going?

My colleagues worked very hard on coming up with a solution, and their solution works. It says: Construction can begin immediately. Why? Because, as my colleague from North Dakota has explained well, Congress has the constitutional authority to regulate foreign commerce. This bill exercises that power in a thoughtful, deliberate, and careful way. It says: Look, this project has gone through 3 years of study and analysis. It specifically notes in this legislation the part regarding Nebraska will be solved, as the Federal Government has been saying for months, by Nebraska officials, but that we can go forward and start construction elsewhere.

So what is holding up the creation of these jobs? What is holding up our ability to get more oil from places such as North Dakota and a friendly ally such as Canada, versus a very unfriendly ally in Hugo Chavez in Venezuela? What is holding that up? What could possibly be holding that up? Well, the simple answer to that question is, the President of the United States is holding it up.

The President is in a bind. The environmentalists have declared war on the oil sands in Canada. They do not want the pipeline because they do not want the oil sands. On the other hand, unions want to build the pipeline. They want the jobs, and thoughtfully so. So this is a time where Congress does need to step in and exercise our constitutional powers. This is nothing unusual. In fact, there was a recent opinion by the Congressional Research Service which noted the Congress has the power to do exactly what this legislation is doing.

I will wrap up my comments today and yield back the time to the Senators from South Dakota and North Dakota and say this: This is a win-win situation for everybody. It is a win because we create jobs. It is a win for our country because we are trying in every way possible to get the Federal Government to lessen our dependence on foreign oil. Maybe the only person who it is not a win for is President Obama in his reelection. But this is a case where we need to put national interest ahead of November.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation that was thoughtfully crafted. It is the right approach. I thank them for their sensitivity to the process going on in the State of Nebraska.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I appreciate the hard work of the Senator from Nebraska on this subject, as well as the Senator from North Dakota, and he has fashioned a solution which I think does give us an opportunity as a Congress to assert our role under the Constitution, under the commerce clause of the Constitution, to move this project forward, notwithstanding the opposition, really of one person—the President of the United States, who is the person right now who is standing in the way of this.

I would again say to my colleague from North Dakota, as we wrap up here, I hear people say this needs to be studied further; that we need to do more analysis. It is sort of mind-boggling to think after more than 1,200 days of study, analysis, review, and scrutiny that people would come to that conclusion. The Keystone XL Pipeline I, which the Senator from North Dakota is well acquainted with because it goes through his State and he was involved in negotiating that project, took 693 days in the process of getting approved. What is interesting to me about this particular project is that after 1,200 days—longer than any of the pipelines of this magnitude—the extended review and more than 10,000 pages of environmental analysis concluded—concluded—the pipeline will not adversely impact the environment. When the announcement was made to deny the construction of the pipeline, the State Department still had 5 weeks to review it if they had chosen to use it. Clearly, the announcement wasn't based on policy but on political expediency, which is what the Senator from Nebraska pointed out.

There is a tremendous amount of resource in my colleague's State—the State of North Dakota-that could benefit as well. I think the State of North Dakota has the potential to generate somewhere on the order of 500,000 barrels of oil, about 100,000 of which, I am told, could be moved through this pipeline if it is approved. It seems to me at least, again, that here is a resource, an energy reserve in our country, in my colleague's State, that could benefit people in this country.

By the way, in 2011, Americans spent more on gasoline than any other year since 1981. And reports indicate that 2012 could be even worse. So when we look at the economic impact on Americans, from our not having our oil and energy being produced in this country, it is a very real impact. In fact, since the President has taken office, gas prices have gone from $1.84 a gallon to over $3.30 a gallon, and this pipeline could be part of that solution.

I want to end with a quote made by the State Department in their review of the pipeline. The Department of Energy, I should say, but it was part of the State Department's review. The Department of Energy noted:

Gasoline prices in all markets served by East Coast and Gulf Coast refineries would decrease, including the Midwest.

That is coming from the State Department's review, the Department of Energy, that gasoline prices in all markets served by east coast and gulf coast refineries would decrease. That is a pretty remarkable economic impact, not to mention all the jobs that would be associated with the construction, and once it is operational the jobs that would be created in refining this oil.

So again it is a win-win, as we heard from the Senator from Nebraska, who said that initially their State had some concerns about the route, but that has been all resolved so this project can move forward.

The legislation of the Senator from North Dakota, which I am proud to support and cosponsor, I hope gets a vote in the Senate, and I know the Senator is going to do everything he can to advance it—I hope he does—and I look forward to working with him. Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from South Dakota again for organizing this colloquy this morning. I thank him and the esteemed Senator from Nebraska for their support of this legislation.

Again, we have taken a problem-solving approach to this legislation, and we are continuing to do that. We will continue to work with other Members of the Senate and our colleagues in the House, but we need the administration to engage with us on this important issue for the good of the American peo-

COLLEGE COSTS

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, too many Americans are out of work. We know that. Without a steady income, it is hard for families to stay current on their monthly expenses. We have all talked about the consequences of losing a job. When I meet with the unemployed in Illinois, one of the first things we talk about is health insurance because that is one of the first casualties. It is very difficult if not impossible for someone unemployed to maintain COBRA payments once they are out of work. They deplete their savings and find themselves in a very vulnerable position. Some fall behind on mortgage payments. More than 4 million families have lost their homes since the housing crisis began in 2008. Another 10.7 million Americans own mortgages that are underwater—the homeowner owes more than the home is worth.

One of the major mortgage banking associations in Washington, DC, recently had a short sale of their headquarters building in Washington. They went underwater. They could not pay their mortgage, and they ended up selling. It is happening not just to businesses, obviously, but to a lot of homeowners.

It is hard to keep up with these basic expenses. A lot of people who used to donate to food banks are now in line at food banks. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, one out of six Americans really has a food issue.

since the government started taking these numbers in 1995.

But there is another obligation, a financial obligation that needs a little more focus here in Washington. Private student loan debt is becoming the biggest burden for families across America. Student loan debt in October of 2010 for the first time in our history surpassed credit card debt in America. At public universities, the average debt for a graduating student was $20,200. At private nonprofits, it was $27,650. For students at for-profit colleges, the debt burden is even greater. Students at forprofit colleges graduated with an average debt of $33,000. More than three out of four young adults say that college has become harder to afford in the past 5 years. Almost as many say that graduates have more student debt than they can possibly manage. There are few penalties for schools whose students incur huge amounts of debt when the student cannot repay their loan.

How did we reach this point? Two trends have led to this phenomenal level of student loan debt:

First, the for-profit college industry has grown by leaps and bounds over the last decade. It is the fastest growing sector of higher education. Three numbers put it in perspective. Ten percent of students out of high school end up in for-profit schools, yet for-profit schools consume 25 percent of all the Federal aid to education and account for 44 percent of student loan defaults. What is the obvious conclusion? These for-profit colleges are drawing in more student loan assistance from the Federal Government than their counterparts in the public and nonprofit area, and their students, deep in debt, cannot find jobs to pay off their debts and default on their loans.

Second, the cost of college is so far out of reach for most people that they exhaust their ability to borrow from the government and end up taking out private loans. Private loans are not federally guaranteed. The issuer is not required to work with you to consolidate the loans or restructure them in the future. If that sounds familiar, that is because many of the banks issuing these loans are the same banks holding your mortgage. Even more outrageous, the loans are protected in bankruptcy. What that means is, unlike other loans we would incur in our lives that we might bring into a bankruptcy court in desperation, these loans cannot be discharged in bankruptcy. These loans will trail the borrowers to the grave. Student loan decisions made at the age of 19, 20, and 21 years end up being a lifetime of responsibility.

Yesterday the president of a small, very good college in Illinois said that so many students she meets with who are interested in going to school are debt-dumb; they do not even understand debt as it might affect them today and tomorrow. Unfortunately, these for-profit schools—and many others—are taking advantage of students with little or no life experience who end up, many times, with their parents signing for student loan debt that is unconscionable, at levels they will never be able to repay in any reasonable time, and often, when it comes to for-profit schools, for worthless diplomas if the student is lucky enough to finish.

One of my constituents, Hannah Moore, recently contacted my office regarding her outstanding student debt. I wanted to bring this to the attention of the Senate. In 2007, Hannah graduated with a bachelor of arts from a for-profit school called the Harrington College of Design. It was part of the Career Education Corporation's program. When Hannah graduated in 2007 from the Harrington College of Design, her student debt was $124,570.

After she exhausted all her Federal student loan options, she turned to private loans when she wanted to finish and get a degree. At first she tried to manage her payments of close to $800 a month by working three jobs. Her Federal loan is a reasonable payment because she signed up for the incomebased repayment program, but the private loan demands are unreasonable. When the payments became unmanageable, she tried to work out a plan with her lender. They refused. She said that she speaks to her lender about once a month asking for assistance, with no help. When it became apparent she would not be able to afford the payments, her family offered to help. Her dad, who had retired, got a job just to help his daughter make her student loan repayments. Dad went back to work, out of retirement. Her parents spend their time stressing over her loans with her.

Hannah is 30 years old. She wants to be independent, but her student debt of over $124,000 is making that impossible. With the help of her family, dad going back to work and all she can do, she makes her monthly payments, but her life is still very much on hold. She said, "My education doesn't feel rewarding, it's a burden right now." When asked how her student loan debt is affecting her life, she said: I can't start a family, can't buy a house, I can't even buy a car. She rides her bike to work. Think about that. She went to college, she stuck with it, and she graduated with a degree of no value and $124,000 in student debt.

She is not alone. Every week I hear from constituents who are seeking relief, and I invite them to come to my Web site and tell me their stories about student loan debt in America.

Last week, in his State of the Union, the President spoke about a plan to keep the cost of higher education from going even further. His proposal will provide better information to families, while enlisting colleges and State governments to partner with the Federal Government to keep costs down while improving student outcomes.

To make sure students and families have accurate information, the President has proposed creating a college scorecard for all institutions of higher education—all of them. The scorecard will provide families with clear, concise information about affordability and student outcomes—how many students go to this school and finish, how many who finish with a degree get a job. It is a pretty basic question. Then students and their families can make a good choice. They will not be overwhelmed by the spam and ads tossed at them on the Internet.

The plan would reward schools that give value, serve low-income students, and set reasonable tuition policies. These schools would be rewarded with additional campus-based aid so more students can attend college.

The President's proposal also builds on the success of the current Race to the Top Program by creating a new Race to the Top Program rewarding college affordability and completion that will promote change in State systems of higher education. This Race to the Top challenge will incentivize Governors and State legislatures around the Nation to join us in keeping tuition costs down.

Following the President's challenge to keep college costs down, the Senate HELP Committee is holding hearings this week on college affordability. I thank them for that. It is long overdue, and I look forward to working with Senators HARKIN and ENZI on this issue.

A hearing we had just a week or so ago in Chicago on the abuse of the GI bill education rights by for-profit schools should be a wake-up call to every Member of Congress. Holly Petraeus, the wife of General Petraeus, testified. She works at the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, an agency that is in the news. It is controversial because the appointment of its Director, Richard Cordray, was announced by the President by executive appointment when the Senate refused to give him an opportunity to serve.

The Senate refused to break a filibuster on Mr. Cordray, even though I heard no speeches criticizing his ability. The speeches criticized the agency, which some Republicans loathe and despise, but it is in the law and it should be given a chance to work. Those who are critical of it should meet with Holly Petraeus. General Petraeus's wife. She is working with military families trying to stop the abuses of forprofit schools under the GI bill. That is something on which we should all join together, Democrats and Republicans alike. Americans who serve in the military are entitled to not only the GI bill but to institutions of learning that give them a chance to take their time in school and turn it into a much better life for themselves and their families.

I hope we can come together on the question of affordability and on taking a close look at many of these institutions of higher learning that are, unfortunately, defrauding many innocent children, families, and veterans who are returning from conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Paul amendment No. 1490 (to amendment No. 1470), to require former Members of Congress to forfeit Federal retirement benefits if they work as a lobbyist or engage in lobbying activities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, it is a new day and with it comes the hope we will make more progress than we did yesterday. Actually, we were prepared, after some good work by the four of us-Senator Collins; Senator Brown; the occupant of the chair, Senator GILLIBRAND; and myself-and our staffs to move forward yesterday afternoon. Unfortunately, we were blocked in that. But I know efforts continue to allow us to at least proceed with the amendment Senator PAUL offered that was modified—or prepared to be modified, after discussion, with a reasonable conclusion that I think will be supported by most Members of the Senate.

There is so much we can do. Our staffs worked overnight. They have tried to divide the amendments into those that are germane and relevant and those that are not. I understand leadership on both sides will be talking about how to proceed.

I repeat what I said at the outset and I know all of us who have worked so hard to respond to the concern that Members of Congress and our staffs are not covered by insider trading lawsthat we not try to solve every problem or correct every potential source of public mistrust of Congress on this bill for fear that we will, therefore, never get anything accomplished.

I am hopeful, as the morning goes on and certainly into the afternoon, after discussions that occur at the lunch hour, we will be able to proceed to handle some amendments in an expeditious way and that we can see our way to the end of consideration of this bill, remembering that on the basic provisions of the bill we have overwhelming bipartisan support.

I understand the vote on cloture to proceed to the bill does not exactly express support for the final vote, but there were only two who voted against Coburn amendment No. 1476, in the nature cloture, so clearly an overwhelming number of Members of the Senate want to proceed to vote on the bill.

> If we do not break this unfortunate and unnecessary and harmful gridlock, either the majority leader is going to have to file cloture or leave the bill and go on to other pressing business— FAA reauthorization and the like—and that would be not only disappointing to us, but having aroused the hope that we would respond to the public concern and anger about the possibility that we are not covered by insider trading laws, we will have ended up increasing that concern and anger and disenchantment with Congress. I do not think any of us want to do that.

> With that appeal to our colleagues to apply a certain rule of reason so we can get something done that will be good for our government and the people's respect for us, I am very pleased to see my colleague from Connecticut, Senator Blumenthal, in the Chamber. I know he has an amendment he wants to offer at this time, and I will yield the floor to him.

> The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

> Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Madam President, I thank the Presiding Officer, the distinguished Senator from New York, and my colleagues, Senator LIEBER-MAN, Senator Collins, and Senator Brown, for their superb leadership on this issue, and I am very pleased to strongly support the underlying bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1498 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Madam President, I call up amendment No. 1498.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BLUMENTHAL], for himself and Mr. KIRK, proposes an amendment numbered 1498 to amendment No. 1470.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

"(II) an offense under clause (xxix), to the extent provided in such clause.

"(xxxi) Subornation of perjury committed under section 1622 of title 18 in connection with the false denial or false testimony of another individual as specified in clause (xxx).".

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Madam President, essentially this amendment, very simply and directly, assures that Members of Congress who may be prosecuted and convicted of the offenses specified in the amendment also should see their pensions revoked, along with potentially other crimes that they may have committed.

The purpose essentially is to assure the credibility of Congress by revoking pensions of corrupt Members of Congress, not only those who may be convicted under this pending bill—insider trading—but also a variety of other public corruption offenses. In fact, the amendment adds 22 new public corruption offenses to existing law that merit the cancellation or revoking of congressional pensions.

I have worked with Senator KIRK, who, unfortunately, could not be with us today. He and his staff have been integral. It is a bipartisan-proposed statute that is similar to one I worked to enact in Connecticut when I was the attorney general there.

The guiding principle is absolutely crystal clear, consistent with the basic measure we are considering: not one dime of taxpayer money should go to corrupt elected officials.

Over the past 50 years, Members of Congress have been convicted of 16 separate felonies. So the need for this measure is considerable, even if it is a small minority of the Members of Congress. In fact, right now, approximately $800,000 a year is paid to Members of Congress who have been convicted of these kinds of felonies.

So I wish to particularly thank Senator Kirk and quote him since he could not be here today. He said, earlier this year, of this legislation:

American taxpayers should not be on the hook for the pension benefits of convicted felons. Expanding current law to include additional public corruption felonies will block pension benefits for Members who fail to honor their pledge to defend the Constitution and uphold the laws of the United States. Once you have violated the public trust in that way, I think that the taxpayers should not be supporting your retirement.

In short, very simply, a breach of law by an elected official is a serious offense that should have consequences. Taxpayers should not pay for the retirement benefits of elected officials convicted of a felony—Members of Congress, anyone else—especially as the United States faces the soaring deficits that it does now and the crippling debt that grows even higher.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1491 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470

Mr. SHELBY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I call up my amendment No. 1491, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SHELBY] proposes an amendment numbered 1491 to amendment No. 1470.

Mr. SHELBY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To extend the STOCK Act to ensure that the reporting requirements set forth in the STOCK Act apply to the executive branch and independent agencies)

On page 7, line 7, strike "a" insert "each officer or employee as referred to in subsection (f), including each".

On page 7, line 8 insert a comma after "employee of Congress".

At the end, insert the following:

"SEC. 11. PROMPT REPORTING AND PUBLIC FIL-ING OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS FOR EXECUTIVE BRANCH.

"Each agency or department of the Executive branch and each independent agency shall comply with the provisions of section 8 with respect to any of such agency, department or independent agency's officers and employees that are subject to the disclosure provisions under the Ethics in Government Act of 1978."

Mr. SHELBY. Madam President, I rise today to talk about the amendment that I have offered, No. 1491, to the STOCK Act.

Right now, the STOCK Act, as it is written, does not apply to the public disclosure requirements to the executive branch or independent agencies.

The amendment that I have offered this morning ensures the public disclosure of all trading by senior government officials. Yes, I will say it again. My amendment ensures the public disclosure of all trading by senior government officials.

This is a very reasonable amendment, as it is limited to the executive branch and independent agency personnel who are already subject to the reporting requirements.

My amendment merely expands the enhanced disclosure requirement under the STOCK Act to these current filers. Without this amendment, it would be impossible for the public to know whether the executive branch officials are complying with the STOCK Act. The public should be able to monitor trades of all executive and legislative branch officials in the same manner.

while leaving the executive branch and independent agencies in the dark.

Ironically, the disclosure provisions of the STOCK Act currently do not apply to the Securities and Exchange Commission, their employees, and so forth, which is the body that will be responsible for enforcing such provisions on Congress. That is nonsense. The SEC, which has access to vast financial markets information, should be held to the same standards it has been charged with enforcing.

My amendment will apply the disclosure provisions of the STOCK Act to all branches, ensuring transparency for all in government.

I appreciate the willingness of the chairman and ranking member of the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee to work with me. I look forward to working with them more to improve public disclosure for both the executive and legislative branches

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I thank my friend from Alabama for coming to the floor and proposing his amendment. I agree that there should be parity between the legislative and executive branches wherever it is appropriate. I am very happy to work with him

I must say that yesterday we made some progress on a somewhat similar amendment by Senator Paul to appropriately scope the amendment on requiring executive branch officials to report on their financial transactions to Senate-confirmed positions. I don't know whether that is the resolution here, but I think we should work on it. I want to state for the record that the executive branch is not free of conflictof-interest regulations. In fact, in some sense you might say they have tougher restrictions. Even the SEC employees have to get permission before they can make stock transactions, and then they have to file disclosures not within 30 or 10 days but within 2 days, I believe. There are many other regulations on them.

I think part of what is going on here is the nature of the two branches of Government to deal with conflicts of interest. We have focused on a system of disclosure and transparency. We have embraced the adage that sunlight is the best disinfectant. In contrast. the executive branch actually addresspotential conflicts of interest through not just transparency but statutory mandates that require the divestiture of stock when it may involve a conflict of interest and recusal being involved in handling anything that relates to any personal interest that an individual in the executive branch has. There is a very extensive system of high-ranking agency officials being Let's not make Congress transparent forced to divest themselves of conforth. We would then have a certain flicting stock holdings—obviously, sometimes at a financial loss.

> There could be an amendment to come up on that. But to do it in exactly the way—at least on the recusal section—the executive branch does it would not be appropriate for Members Congress because Members are called on to vote on issues across the widest array of activity. Recusal, therefore, is not a viable option because it would deny our constituents representation and our votes on a very wide array of public issues. An amendment on divestiture of blind trusts or mutual funds is another question.

> But the main point I wanted to make is there is a lot of regulation on the executive branch. The ethics rules, requirements, and guidance that have been put forth over the years by the Office of Government Ethics and at the agencies are extensive. I know volume of pages of law isn't everything, but it says a lot. There are six pages in the Senate Code of Conduct that cover conflicts of interest, while there are literally hundreds of pages of rules and requirements governing such conflict of interest situations for the executive

> The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama, as drafted, would require that the annual filings of over 300,000 career civil servants and managers be published on the Internet. That is a lot of people and a lot of work to be done to process and handle those. But I understand the intention of Senator Shelby. I think it is a good intention. Senator Wyden has a similar amendment, and I wish to work with them, as I know Senator Collins would as well, to see if we can come to some meeting of the minds that would allow us to achieve the purpose we all have in the underlying bill, which is to build confidence in our government and its integrity.

> The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRANKEN). The Senator from Maine.

> Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I support the intent of the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama. I think he is right, we need parity, as much as possible, in the disclosure requirements. I also believe he is correct the disclosure reports should be online so they are easily accessible. So the intent of his amendment is one I wholeheartedly support.

> As Senator Lieberman does, I have some questions about the universe of Federal employees who would be covered by the amendment of the Senator from Alabama. We have been working successfully with the Senator from Kentucky, who first brought up this issue of parity, to make sure the scope of coverage is appropriate. It seems to me one way to solve these issues is to use a similar scope as we have agreed on with Senator PAUL in the amendment that Senator Shelby has brought consistency that we had vetted the universe of Federal employees that should be covered. That seems to me to be a very appropriate and relatively easy fix to this issue.

I do want to emphasize that I agree with Senator Shelby that those Federal employees should be required to file in the same timeframes as Members of Congress and their staffs, and that certainly those reports should be accessible online.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1481

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, across the Nation, Americans wonder if Washington is working for them. Congress's approval rate, as we know so well, is an abysmal 13 percent, 12 percent—different surveys—but not very good. One factor contributing to this distrust is the sense that elites in Washington are using their positions to get ahead financially. Members of Congress have the privilege and the honor of being elected to serve the public. Unfortunately, some elected officials have used the information they have acquired through service to the public—and I might put service to the public in quotation marks—to enrich their stock holdings. That is wrong. Public servants should not receive financial benefits for the votes they cast or the issues they work on. That is why I appreciate the work Senator GILLIBRAND, Senator LIEBERMAN, and Senator Col-LINS are doing in this legislation.

How many articles do we have to read about the appearance of impropriety on the investment decisions of lawmakers and their staff? In a Washington Post article from June of 2010. Taxpayers for Common Sense said:

By being on a committee with a particular jurisdiction, they're in a better position of influencing the performance of their investments, or at least appearing to have that ability.

I am not saying my colleagues do that. I think perhaps some do. I do not know that, but I do know that the appearance to the public is that Members of the Senate are in a position to enrich themselves on a variety of issues and investments.

In a Washington Post article on December 20, the Project on Government Oversight—this was about a year, 13, 14 months ago, this article—said:

It's a problem. They will come back and say that it's ludicrous that I would think of my stocks, that they only think about the nation's interests and of their constituents. The problem is, we can't know.

That is exactly right. We can't know. This is a USA editorial from yesterday:

If lawmakers were really concerned with ethics, they'd put their equity holdings in blind trusts, so they wouldn't have the obvious conflict of interest that comes from setting the rules for the companies they own.

Banking committee members wouldn't invest in financial institutions, armed services committee members wouldn't invest in defense contractors, and energy committee members wouldn't investment in oil companies.

These stories simply do not reflect well on the world's greatest deliberative body. Most of us think these investments don't affect our decisions. They probably do not. But isn't it time we hold ourselves to a higher standard?

That is what the STOCK Act is all about. The Senate is considering the STOCK Act, which clarifies the insider trading laws, that they apply the same way to Members of Congress as they do to people in the rest of the country. But the STOCK Act only deals with insider trading, which is very important, but that is only a small part of the problem. Senator MERKLEY and I are proposing the Putting the People's Interests First Act amendment to the STOCK Act. It would require all Senators and senior staff, probably legislative director, their most senior legislative people—person—and their Chief of Staff, all Senators and their Chiefs of Staff, all subject to financial disclosure, to sell individual stocks, divest themselves of individual stocks that create conflicts or place all of those individual stock investments in blind

No one is required to avoid equities. We can still invest in broad-based mutual funds or exchange-traded funds. We have already had this in a limited way. Senate ethics rule 37.7 requires committee staff making more than $25,000 a year to "divest himself or herself of any substantial holdings which may be directly affected by the actions of the committee for which {that person} works" unless the Ethics Committee approves an alternate arrangement.

The Armed Services Committee requires all staff, spouses, and dependents to divest themselves of stock in companies doing business with the Department of Defense and Department of Energy. The Committee does permit the use of blind trusts.

In the executive branch, Federal regulations and Federal criminal law generally prohibit employees, their spouses, and their children from owning stock in companies they regulate.

All Senator Merkley and I are saying is Members of the Senate should hold themselves to the same standard we require of committee staff and executive branch employees. We tell committee staff and executive branch employees they can't do this. Why should we be allowed to do this? If we think this is a sacrifice—which it is not, ultimately—remember that while the median net worth of all Americans dropped 8 percent from 2004 to 2010, the median net worth of Members of Congress jumped 15 percent over that same period. It is not a judgment of my colleagues, simply what we should do, what the public would want us to do.

Some argue selling our stock will make us lose touch with the rest of society. That thinking falls on deaf ears for most Americans. Why should they vote on issues that affect the oil industry when they own oil stocks? Why should Members of the Senate vote on issues that affect health care when they own stock in pharmaceutical companies—Big PhRMA stocks?

Appearance matters. Right now the American people do not trust that we are acting in the Nation's best interests far too often.

I will close with this and then turn to Senator Merkley. Public service is a privilege. Folks around Washington are paid pretty well for what we do—are paid very well for what we do. We take these jobs seriously. We should take them seriously. We should look at them as the privilege they are to serve in the greatest deliberative body in the world and get to serve my State, 11 million people; the State of Senator GILLIBRAND, 19 million people, something like that; and the State of Senator Merkley-millions of people we serve. It is a privilege to do it. There is no reason our colleagues need to be buying and selling stocks in multimillion dollar portfolios. When asked about the fact that the Senate Armed Services Committee conflict of interest rules apply only to staff and to DOD appointees, President Bush's Deputy Secretary of Defense Gordon England said, "I think Congress should live by the rules they impose on other people.

In the State of the Union Address the President said, "Let's limit any elected official from owning stocks in industries they impact."

Everything we do in this body, almost everything we do—committee hearings, floor sessions, calls to agencies—affects businesses and the profits businesses make or do not make. That is why Senator Merkley and I are introducing this amendment. It is simple. It is direct. The public should expect nothing else.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, I am delighted to rise today in support of the STOCK Act and in support of amendment No. 1481 that my colleague from Ohio has put forward to address the fundamental issues of conflict of interest that reside here in our body.

Let me start with the defining principle; that is, there should not be one set of rules for Members of Congress and a different set of rules for ordinary Americans. I think the citizens of the United States of America in every State understand that principle. Everyone else in the country has to abide by rules that say they cannot profit in the stock market from privileged information. There is no reason those rules should not apply to Members of Congress.

Indeed, Members of Congress at any given time can hold access to immense amounts of information from previews of economic forecasts, from advanced knowledge of events affecting major employers in their State, to classified defense information that might have implications for, for example, the oil market.

Under the right circumstances, all of this information can provide insider knowledge of which ways the markets are likely to move. So I am delighted that this body has voted overwhelmingly to move forward with the STOCK Act. It would make clear that trading on congressional knowledge is no more acceptable than any other form of insider trading, and it would also make financial disclosures for Members of the Senate searchable online, and that is also very important in the principle of transparency.

These are important steps, but they do not go far enough. Let's remember that insider trading is extraordinarily difficult to define and extraordinarily difficult to prosecute. Where did you get that information and what truly motivated you to make a particular trade in a stock? And because of that, when the conflict of interest exists, we have stepped forward to say that this must be addressed. We ask members of the executive branch to put aside their individual stocks in situations where the conflict arises. We ask our staff members to set aside and divest themselves of their stock when a conflict of interest arises. We applaud the fact that partners in law firms dealing with cases set aside and divest themselves of stock when the conflict of interest arises. But somehow we have not seen fit to have the debate about our own

My colleague put it very well when he said: Why should we allow Members of Congress to hold oil stocks and then vote on issues affecting oil companies? Why should folks be able to invest in renewable energy companies and then fight for tax credits that benefit renewable energy companies? Why should we allow Members to hold stock in pharmaceutical companies and then be deciding on issues such as whether we should have competition in the pricing of pharmaceuticals for Medicare? It is a direct conflict of interest.

Any Member of this body who says, I never even gave a passing thought to the impact on my several-hundred-thousand-dollar investment in X, Y, and Z, I must say, well, I honor their thought, but it doesn't address the issue about us as an institution because no one else outside these walls will believe you didn't think a little bit about the impact on your personal financial portfolio when you voted for that tax credit or you voted for that policy that made your investment worth a lot more than it would have been otherwise.

The people in America are far ahead of us. During January, I had seven townhall meetings in which the STOCK Act came up several times, and I asked for feedback. I said: How many folks here believe Congress should live by the same rules of insider trading that everyone else in America lives by? And there was not a person who raised their hand in support of having a separate set of rules for Congress. Then I asked the question: Do you think we should go further? Should Members not be allowed to hold individual stocks given that they are making decisions that affect the values of the stock? Again universal support that Congress should address this conflict of interest in the same way we have addressed it for the executive branch or for our staff members. So the citizens of this country understand this.

The amendment that Senator Brown championing and that I am partnering to support has three advantages: It directly prevents conflict of interest, and that is a good thing. Second, it eliminates the appearance of impropriety. It gives Americans confidence that we are addressing issues not with a thought to our personal financial status, and that is a good thing. Third, it is very straightforward to enforce. It is not like insider trading, which is difficult to define and difficult to prosecute. It is very clear-cut. You get rid of your individual stocks and you hold broad mutual funds, you hold your investments in a blind trust. These are reasonable options. So for these three reasons, the Members of this body should debate this.

I know many do not agree. A number have come up to me and said they are almost offended by the notion that we would address conflict of interest in this body. I would invite them to come to the floor and converse on this. Yes, it is a longstanding Senate tradition, but there have been a lot of longstanding Senate traditions that didn't work well for the Senate and our place in helping to shape the laws of this Nation. We have changed many of them, and we should change this.

I encourage my colleagues to support the amendment Senator Brown has put forward, and I applaud him for doing

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

AMENDMENT NO. 1481, AS MODIFIED

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to bring up a modified version of amendment No. 1481.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the amendment, insert the following:

SEC. _____. PUTTING THE PEOPLE'S INTERESTS FIRST ACT OF 2012.

- (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Putting the People's Interests First Act of 2012".
- (b) IN GENERAL.—A covered person shall be prohibited from holding and shall divest themselves of any covered investment that is directly, reasonably, and foreseeably affected by the official actions of such covered person, to avoid any conflict of interest, or the appearance thereof. Any divestiture shall occur within a reasonable period of time.

(c) Definitions.—In this section:

- (1) SECURITIES.—The term "securities" has the same meaning as in section 3 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c).
- (2) COVERED PERSON.—The term "covered person" means a Member, officer, or employee of the Senate, their spouse, and their dependents.
- (3) COVERED INVESTMENT.—The term "covered investment" means investment in securities in any company, any comparable economic interest acquired through synthetic means such as the use of derivatives, or short selling any publicly traded securities.
- (4) OFFICER OR EMPLOYEE.—The term "officer or employee of the Senate" means any individual whose compensation is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate or employee of the legislative branch (except any officer or employee of the Government Accountability Office) who, for at least 60 days, occupies a position for which the rate of basic pay is equal to or greater than 120 percent of the minimum rate of basic pay payable for GS-15 of the General Schedule.
- (5) SHORT SELLING.—The term "short selling" means entering into a transaction that has the effect of creating a net short position in a publicly traded company.

(d) EXCEPTIONS.—

- (1) BROAD-BASED INVESTMENTS.—Nothing in this section shall preclude a covered person from investing in broad-based investments, such as diversified mutual funds and unit investment trusts, sector mutual funds, or employee benefit plans, even if a portion of the funds are invested in a security, so long as the covered person has no control over or knowledge of the management of the investment, other than information made available to the public by the mutual fund.
- (2) CERTAIN SPOUSAL INVESTMENTS.—Nothing in this section shall preclude a spouse from purchasing, selling, investing, or otherwise acquiring or disposing of the securities of the company in which the spouse is employed.

(e) Trusts.—

- (1) IN GENERAL.—On a case-by-case basis, the Select Committee on Ethics may authorize a covered person to place their securities holdings in a qualified blind trust approved by the committee under section 102(f) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.
- (2) BLIND TRUST.—A blind trust permitted under this subsection shall meet the criteria in section 102(f)(4)(B) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, unless an alternative arrangement is approved by the Select Committee on Ethics.
- (f) APPLICATION.—This section does not apply to an individual employed by the Secretary of the Senate or the Sergeant at Arms.
  - (g) Administration and Enforcement.—

- (1) ADMINISTRATION.—The provisions of this section shall be administered by the Select Committee on Ethics of the Senate. The Select Committee on Ethics is authorized to issue guidance on any matter contained in this section
  - (2) Enforcement.—
- (A) PENALTY.—Whoever knowingly fails to comply with this section shall, upon proof of such knowing violation by a preponderance of the evidence, be subject to a civil fine of not more than $50,000, depending on the extent and gravity of the violation.
  - (B) REPORTING.—
- (i) COMMITTEE NOTIFICATION.—The Select Committee on Ethics shall notify the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia that a covered person has violated this section
- (ii) SECRETARY OF THE SENATE NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary of the Senate shall notify the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia that a covered person required to file reports under title I of the Ethics in Government Act has violated this section

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, I would just briefly explain that we narrowed the amendment to only cover those who disclose, which means people pretty much making over $120,000 or so. It conforms with the disclosure requirement under the STOCK Act. Our concern is top staff in major decision-making positions and sitting U.S. Senators. That is our target, that is our concern, and we wanted to conform it with provisions Senator GILLIBRAND has put in her legislation subject to the STOCK Act.

Thank you, Mr. President. I appreciate Senator MERKLEY's input and involvement in helping with this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

AMENDMENT NO. 1500 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside and call up amendment No. 1500.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE], for himself and Mrs. HUTCHISON, proposes an amendment numbered 1500 to amendment No. 1470.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To prohibit unauthorized earmarks)

At the end of the amendment, insert the following:

EC. _____. PROHIBITION ON UNAUTHORIZED EARMARKS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—It shall not be in order to consider a bill, joint resolution, conference report, or amendment that provides an earmark.
  - (b) SUPERMAJORITY.—
- (1) WAIVER.—The provisions of subsection (a) may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by the affirmative vote of three-fourths of the Members, duly chosen and sworn.
- (2) APPEAL.—Appeals in the Senate from the decisions of the Chair relating to any provision of this section shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the appellant and the manager of the measure. An affirmative vote of three-fourths of the Members of the Senate, duly chosen and sworn, shall be required to sustain an appeal of the ruling of the Chair on a point of order raised under this section.
- (c) EARMARK DEFINED.—In this resolution, the term "earmark" means a provision or report language included primarily at the request of a Senator or Member of the House of Representatives providing or recommending a specific amount of discretionary budget authority, credit authority, or other spending authority for a contract, loan, loan guarantee, grant, loan authority, or other expenditure with or to an entity, or targeted to a specific State, locality, or congressional district unless the provision or language—
- (1) is specifically authorized by an appropriate congressional authorizing committee of jurisdiction;
- (2) meets funding eligibility criteria established by an appropriate congressional authorizing committee of jurisdiction by statute; or
- (3) is awarded through a statutory or administrative formula-driven or competitive award process.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, today I understand Senator Toomey is going to be offering an amendment that will—it is quite an oversimplification to state it this way, but it would make permanent the temporary ban on earmarks. I think this is something we have talked about and talked about and talked about on this floor. In fact, the last time we talked about an amendment to put a moratorium on earmarks, my conservative rating of No. 1 in the U.S. Senate moved to No. 20 because I was telling the truth and not demagoguing an issue.

The problem we have is this: When the House of Representatives, first of all, came up some time ago—2 years ago—with doing away with earmarks, putting a moratorium on earmarks, then they defined what that moratorium was and defined an earmark in a certain House rule. The bottom line is this: It said it is any kind of an appropriation or authorization.

Now, here is where the problem is. Because everybody is upset with the process that has taken place by Democrats and Republicans on the floor of this Senate—and I will not name, but I think most of the Members know the ones I am talking about. Many of them are members of the Appropriations Committee, where they would sit down during the course of an appropriations bill, and they would swap out deals, favors, and get things for their State. This is the type of thing that is wrong, and it should not take place.

But I have to remind my friends here that we have a Constitution for this country. Article I, section 9 of the Constitution makes it very clear that we—those of us in this Chamber and in the House Chamber across the hall—have a primary constitutional responsibility; that is, to authorize and appropriate. That is what article I, section 9 of the Constitution says we are supposed to be doing.

If you go back and study what Justice Joseph Story, back in 1833, talked about, he kind of made the interpretation of the intent of the Constitution so far as what our duties and the President's are. He said very clearly that we are doing this because if the President has the power to do the appropriating—or if you want to call it earmarks, you can call it earmarks—appropriating or authorization, that is too much power in the hands of one person. So he is very specific that our Founding Fathers wanted to make sure the President does not do this.

So what happens today? Today we get a budget from the President, which is taking place right now as we speak. I could talk about this, all the deficits in the budget and all that, but that is not my purpose for being here. My purpose for being here is to articulate how things are working today and how they have worked up until the moratorium language came into effect.

The President sends a budget to Congress. Then that is supposed to go to authorizing committees. I am on two authorizing committees—one is Environment and Public Works, one is the Senate Armed Services Committee. The Senate Armed Services Committee is staffed with experts in areas of missile defense, in areas of national defense, in areas of strike vehicles, in areas of lift capacity—all the areas that are in his budget in every area of national defense. But here is the thing: These are experts, so they advise us as we have our meetings and we are drafting in the Senate Armed Services Committee—SASC—the defense authorization bill, the NDAA, as we did just a few months ago. We come up with how we think we should be spending the money to defend America within the parameters of the President's budget.

I will give you an example. A couple years ago, before there was any discussion on the moratorium, the President had in his budget $330 million to go to a launching system. It was called a bucket of rockets. It was a good system, something we need, something that would be very helpful to have. But with the limited resources we have and the fact that we were fighting a war on two fronts at that time, we made a determination in the Senate Armed Services Committee that $330 million would be better spent if we bought six new F-18E/F models. Those are strike vehicles. One of the reasons for that was the President in his budget did away with the only fifth-generation fighter we had, the F-22. That was back in his first budget, and he is talking about delaying the F-35, the Joint Strike Fighter, which is going to be necessary to have.

So we made that decision, and that was made by a majority of the members of the Senate Armed Services Committee. It had nothing to do with whose home State makes the F-18. None of that made any difference. It was just that we could do a lot more to defend America by having six new F-18s than we could by having the launching system called a bucket of rockets. Now, if you do that today, that is an earmark, to say: Well, no, that was not in the President's budget.

I have to remind everyone, it does not matter whether the President of the United States is a Democrat or Republican; the President is the guy who designs the budget. A lot of people do not know that. It is not the Democrats, not the Republicans, not the House, not the Senate. It is the President. When he designs this budget, he makes the determination as to how he thinks everything should be spent. If we say we cannot do authorization and appropriation, then that would be called an earmark, and there is a ban on earmarks.

The reason I have kind of walked around the barn a long way on this issue is that I have an amendment, the amendment I have just now brought up for consideration, amendment No. 1500. What that does is it merely defines an earmark as an appropriation that has not been authorized. I just described the authorization process. If we go through that, then there are not going to be any earmarks in the way most people think of earmarks, but we will be doing our duty.

I feel very confident we are going to be able to get this passed. Several of the individuals here very responsibly have talked about this issue. For example, Senator Toomey said yesterday on the floor that some earmarks "ought to be funded. But they ought to be funded in a transparent and honest way, subject to evaluation by an authorizing committee." So here is the author of the ban on earmarks agreeing that if we go through an authorization process, it is all right to fulfill our constitutional function of appropriating and authorizing.

Senator COBURN, my junior Senator, said:

It is not wrong to go through an authorization process where your colleagues can actually see it. It is wrong to hide something in a bill. . . .

Agreed. We all agree on that. That in what is best for the country, not was a year ago when he made that their financial interest. Members of statement.

Senator McCain—by the way, I introduced this amendment in bill form last year. He was my cosponsor. We introduced it together. That was merely changing the definition of an earmark to be an appropriation or spending that has not been authorized.

Senator McCAIN said:

Some of those earmarks are worthy. If they are worthy, then they should be authorized.

That is the whole issue. I can understand some Democrats wanting to do away with congressional earmarks because if they do that, it goes right back to Obama. If I were in a position where I felt President Obama or any other President could do a better job of appropriating money, that would be another motivation to do this. But for responsible conservatives who believe in what the Constitution says, this is a very easy solution to the problem.

The amendment will be brought up. I do not know when yet. I suppose I could find out just what our timing is going to be. But the amendment I have offered simply bans any congressional earmark that is not first authorized.

If we do this, instead of an outright ban, it will preserve our ability to keep the President's power in check. I would hope that many of my colleagues go back and read what our Founding Fathers had in mind when they talked about article I of the Constitution. I think they would find that they made it very clear we want to have a separation of those powers so we do not have either the House or the Senate or the Presidency doing everything. Instead, we should follow the Constitution.

So that is what my amendment is all about. I will be looking forward to bringing it up. I think it probably will be considered today. I look forward to that.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, we have an incredibly important opportunity to do something so basic, so commonsense to begin restoring the faith and trust that the American people have in this institution. We have a responsibility to do it right, to show without question, without any ambiguity, that all Members of Congress, their staffs, and Federal employees play by the exact same rules as everyday Americans.

The American people deserve to know their lawmakers' only interest is in what is best for the country, not their financial interest. Members of Congress, their families, their staffs, and Federal employees should not be able to gain any personal profit from information they have access to that ordinary Americans do not—whether it is trading stock or making inside real estate deals. It is simply not right. Nobody should be above the rules.

The commonsense bill before us would finally codify this principle into law, as it should be. Chairman LIEBER-MAN, Ranking Member Collins, Senator Brown of Massachusetts, and their committee members and staffs have crafted a very strong bipartisan bill with teeth that is narrowly tailored and targeted to ensure that we achieve this very common goal. Because of this bipartisan work, last night this Chamber came together in what has become nearly an unprecedented fashion these days and voted almost unanimously to begin debate on this sorely needed legislation. As we continue to debate, I urge my colleagues to focus on the specific task at hand. Let's show the American people we can come together and get this done to begin to restore their trust in us.

If there are ideas to make the bill stronger, let's debate them. But let's not get bogged down in the politics as usual, with nongermane side issues that will prevent us from swiftly moving on an up-or-down vote the American people expect of us. We are already starting in a strong position with our colleagues in the House.

This STOCK Act legislation is very similar to legislation introduced by my colleague in the New York delegation, Congresswoman LOUISE SLAUGHTER, and Congressman TIM WALZ. I thank them for their longstanding advocacy and focus and leadership on this important issue.

Our bill, which has received the support of at least seven good government groups, covers several very important principles. First, Members of Congress, their families, their staffs, and Federal employees should be barred from gaining any personal profit on the basis of knowledge gained through their congressional service or from using knowledge to tip off anyone else.

This bill will, for the first time, establish a clear fiduciary responsibility to the people we serve. This simple step removes any present doubts as to whether the SEC and the CFTC are empowered to investigate and prosecute cases involving insider trading of securities from using this nonpublic information. It also provides additional teeth. Such acts would also be in violation of Congress's own rules, to make it clear that this activity is inappropriate and subjects Members to additional disciplinary measures by this very body.

Second, Members should be required to disclose major transactions within 30 days to make this information available online for their constituents to see, providing dramatically improved oversight and accountability. We should be able to agree that these reports should be available in the light of day and not stored in some dusty back room.

The committee heard experts testifying during a Senate hearing that reducing this new reporting requirement to 90 days was not good enough. The committee listened to these experts carefully, and the bill has been strengthened and currently has a 30-day proposal, a sea change of improvement from the current reporting requirement of a yearly reporting requirement on a paper document.

Some critics say this bill is unnecessary and is already covered under current statutes. I have spoken with experts tasked in the past with investigations of this nature, and they strongly disagree. We must make it clear as day and unambiguous that this kind of behavior is illegal.

President Obama told us in the State of the Union to send him a bill, and he will sign it right away. We should not delay. This is the time to act. Let's show people who send us here that we can come together and do the right thing. Let's show them we know they deserve a government that is worthy of them. We have an opportunity to take a step toward restoring some of the faith that has been lost in Washington and in this institution. I urge my colleagues to seize this opportunity.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Cardin). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1489 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470

 $\,$  Mrs. BOXER. I call up amendment No. 1489 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER], for herself and Mr. ISAKSON, proposes an amendment numbered 1489 to amendment No. 1470:

At the end, add the following:

SECTION 9. REQUIRING MORTGAGE DISCLOSURE.

Section 102(a)(4)(A) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App) is amended by inserting after "spouse" the following:

", except that this exception shall not apply to a reporting individual described in section 101(f)(9)"

Mrs. BOXER, I am sure, listening to that, it is hard to understand exactly what this is all about, so let me take a moment.

I want to first thank Senators Lie-BERMAN and COLLINS for all their hard work and I want to thank Senator GILLIBRAND for writing the STOCK Act.

I come to the floor as the chairman the Ethics Committee with an amendment that we wrote together, Senator ISAKSON and I, who is the vice chair of the committee. So this is quite a bipartisan amendment and I don't think it should be controversial or troublesome in any way.

This amendment actually comes from a bill that Senator ISAKSON and I wrote together after the Countrywide fiasco. If you want to recollect that unhappy issue, it was a situation where Countrywide had set up a VIP program and they literally targeted Members of Congress of the House and Senate to put them into this program and never told the Members of Congress that there was this program, and yet it went forward. And because there is no rule that personal mortgages be shown on the disclosure form, this was quite a shock when it all came out. What we are saying is we want to improve the disclosure requirement on home mortgages.

Right now, if it is at your own personal home, you don't have to show the mortgage, and this would correct that. It would mean that you have to show the date the mortgage was entered, the balance, and a range, the interest rate, the terms, the name and address of the creditor. So it is an omission-but actually it is a pretty glaring omission in our financial disclosure requirements because, again, of the Countrywide example. We don't want to have a situation—because we are not allowed to get better treatment than anyone else. And the fact that we didn't disclose these mortgages—it was quite a story when it came to light that there was this special VIP program at Countrywide. So this legislation, this amendment, addresses this omission. It requires Members of Congress to make a full and complete disclosure of all the mortgages on their personal residences.

Again, right now this requirement is in place for mortgages that you may have on investment properties but not on your personal properties. It would include Members of Congress and their spouses as well.

In his State of the Union Address, the President spoke about the deficit of trust between Washington and the rest of the country. I don't know that this amendment is going to cure all those problems, but I do think it shows that we are ready to learn from a bad experience, which was the Countrywide experience. So I think the Boxer-Isakson amendment and the underlying bill are rently required to file an annual finansensible steps toward rebuilding our Nation's faith in government.

Again, the rules are already clear that we are not permitted to get any financial arrangements that are better than they are for any other constituent, so I think by this disclosure we are saying that even in our own personal mortgages we have to be aware of this. I think this listing is called for, and I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and the underlying legislation.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I want to comment briefly on the amendment that has been proposed by the Senator from California to the legislation written by Senator Brown. Senator Gilli-BRAND has a similar bill as well, and I want to explain to our colleagues what the state of the current law is, which I think would be helpful.

Under the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, there is an exemption from disclosure for mortgages secured by real property that are the personal residence of the reporting individual or his spouse.

Under the liabilities section of that same report, which we now file annually, liabilities in excess of $10,000 must be reported that are owed by the Member, the spouse, or the dependent child to any one creditor during any time during the reporting period. Credit card debts, for example, are reported. Other kinds of loans are reported. Mortgages held on investment properties—properties, for example, that are rented—are reported. The exemption only goes to the personal residence of the Member and/or the Member's spouse.

I am unclear, and need to get clarification from Senator Boxer and also Office of Government Ethics, whether her amendment would extend the new disclosure requirement that she is proposing to executive branch employees or whether it would only apply to the legislative branch. As I read her amendment, it looks as though it only applies to the legislative branch and perhaps only to Mem-

I would ask, through the Chair, if the Senator from California could clarify for me—this is truly an informational question—whether she is intending this new requirement to apply to congressional staff and whether she is intending this new requirement to apply to executive branch members who are curcial disclosure form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I very much thank Senator Collins for that question.

Senator ISAKSON and I, as the chair and vice chair of the Ethics Committee, are applying this to the Members of Congress. That is because the scandal that took place with Countrywide involved the Members of Congress. We are not including staff in this. It also applies to more than one residence, because some of our Members have seven homes, six homes, four homes, two homes. If you have mortgages on any of those properties, you would now have to disclose those.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from California for clarifying that issue and answering my question.

I guess my further question would be, why would we only apply it to Members of Congress and not apply it to members of the executive branch? For example, I would argue that if there are conflict of interest issues or allegations of a sweetheart deal for mortgages that might be revealed by this disclosure, that that would apply equally to, say, Treasury officials—in fact, even more so to Treasury officials or bank regulators—as it would Members of Congress.

I wonder if the Senator's intent is to make sure that Members are not getting sweetheart deals on their mortgages—which obviously no Member should be receiving a sweetheart deal on a mortgage—why that same logic would not apply to executive branch officials, particularly since arguably they have far more direct influence and jurisdiction and regulatory authority over financial institutions than do Members of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I would be happy to go on as a cosponsor to Senator Collins if she wants to take on the additional burden of moving this idea forward. I don't have any problem with it.

The point is, I am here—and I have been very open about it because I know what I am talking about when it comes to Members of Congress, because as chair of the Ethics Committee, I don't oversee Treasury. This is not my role, this is not my expertise, and I am very humble about that. I did see what happened here, along with, I would say, every member of the Ethics Committee and Senator ISAKSON.

This is a bipartisan amendment and we know what we are talking about, and we are saying there was a problem and Members of Congress were courted by Countrywide. Did they court other people? I don't know. But if there is some proof that they did and there is is not unique to the issue that has been need to go and cover them with a similar amendment, I would be happy to work with my colleague on that. But I am not going to change this particular piece of legislation, because I know what I am talking about here. I know how to fix this. I know we have made a big mistake, and I feel it is our job to clean up our own business. And our own business, when it comes to this, is not good.

Would I wish to look over at what the Bush administration did or what the Obama administration is doing or what other administrations will do? I am happy to do that. But I am here to address our house-our house. Clean it up. Act as a role model.

I do not have any problem with supporting another piece of legislation. Maybe there is a problem over there. I, frankly, do not know what their ethics rules are. I know what our ethics rules are, and I know we have made a glaring omission when Members may have three, four, five, six, seven houses; they may have two, three, four, five, six mortgages and they never have to show them. Let's clean it up.

If my friend believes there is need for another amendment, I am happy to look at it. But Senator ISAKSON and I are doing something we have long wanted to do. This is not something we just made up. We have had a bill for a long time doing exactly this. This is a moment we would like to get it done.

I vield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, the reason I am raising this issue—I realize the Senator from California has not had the misfortune I have had, of being constantly on the floor listening to the debate on this bill—but a major issue we have been grappling with is parity in the rules. This issue has not just come up with regard to the amendment of the Senator from California, it has come up over and over.

I am not in any way singling out the Senator from California to raise this issue. This has come up on every single issue we have been tackling on the floor, which is, if we are going to have more disclosure for the legislative branch, should we not have the exact same or comparable disclosures for high-ranking executive branch officials?

The issue I raised, I wish to assure the Senator from California, is no means unique to her amendment. It has come up over and over and, indeed, the first amendment that we were supposed to have voted on last night was an amendment by Senator PAUL, making clear that this bill applied to the executive branch and then Senator SHELBY had an amendment to make sure there was online disclosure by the executive branch.

This is an issue that has permeated the entire debate on the STOCK Act. It raised by the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my colleague for that because it was a little surprising. My understanding, and I hope to stand corrected by the Senator from Maine, if I am wrong, and the Senator from New York, that the whole idea behind the STOCK Act, the bill written by Senator GILLIBRAND and the bill written by Senator Brown, did not deal with the executive branch. I thought the whole notion behind this was for us to clean up our act. Clean up our act over here. That is the best way to proceed.

I have no problem if my colleague wants to write an amendment, she herself, on this particular issue. If she can make the case that it has been shown that VIP loans were given to members of the executive branch—whether under George Bush or Barack Obamaand I think in the years she is looking at it would have been under Bush, but those are the years the Countrywide scandal took place—if my friend has absolute information for me that shows that members of the Bush administration or the Obama administration got special treatment from the Countrywide scandal, I would like to know about it. I do not know anything about that at this time.

If my friend believes it would be a good thing to do, to offer a separate amendment covering certain members of the executive branch, I am happy to look at it. But it strikes me as bizarre that this has become an issue. It sounds like what is going on from the Republican side is all of a sudden they want to turn attention over to the executive branch rather than focus it on us-which I think is critical. But I am happy to look at any amendment that deals with abuses the Senator can show me were occurring over on the executive branch side during those years that Countrywide was doing its damage. I would be happy to support an amendment. But I think we should keep this amendment clean. I think this amendment should be clean because we are looking at a particular ethics rule and we are essentially cutting out a loophole which has allowed colleagues to not have to list their personal residences when, in fact, we know some of them got special treatment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, first, let me make the point to the Senator from California, I am a cosponsor of the STOCK Act. I cosponsored Senator Brown's bill, so it is not that I do not think legislation is needed in this area. I am a cosponsor on this bill and have commended him for his work. But the fact remains that in our committee markup the bill was changed.

I know the Senator was distracted when I answered that question. The bill was changed in committee to extend to the executive branch. It is in the bill that is before us now. The Senator was misinformed in that regard. The bill was changed to make very clear that the insider trading prohibition applied to the executive branch and that executive branch members have a duty to their agencies, to the government. We make that explicit. That was changed in committee.

The Senator is not correct that the bill that was brought to the floor only applied to Congress. It does not. It applies to the executive branch.

The second point I will make is this is not a partisan issue. We have bills on both sides of the aisle. We have amendments on both sides of the aisle. Indeed, we have disclosure amendments that apply to the executive branch coming from both sides of the aisle. Senator Wyden has a disclosure amendment that is similar to that of Senator Shelby's. We are working with both of those offices right now to try to work those out.

I do not know how this all of a sudden became a partisan debate or a debate about the Bush administration or anything. This is a debate about good government and how we can best assure the American people that, regardless of whether public officials are in the executive branch or the legislative branch, they are putting the public's interests ahead of their private interests and that they are not profiting from insider information, nonpublic information that is not available to the public which they are using inappropriately-if, in fact, that is even happening—for personal gain.

I did wish to clarify that the bill, as reported from committee, does apply to the executive branch as well as the legislative branch, that the statement made by the Senator was inaccurate in that regard, and that we have amendments on both sides of the aisle that we are working on right now to extend the disclosure requirements, the reporting requirements to the executive branch. Those are amendments coming from both Democrats and Republicans.

I would like to yield at this point to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, if I can respond?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine has the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. The Senator can't yield—I would like to have the floor now. She can't yield to another colleague except if it is for a question. I would like to have the floor since the Senator just said I was incorrect. I would like to correct her, if I might.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. What I said was, when these bills were introduced, they were directed at the Congress. That is what I said. I talked about the bills. I did not talk about what went on amending them, et cetera. I will repeat what I said was accurate. Both Mr. Brown's bill and Mrs. GILLIBRAND's bill were, in fact, talking about the Congress.

What I would also like to say is if my colleague wants bipartisanship, she should be happy with this amendment since it is coming from Senators BOXER and ISAKSON, the chairman and the vice chairman of the Ethics Committee.

We did not investigate the executive branch and Countrywide's going after the people in the Bush administration and the Obama administration. We do not have that information. If she has information that shows there have been sweetheart deals over there. I certainly want to know about it. As I said, if my colleague wants to offer a firstdegree amendment that broadens this, I am happy to look at it. Because if it can be shown to me that there have been abuses over there, from the mortgage companies going after these folks over there, I am happy to agree to that. I would have to take it to Senator Isakson because he is, in fact, the coauthor. Also, I have to point out that this same amendment I offered was put forward in a bill by Senator CORNYN in 2008. So there is a lot of interest on this.

I am a person who likes to know what I am talking about. I try very hard. I do not know if there has been abuse from the mortgage companies over to the executive branch. But I know for sure there has been a big problem here with colleagues getting sweetheart deals. I want to put an end to it.

If my colleague wants to strengthen my amendment, she can offer a seconddegree amendment. If she can prove to me that there has been abuse and there has been a problem and there is not enough protection, I am happy to support it. But I guess I am a little taken aback as I come here in a bipartisan spirit to offer a bipartisan amendment, I have kind of been the subject of some weird sort of attack for not going far enough with my amendment. I find it bizarre, to be totally frank, and I will continue to stay on the floor until I understand what this is all about. Maybe I have nothing to do with it. If I said something wrong, I would like to know what it is. But I am offering, in good faith, a bipartisan amendment that is a no-brainer, that comes straight out of the Countrywide scandal that we studied in a bipartisan way, in Congress, and we are moving to correct the problems we know exist.

If there are more problems out there and if my friend has proof of that, if she can prove it to us, I am happy to support a first-degree amendment to this amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I do not know why the Senator from California, first of all, is assuming I am somehow opposed to her amendment. I have not said that. What I raised was a very legitimate question of asking whether she had considered extending it to the executive branch.

Then her response seems to be an attack; that if I have information that there are problems and sweetheart deals in the executive branch, I should prove them.

I am not making allegations. I do not make unsubstantiated allegations against individuals. What I was trying to tell the Senator from California is that the issue of the scope and applicability of this bill has come up over and over. It came up in committee. We changed the bill in committee to make it clear that the prohibition against insider trading and a duty applied to the executive branch as well as to the legislative branch.

I have not criticized her amendment in any way. I asked a series of questions about the scope of her amendment because this issue has come up repeatedly, on both sides of the aisle. It came up in committee during our markup. It has come up on the Senate floor repeatedly as far as what the disclosure requirements should be and to whom they should apply.

I am the one who is baffled by the response of the Senator from California, since I have not indicated any opposition whatsoever to her amendment.

I have merely brought up the fact that the issue of the scope of this bill has come up repeatedly, so I was curious why she chose to have such a narrow bill rather than applying it to executive branch officials who filed the same kinds of disclosure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Ms. BOXER. Mr. President, we can go back and forth 100 ways to Sunday. I thought I explained exactly why Senator ISAKSON and I have a narrow bill. We are trying to fix a problem we know exists. We feel very strongly that for the good of the Senate, in particularbecause this is the body we serve in. We love it. We want to make it strong and appreciated and not derided. We had a scandal that touched this body and we had a thorough investigation. It took a long time to get to the bottom of it. We uncovered the fact that Countrywide had a sweetheart deal and they were aiming it at Members of Congress.

We have crafted this amendment to respond to what we know is a problem. I am not in the business of coming down here and legislating on things that I might guess are a problem or, gee, maybe I can throw out a fishing net and catch everybody in it. If there is a problem elsewhere, I am happy to support my colleague if she would like to broaden this. I am not against it. I am saying for me and Senator ISAKSON, we have offered an amendment that cures a very simple problem; that ethics rules, as they are today, allow Senators and Members of Congress to avoid showing the mortgages they hold on personal residences. If the same thing exists in the executive branch, I don't know about that. I am dealing with an amendment here and so is Senator ISAKSON, that we know about.

If the Senator asks again why our amendment is narrow, let me again answer it in another way: We are curing a narrow problem but a problem that exists. We are not throwing out some big fishing net to catch everybody in it whom we don't know about. We think this will make the Congress a better place. We do. Because there are Members who have two, three, four, and five homes. They may have two, three, four, and five mortgages, and we think it is important for the public to know that.

But, again, I hope my colleague from Maine supports this. I don't know if she does.

She doesn't oppose it. That is a good start. I hope she supports it. If she feels she can make it stronger, she should offer a first-degree amendment, let me take a look at it, let me see whether it is necessary, and let me see whether there is reason to do it. I can surely tell her I am very open to broadening it, but the reason it is crafted the way it is is that it is dealing with a problem we are not guessing exists; we know it exists where there have been abuses before and we are trying to cure that problem.

I thank the Senator for her patience.
I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. BROWN of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I enjoyed that back and forth debate very much. I appreciate the spirit in which that amendment was offered. I wrote the original bill. It was my bill and Senator GILLIBRAND then filed a bill. We went through the committee process, and the original intent of the bill was to deal with insider trading. It applied to all Federal employees, not just congressional, so it is an insider trading bill.

The spirit of what we have been trying to do over the last day and a half is to address issues equally so as to eliminate all appearances of impropriety and for any branch of government to not play by the same rules as the American people would play by. So every single amendment that has come through this Chamber right now has not only been expanded to cover, obviously, those in the Senate and the House of Representatives but also equally to the executive branch.

So if this amendment is going to have any chance of passing, I can assure you I will not support it unless it specifically also applies to the executive branch. If she wants to amend it or modify it to include that, then it will have a good chance of passing; if not, I will do my best to prohibit it because it needs to be applied to everybody. For us to come and say we need to come up with proof that somebody is doing something or not doing something-listen, it is no different than what we are trying to do on the insider trading bill. There is no one who has been brought to court and found criminally responsible. We are dealing on inference and reference and innuendo. That is why we are trying to reestablish the trust with the American people to do something that would not traditionally have been done but not for a 60-minute speech. So if we knew something was happening in the mortgage industry, great, let's let it apply across the board and not exclude a group of Federal employees for some particular political reason.

Once again, if she wants to amend it, great. If not, I am going to do my best to make it amended so we can have it apply equally if we are going to ultimately take it up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. BEGICH. Thank you, Mr. President. I also enjoyed this debate. I agree with Senator Brown. It is a form they already fill out now. We just have to add one other line. It is not complicated. I think it is a good idea. I will leave it at that.

I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business about the STOP Act. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. Begich pertaining to the introduction of S. 2054 are printed in today's Record under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I wish to thank the Senator from Alaska for his explanation of what has been going on as far as executive compensation with FHFA.

AMENDMENT NO. 1492 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470  $\,$

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I would ask the Senate set aside the pending amendment and call up amendment No. 1492.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Montana [Mr. Tester] proposes amendment numbered 1492.

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend the Securities Act of 1933 to require the Securities and Exchange Commission to exempt a certain class of securities from such Act)

At the end, insert the following:

SEC. _____. SMALL COMPANY CAPITAL FORMATION ACT OF 2012.

- (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Small Company Capital Formation Act of 2012".
- (b) AUTHORITY TO EXEMPT CERTAIN SECURITIES.—
- (1) In general.—Section 3(b) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77c(b)) is amended—
- (A) by striking "(b) The Commission" and inserting the following:
  - "(2) ADDITIONAL EXEMPTIONS.—
- "(A) SMALL ISSUES EXEMPTIVE AUTHORITY.— The Commission"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

- "(B) ADDITIONAL ISSUES.—The Commission shall by rule or regulation add a class of securities to the securities exempted pursuant to this section in accordance with the following terms and conditions:
- "(i) The aggregate offering amount of all securities offered and sold within the prior 12-month period in reliance on the exemption added in accordance with this paragraph shall not exceed $50,000,000.

"(ii) The securities may be offered and sold publicly.

"(iii) The securities shall not be restricted securities within the meaning of the Federal securities laws and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

"(iv) The civil liability provision in section 12(a)(2) shall apply to any person offering or selling such securities.

"(v) The issuer may solicit interest in the offering prior to filing any offering statement, on such terms and conditions as the Commission may prescribe in the public interest or for the protection of investors.

"(vi) The Commission shall require the issuer to file audited financial statements with the Commission annually.

"(vii) Such other terms, conditions, or requirements as the Commission may determine necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors, which may include—

"(I) a requirement that the issuer prepare and electronically file with the Commission and distribute to prospective investors an offering statement, and any related documents, in such form and with such content as prescribed by the Commission, including audited financial statements and a description of the issuer's business operations, its financial condition, its corporate governance principles, its use of investor funds, and other appropriate matters; and

"(II) disqualification provisions under which the exemption shall not be available to the issuer or its predecessors, affiliates, officers, directors, underwriters, or other related persons, which shall be substantially similar to the disqualification provisions contained in the regulations adopted in accordance with section 926 of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (15 U.S.C. 77d note).

"(C) LIMITATION.—Only the following types of securities may be exempted under a rule or regulation adopted pursuant to paragraph (2): equity securities, debt securities, and debt securities convertible or exchangeable to equity interests, including any guarantees of such securities.

"(D) PERIODIC DISCLOSURES.—Upon such terms and conditions as the Commission determines necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors, the Commission by rule or regulation may require an issuer of a class of securities exempted under paragraph (2) to make available to investors and file with the Commission periodic disclosures regarding the issuer, its business operations, its financial condition, its corporate governance principles, its use of investor funds, and other appropriate matters, and also may provide for the suspension and termination of such a requirement with respect to that issuer.

"(E) ADJUSTMENT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Small Company Capital Formation Act of 2011 and every 2 years thereafter, the Commission shall review the offering amount limitation described in paragraph (2)(A) and shall increase such amount as the Commission determines appropriate. If the Commission determines not to increase such amount, it shall report to the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate on its reasons for not increasing the amount."

(2) TREATMENT AS COVERED SECURITIES FOR PURPOSES OF NSMIA.—Section 18(b)(4) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77r(b)(4)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (C), by striking "; or" at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (D) as subparagraph (E), and inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

"(d) a rule or regulation adopted pursuant to section 3(b)(2) and such security is—

"(I) offered or sold on a national securities exchange; or

"(II) offered or sold to a qualified purchaser as defined by the Commission pursuant to paragraph (3) with respect to that purchase or sale."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 4(5) of the Securities Act of 1933 is amended by striking "section 3(b)" and inserting "section 3(b)(1)".

(c) STUDY ON THE IMPACT OF STATE BLUE SKY LAWS ON REGULATION A OFFERINGS.—Not later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall—

(1) conduct a study on the impact of State laws regulating securities offerings (commonly referred to as "Blue Sky laws") on offerings made under Regulation A (17 C.F.R. 230.251 et seq.); and

(A) transmit a report on the findings of the study to the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate.

AMENDMENT NO. 1503 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1470

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be set aside, and I ask unanimous consent to call up amendment No. 1503.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Montana [Mr. Tester] proposes amendment numbered 1503.

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To require Senate candidates to file designations, statements, and reports in electronic form)

At the end, add the following:

SEC. ___. FILING BY SENATE CANDIDATES WITH COMMISSION.

Section 302(g) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 432(g)) is amended to read as follows:

"(g) FILING WITH THE COMMISSION.—All designations, statements, and reports required to be filed under this Act shall be filed with the Commission.".

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to be recognized to speak on this amendment for up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, I am pleased to offer this amendment with Senator Cochran and ask unanimous consent that he be added as a cosponsor

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. TESTER. This is a straight-forward amendment. It simply requires candidates for the Senate, both challengers and incumbents, file their quarterly campaign finance reports electronically. Anyone seeking the Presidency or a spot in the U.S. House of Representatives is required to submit campaign finance records electronically right now, but Senators or would-be Senators are not. It makes no sense.

Right now, Senate candidates drop off a hard copy of their filing report with the Secretary of the Senate. Someone from the FEC comes over and then takes the reports over to the FEC to make copies, and then, finally, the copies are put online.

These documents often run hundreds of pages in length. The FEC estimates it wastes about $250,000 of taxpayer money each year just to make those copies and put them online. Now, that might not sound like a lot of money in Washington, DC, but the idea of spending $1/4 million on an outdated process represents what is wrong with Washington, DC.

Americans deserve to know how much money candidates raise and from whom, and they deserve to be able to access that information in real time.

It is not just the cost of the current process that folks should be angry about. The process of making copies and posting the documents online takes weeks. That is not just a waste of time, it is bad for the democratic process Campaign finance data filed right before a general election is not available to the public until the following February, long after the election has already taken place.

Since the Citizens United ruling, folks aren't able to tell who is funding third-party advertisements. It is hard enough to know who is spending the money on third-party advertisements. The least we can do is to make sure that folks have better access to the information about who is giving to the candidates.

My bill from the last Congress had strong bipartisan support—14 Democrats, 6 Republicans, and 5 of the cosponsors are members of the Homeland Security Committee. I especially appreciate, and I wish to thank, the Republican manager of the STOCK Act, Senator COLLINS, for being a supporter of that original bill.

We have an opportunity to do something that cuts government spending and adds more transparency and accountability to the elections process. I urge all of my colleagues to support this amendment.

With that, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MERKLEY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, productive work is going on to try to reach a final list of amendments for the STOCK Act and to have an agreement which will come up for a vote, and to have that obviously by a bipartisan agreement. We are making progress. I hope we can continue to do that.

ORDER FOR RECESS

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate recess from 4 to 5 p.m. so that all Senators can attend a classified briefing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

A SECOND OPINION

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I come to the floor, as I do week after week, as a physician who practiced medicine in Wyoming for a quarter of a century to give a doctor's second opinion about the health care law.

I was thinking last week, while sitting in the House Chamber when the President was giving his State of the Union Address, about something he said. He said:

We will not go back to an economy weakened by outsourcing, bad debt, and phony financial profits.

Repeating, he promised not to go back to an economy weakened by phony financial profits. That is why today, in the next hour or so, the House of Representatives will answer the President's call. They will agree. They will vote to repeal the CLASS Act—a program that is the perfect example of phony financial profits.

Let me explain further. President Obama's health care law established the CLASS Act—a brandnew Federal long-term care entitlement program. CLASS pays a stipend to individuals enrolled when they are unable to perform daily living activities, such as dressing, bathing, and eating. The issue is that to qualify for the CLASS benefit, an individual would have to pay a monthly premium for 5 years before the Federal Government starts to pay out any benefits. Well, that sounds great, but not so fast. It turns out that the math for the program doesn't add up and it will not work.

The worst part about it is that the administration has known from the very beginning that this CLASS Program—and the President's entire health care law—was built on phony financial profits. Specifically, the Obama administration hid behind a Congressional Budget Office estimate showing that this program would reduce the deficit by $70 billion over a 10vear period. These savings are entirely mythical, and they come from premiums collected over the first 5 years. During that time, the program isn't required or even allowed to pay out individual benefits. Over its first 10 years, this program, the Congressional Budget Office estimated, would collect $83 billion in premiums but would only pay out $13 billion in benefits. But then instead of holding on to the $70 billion in excess premiums collected to pay out future expenses, the Washington Democrats used it as an accounting gimmick, a budgetary trick to pay for the President's health care law. Adding insult to injury. Washington Democrats then tried to claim that the same $70 billion could also be used to pay down the deficit. Talk about phony financial profits. This is the very practice used by the President that the President now objects to

The good news is that the administration finally admitted late last year that the CLASS Act was a complete failure and they could not make it work. The bad news is that the phony financial profits continue.

Just because the program won't go forward doesn't mean that the costs of the President's health care law don't go forward, because they do. Now the American people are stuck with the bill, and it is a much more expensive bill than the one they had been promised and the one they had expected. In fact, just yesterday, the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office reported that the health care law is now likely to cost $54 billion more than expected between 2012 and 2021.

As Politico says:

The big change that makes the law more expensive is the Obama administration's decision not to implement the CLASS Act, which means the government will not collect $76 billion in premiums over the next 10

I applaud the House for taking the lead and voting to repeal the CLASS Act. I call on President Obama and my colleagues in the Senate to do exactly the same. Senate majority leader HARRY REID should bring H.R. 1173, the Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act, to the Senate floor for a vote. This bill will repeal the CLASS Act so that the American people have a clear understanding of the cost of the President's health care law.

It is time to end the phony financial profits in the President's health care law that continue to burden our economy and our Nation. It is time to finally find out if the President truly does believe in fairness because if he does, he will repeal the CLASS Act and make it clear that he has the same accounting standards for Washington as he has for the private sector. Washington should not be able to cook the books and to make the President's health care law look more financially sound than it really is.

The American people are sick of phony financial profits, and they are demanding fairness in the public sector as well as the private sector. That is why I will continue to come to the floor and fight each and every day to repeal and replace the President's broken health care law-replace it with a patient-centered plan, a plan that allows Americans to get the care they need from a doctor they want at a price they can afford.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate recess at this time under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 3:59 p.m., recessed until 5 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. WHITE-HOUSE).

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, as we start Black History Month, I rise to discuss a national hero I have spoken about many times on the Senate floor. With this year's Black History Month focused on African-American women, it is all the more appropriate for me to talk about Maryland's Harriet Ross Tubman and her dedication to justice, equality, and service to this country.

In my career, I have spoken on the Senate floor, at events in Maryland, in meetings with constituents, and with my colleagues about Harriet Tubman's legacy. While I hope each opportunity I have taken to discuss the life of this remarkable woman helps raise the awareness about her importance to the history of our great Nation, my ultimate goal is to properly commemorate her life and her work by establishing the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad National Historical Park on the eastern shore of Maryland, and, in working with my colleagues from New York, to establish the Harriet Tubman National Historical Park in Auburn.

A year ago this week, I reintroduced the Harriet Tubman National Historical Park and the Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad National Historical Park Act with Senators SCHUMER, MI-KULSKI, and GILLIBRAND as original cosponsors. I am happy to say since that time the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committees held a positive hearing on the bill, the Energy Committee favorably reported the bill, and it has been placed on the Senate calendar. I thank my colleagues on the committee for their support, particularly Chairman BINGAMAN and Ranking Member Murkowski, and the chairman of the National Park Subcommittee, Senator UDALL of Colorado.

The establishment of the Harriet Tubman Historical Park has been years in the making and is long overdue. The mission of the National Park Service has evolved over time, from preserving our natural wonders across the United States for recreational purposes to commemorating unique places of significance to historical events and extraordinary Americans who have shaped our Nation.

The woman who is known to us as Harriet Tubman was born in approximately 1822 in Dorchester County, MD, and given the name Araminta-Minty—Ross. She spent nearly 30 years of her life in slavery on Maryland's eastern shore. She worked on a number

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I ask of different plantations on Maryland's eastern shore, and as a teenager she was trained to be a seamstress. As an adult, she took the first name Harriet, and when she was 25 years old she married John Tubman.

In her late twenties, Harriet Tubman escaped from slavery in 1849. She fled in the dead of night, navigating the maze of tidal streams and wetlands that to this day comprise the eastern shore's landscape. She did this alone, exercising incredible courage strength.

Not satisfied with attaining her own freedom, she returned repeatedly for more than 10 years to the places of her enslavement in Dorchester and Caroline Counties, where under the most adverse conditions she led away many family members and other slaves to freedom in the Northeastern United States.

She helped develop a complex network of safe houses and recruited abolitionist sympathizers residing along secret routes connecting the southern slave States and the northern free States. No one knows exactly how many people she led to freedom or the number of trips between the North and South she led, but the legend of her work was an inspiration to the multitude of slaves seeking freedom and to abolitionists fighting to end slavery.

Tubman became known as "the Moses of her people" by African Americans and White abolitionists alike. She is the most famous and the most important conductor of the network of resistance known as the Underground Railroad.

During the Civil War, Tubman served the Union forces as a spy, a scout, and a nurse. She served in Virginia, Florida, and South Carolina. She is credited with leading slaves from those slave States to freedom during those years as well.

Following the Civil War and the emancipation of all Black slaves, Tubman settled in Auburn, NY. There she was active in the women's suffrage movement and established one of the first incorporated African-American homes for the aged to care for the elderly. In 1903, she bequeathed the Tubman Home to the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church in Auburn where it stands to this day. Harriet Tubman died in Auburn in 1913, and she is buried in Fort Hill Cemetery.

Fortunately, many of the structures and landmarks in New York remain intact and in relatively good condition. Only recently has the Park Service begun establishing units dedicated to the lives of African Americans. Places such as the Booker T. Washington National Monument on the campus of Tuskegee University in Alabama, the George Washington Carver National Monument in Missouri, the Buffalo Soldiers at Guadalupe Mountains National Park, the National Historical Trail commemorating the march for voting rights from Selma to Montgomery, AL, and, most recently, the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial on The National Mall.

These are all important monuments and places of historical significance that help tell the story of the African-American experience.

As the National Park Service continues its important work to recognize and preserve African-American history by providing greater public access and information about the places and people that have shaped the African-American experience, there are very few units dedicated to the lives of African-American women, and there is no national historical park commemorating African-American women.

I cannot think of a more fitting hero than Harriet Tubman to be the first African-American woman to be memorialized with a national historical park that tells her story and her fight against institutions of slavery and the work on the Underground Railroad. I hope my colleagues will support my effort to honor Harriet Tubman and support the passage of my bill to authorize the creation of the Tubman National Historical Parks in New York and Maryland

Let me just point out that the landscapes in which she lived still exist today, and that will be an incredible part of the national park that can tell the story, particularly to young people, about the courage of this extraordinary woman. A number of structures exist in Auburn, NY, which complement her life as the conductor of the Underground Railroad, as well as her later life in helping to advance the rights of all people.

This is an incredible opportunity for us to honor her with this national park and to help future generations understand the history of America and the courage of this extraordinary leader and hero of our Nation, Harriet Tubman.

Mr. President, these parks will hopefully pave the way for the Park Service to develop more National Historical Park commemorating the lives of many other important African-American women in our history.

The vision for the Tubman National Historical Parks is to preserve the places significant to the life of Harriet Tubman and tell her story through interpretative activities and continue to discover aspects of her life and the experience of passage along the Underground Railroad through archaeological research and discovery.

The buildings and structures in Maryland have mostly disappeared. Slaves were forced to live in primitive buildings even though many slaves were skilled tradesmen who constructed the substantial homes of their owners. Not surprisingly, few of the structures associated with the early years of Tubman's life still stand.

As I mentioned, the landscapes of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, however, remain similar to the time Tubman lived there. Farm fields and forests dot the lowland landscape, which is also notable for the extensive network of tidal rivers and wetlands that Tubman, and the people she guided to freedom, would have traveled under the cover of night.

In particular, a number of properties—including the homestead of Ben Ross, her father, Stewart's Canal, where he worked, the Brodess Farm, where she worked as a slave, and others are within the master plan boundaries of the Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge.

Similarly, Poplar Neck, the plantation from which she escaped to freedom, is still largely intact in Caroline County. The properties in Talbot County, immediately across the Choptank River from the plantation, are currently protected by various conservation easements.

Were she alive today, Tubman would recognize much of the landscape that she knew intimately as she secretly led black men, women and children to freedom.

There has never been any doubt that Tubman led an extraordinary life. Her contributions to American history are surpassed by few. Determining the most appropriate way to recognize that life and her contributions, however, has been exceedingly difficult.

The National Park Service determined that designating a Historical Park that would include two geographically separate units would be an appropriate tribute to the life of this extraordinary American.

The New York unit would include the tightly clustered Tubman buildings in the town of Auburn. The Maryland portion would include large sections of landscapes that are representive of Tubman's time and are historically relevant.

Harriet Tubman was a true American patriot. She was someone for whom liberty and freedom were not just concepts but values she fought tirelessly for. She lived those principles and achieved freedom with hundreds of others. In doing so, she has earned the Nation's respect and honor.

Harriet Tubman is one of many great Americans who we honor and celebrate every February during Black History Month.

In schools across the country, American History curriculums teach our children about Tubman's courage, conviction, her fight for freedom and her contributions to the greatness of our Nation during a contentious time in U.S. history. Now it is time to add to Tubman's legacy by preserving and commemorating the places representative of her extraordinary life.

Every year, millions of school children, as well as millions of adults, visit our National Historical Parks and gain experiences and knowledge about our Nation's history that simply cannot be found in history books or on Wikipedia.

Our Nation's strength and character comes from the actions of the Americans who came before us and the significant events that shaped our Nation.

The National Park Service is engaged in the important work of preserving where American history has taken place and providing a tangible experience for all people to learn from.

It is one thing to learn about Harriet Tubman from a book, it is a completely different and fulfilling experience to explore, to see, to listen, and to feel the places where she worked as a slave, where she escaped from, and where she lived her days as a free American.

The National Park Service is uniquely suited to honoring and preserving these places of historical significance, and I urge my colleagues to join me in preserving and growing the legacy of Harriet Tubman by establishing the Harriet Tubman National Historical Parks in her honor.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Rhode Island.

REMEMBERING J. JOSEPH GARRAHY

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to join with my colleague and friend from Rhode Island to pay tribute to former Rhode Island Governor J. Joseph Garrahy, who passed away last week at the age of 81.

Joe Garrahy loved Rhode Island, and in turn the people of Rhode Island loved Joe Garrahy. His intelligence, his instinct, and his integrity led our State with compassion and courage. He believed in the people of Rhode Island and in the virtue of public service.

More than three decades after he left public office, Joe Garrahy remains one of our most respected and beloved leaders. A man of the people, the Governor of Rhode Island, Joe Garrahy, is a Rhode Island icon who will be held in high esteem for generations to come. Rhode Islanders lost a friend. We all lost a good friend.

John Joseph Garrahy was born in humble circumstances in Providence, Rhode Island, on November 26, 1930, the son of Irish immigrants. He graduated from La Salle Academy in Providence and attended the University of Buffalo and the University of Rhode Island.

The Governor began his political career in 1962 when he was elected to represent Smith Hill in the Rhode Island General Assembly. He served as Rhode Island's Lieutenant Governor from 1969 to 1976, and then was elected Governor and served from 1977 to 1985.

After his retirement from public life, Governor Garrahy was a business consultant who championed new economic development projects and helped existing businesses that have always been the backbone of our economy in Rhode Island. He never stopped looking for beloved State of Rhode Island.

As Governor, Joe Garrahy had vision, initiative, and an incredibly strong work ethic. He possessed the unique ability to bring people together to address their needs at the most basic level while at the same time tackling the most pressing public policy issues of his time. He was also particularly gifted in bringing together opposing sides and would often invite diverse interests into the room to discuss issues and matters of conflict. Because of his integrity, his decency, and his sincerity, he was more than an honest broker; he was someone people trusted.

His leadership and his example led Rhode Island with special distinction. He brought people together because they innately trusted this kind and wise gentleman. They knew he always had the interests of the State at heart, not his personal ambition, not his personal progress, but the welfare of the people of Rhode Island. His list of achievements is long. His many good works have made a lasting impression on our State. He believed government could and must do all it can to improve the lives of its citizens.

He was elected Governor after the Navy decided to close Quonset Pointwhich was a premier naval air station in Rhode Island, a major employer and a major source of economic activityand reduced its presence in Newport. This was a shock to the economy of Rhode Island. In spite of double-digit unemployment and the challenging economy that was worsened by this departure, he set a new course to redirect resources and make government work for the people.

He fought for the rights of the disabled and led in the deinstitutionalization of the mentally disabled citizens of Rhode Island. He closed the Ladd School, which was our residential center, and he literally ended the practice of warehousing the disabled at the Institute of Mental Health. He reformed Rhode Island's prison system, which was plagued with unrest and violence. transforming it to a national model.

Following the energy crisis in the 1970s, the Governor provided resources to a much needed energy office to look for innovative ways to deal with a problem that still challenges the State and the Nation. He also forged creative partnerships with neighboring States throughout the Northeast and with leaders in Canada.

Governor Garrahy was a man of great passion, great decency, and he had a special affection for the elderly and the children of Rhode Island. Under his tenure he created the Department of Elderly Affairs and Children, Youth and Families, he said, to focus the attention of the State and make the delivery of services to these seniors and children more efficient and more effective. That was Joe Garrahy—thinking and finding new ways to promote his not about himself but, in particular, thinking about the most vulnerable people in our society.

> He was always a great cheerleader for Rhode Island. He led the way for the Rhode Island Heritage Commission to flourish and to publicize and popularize our State's unique contributions to American history and its rich cultural heritage—a rich ethnic heritage which he was awfully proud of. He was always a staunch supporter of our tourism in-

> He also had a profound respect and regard for the environment and worked diligently to clean up pollution in Narragansett Bay and preserve our open spaces. He helped establish the Narragansett Bay Commission, which is one of the leading agencies in the State that treats our waste products and makes sure they are not discarded untreated into the bay. In fact, his efforts-with foresight years ago-paved the way for one of the largest projects ever completed in the State of Rhode Island, which now prevents sewage from flowing into our bay unabated. But this was just one of the extraordinary commitments he made to our environment.

> He was always looking to bring businesses to Rhode Island—high-tech businesses, along with businesses that would provide people the chance for employment, the chance to own a home, and the chance to provide for a better life for their children. He worked to revitalize, particularly, the downtown Providence area through his work with the Capital Center Commission, which did landmark work in literally reshaping the face of Providence, making it one of the most attractive and most compelling cities in our country.

> Throughout his administration, he always worked for public transportation facilities, and everything that would complement our economic growth. He did it with great passion, great diligence and, again and again and again, extraordinary decency.

> In his final days in office he launched The Greenhouse Compact, which was a bold economic revitalization plan. He proposed to create 60,000 high-paying jobs and lay the foundation to combat the dving manufacturing industries of the State of Rhode Island at that time. And although the compact was not approved by the voters—there were concerns about how it would be paid formany of its proposals have come to fruition; a tribute again to his foresight, to his vision, to his courageous leadership, and to his confidence, that bringing these issues to the people would eventually lead to their adoption. And they have.

> Joe Garrahy was the person you wanted leading you in difficult times. and there was no more difficult time than in 1978, when the great blizzard descended upon Rhode Island. Lit erally, Rhode Island was paralyzed. You couldn't move. People were without communication, without electricity. But there was one constant beacon of hope and stability and strength, and that was Governor Joe Garrahy. He was the voice who quelled the anxiety—the fear, frankly—that this natural disaster would overwhelm us. In time of great turmoil, he was there. He assured us that help was on the way. And in what has become a famous historic relic in the State of Rhode Island, he did it all wearing the same plaid shirt, it seemed. That plaid shirt was a symbol of him: Nothing fancy: someone you could trust: someone you could depend upon; someone who rolled up his sleeves to get the job done for the people of Rhode Island to literally, in some cases, save people in a very demanding natural disaster through his leadership. He was, as I say again and again, one of the most decent individuals I have ever met. He was so kind to me, so understanding, so tolerant. And I am not alone.

I recall something that was said about another great American, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He was in his final position; the cortege was going down Pennsylvania Avenue. There was an individual by the side of the road who was weeping, literally. A reporter went up to him and said, Well, you must have known the President; you are so upset. And he said, No, no; I didn't know him, never met him. But he knew me.

Joe Garrahy knew the people of Rhode Island. He was a man of innate decency and goodness. He believed that every situation had some merit, a silver lining, something he could do to bring forth good out of bad, progress out of adversity. He was a man of deep faith, who worked hard, and remained optimistic and compassionate in every moment. He was a noble public servant. That word is used often, but no more accurately than with respect to Joe Garrahy, a man of nobility—a nobility born not of privilege or wealth but of character, conscience, and con-

He had an extraordinary winning personality. He was one of those people you wanted to bump into because he made you feel better. His warm, embracing personality, his humor, his friendliness, his caring, his sincerity, all those things transmitted this sense of knowing you and caring for you which was unique and will never, I think, in my mind, be replicated by any of us in Rhode Island.

Whenever you were with the Governor, you always felt a little bit better about where you were, about the future, and about the world. He was fond of people, and that fondness was repaid by a deep sense of gratitude for what he has done and profound respect for a wonderful man.

But above all this, he loved his family the most. He was a devoted husband, father and, as he was described by his grandchildren, their Poppy.

We remember him now, and we also remember his family because they have lost a great man. But he did so much for all of us to make us bigger and better that we can withstand this great loss.

I want to join with my fellow Rhode Islanders in offering my heartfelt sympathy to his wonderful wife Margherite and his wonderful family, Colleen and Michael Mahoney, their children Ryan and Michaela; John and Barbara Cottam Garrahy, their daughters Katherine and Elizabeth; Maribeth and Robert Hardman and their son Wesley; Sheila and Gregory Mitchell and their children, CJ, Todd, and Chad; and Seana and Michael Edwards and their children Drew, Brayden, and Ellie Rose.

We will miss him. But his legacy and his personal example of kindness and good will continue to sustain and inspire us. Today, we celebrate his life, and in the days and weeks and years to come we will remember him fondly as one of Rhode Island's greatest Governors. We are all the better for having Joe Garrahy in our Biggest Little State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARDIN). The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I rise today to join my senior colleague, Senator REED, in tribute to the memory of a great public servant and a great friend, Jay Joseph Garrahy, former Governor of Rhode Island, who passed away last week at the age of 81.

At his funeral services this week, he was remembered by an enormous crowd for his warmth, for his kindness, and for his steady leadership of our State.

Joe Garrahy was born in Providence, RI to a blue-collar, Irish immigrant family. He worked his way through Catholic school, and he served in the Air National Guard and in the Air Force during the Korean war. He came back home from the war and went to work as a beer salesman for our Narragansett Brewery. He was what they fittingly called a Narragansett Goodwill Man. And, as Senator Reed has explained, Joe Garrahy brought good will wherever he went.

He turned to politics and to public service with the 1960 Presidential campaign of John F. Kennedy. Joe followed his path himself, ultimately, with election to the Rhode Island Senate, and then he was elected statewide as Lieutenant Governor, and then served two terms as Rhode Island's Governor—serving as Chief of State in the very statehouse where his mother had once cleaned floors. It was a beautiful American success story for him to rise to lead the statehouse that his mother had cleaned.

The story was told at his funeral that when he was Lieutenant Governor and she was still cleaning the statehouse, he said: Mom, don't you want to find something else to do now that I am here as Lieutenant Governor? She turned to him and said: Joe, I got here first.

In his public life, Joe Garrahy always made the effort to be what he once described as "probably one of the easiest guys in the State of Rhode Island to get along with." He sure was. I don't think anyone who has worked with him over the years would disagree with that. Joe was certainly always very kind and supportive to me as I embarked on my fledgling career in public service.

But Governor Garrahy's service to our State stands as a guidepost for today's political leaders. He saw Rhode Island through the difficult economic recession of the early 1980s. He was a staunch defender of Narragansett Bay, our environmental jewel, and of Rhode Island's open spaces; his efforts to attract high-tech industries to Rhode Island and to advance our economy; his work on behalf of children and senior citizens and those with disabilities all continues to inspire us.

Of course, all Rhode Islanders who are old enough remember the blizzard of 1978, which buried parts of our State under 3 feet of snow and brought our roads and businesses to a shuddering halt. People spent days in factories, in movie theaters, in department stores where they were snowed in. I still recall the scene of cars up and down 95 covered in snow, abandoned, the road closed. Rhode Islanders are filled with stories of where they were and what they did during the great blizzard of 1978 and how they struggled to get home to their loved ones.

Through all of that, Governor Garrahy marshaled resources from the Federal Government and from neighboring States and got Rhode Island back on its feet. In his frequent televised messages to Rhode Islanders during the crisis, his plaid flannel shirt became a trademark of his accessible, hard-working, easygoing style.

Governor Garrahy's righthand man throughout his political career was Bill Dugan, his chief of staff. As fate would have it, we are also mourning the loss of Bill, who passed away the day before we lost the Governor. It was often said that Governor Garrahy didn't know how to say no. He was too nice for that. Well, that job often fell to Bill Dugan.

Joe and Bill were lifelong friends, graduated in the same class at La Salle Academy, went into politics together, and made a memorable political team in Rhode Island history. Last Thursday, Joe Garrahy and his dear companion and political associate Bill Dugan were together one last time.

Bill's sons are friends of mine, David and Richard. At Bill's funeral I spoke to Richard, and I remarked on how extraordinary it was that this exceptional Rhode Island friendship and political alliance should end with these two men dying in the same week within virtually hours of each other.

Richard looked back at me and he said: SHELDON, you don't know the half of it. It was during my father's wake at Boyle's Funeral Home that the Governor was brought home from Florida, where he had been vacationing, by the State police to Rhode Island. And that night, the two old companions rested one last time, side by side, on Smith Hill at Boyle's Funeral Home.

On behalf of my wife Sandra and my family, I extend to the Garrahy family our deepest condolences. To Joe's loving wife Margherite, to their children Colleen, John, Maribeth, Sheila, Seana, and their 11 grandchildren and the entire Garrahy family, we have you in our hearts.

Joe Garrahy often spoke about the great joy his children and his 11 grand-children gave him, especially in the years after his retirement. Our thoughts and prayers are with them all today.

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to join with Senator REED and with so many Rhode Islanders who are still remembering, thinking of, praying for, and giving homage to Governor Garrahy. We will never forget his ready smile, his easy friendship, his distinguished service, his ability to remember every name, and his long and very loving marriage.

I join Senator REED in saluting his legendary service to our State.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED). The Senator from Massachusetts

Mr. BROWN of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I know folks are riveted to their televisions. I wanted to give them an update as to where we are on the STOCK Act.

First of all, there have been a lot of good amendments back and forth. We have reviewed them. We worked obviously late into last night and have been working throughout today. We are gearing up for votes that hopefully will be forthcoming, if not today, then hopefully tomorrow.

But I do appreciate the process, and I wanted to publicly thank Leader Reid for his willingness to allow us to work through this process because it is sensitive for some people and it is new territory for others. But I will say, being the first time and having the ability to come down and co-manage the floor with Senator Collins and work with Senator LIEBERMAN and Senator GILLI-BRAND, the process has been open and fair. We are trying now to eliminate some of the amendments that may not be relevant. We have had some folks step back and say, yes, take this off or take that off, and that is good. And we have been trying to combine other agreement and, hopefully, we can begin made a huge impact on the lives of amendments to try to solidify where we want to go.

But I did want to let folks know that we are working diligently with the staffs of all the concerned Members, and hopefully we will get some votes very shortly

Once again, I commend Leader REID and his staff, the chairman and his staff, Senator GILLIBRAND, and Senator COLLINS, for everyone working together trying to make this happen. I appreciate that, and I want to make that reference for folks who are paying attention.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITEHOUSE). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BEN-NET). Without objection, it is so ordered

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I apologize to the Presiding Officer and staff and Senators, but we have not been able to reach an agreement yet on how to move forward on this simple bill. Remember, everybody loved the bill? We should have been able to finish it quickly. It has not worked out that way, but we are close. I hope in the morning we can do this and finish the bill tomorrow afternoon. That would be preferable. I hope we can do that.

Everyone has worked in good faith and there are a number of amendments we will vote on, and if that is the case. we can finish this hopefully tomorrow, late in the afternoon or early evening. We are not there yet, but we are very close.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Begich). The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, while the majority leader is here, I wished to thank him for the work he and his staff have continued to do to enable us to get to a vote on this bill, which most everybody in the Senate supports, to make it clear that Members of Congress and our staffs are covered by anti-insider trading laws. Senator GILLIBRAND, Senator COLLINS, and Senator Brown have all been working to bring this to an end and give Members on both sides the opportunity to introduce amendments. Senator Reid has been showing great forbearance in not moving to file a cloture motion. In some sense, this is a test of whether we can all apply to ourselves a rule of reasonableness so that there can be a pretty open amendment process, but one that does not stop the Senate from getting something accomplished.

I share the leader's optimism. There is only one obstacle now to having an voting tomorrow afternoon and get it done before we finish.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is Senator GILLIBRAND's fault we are in all of this trouble.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. I wish to commend the leader for his forbearance and patience in this very long and extended process. But we are making great efforts to come together to work in a bipartisan way to accomplish something good for the American people and to begin to restore faith and trust in this institution and in our government. So I thank our leader. We are so grateful for his patience. I also thank the chairman for his work in leading this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, to Senator LIEBERMAN, we did a lot more generalized work than the distinguished junior Senator from New York. She is an absolute expert in this area where we are dealing with corporate law, all the stuff we did with derivatives and all that, and I was certainly joking when I said she was the cause of trouble for this legislation. It was her idea. We appreciate her good work. Senator LIE-BERMAN and I have been through a number of battles together and this is one of the minor skirmishes.

I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO PHYLLIS CAUSEY

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President. I rise to send my best wishes and gratitude to a good friend of mine and a loyal public servant to the people of Kentucky for many years, Ms. Phyllis Causey. After nearly 2 decades working for the Representative from Kentucky's 2nd Congressional Districtfirst Congressman Ron Lewis, then Congressman Brett Guthrie-she has chosen to embark on a well-earned retirement.

As a field representative for Congressmen GUTHRIE and Lewis, she has countless Kentuckians. Her dedication and hard work has set a standard for all who enter public service. She made many friends across the Commonwealth in her 18 years as a House staffer, and I am proud to be one of them.

Phyllis graduated from Honkinsville Community College in 1970 and earned her bachelor's degree at Western Kentucky University in 1972. She also worked for Western Kentucky University for 23 years.

Before going to work for Kentucky's Second District, Phyllis was the vice chairwoman of the Warren County Republican Party. It was in that capacity she met Ron Lewis, who was exploring a run for Congress. A lot of people did not give Ron much of a chance at the time—after all, the previous holder of that district's Congressional seat, a Democrat, had held it for almost 40 years.

Well, Ron Lewis surprised a lot of people when he won that race. After winning, one of his first decisions—one of his best decisions—was to hire Phyllis Causey. And one of BRETT's best decisions was to retain her.

In her retirement, Phyllis has said she hopes to be able to spend more time with her husband, Larry, and also care for her mother. As so many people have stepped forward to wish her well upon the news of her retirement, Phyllis has humbly said, "All I can hope is that I have made a difference."

I certainly think it is safe to say she has. I value her friendship and wish her the best in her future endeavors. I know my colleagues in the U.S. Senate join me in honoring Ms. Phyllis Causey upon her retirement and thanking her for her many years spent in public service.

The Bowling Green, Kentucky-area publication The Daily News recently published an article highlighting Phyllis Causey's life and career. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From The Daily News, Jan. 14, 2012] CAUSEY IS HAILED AS PUBLIC SERVANT; GUTH-RIE AIDE RETIRING AT THE END OF JANUARY (By Andrew Robinson)

When U.S. Rep. Brett Guthrie, R-Bowling Green, was campaigning for Congress in 2008, he was frequently posed a question. But it wasn't about his views on taxes, federal spending or social issues.

"Are you going to keep Phyllis Causey?" people often asked Guthrie.

Guthrie did in fact keep Causey, who served as his field representative for the past three years. But Causey said goodbye Friday, retiring after 18 years of work with congressmen in Kentucky's 2nd Congressional Dis-

Causey, who worked for former U.S. Rep. Ron Lewis before joining Guthrie's office, officially retires at the end of January.

In a reception at the Warren County Justice Center, Causey thanked co-workers, the years.

'I have mixed emotions." Causey said. "I've been crying a lot, as a matter of fact. It's very nice that people are stopping by.

She said she'll remember the friends she has made.

"And, of course, working for a great guy like (Guthrie) and the previous congressman is a blessing," Causey said.

In December, Guthrie spoke for a few minutes about Causey's service on the floor of the U.S. House, a moment that was entered into the Congressional Record.

"She has been such an inspiration to me," Guthrie said on the floor. "She has always been devoted to the causes she believes inchurch, family and friends. Phyllis is an incredible wife, daughter, sister and mother. I know her family, especially her husband Larry, will be happy to have her around more often."

The moment caught Causey by surprise.

"I did not know that was happening until the day before," Causey said. "I'm overwhelmed and honored that he would want to do that."

Of course, Guthrie and Lewis had nothing but good things to say about Causey.

"I used to tell her, and she thought I was kidding, but I used to say, "Phyllis, don't run against me, you'll beat me hands down," Lewis said. "In the counties that Phyllis serves, the people love her. She's never met a stranger. Everywhere you go, they know Phyllis Causey."

Lewis met Causey in 1993. She was working as the vice chairwoman of the Warren County Republican Party and Lewis was trying to gauge his support in Warren County when he ran for Congress.

Lewis was invited by Causey to several events in Warren County.

"She became one of my first supporters in Warren County," Lewis said. "She told me all the key people to talk to.

Such stories are endless, Lewis said.

"A lot of people who are very political have trouble turning that into public service," Guthrie said. "And what's amazing about her, as hard-core of a Republican she is, she served everybody."

Causey plans to spend more time with her husband, as well as be a full-time caregiver for her mother. Mark Lord, who is serving as Guthrie's district director, will step up to serve Warren and Barren counties as field representative.

"She just has a great personality, loves people, loves her job-and talk about a true public servant," Lewis said. "Phyllis is a public servant. I'm sad she's retiring because people love her."

TRIBUTE TO KEN HARVEY

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a distinguished Kentuckian who has worked tirelessly and selflessly in public service for over 25 years. I am sad to report to my colleagues today that Mr. Ken Harvey, the longest serving tourism director for any county in the Commonwealth, is retiring today.

Ken has worked since 1986 as the executive director of the London-Laurel County Tourist Commission in southeastern Kentucky. During his tenure, tourism growth in the area has tripled, the number of motels in the area has more than doubled, and the number of friends and families for their support over restaurants has doubled. Ken's coworkers, friends, and neighbors know that such a feat would not have been possible without Ken's endless energy and enthusiasm in his work.

> When Ken moved to London, KY, with his wife Cheryl many years ago, he was working for Kmart and was sent to Kentucky for a temporary assignment. But, in Ken's own words, London "just felt like home." It is to the rest of the town and county's benefit that Ken and Cheryl decided to put down roots and make London their home.

> In addition to his long tenure as executive director of the London-Laurel County Tourist Commission, Ken keeps busy with many other pursuits. He is a longtime board member of the Southern/Eastern Kentucky Tourism Development Association and has served as that organization's president. He has been a board member of the Kentuckv Tourism Council Federation and served that group for several terms as chairman or vice chairman. He has served with the Kentucky Festival Association and the Kentucky Main Street Board. Ken is also an avid historian who has volunteered for the Kentucky Civil War Trail and helped coordinate Civil War reenactments.

> Ken is also a member of the Optimist Club, the Laurel County Rotary Club. and a Leadership Tri-County graduate. He was named Laurel County Man of the Year by the News Leader in 1990. And I would certainly be remiss if I did not mention what many believe to be Ken's greatest achievement as tourism director—for many years he has been the driving force behind the World Chicken Festival.

> The World Chicken Festival brings over 200,000 visitors to Kentucky each vear for what has become one of the top 10 festivals in the Southeastern United States. It offers entertainment, talent shows, art exhibits, carnival rides, and of course food-particularly chicken. It has been noted for exhibiting the world's largest stainless steel skillet. Lasting 4 days, taking up 10 square blocks, and free to visitors, I am sure my colleagues will understand when I say that under Ken's leadership, the World Chicken Festival is one of Kentucky's most "egg-citing" events.

> Ken's retirement will be Kentucky's loss but certainly his family's gain. I understand he is looking forward to spending more time with his 6-year-old grandson. On behalf of the people of London, Laurel County, and all of Kentucky, I want to thank Mr. Ken Harvey for his many years of service. He will be missed, and I certainly wish him all the best in his well-earned retirement.

> Mr. President, a recent article printed in the Laurel County area publication the Sentinel Echo highlighted Mr. Ken Harvey's many achievements. I ask unanimous consent that said article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Sentinel Echo, Nov. 28, 2011] HARVEY TO RETIRE

LONGEST-SERVING TOURISM DIRECTOR IN STATE

(By Nita Johnson)

LAUREL COUNTY, KY.-What began as a year's assignment in 1982 evolved into the longest-running term of a tourism commissioner in the state.

Ken Harvey, executive director of the London-Laurel Tourist Commission, announced his plans to retire on Feb. 1, after serving in that capacity for 26 years.

He has seen much growth during his tenure with the tourist commission, with his latest focus on developing the Heritage Hills property off Falls Street.

But the evolution of the World Chicken Festival, the Redbud Ride, various athletic events and a motel tax are just a few of the accomplishments that have brought revenue to the tourism commission during Harvey's term-accomplishments he credits to the board members with whom he has served.

Board members returned the compliment, with Tourism Commission Board President Caner Cornett describing Harvey as "one of a kind."

"He's a self-propelled man. Ken only knows one speed-full force," Cornett said. "He's the kind who can talk to someone on jail work release or the governor and show no partiality. He has that kind of personality.

Cornett said Harvey's exit as tourism director leaves "some big shoes to fill."

"He'll be hard to replace. His knowledge and experience is invaluable," he added.

Though coming to London from Ohio, Harvey said just a few months after settling here, he and wife Cheryl knew they wanted to stay in the area.

"It just felt like home," he said. "When we came here, there were 650 motel rooms. Now there are 1,300," he said. "Interstate 75 is an attraction in itself for travelers going north or south. We have a good cross-section of dining here and our board is made up of citizens whose home is here.'

Other attractions that have increased the tourism business are the annual Battle of Camp Wildcat, which Harvey considers "the best in the state," along with the location of the Harley-Davidson dealership.

Harvey has been honored several times for his diligence in promoting tourism in the London area and is proud that the London commission is highly respected across the state. While he readily admits he does not wish to retire, he realizes that his ongoing health problems and three recent back surgeries are limiting his ability to serve in the capacity that he wishes to continue.

'It's time. I hope they bring in someone with fresh ideas that can continue to develop the Heritage Hills property and give some new ideas for other developments," Harvey said. "Besides, I have a grandson who is six vears old and I'm looking forward to spending lots and lots of years with him.

REMEMBERING RAY REID

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the life of Ray Reid, a devoted champion of Arkansas and its citizens, affectionately known as Arkansas's 'fifth congressman.'

Ray dedicated his life to public service, serving more than 30 years in the Army including three wars—WWII, Korea and Vietnam—before retiring as a colonel and continuing his commitment to this country serving for more than 23 years as chief of staff for three of Arkansas's Third Congressional District Congressmen—John Paul Hammerschmidt, Tim Hutchinson and Asa Hutchinson.

As a loyal staffer, Ray was an ambassador of and to Arkansas, going above and beyond to help resolve issues constituents had with the Federal Government. Under his guidance, Congressman Hammerschmidt laid the groundwork for successful constituent service. Ray recognized that the key to good governing and good public service is that you treat everyone fairly and set political differences aside.

Congressman Hammerschmidt recently said of his former right-hand man that he was the best administrative assistant in the House during his service. Upon his retirement Congressman Asa Hutchinson said Ray was known to be one of the most knowledgeable men in Washington.

When I was elected to Congress in 2001, Ray went out of his way to help us get on the right track. His skills and experiences were vital to helping us build a strong foundation to serve the people of the Third District.

Despite working in the minority for much of his career, Ray managed to accomplish great things for Arkansas because of the long-lasting relationships he built. Certainly Ray saw many changes in the Third Congressional District during his years of service to Arkansas and many can be credited to his efforts. Ray had a hand on many infrastructure projects including Interstate 540 and the Northwest Arkansas Regional Airport.

In a recent interview, Congressman Hammerschmidt fondly recalled Ray's passion for the Natural State: "Ray really loved Arkansas," he said. Ray helped change the landscape of Arkansas. His impact is far reaching and his legacy is evident in the Third Congressional District.

The State of Arkansas has lost a true friend who went to great lengths to make it a better place.

RECOGNIZING MONTH OF THE HAWAIIAN LANGUAGE

• Mr. AKAKA. Today I wish to speak to the celebration of the Hawaiian language. February is designated as the "Month of the Hawaiian Language" by the State of Hawaii. Speakers and students of the language use this time to foster and promote Hawaiian through festivals, spelling bees, and speech and debate competitions where the Hawaiian language is the primary medium.

Since the first official designation in 1994, February has been a celebration of the Hawaiian language in Hawaii. However, this modern renaissance happened only after the Hawaiian language came close to extinction, and the people of Hawaii fought to preserve it.

In 1896, following the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawai'i, English was named as the primary language of instruction in Hawai'i's schools. As a result, students who spoke Hawaiian were subject to physical punishment or public humiliation. As Native Hawaiian families struggled to assimilate with the increasing Western presence in Hawai'i, parents gave children non-Hawaiian first names. Families who carried Hawaiian family names adopted Western surnames to avoid a Hawaiian identity. Parents stopped teaching their children Hawaiian, and maintained English-only households. This was a sad chapter in Hawai'i's history, but fortunately, today, thanks to the effort of many Hawai'i residents, political and community leaders, and educators, the Hawaiian language is thriv-

In 1978, the Hawaiian language, also called 'Ōlelo Hawai'i by its speakers, was declared one of the two legal languages of the State of Hawai'i. In 1984, the first Hawaiian language preschool was established, 'Aha Pūnana Leo. Three years later, Hawaiian language immersion expanded to include kindergarten through grade 12, and today, students can study the Hawaiian language from preschool through their doctorate studies.

Use of the Hawaiian language is not limited to its fluent speakers. Those who live in and visit Hawai'i use Hawaiian words and phrases in their everyday vocabulary, whether they are Native Hawaiian or not. Towns, roadways, schools, and parks bear Hawaiian names. Island residents commonly give each other directions using the words mauka—meaning towards the mountains, or makai—meaning towards the ocean. A waitress might ask you if you are pau, or done, with your meal before she clears the table. You might tell her it was 'ono, or delicious.

Some of the more commonly used words, including aloha and mahalo, are known well beyond the shores of Hawai'i. I probably do not have to explain that mahalo means thank you, or that aloha is a greeting that conveys warmth, love, and affection and is used to both welcome someone and wish them well.

The Hawaiian language is thriving in our modern society and it remains relevant as technology evolves around us. The iPhone and Google's homepage are just two instances where the Hawaiian language can be selected as an option in language settings. Developers of the popular website, Wikipedia, borrowed the Hawaiian word wikiwiki, meaning speedy, for its name. Travelers through Honolulu International Airport are greeted every half hour with a public announcement first in Hawaiian, followed by its English translation. Local television reporters and weather forecasters consult with language experts on Hawaiian pronunciation. One of the morning news shows features a segment produced entirely in the Hawaiian language. Cable subscribers receive a channel featuring Hawaiian language reporting.

The Hawaiian language is engrained in our daily lives in Hawai'i, and is important to all of Hawai'i's people. I am extremely grateful for the efforts made by kūpuna, our elders, as well as language and cultural educators, to preserve the Hawaiian language. According to the University of Hawai'i at Hilo, there are approximately 7,500 people learning the Hawaiian language today, from preschools, institutions of higher education, and community programs. Parents are again raising their children to speak Hawaiian. While there is an increasing interest in the Hawaijan language, this is still just a small percentage of the population of the State of Hawai'i. I applaud the State for designating February as the "Month of the Hawaiian Language" and bringing awareness to the need to perpetuate our language so that future generations may learn the language of their ancestors.

E ola mau ka 'Ōlelo Hawai'i! Long live the Hawaiian language.●

RECOGNIZING NATIONAL GIRLS AND WOMEN IN SPORTS DAY

• Mr. BENNET. Mr. President, today, February 1, I wish to celebrate the 26th annual National Girls and Women in Sports Day, on which we praise the importance of sports participation and athletics in the lives of girls and women everywhere. This year's celebration has special meaning as it falls on the eve of the 40th anniversary of the passage of title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. For over 40 years, this historic law has furthered gender equality in sports participation in schools so that young women, including my three daughters, Caroline, Halina and Anne who all play soccer, may enjoy the benefits that come along with sports participation.

Studies show that participation in sports has a positive influence on the intellectual, physical and psychological health of young girls. According to the National Federation of State High School Associations, by a 3-1 ratio, female athletes do better in school, do not drop out, and have a better chance to get through college. Additionally, a study from the Women's Sports Foundation showed that high school athletes are less likely to smoke cigarettes or use drugs than their nonathlete peers. Sports participation is also linked to lower rates of pregnancy in adolescent female athletes. With these statistics in mind, it is not surprising that a study from the Oppenheimer/MassMutual Financial Group shows that of 401 executive business women surveyed, 82 percent reported playing organized sports while growing up, including school teams, intramurals, and recreational leagues.

In my home State of Colorado, we are ahead of the curve with regard to the participation of girls and women in sports. The U.S. Olympic Training Center, located in Colorado Springs, was created by an act of Congress in 1978, just a few years after title IX was passed. It is encouraging to know that women like Gold Medal Winner Lindsey Vonn, now make up nearly half of all U.S. Olympians competing at the games, representing more than 48 percent of the 2008 team. Colorado also supports the success of Paralympians such as Sarah Will, who after a skiing accident that left her paralyzed from the waist down, went on to help found the Vail Monoski Camp and won 12 gold Paralympic medals from 1992 to 2002.

Colorado is also a vanguard in providing early education and sports opportunities for women. The flagship all girls school, GALS, Girls Athletic Leadership Schools, has opened its first public charter school in Denver, CO. The school practices active learning that engages students in health and wellness activities in the belief that these are key contributing factors in optimizing academic achievement and self-development. There are also groups such as the Colorado Women's Sports Fund Association that work towards increasing the number of girls and women who participate in athletics and reducing and eliminating barriers that prevent participation.

Despite the vast improvements with regard to sports participation for girls and women, inequalities and disparities still remain. According to the National Federation of State High School Associations, schools are still providing 1.3 million fewer chances for girls to play sports in high school than boys. These numbers have an even greater impact on Latinas and African-American young women. The Women's Sports Foundation shows that less than twothirds of these girls play sports while more than three-quarters of Caucasian girls do. And three-quarters of boys from immigrant families are involved in athletics, while less than half of girls from immigrant families are.

Mr. President, we have work to do. Part of our job is to promote the importance of this national effort to grow the rates of female athletes. Please join me in celebrating National Girls and Women in Sports Day by supporting efforts to expand equality in sports participation and education for women and girls around the country.

TRIBUTE TO JACK KING

• Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and Senator BOXER, I join my colleagues in the House of Representatives, including Mr. Costa, Mr. LUNGREN, Mr. CARDOZA, Mr. FARR, Mr. DENHAM, Ms. RICHARDSON, Mr. BACA, Mr. HERGER, Mrs. CAPPS, Mr. FILNER, Ms. Lofgren, Ms. Matsui, Mr. Nunes, Mr. McNerney, Mr. Thompson, Mr. SCHIFF, Ms. LEE, Ms. LORETTA SAN-CHEZ, Ms. ESHOO, Ms. CHU, Ms. SPEIER, Ms. Linda Sánchez, Mr. Becerra, Ms. HAHN, Mr. SHERMAN, Mr. HONDA, Mr. McCLINTOCK, and Mr. CALVERT, to pay tribute to Mr. Jack King on the occasion of his retirement from the California Farm Bureau Federation. For more than 35 years, Jack King has worked on behalf of our Nation's farmers and ranchers to ensure that they have a voice in our Nation's capital. His passion for agriculture has made him a strong and effective advocate for the American Farm Bureau Federation and the California Farm Bureau Federation.

Growing up on a dairy farm in Wisconsin taught Jack the value of hard work, and the important role agriculture plays in America—specifically when it comes to feeding and clothing our families and supporting our economy. Upon graduating from the University of Wisconsin, Jack began his career in agriculture with the university's cooperative extension office. Jack then went on to work for the Wisconsin Council of Agricultural Cooperatives and the Wisconsin Council of Agriculture. In 1973, Jack ventured west and joined the California Farm Bureau Federation as assistant manager of the information division.

Jack expanded his work with the Farm Bureau, and in 1985, he became news services director for the American Farm Bureau Federation. Based in Illinois, Jack managed internal and external communications and often worked in conjunction with the Washington, D.C. office to ensure that legislators were connected with farmers and ranchers. In 1994, Jack returned to California to serve as manager of the California Farm Bureau Federation's National Affairs Division. He served as a direct link between farmers, ranchers, and Members of Congress.

Jack's tremendous contributions and dedication can be measured in a number of ways. Notably, Jack made approximately 200 trips to Washington, D.C. His deep commitment was based in his belief that legislators needed to hear directly from farmers and ranchers in order to understand their contributions and the difficulties they face. Specifically, Jack has been dedicated to working on comprehensive immigration reform, natural resource regulations, and renewable energy.

Of course none of these accomplishments would be possible without the love and support of Jack's wife, Mary Ann; their sons, Carl, David and Bryan; and two grandchildren.

We ask our colleagues to join us in recognizing Jack King's enthusiasm and work ethic. His devotion and loyalty to our Nation's farmers and ranchers make him a source of pride for our community, State and Nation. We thank Jack for his work on behalf of farmers and ranchers in California and all across the country, and wish him well in retirement.

RECOGNIZING BULL JAGGER BREWING COMPANY

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, as ranking member of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I have heard time and again how difficult it is to start a business in our current economy. As the new year begins, I find it especially critical to honor those entrepreneurs, who in spite of these challenging times, are surmounting all obstacles to pursue the American dream of starting a small business. With this in mind, today I wish to commend and recognize the most recent addition to the renowned brewing family, the Bull Jagger Brewing Company of Portland, ME.

Bull Jagger opened in the fall of 2011 with two employees and a dream to produce high-quality lager. In a 1,500-square-foot space in Portland's Riverside Industrial Park, the two owners, Tom Bull and Allan Jagger, have begun producing the Portland Lager. In their small facility, they currently produce about eight barrels a week which makes approximately 1,800 bottles of the refreshing beverage. Their lager debuted at the Portland Harvest on the Harbor in October of 2011 to rave reviews.

This success is truly exceptional as only a few years ago, Tom Bull, a Bath native who has worked at local companies such as Gritty McDuff's and the former Stone Coast Brewing, was developing his own homemade beer and dreaming of opening a micro-lager business. Fortunately, after meeting through mutual friends and tasting Tom's homebrew, local businessman Allan Jagger was convinced that Tom's dream was worth pursuing. Together as partners, they decided to turn their aspirations into reality and venture into Maine's micro-brew market.

Across the State, both Tom and Allan found that Maine's micro-brew market lacked one particular beer variety—a micro-brew lager. While larger breweries all produce lagers, most micro-breweries shy away from lagers because of the increased length of brewing time in comparison to ales. Typically, lager has to sit in a cold cellar for several weeks to allow proper fermentation to occur. While this may have deterred other micro-breweries in the past, Bull Jagger believed their lager would be worth the wait, and they were certainly right. In true lager fashion, this small brewery allows their lager to ferment over 6 weeks. which is approximately a month longer than traditional ales. This may have diminished the speed with which the product leaves the factory, but it certainly has not slowed down the consumption, as sales are continuing to grow.

As a new small business that has already distinguished itself in Maine's prominent micro-brew market, Bull Jagger is looking forward to producing additional varieties, including a Pilsner beer, in the near future. This small firm's attention to detail and initial success demonstrates the remarkable quality of their product. I am proud to extend my congratulations to Tom Bull and Allan Jagger for their tremendous efforts, and offer my best wishes for the continued success of Bull Jagger Brewing Company.

TRIBUTE TO ERICA MARIE D'AQUIN

• Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, today I recognize Ms. Erica Marie d'Aquin, a bright and talented young Louisianian.

Each year since 1743, the carnival celebration known as Mardi Gras, French for Fat Tuesday, has been celebrated by the people of New Orleans. The season officially begins on January 6, the Twelfth Night of Christmas and the Feast of the Epiphany. Also recognized in many countries around the world with large Roman Catholic populations, Mardi Gras is the final blow out party prior to the ritual fasting of the Lenten Season, which begins on Ash Wednesday.

Over the many decades that New Orleanians have celebrated Mardi Gras, "krewes", or private Mardi Gras social organizations, have also contributed to the merriment and glee surrounding the festive season. In Greek mythology, Endymion was known for his everlasting youth and beauty. In 1966, the Krewe of Endymion was established and has annually paraded through the streets of New Orleans. Today. Endymion is known for being the largest parade in New Orleans, both for the number of members-2300-and also for the number of floats. This krewe has meant a lot to me since I had one of my first jobs as a high school student Endymion's floats-white painting primer only, as I wasn't trusted with colors.

During this. ofthe Krewe Endymion's 46th year, Ms. Erica Marie d'Aquin will reign as queen. Ms. d'Aquin is a senior at Archbishop Chapelle High School and is on the distinguished honor roll. She is a member of the National Art Honor Society, is a member of the pro-life club, has a fond love for art, and is very active in the Chapelle Animal Rescue Effort to promote the awareness of issues affecting animals. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daryl d'Aquin and the granddaughter Mr. and Mrs. Edmond J. Muniz, the founder and captain of the Krewe of Endymion.

It is exciting for such an accomplished young person to have this honor and will be something she will cherish for a lifetime. She joins a long line of family members who have also had the honor of serving as queen of Endymion: her mother Mary in 1984, her aunt Michelle in 1986, and her aunt Margie in 1991.

As we celebrate the 2012 Mardi Gras season, it is my pleasure to honor Ms. Erica d'Aquin as the 46th queen of the Krewe of Endymion.●

REMEMBERING GAIL ACHTERMAN

• Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize someone who may not be familiar to members of the Senate, but in my State is synonymous with what makes Oregon a place that values the environment, its natural resources and its scenery.

Gail Achterman of Portland passed away on January 28 of pancreatic cancer. Gail was a special friend for more than 40 years. When I arrived on the Stanford University campus in the summer of 1969, Gail and I were tour guides together, two Democrats at the conservative Hoover Institution of War, Revolution and Peace. We laughed about it then, and kept sharing jokes and stories for more than 40 years.

Gail leaves behind an impressive legacy of public service and dedication to environmental causes that will endure for years to come. Her professional resume is impressive: Lawyer, director of the Institute for Natural Resources at Oregon State University, chair of the Oregon Transportation Commission, natural resources advisor to a former governor and member of too many State councils, boards and commissions to list here.

Even more impressive, however, was her life-long commitment to those things that make Oregon great. For an example, look no further than the indispensable role she played in creation of the Columbia Gorge National Scenic Area in 1981. Anyone who has seen the majestic Columbia River Gorge knows it is one of the most beautiful places on earth—a crown jewel in a landscape filled with natural beauty. I was proud to be part of protecting The Gorge and proud of partnering with Gail in making that happen.

I want to extend my condolences to her husband Chuck and to her family and assure them that Oregon is a greater State thanks to my special friend Gail and the ideals she believed.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BEGICH (for himself, Mr. Thune, Mr. Tester, Mr. Blunt, Mrs. McCaskill, Mr. Grassley, Mr. Hoeven, Mr. Brown of Massachusetts, Mr. Baucus, Mr. Enzi, Mr. Johanns, Mr. Casey, Mr. McCain, Mr. Demint, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Johnson of Wisconsin, Mr. Burr, Mr. Risch, Mr. Toomey, Mr. Paul, Mr. Coburn, and Mrs. Shaheen):

S. 2054. A bill to suspend the current compensation packages for the senior executives at Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, and to establish compensation for all employees of such entities in accordance with rates of pay for other Federal financial regulatory agencies; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. BEGICH. The STOP Act is the Stop the Outrageous Pay for Fannie and Freddie Act, the bill Senator THUNE and I introduced this morning. Our bill comes in the aftermath of a series of events that began last November when reports surfaced that the Federal Housing Finance Agency, FHFA, approved nearly $13 million in bonuses for 10 executives, that enterprise that supervises Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

In response, Senator Thune and I spearheaded a bipartisan letter, signed by 58 other Senators to the FHFA, Acting Director Edward DeMarco and the Treasury Secretary, Timothy Geithner. We expressed outrage over these pay levels, and I believe our message was heard. Almost 3 months after our letter was sent, the pressure was clearly on. Government regulators were cutting the pay of the executives they hired to replace the departing heads of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

Also, in response to our efforts, House Financial Services Committee chairman Spencer Bachus introduced legislation suspending these bonuses and limiting future compensation packages for Fannie and Freddie employees. In November, his committee passed the bill by a vote of 52 to 4.

The Begich-Thune STOP Act is a commonsense approach to address the outrageous Wall Street-like bonuses and pay that have occurred at Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac for far too long and which continue to occur to this day, even after billions in taxpayer bailouts. I wish to make it clear, this bill will not change the life much for nonexecutives. The pay structure for the everyday, hard-working Americans at Fannie and Freddie will stav almost as it is today. They are not the target. However, it will change the life for executives such as Peter Federico, who earned $2.5 million in 2010 and had a target compensation of $2.6 million in 2011. This was at the same time he was gambling that struggling homeowners would be unable to refinance their high-interest mortgages to record-low interest rates. This is unacceptable. unethical, and I know this body will not tolerate it.

Here is how our legislation works: It simply places Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac employees on the same pay scale as the financial regulators at the FDIC and SEC, a pay scale long established in Federal law. It is a pay scale called the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act. This is the pay scale we are basing our legislation on.

Under our approach, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac employees cannot be paid more than employees of other Federal financial regulatory agencies. Right now the highest paid person under this pay scale makes $275,000 a year. This is our pay cap. While this is a lot of money, it is not any more than what the cops, as we call them, on the financial beat make to ensure that ordinary Americans are protected and get a fair shake.

Our legislation also stops any future bonus payments that go beyond the cap established in this legislation. Also, any bonuses that have been granted but have not yet been paid will be stopped. Any money in excess of the cap we have established will be used to pay down the national debt. Finally, our bill requires that Fannie and Freddie salaries be made available to Congress and the public through the Senate Banking Committee and the House Financial Services Committee.

I am aware of the criticism of this bill and I would like to address them. Senator McCain offered an amendment yesterday that freezes bonus pay. I support Senator McCain in his efforts. In fact, I cosponsored this very same amendment the last time it was offered. Many of my colleagues have asked me why our bill does not freeze bonus pay. Our bill is based on a broad-based approach that looks at the entire pay structure within Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

While it tackles the huge bonuses and pay policies for executives at Fannie and Freddie, we believe the everyday employees earning modest salaries should be occasionally rewarded for outstanding work so it ensures they get the small bonuses that may be effective for them. But to clarify, these would be modest bonuses that would never exceed the pay cap established in this bill.

I have also heard the concern that Fannie and Freddie will not be able to attract the right kind of talent if they cannot pay people multimillion-dollar compensation packages. I hate to state the obvious: Fannie and Freddie have proven the opposite. They paid executives outrageous compensation and yet still failed by Alaskans and all Americans. They needed hundreds of billions of dollars in taxpayer bailouts and still ended up in conservatorship. This sends an unsettling message to millions of hard-working people who are struggling to make ends meet. They have taken Alaskans' tax dollars in the form of bailouts. Yet when my constituents in Anchorage or Kotzebue or Fairbanks or Juneau needed help to avoid foreclosure or refinance their loans, Fannie and Freddie often turned their backs.

Finally, I have this response to people who say Fannie and Freddie executives need to earn millions: Whatever happened to the concept of public service or to the notion that it is an honorable calling to work on behalf of your friends and your neighbors? There are lots of dedicated, hard-working professionals at Fannie and Freddie who believe in that notion, and they are doing their absolute best to help American families to afford the American dream of owning and keeping their homes.

The Begich-Thune bill makes sure this hard work continues and that their bosses at Fannie and Freddie come to work every day not with visions of dollar signs but instead with a clear eye of doing what is right for all Americans.

I urge all Members to support this commonsense bipartisan bill. Senators TESTER, MCCASKILL, BAUCUS, BLUNT, GRASSLEY, HOEVEN, ENZI, and SCOTT BROWN have already joined Senator THUNE and me as original cosponsors. I wish to thank them for their support.

By Mr. WHITEHOUSE (for himself, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BEGICH, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mr. SANDERS, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. REED):

S. 2059. A bill to reduce the deficit by imposing a minimum effective tax rate for high-income taxpayers; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, we are in an age of tight budgets and tough choices, and I rise today to introduce legislation that would address some loopholes in the Tax Code that provide ways for Americans with superhigh incomes to pay lower tax rates than are paid by regular hardworking, middle-class families. These middle-class families feel they are struggling to get by but then find that some people with extremely high incomes are actually paying a lower, allin federal tax rate than they are. To them, it defies common sense, and I think for all of us it defies common sense. Americans deserve a straight deal, and right now they are not getting one from our tax system.

To see the unfairness of our current tax system, we don't have to look much further than the national headlines. According to a Forbes magazine report last fall, billionaire Warren Buffet "paid just 11.06 percent of his adjusted gross income in Federal income taxes" in 2010. Mr. Buffet is the first to express his dismay at this circumstance and acknowledges that the rate he pays is lower than the tax rate paid by his own secretary. Mr. Buffet has called for a correction of this anomaly, and I agree with him. So does President Obama, who, in his State of the Union Address, said Washington should stop subsidizing millionaires. I

We should celebrate the success of people who are earning $1 million and more a year, but we don't—particularly in this time of tight budgets and hard choices—need to subsidize that. The legislation I have introduced today, the Paying a Fair Share Act of 2012, would ensure that those with extremely high incomes pay at least a minimum Federal tax rate of 30 percent. I thank Senators AKAKA, BEGICH, LEAHY, HARKIN, BLUMENTHAL, and SANDERS for being initial cosponsors of this measure.

The structure of our bill is pretty simple. If your total income—capital gains included—is over $1 million, you calculate your taxes under the regular system. If your effective tax rate turns out to be greater than 30 percent, you pay that rate. If, on the other hand, your effective tax rate is under 30 percent, like Warren Buffet's 11 percent, then you would pay the fair share tax rate

After collecting input from some of my colleagues, I have also included a provision to allow the fair share tax to be gradually phased in for taxpayers earning between $1 million and $2 million per year. Taxpavers earning less than $1 million—which is 99.9 percent of all Americans-wouldn't be affected by this bill at all. Taxpayers earning over $2 million would be subject to the 30 percent minimum Federal tax rate. and those in between $1 million and $2 million would pay, on a phased-in basis, a portion of the extra tax required to get up to the 30-percent effective tax rate. This way we make sure no taxpayer faces a tax cliff where earning an additional $1 of income increases his or her taxes by more than $1.

In his State of the Union Address on Tuesday, President Obama called for legislation to ensure that the highest earning taxpayers pay at least a 30-percent tax rate. The Fair Share Act would do just that. To call our tax system fair, I believe the highest income Americans should pay a higher rate—not a lower one—than middle-income taxpayers. For more context, let's take a look again—because I have given this speech over and over on the floor—at how superhigh-income-tax payers fare under our current system.

This is the Helmsley Building in New York, as I have pointed out before. It is on Park Avenue, and it has a unique characteristic, which is that it is so big it has its own ZIP Code. Because the Internal Revenue Service publishes information about tax payment by ZIP Code, we can see what the tax payments are that come out of this building. What we find with the latest information that the IRS has published is that the average filer has an adjusted gross income of over $1 million in the Helmsley Building, but the average tax payment out of that building is only 14.7 percent.

To provide a little context for that, if we look at what the average New York City janitor or the average New York City security guard pays in terms of an effective all-in Federal tax rate, it is 28.3 percent for the security guard and 24.9 percent for the janitor. So at this point it looks as if the people who are the very successful occupants of the Helmsley Building pay an actual lower Federal tax rate than the people who come in and clean the building, and that does not seem fair or sensible.

One might say, well, maybe it is just something about the Helmsley Building that causes it, but it is not. Despite Leona Helmsley's infamous line that it is only the little people who pay the taxes, it is a broader issue than that. Take a look at the income tax information about the 400 highest earning Americans.

In the same way that the IRS aggregates information by ZIP Code, it also takes the highest income earners and reports on them in aggregate. The 400 top incomes for 2008—which is the last year the IRS has assembled—had an average income each of $270 million, which certainly is something to be proud of and to celebrate if one can achieve that kind of success. But the average tax rate paid by the 400 was only 18.2 percent, which is—apart from the discussions we have been having in the Senate—about what the top income tax rate should be.

We discuss often whether the top income tax rate should be 35 percent or should be 39.6 percent. It was 39.6 percent, for instance, during the booming Clinton economy. It is now 35 percent.

Depending on where the tax cut discussion goes, it may go back up again. But that is not what a large number of these very high income earners pay. In fact, the top 400 aren't anywhere near that. They are at half that, at 18.2 percent. We are supposed to have a progressively graduated Tax Code, with people who earn more paying a higher rate.

Let's see who else pays at the 18.2percent rate. We looked at Bureau of Labor Statistics information for a single filer earning $39,350. That is where you hit an 18.2-percent tax rate, just like the 400 who made $\frac{1}{4}$ billion each. on average. They are in the same position as somebody who is earning a little less than 40,000 who pays 18.2 percent under our present system. If we look at the type of jobs that hit that area, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in the Rhode Island labor market a truckdriver earns on average $40,200. So we have a truckdriver paying the same rate of Federal tax as somebody earning $1/4 billion in a year.

So I think there is plenty of room for correction and to bring our tax system in line to the principle that I think we all espouse theoretically, which is that it is a progressive tax system. The more you earn, the more you pay and indeed the higher rate you are supposed to pay. It is not supposed to be at the other way around where, at the other high extreme, you end up paying lower rates than regular Americans.

The Helmsley Building was one building that has a little story to tell all of us. Here is another building with a story to tell. This is a building that is called Ugland House, and it is in the tax haven Cayman Islands. It doesn't look like much, does it? I don't want to sav it is a crummy little building, but it certainly doesn't compare to a lot of other business buildings. But it does have something remarkable happening within it. It has 18,000 corporations that claim to be doing business out of this location—18,000 corporations in this little five-story building. It gives a new meaning to the phrase "small business."

As our budget chairman KENT CONRAD has pointed out, the only business going on in Ugland House is funny business with our Tax Code, shell companies that hide assets and dodge tax liabilities. It does not make sense that our tax system permits the highest income Americans to pay a lower tax rate than a truckdriver pays, and it doesn't make sense that we allow Americans and American companies by the thousands to hide income in off-shore tax havens.

If we look at the rates that are paid—Warren Buffet 11.6 percent, the occupants of the Helmsley Building on average 14.7 percent, and the 400 $\frac{1}{4}\text{ billion-a-year earners on average 18.2 percent—and we look at the fact that we have multi-trillion-dollar budget deficits, it means the taxes they are not paying at the nominal 35-percent rate are taxes that somebody else ends up having to pay either through deficit or through additional taxation.

This is why the Fair Share Act makes a lot of common sense, and I hope Senators on both sides of the aisle will take a look at it. This bill would do a lot of good. It would simplify taxes. There is no point chasing loopholes if someone knows they are going to have to pay the 30-percent minimum. It will simplify that. It would discourage the exotic tax dodges that allow people to go down to 14 percent or whatever tax rates because they know they are going to get caught at 30 percent, so why do the effort. The exotic tax dodges will be discouraged. It will reduce the deficit. We don't have a number yet from the Joint Committee on Taxation, but the public reporting so far has suggested it is going to be in the $40 billion to $50 billion range per year. Of course, it will bring fairness, as well as common sense, to our tax system. It makes no sense for somebody earning $80,000 or $100,000 or $120,000 a year to be paying a substantially higher tax rate than somebody earning $1/4 billion a year.

There are a lot of advantages that come with enormous income, and that is a great thing because America thrives on capitalism, and we all love success. We celebrate success in America. We provide an economy and a culture in which people can accomplish remarkable things and create enormous fortunes and become enormously successful. That is part of what is good and what is right with America. They do it through hard work, they do it through being smarter than other people, they do it with a lot of good personal characteristics. But with all the advantages that do come with an enormous income, paying a lower tax rate than regular working families should not be one of those advantages.

I hope we can get together to correct this, and I look forward to working with my colleagues on this issue.

By Mr. KOHL (for himself and Mr. Wyden):

S. 2060. A bill to provide for the payment of a benefit to members eligible for participation in the Post-Deployment/Mobilization Respite Absence program for days of nonparticipation due to Government error; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Fair Military Leave Act. This legislation fixes a problem that is preventing some of our brave servicemembers from using benefits that they earned after serving multiple or extended deployments overseas.

In 2007, the military established the Post-Deployment/Mobilization Respite Absence Program, or PDMRA, to assist men and women who are ordered to deploy beyond the established standards for troop rotation by providing extra paid leave when they return home. Unfortunately, a mistake during demobilization prevented some soldiers from receiving the paid leave they earned. The Army's records indicate that this problem affects 577 soldiers across the country, including 80 in Wisconsin.

These soldiers have since gotten their military records corrected to reflect the days of PDMRA leave they were supposed to receive. However, the only way for these soldiers to use this benefit is to take extra paid leave on a future deployment. For those soldiers who will not deploy again or who have left the military entirely, this remedy does not work.

Mistakes happen, but they need to be fixed. The Fair Military Leave Act gives troops the option of cashing out the leave they were incorrectly denied when they came home. This solution is modeled after legislation Congress passed in the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2010. As with that bill, the Fair Military Leave Act reimburses soldiers at a rate of $200 per day of PDMRA that they were incorrectly denied.

I am pleased to have the senior Senator from Oregon join me as an original cosponsor of this legislation. My friend from Oregon led the effort to fix the earlier problem with PDMRA benefits in the 2010 defense authorization.

The men and women of our Armed Forces have done so much for our country, and we should not drag our feet in making this right. These troops earned their PDMRA benefit, and they should be allowed to use it.

SENATE RESOLUTION 366-HON-ORING THE LIFE OF DISSIDENT AND DEMOCRACY ACTIVIST WILMAN VILLAR MENDOZA AND CONDEMNING THE CASTRO RE-GIME FORTHE DEATH WILMAN VILLAR MENDOZA

Mr. MENENDEZ (for himself, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. NELSON of Florida, and Mr. CASEY) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed

S. RES. 366

Whereas, on Thursday, January 19, 2012, 31year-old Cuban dissident Wilman Villar Mendoza died, following a 56-day hunger strike to highlight his arbitrary arrest and the repression of basic human and civil rights in Cuba by the Castro regime;

Whereas, on November 2, 2011, Wilman Villar Mendoza was detained by security forces of the Government of Cuba for participating in a peaceful demonstration in Cuba calling for greater political freedom and respect for human rights:

Whereas Wilman Villar Mendoza was sentenced to 4 years in prison after a hearing that lasted less than 1 hour and during which Wilman Villar Mendoza was neither represented by counsel nor given the opportunity to speak in his defense;

Whereas, on November 25, 2011, Wilman Villar Mendoza was placed in solitary confinement after initiating a hunger strike to protest his unjust trial and imprisonment;

Whereas Wilman Villar Mendoza was a member of the Unión Patriótica de Cuba, a dissident group the Cuban regime considers illegitimate because members express views critical of the regime;

Whereas security forces of the Government of Cuba have harassed Maritza Pelegrino Cabrales, the wife of Villar Mendoza and a member of the Ladies in White (Damas de Blanco), and have threatened to take away her children if she continues to work with the Ladies in White;

Whereas Human Rights Watch, which documented the case of Wilman Villar Mendoza, stated, "Arbitrary arrests, sham trials, inhumane imprisonment, and harassment of dissidents' families—these are the tactics used to silence critics.";

Whereas Amnesty International stated. "The responsibility for Wilman Villar Mendoza's death in custody lies squarely with the Cuban authorities, who summarily judged and jailed him for exercising his right to freedom of expression.":

Whereas Orlando Zapata Tamayo, another prisoner of conscience jailed after the 'Black Spring" crackdown on opposition groups in March 2003, died in prison on February 23, 2010, after a 90-day hunger strike:

Whereas, according to the Cuban Commission on Human Rights, the unrelenting tyranny of the Castro regime has led to more than 4,000 political detentions and arrests in 2011: and

Whereas Cuba is a member of the United Nations Human Rights Council despite numerous documented violations of human rights every year in Cuba: Now, therefore, be

Resolved, That the Senate-

(1) condemns the Cuban regime for the death of Wilman Villar Mendoza on January 19, 2011, following a hunger strike to protest peaceful protest and to highlight the plight of the Cuban people:

- (2) condemns the repression of basic human and civil rights by the Castro regime in Cuba that resulted in more than 4.000 detentions and arrests of activists in 2011;
- (3) honors the life of Wilman Villar Mendoza and his sacrifice on behalf of the cause of freedom in Cuba;
- extends condolences (4) to Pelegrino Cabrales, the wife of Wilman Villar Mendoza, and their children;

SEC. ___. AMENDMENTS TO THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.

- (a) MAINTENANCE OF LONG RUN GROWTH; PRICE STABILITY AND LOW INFLATION.—Section 2A of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 225a) is amended—
- (1) by striking "maximum employment, stable prices," and inserting "long-term price stability, a low rate of inflation,"; and
- (2) by at the end the following: "The Board shall establish an explicit numerical definition of the term 'long-term price stability' and shall maintain monetary policy that effectively promotes such long-term price stability."
- (b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall not be construed as a limitation on the authority or responsibility of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System—
- (1) to provide liquidity to markets in the event of a disruption that threatens the smooth functioning and stability of the financial sector; or
- (2) to serve as a lender of last resort under the Federal Reserve Act when the Board determines such action is necessary.
- (c) CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall, concurrent with each semiannual hearing to Congress, submit a written report to the Congress containing—
- (1) numerical measures to help Congress assess the extent to which the Board and the Federal Open Market Committee are achieving and maintaining a legitimate definition of the term long-term price stability, as such term is defined or modified pursuant to the second sentence of section 2A of the Federal Reserve Act (as added by this section);

- (2) a description of the intermediate variables used by the Board to gauge the prospects for achieving the objective of long-term price stability; and
- (3) the definition, or any modifications thereto, of the term long-term price stability, as such term is defined or modified pursuant to the second sentence of section 2A of the Federal Reserve Act (as added by this section).

SA 1497. Mr. CORKER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 2038, to prohibit Members of Congress and employees of Congress from using nonpublic information derived from their official positions for personal benefit, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end, add the following:

TITLE II—RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE MARKET PRIVATIZATION AND STANDARD-IZATION

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Residential Mortgage Market Privatization and Standardization Act of 2012".

SEC. 202. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title, the following definitions shall apply:

- (1) COVERED MORTGAGE LOAN.—
- (A) IN GENERAL.—The term "covered mortgage loan" means any residential mortgage loan, including any single-family and multifamily loan, that is originated, serviced, or subserviced, in whole or in part, owned directly or indirectly, including through any interest in a security that is backed in whole or in part by a mortgage loan, or securitized or resecuritized, by an entity or affiliate or subsidiary thereof that is regulated by any of the agencies listed in subparagraph (B).
- (B) AGENCIES.—The agencies listed in this subparagraph are—
- (i) the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System;
- (ii) the Department of Agriculture;
- (iii) the Department of Housing and Urban Development;
- (iv) the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;
- (v) the Federal Housing Finance Agency;
- (vi) the Farm Credit Administration;
- (vii) the Federal Trade Commission;
- (viii) the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency;
- (ix) the National Credit Union Administration; and
- (x) the Securities and Exchange Commission.
- (2) ENTERPRISES.—The term "enterprises" means, individually and collectively, the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation.
- (3) FHFA; DIRECTOR.—The terms "FHFA" and "Director" mean the Federal Housing Finance Agency and the Director thereof, respectively.
  - (4) MORTGAGE DATA.—
- (A) IN GENERAL.—The Director shall define mortgage data, by regulation, consistent with this paragraph.
- (B) SINGLE-FAMILY LOANS.—For single-family covered mortgage loans, the term "mortgage data" means, as of the date of origination—
- (i) the loan origination date and the loan maturity date:

- (ii) whether the loan is a purchase loan or a refinance, and for refinance loans—
- (I) the date on which the refinanced loan was originated;
- (II) the identity of the lender on the refinanced loan; and
- (III) the unpaid principal balance of the refinanced loan that was repaid by the new loan:
- (iii) the value of the collateral property on which the lender relied, and how the lender determined the value;
- (iv) the credit score or scores that the lender used or on which it relied, and the entity that supplied each:
  - (v) debt-to-income ratios, including—
- (I) the ratio of the total debt of the borrower and coborrowers, expressed as a monthly payment amount, to the total current and expected future income of the borrower and any coborrowers on which the lender relied, expressed as a monthly income amount; and
- (II) the ratio of the first scheduled payment on the loan, expressed as a monthly payment amount, to the total current and expected future income of the borrower and any coborrowers on which the lender relied, expressed as a monthly income amount;
- (vi) the total value of borrower assets, but not including the value of the collateral and not including income, on which the lender relied:
  - (vii) the principal amount of the loan:
  - (viii) the interest rate on the loan:
- (ix) if the interest rate may adjust under the loan terms, the terms and limits of any permissible adjustment, including the index and margin, if applicable, when the rate may adjust, and any caps or floors on any such adjustment;
- (x) if the principal may increase under the loan terms at origination, the terms and limits of any permissible increase, including when the increase or increases may occur, how the amount and timing of any increase is determined, and any caps on any such increases:
- (xi) if the payment amount may adjust, independently of a rate adjustment or of an increase in the principal amount, the terms and limits of any permissible adjustment, including when the adjustment may occur, how the amount and timing of any adjustment is determined, and any caps or floors on any such adjustments:
- (xii) whether, under the loan terms, the borrower may be required to pay any prepayment penalty, and if so, the potential amount and timing of any such penalty;
- (xiii) any permissible grace periods and late fees under the loan terms, including fee amounts permitted on the loan;
- (xiv) whether the borrower or any coborrower has stated an intent to reside in the property as a principal residence;
- (xv) whether the loan is assumable under the loan terms at origination and if so, the conditions on which any assumption may be denied:
- (xvi) whether the originating lender was or is aware of any subordinate or senior lien on the property at the time at which the loan was originated, and if so, the identity of all lenders or other lienholders of such other loans, the relative lien position of each, and the date of origination of each lien if it secures a mortgage loan;
- (xvii) the type of mortgage insurance relating to the loan, including who pays it, and the amount and scheduled payment dates of any premiums:
- (xviii) whether flood insurance is required in connection with the loan, and if so, the amount and timing of premiums;

- (xix) whether the loan has an escrow account and if so, the amount of the initial deposit into the escrow account and the amount of the monthly payments scheduled to be deposited into the escrow account:
- (xx) the amount of points, fees, and settlement charges paid to originate the loan, including the amount of any compensation paid to a mortgage broker, and who paid it:
- (xxi) whether the borrower or borrowers have any payment assistance at origination, such as government or private subsidies or buydowns, and if so, the amounts, terms, and timing of such assistance: and
- (xxii) the address of the real property securing the mortgage loan.
- (C) MULTIFAMILY LOANS.—For multifamily covered mortgage loans, the term "mortgage data" means, as of the date of origination—
- (i) the number of dwelling units in each property securing each loan;
- (ii) the rent on each dwelling unit, or, if more than 1 has the same rent, the number of units at each rent level:
- (iii) the occupancy status of each dwelling unit:
- (iv) whether the rent is subsidized by any government agency and, if so, in what amounts, under what terms and conditions, and for what period of time;
- (v) whether the rent on the units is current, and if not, how many days or months the rent for each unit is delinquent; and
- (vi) all of the information described in subparagraph (B), except as modified by the Director, by regulation, consistent with this title.
- (D) AFTER ORIGINATION.—For both single-family and multifamily covered mortgage loans, beginning the day after the date of origination of the loan, and reported not less frequently than monthly thereafter until the loan ceases to exist, the term "mortgage data" includes—
- (i) the amount and date of payments received each month, including—
- (I) whether each payment is received by the due date or within a grace period, and if a payment is received after the scheduled due date, how many days past due;
- (II) the amount of any payment deposited into an escrow account;
- (III) amounts paid for other loan charges, with an identification of the amount and type of such other charge; and
- (IV) the amount of any prepayments;
- (ii) for loans on which any payment or partial payment is overdue, the number of days since the loan was current;
- (iii) whether property taxes, hazard insurance premiums, and any flood insurance premiums required in connection with the loan are paid by the borrower or borrowers as required, and if any such item is not paid as required—
- (I) the number of days since the payment was required, and the amount of the missed payment;
- (II) whether the servicer or other party on behalf of the servicer paid property taxes on the property, and in what amount; and
- (III) whether the servicer or other party on behalf of the servicer force-placed hazard or flood insurance, and if so, the amount of the premium and the identity of the insurer;
- (iv) the amount of any interest paid to the borrower on any escrow;
- (v) the type and date of any actions taken by or on behalf of the servicer due to default, including nonpayment default, and the amount charged to the borrower or borrowers as a result of the action or actions; and
- (vi) if the servicer is aware of any damage to the property securing the loan, the type

- and extent of the damage and of any repairs, the amount of insurance proceeds paid, the amount of such proceeds disbursed or paid to the borrower, and the amount held by the servicer, and the date and results of any inspection done by or on behalf of the servicer.
- (E) ADJUSTMENTS CONSISTENT WITH THE PURPOSES OF THIS TITLE.—The Director may adjust the items that are included in or excluded from the definition of mortgage data consistent with this title, as appropriate to protect the privacy of individual consumers.
- (F) PRIVACY.—The regulations required by subparagraph (A) may require rounding off of the debt to income ratios required to be included as mortgage data to protect the privacy of the borrower, taking into consideration the information that is already available on the Internet or in other ways.

SEC. 203. GSE WINDDOWN.

- (a) FANNIE MAE.—Section 304 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1719) is amended by adding at the end the following:
  - "(h) Winddown of Enterprises.—
- "(1) ANNUAL GUARANTEE REDUCTIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Mortgage Market Privatization and Standardization Act of 2011, and annually thereafter, the Director shall begin reducing the percentage of the value of a trust certificate or other security that may be guaranteed by the corporation by not less than 10 percent per year.
- "(2) STRUCTURE.—The percentage of the bond guaranteed by the corporation can be structured on either a pro-rata or senior-subordinated basis, as determined by the Director. The Director shall pursue a strategy that allows for market signals to assist Congress and the Director to monitor and assess the price that private market participants are assigning to mortgage credit risk.
- "(3) MORTGAGE-BACKED SECURITIES.—The existing portfolio of mortgage-backed securities of the corporation shall be reduced by not less than 20 percent per year."
- (b) FREDDIE MAC.—Section 305 of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation Act (12 U.S.C. 1454) is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(d) WINDDOWN OF ENTERPRISES.—
- "(1) ANNUAL GUARANTEE REDUCTIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Mortgage Market Privatization and Standardization Act of 2011, and annually thereafter, the Director shall begin reducing the percentage of the value of a trust certificate or other security that may be guaranteed by the corporation by not less than 10 percent per year.
- "(2) STRUCTURE.—The percentage of the bond guaranteed by the corporation can be structured on either a pro-rata or senior-subordinated basis, as determined by the Director. The Director shall pursue a strategy that allows for market signals to assist Congress and the Director to monitor and assess the price that private market participants are assigning to mortgage credit risk.
- "(3) MORTGAGE-BACKED SECURITIES.—The existing portfolio of mortgage-backed securities of the corporation shall be reduced by not less than 20 percent per year.".

SEC. 204. RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE MARKET TRANSPARENCY.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Mortgage data relating to all covered mortgage loans shall be put into the public domain in accordance with this section.
- (b) AGENCY ACTION.—Each agency named in section 202(1)(B) shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, require, by regulation, that all entities regulated by such agency shall put mortgage

- data relating to covered mortgage loans into the public domain, in accordance with this title and the regulations issued under this title. Such regulations shall require that the data be reasonably accurate and complete.
- (c) MANNER AND FORM OF DATA.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director shall, by regulation—
- (1) establish the manner and form by which all mortgage data required to be put into the public domain by this section shall be put into the public domain; and
- (2) require that such mortgage data be made available in a uniform manner, in a form designed for uniformity of data definitions and forms, ease and speed of access, ease and speed of downloading, and ease and speed of use.
- (d) UPDATE.—All entities required to put mortgage data into the public domain under this title shall continuously update the mortgage data, not less frequently than monthly, as long as the entities exist, whether in conservatorship, receivership, or otherwise. All updates shall be reasonably accurate and complete.
- (e) RESPONSIBILITY OF REGULATED ENTITIES.—The mortgage data required to be put into the public domain in accordance with this title shall include all mortgage data related to all covered mortgage loans, to the extent practicable.
- (f) DUPLICATION OF EFFORT.—If 2 or more entities are required by this title to report the same mortgage data relating to the same mortgage loan, they may, by agreement, determine that only 1 of such entities will report the data. If 1 of such entities reports the required mortgage data, it shall not be a violation of this section for the other entities not to report the data.
- (g) DATE OF ACCESS TO DATA.—The Director shall establish, and cause to be published in the Federal Register, the initial date on which—
- (1) the public shall begin to have access to any data put into the public domain in accordance with this title; and
- (2) all mortgage data is required to be put into the public domain, in accordance with
- (h) COSTS TO FHFA.—The FHFA shall pay the cost of establishing the database of mortgage data that is put into the public domain under this section, and of providing public access to that database. If the FHFA ever ceases to exist without being replaced, and unless otherwise provided by Act of Congress, the cost of maintaining the database shall be borne by the remaining agencies named in section 202(1)(B), by agreement.

SEC. 205. ENCOURAGING A MARKET FOR HIGH QUALITY RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE FUTURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part 2 of subtitle A of the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992 (12 U.S.C. 4541 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 1327. ENCOURAGING A MARKET FOR HIGH QUALITY RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE FUTURES.

- "(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:
- ``(1) Deliverable residential mort-gage.—
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—The terms 'deliverable residential mortgage' and 'DRM' have the meaning given those terms by rule of the Director, in consultation with participants in the TBA market, taking into consideration underwriting and product features that historical loan performance data indicate result in a lower risk of default, such as—

- "(i) documentation and verification of the financial resources relied upon to qualify the mortgagor."
  - "(ii) standards with respect to-
- "(I) the residual income of the mortgagor after all monthly obligations;
- "(II) the ratio of the housing payments of the mortgagor to the monthly income of the mortgagor; and
- "(III) the ratio of total monthly installment payments of the mortgagor to the income of the mortgagor;
- "(iii) mitigating the potential for payment shock on adjustable rate mortgages through product features and underwriting standards;
- "(iv) mortgage guarantee insurance or other types of insurance or credit enhancement obtained at the time of origination, to the extent such insurance or credit enhancement reduces the risk of default; and
- "(v) prohibiting or restricting the use of balloon payments, negative amortization, prepayment penalties, interest-only payments, and other features that have been demonstrated to exhibit a higher risk of borrower default.
- "(B) LIMITATION ON DEFINITION.—The Director, in defining the term 'deliverable residential mortgage', as required by subparagraph (B), shall define that term to be no broader than the definition of the term 'qualified mortgage', as provided under section 129C(c)(2) of the Truth in Lending Act and regulations adopted thereunder.
- "(2) Participant in the TBA market.—The term 'participant in the TBA market' means a private investor in or dealer of mortgage-backed securities, particularly mortgage-backed securities issued by the enterprises, that routinely enters into forward contracts for the sale of mortgage-backed securities that do not specify the particular mortgage-backed securities that will be delivered to the buyer.
- "(3) PROGRAM.—The term 'program' means the program established under subsection (b)
- "(4) DRM FUTURES MARKET.—The term 'DRM futures market' means a market for forward contracts for the sale of mortgage-backed securities collateralized exclusively by deliverable residential mortgages.
- "(5) TBA MARKET.—The term 'TBA market' means the market for forward contracts for the sale of mortgage-backed securities that do not specify the particular mortgage-backed securities that will be delivered to the buyer.
- "(b) PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—The Director, in consultation with participants in the TBA market, shall establish a program to encourage the development of a DRM futures market that—
- "(1) compliments the TBA market;
- "(2) creates incentives for trading by participants in the TBA market; and
- "(3) has the potential to replace the TBA market.
- "(c) TECHNOLOGY AND INFRASTRUCTURE.— The Director shall consult with participants in the TBA market to develop the technology and infrastructure necessary to carry out the program established under this sec-
- "(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Director shall submit to Congress an annual report on the program established under this section.".
  - (b) SECURITIES LAWS EXEMPTIONS.—
- (1) SECURITIES ACT OF 1933.—Section 3(a) of the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77c(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(14) Any mortgage-backed security collateralized exclusively by deliverable residential mortgages, as such term is defined

- under section 1327 of the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992.".
- (2) SECURITIES EXCHANGE ACT OF 1934.—Section 3(a)(12)(A) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78c(a)(12)(A)) is amended—
- (A) by redesignating clauses (vi) and (vii) as clauses (vii) and (viii), respectively; and
- (B) by inserting after clause (v) the following:
- "(vi) any mortgage-backed security collateralized exclusively by deliverable residential mortgages, as such term is defined under section 1327 of the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992;".

SEC. 206. MONETIZATION OF BUSINESS VALUE.

Pursuant to the authority of the Director as conservator of the enterprises under section 1367 of the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992 (12 U.S.C. 4617), the Director shall—

- (1) identify any property of the enterprises that would be of value to nongovernmental entities, including—
- (A) historical databases containing information on prepayment, delinquency, and default rates:
  - (B) proprietary home price indices;
- (C) technology used in the securitization of mortgages; and
- (D) patents relating to the securitization of mortgages, automated underwriting systems, and other processes; and
- (2) sell any property identified under paragraph (1) to nongovernmental entities.

SEC. 207. UNIFORM UNDERWRITING STANDARDS.

- (a) STANDARDS ESTABLISHED.—Notwith-standing any other provision of this title or any other provision of Federal, State, or local law, the Federal banking agencies (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813)), in consultation with the FHFA and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall jointly establish specific minimum standards for mortgage underwriting, including
- (1) a requirement that the mortgagee verify and document the income and assets relied upon to qualify the mortgagor on the residential mortgage, including the previous employment and credit history of the mortgagor and
- (2) a down payment requirement that-
- (A) is equal to not less than 5 percent of the purchase price of the property securing the residential mortgage;
- (B) in the case of a first lien residential mortgage loan with an initial loan to value ratio that is more than 80 percent and not more than 95 percent, includes a requirement for credit enhancements, as defined by the Federal banking agencies, until the loan to value ratio of the residential mortgage loan amortizes to a value that is less than 80 percent of the purchase price;
- (C) uses a method for determining the ability of the mortgagor to repay the residential mortgage that is based on factors including—
- (i) all terms of the residential mortgage, including principal payments that fully amortize the balance of the residential mortgage over the term of the residential mortgage; and
- (ii) the debt to income ratio of the mortgagor; and
- (D) any other specific standards that the Federal banking agencies jointly determine are appropriate to ensure prudent underwriting of residential mortgages.
- (b) UPDATES TO STANDARDS.—The Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the

- FHFA and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development—
- (1) shall review the standards established under this section not less frequently than every 5 years; and
- (2) based on the review under paragraph (1), may revise the standards established under this section, as the Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the FHFA and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, determine to be necessary.
- (c) COMPLIANCE.—It shall be a violation of Federal law—  $\,$
- (1) for any mortgage loan originator to fail to comply with the minimum standards for mortgage underwriting established under subsection (a) in originating a residential mortgage loan:
- (2) for any company to maintain an extension of credit on a revolving basis to any person to fund a residential mortgage loan, unless the company reasonably determines that the residential mortgage loan funded by such credit was subject to underwriting standards no less stringent than the minimum standards for mortgage underwriting established under subsection (a): or
- (3) for any company to purchase, fund by assignment, or guarantee a residential mortgage loan, unless the company reasonably determines that the residential mortgage loan was subject to underwriting standards no less stringent than the minimum standards for mortgage underwriting established under subsection (a).
  - (d) IMPLEMENTATION —
- (1) REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—The Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the FHFA, shall issue regulations to implement subsections (a) and (c), which shall take effect not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act.
- (2) REPORT REQUIRED.—If the Federal banking agencies have not issued final regulations under subsections (a) and (c) before the date that is 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal banking agencies shall jointly submit to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives a report that—
- (A) explains why final regulations have not been issued under subsections (a) and (c); and
- (B) provides a timeline for the issuance of final regulations under subsections (a) and (c).
- (e) ENFORCEMENT.—Compliance with the rules issued under this section shall be enforced by—
- (1) the primary financial regulatory agency as that term is defined under section 2 of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (12 U.S.C. 5301) of an entity, with respect to an entity subject to the jurisdiction of a primary financial regulatory agency, in accordance with the statutes governing the jurisdiction of the primary financial regulatory agency over the entity, and as if the action of the primary financial regulatory agency were taken under such statutes; and
- (2) the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection, with respect to a company that is not subject to the jurisdiction of a primary financial regulatory agency.
- (f) EXEMPTIONS FOR CERTAIN NONPROFIT MORTGAGE LOAN ORIGINATORS.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and the Secretary of the Treasury, may jointly issue rules to exempt from the requirements under subsection (a)(2), mortgage loan originators that are exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

- (2) DETERMINING FACTORS.—The Federal banking agencies shall ensure that—
- (A) the lending activities of a mortgage loan originator that receives an exemption under this subsection do not threaten the safety and soundness of the banking system of the United States: and
- (B) a mortgage loan originator that receives an exemption under this subsection—
- (i) is not compensated based on the number or value of residential mortgage loan applications accepted, offered, or negotiated by the mortgage loan originator:
- (ii) does not offer residential mortgage loans that have an interest rate greater than zero percent:
- (iii) does not gain a monetary profit from any residential mortgage product or service provided:
- (iv) has the primary purpose of serving low income housing needs;
- (v) has not been specifically prohibited, by statute, from receiving Federal funding; and
- (vi) meets any other requirements that the Federal banking agencies jointly determine are appropriate for ensuring that a mortgage loan originator that receives an exemption under this subsection does not threaten the safety and soundness of the banking system of the United States.
- (3) REPORTS REQUIRED.—Before the issuance of final rules under subsection (a), and annually thereafter, the Federal banking agencies shall jointly submit to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives a report that—
- (A) identifies the mortgage loan originators that receive an exemption under this subsection; and
- (B) for each mortgage loan originator identified under subparagraph (A), explains the rationale for providing an exemption.
- (4) UPDATES TO EXEMPTIONS.—The Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and the Secretary of the Treasury—
- (A) shall review the exemptions established under this subsection, not less frequently than every 2 years; and
- (B) based on the review under subparagraph (A), may revise the standards established under this subsection, as the Federal banking agencies, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and the Secretary of the Treasury, determine to be necessary.
- (g) RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section may be construed to permit—
- (1) the enterprises to make or guarantee a residential mortgage loan that does not meet the minimum underwriting standards established under this section; or
- (2) the Federal banking agencies to issue an exemption under subsection (f) that is not on a case-by-case basis.
- (h) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:
- (1) COMPANY.—The term "company"-
- (A) has the same meaning as in section 2(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1841(b)); and
- (B) includes a sole proprietorship.
- (2) MORTGAGE LOAN ORIGINATOR.—The term "mortgage loan originator" means any company that takes residential mortgage loan applications and offers or negotiates terms of residential mortgage loans.
- (3) RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE LOAN.—The term "residential mortgage loan"—

- (A) means any extension of credit primarily for personal, family, or household use that is secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, or other equivalent security interest in a dwelling or residential real estate upon which is constructed or intended to be constructed a dwelling; and
- (B) does not include a mortgage loan for which mortgage insurance is provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs or the Rural Housing Administration.
- (4) EXTENSION OF CREDIT; DWELLING.—The terms "extension of credit" and "dwelling" have the same meanings as in section 103 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1602).
- (i) REPEAL OF CREDIT RISK RETENTION AND QRM RULES.—Section 15G of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 780-11) is repealed, and any rule or regulation promulgated under that section shall have no force or effect, effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 208. RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE SERVICING STANDARDS.

- (a) Uniform PSA.—
- (1) Development.—
- (A) IN GENERAL.—The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, develop a uniform pooling and servicing agreement (in this section referred to as a "uniform PSA"). The Director shall work with industry groups, including servicers, originators, and mortgage investors to develop the uniform PSA.
- (B) CRITERIA.—The uniform PSA shall—
- (i) address all issues relating to the pool trustee, and shall be based on pooling and servicing agreements in use by the enterprises on the date of enactment of this Act; and
- (ii) create uniform loss mitigation standards, including standards for a single point of contact for troubled borrowers, an industry wide net-present-value model for determining when to conduct a loan modification rather than foreclosure, and national standards for the foreclosure process.
- (2) EFFECT OF UNIFORM PSA.—Beginning 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, all mortgage backed securities issued by national or State chartered banks in the United States will be affected in accordance with the uniform PSA.
- (b) MERS 2.—The Director shall establish, by rule, a Mortgage Electronic Registration System (in this section referred to as "MERS2") based on the Mortgage Electronic Registration System in use on the date of enactment of this Act. MERS2 shall incorporate a single national database for all mortgage title transfers, to be maintained and operated by FHFA. The rules of the Director shall ensure that property title is transferred in accordance with all applicable provisions of law. All mortgage transfers shall take place according to national standards and shall be recorded in the MERS2 system.
- (c) UNIFORM REGULATORY PRACTICES.—The Comptroller of the Currency, Chairperson of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Director, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and Director of the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection shall, jointly, under the direction of the Director, develop uniform regulatory practices for the mortgage market.

The enterprises are prohibited from initiating or engage in new lines of business on and after the date of enactment of this Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SAM D. HAMILTON NOXUBEE NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Environment and Public Works be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 588, and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 588) to redesignate the Noxubee National Wildlife Refuge as the Sam D. Hamilton Noxubee National Wildlife Refuge.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the measure be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 588) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

TO REVISE THE BOUNDARIES OF JOHN H. CHAFEE COASTAL BAR-RIER RESOURCES SYSTEM

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 304, S. 1296.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1296) to revise the boundaries of John H. Chafee Coastal Barrier Resources System Sachuest Point Unit RI-04P, Easton Beach Unit RI-05P, Almy Pond Unit RI-06, and Hazards Beach Unit RI-07 in the State of Rhode Island.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. I further ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and that any statements relating to the measure be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 1296) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 1296

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. REPLACEMENT OF JOHN H. CHAFEE COASTAL BARRIER RESOURCES SYSTEM MAP.

- (a) DEFINITION OF MAP.—In this section, the term "Map" means the map that—
- (1) is subtitled "Sachuest Point Unit RI-04P, Easton Beach Unit RI-05P, Almy Pond Unit RI-06, Hazards Beach Unit RI-07";
- (2) is included in the set of maps entitled "John H. Chafee Coastal Barrier Resources System" (referred to in section 4(a) of the Coastal Barrier Resources Act (16 U.S.C. 3503(a)) as the set of maps entitled "Coastal Barrier Resources System"); and
- (3) relates to certain John H. Chafee Coastal Barrier Resources System units in the State of Rhode Island.
- (b) REPLACEMENT.—The Map is replaced by the map entitled "John H. Chafee Coastal Barrier Resources System Sachuest Point Unit RI-04P, Easton Beach Unit RI-05P, Almy Pond Unit RI-06, and Hazards Beach Unit RI-07" and dated September 30, 2009.
- (c) AVAILABILITY.—The Secretary of the Interior shall keep the replacement map referred to in subsection (b) on file and available for inspection in accordance with section 4(b) of the Coastal Barrier Resources Act (16 U.S.C. 3503(b)).

HONORING THE LIFE OF KEVIN HAGAN WHITE

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 365, submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 365) honoring the life of Kevin Hagan White, the Mayor of Boston, Massachusetts from 1968 to 1984.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and any statements relating to the matter be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 365) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 365

Whereas Kevin White was born in Boston on September 25, 1929;

Whereas his father, Joseph C. White, a legislator of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; his maternal grandfather, Henry E. Hagan; and his father-in-law, William Galvin; each served as presidents of the Boston City Council;

Whereas Kevin White earned a bachelor's degree from Williams College in 1952, a law degree from Boston College in 1955, and also studied at the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration, now the John F. Kennedy School of Government;

Whereas in 1956, Kevin White married Kathryn Galvin;

Whereas in 1960, at the age of 31, Kevin White was elected Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and was reelected 3 times, serving until 1967;

Whereas in January 1968, Kevin White became the 51st Mayor of the City of Boston, Massachusetts:

Whereas within months after taking office as Mayor of Boston, Kevin White was instrumental in helping guide the City of Boston after the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.:

Whereas on April 5, 1968, Mayor White asked that the James Brown concert at the Boston Garden be televised rather than be cancelled, as many suggested;

Whereas during the concert, Mayor White addressed the citizens to plead for calm and said, "Twenty four hours ago Dr. King died for all of us, black and white, that we may live together in harmony without violence, and in peace. I'm here to ask for your help and to ask you to stay with me as your mayor, and to make Dr. King's dream a reality in Boston. No matter what any other community might do, we in Boston will honor Dr. King in peace.";

Whereas during his time as Mayor of Boston, Kevin White undertook a program of urban revitalization of the downtown areas of Boston that forever transformed Faneuil Hall and Quincy Market:

Whereas during his time as Mayor, Kevin White brought the residents of each neighborhood of Boston, from Mattapan to Charlestown, from South Boston to Brighton, from East Boston to West Roxbury, together through programs like Summerthing, Little City Halls, and jobs for at-risk youth;

Whereas in 1974, Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts ordered Boston to begin busing children to integrate its schools:

Whereas during a difficult period of racial tension for the City of Boston, Mayor White urged the people of Boston to remember their common identity;

Whereas from 1984 to 2002, Kevin White was the director of the Institute for Political Communication at Boston University; Whereas Mayor White valiantly fought against Alzheimer's disease after his diagnosis in 2003 and despite this debilitating challenge, he never stopped being an example of strength for the City of Boston and his family;

Whereas Kevin White is survived by his wife, Kathryn; a brother, Terrence, who managed his early campaigns; his sons, Mark and Chris; his daughters, Caitlin, Beth, and Patricia; his 7 grandchildren; and his sister, Maureen Mercier;

Whereas the most famous campaign slogan coined Kevin White, "A loner in love with the city"; and

Whereas the irony of the slogan is that Kevin White was never lonely and that the people of Boston who he loved so much, loved him back: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That-

(1) the Senate—

- (A) recognizes that Kevin White forever enriched the Boston political landscape and forged a new path for the City of Boston;
- (B) pays tribute to the work by Kevin White to improve the lives of the residents of the City of Boston; and
- (C) requests the Secretary of the Senate to prepare an official copy of this resolution for presentation to the family of Kevin White; and
- (2) when the Senate adjourns today, it stand adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of former Boston Mayor Kevin Hagan White.

HONORING THE LIFE OF WILMAN VILLAR MENDOZA AND CONDEMNING THE CASTRO REGIME

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 366, submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 366) honoring the life of dissident and democracy activist Wilman Villar Mendoza and condemning the Castro regime for the death of Wilman Villar Mendoza.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and any statements relating to the measure be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 366) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 366

Whereas, on Thursday, January 19, 2012, 31-year-old Cuban dissident Wilman Villar Mendoza died, following a 56-day hunger strike to highlight his arbitrary arrest and the repression of basic human and civil rights in Cuba by the Castro regime;

Whereas, on November 2, 2011, Wilman Villar Mendoza was detained by security forces of the Government of Cuba for participating in a peaceful demonstration in Cuba calling for greater political freedom and respect for human rights;

Whereas Wilman Villar Mendoza was sentenced to 4 years in prison after a hearing that lasted less than 1 hour and during which Wilman Villar Mendoza was neither represented by counsel nor given the opportunity to speak in his defense;

Whereas, on November 25, 2011, Wilman Villar Mendoza was placed in solitary confinement after initiating a hunger strike to protest his unjust trial and imprisonment;

Whereas Wilman Villar Mendoza was a member of the Unión Patriótica de Cuba, a dissident group the Cuban regime considers illegitimate because members express views critical of the regime:

Whereas security forces of the Government of Cuba have harassed Maritza Pelegrino Cabrales, the wife of Villar Mendoza and a member of the Ladies in White (Damas de Blanco), and have threatened to take away her children if she continues to work with the Ladies in White;

Whereas Human Rights Watch, which documented the case of Wilman Villar Mendoza, stated, "Arbitrary arrests, sham trials, inhumane imprisonment, and harassment of dissidents' families—these are the tactics used to silence critics.":

Whereas Amnesty International stated, "The responsibility for Wilman Villar Mendoza's death in custody lies squarely with the Cuban authorities, who summarily judged and jailed him for exercising his right to freedom of expression.";

Whereas Orlando Zapata Tamayo, another prisoner of conscience jailed after the "Black Spring" crackdown on opposition groups in March 2003, died in prison on February 23, 2010, after a 90-day hunger strike;

Whereas, according to the Cuban Commission on Human Rights, the unrelenting tyranny of the Castro regime has led to more than 4,000 political detentions and arrests in 2011; and

Whereas Cuba is a member of the United Nations Human Rights Council despite numerous documented violations of human rights every year in Cuba: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate-

- (1) condemns the Cuban regime for the death of Wilman Villar Mendoza on January 19, 2011, following a hunger strike to protest his incarceration for participating in a peaceful protest and to highlight the plight of the Cuban people:
- (2) condemns the repression of basic human and civil rights by the Castro regime in Cuba that resulted in more than 4,000 detentions and arrests of activists in 2011:
- (3) honors the life of Wilman Villar Mendoza and his sacrifice on behalf of the cause of freedom in Cuba:
- (4) extends condolences to Maritza Pelegrino Cabrales, the wife of Wilman Villar Mendoza, and their children;
- (5) urges the United Nations Human Rights Council to suspend Cuba from its position on the Council;
- (6) urges the General Assembly of the United Nations to vote to suspend the rights of membership of Cuba to the Human Rights Council;
- (7) urges the international community to condemn the harassment and repression of peaceful activists by the Cuban regime; and
- (8) calls on the governments of all democratic countries to insist on the release of all political prisoners and the cessation of violence, arbitrary arrests, and threats against peaceful demonstrators in Cuba, including threats against Maritza Pelegrino Cabrales and members of the Ladies in White (Damas de Blanco).

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2012

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate adjourn until 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, February 2, 2012; that following the prayer and the pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, and the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; that following any leader remarks, the Senate be in a period of morning business until 11 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with the time equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, with the majority controlling the first half and the Republicans controlling the final half; and that following morning business, the Senate resume consideration of S. 2038, the Stop Trading on Congressional Knowledge Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. The managers of the bill will continue to negotiate an agreement to complete action on the bill tomorrow. Senators will be notified when any agreement is reached.

Mr. President, I commend Leader REID and Chairman LIEBERMAN for their strong work, along with Senator COLLINS for her work in reaching bipartisan resolutions on this issue. We will continue to work through the night hoping to reach a resolution early in the day.

$\begin{array}{c} {\rm ADJOURNMENT~UNTIL~9:30~A.M.} \\ {\rm TOMORROW} \end{array}$

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that it adjourn under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:56 p.m. adjourned until Thursday, February 2, 2012, at 9:30 a.m.

this day.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, February 1, 2012

The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Cravaack).

$\begin{array}{c} {\tt DESIGNATION~OF~SPEAKER~PRO} \\ {\tt TEMPORE} \end{array}$

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

Washington, DC, February 1, 2012. I hereby appoint the Honorable CHIP CRAVAACK to act as Speaker pro tempore on

JOHN A. BOEHNER, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING-HOUR DEBATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 17, 2012, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning-hour debate.

The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to 1 hour and each Member other than the majority and minority leaders and the minority whip limited to 5 minutes each, but in no event shall debate continue beyond 11:50 a.m.

GOVERNMENT PERSECUTION OF CATHOLIC CHRISTIANS IN AMER-ICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we hear about religious persecution throughout the Third World, but there is an anti-religious movement right here in the United States. The Catholic Church is being persecuted by this government.

Our great country was founded on the principle of religious liberty. This right is in the First Amendment, and the provisions of the First Amendment are listed first because they are the most important. Yet, the administration is chipping away at this cornerstone of our society by violating the religious liberty of those who hold fast to certain positions of their faith, in particular, those of the Catholic Church.

The Department of Health and Human Services recently announced that religious organizations will be forced to provide their employees with medical insurance that covers free contraceptives and sterilizations.

While houses of worship are exempt, religiously affiliated organizations such as hospitals, universities, and charities are mandated to comply with this government edict. This goes against the basic tenets of the Catholic religion, as well as other faiths, Christian and non-Christian.

The administration believes that it's enough to give religious organizations 1 year's notice to comply with this government oppression. But there will never be enough time for the church to change its core principles.

Timothy Dolan, president of the United States Council of Catholic Bishops and New York archbishop, said it best: "In effect, the President is saying we have a year to figure out how to violate our consciences."

Mr. Speaker, religious principles are not negotiable. They are not to be subject to bullying by any government, especially ours. No government has the legal or moral right to target any religions and make them violate their religious conscience.

The administration is violating two provisions of the First Amendment: the free exercise of religion clause and the establishment of religion clause. The government is prohibiting the free exercise of religion because it is punishing Catholics for exercising their religious beliefs.

Government is also violating the establishment clause by establishing a government religion, statism, because government is establishing its own moral standard that must be complied with or else. Regardless of where Americans stand on the issues of contraception, sterilization, or the abortion pill, this government oppression should be alarming for those who believe the government should not punish religions or substitute a religious doctrine for citizens. The government should stay out of the business of persecuting religions.

This recent anti-religious mandate is completely unacceptable, but it is only one example in a long line of new government actions that disregard freedom of conscience and religious liberty. This comes on the heels of the administration's denial of a grant to the United States Council of Catholic Bishops to aid victims of human trafficking. Not only have they been awarded this grant in the past, but their application has received the highest quality score.

Mr. Speaker, this money is used to help victims from the scourge of human slavery. But the church was denied this grant because their religious convictions do not provide contraceptives or refer women to abortions. Apparently, under this administration, in order to aid victims, it is necessary for religious groups to violate their religious convictions.

These are only two of the most recent assaults by government, our government, on religious liberty and conscience. As soon as this administration came into office, a proposal was submitted to rescind conscience regulations for medical professionals. Protections for medical professionals who would not violate their conscience by distributing emergency contraceptives was rescinded. This was just a glimpse of what was to come in deliberate disregard for the First Amendment.

This administration's attack on religious liberty is a strike at the core principles of our Nation. Government is putting basic freedoms in jeopardy and bruising the U.S. Constitution. No government should force its citizens to violate their religious beliefs.

Who would have thought that this Nation, founded on religious liberty, would now be engaged in religious persecution against certain citizens and against certain churches?

This ought not to be. But that's just the way it is.

AMERICANS KNOW CONGRESS IS BROKEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, Americans know that Congress is broken, paralyzed by hyperpartisanship, fierce ideology, and unwillingness to respond to widely understood problems with broadly supported solutions.

Why, at a time of growth and increasing diversity in America, does Congress not represent that change?

Well, part of the answer is that's not how we're elected. Increasingly, we come from districts that are not just red or blue, but the colors are brighter, the divisions deeper. How can this be?

The answer is to be found in hallways and back rooms of State capitals all all across America right now. After the census every 10 years, the great re-balancing occurs, to adjust legislative districts to changes in populations. Some States will win or lose congressional seats. Every district in the 43 States that have multi-Member districts will see some adjustment to balance out changes in population growth.

But not all voters are equal. Some are more, some are less inclined to support the party in power or to support a particular incumbent.

One thing that politicians can all agree upon is that their district should be safer, their party should be favored. The process of redistricting has been refined to a high art with the computer, very sophisticated survey research, a treasure trove of data on voter behavior. In short, the politicians are hard at work picking their voters in a way that will make it harder for voters, over the next 10 years, to pick their politicians.

Now, Exhibit A is a grotesque district that has been created in the State of North Carolina, District Four, currently represented by our colleague, Congressman DAVID PRICE, that looks like somebody had just taken an egg and thrown it at the blackboard. But this effort, where a 50/50 State that went for Obama, that has a Democratic Senator, a Democratic Governor, and a 7-6 advantage for Democrats in Congress now, has been at work with the Republicans and their legislature to try to turn it into a 10-3 advantage for Republicans going forward after the next election.

But I could have taken an example in Illinois, where there Democrats are sort of reverse engineering those districts to Democratic advantages.

There is a bright spot for years, and that has been Iowa, where the process has been driven by an independent agency that draws districts without partisan logrolling, and simply is referred to the legislature for an up-ordown vote.

This year, all four districts in Iowa are competitive. One even features two incumbent senior Members of Congress that are running against each other.

□ 1010

There are other bright spots in California and Arizona where voters have determined that there will be independent commissions. There is even some hope in Florida where there are more constraints on the politicians in the redistricting. But make no mistake, it is not just one party losing when another party takes unfair advantage. In truth, everybody loses.

There is less representative behavior in Congress. We have districts drawn without integrity. It is hard to represent people. It is hard for people to understand who is representing them, and it shatters local interests.

Most damaging, I think, is it just reveals a naked power grab that further undermines people's confidence in the political process. We shouldn't have to wait decades for reform at the State level. We saw in Arizona where Governor Brewer tried to fire the head of the independent redistricting commission because the commission produced some districts that were fair and competitive, not tilted partisan.

These reforms can actually be sabotaged. I'm proposing H.R. 3846 to establish a national independent rediscommission headed Statespeople, if you will, people who are appointed by legislative leadership like retired judges or former Presidents. These people would oversee a professional agency like they have in Iowa to make sure that we have national uniform standards that are fair, maybe even some competitive districts, and stop the political log rolling, to prepare a national set of maps that would be subjected to an up-ordown vote by Congress.

A lot of this seems beyond our control in the political process. This bill is something we could do to make the process better 10 years from now. I urge my colleagues to look at House bill 3846.

CHESTER A. "CHET" FOULKE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. HECK) for 5 minutes.

Mr. HECK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a great man, Chester A. "Chet" Foulke.

Chet was a member of the Greatest Generation, born on July 19, 1922, and God called him home on December 31, 2011.

Chet grew up in Quakertown, Pennsylvania, during the Great Depression of the 1930s. The hard times forced him to leave school after the 10th grade and to work in an aircraft plant near Philadelphia before the United States became involved in World War II.

He enlisted in the United States Marine Corps in September of 1943 and attended recruit training at Parris Island, South Carolina, and advanced training at Camp Pendleton, California, and Camp Tarawa, Hawaii, in preparation for one of the war's toughest battles, Iwo Jima.

As a demolition expert with Company C of the 5th Engineering Battalion, Chet fought on the front lines for 36 days. "It was an awful battle the way we got slaughtered," he said during a 2006 interview. "Some days you would make it 100 or 200 yards, some days 500 yards." Chet was at Mount Suribachi when the first U.S. flag went up. "I was standing there looking up when that flag went up and tears ran down my face," he said in another interview. "I was just so happy to see that flag that I knew they were not going to push us off or do away with us. I felt so happy.'

When the war ended, he was sent to Japan for 7 months of occupational duty before returning to the United States where he received his discharge from the Marine Corps in May of 1946 as a corporal.

He became a Nevadan when he moved to Las Vegas in 1972. In 1986, Chet helped found the Greater Nevada Detachment, No. 186, of the Marine Corps League where he served as commandant from 1992–1995 and then as chaplain for several years thereafter. He was greatly admired by members of the Marine Corps League for his bravery at Iwo Jima and his involvement in the Marine Corps League.

Mr. Foulke is survived by his wife of 29 years, Martha; his daughter, Mary; her husband, Ed; three stepsons, David, William and Jeffery; and several nieces and nephews. He will be greatly missed by all. Semper Fi.

TENETS OF FAITH

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL) for 5 minutes.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I came to this empty Chamber to discuss the issues of jobs and also the unemployment compensation extension, as well as taxes.

As I neared the well, I heard one of our esteemed Members condemning the President for persecuting religion in a very broad and general way and then later more specifically in talking about the Roman Catholic Church. It would seem to me in a place like the United States of America, which was actually formed on the basis of freedom of religion, that such a serious accusation against the President of these United States should not be to an empty Chamber.

This is such a serious allegation that it would seem to me that it requires and demands a bipartisan view to see exactly what the churches' or religious leaders' complaints are because I have one, too; and that is, at a time when this country is facing a fiscal, as well as moral, obligation to the most vulnerable people among us, I see the battle between the haves and the havenots, the 1 percent and the 99 percent.

I hear the disputes as to whether or not the capitalistic system is fair, but I always took the position that the capitalistic system is an invitation of how Americans and others can invest and make money; and the question of compassion, the question of taking care of your own, the question of illness and jobs and the social issues of today, that it was the Congress that had the responsibility to deal with that rather than to be condemning those who seek to get returns on their investments.

Having said that, let's take a look and see what issues are biblical, what issues are in the Mormon faith, the Muslim faith, the Buddhist faith, the Jewish faith, Protestant and Catholic. It seems to me that throughout every one of these texts, there are things that say that we have a responsibility as human beings and God-fearing people to protect the vulnerable. It is abundantly clear, even in the story about the Good Samaritan. It is also a mandate that when someone is sick that we have a responsibility to assist them.

Certainly, when we talk about Jesus Christ in Matthew where these wealthy people are attempting to get into Heaven and Jesus tells them he was hungry, thirsty, unclothed, in jail, and they didn't do anything to assist him and they said that they don't remember Jesus ever coming asking for anything. Then of course the international world-famous biblical expression is that it wasn't how you treated Jesus, the Son of God, but it was how you treated the lesser of our brothers and sisters.

I think everyone would agree that whether you want to accuse the President of being the food-stamp President or saying he wants to bring socialism to the United States, all of that rhetoric doesn't hide the fact that the poorest of the poor now are suffering more than the people that caused this fiscal crisis.

If we are going to do something about the deficit, we just can't say we've got to cut spending, especially when that spending is exactly for the people that the spiritual leaders have made vows to protect.

□ 1020

Oh, we don't call it the sick and the disabled and the uneducated, but we do call it Medicare; we do call it Social Security; we do call it education; and we do call it the ability to get a job so that a person can have not only the income for his family to be able to have the dignity and respect it deserves, but we also have to recognize that from an economic point of view, it is the people who are in the middle class who are slipping into poverty that makes the difference. I hope that people will give serious thought to the accusation.

CELEBRATING THE 100TH ANNI-VERSARY OF THE GIRL SCOUTS OF THE USA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FITZPATRICK) for 5 minutes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Girl Scouts of the USA, which will be celebrating its 100th anniversary on March 12, 2012.

For 100 years, the Girl Scouts have fostered an environment that has created generations of women with sound character and strong leadership skills. Founded by Juliette Gordon Low in Savannah, Georgia, the first troop consisted of just 18 Girl Scouts. Today, there are more than 3.7 million Girl Scouts and more than 100 councils across our Nation. Since its start, more than 50 million women have been a part of this extraordinary organization.

The Girl Scouts of America teaches young women the importance of leadership and of community service. This past Sunday, I proudly participated in Troop 21292's Girl Scout Gold Award ceremony in honoring seven young women from Bucks County, Pennsylvania. It pleases me to recognize these Girl Scouts for their exceptional accomplishment: Christine DiPierro. Catherine Silvernail, Charlotte Triebl, Emily Kraeck, Emily Nowalinski, Kimberly Wodzanowski, and Margaret Zelin. These young ladies exemplify courage, confidence, and character, and have made the world a better place, which has been the mission of the Girl Scouts of the USA for 100 years.

Mr. Speaker, on March 16, 1950, the United States Congress chartered the Girl Scouts of the USA. Today, as the Member of the United States Congress representing Pennsylvania's Eighth District, it is my privilege to congratulate the Girl Scouts of the USA as they commemorate 100 years of building girls of courage, confidence, and character who have truly made the world a better place. Best wishes for success in the next 100 years.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI) for 5 minutes.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, as a proud graduate of St. Symphorosa Grammar School and St. Ignatius College Prep, and as a strong supporter of Catholic education, I have again this year introduced a resolution in honor of Catholic Schools Week to highlight the contributions Catholic schools make, not only to the students who attend them, but to our entire Nation.

Since 1974, the National Catholic Educational Association and the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops have provided leadership in planning and organizing Catholic Schools Week. This year, it is celebrated from January 29 through February 5. The theme, "Faith, Academics, Service," celebrates the broad educational experience Catholic school students receive. Catholic school students are not only focused on academic excellence but also on enriching the spiritual character and moral development of young Americans.

America's Catholic schools produce graduates with the skills and integrity needed by our businesses, governments, and communities, emphasizing a wellrounded education and instilling the values of giving back to the community and helping others. Nearly every Catholic school has a community service program, and their students volunteer half-a-million hours every year to their parishes and communities. My own decision to pursue a career in teaching and then in public service was fostered in part by the dedicated teachers throughout my years in Catholic schools.

Today, over 2 million elementary and secondary students are enrolled in nearly 7,000 Catholic schools, where these students typically excel. They surpass their peers in math, science, reading, history, and geography in NAEP tests. The graduation rate for Catholic high school students is 99 percent, and 85 percent of the graduates of these schools attend a 4-year college. As we continue to hear disturbing reports about our national test scores, these statistics are truly remarkable and should be commended.

Notably, the success of Catholic schools does not depend on selectivity. These academic achievements are realized by students from all walks of life. Catholic schools accept 9 out of every 10 students who apply, and are highly effective in providing a quality education to students from every socioeconomic group, especially disadvantaged youths in underserved urban communities. Over the past 30 years, the percentage of minority students enrolled in Catholic schools has more than doubled, and today they constitute almost one-third of all Catholic school students. In times of economic hardship, Catholic schools provide an affordable alternative to other forms of private education.

In addition to producing well-rounded students, Catholic schools save tax-payers billions of dollars each year by lowering the number of students in already overburdened public schools. It is estimated that taxpayers save over $1 billion from students attending Catholic schools in the Chicago area alone and approximately $20 billion nation-wide. The importance of these savings is undeniable as we in Congress and as lawmakers across the country struggle with deficits.

I was born and raised and live in the Chicago Archdiocese, home to one of the most successful Catholic school systems in the Nation, and my parish school at St. John of the Cross has one of the best schools in the archdiocese. Right next-door, the Joliet Diocese also has a thriving Catholic school system. The focus of this year's Catholic Schools Week, "Faith, Academics, Service," reflects my own Catholic education. The knowledge, discipline, desire to serve, and love of learning it instilled in me enabled me to earn my doctorate and to become a teacher before being elected to Congress.

In recognizing Catholic Schools Week, we pay a special tribute to dedicated teachers and administrators who sacrifice so much, in most cases working for less than they could earn elsewhere. I have many fond memories of my teachers, including those of many nuns, who taught me the value of faith, learning, and service. Throughout the United States, millions of others have similar memories of dedicated sisters, priests, and lay teachers who gave their hearts and souls to their students.

This week, I had the honor of celebrating Catholic Schools Week at a number of schools, including St. Andrew School in Romeoville, Everest Academy in Lemont, St. Michael School in Orland Park, Cardinal Joseph Bernadine School in Orland Hills, and my alma mater, St. Symphorosa in Chicago. I also joined St. Linus School in Oak Lawn in celebrating, not only Catholic Schools Week, but also the school's prestigious Blue Ribbon award.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting the outstanding education Catholic schools provide to Americans across the country as we celebrate Catholic Schools Week

SUSAN G. KOMEN RACE FOR THE CURE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SPEIER) for 5 minutes.

Ms. SPEIER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise quite saddened by the news that the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure has made a political decision—a fine nonprofit that I have been associated with for years. I've run in the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure. I've walked in the Race for the Cure. I have been the emcee of a number of events locally that they have held. So I have been a big booster of the Susan G. Komen organization. But not anymore.

Their announcement yesterday that they are no longer going to fund any organization that is being investigated by a Federal, State, or local body means that Planned Parenthood is no longer going to receive $600,000 a year. Now, ironically, yesterday, the Komen organization also announced, and with great concern in a statement, that the dismal rate of breast cancer screening with women who do not have insurance is something like 38.2 percent.

□ 1030

Last year, the Planned Parenthood organization was responsible for over 700,000—700,000—breast cancer screenings for women who are poor, for women who don't have insurance, for women who seek to get the health care they get through Planned Parenthood. So over the last 5 years, there have been 4 million breast cancer screenings by Planned Parenthood. Komen has funded about 170,000 of them through Planned Parenthood.

So what does this mean? Well, I guess it means that Susan G. Komen has decided to become a 501(c)(4), because no longer do they want to be providing nonprofits. They want to become a political advocacy group.

Last time I checked, we were all presumed innocent until proven guilty and we looked to investigations in the Federal judicial branch; we looked to investigations by the U.S. Attorney or the district attorney. Far be it from us to rely on the House of Representatives holding a hearing as being emblematic of justice, because oftentimes it's a political sandbox.

Now, this ostensible investigation is one that has been called on by Mr. STEARNS, who is the subcommittee chair of Energy and Commerce on Oversight. The hearing has never been held. So why would Susan G. Komen take the remarkable step of saying they are no longer going to fund Planned Parenthood?

I suppose when we review NIH and bring them under some investigation that they will stop funding NIH to the tune of a million dollars, or I suppose that when we have a pharmaceutical company that we bring to the Hill to ask them questions about a particular activity that they will stop accepting sponsor money from that particular pharmaceutical company.

All of you across this country that feel that Susan G. Komen should stick to what it knows, and that is breast cancer research, breast cancer screening, and support and promote those activities by organizations that do the research and do the screening, I ask you to call them at 1–877–465–6636 and tell them that you want them to stick to what they know.

Let's not make this a race to the political bottom.

POVERTY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Lee) for 5 minutes.

Ms. LEE of California. Mr. Speaker, as the founder of the Congressional Out of Poverty Caucus, I rise today to continue talking about the tide of poverty sweeping across this country.

Americans who are struggling to find work cannot wait. Americans whose homes are underwater cannot wait, and the nearly 50 million Americans who are living in poverty cannot wait.

We must act, and we must act now to extend vital unemployment benefits and the temporary payroll tax reduction while our economy continues to recover. We should be coming together now to enact bold programs and policies that provide equal opportunity and equal access for every single American, no matter their race, no matter their employment status, and no matter their humble beginnings. Instead, Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, this Party-led Congress continues to do nothing but distract from the real issues and waste the American people's time.

The Republican caucus failed to pass a single jobs bill last year, and by the looks of this week's calendar, it looks like they might be committed to doing more of the same. This Nation cannot afford any more of this do-nothing Tea Party Republican House. Instead of passing a jobs bill, Republicans in the to rely on the House of Representatives House today are attacking American holding a hearing as being emblematic families in need.

This bill that's coming up today, H.R. 3567, is really a distasteful and misleading bill that tries to make it seem to like every low-income family is somehow criminal. Nothing could be further from the truth. Very few people want to qualify for welfare. They don't want to be distressed enough to meet these qualifications. This is the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Act which is being attacked today. That's what it's called today. Actually, it's called TANF.

TANF recipients are struggling through the most difficult time of their lives, and they want nothing more than a good job to support their families. This bill that's coming up again today is really a sad attempt to re-create the Ronald Reagan era about the Cadillac-driving welfare queen. It wasn't true then nor is it true today. TANF benefits did not pay for Cadillacs to fund lavish lifestyles.

Mr. Speaker, as a single young mother who once relied on food stamps and public assistance during a very difficult period, I'm really appalled to see Republican politicians attack these families just because they are facing hard times and need a helping hand. TANF benefits keep children in homes and in schools. They keep American families from suffering abject poverty.

What we should be doing is helping these families by creating jobs, by removing these obstacles and barriers, and we should be helping them to reignite the American Dream, not insulting them, which is what this bill does. This Congress should be working together to create more opportunity for the long-term unemployed and the millions of Americans suffering in poverty.

We should at least extend unemployment benefits for the chronically unemployed who have hit the 99-week limit, can't apply anymore because they are ineligible, and we should be voting, for example, for the bill, which Congressman SCOTT of Virginia and myself have written to help those looking for a job and who can't find a job. We have to remember now that there is only one job for every four individuals looking for a job.

But, unfortunately, instead of working together to make economic justice a reality for every American, this Republican Tea Party will waste another year without a jobs bill, without extending any help to the millions of Americans in need, and without helping American retirees.

So we should be putting our Nation before our party. Americans can't wait and neither should this Congress.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until noon today.

Accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 36 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess

□ 1200

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at noon.

PRAYER

Reverend Karen Hallett, United States Army, New Windsor, New York, offered the following prayer:

Reading from the book of Exodus, Moses said to the Lord, "You have been telling me, 'Lead these people,' but You have not let me know whom You will send with me . . . If You are pleased with me, teach me Your ways so I may know You and continue to find favor with You. Remember that this nation is Your people."

The Lord replied, "My presence will go with you, and I will give you rest."

Then Moses said to him, "If Your presence does not go with us, do not send us up from here. How will anyone know that You are pleased with me and with Your people unless You go with us? What else will distinguish me and Your people from all the other people on the face of the Earth?"

And the Lord said to Moses, "I will do the very thing you ask because I am pleased with you and I know you by name."

Then Moses said, "Now show me Your glory."

And this, O Lord, is our prayer:

We do not come seeking Your blessing. Today, Lord, we come seeking You. We invite You to truly be present with us here today. Show us Your glory, Lord, that we might be changed and set apart upon the Earth once again as a people of faith, a Nation that knows You. Make Your face to shine upon us that we might reflect Your grace. And grant us Your peace we pray.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUCSHON) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. BUCSHON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOMING REVEREND KAREN HALLETT

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. GARRETT) is recognized for 1 minute.

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the words of the chaplain who says may we indeed know the Lord.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Chaplain Karen Hallett on her selection as the 2012 Reserve Officers Association Chaplain of the Year. She is a resident of Vernon, New Jersey, which is a part of the Fifth Congressional District.

The chaplain enlisted in the Army in 1983 and completed basic combat training at Fort Dix, New Jersey. She went on from there to graduate from West Point and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the United States Army Ordnance Corps in 1988.

After that and after fulfilling her enlistment obligations, she spent 18 years in the civilian sector, successfully managing businesses while remaining engaged in full-time ministry. In 2009, after completing her master's of divinity degree at Bethel Seminary, she returned to military service as a captain in the United States Army Reserves. She currently serves as a brigade chaplain for the 411th Engineer Brigade.

Throughout her more than 20 years of ministerial service and missionary work, and now through her military service to our country, she has dedicated herself to ministering to the spiritual needs of others. It is her selflessness and her service that exemplify the mandate to esteem others better than ourselves.

I thank her for her service. I congratulate her on receiving this recognition as Chaplain of the Year.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS TO BOARD OF VISITORS TO THE UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces the Speaker's appointment pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 4355(a) and the order of the House of January 5, 2011, of the following Members of the House to the Board of Visitors to the United States Military Academy:

Mr. SHIMKUS, Illinois Mr. WOMACK, Arkansas

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the following enrolled bills were signed by the Speaker on Friday, January 27, 2012:

H.R. 3800, to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend the funding and expenditure authority of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, to amend title 49, United States Code, to extend authorizations for the airport improvement program, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3801, to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to clarify the definition of aircraft and the offenses penalized under the aviation smuggling provisions under that Act, and for other purposes.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to 15 requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

PRESIDENT'S DEFENSE STRATEGY ENDANGERS NATIONAL DEFENSE

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, Baker Spring of the prestigious Heritage Foundation recently warned:

"It is clear that the fiscal year 2013 defense budget will not provide the U.S. military with the resources it needs. Even more problematic is that all reductions to the defense budget are front-loaded, and, therefore will have significant and immediate implication for readiness, modernization programs, and research and development."

Our servicemembers, their families, and veterans have dedicated their lives to this country. House Republicans understand that in order to keep American families safe, we must fight to stop these reductions. I look forward to working with House Armed Services Committee Chairman Buck McKeon to find ways to promote the proven path of peace through strength.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September the 11th in the global war on terrorism.

Welcome Episcopal Father Carroll McGee of West Columbia to Washington for the National Prayer Breakfast.

ANNIVERSARY OF ARMENIAN POGROMS

(Ms. CHU asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. CHU. Between 1988 and 1990, the Armenian population was the target of racially motivated pogroms in Azerbaijan. Hundreds of Armenians were murdered and more wounded during three violent attacks in Sumgait, Kirovabad. and Baku.

Though the ethnic cleansing programs occurred over 20 years ago, they were atrocious acts of cruelty. We cannot forget them.

I worry the sentiments that sparked this violence still remain in the Nagorno-Karabakh. Just last month, Azerbaijan began buying up weapons to regain control of the region. The President of Azerbaijan declared this is, "not a frozen conflict, and it's not going to be one."

America must remain committed to a peaceful and democratic resolution to the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict, not one that relives the past.

AUTO MANUFACTURING RETURNS TO INDIANA'S EIGHTH DISTRICT

(Mr. BUCSHON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BUCSHON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commemorate some great news for manufacturing in Indiana's Eighth Congressional District, my home. On January 17, the 3 millionth vehicle rolled off the line at the Toyota Motor Manufacturing plant in Princeton, Indiana. Approximately 80 percent of the parts for these vehicles were made here in America within a 300-mile radius of the plant. These vehicles are then shipped and sold both across this country and around the world thanks to the free trade agreements that Congress passed this year.

This plant began operations in 1996 and employs 4,149 people. I had the pleasure of meeting many of the Princeton team members last February, and I want to commend each of these employees for their hard work and dedication. I congratulate them on a job well done. I have no doubts that it won't be long until we celebrate another millionth vehicle made right here in the U.S.A. in my district in Indiana.

STOP PUTTING POLITICS OVER PEOPLE

(Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Madam Speaker, for those who believe in the Mayan end of days and the prophecy of the end of the world in 2012, the fact that our Republican friends have finally met a tax cut they don't like surely must be a sign of the apocalypse. Republicans fought tooth and nail opposing the middle class tax cut, only relenting at the 11th hour to a 2-month extension. But in the more than 40 days since then, they've ignored almost every attempt to enact a full-year extension. Why?

Perhaps because it's primarily a middle class tax cut, saving 160 million Americans almost an average of $1,000 a year. Perhaps it's because President Obama proposed it, and in an election year, they'd rather defeat the President than, in fact, support initiatives designed to help the American people. Whatever the reason, Republican opposition, once again, threatens to raise taxes on millions of Americans, deny unemployment insurance to 2.3 million Americans, and risk Medicare access for 48 million Americans.

It's long past time the Republicans stopped putting politics over people and instead extend those tax cuts for 160 million fellow citizens without making Americans wait until judgment day.

FEDERAL PAY FREEZE

(Mr. CHAFFETZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHAFFETZ. Madam Speaker, the numbers are in. Once again, the Federal Government is going to achieve an annual deficit of more than $1 trillion.

Now, how much is $1 trillion? Because we throw around that number far too often. If you spend $1 million a day every day, it would take you almost 3,000 years to get to $1 trillion, and our Federal Government is approaching $16 trillion in debt. We're spending more than $733 million a day as just interest on the debt.

We have to change the trajectory. We can no longer borrow and spend the kind of money that we are. Please, ladies and gentlemen, we have to have systemic changes; and one of those things that we're going to talk about today is putting a freeze on pay.

We have to understand that there are a lot of good Federal employees out there doing great, great work, but your Federal Government has more than 450,000 people earning a base pay of at least $100,000. These are going to have to change.

THE STOCK ACT

(Mrs. CAPPS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CAPPS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to urge the Republican leadership of the House to bring the STOCK Act to the floor. This commonsense legislation would ensure that Members of Congress and their staffs are not able to profit from nonpublic information obtained through their official duties. President Obama has called on Congress to pass this bill, and it has even advanced in the Senate this week with 93 "yes" votes. Meanwhile, the House has not acted on the bill, and a markup on it in December was quashed by the Republican leadership.

Madam Speaker, Members of Congress need to play by the same rules as everyone else, and our constituents need to have confidence that is the case. Right now, they don't have a lot of confidence in Congress on anything. Congressional approval ratings are at record lows, and reports that Members could possibly profit from nonpublic information is no doubt one more reason for that. Now we can take a step to address this gap by enacting the STOCK Act.

Madam Speaker, this is the people's House, and the American people deserve to know that the men and women they send here are working for them.

VALENTINES FOR VETERANS

(Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Every February, Americans across the country open their hearts to the country's hospitalized veterans by sending valentine cards to VA medical centers in conjunction with the National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Week.

For several years, students in our Third District of Texas have participated in the annual Valentines for Veterans program as a creative way to thank our brave men and women in uniform for something we love so much—our freedom. Last year, 19 area schools in our district participated, and this year, I encourage all our schools, families, and businesses to take part in making this day special for our Nation's veterans.

Every year, I look forward to delivering these cards to the veterans at the Dallas VA Medical Center, showing them a Texas-size thank you from our schoolkids. You should see the look in their eyes when they read, our veterans, words of appreciation. After all, they are the true reason we remain the land of the free and the home of the brave.

COMMEMORATING THE 100TH ANNI-VERSARY OF THE NEWPORT ART MUSEUM

(Mr. CICILLINE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CICILLINE. Madam Speaker, I rise to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Newport Art Museum and Art Association.

Founded in 1912 for the purpose of promoting and exhibiting fine arts and fostering art education within the community, the Newport Art Museum continues to enhance community life as a shared place for the arts and culture.

One hundred years after its founding, the Newport Art Museum is, without question, one of our great museums. The museum has received full accreditation from the American Association of Museums, the highest national recognition of a museum's commitment to accountability, public service, professional museum standards, and excellence in education and stewardship.

This valuable community resource inspires passion for the arts in diverse audiences in Rhode Island and other localities through exhibitions and collections, arts education, historic preservation, and arts and cultural programming.

It's a true honor to recognize the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Newport Art Museum.

MORE PROOF WE CAN'T TAX OUR WAY TO PROSPERITY

(Mr. HULTGREN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HULTGREN. Madam Speaker, a recent report from a respected Illinois think tank found that within 5 years the State of Illinois will have amassed an incredible $34.8 billion in unpaid bills. This, of course, comes only 1 year after an allegedly temporary tax hike that they were told would help restore the State to fiscal health, but instead has made the State's economy much worse.

Yesterday, the CBO reported that, for the 4th consecutive year, the Federal budget deficit will once again exceed $1 trillion. This is a mind-boggling number, and it underlines the need for serious fiscal reforms such as the Cut, Cap, and Balance Act that we passed last year.

But, Madam Speaker, I'd like everyone in this Chamber to learn a lesson from my home State of Illinois. We need to learn from the mistakes that they've made. Despite what some people here believe, we can never tax our way to prosperity. Let's heed the warning of the Land of Lincoln and make the tough decisions to break Washington's spending addiction.

RESTORE UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

(Ms. EDWARDS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. EDWARDS. Madam Speaker, with another deadline approaching, we're reminded again of the debacle that was the end of the last session when Members on the other side stood in the way of extending tax cuts for 160 million Americans and unemployment benefits for millions more. This is really unacceptable.

Madam Speaker, I want to share with you the sentiments of Mary Hill of Maryland. I received a letter from her this week. She's a single mother. She's a construction worker, and she's a member of Laborers' Local 657. She writes to me that she's been out of work for most of the last 3 years. In her first year here, she writes:

I went through all my savings as well as my children's savings. I went from visions of having my skills, education, vocation, certifications, and ethics embraced to receiving food stamps, a medical card, and watching my unemployment run out. I want to work. I need to work. I work every day as a volunteer organizer. My passion is for myself and others to achieve and live the American Dream. Hard work should be rewarded, and it is rewarding. Nevertheless, my rent is due. I owe credit cards and a student loan. I thought I would own a house by now.

Madam Speaker, we have to restore unemployment benefits for millions of Americans like Mary Hill.

TIME FOR THE SENATE TO GET TO WORK

(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. FOXX. Madam Speaker, the American people are rightfully fed up. The Obama Presidency has meant only more power for Washington and more debt for our children and grand-children, while the Obama economy produces only less confidence for job creators and too few jobs for Americans.

When it comes to fostering job growth, the difference between House Republicans and Senate Democrats for more than a year now has been the difference between action and inaction. Following the House Republican Plan for America's Job Creators, the House has already passed more than 30 bipartisan jobs bills to restore the freedom and confidence of our Nation's job creators to do their job. Unfortunately, 27 of these bipartisan jobs bills are still being ignored or blocked in the donothing Democrat Senate.

It's time for Washington Democrats to join our fight to put Americans back to work and get to work enacting those jobs bills.

CALLING ON GOVERNMENT OF VIETNAM TO RESPECT FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION

(Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Madam Speaker, we can see that Vietnam's communist government's escalation of crackdowns has targeted the voices of the conscience such as Paulus Le Son and many other Vietnamese patriots for exercising their rights of free speech and expression.

Recently, I received disturbing reports that another youth activist and Vietnamese songwriter, Viet Khang Tri Minh Vo, was detained and imprisoned by the Vietnamese police and government. Viet Khang's songs question the conscience of the Vietnam police, who have brutally assaulted and arrested demonstrators at peaceful gatherings. It is time for the Government of Vietnam to respect the freedom of expression through the arts and stop these arbitrary arrests and recognize the basic human rights of the individual.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor House Resolution 484, calling on the Vietnamese Government to cease the abuse of vague national security provisions in the Vietnamese penal code, which are used to justify the detention and the abuse of their own citizens.

MEDICAL AND CANCER RESEARCH

(Mr. HIGGINS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HIGGINS. Madam Speaker, earlier this week I had the opportunity to participate in a roundtable discussion in western New York on innovations in health care. Health and Human Services Deputy Secretary Bill Corr was in attendance, as were many innovation leaders from my community. My community of Buffalo and western New York has been a real leader in embracing health care innovations to promote the efficient and cost-effective delivery of quality health care services.

Buffalo was the Nation's largest recipient of the Federal Government's Beacon Grant for comprehensive integration of electronic medical records. Buffalo's Roswell Park Cancer Institute, the Nation's first comprehensive cancer center, was recently designated to conduct clinical trials for promising new therapies using vaccines to bolster the body's immune system to fight cancer. The successful result of this clinical trial could fundamentally change the science of cancer research and treatment.

Innovation in health care must be sustained by the Federal Government. Today, the National Institutes of Health rejects nine of 10 applications for promising research due to lack of funding. Ten years ago, 25 percent of the National Cancer Institute's research grants were funded; today, it's 8 percent. The only failure in cancer research is when you quit or you're forced to quit because of lack of funding.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support fully cancer funding.

EXTEND THE AMERICAN DREAM

(Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, I continue to wear a yellow ribbon to remind us of the wonderful troops who were able to come home finally from Iraq.

I want to congratulate the city of St. Louis that introduced and held the first Welcome Home the Troops from Iraq parade on January 28. I look forward to communities around this Nation raising up their voices to say thank you to those who worked and dedicated their lives and their commitment to the freedom of this country. That's why, Madam Speaker, it's so important that we do our work. Not a minute should we wait to pass the payroll tax extension, unemployment extension, and the ability of our seniors to see their doctors with the Medicare fix for our doctors.

What we say to our soldiers by welcoming them home is all in our acts and our deeds, how we treat their relatives, their friends, and extended family members and community. It's time for Congress to wait not one minute to extend the American Dream to all and provide this benefit to those who are in need.

STOP CUTS IN PUBLIC SPENDING

(Mr. MORAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN. Madam Speaker, this is a wealthy country. Corporate profits are at record highs. By the end of last year, the private sector was expanding at a healthy 4.5 percent annualized pace. But why, then, wasn't economic growth in the most recent quarter even better than the 2.8 percent that the Commerce Department reported last week? As David Leonhardt of The New York Times explains, the answer is because the economy is the combination of the private and public sectors. The public sector has been shrinking for the last 1½ years because of cuts in State and local governments and some Federal cuts, especially to the militarv.

In the fourth-quarter government shrank at an annual rate of 4.5 percent. Over the last 2 years, the private sector grew at an average annual rate of 3.2 percent while the government shrank at an annual rate of 1.4, and the combined result was that economic growth was 2.3%. That's a lot of numbers. But the fact is economic growth and employment growth would have been significantly stronger over the last 2 years without those government cuts.

And that's why we shouldn't be continuing to discourage Federal employment by continuing to freeze their pay, as the majority wants to do today. And it's why we shouldn't be letting unemployment benefits expire for 6 million people. It's why we should let the Bush tax cuts expire. It's a far better alternative than cutting trillions of dollars more in public spending.

IS GOVERNMENT REALLY THE SOURCE OF ALL OUR PROBLEMS?

(Mr. YARMUTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. YARMUTH. You know, we've heard for many years now from the other side the notion that government is the source of all of our problems, government never does anything right, it ought to stop regulating and get out of the way of a very free and open society.

Well, the authors of a new book called "Gardens of Democracy" have a compelling and undeniable point to make. They write: "There is not a stable, prosperous society on Earth without activist government, extensive regulation, and high, progressive taxation. If less were always better, then the least regulated economies would be the most successful economies. The opposite is true. If minimalist government worked, Somalia would be rich, stable and secure, and Canada would be a hellhole; Afghanistan would be a coveted destination, and Denmark would be like a leper colony.'

Now, to be fair, the authors say that our government is often too slow to react, it has all the answers, and it needs to be more flexible and more effective. We all agree with that. What we need to do is find a way to create a government that is efficient, that sets the right direction for our country, and then lets the innovative spirit of this country take hold and find the answers to our problems.

GETTING AMERICA BACK TO WORK

(Mr. RANGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. RANGEL. Recently, the President of the United States indicated that he will be sending legislation to the Congress in order to get America back to work. He also indicated that he would use the powers of the executive branch where there was no cooperation from the Congress in what he was trying to do. There's an old African saying, that is, when two elephants fight. only the grass gets hurt. I would certainly hope that the leadership in the House and the Senate take the President up on some of the offers that he has made to educate our young people, to make certain that those people that are about to lose their homes are able to keep them, and to see that we get the type of incentives from manufacturers to have jobs here rather than overseas.

I am certain that those people who watched the Republican debates were missing one thing, and that is jobs. America wants to get back to work. It wants its dignity, it wants its kids to be able to get an education, and it wants to restore the middle class.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 658, FAA REAUTHORIZATION AND RE-FORM ACT OF 2012

Mr. MICA submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 658) to amend title 49, United States Code, to authorize appropriations for the Federal Aviation Administration for fiscal years 2011 through 2014, to streamline programs, create efficiencies, reduce waste, and improve aviation safety and capacity, to provide stable funding for the national aviation system, and for other purposes:

Conference Report (H. Rept. 112–381)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 658), to amend title 49, United States Code, to authorize appropriations for the Federal Aviation Administration for fiscal years 2011 through 2014, to streamline programs, create efficiencies, reduce waste, and improve aviation safety and capacity, to provide stable funding for the national aviation system, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

SEC. 140. MINORITY AND DISADVANTAGED BUSI-NESS PARTICIPATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) While significant progress has occurred due to the establishment of the airport disadvantaged business enterprise program (49 U.S.C. 47107(e) and 47113), discrimination and related barriers continue to pose significant obstacles for minority- and women-owned businesses seeking to do business in airport-related markets across the Nation. These continuing barriers merit the continuation of the airport disadvantaged business enterprise program.

(2) Congress has received and reviewed testimony and documentation of race and gender discrimination from numerous sources including congressional hearings and roundtables, scientific reports, reports issued by public and private agencies, news stories, reports of discrimination by organizations and individuals, and discrimination lawsuits. This testimony and documentation shows that race- and genderneutral efforts alone are insufficient to address the problem.

(3) This testimony and documentation demonstrates that discrimination across the Nation poses a barrier to full and fair participation in airport-related businesses of women business owners and minority business owners in the racial groups detailed in parts 23 and 26 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, and has impacted firm development and many aspects of airportrelated business in the public and private mar-

(4) This testimony and documentation provides a strong basis that there is a compelling need for the continuation of the airport disadvantaged business enterprise program and the airport concessions disadvantaged business enterprise program to address race and gender discrimination in airport-related business.

(b) STANDARDIZING CERTIFICATION OF DIS-ADVANTAGED BUSINESS ENTERPRISES.—Section 47113 is amended by adding at the end the followina:

"(e) MANDATORY TRAINING PROGRAM.-

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall establish a mandatory training program for persons described in paragraph (3) to provide streamlined training on certifying whether a small business concern qualifies as a small business concern owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals under this section and section 47107(e).

'(2) Implementation.—The training program may be implemented by one or more private entities approved by the Secretary.

(3) PARTICIPANTS.—A person referred to in paragraph (1) is an official or agent of an airport sponsor-

"(A) who is required to provide a written assurance under this section or section 47107(e) that the airport owner or operator will meet the percentage goal of subsection (b) of this section or section 47107(e)(1), as the case may be; or

'(B) who is responsible for determining whether or not a small business concern qualifies as a small business concern owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals under this section or section 47107(e).

(c) Inspector General Report on Partici-PATION IN FAA PROGRAMS BY DISADVANTAGED SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS.

(1) IN GENERAL.—For each of fiscal years 2013 through 2015, the Inspector General of the Department of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the number of new small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, including those owned by veterans, that participated in the programs and activities funded using the amounts made available under this

(2) NEW SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS.—For purposes of subsection (a), a new small business concern is a small business concern that did not participate in the programs and activities described in subsection (a) in a previous fiscal

(3) CONTENTS.—The report shall include—

(A) a list of the top 25 and bottom 25 large and medium hub airports in terms of providing opportunities for small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals to participate in the programs and activities funded using the amounts made available under this Act:

(B) the results of an assessment, to be conducted by the Inspector General, on the reasons why the top airports have been successful in providing such opportunities; and

(C) recommendations to the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration and Congress on methods for other airports to achieve results similar to those of the top airports.

Section 106(m) is amended in the last sentence by inserting "with or" before "without reimbursement"

SEC. 204. CHIEF NEXTGEN OFFICER.

Section 106 is amended by adding at the end the following:

- "(s) CHIEF NEXTGEN OFFICER.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—
- "(A) APPOINTMENT.—There shall be a Chief NextGen Officer appointed by the Administrator, with the approval of the Secretary. The Chief NextGen Officer shall report directly to the Administrator and shall be subject to the authority of the Administrator.
- "(B) QUALIFICATIONS.—The Chief NextGen Officer shall have a demonstrated ability in management and knowledge of or experience in aviation and systems engineering.
- "(C) TERM.—The Chief NextGen Officer shall be appointed for a term of 5 years.
- "(D) REMOVAL.—The Chief NextGen Officer shall serve at the pleasure of the Administrator, except that the Administrator shall make every effort to ensure stability and continuity in the leadership of the implementation of NextGen.
- "(E) VACANCY.—Any individual appointed to fill a vacancy in the position of Chief NextGen Officer occurring before the expiration of the term for which the individual's predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of that term.

"(2) COMPENSATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Chief NextGen Officer shall be paid at an annual rate of basic pay to be determined by the Administrator. The annual rate may not exceed the annual compensation paid under section 102 of title 3. The Chief NextGen Officer shall be subject to the postemployment provisions of section 207 of title 18 as if the position of Chief NextGen Officer were described in section 207(c)(2)(A)(i) of that title

"(B) BONUS.—In addition to the annual rate of basic pay authorized by subparagraph (A), the Chief NextGen Officer may receive a bonus for any calendar year not to exceed 30 percent of the annual rate of basic pay, based upon the Administrator's evaluation of the Chief NextGen Officer's performance in relation to the performance goals set forth in the performance agreement described in paragraph (3).

"(3) ANNUAL PERFORMANCE AGREEMENT.—The Administrator and the Chief NextGen Officer, in consultation with the Federal Aviation Management Advisory Council, shall enter into an annual performance agreement that sets forth measurable organization and individual goals for the Chief NextGen Officer in key operational areas. The agreement shall be subject to review and reneavitation on an annual basis.

"(4) ANNUAL PERFORMANCE REPORT.—The Chief NextGen Officer shall prepare and transmit to the Secretary of Transportation, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate an annual management report containing such information as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

"(5) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The responsibilities of the Chief NextGen Officer include the following:

- "(A) Implementing NextGen activities and budgets across all program offices of the Federal Aviation Administration.
- "(B) Coordinating the implementation of NextGen activities with the Office of Management and Budget.
- "(C) Reviewing and providing advice on the Administration's modernization programs, budget, and cost accounting system with respect to NextGen.
- "(D) With respect to the budget of the Administration—
- "(i) developing a budget request of the Administration related to the implementation of NextGen;
- "(ii) submitting such budget request to the Administrator; and
- "(iii) ensuring that the budget request supports the annual and long-range strategic plans of the Administration with respect to NextGen.
- "(E) Consulting with the Administrator on the Capital Investment Plan of the Administration prior to its submission to Congress.
- "(F) Developing an annual NextGen implementation plan.
- "(G) Ensuring that NextGen implementation activities are planned in such a manner as to require that system architecture is designed to allow for the incorporation of novel and currently unknown technologies into NextGen in the future and that current decisions do not bias future decisions unfairly in favor of existing technology at the expense of innovation.
- "(H) Coordinating with the NextGen Joint Planning and Development Office with respect to facilitating cooperation among all Federal agencies whose operations and interests are affected by the implementation of NextGen.

"(6) EXCEPTION.—If the Administrator appoints as the Chief NextGen Officer, pursuant to paragraph (1)(A), an Executive Schedule employee covered by section 5315 of title 5, then paragraphs (1)(B), (1)(C), (2), and (3) of this subsection shall not apply to such employee.

"(7) NEXTGEN DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'NextGen' means the Next Generation Air Transportation System.".

- (2) by striking subparagraphs (B) and (C); and
- (3) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following:
- "(B) runway lighting and airport surface visual and other navigation aids;
- "(C) apparatus, equipment, software, or service for distributing aeronautical and meteorological information to air traffic control facilities or aircraft:
- "(D) communication, navigation, or surveillance equipment for air-to-ground or air-to-air applications;":
- (4) in subparagraph (E) (as redesignated by paragraph (I) of this section)—
- (A) by striking "another structure" and inserting "any structure, equipment,"; and
- (B) by striking the period at the end and inserting ": and"; and
  - (5) by adding at the end the following:
- "(F) buildings, equipment, and systems dedicated to the national airspace system.".

SEC. 206. CLARIFICATION TO ACQUISITION RE-FORM AUTHORITY.

Section 40110(c) is amended—

- (1) by inserting "and" after the semicolon in paragraph (3):
  - (2) by striking paragraph (4); and
- (3) by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (4).

SEC. 207. ASSISTANCE TO FOREIGN AVIATION AUTHORITIES.

Section 40113(e) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

- (A) by inserting "(whether public or private)" after "authorities"; and (B) by striking "safety." and inserting "safety."
- (B) by striking "safety." and inserting "safety or efficiency. The Administrator is authorized to participate in, and submit offers in response to, competitions to provide these services, and to contract with foreign aviation authorities to provide these services consistent with section 106(1)(6).";
- (2) in paragraph (2) by adding at the end the following: "The Administrator is authorized, notwithstanding any other provision of law or policy, to accept payments for services provided under this subsection in arrears."; and
- (3) by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:
- "(3) Crediting Appropriations.—Funds received by the Administrator pursuant to this section shall—
- "(A) be credited to the appropriation current when the amount is received:
- "(B) be merged with and available for the purposes of such appropriation; and

"(C) remain available until expended.". SEC. 208. NEXT GENERATION AIR TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM JOINT PLANNING

- AND DEVELOPMENT OFFICE.
  (a) REDESIGNATION OF JPDO DIRECTOR TO ASSOCIATE ADMINISTRATOR.—
- (1) ASSOCIATE ADMINISTRATOR FOR NEXT GENERATION AIR TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM PLANNING, DEVELOPMENT, AND INTERAGENCY COORDINATION.—Section 709(a) of the Vision 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note; 117 Stat. 2582) is amended—
- (A) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), respectively; and

- (B) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:
  "(2) The head of the Office shall be the Asso-
- "(2) The head of the Office shall be the Associate Administrator for Next Generation Air Transportation System Planning, Development, and Interagency Coordination, who shall be appointed by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, with the approval of the Secretary. The Administrator shall appoint the Associate Administrator after consulting with the Chairman of the Next Generation Senior Policy Committee and providing advanced notice to the other members of that Committee."
- (2) RESPONSIBILITIES.—Section 709(a)(3) of such Act (as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this subsection) is amended—
- (A) in subparagraph (G) by striking "; and" and inserting a semicolon:
- (B) in subparagraph (H) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and
- (C) by adding at the end the following: "(I) establishing specific quantitative goals for the safety, capacity, efficiency, performance, and environmental impacts of each phase of Next Generation Air Transportation System planning and development activities and measuring actual operational experience against those goals, taking into account noise pollution reduction concerns of affected communities to the extent practicable in establishing the environmental goals:
- "(J) working to ensure global interoperability of the Next Generation Air Transportation System:
- "(K) working to ensure the use of weather information and space weather information in the Next Generation Air Transportation System as soon as possible;
- "(L) overseeing, with the Administrator and in consultation with the Chief NextGen Officer, the selection of products or outcomes of research and development activities that should be moved to a demonstration phase; and
- "(M) maintaining a baseline modeling and simulation environment for testing and evaluating alternative concepts to satisfy Next Generation Air Transportation System enterprise architecture requirements."
- (3) COOPERATION WITH OTHER FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Section 709(a)(4) of such Act (as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this subsection) is amended—
- (A) by striking "(4)" and inserting "(4)(A)"; and
  - (B) by adding at the end the following:
- "(B) The Secretary of Defense, the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Homeland Security, and the head of any other Federal agency from which the Secretary of Transportation requests assistance under subparagraph (A) shall designate a senior official in the agency to be responsible for—
- "(i) carrying out the activities of the agency relating to the Next Generation Air Transportation System in coordination with the Office, including the execution of all aspects of the work of the agency in developing and implementing the integrated work plan described in subsection (b)(5):
- "(ii) serving as a liaison for the agency in activities of the agency relating to the Next Generation Air Transportation System and coordinating with other Federal agencies involved in activities relating to the System; and
- "(iii) ensuring that the agency meets its obligations as set forth in any memorandum of understanding executed by or on behalf of the agency relating to the Next Generation Air Transportation System.
- "(C) The head of a Federal agency referred to in subparagraph (B) shall—
- "(i) ensure that the responsibilities of the agency relating to the Next Generation Air

- Transportation System are clearly communicated to the senior official of the agency designated under subparagraph (B);
- "(ii) ensure that the performance of the senior official in carrying out the responsibilities of the agency relating to the Next Generation Air Transportation System is reflected in the official's annual performance evaluations and compensation;
- "(iii) establish or designate an office within the agency to carry out its responsibilities under the memorandum of understanding under the supervision of the designated official; and
- "(iv) ensure that the designated official has sufficient budgetary authority and staff resources to carry out the agency's Next Generation Air Transportation System responsibilities as set forth in the integrated plan under subsection (b).
- "(D) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, the head of each Federal agency that has responsibility for carrying out any activity under the integrated plan under subsection (b) shall execute a memorandum of understanding with the Office obligating that agency to carry out the activity."
- (4) COORDINATION WITH OMB.—Section 709(a) of such Act (117 Stat. 2582) is further amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(6)(A) The Office shall work with the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to develop a process whereby the Director will identify projects related to the Next Generation Air Transportation System across the agencies referred to in paragraph (4)(A) and consider the Next Generation Air Transportation System as a unified cross-agency program.
- "(B) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, to the extent practicable, shall—
- "(i) ensure that—
- "(I) each Federal agency covered by the plan has sufficient funds requested in the President's budget, as submitted under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for each fiscal year covered by the plan to carry out its responsibilities under the plan; and
- "(II) the development and implementation of the Next Generation Air Transportation System remains on schedule;
- "(ii) include, in the President's budget, a statement of the portion of the estimated budget of each Federal agency covered by the plan that relates to the activities of the agency under the Next Generation Air Transportation System; and
- "(iii) identify and justify as part of the President's budget submission any inconsistencies between the plan and amounts requested in the budget.
- "(7) The Associate Administrator for Next Generation Air Transportation System Planning, Development, and Interagency Coordination shall be a voting member of the Joint Resources Council of the Federal Aviation Administration."
- (b) INTEGRATED PLAN.—Section 709(b) of such Act (117 Stat. 2583) is amended—
- (1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1)—
- (A) by striking "meets air" and inserting "meets anticipated future air"; and
- (B) by striking "beyond those currently included in the Federal Aviation Administration's operational evolution plan";
- (2) at the end of paragraph (3) by striking "and";
- (3) at the end of paragraph (4) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and
- (4) by adding at the end the following:
- "(5) a multiagency integrated work plan for the Next Generation Air Transportation System that includes—
- "(A) an outline of the activities required to achieve the end-state architecture, as expressed

- in the concept of operations and enterprise architecture documents, that identifies each Federal agency or other entity responsible for each activity in the outline:
- "(B) details on a year-by-year basis of specific accomplishments, activities, research requirements, rulemakings, policy decisions, and other milestones of progress for each Federal agency or entity conducting activities relating to the Next Generation Air Transportation System;
- "(C) for each element of the Next Generation Air Transportation System, an outline, on a year-by-year basis, of what is to be accomplished in that year toward meeting the Next Generation Air Transportation System's endstate architecture, as expressed in the concept of operations and enterprise architecture documents, as well as identifying each Federal agency or other entity that will be responsible for each component of any research, development, or implementation program;
- "(D) an estimate of all necessary expenditures on a year-by-year basis, including a statement of each Federal agency or entity's responsibility for costs and available resources, for each stage of development from the basic research stage through the demonstration and implementation phase:
- "(E) a clear explanation of how each step in the development of the Next Generation Air Transportation System will lead to the following step and of the implications of not successfully completing a step in the time period described in the integrated work plan;
- "(F) a transition plan for the implementation of the Next Generation Air Transportation System that includes date-specific milestones for the implementation of new capabilities into the national airspace system:
- "(G) date-specific timetables for meeting the environmental goals identified in subsection (a)(3)(I): and
- "(H) a description of potentially significant operational or workforce changes resulting from deployment of the Next Generation Air Transportation System.".
- (c) NEXTGEN IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Section 709(d) of such Act (117 Stat. 2584) is amended to read as follows:
- "(d) NEXTGEN IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—The Administrator shall develop and publish annually the document known as the NextGen Implementation Plan, or any successor document, that provides a detailed description of how the agency is implementing the Next Generation Air Transportation System.".
- (d) Contingency Planning.—The Associate Administrator for Next Generation Air Transportation System Planning, Development, and Interagency Coordination shall, as part of the design of the System, develop contingency plans for dealing with the degradation of the System in the event of a natural disaster, major equipment failure, or act of terrorism.

SEC. 209. NEXT GENERATION AIR TRANSPORTATION SENIOR POLICY COMMITTEE.

- (a) MEETINGS.—Section 710(a) of the Vision 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act (49 U.S.C. 40101 note; 117 Stat. 2584) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following "and shall meet at least twice each year".
- (b) ANNUAL REPORT.—Section 710 of such Act (117 Stat. 2584) is amended by adding at the end the following:
  - "(e) Annual Report.—
- "(1) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, and annually thereafter on the date of submission of the President's budget request to Congress under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report summarizing the progress made in carrying out the integrated work plan required by section 709(b)(5) and any changes in that plan.

- "(2) CONTENTS —The report shall include—
- "(A) a copy of the updated integrated work plan;
- "(B) a description of the progress made in carrying out the integrated work plan and any changes in that plan, including any changes based on funding shortfalls and limitations set by the Office of Management and Budget;
  - "(C) a detailed description of—
- "(i) the success or failure of each item of the integrated work plan for the previous year and relevant information as to why any milestone was not met; and
- "(ii) the impact of not meeting the milestone and what actions will be taken in the future to account for the failure to complete the milestone:
- "(D) an explanation of any change to future years in the integrated work plan and the reasons for such change; and
- "(E) an identification of the levels of funding for each agency participating in the integrated work plan devoted to programs and activities under the plan for the previous fiscal year and in the President's budget request."

SEC. 210. IMPROVED MANAGEMENT OF PROPERTY INVENTORY.

Section 40110(a) is amended by striking paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting the following: "(2) may construct and improve laboratories and other test facilities; and

- "(3) may dispose of any interest in property for adequate compensation, and the amount so received shall—
- "(A) be credited to the appropriation current when the amount is received;
- "(B) be merged with and available for the purposes of such appropriation; and
- "(C) remain available until expended."

SEC. 211. AUTOMATIC DEPENDENT SURVEIL-LANCE-BROADCAST SERVICES.

- (a) REVIEW BY DOT INSPECTOR GENERAL.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—The Inspector General of the Department of Transportation shall conduct a review concerning the Federal Aviation Administration's award and oversight of any contracts entered into by the Administration to provide ADS-B services for the national airspace system.
- (2) CONTENTS.—The review shall include, at a minimum—
- (A) an examination of how the Administration manages program risks;
- (B) an assessment of expected benefits attributable to the deployment of ADS-B services, including the Administration's plans for implementation of advanced operational procedures and air-to-air applications, as well as the extent to which ground radar will be retained;
- (C) an assessment of the Administration's analysis of specific operational benefits, and benefit/costs analyses of planned operational benefits conducted by the Administration, for ADS-B In and ADS-B Out avionics equipage for airspace users:
- (D) a determination of whether the Administration has established sufficient mechanisms to ensure that all design, acquisition, operation, and maintenance requirements have been met by the contractor:
- (E) an assessment of whether the Administration and any contractors are meeting cost, schedule, and performance milestones, as measured against the original baseline of the Administration's program for providing ADS-B services;
- (F) an assessment of how security issues are being addressed in the overall design and implementation of the ADS-B system;
- (G) identification of any potential operational or workforce changes resulting from deployment of ADS-B; and

- (H) any other matters or aspects relating to contract implementation and oversight that the Inspector General determines merit attention.
- (3) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Inspector General shall submit, periodically (and on at least an annual basis), to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the review conducted under this subsection.
  - (b) RULEMAKING.-
- (1) ADS-B In.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding to issue guidelines and regulations relating to ADS-B In technology that—
- (A) identify the ADS-B In technology that will be required under NextGen;
- (B) subject to paragraph (2), require all aircraft operating in capacity constrained airspace, at capacity constrained airports, or in any other airspace deemed appropriate by the Administrator to be equipped with ADS-B In technology by 2020; and
  - (C) identify-
- (i) the type of avionics required of aircraft for all classes of airspace;
- (ii) the expected costs associated with the avionics; and
- (iii) the expected uses and benefits of the avionics.
- (2) READINESS VERIFICATION.—Before the Administrator completes an ADS-B In equipage rulemaking proceeding or issues an interim or final rule pursuant to paragraph (1), the Chief NextGen Officer shall verify that—
- (A) the necessary ground infrastructure is installed and functioning properly;
- (B) certification standards have been approved; and
- (C) appropriate operational platforms interface safely and efficiently.
- (c) Use of ADS-B Technology.—
- (1) PLANS.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall develop, in consultation with appropriate employee and industry groups, a plan for the use of ADS-B technology for surveillance and active air traffic control.
  - (2) CONTENTS.—The plan shall—
- (A) include provisions to test the use of ADS-B technology for surveillance and active air traffic control in specific regions of the United States with the most congested airspace;
- (B) identify the equipment required at air traffic control facilities and the training required for air traffic controllers;
- (C) identify procedures, to be developed in consultation with appropriate employee and industry groups, to conduct air traffic management in mixed equipage environments; and
- (D) establish a policy in test regions referred to in subparagraph (A), in consultation with appropriate employee and industry groups, to provide incentives for equipage with ADS-B technology, including giving priority to aircraft equipped with such technology before the 2020 equipage deadline.

SEC. 212. EXPERT REVIEW OF ENTERPRISE AR-CHITECTURE FOR NEXTGEN.

- (a) REVIEW.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall enter into an arrangement with the National Research Council to review the enterprise architecture for the NextGen.
- (b) CONTENTS.—At a minimum, the review to be conducted under subsection (a) shall—
- (1) highlight the technical activities, including human-system design, organizational design, and other safety and human factor aspects of the system, that will be necessary to successfully transition current and planned modernization programs to the future system envisioned by the Joint Planning and Development Office of the Administration:

- (2) assess technical, cost, and schedule risk for the software development that will be necessary to achieve the expected benefits from a highly automated air traffic management system and the implications for ongoing modernization projects; and
- (3) determine how risks with automation efforts for the NextGen can be mitigated based on the experiences of other public or private entities in developing complex, software-intensive systems.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containing the results of the review conducted pursuant to subsection (a).

SEC. 213. ACCELERATION OF NEXTGEN TECHNOLOGIES.

- (a) Operational Evolution Partnership (OEP) Airport Procedures.—
- (1) OEP AIRPORTS REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall publish a report, after consultation with representatives of appropriate Administration employee groups, airport operators, air carriers, general aviation representatives, aircraft and avionics manufacturers, and third parties that have received letters of qualification from the Administration to design and validate required navigation performance flight paths for public use (in this section referred to as "qualified third parties") that includes the following:
- (A) RNP/RNAV OPERATIONS FOR OEP AIR-PORTS.—The required navigation performance and area navigation operations, including the procedures to be developed, certified, and published and the air traffic control operational changes, to maximize the fuel efficiency and airspace capacity of NextGen commercial operations at each of the 35 operational evolution partnership airports identified by the Administration and any medium or small hub airport located within the same metroplex area considered appropriate by the Administrator. The Administrator shall, to the maximum extent practicable. avoid overlays of existing flight procedures, but if unavoidable, the Administrator shall clearly identify each required navigation performance and area navigation procedure that is an overlay of an existing instrument flight procedure and the reason why such an overlay was used.
- (B) COORDINATION AND IMPLEMENTATION ACTIVITIES FOR OEP AIRPORTS.—A description of the activities and operational changes and approvals required to coordinate and utilize the procedures at OEP airports.
- (C) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN FOR OEP AIR-PORTS.—A plan for implementing the procedures for OEP airports under subparagraph (A) that establishes—
- (i) clearly defined budget, schedule, project organization, and leadership requirements;
- (ii) specific implementation and transition steps;
- (iii) baseline and performance metrics for—
- (I) measuring the Administration's progress in implementing the plan, including the percentage utilization of required navigation performance in the national airspace system; and
- (II) achieving measurable fuel burn and carbon dioxide emissions reductions compared to current performance;
- (iv) expedited environmental review procedures and processes for timely environmental approval of area navigation and required navigation performance that offer significant efficiency improvements as determined by baseline and performance metrics under clause (iii):

- (v) coordination and communication mechanisms with qualified third parties, if applicable:
- (vi) plans to address human factors, training, and other issues for air traffic controllers surrounding the adoption of RNP procedures in the en route and terminal environments, including in a mixed operational environment; and
- (vii) a lifecycle management strategy for RNP procedures to be developed by qualified third parties, if applicable.
- (D) ADDITIONAL PROCEDURES FOR OEP AIR-PORTS.—A process for the identification, certification, and publication of additional required navigation performance and area navigation procedures that may provide operational benefits at OEP airports, and any medium or small hub airport located within the same metroplex area as the OEP airport, in the future.
- (2) IMPLEMENTATION SCHEDULE FOR OEP AIR-PORTS.—The Administrator shall certify, publish, and implement—
- (A) not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, 30 percent of the required procedures at OEP airports;
- (B) not later than 36 months after the date of enactment of this Act, 60 percent of the required procedures at OEP airports; and
- (C) before June 30, 2015, 100 percent of the required procedures at OEP airports.
  - (b) NON-OEP AIRPORTS.—
- (1) NON-OEP AIRPORTS REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall publish a report, after consultation with representatives of appropriate Administration employee groups, airport operators, air carriers, general aviation representatives, aircraft and avionics manufacturers, and third parties that have received letters of qualification from the Administration to design and validate required navigation performance flight paths for public use (in this section referred to as "qualified third parties") that includes the following:
- (A) RNP OPERATIONS FOR NON-OEP AIRPORTS.— A list of required navigation performance procedures (as defined in FAA order 8260.52(d)) to be developed, certified, and published, and the air traffic control operational changes, to maximize the fuel efficiency and airspace capacity of NextGen commercial operations at 35 non-OEP small, medium, and large hub airports other than those referred to in subsection (a)(1). The Administrator shall choose such non-OEP airports considered appropriate by the Administrator to produce maximum operational benefits, including improved fuel efficiency and emissions reductions that do not have public RNP procedures that produce such benefits on the date of enactment of this Act. The Administrator shall, to the maximum extent practicable, avoid overlays of existing flight procedures, but if unavoidable, the Administrator shall clearly identifu each required navigation performance procedure that is an overlay of an existing instrument flight procedure and the reason why such an overlay was used.
- (B) COORDINATION AND IMPLEMENTATION ACTIVITIES FOR NON-OEP AIRPORTS.—A description of the activities and operational changes and approvals required to coordinate and to utilize the procedures required by subparagraph (A) at each of the airports described in such subparagraph.
- (C) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN FOR NON-OEP AIR-PORTS.—A plan for implementation of the procedures required by subparagraph (A) that establishes—
- (i) clearly defined budget, schedule, project organization, and leadership requirements;
- (ii) specific implementation and transition steps:
- (iii) coordination and communications mechanisms with qualified third parties;

- (iv) plans to address human factors, training, and other issues for air traffic controllers surrounding the adoption of RNP procedures in the en route and terminal environments, including in a mixed operational environment:
- (v) baseline and performance metrics for—
- (I) measuring the Administration's progress in implementing the plan, including the percentage utilization of required navigation performance in the national airspace system; and
- (II) achieving measurable fuel burn and carbon dioxide emissions reduction compared to current performance;
- (vi) expedited environmental review procedures and processes for timely environmental approval of area navigation and required navigation performance that offer significant efficiency improvements as determined by baseline and performance metrics established under clause (v):
- (vii) a description of the software and database information, such as a current version of the Noise Integrated Routing System or the Integrated Noise Model that the Administration will need to make available to qualified third parties to enable those third parties to design procedures that will meet the broad range of requirements of the Administration; and
- (viii) lifecycle management strategy for RNP procedures to be developed by qualified third parties, if applicable.
- (D) ADDITIONAL PROCEDURES FOR NON-OEP AIRPORTS.—A process for the identification, certification, and publication of additional required navigation performance procedures that may provide operational benefits at non-OEP airports in the future.
- (2) IMPLEMENTATION SCHEDULE FOR NON-OEP AIRPORTS.—The Administrator shall certify, publish, and implement—
- (A) not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, 25 percent of the required procedures for non-OEP airports;
- (B) not later than 36 months after the date of enactment of this Act, 50 percent of the required procedures for non-OEP airports; and
- (C) before June 30, 2016, 100 percent of the required procedures for non-OEP airports.
- (c) COORDINATED AND EXPEDITED REVIEW.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Navigation performance and area navigation procedures developed, certified, published, or implemented under this section shall be presumed to be covered by a categorical exclusion (as defined in section 1508.4 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations) under chapter 3 of FAA Order 1050.1E unless the Administrator determines that extraordinary circumstances exist with respect to the procedure.
- (2) NEXTGEN PROCEDURES.—Any navigation performance or other performance based navigation procedure developed, certified, published, or implemented that, in the determination of the Administrator, would result in measurable reductions in fuel consumption, carbon dioxide emissions, and noise, on a per flight basis, as compared to aircraft operations that follow existing instrument flight rules procedures in the same airspace, shall be presumed to have no significant affect on the quality of the human environment and the Administrator shall issue and file a categorical exclusion for the new procedure.
- (d) DEPLOYMENT PLAN FOR NATIONWIDE DATA COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a plan for implementation of a nationwide data communications system. The plan shall include—
- (1) clearly defined budget, schedule, project organization, and leadership requirements;

- (2) specific implementation and transition steps; and
- (3) baseline and performance metrics for measuring the Administration's progress in implementing the plan.
  - (e) IMPROVED PERFORMANCE STANDARDS.
- (1) ASSESSMENT OF WORK BEING PERFORMED UNDER NEXTGEN IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—The Administrator shall clearly outline in the NextGen Implementation Plan document of the Administration the work being performed under the plan to determine—
- (Å) whether utilization of ADS-B, RNP, and other technologies as part of NextGen implementation will display the position of aircraft more accurately and frequently to enable a more efficient use of existing airspace and result in reduced consumption of aviation fuel and aircraft engine emissions; and
- (B) the feasibility of reducing aircraft separation standards in a safe manner as a result of the implementation of such technologies.
- (2) AIRCRAFT SEPARATION STANDARDS.—If the Administrator determines that the standards referred to in paragraph (1)(B) can be reduced safely, the Administrator shall include in the NextGen Implementation Plan a timetable for implementation of such reduced standards.
- (f) THIRD-PARTY USAGE.—The Administration shall establish a program under which the Administrator is authorized to use qualified third parties in the development, testing, and maintenance of flight procedures.

SEC. 214. PERFORMANCE METRICS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish and begin tracking national airspace system performance metrics, including, at a minimum, metrics with respect to—
- (1) actual arrival and departure rates per hour measured against the currently published aircraft arrival rate and aircraft departure rate for the 35 operational evolution partnership airports;
  - (2) average gate-to-gate times;
  - (3) fuel burned between key city pairs;
- (4) operations using the advanced navigation procedures, including performance based navigation procedures;
- (5) the average distance flown between key city pairs;
- (6) the time between pushing back from the gate and taking off:
  - (7) continuous climb or descent;
- (8) average gate arrival delay for all arrivals; (9) flown versus filed flight times for key city
- (10) implementation of NextGen Implementation Plan, or any successor document, capabilities designed to reduce emissions and fuel consumption;
- (11) the Administration's unit cost of providing air traffic control services; and
- (12) runway safety, including runway incursions, operational errors, and loss of standard separation events.
- (b) BASELINES.—The Administrator, in consultation with aviation industry stakeholders, shall identify baselines for each of the metrics established under subsection (a) and appropriate methods to measure deviations from the
- (c) PUBLICATION.—The Administrator shall make data obtained under subsection (a) available to the public in a searchable, sortable, and downloadable format through the Web site of the Administration and other appropriate media.
- (d) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that contains—

- (1) a description of the metrics that will be used to measure the Administration's progress in implementing NextGen capabilities and operational results:
- (2) information on any additional metrics developed; and
- (3) a process for holding the Administration accountable for meeting or exceeding the metrics baselines identified in subsection (b).

SEC. 215. CERTIFICATION STANDARDS AND RE-SOURCES.

- (a) PROCESS FOR CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall develop a plan to accelerate and streamline the process for certification of NextGen technologies, including—
- (1) establishment of updated project plans and timelines:
- (2) identification of the specific activities needed to certify NextGen technologies, including the establishment of NextGen technical requirements for the manufacture of equipage, installation of equipage, airline operational procedures, pilot training standards, air traffic control procedures, and air traffic controller training:
- (3) identification of staffing requirements for the Air Certification Service and the Flight Standards Service, taking into consideration the leveraging of assistance from third parties and designees:
- (4) establishment of a program under which the Administration will use third parties in the certification process; and
- (5) establishment of performance metrics to measure the Administration's progress.
- (b) CERTIFICATION INTEGRITY.—The Administrator shall ensure that equipment, systems, or services used in the national airspace system meet appropriate certification requirements regardless of whether the equipment, system, or service is publically or privately owned.

SEC. 216. SURFACE SYSTEMS ACCELERATION.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Chief Operating Officer of the Air Traffic Organization shall—
- (1) evaluate the Airport Surface Detection Equipment-Model X program for its potential contribution to implementation of the NextGen initiative:
- (2) evaluate airport surveillance technologies and associated collaborative surface management software for potential contributions to implementation of NextGen surface management;
- (3) accelerate implementation of the program referred to in paragraph (1); and
- (4) carry out such additional duties as the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may require.
- (b) Expedited Certification and Utilization.—The Administrator shall—
- (1) consider options for expediting the certification of Ground-Based Augmentation System technology; and
- (2) develop a plan to utilize such a system at the 35 operational evolution partnership airports by December 31, 2012.

SEC. 217. INCLUSION OF STAKEHOLDERS IN AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL MODERNIZATION PROJECTS

- (a) PROCESS FOR EMPLOYEE INCLUSION.—Notwithstanding any other law or agreement, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a process or processes for including qualified employees selected by each exclusive collective bargaining representative of employees of the Administration impacted by the air traffic control modernization process to serve in a collaborative and expert capacity in the planning and development of air traffic control modernization projects, including NextGen.
- (b) ADHERENCE TO DEADLINES.—Participants in these processes shall adhere, to the greatest extent possible, to all deadlines and milestones established pursuant to this title.

- (c) No CHANGE IN EMPLOYEE STATUS.—Participation in these processes by an employee shall not—
- (1) serve as a waiver of any bargaining obligations or rights:
- (2) entitle the employee to any additional compensation or benefits with the exception of a per diem, if appropriate: or
- (3) entitle the employee to prevent or unduly delay the exercise of management prerogatives.
- (d) Working Groups.—Except in extraordinary circumstances, the Administrator shall not pay overtime related to work group participation.
- (e) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall report to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate on the implementation of this section.

SEC. 218. AIRSPACE REDESIGN.

- (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:
- (1) The airspace redesign efforts of the Federal Aviation Administration will play a critical near-term role in enhancing capacity, reducing delays, transitioning to more flexible routing, and ultimately saving money in fuel costs for airlines and airspace users.
- (2) The critical importance of airspace redesign efforts is underscored by the fact that they are highlighted in strategic plans of the Administration, including Flight Plan 2009–2013 and the NextGen Implementation Plan.
- (3) Funding cuts have led to delays and deferrals of critical capacity enhancing airspace redesign efforts.
- (4) New runways planned for the period of fiscal years 2011 and 2012 will not provide estimated capacity benefits without additional funds.
- (b) Noise Impacts of New York/New Jersey/ Philadelphia Metropolitan Area Airspace Redesign.—
- (1) MONITORING.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in conjunction with the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey and the Philadelphia International Airport, shall monitor the noise impacts of the New York/New Jersey/Philadelphia Metropolitan Area Airspace Redesign.
- (2) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year following the first day of completion of the New York/New Jersey/Philadelphia Metropolitan Area Airspace Redesign, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report on the findings of the Administrator with respect to monitoring conducted under paragraph (1).

SEC. 219. STUDY ON FEASIBILITY OF DEVELOP-MENT OF A PUBLIC INTERNET WEB-BASED RESOURCE ON LOCATIONS OF POTENTIAL AVIATION OBSTRUC-TIONS.

- (a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall carry out a study on the feasibility of developing a publicly searchable, Internet Web-based resource that provides information regarding the height and latitudinal and longitudinal locations of guywire and free-standing tower obstructions.
- (b) Considerations.—In conducting the study, the Administrator shall consult with affected industries and appropriate Federal agencies.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit a report to the appropriate committees of Congress on the results of the study.

SEC. 220. NEXTGEN RESEARCH AND DEVELOP-MENT CENTER OF EXCELLENCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may enter into an agreement, on a competitive basis, to assist in the establishment of a center of excellence for the research and development of NextGen technologies.

- (b) FUNCTIONS.—The Administrator shall ensure that the center established under subsection (a)—
- (1) leverages resources and partnerships, including appropriate programs of the Administration, to enhance the research and development of NextGen technologies by academia and industry; and
- (2) provides educational, technical, and analytical assistance to the Administration and other Federal departments and agencies with responsibilities to research and develop NextGen technologies.

SEC. 221. PUBLIC-PRIVATE PARTNERSHIPS.

- (a) In GENERAL.—The Secretary may establish an avionics equipage incentive program for the purpose of equipping general aviation and commercial aircraft with communications, surveillance, navigation, and other avionics equipment as determined by the Secretary to be in the interest of achieving NextGen capabilities for such aircraft.
- (b) NEXTGEN PUBLIC-PRIVATE PARTNER-SHIPS.—The incentive program established under subsection (a) shall, at a minimum—
- (1) be based on public-private partnership principles; and
- (2) leverage and maximize the use of private sector capital
- (c) FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS.—Subject to the availability of appropriated funds, the Secretary may use financial instruments to facilitate public-private financing for the equipage of general aviation and commercial aircraft registered under section 44103 of title 49, United States Code. To the extent appropriations are not made available, the Secretary may establish the program, provided the costs are covered by the fees and premiums authorized by subsection (d)(2). For purposes of this section, the term "financial instruments" means loan guarantees and other credit assistance designed to leverage and maximize private sector capital.
  - (d) PROTECTION OF THE TAXPAYER.—
- (1) LIMITATION ON PRINCIPAL.—The amount of any guarantee under this program shall be limited to 90 percent of the principal amount of the underlying loan.
- (2) COLLATERAL, FEES, AND PREMIUMS.—The Secretary shall require applicants for the incentive program to post collateral and pay such fees and premiums if feasible, as determined by the Secretary, to offset costs to the Government of potential defaults, and agree to performance measures that the Secretary considers necessary and in the best interest of implementing the NextGen program.
- (3) USE OF FUNDS.—Applications for this program shall be limited to equipment that is installed on general aviation or commercial aircraft and is necessary for communications, surveillance, navigation, or other purposes determined by the Secretary to be in the interests of achieving NextGen capabilities for commercial and general aviation.
- (e) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority of the Secretary to issue such financial instruments under this section shall terminate 5 years after the date of the establishment of the incentive program.

SEC. 222. OPERATIONAL INCENTIVES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue a report that—
- (1) identifies incentive options to encourage the equipage of aircraft with NextGen technologies, including a policy that gives priority to aircraft equipped with ADS-B technology;
- (2) identifies the costs and benefits of each option; and
- (3) includes input from industry stakeholders, including passenger and cargo air carriers, aerospace manufacturers, and general aviation aircraft operators.

(b) DEADLINE.—The Administrator shall issue the report before the earlier of-

(1) the date that is 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act: or

(2) the date on which aircraft are required to be equipped with ADS-B technology pursuant to the rulemaking under section 211(b).

SEC. 223. EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS.

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make payments to the Department of Defense for the education of dependent children of those Administration employees in Puerto Rico and Guam as they are subject to transfer by policy and practice and meet the eligibility requirements of section 2164(c) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 224. AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER STAFFING INITIATIVES AND ANALYSIS.

As soon as practicable, and not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall-

(1) ensure, to the extent practicable, a sufficient number of contract instructors, classroom space (including off-site locations as needed), and simulators to allow for an increase in the number of air traffic controllers at air traffic control facilities:

(2) distribute, to the extent practicable, the placement of certified professional air traffic controllers-in-training and developmental air traffic controllers at facilities evenly across the calendar year in order to avoid training bottlenecks;

(3) initiate an analysis, to be conducted in consultation with the exclusive bargaining representative of air traffic controllers certified under section 7111 of title 5, United States Code, of scheduling processes and practices, including overtime scheduling practices at those facilities;

(4) provide, to the extent practicable and where appropriate, priority to certified professional air traffic controllers-in-training when filling staffing vacancies at facilities;

(5) assess training programs at air traffic control facilities with below-average success rates to determine if training is being carried out in accordance with Administration standards, and conduct exit interview analyses with all candidates to determine potential weaknesses in training protocols, or in the execution of such training protocols; and

(6) prioritize, to the extent practicable, such efforts to address the recommendations for the facilities identified in the Department of Transportation's Office of the Inspector General Report Number: AV-2009-047.

SEC. 225. REPORTS ON STATUS OF GREENER SKIES PROJECT.

(a) INITIAL REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall submit to Congress a report on the strategy of the Administrator for implementing, on an accelerated basis, the NextGen operational capabilities produced by the Greener Skies project, as recommended in the final report of the RTCA NextGen Mid-Term Implementation Task Force that was issued on September 9, 2009.

(b) Subsequent Reports.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the Administrator submits to Congress the report required by subsection (a) and annually thereafter until the pilot program terminates, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the progress of the Administrator in carrying out the strategy described in the report submitted under subsection (a).

(2) CONTENTS.—Each report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A timeline for full implementation of the strategy described in the report submitted under subsection (a).

(B) A description of the progress made in carrying out such strategy.

(C) A description of the challenges, if any, encountered by the Administrator in carrying out such strategy.

TITLE III—SAFETY

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 301. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF DENIAL OF AIR-MAN CERTIFICATES.

(a) Judicial Review of NTSB Decisions .-Section 44703(d) is amended by adding at the end the following:

(3) A person who is substantially affected by an order of the Board under this subsection, or the Administrator if the Administrator decides that an order of the Board will have a significant adverse impact on carrying out this subtitle, may seek judicial review of the order under section 46110. The Administrator shall be made a party to the judicial review proceedings. The findings of fact of the Board in any such case are conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 1153(c) is amended by striking "section 44709 or" and inserting "section 44703(d), 44709, or"

SEC. 302. RELEASE OF DATA RELATING TO ABANDONED TYPE CERTIFICATES AND CERTIFI-SUPPLEMENTAL TYPE CATES.

Section 44704(a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

(5) Release of Data.

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator may make available upon request, to a person seeking to maintain the airworthiness or develop product improvements of an aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance, engineering data in the possession of the Administration relating to a type certificate or a supplemental type certificate for such aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance, without the consent of the owner of record, if the Administrator determines that-

'(i) the certificate containing the requested data has been inactive for 3 or more years, except that the Administrator may reduce this time if required to address an unsafe condition associated with the product:

'(ii) after using due diligence, the Administrator is unable to find the owner of record, or the owner of record's heir, of the type certificate or supplemental type certificate: and

"(iii) making such data available will enhance aviation safety.

(B) ENGINEERING DATA DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'engineering data' as used with respect to an aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance means type design drawing and specifications for the entire aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance or change to the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance, including the original design data, and any associated supplier data for individual parts or components approved as part of the particular certificate for the aircraft, engine, propeller, or appliance.

"(C) REQUIREMENT TO MAINTAIN DATA.—The Administrator shall maintain engineering data in the possession of the Administration relating to a type certificate or a supplemental type certificate that has been inactive for 3 or more years.'

SEC. 303. DESIGN AND PRODUCTION ORGANIZA-TION CERTIFICATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 44704(e) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) DESIGN AND PRODUCTION ORGANIZATION CERTIFICATES .-

"(1) ISSUANCE.—Beginning January 1, 2013, the Administrator may issue a certificate to a design organization, production organization, or design and production organization to authorize the organization to certify compliance of aircraft, aircraft engines, propellers, and appliances with the requirements and minimum standards prescribed under section 44701(a). An organization holding a certificate issued under this subsection shall be known as a certified design and production organization (in this subsection referred to as a 'CDPO').

'(2) APPLICATIONS.—On receiving an application for a CDPO certificate, the Administrator shall examine and rate the organization submitting the application, in accordance with regulations to be prescribed by the Administrator, to determine whether the organization has adequate engineering, design, and production capabilities, standards, and safeguards to make certifications of compliance as described in para-

(3) Issuance of certificates based on CDPO FINDINGS.—The Administrator may rely on certifications of compliance by a CDPO when making determinations under this section.

(4) Public safety.—The Administrator shall include in a CDPO certificate terms required in the interest of safety.

(5) NO EFFECT ON POWER OF REVOCATION.— Nothing in this subsection affects the authority of the Secretary of Transportation to revoke a certificate.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—Before January 1, 2013, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may continue to issue certificates under section 44704(e) of title 49, United States Code, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—Chapter 447 is amended-

(1) in the heading for section 44704 by striking "and design organization certificates" and inserting ", and design and production organization certificates"; and

(2) in the analysis for such chapter by striking the item relating to section 44704 and inserting the following:

"44704. Type certificates, production certificates, airworthiness certificates, and design and production organization certificates.'

SEC. 304. CABIN CREW COMMUNICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 44728 is amended— (1) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (e) the followina:

'(f) MINIMUM LANGUAGE SKILLS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No person may serve as a flight attendant aboard an aircraft of an air carrier, unless that person has demonstrated to an individual qualified to determine proficiency the ability to read, speak, and write English well enough to-

"(A) read material written in English and comprehend the information;

'(B) speak and understand English sufficiently to provide direction to, and understand and answer questions from, English-speaking individuals;

'(C) write incident reports and statements and log entries and statements; and

"(D) carry out written and oral instructions regarding the proper performance of their duties.

"(2) FOREIGN FLIGHTS—The requirements of paragraph (1) do not apply to a flight attendant serving solely between points outside the United States

(b) FACILITATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall work with air carriers to facilitate compliance with the requirements of section 44728(f) of title 49, United States Code (as amended by this section).

SEC. 305. LINE CHECK EVALUATIONS.

Section 44729(h) is amended-

- (1) by striking paragraph (2); and
- (2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2).

SEC. 306. SAFETY OF AIR AMBULANCE OPERATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 447 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 44730. Helicopter air ambulance operations

- "(a) COMPLIANCE REGULATIONS.-
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, a part 135 certificate holder providing air ambulance services shall comply, whenever medical personnel are onboard the aircraft, with regulations pertaining to weather minimums and flight and duty time under part 135.
- "(2) Exception.—If a certificate holder described in paragraph (1) is operating, or carrying out training, under instrument flight rules, the weather reporting requirement at the destination shall not apply if authorized by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.
- "(b) Final Rule.—Not later than June 1, 2012, the Administrator shall issue a final rule, with respect to the notice of proposed rule-making published in the Federal Register on October 12, 2010 (75 Fed. Reg. 62640), to improve the safety of flight crewmembers, medical personnel, and passengers onboard helicopters providing air ambulance services under part 135.
- "(c) MATTERS TO BE ADDRESSED.—In conducting the rulemaking proceeding under subsection (b), the Administrator shall address the following:
- "(1) Flight request and dispatch procedures, including performance-based flight dispatch procedures.
- "(2) Pilot training standards, including estab-
- lishment of training standards in—
  "(A) preventing controlled flight into terrain; and
- "(B) recovery from inadvertent flight into instrument meteorological conditions.
- "(3) Safety-enhancing technology and equipment, including—
- ``(A) helicopter terrain awareness and warning systems;
- "(B) radar altimeters; and
- "(C) devices that perform the function of flight data recorders and cockpit voice recorders, to the extent feasible.
- "(4) Such other matters as the Administrator considers appropriate.
- "(d) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS.—In issuing a final rule under subsection (b), the Administrator, at a minimum, shall provide for the following:
- "(1) FLIGHT RISK EVALUATION PROGRAM.—The Administrator shall ensure that a part 135 certificate holder providing helicopter air ambulance services—
- "(A) establishes a flight risk evaluation program, based on FAA Notice 8000.301 issued by the Administration on August 1, 2005, including any updates thereto:
- "(B) as part of the flight risk evaluation program, develops a checklist for use by pilots in determining whether a flight request should be accepted: and
- "(C) requires the pilots of the certificate holder to use the checklist.
- "(2) OPERATIONAL CONTROL CENTER.—The Administrator shall ensure that a part 135 certificate holder providing helicopter air ambulance services using 10 or more helicopters has an operational control center that meets such requirements as the Administrator may prescribe.
  - "(e) SUBSEQUENT RULEMAKING.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon completion of the rulemaking required under subsection (b), the Administrator shall conduct a follow-on rulemaking to address the following:

- "(A) Pilot training standards, including—
- "(i) mandatory training requirements, including a minimum time for completing the training requirements:
- "(ii) training subject areas, such as communications procedures and appropriate technology use; and
- "(iii) establishment of training standards in—
  "(I) crew resource management;
- "(II) flight risk evaluation:
- "(III) operational control of the pilot in command: and
- "(IV) use of flight simulation training devices and line-oriented flight training.
- "(B) Use of safety equipment that should be worn or used by flight crewmembers and medical personnel on a flight, including the possible use of shoulder harnesses, helmets, seatbelts, and fire resistant clothing to enhance crash survivability.
- "(2) DEADLINES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of issuance of a final rule under subsection (b), the Administrator shall initiate the rulemaking under this subsection.
- "(3) LIMITATION ON CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require the Administrator to propose or finalize any rule that would derogate or supersede the rule required to be finalized under subsection (b).
- "(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:
- "(1) PART 135.—The term 'part 135' means part 135 of title 14 Code of Federal Regulations
- "(2) PART 135 CERTIFICATE HOLDER.—The term 'part 135 certificate holder' means a person holding an operating certificate issued under part 119 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, that is authorized to conduct civil helicopter air ambulance operations under part 135.

"§44731. Collection of data on helicopter air ambulance operations

- "(a) In GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall require a part 135 certificate holder providing helicopter air ambulance services to submit to the Administrator, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, and annually thereafter, a report containing, at a minimum, the following data:
- "(1) The number of helicopters that the certificate holder uses to provide helicopter air ambulance services and the base locations of the helicopters.
- "(2) The number of flights and hours flown, by registration number, during which helicopters operated by the certificate holder were providing helicopter air ambulance services.
- "(3) The number of flight requests for a helicopter providing air ambulance services that were accepted or declined by the certificate holder and the type of each such flight request (such as scene response, interfacility transport, organ transport, or ferry or repositioning flight).
- "(4) The number of accidents, if any, involving helicopters operated by the certificate holder while providing air ambulance services and a description of the accidents.
- "(5) The number of flights and hours flown under instrument flight rules by helicopters operated by the certificate holder while providing air ambulance services.
- "(6) The time of day of each flight flown by helicopters operated by the certificate holder while providing air ambulance services.
- "(7) The number of incidents, if any, in which a helicopter was not directly dispatched and arrived to transport patients but was not utilized for patient transport.
- "(b) REPORTING PERIOD.—Data contained in a report submitted by a part 135 certificate holder under subsection (a) shall relate to such reporting period as the Administrator determines appropriate.

- "(c) DATABASE.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator shall develop a method to collect and store the data collected under subsection (a), including a method to protect the confidentiality of any trade secret or proprietary information provided in response to this section.
- "(d) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, and annually thereafter, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containing a summary of the data collected under subsection (a).
- "(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms 'part 135' and 'part 135 certificate holder' have the meanings given such terms in section 44730.".
- (b) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—Section 106(k)(2)(C) (as redesignated by this Act) is amended by inserting before the period the following: "and the development and maintenance of helicopter approach procedures".
- (c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 447 is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "44730. Helicopter air ambulance operations." "44731. Collection of data on helicopter air ambulance operations.".

SEC. 307. PROHIBITION ON PERSONAL USE OF ELECTRONIC DEVICES ON FLIGHT DECK.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 44732. Prohibition on personal use of electronic devices on flight deck

- "(a) IN GENERAL.—It is unlawful for a flight crewmember of an aircraft used to provide air transportation under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, to use a personal wireless communications device or laptop computer while at the flight crewmember's duty station on the flight deck of such an aircraft while the aircraft is being operated.
- "(b) Exceptions.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to the use of a personal wireless communications device or laptop computer for a purpose directly related to operation of the aircraft, or for emergency, safety-related, or employment-related communications, in accordance with procedures established by the air carrier and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration.
- "(c) ENFORCEMENT.—In addition to the penalties provided under section 46301 applicable to any violation of this section, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may enforce compliance with this section under section 44709 by amending, modifying, suspending, or revoking a certificate under this chapter.
- "(d) PERSONAL WIRELESS COMMUNICATIONS DEVICE DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'personal wireless communications device' means a device through which personal wireless services (as defined in section 332(c)(7)(C)(i) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 332(c)(7)(C)(i))) are transmitted."
- (b) PENALTY.—Section 44711(a) is amended— (1) by striking "or" after the semicolon in
- paragraph (8);
  (2) by striking "title." in paragraph (9) and inserting "title; or"; and
  - (3) by adding at the end the following:
- "(10) violate section 44732 or any regulation issued thereunder.".
- (c) Conforming Amendment.—The analysis for chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:
- "44732. Prohibition on personal use of electronic devices on flight deck.".

- (d) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall initiate a rulemaking procedure for regulations to carry out section 44732 of title 49, United States Code (as added by this section), and shall issue a final rule thereunder not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act
  - (e) STUDY.-
- (1) In GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall review relevant air carrier data and carry out a study—
- (A) to identify common sources of distraction for the flight crewmembers on the flight deck of a commercial aircraft; and
- (B) to determine the safety impacts of such distractions.
- (2) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report that contains—
- (A) the findings of the study conducted under paragraph (1); and
- (B) recommendations regarding how to reduce distractions for flight crewmembers on the flight deck of a commercial aircraft.

SEC. 308. INSPECTION OF REPAIR STATIONS LO-CATED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 44733. Inspection of repair stations located outside the United States

- "(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish and implement a safety assessment system for all part 145 repair stations based on the type, scope, and complexity of work being performed. The system shall—
- "(1) ensure that repair stations located outside the United States are subject to appropriate inspections based on identified risks and consistent with existing United States requirements;
- "(2) consider inspection results and findings submitted by foreign civil aviation authorities operating under a maintenance safety or maintenance implementation agreement with the United States; and
- "(3) require all maintenance safety or maintenance implementation agreements to provide an opportunity for the Administration to conduct independent inspections of covered part 145 repair stations when safety concerns warrant such inspections.
- "(b) NOTICE TO CONGRESS OF NEGOTIATIONS.— The Administrator shall notify the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives not later than 30 days after initiating formal negotiations with foreign aviation authorities or other appropriate foreign government agencies on a new maintenance safety or maintenance implementation agreement.
- "(c) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Administrator shall publish an annual report on the Administration's oversight of part 145 repair stations and implementation of the safety assessment system required under subsection (a). The report shall—
- "(1) describe in detail any improvements in the Administration's ability to identify and track where part 121 air carrier repair work is performed;
- "(2) include a staffing model to determine the best placement of inspectors and the number of inspectors needed:

- "(3) describe the training provided to inspectors: and
- "(4) include an assessment of the quality of monitoring and surveillance by the Administration of work performed by its inspectors and the inspectors of foreign authorities operating under a maintenance safety or maintenance implementation agreement.
- "(d) Alcohol and Controlled Substances Testing Program Requirements.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State and the Secretary of Transportation, acting jointly, shall request the governments of foreign countries that are members of the International Civil Aviation Organization to establish international standards for alcohol and controlled substances testing of persons that perform safety-sensitive maintenance functions on commercial air carrier aircraft.
- "(2) APPLICATION TO PART 121 AIRCRAFT WORK.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the Administrator shall promulgate a proposed rule requiring that all part 145 repair station employees responsible for safety-sensitive maintenance functions on part 121 air carrier aircraft are subject to an alcohol and controlled substances testing program determined acceptable by the Administrator and consistent with the applicable laws of the country in which the repair station is located.
- "(e) ANNUAL INSPECTIONS.—The Administrator shall ensure that part 145 repair stations located outside the United States are inspected annually by Federal Aviation Administration safety inspectors, without regard to where the station is located, in a manner consistent with United States obligations under international agreements. The Administrator may carry out inspections in addition to the annual inspection required under this subsection based on identified risks.
- "(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:
- "(1) PART 121 AIR CARRIER.—The term 'part 121 air carrier' means an air carrier that holds a certificate issued under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.
- "(2) PART 145 REPAIR STATION.—The term part 145 repair station means a repair station that holds a certificate issued under part 145 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.".
- (b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:
- "44733. Inspection of repair stations located outside the United States.".

SEC. 309. ENHANCED TRAINING FOR FLIGHT ATTENDANTS.

(a) In General.—Chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 44734. Training of flight attendants

- "(a) TRAINING REQUIRED.—In addition to other training required under this chapter, each air carrier shall provide to flight attendants employed or contracted by such air carrier initial and annual training regarding—
  - "(1) serving alcohol to passengers;
- "(2) recognizing intoxicated passengers; and "(3) dealing with disruptive passengers.
- "(b) SITUATIONAL TRAINING.—In carrying out the training required under subsection (a), each air carrier shall provide to flight attendants situational training on the proper method for dealing with intoxicated passengers who act in a belligerent manner.
- "(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the fol-
- lowing definitions apply: "(1) AIR CARRIER.—The term 'air carrier' means a person, including a commercial enterprise, that has been issued an air carrier operating certificate under section 44705.
- "(2) FLIGHT ATTENDANT.—The term 'flight attendant' has the meaning given that term in section 44728(g).".

- (b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:
- "44734. Training of flight attendants.".

SEC. 310. LIMITATION ON DISCLOSURE OF SAFE-TY INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 447 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"$ 44735. Limitation on disclosure of safety information

- "(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by subsection (c), a report, data, or other information described in subsection (b) shall not be disclosed to the public by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration pursuant to section 552(b)(3)(B) of title 5 if the report, data, or other information is submitted to the Federal Aviation Administration voluntarily and is not required to be submitted to the Administrator under any other provision of law.
- "(b) APPLICABILITY.—The limitation established by subsection (a) shall apply to the following:
- "(1) Reports, data, or other information developed under the Aviation Safety Action Program.
- "(2) Reports, data, or other information produced or collected under the Flight Operational Quality Assurance Program.
- "(3) Reports, data, or other information developed under the Line Operations Safety Audit Program.
- "(4) Reports, data, or other information produced or collected for purposes of developing and implementing a safety management system acceptable to the Administrator.
- "(5) Reports, analyses, and directed studies, based in whole or in part on reports, data, or other information described in paragraphs (1) through (4), including those prepared under the Aviation Safety Information Analysis and Sharing Program (or any successor program).
- "(c) EXCEPTION FOR DE-IDENTIFIED INFORMA-TION.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—The limitation established by subsection (a) shall not apply to a report, data, or other information if the information contained in the report, data, or other information has been de-identified.
- "(2) DE-IDENTIFIED DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term 'de-identified' means the process by which all information that is likely to establish the identity of the specific persons or entities submitting reports, data, or other information is removed from the reports, data, or other information"
- (b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for such chapter (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:
- "44735. Limitation on disclosure of safety information.".
- (c) TECHNICAL CORRECTION.—Section 44703(i)(9)(B)(i) is amended by striking "section 552 of title 5" and inserting "section 552(b)(3)(B) of title 5".

SEC. 311. PROHIBITION AGAINST AIMING A LASER POINTER AT AN AIRCRAFT.

(a) Offense.—Chapter 2 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 39 the following:

"§ 39A. Aiming a laser pointer at an aircraft

- "(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever knowingly aims the beam of a laser pointer at an aircraft in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States, or at the flight path of such an aircraft, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.
- "(b) LASER POINTER DEFINED.—As used in this section, the term 'laser pointer' means any device designed or used to amplify electromagnetic radiation by stimulated emission that emits a beam designed to be used by the operator as a pointer or highlighter to indicate, mark, or identify a specific position, place, item, or object.

"(c) EXCEPTIONS.—This section does not pro-

"(c) EXCEPTIONS.—This section does not prohibit aiming a beam of a laser pointer at an aircraft, or the flight path of such an aircraft, by—

"(1) an authorized individual in the conduct of research and development or flight test operations conducted by an aircraft manufacturer, the Federal Aviation Administration, or any other person authorized by the Federal Aviation Administration to conduct such research and development or flight test operations;

"(2) members or elements of the Department of Defense or Department of Homeland Security acting in an official capacity for the purpose of research, development, operations, testing, or training: or

"(3) by an individual using a laser emergency signaling device to send an emergency distress signal

'(d) AUTHORITY TO ESTABLISH ADDITIONAL Exceptions by Regulation.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, may provide by regulation, after public notice and comment, such additional exceptions to this section as may be necessary and appropriate. The Attorney General shall provide written notification of any proposed regulations under this section to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, not less than 90 days before such regulations become final.".

- (b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for such chapter is amended—
- (1) by moving the item relating to section 39 after the item relating to section 38; and
- (2) by inserting after the item relating to section 39 the following:
- "39A. Aiming a laser pointer at an aircraft".

SEC. 312. AIRCRAFT CERTIFICATION PROCESS RE-VIEW AND REFORM.

- (a) In GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with representatives of the aviation industry, shall conduct an assessment of the certification and approval process under section 44704 of title 49, United States Code.
- (b) CONTENTS.—In conducting the assessment, the Administrator shall consider—
- (1) the expected number of applications for product certifications and approvals the Administrator will receive under section 44704 of such title in the 1-year, 5-year, and 10-year periods following the date of enactment of this Act:
- (2) process reforms and improvements necessary to allow the Administrator to review and approve the applications in a fair and timely fashion:
- (3) the status of recommendations made in previous reports on the Administration's certification process;
- (4) methods for enhancing the effective use of delegation systems, including organizational designation authorization;
- (5) methods for training the Administration's field office employees in the safety management system and auditing; and
- (6) the status of updating airworthiness requirements, including implementing recommendations in the Administration's report entitled "Part 23—Small Airplane Certification Process Study" (OK-09-3468, dated July 2009).
- (c) RECOMMENDATIONS.—In conducting the assessment, the Administrator shall make recommendations to improve efficiency and reduce costs through streamlining and reengineering the certification process under section 44704 of such title to ensure that the Administrator can conduct certifications and approvals under such section in a manner that supports and enables the development of new products and technologies and the global competitiveness of the United States aviation industry.

(d) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the assessment, together with an explanation of how the Administrator will implement recommendations made under subsection (c) and measure the effectiveness of the recommendations.

(e) IMPLEMENTATION OF RECOMMENDATIONS.— Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall begin to implement the recommendations made under subsection (c).

SEC. 313. CONSISTENCY OF REGULATORY INTER-PRETATION.

- (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF ADVISORY PANEL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish an advisory panel comprised of both Government and industry representatives to—
- (1) review the October 2010 report by the Government Accountability Office on certification and approval processes (GAO-11-14); and
- (2) develop recommendations to address the findings in the report and other concerns raised by interested parties, including representatives of the aviation industry.
- (b) MATTERS TO BE CONSIDERED.—The advisory panel shall—
- (1) determine the root causes of inconsistent interpretation of regulations by the Administration's Flight Standards Service and Aircraft Certification Service:
- (2) develop recommendations to improve the consistency of interpreting regulations by the Administration's Flight Standards Service and Aircraft Certification Service: and
- (3) develop recommendations to improve communications between the Administration's Flight Standards Service and Aircraft Certification Service and applicants and certificate and approval holders for the identification and resolution of potentially adverse issues in an expeditious and fair manner.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the findings of the advisory panel, together with an explanation of how the Administrator will implement the recommendations of the advisory panel and measure the effectiveness of the recommendations.

SEC. 314. RUNWAY SAFETY.

(a) STRATEGIC RUNWAY SAFETY PLAN.-

- (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall develop and submit to Congress a report containing a strategic runway safety plan.
- (2) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The strategic runway safety plan—
  - (A) shall include, at a minimum—
- (i) goals to improve runway safety;
- (ii) near- and long-term actions designed to reduce the severity, number, and rate of runway incursions, losses of standard separation, and operational errors;
- (iii) time frames and resources needed for the actions described in clause (ii);
- (iv) a continuous evaluative process to track performance toward the goals referred to in clause (i); and
- (v) a review with respect to runway safety of every commercial service airport (as defined in section 47102 of title 49, United States Code) in the United States and proposed action to improve airport lighting, provide better signs, and improve runway and taxiway markings at those airports: and

(B) shall address the increased runway safety risk associated with the expected increased volume of air traffic.

(b) PROCESS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall develop a process for tracking and investigating operational errors, losses of standard separation, and runway incursions that includes procedures for—

(1) identifying who is responsible for tracking operational errors, losses of standard separation, and runway incursions, including a process for lower level employees to report to higher supervisory levels and for frontline managers to receive the information in a timely manner;

(2) conducting periodic random audits of the oversight process; and

(3) ensuring proper accountability.

(c) PLAN FOR INSTALLATION AND DEPLOYMENT OF SYSTEMS TO PROVIDE ALERTS OF POTENTIAL RUNWAY INCURSIONS.—Not later than June 30, 2012, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report containing a plan for the installation and deployment of systems to alert air traffic controllers or flight crewmembers, or both, of potential runway incursions. The plan shall be integrated into the annual NextGen Implementation Plan of the Administration or any successor document.

SEC. 315. FLIGHT STANDARDS EVALUATION PROGRAM.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall modify the Flight Standards Evaluation Program—
- (1) to include periodic and random reviews as part of the Administration's oversight of air carriers; and
- (2) to prohibit an individual from participating in a review or audit of an office with responsibility for an air carrier under the program if the individual, at any time in the 5-year period preceding the date of the review or audit, had responsibility for inspecting, or overseeing the inspection of, the operations of that carrier.
- (b) Annual Report to Congress.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the Flight Standards Evaluation Program, including the Administrator's findings and recommendations with respect to the program.
- (c) FLIGHT STANDARDS EVALUATION PROGRAM DEFINED.—In this section, the term "Flight Standards Evaluation Program" means the program established by the Federal Aviation Administration in FS 1100.1B CHG3, including any subsequent revisions thereto.

SEC. 316. COCKPIT SMOKE.

- (a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study on the effectiveness of oversight activities of the Federal Aviation Administration relating to the use of new technologies to prevent or mitigate the effects of dense, continuous smoke in the cockpit of a commercial aircraft.
- (b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 317. OFF-AIRPORT, LOW-ALTITUDE AIRCRAFT WEATHER OBSERVATION TECHNOLOGY.

(a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a review of off-airport, low-altitude aircraft weather observation technologies.

- (b) SPECIFIC REVIEW.—The review shall include, at a minimum, an examination of off-airport, low-altitude weather reporting needs, an assessment of technical alternatives (including automated weather observation stations), an investment analysis, and recommendations for improving weather reporting.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the review.

SEC. 318. FEASIBILITY OF REQUIRING HELI-COPTER PILOTS TO USE NIGHT VI-SION GOGGLES.

- (a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall carry out a study on the feasibility of requiring pilots of helicopters providing air ambulance services under part 135 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, to use night vision goggles during nighttime operations.
- (b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In conducting the study, the Administrator shall consult with owners and operators of helicopters providing air ambulance services under such part 135 and aviation safety professionals to determine the benefits, financial considerations, and risks associated with requiring the use of night vision goggles.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 319. MAINTENANCE PROVIDERS.

- (a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue regulations requiring that covered work on an aircraft used to provide air transportation under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, be performed by persons in accordance with subsection (b).
- (b) PERSONS AUTHORIZED TO PERFORM CERTAIN WORK.—A person may perform covered work on aircraft used to provide air transportation under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, only if the person is employed by—
- (1) a part 121 air carrier;
- (2) a part 145 repair station or a person authorized under section 43.17 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation); or
- (3) subject to subsection (c), a person that—
- (A) provides contract maintenance workers, services, or maintenance functions to a part 121 air carrier or part 145 repair station; and
- (B) meets the requirements of the part 121 air carrier or the part 145 repair station, as appropriate.
- (c) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—Covered work performed by a person who is employed by a person described in subsection (b)(3) shall be subject to the following terms and conditions:
- (1) The applicable part 121 air carrier shall be directly in charge of the covered work being performed.
- (2) The covered work shall be carried out in accordance with the part 121 air carrier's maintenance manual.
- (3) The person shall carry out the covered work under the supervision and control of the part 121 air carrier directly in charge of the covered work being performed on its aircraft.
- (d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:
- (1) COVERED WORK.—The term "covered work" means any of the following:
- (A) Essential maintenance that could result in a failure, malfunction, or defect endangering the safe operation of an aircraft if not performed properly or if improper parts or materials are used.

- (B) Regularly scheduled maintenance.
- (C) A required inspection item (as defined by the Administrator).
- (2) PART 121 AIR CARRIER.—The term "part 121 air carrier" means an air carrier that holds a certificate issued under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.
- (3) PART 145 REPAIR STATION.—The term "part 145 repair station" means a repair station that holds a certificate issued under part 145 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.
- (4) PERSON.—The term "person" means an individual, firm, partnership, corporation, company, or association that performs maintenance, preventative maintenance, or alterations.

SEC. 320. STUDY OF AIR QUALITY IN AIRCRAFT CABINS.

- (a) In General.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall initiate a study of air quality in aircraft cabins to—
- (1) assess bleed air quality on the full range of commercial aircraft operating in the United States:
- (2) identify oil-based contaminants, hydraulic fluid toxins, and other air toxins that appear in cabin air and measure the quantity and prevalence, or absence, of those toxins through a comprehensive sampling program;
- (3) determine the specific amount and duration of toxic fumes present in aircraft cabins that constitutes a health risk to passengers;
- (4) develop a systematic reporting standard for smoke and fume events in aircraft cabins; and
- (5) identify the potential health risks to individuals exposed to toxic fumes during flight.
- (b) AUTHORITY TO MONITOR AIR IN AIRCRAFT CABINS.—For purposes of conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall require domestic air carriers to allow air quality monitoring on their aircraft in a manner that imposes no significant costs on the air carrier and does not interfere with the normal operation of the aircraft.

SEC. 321. IMPROVED PILOT LICENSES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall issue improved pilot licenses consistent with requirements under this section.
- (b) TIMING.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall—
- (1) provide to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containing—
- (A) a timeline for the phased issuance of improved pilot licenses under this section that ensures all pilots are issued such licenses not later than 2 years after the initial issuance of such licenses under paragraph (2); and
- (B) recommendations for the Federal installation of infrastructure necessary to take advantage of information contained on improved pilot licenses issued under this section, which identify the necessary infrastructure, indicate the Federal entity that should be responsible for installing, funding, and operating the infrastructure at airport sterile areas, and provide an estimate of the costs of the infrastructure; and
- (2) begin to issue improved pilot licenses consistent with the requirements of title 49, United States Code, and title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.
- (c) REQUIREMENTS.—Improved pilot licenses issued under this section shall—
- (1) be resistant to tampering, alteration, and counterfeiting:

- (2) include a photograph of the individual to whom the license is issued for identification purposes; and
  - (3) be smart cards that—
- (A) accommodate iris and fingerprint biometric identifiers; and
- (B) are compliant with Federal Information Processing Standards-201 (FIPS-201) or Personal Identity Verification-Interoperability Standards (PIV-I) for processing through security checkpoints into airport sterile areas.
- (d) TAMPERING.—To the extent practicable, the Administrator shall develop methods to determine or reveal whether any component or security feature of an improved pilot license issued under this section has been tampered with, altered, or counterfeited.
- (e) USE OF DESIGNEES.—The Administrator may use designees to carry out subsection (a) to the extent practicable in order to minimize the burdens on vilots.
  - (f) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—
- (1) In GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the issuance of improved pilot licenses under this section.
- (2) EXPIRATION.—The Administrator shall not be required to submit annual reports under this subsection after the date on which the Administrator has issued improved pilot licenses under this section to all pilots.

Subtitle B—Unmanned Aircraft Systems SEC. 331. DEFINITIONS.

- In this subtitle, the following definitions apply:
- (1) ARCTIC.—The term "Arctic" means the United States zone of the Chukchi Sea, Beaufort Sea, and Bering Sea north of the Aleutian chain.
- (2) CERTIFICATE OF WAIVER; CERTIFICATE OF AUTHORIZATION.—The terms "certificate of authorization" mean a Federal Aviation Administration grant of approval for a specific flight operation.
- (3) PERMANENT AREAS.—The term "permanent areas" means areas on land or water that provide for launch, recovery, and operation of small unmanned aircraft.
- (4) PUBLIC UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEM.—The term "public unmanned aircraft system" means an unmanned aircraft system that meets the qualifications and conditions required for operation of a public aircraft (as defined in section 40102 of title 49, United States Code).
- (5) SENSE AND AVOID CAPABILITY.—The term "sense and avoid capability" means the capability of an unmanned aircraft to remain a safe distance from and to avoid collisions with other airborne aircraft.
- (6) SMALL UNMANNED AIRCRAFT.—The term "small unmanned aircraft" means an unmanned aircraft weighing less than 55 pounds.
- (7) TEST RANGE.—The term "test range" means a defined geographic area where research and development are conducted.
- (8) UNMANNED AIRCRAFT.—The term "unmanned aircraft" means an aircraft that is operated without the possibility of direct human intervention from within or on the aircraft.
- (9) UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEM.—The term "unmanned aircraft system" means an uncluding communication links and the components that control the unmanned aircraft) that are required for the pilot in command to operate safely and efficiently in the national airspace system.

SEC. 332. INTEGRATION OF CIVIL UNMANNED AIR-CRAFT SYSTEMS INTO NATIONAL AIRSPACE SYSTEM.

(a) REQUIRED PLANNING FOR INTEGRATION.—

- (1) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with representatives of the aviation industry, Federal agencies that employ unmanned aircraft systems technology in the national airspace system, and the unmanned aircraft systems industry, shall develop a comprehensive plan to safely accelerate the integration of civil unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system.
- (2) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The plan required under paragraph (1) shall contain, at a minimum, recommendations or projections on—
- (A) the rulemaking to be conducted under subsection (b), with specific recommendations on how the rulemaking will—
- (i) define the acceptable standards for operation and certification of civil unmanned aircraft systems;
- (ii) ensure that any civil unmanned aircraft system includes a sense and avoid capability; and
- (iii) establish standards and requirements for the operator and pilot of a civil unmanned aircraft system, including standards and requirements for registration and licensing;
- (B) the best methods to enhance the technologies and subsystems necessary to achieve the safe and routine operation of civil unmanned aircraft systems in the national airspace sustem:
- (C) a phased-in approach to the integration of civil unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system:
- (D) a timeline for the phased-in approach described under subparagraph (C);
  - (E) creation of a safe
- (F) airspace designation for cooperative manned and unmanned flight operations in the national airspace system;
- (G) establishment of a process to develop certification, flight standards, and air traffic requirements for civil unmanned aircraft systems at test ranges where such systems are subject to testing:
- (H) the best methods to ensure the safe operation of civil unmanned aircraft systems and public unmanned aircraft systems simultaneously in the national airspace system; and
- (I) incorporation of the plan into the annual NextGen Implementation Plan document (or any successor document) of the Federal Aviation Administration.
- (3) DEADLINE.—The plan required under paragraph (1) shall provide for the safe integration of civil unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system as soon as practicable, but not later than September 30, 2015.
- (4) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a copy of the plan required under paragraph (1).
- (5) ROADMAP.—Not later than I year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall approve and make available in print and on the Administration's Internet Web site a 5-year roadmap for the introduction of civil unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system, as coordinated by the Unmanned Aircraft Program Office of the Administration. The Secretary shall update the roadmap annually.
- (b) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 18 months after the date on which the plan required under subsection (a)(1) is submitted to Congress under subsection (a)(4), the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register—
- (1) a final rule on small unmanned aircraft systems that will allow for civil operation of such systems in the national airspace system, to the extent the systems do not meet the requirements for expedited operational authorization under section 333 of this Act;

- (2) a notice of proposed rulemaking to implement the recommendations of the plan required under subsection (a)(1), with the final rule to be published not later than 16 months after the date of nublication of the notice: and
- (3) an update to the Administration's most recent policy statement on unmanned aircraft systems, contained in Docket No. FAA-2006-25714.
  - (c) PILOT PROJECTS.-
- (1) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall establish a program to integrate unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system at 6 test ranges. The program shall terminate 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act.
- (2) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—In establishing the program under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall—
- (A) safely designate airspace for integrated manned and unmanned flight operations in the national airspace system;
- (B) develop certification standards and air traffic requirements for unmanned flight operations at test ranges;
- (C) coordinate with and leverage the resources of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Defense;
- (D) address both civil and public unmanned aircraft systems:
- (E) ensure that the program is coordinated with the Next Generation Air Transportation Sustem: and
- (F) provide for verification of the safety of unmanned aircraft systems and related navigation procedures before integration into the national airspace system.
- (3) TEST RANGE LOCATIONS.—In determining the location of the 6 test ranges of the program under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall—
- (A) take into consideration geographic and climatic diversity;
- (B) take into consideration the location of ground infrastructure and research needs; and
- (C) consult with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Defense.
- (4) TEST RANGE OPERATION.—A project at a test range shall be operational not later than 180 days after the date on which the project is established.
  - (5) Report to congress.—
- (A) In GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the termination of the program under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives a report setting forth the Administrator's findings and conclusions concerning the projects.
- (B) ADDITIONAL CONTENTS.—The report under subparagraph (A) shall include a description and assessment of the progress being made in establishing special use airspace to fill the immediate need of the Department of Defense—
- (i) to develop detection techniques for small unmanned aircraft systems; and
- (ii) to validate the sense and avoid capability and operation of unmanned aircraft systems.
- (d) Expanding Use of Unmanned Aircraft Systems in Arctic.—
- (1) In GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall develop a plan and initiate a process to work with relevant Federal agencies and national and international communities to designate permanent areas in the Arctic where small unmanned aircraft may operate 24 hours per day for research and commercial purposes. The plan for operations in these permanent areas shall include the development of processes to facilitate the safe operation of unmanned air-

- craft beyond line of sight. Such areas shall enable over-water flights from the surface to at least 2,000 feet in altitude, with ingress and egress routes from selected coastal launch sites.
- (2) AGREEMENTS.—To implement the plan under paragraph (1), the Secretary may enter into an agreement with relevant national and international communities.
- (3) AIRCRAFT APPROVAL.—Not later than 1 year after the entry into force of an agreement necessary to effectuate the purposes of this subsection, the Secretary shall work with relevant national and international communities to establish and implement a process, or may apply an applicable process already established, for approving the use of unmanned aircraft in the designated permanent areas in the Arctic without regard to whether an unmanned aircraft is used as a public aircraft, a civil aircraft, or a model aircraft.

SEC. 333. SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN UN-MANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other requirement of this subtitle, and not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall determine if certain unmanned aircraft systems may operate safely in the national airspace system before completion of the plan and rulemaking required by section 332 of this Act or the guidance required by section 334 of this Act.
- (b) ASSESSMENT OF UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS.—In making the determination under subsection (a), the Secretary shall determine, at a minimum—
- (1) which types of unmanned aircraft systems, if any, as a result of their size, weight, speed, operational capability, proximity to airports and populated areas, and operation within visual line of sight do not create a hazard to users of the national airspace system or the public or pose a threat to national security; and
- (2) whether a certificate of waiver, certificate of authorization, or airworthiness certification under section 44704 of title 49, United States Code, is required for the operation of unmanned aircraft systems identified under paragraph (1).
- (c) REQUIREMENTS FOR SAFE OPERATION.—If the Secretary determines under this section that certain unmanned aircraft systems may operate safely in the national airspace system, the Secretary shall establish requirements for the safe operation of such aircraft systems in the national airspace system.

SEC. 334. PUBLIC UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS.

- (a) GUIDANCE.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall issue guidance regarding the operation of public unmanned aircraft systems to—
- (1) expedite the issuance of a certificate of authorization process;
- (2) provide for a collaborative process with public agencies to allow for an incremental expansion of access to the national airspace system as technology matures and the necessary safety analysis and data become available, and until standards are completed and technology issues are resolved;
- (3) facilitate the capability of public agencies to develop and use test ranges, subject to operating restrictions required by the Federal Aviation Administration, to test and operate unmanned aircraft systems; and
- (4) provide guidance on a public entity's responsibility when operating an unmanned aircraft without a civil airworthiness certificate issued by the Administration.
- (b) STANDARDS FOR OPERATION AND CERTIFICATION.—Not later than December 31, 2015, the Administrator shall develop and implement operational and certification requirements for the operation of public unmanned aircraft systems in the national airspace system.

- (c) AGREEMENTS WITH GOVERNMENT AGENCIES.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall enter into agreements with appropriate government agencies to simplify the process for issuing certificates of waiver or authorization to operate public unmanned aircraft systems in the national airspace system.
- (2) CONTENTS.—The agreements shall—
- (A) with respect to an application described in paragraph (1)—
- (i) provide for an expedited review of the application;
- (ii) require a decision by the Administrator on approval or disapproval within 60 business days of the date of submission of the application; and (iii) allow for an expedited appeal if the appli-
- cation is disapproved;
- (B) allow for a one-time approval of similar operations carried out during a fixed period of time; and
- (C) allow a government public safety agency to operate unmanned aircraft weighing 4.4 pounds or less, if operated—
  - (i) within the line of sight of the operator:
  - (ii) less than 400 feet above the ground;
  - (iii) during daylight conditions;
- (iv) within Class G airspace; and
- (v) outside of 5 statute miles from any airport, heliport, seaplane base, spaceport, or other location with aviation activities.

SEC. 335. SAFETY STUDIES.

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall carry out all safety studies necessary to support the integration of unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system.

SEC. 336. SPECIAL RULE FOR MODEL AIRCRAFT.

- (a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law relating to the incorporation of unmanned aircraft systems into Federal Aviation Administration plans and policies, including this subtitle, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may not promulgate any rule or regulation regarding a model aircraft, or an aircraft being developed as a model aircraft, if—
- (1) the aircraft is flown strictly for hobby or recreational use;
- (2) the aircraft is operated in accordance with a community-based set of safety guidelines and within the programming of a nationwide community-based organization;
- (3) the aircraft is limited to not more than 55 pounds unless otherwise certified through a design, construction, inspection, flight test, and operational safety program administered by a community-based organization;
- (4) the aircraft is operated in a manner that does not interfere with and gives way to any manned aircraft; and
- (5) when flown within 5 miles of an airport, the operator of the aircraft provides the airport operator and the airport air traffic control tower (when an air traffic facility is located at the airport) with prior notice of the operation (model aircraft operators flying from a permanent location within 5 miles of an airport should establish a mutually-agreed upon operating procedure with the airport operator and the airport air traffic control tower (when an air traffic facility is located at the airport)).
- (b) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of the Administrator to pursue enforcement action against persons operating model aircraft who endanger the safety of the national airspace system.
- (c) Model Aircraft Defined.—In this section, the term "model aircraft" means an unmanned aircraft that is—
- (1) capable of sustained flight in the atmosphere;

- (2) flown within visual line of sight of the person operating the aircraft; and
- (3) flown for hobby or recreational purposes.

Subtitle C—Safety and Protections SEC. 341. AVIATION SAFETY WHISTLEBLOWER IN-

VESTIGATION OFFICE. Section 106 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following.

- "(t) AVIATION SAFETY WHISTLEBLOWER INVESTIGATION OFFICE.—
- "(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Federal Aviation Administration (in this subsection referred to as the 'Agency') an Aviation Safety Whistleblower Investigation Office (in this subsection referred to as the 'Office').
- "(2) DIRECTOR.
- "(A) APPOINTMENT.—The head of the Office shall be the Director, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of Transportation.
- "(B) QUALIFICATIONS.—The Director shall have a demonstrated ability in investigations and knowledge of or experience in aviation.
- "(C) TERM.—The Director shall be appointed for a term of 5 years.
- "(D) VACANCIES.—Any individual appointed to fill a vacancy in the position of the Director occurring before the expiration of the term for which the individual's predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of that term.
  - (3) Complaints and investigations.—
- "(A) AUTHORITY OF DIRECTOR.—The Director shall—
- "(i) receive complaints and information submitted by employees of persons holding certificates issued under title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (if the certificate holder does not have a similar in-house whistleblower or safety and regulatory noncompliance reporting process) and employees of the Agency concerning the possible existence of an activity relating to a violation of an order, a regulation, or any other provision of Federal law relating to aviation safety;
- "(ii) assess complaints and information submitted under clause (i) and determine whether a substantial likelihood exists that a violation of an order, a regulation, or any other provision of Federal law relating to aviation safety has occurred; and
- "(iii) based on findings of the assessment conducted under clause (ii), make recommendations to the Administrator of the Agency, in writing, regarding further investigation or corrective actions
- "(B) DISCLOSURE OF IDENTITIES.—The Director shall not disclose the identity of an individual who submits a complaint or information under subparagraph (A)(i) unless—
- "(i) the individual consents to the disclosure in writing; or
- "(ii) the Director determines, in the course of an investigation, that the disclosure is required by regulation, statute, or court order, or is otherwise unavoidable, in which case the Director shall provide the individual reasonable advanced notice of the disclosure.
- "(C) INDEPENDENCE OF DIRECTOR.—The Secretary, the Administrator, or any officer or employee of the Agency may not prevent or prohibit the Director from initiating, carrying out, or completing any assessment of a complaint or information submitted under subparagraph (A)(i) or from reporting to Congress on any such assessment.
- "(D) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—In conducting an assessment of a complaint or information submitted under subparagraph (A)(i), the Director shall have access to all records, reports, audits, reviews, documents, papers, recommendations, and other material of the Agency necessary to determine whether a substantial likelihood exists that a violation of an order, a regulation, or any other provision of Federal law relating to aviation safety may have occurred.

- "(4) RESPONSES TO RECOMMENDATIONS.—Not later than 60 days after the date on which the Administrator receives a report with respect to an investigation, the Administrator shall respond to a recommendation made by the Director under paragraph (3)(A)(iii) in writing and retain records related to any further investigations or corrective actions taken in response to the recommendation.
- "(5) INCIDENT REPORTS.—If the Director determines there is a substantial likelihood that a violation of an order, a regulation, or any other provision of Federal law relating to aviation safety has occurred that requires immediate corrective action, the Director shall report the potential violation expeditiously to the Administrator and the Inspector General of the Department of Transportation.
- "(6) REPORTING OF CRIMINAL VIOLATIONS TO INSPECTOR GENERAL.—If the Director has reasonable grounds to believe that there has been a violation of Federal criminal law, the Director shall report the violation expeditiously to the Inspector General.
- "(7) ANNUAL REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Not later than October 1 of each year, the Director shall submit to Congress a report containing—
- "(A) information on the number of submissions of complaints and information received by the Director under paragraph (3)(A)(i) in the preceding 12-month period;
  - "(B) summaries of those submissions;
- "(C) summaries of further investigations and corrective actions recommended in response to the submissions; and
- "(D) summaries of the responses of the Administrator to such recommendations.".

SEC. 342. POSTEMPLOYMENT RESTRICTIONS FOR FLIGHT STANDARDS INSPECTORS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 44711 is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(d) POSTEMPLOYMENT RESTRICTIONS FOR FLIGHT STANDARDS INSPECTORS.—
- "(1) PROHIBITION.—A person holding an operating certificate issued under title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, may not knowingly employ, or make a contractual arrangement that permits, an individual to act as an agent or representative of the certificate holder in any matter before the Federal Aviation Administration if the individual, in the preceding 2-year period—
- "(A) served as, or was responsible for oversight of, a flight standards inspector of the Administration; and
- "(B) had responsibility to inspect, or oversee inspection of, the operations of the certificate holder.
- "(2) WRITTEN AND ORAL COMMUNICATIONS.—
  For purposes of paragraph (1), an individual shall be considered to be acting as an agent or representative of a certificate holder in a matter before the Administration if the individual makes any written or oral communication on behalf of the certificate holder to the Administration (or any of its officers or employees) in connection with a particular matter, whether or not involving a specific party and without regard to whether the individual has participated in, or had responsibility for, the particular matter while serving as a flight standards inspector of the Administration."
- (b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall not apply to an individual employed by a certificate holder as of the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 343. REVIEW OF AIR TRANSPORTATION OVERSIGHT SYSTEM DATABASE.

(a) REVIEWS.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a process by which the air transportation oversight system database of the Administration is reviewed by regional teams of employees of the Administration, including at least one employee on each team representing aviation safety inspectors, on a monthly basis to ensure that—

- identified: and
- (2) appropriate corrective actions are taken in accordance with Administration regulations, advisory directives, policies, and procedures.
  - (b) Monthly Team Reports.-
- (1) IN GENERAL.—A regional team of employees conducting a monthly review of the air transportation oversight system database under subsection (a) shall submit to the Administrator, the Associate Administrator for Aviation Safety, and the Director of Flight Standards Service a report each month on the results of the review.
- (2) CONTENTS.—A report submitted under paragraph (1) shall identify—
- (A) any trends in regulatory compliance discovered by the team of employees in conducting the monthly review; and
- (B) any corrective actions taken or proposed to be taken in response to the trends.
- (c) BIANNUAL REPORTS TO CONGRESS .-Administrator, on a biannual basis, shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the reviews of the air transportation oversight system database conducted under this section, including copies of reports received under subsection (b).

SEC. 344. IMPROVED VOLUNTARY DISCLOSURE REPORTING SYSTEM.

- (a) Voluntary Disclosure Reporting Pro-GRAM DEFINED.—In this section, the term "Voluntary Disclosure Reporting Program" means the program established by the Federal Aviation Administration through Advisory Circular 00-58A, dated September 8, 2006, including any subsequent revisions thereto.
- (b) VERIFICATION.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall modify the Voluntary Disclosure Reporting Program to require inspectors to-
- (1) verify that air carriers are implementing comprehensive solutions to correct the underlying causes of the violations voluntarily disclosed by such air carriers; and
- (2) confirm, before approving a final report of a violation, that a violation with the same root causes, has not been previously discovered by an inspector or self-disclosed by the air carrier.
- (c) Supervisory Review of Voluntary Self-DISCLOSURES.—The Administrator shall establish a process by which voluntary self-disclosures received from air carriers are reviewed and approved by a supervisor after the initial review by an inspector.
- (d) Inspector General Study.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—The Inspector General of the Department of Transportation shall conduct a study of the Voluntary Disclosure Reporting Program.
- (2) REVIEW.—In conducting the study, the Inspector General shall examine, at a minimum, if the Administration-
- (A) conducts comprehensive reviews of voluntary disclosure reports before closing a voluntary disclosure report under the provisions of the program;
- (B) evaluates the effectiveness of corrective actions taken by air carriers: and
- (C) effectively prevents abuse of the voluntary disclosure reporting program through its secondary review of self-disclosures before they are accepted and closed by the Administration.
- (3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Inspector General shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study conducted under this section.

(1) any trends in regulatory compliance are SEC. 345. DUTY PERIODS AND FLIGHT TIME LIMI-TATIONS APPLICABLE TO FLIGHT CREWMEMBERS.

- (a) RULEMAKING ON APPLICABILITY OF PART 121 Duty Periods and Flight Time Limita-TIONS TO PART 91 OPERATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding, if such a proceeding has not already been initiated, to require a flight crewmember who is employed by an air carrier conducting operations under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, and who accepts an additional assignment for flying under part 91 of such title from the air carrier or from any other air carrier conducting operations under part 121 or 135 of such title, to apply the period of the additional assignment (regardless of whether the assignment is performed by the flight crewmember before or after an assignment to flu under part 121 of such title) toward any limitation applicable to the flight crewmember relating to duty periods or flight times under part 121 of such title
- (b) RULEMAKING ON APPLICABILITY OF PART 135 DUTY PERIODS AND FLIGHT TIME LIMITA-TIONS TO PART 91 OPERATIONS—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding to require a flight crewmember who is employed by an air carrier conducting operations under part 135 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, and who accepts an additional assignment for flying under part 91 of such title from the air carrier or any other air carrier con $ducting\ operations\ under\ part\ 121\ or\ 135\ of\ such$ title, to apply the period of the additional assignment (regardless of whether the assignment is performed by the flight crewmember before or after an assignment to fly under part 135 of such title) toward any limitation applicable to the flight crewmember relating to duty periods or flight times under part 135 of such title.
- (c) Separate Rulemaking Proceedings Re-QUIRED.—The rulemaking proceeding required under subsection (b) shall be separate from the rulemaking proceeding required under subsection (a).

SEC. 346. CERTAIN EXISTING FLIGHT TIME LIMI-TATIONS AND REST REQUIREMENTS.

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may not finalize the interpretation proposed in Docket No. FAA-2010-1259, relating to rest requirements, and published in the Federal Register on December 23, 2010.

SEC. 347. EMERGENCY LOCATOR TRANSMITTERS ON GENERAL AVIATION AIRCRAFT.

- (a) INSPECTION.—As part of the annual inspection of general aviation aircraft, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall require a detailed inspection of each emergency locator transmitter (in this section referred to as an "ELT") installed in general aviation aircraft operating in the United States to ensure that the ELT is mounted and retained in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications.
- (b) MOUNTING AND RETENTION -
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall determine if the ELT mounting requirements and retention tests specified by Technical Standard Orders C91a and C126 are adequate to assess retention capabilities in ELT designs.
- (2) REVISION.—Based on the determination under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall make any necessary revisions to the requirements and retention tests referred to in paragraph (1) to ensure that ELTs are properly retained in the event of an aircraft accident.
- (c) REPORT.—Upon the completion of any revisions under subsection (b)(2), the Administrator shall submit a report on the implementation of this section to-

- (1) the Committee on Commerce Science and Transportation of the Senate; and
- (2) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives.

TITLE IV—AIR SERVICE IMPROVEMENTS Subtitle A—Passenger Air Service Improvements

SEC. 401. SMOKING PROHIBITION.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 41706 is amended-
- (1) in the section heading by striking "scheduled" and inserting "passenger"; and
- (2) by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following:
- "(a) Smoking Prohibition in Interstate and INTRASTATE AIR TRANSPORTATION.—An individual may not smoke-
- '(1) in an aircraft in scheduled passenger interstate or intrastate air transportation; or
- '(2) in an aircraft in nonscheduled passenger interstate or intrastate air transportation, if a flight attendant is a required crewmember on the aircraft (as determined by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration).
- '(b) Smoking Prohibition in Foreign Air Transportation.—The Secretary of Transportation shall require all air carriers and foreign air carriers to prohibit smoking-
- '(1) in an aircraft in scheduled passenger foreign air transportation; and
- '(2) in an aircraft in nonscheduled passenger foreign air transportation, if a flight attendant is a required crewmember on the aircraft (as determined by the Administrator or a foreign government).
- (b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT—The analysis for chapter 417 is amended by striking the item relating to section 41706 and inserting the followina:

"41706. Prohibitions against smoking on passenger flights.".

SEC. 402. MONTHLY AIR CARRIER REPORTS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 41708 is amended by adding at the end the following:
  - '(c) DIVERTED AND CANCELLED FLIGHTS.—
- "(1) MONTHLY REPORTS.—The Secretary shall require an air carrier referred to in paragraph (2) to file with the Secretary a monthly report on each flight of the air carrier that is diverted from its scheduled destination to another airport and each flight of the air carrier that departs the gate at the airport at which the flight originates but is cancelled before wheels-off time.
- '(2) APPLICABILITY.—An air carrier that is required to file a monthly airline service quality performance report pursuant to part 234 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, shall be subject to the requirement of paragraph (1).
- '(3) CONTENTS.—A monthly report filed by an air carrier under paragraph (1) shall include, at a minimum, the following information:
  - '(A) For a diverted flight-
  - '(i) the flight number of the diverted flight;
  - "(ii) the scheduled destination of the flight;
  - "(iii) the date and time of the flight;
- "(iv) the airport to which the flight was diverted:
  - "(v) wheels-on time at the diverted airport:
- '(vi) the time, if any, passengers deplaned the aircraft at the diverted airport; and
- "(vii) if the flight arrives at the scheduled destination airport-
- "(I) the gate-departure time at the diverted airport;
- "(II) the wheels-off time at the diverted air-
- "(III) the wheels-on time at the scheduled arrival airport; and
- "(IV) the gate-arrival time at the scheduled arrival airport.
- "(B) For flights cancelled after gate depar-

- "(i) the flight number of the cancelled flight; "(ii) the scheduled origin and destination airports of the cancelled flight:
- "(iii) the date and time of the cancelled flight;
  "(iv) the gate-departure time of the cancelled flight: and
- "(v) the time the aircraft returned to the gate.
- "(4) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary shall compile the information provided in the monthly reports filed pursuant to paragraph (1) in a single monthly report and publish such report on the Internet Web site of the Department of Transportation."
- (b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Beginning not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall require monthly reports pursuant to the amendment made by subsection (a).

SEC. 403. MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 417 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 41724. Musical instruments

- "(a) IN GENERAL.-
- "(1) SMALL INSTRUMENTS AS CARRY-ON BAG-GAGE.—An air carrier providing air transportation shall permit a passenger to carry a violin, guitar, or other musical instrument in the aircraft cabin, without charging the passenger a fee in addition to any standard fee that carrier may require for comparable carry-on baggage, if—
- if—
  "(A) the instrument can be stowed safely in a suitable baggage compartment in the aircraft cabin or under a passenger seat, in accordance with the requirements for carriage of carry-on baggage or cargo established by the Administrator; and
- "(B) there is space for such stowage at the time the passenger boards the aircraft.
- "(2) LARGER INSTRUMENTS AS CARRY-ON BAG-GAGE.—An air carrier providing air transportation shall permit a passenger to carry a musical instrument that is too large to meet the requirements of paragraph (1) in the aircraft cabin, without charging the passenger a fee in addition to the cost of the additional ticket described in subparagraph (E), if—
- "(A) the instrument is contained in a case or covered so as to avoid injury to other passengers;
- "(B) the weight of the instrument, including the case or covering, does not exceed 165 pounds or the applicable weight restrictions for the aircraft.
- "(C) the instrument can be stowed in accordance with the requirements for carriage of carry-on baggage or cargo established by the Administrator:
- "(D) neither the instrument nor the case contains any object not otherwise permitted to be carried in an aircraft cabin because of a law or regulation of the United States; and
- "(E) the passenger wishing to carry the instrument in the aircraft cabin has purchased an additional seat to accommodate the instrument.
- "(3) Large instruments as checked bag-Gage.—An air carrier shall transport as baggage a musical instrument that is the property of passenger traveling in air transportation that may not be carried in the aircraft cabin if—
- "(A) the sum of the length, width, and height measured in inches of the outside linear dimensions of the instrument (including the case) does not exceed 150 inches or the applicable size restrictions for the aircraft;
- "(B) the weight of the instrument does not exceed 165 pounds or the applicable weight restrictions for the aircraft; and
- "(C) the instrument can be stowed in accordance with the requirements for carriage of carry-on baggage or cargo established by the Administrator.
- "(b) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall issue final regulations to carry out subsection (a).

- "(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The requirements of this section shall become effective on the date of issuance of the final regulations under subsection (b).".
- (b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for such subchapter is amended by adding at the end the following:

"41724. Musical instruments.".

SEC. 404. EXTENSION OF COMPETITIVE ACCESS REPORTS.

Section 47107(s)(3) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) SUNSET PROVISION.—This subsection shall cease to be effective beginning October 1, 2015.". SEC. 405. AIRFARES FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

- (1) the Armed Forces is comprised of approximately 1,450,000 members who are stationed on active duty at more than 6,000 military bases in 146 different countries;
- (2) the United States is indebted to the members of the Armed Forces, many of whom are in grave danger due to their engagement in, or exposure to, combat;
- (3) military service, especially in the current war against terrorism, often requires members of the Armed Forces to be separated from their families on short notice, for long periods of time, and under very stressful conditions;
- (4) the unique demands of military service often preclude members of the Armed Forces from purchasing discounted advance airline tickets in order to visit their loved ones at home; and
- (5) it is the patriotic duty of the people of the United States to support the members of the Armed Forces who are defending the Nation's interests around the world at great personal sacrifice.
- (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—
- (1) all United States commercial air carriers should seek to lend their support with flexible, generous policies applicable to members of the Armed Forces who are traveling on leave or liberty at their own expense; and
- (2) each United States air carrier, for all members of the Armed Forces who have been granted leave or liberty and who are traveling by air at their own expense, should—
- (A) seek to provide reduced air fares that are comparable to the lowest airfare for ticketed flights and that eliminate to the maximum extent possible advance purchase requirements.
- (B) seek to eliminate change fees or charges and any penalties;
- (C) seek to eliminate or reduce baggage and excess weight fees;
- (D) offer flexible terms that allow members to purchase, modify, or cancel tickets without time restrictions, and to waive fees (including baggage fees), ancillary costs, or penalties; and
- (E) seek to take proactive measures to ensure that all airline employees, particularly those who issue tickets and respond to members of the Armed Forces and their family members, are trained in the policies of the airline aimed at benefitting members of the Armed Forces who are on leave or liberty.

SEC. 406. REVIEW OF AIR CARRIER FLIGHT DELAYS, CANCELLATIONS, AND AS-SOCIATED CAUSES.

- (a) REVIEW.—The Inspector General of the Department of Transportation shall conduct a review regarding air carrier flight delays, cancellations, and associated causes to update the 2000 report numbered CR-2000-112 and titled "Audit of Air Carrier Flight Delays and Cancellations".
- (b) ASSESSMENTS.—In conducting the review under subsection (a), the Inspector General shall assess—

- (1) the need for an update on delay and cancellation statistics, including with respect to the number of chronically delayed flights and taxiin and taxi-out times:
  - (2) air carriers' scheduling practices;
- (3) the need for a reexamination of capacity benchmarks at the Nation's busiest airports;
- (4) the impact of flight delays and cancellations on air travelers, including recommendations for programs that could be implemented to address the impact of flight delays on air travelers:
- (5) the effect that limited air carrier service options on routes have on the frequency of delays and cancellations on such routes;
- (6) the effect of the rules and regulations of the Department of Transportation on the decisions of air carriers to delay or cancel flights; and
- (7) the impact of flight delays and cancellations on the airline industry.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Inspector General shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the review conducted under this section, including the assessments described in subsection (b).

SEC. 407. COMPENSATION FOR DELAYED BAGGAGE.

- (a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to—
- (1) examine delays in the delivery of checked baggage to passengers of air carriers; and
- (2) assess the options for and examine the impact of establishing minimum standards to compensate a passenger in the case of an unreasonable delay in the delivery of checked baggage.
- (b) CONSIDERATION.—In conducting the study, the Comptroller General shall take into account the additional fees for checked baggage that are imposed by many air carriers and how the additional fees should improve an air carrier's baggage performance.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 408. DOT AIRLINE CONSUMER COMPLAINT INVESTIGATIONS.

- The Secretary of Transportation may investigate consumer complaints regarding—
  - (1) flight cancellations;
- (2) compliance with Federal regulations concerning overbooking seats on flights;
- (3) lost, damaged, or delayed baggage, and difficulties with related airline claims procedures:
- (4) problems in obtaining refunds for unused or lost tickets or fare adjustments;
- (5) incorrect or incomplete information about fares, discount fare conditions and availability, overcharges, and fare increases;
- (6) the rights of passengers who hold frequent flyer miles or equivalent redeemable awards earned through customer-loyalty programs; and (7) deceptive or misleading advertising.

SEC. 409. STUDY OF OPERATORS REGULATED UNDER PART 135.

- (a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with interested parties, shall conduct a study of operators regulated under part 135 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations.
- (b) CONTENTS.—In conducting the study under subsection (a), the Administrator shall analyze the part 135 fleet in the United States, which shall include analysis of—
  - (1) the size and type of aircraft in the fleet;
  - (2) the equipment utilized by the fleet;
  - (3) the hours flown each year by the fleet;
- (4) the utilization rates with respect to the fleet:

- (5) the safety record of various categories of use and aircraft types with respect to the fleet, through a review of the database of the National Transportation Safety Board;
- (6) the sales revenues of the fleet; and
- (7) the number of passengers and airports served by the fleet.
- (c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study conducted under subsection (a).

SEC. 410. USE OF CELL PHONES ON PASSENGER AIRCRAFT.

- (a) CELL PHONE STUDY.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a study on the impact of the use of cell phones for voice communications in an aircraft during a flight in scheduled passenger air transportation where currently permitted by foreign governments in foreign air transportation.
  - (b) CONTENTS.—The study shall include—
- (1) a review of foreign government and air carrier policies on the use of cell phones during flight;
- (2) a review of the extent to which passengers use cell phones for voice communications during flight; and
- (3) a summary of any impacts of cell phone use during flight on safety, the quality of the flight experience of passengers, and flight attendants.
- (c) COMMENT PERIOD.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall publish in the Federal Register the results of the study and allow 60 days for public comment.
- (a) CELL PHONE REPORT.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 411. ESTABLISHMENT OF ADVISORY COM-MITTEE FOR AVIATION CONSUMER PROTECTION.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall establish an advisory committee for aviation consumer protection to advise the Secretary in carrying out activities relating to airline customer service improvements.
- (b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Secretary shall appoint the members of the advisory committee, which shall be comprised of one representative each of—
  - (1) air carriers;
- (2) airport operators;
- (3) State or local governments with expertise in consumer protection matters: and
- (4) nonprofit public interest groups with expertise in consumer protection matters.
- (c) VACANCIES.—A vacancy in the advisory committee shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.
- (d) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the advisory committee shall serve without pay but shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code.
- (e) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary shall designate, from among the individuals appointed under subsection (b), an individual to serve as chairperson of the advisory committee.
- (f) DUTIES.—The duties of the advisory committee shall include—
- (1) evaluating existing aviation consumer protection programs and providing recommendations for the improvement of such programs, if needed; and

- (2) providing recommendations for establishing additional aviation consumer protection programs, if needed.
- (g) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than February 1 of each of the first 2 calendar years beginning after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report containing—
- (1) the recommendations made by the advisory committee during the preceding calendar year; and
- (2) an explanation of how the Secretary has implemented each recommendation and, for each recommendation not implemented, the Secretary's reason for not implementing the recommendation.
- (h) TERMINATION.—The advisory committee established under this section shall terminate on September 30, 2015.

SEC. 412. DISCLOSURE OF SEAT DIMENSIONS TO FACILITATE THE USE OF CHILD SAFETY SEATS ON AIRCRAFT.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall initiate a rulemaking to require each air carrier operating under part 121 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, to post on the Internet Web site of the air carrier the maximum dimensions of a child safety seat that can be used on each aircraft operated by the air carrier to enable passengers to determine which child safety seats can be used on those aircraft.

SEC. 413. SCHEDULE REDUCTION.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—If the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration determines that—
- (1) the aircraft operations of air carriers during any hour at an airport exceed the hourly maximum departure and arrival rate established by the Administrator for such operations; and
- (2) the operations in excess of the maximum departure and arrival rate for such hour at such airport are likely to have a significant adverse effect on the safe and efficient use of navigable airspace.
- the Administrator shall convene a meeting of such carriers to reduce pursuant to section 41722 of title 49, United States Code, on a voluntary basis, the number of such operations so as not to exceed the maximum departure and arrival
- (b) No AGREEMENT.—If the air carriers participating in a meeting with respect to an airport under subsection (a) are not able to agree to a reduction in the number of flights to and from the airport so as not to exceed the maximum departure and arrival rate, the Administrator shall take such action as is necessary to ensure such reduction is implemented.
- (c) Subsequent Schedule Increases.—Subsequent to any reduction in operations under subsection (a) or (b) at an airport, if the Administrator determines that the hourly number of aircraft operations at that airport is less than the amount that can be handled safely and efficiently, the Administrator shall ensure that priority is given to United States air carriers in permitting additional aircraft operations with respect to that hour.

SEC. 414. RONALD REAGAN WASHINGTON NA-TIONAL AIRPORT SLOT EXEMP-TIONS.

- (a) INCREASE IN NUMBER OF SLOT EXEMPTIONS.—Section 41718 is amended by adding at the end the following:
  - "(g) ADDITIONAL SLOT EXEMPTIONS.—
- "(1) INCREASE IN SLOT EXEMPTIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012, the Secretary shall grant, by order 16 exemptions from—

- "(A) the application of sections 49104(a)(5), 49109, and 41714 to air carriers to operate limited frequencies and aircraft on routes between Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport and airports located beyond the perimeter described in section 49109: and
- "(B) the requirements of subparts K and S of part 93, Code of Federal Regulations.
- "(2) NEW ENTRANTS AND LIMITED INCUMBENTS.—Of the slot exemptions made available under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall make 8 available to limited incumbent air carriers or new entrant air carriers (as such terms are defined in section 41714(h)). Such exemptions shall be allocated pursuant to the application process established by the Secretary under subsection (d). The Secretary shall consider the extent to which the exemptions will—
- "(A) provide air transportation with domestic network benefits in areas beyond the perimeter described in section 49109;
  - $\lq\lq(B)$  increase competition in multiple markets;
- "(C) not reduce travel options for communities served by small hub airports and medium hub airports within the perimeter described in section 49109:
- "(D) not result in meaningfully increased travel delays;
- "(E) enhance options for nonstop travel to and from the beyond-perimeter airports that will be served as a result of those exemptions;
- "(F) have a positive impact on the overall level of competition in the markets that will be served as a result of those exemptions: or
- "(G) produce public benefits, including the likelihood that the service to airports located beyond the perimeter described in section 49109 will result in lower fares, higher capacity, and a variety of service options.
- "(3) IMPROVED NETWORK SLOTS.—Of the slot exemptions made available under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall make 8 available to incumbent air carriers qualifying for status as a non-limited incumbent carrier at Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport as of the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012. Each such non-limited incumbent air carrier—
- "(A) may operate up to a maximum of 2 of the newly authorized slot exemptions;
- "(B) prior to exercising an exemption made available under paragraph (1), shall discontinue the use of a slot for service between Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport and a large hub airport within the perimeter as described in section 49109, and operate, in place of such service, service between Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport and an airport located beyond the perimeter described in section 49109;
- "(C) shall be entitled to return of the slot by the Secretary if use of the exemption made available to the carrier under paragraph (1) is discontinued;
- "(D) shall have sole discretion concerning the use of an exemption made available under paragraph (1), including the initial or any subsequent beyond perimeter destinations to be served; and
- "(E) shall file a notice of intent with the Secretary and subsequent notices of intent, when appropriate, to inform the Secretary of any change in circumstances concerning the use of any exemption made available under paragraph (1).
- (1).
  "(4) NOTICES OF INTENT.—Notices of intent under paragraph (3)(E) shall specify the beyond perimeter destination to be served and the slots the carrier shall discontinue using to serve a large hub airport located within the perimeter.
- "(5) CONDITIONS.—Beyond-perimeter flight operations carried out by an air carrier using an exemption granted under this subsection shall be subject to the following conditions:

"(A) An air carrier may not operate a multiaisle or widebody aircraft in conducting such operations.

'(B) An air carrier granted an exemption under this subsection is prohibited from transferring the rights to its beyond-perimeter exemptions pursuant to section 41714(j).

"(h) SCHEDULING PRIORITY.-In administering this section, the Secretary shall-

"(1) afford a scheduling priority to operations conducted by new entrant air carriers and limited incumbent air carriers over operations conducted by other air carriers granted additional slot exemptions under subsection (g) for service to airports located beyond the perimeter described in section 49109:

'(2) afford a scheduling priority to slot exemptions currently held by new entrant air carriers and limited incumbent air carriers for service to airports located beyond the perimeter described in section 49109, to the extent necessary to protect viability of such service; and

(3) consider applications from foreign air carriers that are certificated by the government of Canada if such consideration is required by the bilateral aviation agreement between the United States and Canada and so long as the conditions and limitations under this section apply to such foreign air carriers.

(b) HOURLY LIMITATION.—Section 41718(c)(2) is amended to read as follows:

'(2) General exemptions.-

"(A) HOURLY LIMITATION.—The exemptions granted-

"(i) under subsections (a) and (b) and departures authorized under subsection (g)(2) may not be for operations between the hours of 10:00 p.m. and 7:00 a.m.; and

"§ 42301. Emergency contingency plans

'(a) Submission of Air Carrier and Air-PORT PLANS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, each of the following air carriers and airport operators shall submit to the Secretary of Transportation for review and approval an emergency contingency plan in accordance with the requirements of this section:

"(1) An air carrier providing covered air transportation at a commercial airport.

'(2) An operator of a commercial airport.

"(3) An operator of an airport used by an air carrier described in paragraph (1) for diversions. '(b) AIR CARRIER PLANS.

"(1) PLANS FOR INDIVIDUAL AIRPORTS.—An air carrier shall submit an emergency contingency plan under subsection (a) for-

'(A) each airport at which the carrier provides covered air transportation; and

'(B) each airport at which the carrier has flights for which the carrier has primary responsibility for inventory control.

'(2) CONTENTS.—An emergency contingency plan submitted by an air carrier for an airport under subsection (a) shall contain a description of how the carrier will—

"(A) provide adequate food, potable water, restroom facilities, comfortable cabin temperatures, and access to medical treatment for passengers onboard an aircraft at the airport when the departure of a flight is delayed or the disembarkation of passengers is delayed:

'(B) share facilities and make gates available at the airport in an emergency; and

'(C) allow passengers to deplane following an excessive tarmac delay in accordance with paragraph(3).

"(3) Deplaning following an excessive TARMAC DELAY.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(C), an emergency contingency plan submitted by an air carrier under subsection (a) shall incorporate the following requirements:

'(A) A passenger shall have the option to deplane an aircraft and return to the airport terminal when there is an excessive tarmac delay

"(B) The option described in subparagraph (A) shall be offered to a passenger even if a flight in covered air transportation is diverted to a commercial airport other than the originally scheduled airport.

"(C) Notwithstanding the requirements described in subparagraphs (A) and (B), a passenger shall not have an option to deplane an aircraft and return to the airport terminal in the case of an excessive tarmac delay if-

"(i) an air traffic controller with authority over the aircraft advises the pilot in command that permitting a passenger to deplane would significantly disrupt airport operations; or

"(ii) the pilot in command determines that permitting a passenger to deplane would jeopardize passenger safety or security.

"(c) AIRPORT PLANS.—An emergency contingency plan submitted by an airport operator under subsection (a) shall contain a description of how the operator, to the maximum extent practicable, will-

"(1) provide for the deplanement of passengers following excessive tarmac delays;

"(2) provide for the sharing of facilities and make gates available at the airport in an emer-

"(3) provide a sterile area following excessive tarmac delays for passengers who have not yet cleared United States Customs and Border Pro'(d) UPDATES.—

'(1) AIR CARRIERS.—An air carrier shall update each emergency contingency plan submitted by the carrier under subsection (a) every 3 years and submit the update to the Secretary for review and approval.

"(2) AIRPORTS.—An airport operator shall update each emergency contingency plan submitted by the operator under subsection (a) every 5 years and submit the update to the Secretary for review and approval.

'(e) APPROVAL -

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the receipt of an emergency contingency plan submitted under subsection (a) or an update submitted under subsection (d), the Secretary shall review and approve or, if necessary, require modifications to the plan or update to ensure that the plan or update will effectively address emergencies and provide for the health and safety of passengers.

"(2) FAILURE TO APPROVE OR REQUIRE MODI-FICATIONS.—If the Secretary fails to approve or require modifications to a plan or update under paragraph (1) within the timeframe specified in that paragraph, the plan or update shall be deemed to be approved.

"(3) ADHERENCE REQUIRED.—An air carrier or airport operator shall adhere to an emergency contingency plan of the carrier or operator approved under this section.

"(f) MINIMUM STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall establish, as necessary or desirable, minimum standards for elements in an emergency contingency plan required to be submitted under

"(g) PUBLIC ACCESS.—An air carrier or airport operator required to submit an emergency contingency plan under this section shall ensure public access to the plan after its approval under this section on the Internet Web site of the carrier or operator or by such other means as determined by the Secretary.

"(h) REPORTS.—Not later than 30 days after any flight experiences an excessive tarmac delay, the air carrier responsible for such flight shall submit a written description of the incident and its resolution to the Aviation Consumer Protection Division of the Department of Transportation.

'(i) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:

"(1) COMMERCIAL AIRPORT.—The term 'commercial airport' means a large hub, medium hub, small hub, or nonhub airport.

"(2) COVERED AIR TRANSPORTATION.—The term 'covered air transportation' means scheduled or public charter passenger air transportation provided by an air carrier that operates an aircraft that as originally designed has a passenger capacity of 30 or more seats.

'(3) TARMAC DELAY.—The term 'tarmac delay' means the period during which passengers are on board an aircraft on the tarmac-

'(A) awaiting takeoff after the aircraft doors have been closed or after passengers have been boarded if the passengers have not been advised they are free to deplane; or

"(B) awaiting deplaning after the aircraft has landed.

'(4) Excessive tarmac delay.—The term 'excessive tarmac delay' means a tarmac delay that lasts for a length of time, as determined by the Secretary

"§ 42302. Consumer complaints

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall establish a consumer complaints toll-free hotline telephone number for the use of passengers in air transportation and shall take actions to notify the public of-

"(1) that telephone number; and

"(2) the Internet Web site of the Aviation Consumer Protection Division of the Department of Transportation.

- "(b) Notice to Passengers on the Inter-NET.—An air carrier or foreign air carrier providing scheduled air transportation using any aircraft that as originally designed has a passenger capacity of 30 or more passenger seats shall include on the Internet Web site of the car-
- "(1) the hotline telephone number established under subsection (a);
- '(2) the e-mail address, telephone number. and mailing address of the air carrier for the submission of complaints by passengers about air travel service problems: and

(3) the Internet Web site and mailing address of the Aviation Consumer Protection Division of the Department of Transportation for the submission of complaints by passengers about air travel service problems

Section 41731 is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1) by amending subparagraph (B) to read as follows:

(B) had an average of 10 enplanements per service day or more, as determined by the Secretary, during the most recent fiscal year beginning after September 30, 2012;'

(2) by amending subsection (c) to read as fol-

"(c) Exception for Locations in Alaska AND HAWAII.—Subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) of subsection (a)(1) shall not apply with respect to locations in the State of Alaska or the State of Hawaii.":

lows:

"(d) Exceptions for Locations More Than 175 DRIVING MILES FROM THE NEAREST LARGE OR MEDIUM HUB AIRPORT.—Subsection (a)(1)(B) shall not apply with respect to locations that are more than 175 driving miles from the nearest large or medium hub airport."; and (4) by adding at the end the following:

'(e) WAIVERS.—For fiscal year 2013 and each fiscal year thereafter, the Secretary may waive, on an annual basis, subsection (a)(1)(B) with respect to a location if the location demonstrates to the Secretary's satisfaction that the reason location averages fewer thanenplanements per day is due to a temporary decline in enplanements.

'(f) DEFINITION.—For purposes of subsection (a)(1)(B), the term 'enplanements' means the number of passengers enplaning, at an eligible place, on flights operated by the subsidized essential air service carrier."

SEC. 422. ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE ELIGIBILITY.

Section 41731(a)(1) is further amended-(1) in subparagraph (C) by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

'(D) is a community that, at any time during the period between September 30, 2010, and September 30, 2011, inclusive-

"(i) received essential air service for which compensation was provided to an air carrier under this subchapter; or

"(ii) received a 90-day notice of intent to terminate essential air service and the Secretary required the air carrier to continue to provide such service to the community."

SEC. 423. ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE MARKETING.

Section 41733(c)(1) is amended-

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (E) as subparagraph (F);

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (D) the followina:

"(E) whether the air carrier has included a plan in its proposal to market its services to the community: and".

SEC. 424. NOTICE TO COMMUNITIES PRIOR TO TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR SUBSIDIZED ESSENTIAL AIR SERV-ICE.

Section 41733 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Notice to Communities Prior to Ter-

MINATION OF ELIGIBILITY.-

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall notify each community receiving basic essential air service for which compensation is being paid under this subchapter on or before the 45th day before issuing any final decision to end the payment of such compensation due to a determination by the Secretary that providing such service requires a rate of subsidy per passenger in excess of the subsidy cap.

"(2) PROCEDURES TO AVOID TERMINATION .-The Secretary shall establish, by order, procedures by which each community notified of an impending loss of subsidy under paragraph (1) may work directly with an air carrier to ensure that the air carrier is able to submit a proposal to the Secretary to provide essential air service to such community for an amount of compensation that would not exceed the subsidy cap.

"(3) ASSISTANCE PROVIDED.—The Secretary shall provide, by order, information to each community notified under paragraph (1) regarding-

"(A) the procedures established pursuant to paragraph (2): and

"(B) the maximum amount of compensation that could be provided under this subchapter to an air carrier serving such community that would comply with basic essential air service and the subsidy cap.".

(3) by amending subsection (d) to read as fol-ws: "(d) EXCEPTIONS FOR LOCATIONS MORE THAN SEC. 425. RESTORATION OF ELIGIBILITY TO A PLACE DETERMINED TO BE INELI-GIBLE FOR SUBSIDIZED ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE.

Section 41733 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

'(g) PROPOSALS OF STATE AND LOCAL GOV-ERNMENTS TO RESTORE ELIGIBILITY .-

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary, after the date of enactment of this subsection, ends payment of compensation to an air carrier for providing basic essential air service to an eligible place because the Secretary has determined that providing such service requires a rate of subsidy per passenger in excess of the subsidy cap or that the place is no longer an eligible place pursuant to section 41731(a)(1)(B), a State or local government may submit to the Secretary a proposal for restoring compensation for such service. Such proposal shall be a joint proposal of the State or local government and an air carrier.

'(2) Determination by Secretary.—The Secretary shall issue an order restoring the eligibility of the otherwise eligible place to receive basic essential air service by an air carrier for compensation under subsection (c) if-

(A) a State or local government submits to the Secretary a proposal under paragraph (1); and

(B) the Secretary determines that—

"(i) the rate of subsidy per passenger under the proposal does not exceed the subsidy cap;

"(ii) the proposal is likely to result in an average number of enplanements per day that will satisfy the requirement in section 41731(a)(1)(B):

"(iii) the proposal is consistent with the legal and regulatory requirements of the essential air service program.

'(h) SUBSIDY CAP DEFINED —In this section the term 'subsidy cap' means the subsidy-perpassenger cap established by section 332 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (Public Law 106-69; 113 Stat. 1022)."

SEC. 426. ADJUSTMENTS TO COMPENSATION FOR SIGNIFICANTLY INCREASED COSTS.

- (a) Emergency Across-the-Board Adjust-MENT.—Subject to the availability of funds, the Secretary may increase the rates of compensation payable to air carriers under subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code, to compensate such carriers for increased aviation fuel costs without regard to any agreement or requirement relating to the renegotiation of contracts or any notice requirement under section 41734 of such title.
- (b) EXPEDITED PROCESS FOR ADJUSTMENTS TO Individual Contracts.
- (1) IN GENERAL —Section 41734(d) is amended by striking "continue to pay" and all that follows through "compensation sufficient—" and inserting "provide the carrier with compensation sufficient—'
- (2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to compensation to air carriers for air service provided after the 30th day following the date of enactment of this Act.
- (c) SUBSIDY CAP.—Subject to the availability of funds, the Secretary may waive, on a caseby-case basis, the subsidy-per-passenger cap established by section 332 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (Public Law 106-69; 113 Stat. 1022). A waiver issued under this subsection shall remain in effect for a limited period of time, as determined by the Secretary.

Section 47504 (as amended by this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Determination of Fair Market Value of Residential Properties.—In approving a project to acquire residential real property using financial assistance made available under this section or chapter 471, the Secretary shall ensure that the appraisal of the property to be acquired disregards any decrease or increase in the fair market value of the real property caused by the project for which the property is to be acquired, or by the likelihood that the property would be acquired for the project, other than that due to physical deterioration within the reasonable control of the owner.".

SEC. 506. PROHIBITION ON OPERATING CERTAIN AIRCRAFT WEIGHING 75,000 POUNDS OR LESS NOT COMPLYING WITH STAGE 3 NOISE LEVELS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter II of chapter 475 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 47534. Prohibition on operating certain aircraft weighing 75,000 pounds or less not complying with stage 3 noise levels

"(a) Prohibition.—Except as otherwise provided by this section, after December 31, 2015, a person may not operate a civil subsonic jet airplane with a maximum weight of 75,000 pounds or less, and for which an airworthiness certificate (other than an experimental certificate) has been issued, to or from an airport in the United States unless the Secretary of Transportation finds that the aircraft complies with stage 3 noise levels.

"(b) AIRCRAFT OPERATIONS OUTSIDE 48 CON-TIGUOUS STATES.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to aircraft operated only outside the 48 contiguous States.

- "(c) Temporary Operations.—The Secretary may allow temporary operation of an aircraft otherwise prohibited from operation under subsection (a) to or from an airport in the contiguous United States by granting a special flight authorization for one or more of the following circumstances:
- "(1) To sell, lease, or use the aircraft outside the 48 contiguous States.
  - "(2) To scrap the aircraft.
- "(3) To obtain modifications to the aircraft to meet stage 3 noise levels.
- "(4) To perform scheduled heavy maintenance or significant modifications on the aircraft at a maintenance facility located in the contiguous 48 States.
- "(5) To deliver the aircraft to an operator leasing the aircraft from the owner or return the aircraft to the lessor.
- "(6) To prepare, park, or store the aircraft in anticipation of any of the activities described in paragraphs (1) through (5).
- "(7) To provide transport of persons and goods in the relief of an emergency situation.
- "(8) To divert the aircraft to an alternative airport in the 48 contiguous States on account of weather, mechanical, fuel, air traffic control, or other safety reasons while conducting a flight in order to perform any of the activities described in paragraphs (1) through (7).
- "(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations or other guidance as may be necessary for the implementation of this section.
  - "(e) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.-
- "(1) AIP GRANT ASSURANCES.—Noncompliance with subsection (a) shall not be construed as a violation of section 47107 or any regulations prescribed thereunder.
- "(2) PENDING APPLICATIONS.—Nothing in this section may be construed as interfering with, nullifying, or otherwise affecting determinations made by the Federal Aviation Administration, or to be made by the Administration, with respect to applications under part 161 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, that were pending on the date of enactment of this section."
  - (b) Conforming Amendments.—
  - (1) PENALTIES.—Section 47531 is amended—
- (A) in the section heading by striking "for violating sections 47528-47530"; and
- (B) by striking "47529, or 47530" and inserting "47529, 47530, or 47534".
- (2) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Section 47532 is amended by inserting "or 47534" after "47528–47531".
- (3) ANALYSIS.—The analysis for subchapter II of chapter 475 is amended—
- (A) by striking the item relating to section 47531 and inserting the following:
- "47531. Penalties."; and
- (B) by adding at the end the following:
- "47534. Prohibition on operating certain aircraft weighing 75,000 pounds or less not complying with stage 3 noise levels.".

SEC. 507. AIRCRAFT DEPARTURE QUEUE MANAGE-MENT PILOT PROGRAM.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out a pilot program at not more than 5 public-use airports under which the Federal Aviation Administration shall use funds made available under section 48101(a) to test air traffic flow management tools, methodologies, and procedures that will allow air traffic controllers of the Administration to better manage the flow of aircraft on the ground and reduce the length of ground holds and idling time for aircraft.
- (b) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In selecting from among airports at which to conduct the pilot program, the Secretary shall give priority consideration to airports at which improvements in ground control efficiencies are likely to achieve the greatest fuel savings or air quality or other environmental benefits, as measured by the amount of reduced fuel, reduced emissions, or other environmental benefits per dollar of funds expended under the pilot program.

(c) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—Not more than a total of $2,500,000 may be expended under the pilot program at any single public-use airport.

SEC. 508. HIGH PERFORMANCE, SUSTAINABLE, AND COST-EFFECTIVE AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL FACILITIES.

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may implement, to the extent practicable, sustainable practices for the incorporation of energy-efficient design, equipment, systems, and other measures in the construction and major renovation of air traffic control facilities of the Administration in order to reduce energy consumption at, improve the environmental performance of, and reduce the cost of maintenance for such facilities.

SEC. 509. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the European Union directive extending the European Union's emissions trading proposal to international civil aviation without working through the International Civil Aviation Organization (in this section referred to as the "ICAO") in a consensus-based fashion is inconsistent with the Convention on International Civil Aviation, completed in Chicago on December 7, 1944 (TIAS 1591; commonly known as the "Chicago Convention"), and other relevant air services agreements and antithetical to building international cooperation to address effectively the problem of greenhouse gas emissions by aircraft engaged in international civil aviation;

(2) the European Union and its member states should instead work with other contracting states of ICAO to develop a consensual approach to addressing aircraft greenhouse gas emissions through ICAO; and

(3) officials of the United States Government, and particularly the Secretary of Transportation and the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, should use all political, diplomatic, and legal tools at the disposal of the United States to ensure that the European Union's emissions trading scheme is not applied to aircraft registered by the United States or the operators of those aircraft, including the mandates that United States carriers provide emissions data to and purchase emissions allowances from or surrender emissions allowances to the European Union Member States.

SEC. 510. AVIATION NOISE COMPLAINTS.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, each owner or operator of a large hub airport (as defined in section 40102(a) of title 49, United States Code) shall publish on an Internet Web site of the airport a telephone number to receive aviation noise complaints related to the airport.

SEC. 511. PILOT PROGRAM FOR ZERO-EMISSION AIRPORT VEHICLES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 471 is amended by inserting after section 47136 the following:

"§47136a. Zero-emission airport vehicles and infrastructure

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation may establish a pilot program under which the sponsor of a public-use airport may use funds made available under section 47117 or section 48103 for use at such airport to carry out activities associated with the acquisition and operation of zero-emission vehicles (as defined in section 88.102-94 of title 40, Code of Federal Regulations), including the construction or modification of infrastructure to facilitate the delivery of fuel and services necessary for the use of such vehicles.

"(b) LOCATION IN AIR QUALITY NONATTAIN-MENT AREAS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A public-use airport may be eligible for participation in the program only if the airport is located in a nonattainment area (as defined in section 171 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7501)).

"(2) SHORTAGE OF APPLICANTS.—If the Secretary receives an insufficient number of applications from public-use airports located in such areas, the Secretary may permit public-use airports that are not located in such areas to participate in the program.

"(c) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In selecting from among applicants for participation in the program, the Secretary shall give priority consideration to applicants that will achieve the greatest air quality benefits measured by the amount of emissions reduced per dollar of funds expended under the program.

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subchapter, the Federal share of the costs of a project carried out under the program shall be 50 percent.

"(e) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.-

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The sponsor of a public-use airport carrying out activities funded under the program may not use more than 10 percent of the amounts made available under the program in any fiscal year for technical assistance in carrying out such activities.

"(2) USE OF UNIVERSITY TRANSPORTATION CEN-TER.—Participants in the program may use a university transportation center receiving grants under section 5506 in the region of the airport to receive the technical assistance described in paragraph (1).

"(f) MATERIALS IDENTIFYING BEST PRACTICES.—The Secretary may develop and make available materials identifying best practices for carrying out activities funded under the program based on projects carried out under section 47136 and other sources."

(b) REPORT ON EFFECTIVENESS OF PROGRAM.— Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containin—

(1) an evaluation of the effectiveness of the program established by section 47136a of title 49, United States Code (as added by this section):

(2) the performance measures used to measure such effectiveness, such as the goals for the projects implemented and the amount of emissions reduction achieved through these projects;

(3) an assessment of the sufficiency of the data collected during the program to make a decision on whether or not to implement the program:

(4) an identification of all public-use airports that expressed an interest in participating in the program; and

(5) a description of the mechanisms used by the Secretary to ensure that the information and expertise gained by participants in the program is transferred among the participants and to other interested parties, including other public-use airports.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 47136 the following: "47136a. Zero-emission airport vehicles and infrastructure."

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 47136(f)(2) is amended—

(1) in the paragraph heading by striking "EL-IGIBLE CONSORTIUM" and inserting "UNIVERSITY TRANSPORTATION CENTER"; and

(2) by striking "an eligible consortium" and inserting "a university transportation center".

SEC. 512. INCREASING THE ENERGY EFFICIENCY OF AIRPORT POWER SOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 471 is amended by inserting after section 47140 the following:

"$47140a. Increasing the energy efficiency of airport power sources

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall establish a program under which the Secretary shall encourage the sponsor of each public-use airport to assess the airport's energy requirements, including heating and cooling, base load, back-up power, and power for on-road airport vehicles and ground support equipment, in order to identify opportunities to increase energy efficiency at the airport.

"(b) GRANTS.-

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants from amounts made available under section 48103 to assist airport sponsors that have completed the assessment described in subsection (a) to acquire or construct equipment, including hydrogen equipment and related infrastructure, that will increase energy efficiency at the airport.

"(2) APPLICATION.—To be eligible for a grant under paragraph (1), the sponsor of a public-use airport shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 47140 the following: "47140a. Increasing the energy efficiency of airport power sources.".

TITLE VI—FAA EMPLOYEES AND ORGANIZATION

SEC. 601. FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT SYSTEM.

Section 40122(a) is amended-

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (3) and (4) as paragraphs (4) and (5), respectively; and

(2) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) DISPUTE RESOLUTION.—

"(A) MEDIATION.—If the Administrator does not reach an agreement under paragraph (1) or the provisions referred to in subsection (g)(2)(C) with the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees, the Administrator and the bargaining representative—

"(i) shall use the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to attempt to reach such agreement in accordance with part 1425 of title 29, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012); or

"(ii) may by mutual agreement adopt alternative procedures for the resolution of disputes or impasses arising in the negotiation of the collective-bargaining agreement.

"(B) MID-TERM BARGAINING.—If the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service under subparagraph (A)(i) do not lead to the resolution of issues in controversy arising from the negotiation of a mid-term collective-bargaining agreement, the Federal Service Impasses

Panel shall assist the parties in resolving the impasse in accordance with section 7119 of title 5

``(C) Binding arbitration for term bargaining.—

"(i) ASSISTANCE FROM FEDERAL SERVICE IM-PASSES PANEL.—If the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service under subparagraph (A)(i) do not lead to the resolution of issues in controversy arising from the negotiation of a term collective-bargaining agreement, the Administrator and the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees (in this subparagraph referred to as the 'parties') shall submit their issues in controversy to the Federal Service Impasses Panel. The Panel shall assist the parties in resolving the impasse by asserting jurisdiction and ordering binding arbitration by a private arbitration board consisting of 3 mem-

"(ii) APPOINTMENT OF ARBITRATION BOARD.— The Executive Director of the Panel shall provide for the appointment of the 3 members of a private arbitration board under clause (i) by requesting the Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to prepare a list of not less than 15 names of arbitrators with Federal sector experience and by providing the list to the parties. Not later than 10 days after receiving the list, the parties shall each select one person from the list. The 2 arbitrators selected by the parties shall then select a third person from the list not later than 7 days after being selected. If either of the parties fails to select a person or if the 2 arbitrators are unable to agree on the third person in 7 days, the parties shall make the selection by alternately striking names on the list until one arbitrator remains.

"(iii) FRAMING ISSUES IN CONTROVERSY.—If the parties do not agree on the framing of the issues to be submitted for arbitration, the arbitration board shall frame the issues.

"(iv) Hearings.—The arbitration board shall give the parties a full and fair hearing, including an opportunity to present evidence in support of their claims and an opportunity to present their case in person, by counsel, or by other representative as they may elect.

"(v) DECISIONS.—The arbitration board shall render its decision within 90 days after the date of its appointment. Decisions of the arbitration board shall be conclusive and binding upon the parties.

"(vi) MATTERS FOR CONSIDERATION.—The arbitration board shall take into consideration such factors as—"(I) the effect of its arbitration decisions on the Federal Aviation Administration's ability to attract and retain a qualified workforce;

"(II) the effect of its arbitration decisions on the Federal Aviation Administration's budget; and

"(III) any other factors whose consideration would assist the board in fashioning a fair and equitable award.

"(vii) COSTS.—The parties shall share costs of the arbitration equally.

the arbitration equally.

"(3) RATIFICATION OF AGREEMENTS.—Upon reaching a voluntary agreement or at the conclusion of the binding arbitration under paragraph (2)(C), the final agreement, except for those matters decided by an arbitration board, shall be subject to ratification by the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees, if so requested by the bargaining representative, and the final agreement shall be subject to approval by the head of the agency in accordance with the provisions referred to in subsection (g)(2)(C)."

SEC. 602. PRESIDENTIAL RANK AWARD PROGRAM.

Section 40122(g)(2) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (G) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in subparagraph (H) by striking "Board." and inserting "Board; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(I) subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 4507 (relating to Meritorious Executive or Distinguished Executive rank awards) and subsections (b) and (c) of section 4507a (relating to Meritorious Senior Professional or Distinguished Senior Professional rank awards), except that—"(i) for purposes of applying such provisions to the personnel management system—

"(I) the term 'agency' means the Department of Transportation;

"(II) the term 'senior executive' means a Federal Aviation Administration executive;

"(III) the term 'career appointee' means a Federal Aviation Administration career executive: and

"(IV) the term 'senior career employee' means a Federal Aviation Administration career senior professional; "(ii) receipt by a career appointee or a senior career employee of the rank of Meritorious Executive or Meritorious Senior Professional entitles the individual to a lump-sum payment of an amount equal to 20 percent of annual basic pay, which shall be in addition to the basic pay paid under the Federal Aviation Administration Executive Compensation Plan; and

"(iii) receipt by a career appointee or a senior career employee of the rank of Distinguished Executive or Distinguished Senior Professional entitles the individual to a lump-sum payment of an amount equal to 35 percent of annual basic pay, which shall be in addition to the basic pay paid under the Federal Aviation Administration Executive Compensation Plan."

SEC. 603. COLLEGIATE TRAINING INITIATIVE STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study on training options for graduates of the Collegiate Training Initiative program (in this section referred to as "CTI" programs) conducted under section 44506(c) of title 49. United States Code.

(b) CONTENTS.—The study shall analyze the impact of providing as an alternative to the current training provided at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center of the Federal Aviation Administration a new air traffic controller orientation session at such Center for graduates of CTI programs followed by on-the-job training for such new air traffic controllers who are graduates of CTI programs and shall include an analysis of—

(1) the cost effectiveness of such an alternative training approach; and

(2) the effect that such an alternative training approach would have on the overall quality of training received by graduates of CTI programs.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 604. FRONTLINE MANAGER STAFFING.

- (a) STUDY.—Not later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall commission an independent study on frontline manager staffing requirements in air traffic control facilities.
- (b) Considerations.—In conducting the study, the Administrator may take into consideration—
- (1) the managerial tasks expected to be performed by frontline managers, including employee development, management, and counseling:
- (2) the number of supervisory positions of operation requiring watch coverage in each air traffic control facility;
- (3) coverage requirements in relation to traffic demand:

(4) facility type;

- (5) complexity of traffic and managerial responsibilities;
- (6) proficiency and training requirements; and (7) such other factors as the Administrator considers appropriate.
- (c) Participation.—The Administrator shall ensure the participation of frontline managers who currently work in safety-related operational areas of the Administration.
- (d) DETERMINATIONS.—The Administrator shall transmit any determinations made as a result of the study to the heads of the appropriate lines of business within the Administration, including the Chief Operating Officer of the Air Traffic Organization.
- (e) REPORT.—Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the study and a description of any determinations submitted to the Chief Operating Officer under subsection (d).

(f) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "frontline manager" means first-level, operational supervisors and managers who work in safety-related operational areas of the Administration

SEC. 605. FAA TECHNICAL TRAINING AND STAFF-ING.

(a) STUDY.—

- (1) In GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a study to assess the adequacy of the Administrator's technical training strategy and improvement plan for airway transportation systems specialists (in this section referred to as "FAA systems specialists").
  - (2) CONTENTS.—The study shall include—
- (A) a review of the current technical training strategy and improvement plan for FAA systems specialists;
- (B) recommendations to improve the technical training strategy and improvement plan needed by FAA systems specialists to be proficient in the maintenance of the latest technologies;
- (C) a description of actions that the Administration has undertaken to ensure that FAA systems specialists receive up-to-date training on the latest technologies; and
- (D) a recommendation regarding the most cost-effective approach to provide training to FAA systems specialists.
- (3) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.
  - (b) Workload of Systems Specialists.—
- (1) STUDY BY NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall make appropriate arrangements for the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study of the assumptions and methods used by the Federal Aviation Administration to estimate staffing needs for FAA systems specialists to ensure proper maintenance and certification of the national airspace system.
- (2) CONSULTATION.—In conducting the study, the National Academy of Sciences shall—
- (A) consult with the exclusive bargaining representative certified under section 7111 of title 5, United States Code: and
- (B) include recommendations for objective staffing standards that maintain the safety of the national airspace system.
- (3) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the initiation of the arrangements under paragraph (1), the National Academy of Sciences shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

$SEC.\ 606.\ SAFETY\ CRITICAL\ STAFFING.$

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than October 1, 2012, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall implement, in as cost-effective a manner as possible, the staffing model for aviation safety inspectors developed pursuant to the National Academy of Sciences study entitled "Staffing Standards for Aviation Safety Inspectors". In doing so, the Administrator shall consult with interested persons, including the exclusive bargaining representative for aviation safety inspectors certified under section 7111 of title 5, United States Code.
- (b) REPORT.—Not later than January 1 of each year beginning after September 30, 2012, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, the staffing model described in subsection (a).

SEC. 607. AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SPECIALIST QUALIFICATION TRAINING.

Section 44506 is amended-

- (1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and
- (2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:
- "(d) AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SPECIALIST QUALIFICATION TRAINING.—
- "(1) APPOINTMENT OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL SPECIALISTS.—The Administrator is authorized to appoint a qualified air traffic control specialist candidate for placement in an airport traffic control facility if the candidate has—
- "(A) received a control tower operator certification (referred to in this subsection as a 'CTO' certificate); and
- "(B) satisfied all other applicable qualification requirements for an air traffic control specialist position, including successful completion of orientation training at the Federal Aviation Administration Academy.
- "(2) COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS.—An individual appointed under paragraph (1) shall receive the same compensation and benefits, and be treated in the same manner as, any other individual appointed as a developmental air traffic controller.
- "(3) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report that evaluates the effectiveness of the air traffic control specialist qualification training provided pursuant to this section, including the graduation rates of candidates who received a CTO certificate and are working in airport traffic control facilities.
- "(4) ADDITIONAL APPOINTMENTS.—If the Administrator determines that air traffic control specialists appointed pursuant to this subsection are more successful in carrying out the duties of an air traffic controller than air traffic control specialists hired from the general public without any such certification, the Administrator shall increase, to the maximum extent practicable, the number of appointments of candidates who possess such certification.
- "(5) REIMBURSEMENT FOR TRAVEL EXPENSES ASSOCIATED WITH CERTIFICATIONS.—
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the Administrator may accept reimbursement from an educational entity that provides training to an air traffic control specialist candidate to cover reasonable travel expenses of the Administrator associated with issuing certifications to such candidates.
- "(B) TREATMENT OF REIMBURSEMENTS.—Notwithstanding section 3302 of title 31, any reimbursement authorized to be collected under subparagraph (A) shall—
- "(i) be credited as offsetting collections to the account that finances the activities and services for which the reimbursement is accepted;
- "(ii) be available for expenditure only to pay the costs of activities and services for which the reimbursement is accepted, including all costs associated with collecting such reimbursement; and
- "(iii) remain available until expended."

SEC. 608. FAA AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER STAFF-ING.

(a) STUDY BY NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study of the air traffic controller standards used by the Federal Aviation Administration (in this

- section referred to as the "FAA") to estimate staffing needs for FAA air traffic controllers to ensure the safe operation of the national airspace system in the most cost effective manner.
- (b) CONSULTATION.—In conducting the study, the National Academy of Sciences shall consult with the exclusive bargaining representative of employees of the FAA certified under section 7111 of title 5, United States Code, and other interested parties, including Government and industry representatives.
- (c) Contents.—The study shall include—
- (1) an examination of representative information on productivity, human factors, traffic activity, and improved technology and equipment used in air traffic control;
- (2) an examination of recent National Academy of Sciences reviews of the complexity model performed by MITRE Corporation that support the staffing standards models for the en route air traffic control environment; and
- (3) consideration of the Administration's current and estimated budgets and the most cost-effective staffing model to best leverage available funding.
- (d) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the National Academy of Sciences shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.

  SEC. 609. AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER TRAINING AND SCHEDULING.
- (a) Training Strategy and Improvement Plan.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a study to assess the adequacy of training programs for air traffic controllers, including the Administrator's technical training strategy and improvement plan for air traffic controllers.
- (1) CONTENTS.—The study shall include—
- (A) a review of the current training system for air traffic controllers, including the technical training strategy and improvement plan;
- (B) an analysis of the competencies required of air traffic controllers for successful performance in the current and future projected air traffic control environment;
- (C) an analysis of the competencies projected to be required of air traffic controllers as the Federal Aviation Administration transitions to the Next Generation Air Transportation System;
- (D) an analysis of various training approaches available to satisfy the air traffic controller competencies identified under subparagraphs (B) and (C);
- (E) recommendations to improve the current training system for air traffic controllers, including the technical training strategy and improvement plan; and
- (F) the most cost-effective approach to provide training to air traffic controllers.
- (2) REPORT.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.
- (b) FACILITY TRAINING PROGRAM.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall conduct a comprehensive review and evaluation of its Academy and facility training efforts. The Administrator shall—
- (1) clarify responsibility for oversight and direction of the Academy's facility training program at the national level;
- (2) communicate information concerning that responsibility to facility managers; and
- (3) establish standards to identify the number of developmental air traffic controllers that can be accommodated at each facility, based on—

- (A) the number of available on-the-job training instructors:
  - (B) available classroom space;
  - (C) the number of available simulators;
  - (D) training requirements; and
- (E) the number of recently placed new personnel already in training.
- (c) AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER SCHEDULING.— Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Inspector General of the Department of Transportation shall conduct an assessment of the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic controller scheduling practices.
- (1) CONTENTS.—The assessment shall include, at a minimum—
- (A) an analysis of how air traffic controller schedules are determined;
- (B) an evaluation of how safety is taken into consideration when schedules are being developed and adopted;
- (C) an evaluation of scheduling practices that are cost effective to the Government;
- (D) an examination of how scheduling practices impact air traffic controller performance; and
- (E) any recommendations the Inspector General may have related to air traffic controller scheduling practices.
- (2) REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Inspector General shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the assessment conducted under this subsection.

SEC. 610. FAA FACILITY CONDITIONS.

- (a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of and review—
- (1) the conditions of a sampling of Federal Aviation Administration facilities across the United States, including offices, towers, centers, and terminal radar air control;
- (2) reports from employees of the Administration relating to respiratory ailments and other health conditions resulting from exposure to mold, asbestos, poor air quality, radiation, and facility-related hazards in facilities of the Administration:
- (3) conditions of such facilities that could interfere with such employees' ability to effectively and safely perform their duties;
- (4) the ability of managers and supervisors of such employees to promptly document and seek remediation for unsafe facility conditions;
- (5) whether employees of the Administration who report facility-related illnesses are treated appropriately;
- (6) utilization of scientifically approved remediation techniques to mitigate hazardous conditions in accordance with applicable State and local regulations and Occupational Safety and Health Administration practices by the Administration; and
- (7) resources allocated to facility maintenance and renovation by the Administration.
- (b) FACILITY CONDITION INDICES.—The Comptroller General shall review the facility condition indices of the Administration for inclusion in the recommendations under subsection (c).
- (c) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Based on the results of the study and review of facility condition indices under subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall make such recommendations as the Comptroller General considers necessary—
- (1) to prioritize those facilities needing the most immediate attention based on risks to employee health and safety;
- (2) to ensure that the Administration is using scientifically approved remediation techniques in all facilities; and
- (3) to assist the Administration in making programmatic changes so that aging facilities do not deteriorate to unsafe levels.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Administrator, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on results of the study, including the recommendations under subsection (c).

SEC. 611. TECHNICAL CORRECTION.

Section 40122(a)(3) is amended by adding at the end the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, retroactive to April 1, 1996, the Board shall have the same remedial authority over such employee appeals that it had as of March 31, 1996.'

TITLE VII—AVIATION INSURANCE

SEC. 701. GENERAL AUTHORITY.

Section 44302(f)(1) is amended by striking "shall extend through" and all that follows through "the termination date" and inserting "shall extend through September 30, 2013, and may extend through December 31, 2013, the termination date".

SEC. 702. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY TO LIMIT THIRD-PARTY LIABILITY OF AIR CAR RIERS ARISING OUT OF ACTS OF TERRORISM.

The first sentence of section 44303(b) is amended by striking "ending on" and all that follows through "the Secretary may certify" and inserting "ending on December 31, 2013, the Secretary may certify"

SEC. 703. CLARIFICATION OF REINSURANCE AU-THORITY.

The second sentence of section 44304 is amended by striking "the carrier" and inserting "any insurance carrier"

- (i) and (ii).
- (B) EXCLUSION.—The terms do not include a reduction in personnel resulting from workload adjustments.

SEC. 805. LIMITING ACCESS TO FLIGHT DECKS OF ALL-CARGO AIRCRAFT.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with appropriate air carriers, aircraft manufacturers, and air carrier labor representatives, shall conduct a study to assess the feasibility of developing a physical means, or a combination of physical and procedural means, to prohibit individuals other than authorized flight crewmembers from accessing the flight deck of an all-cargo aircraft.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 806. CONSOLIDATION OR ELIMINATION OF OBSOLETE, REDUNDANT, OR OTHER-WISE UNNECESSARY REPORTS; USE OF ELECTRONIC MEDIA FORMAT.

- (a) CONSOLIDATION OR ELIMINATION OF REPORTS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, and every 2 years thereafter, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report containing—
- (1) a list of obsolete, redundant, or otherwise unnecessary reports the Administration is required by law to submit to Congress or publish that the Administrator recommends eliminating or consolidating with other reports; and
- (2) an estimate of the cost savings that would result from the elimination or consolidation of those reports.
- (b) USE OF ELECTRONIC MEDIA FOR RE-PORTS.—
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administration—
- (A) may not publish any report required or authorized by law in a printed format; and
- (B) shall publish any such report by posting it on the Administration's Internet Web site in an easily accessible and downloadable electronic format
- (2) EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) does not apply to any report with respect to which the Administrator determines that—
- (A) its publication in a printed format is essential to the mission of the Administration; or
- (B) its publication in accordance with the requirements of paragraph (1) would disclose mat-
- (i) described in section 552(b) of title 5, United States Code; or
- (ii) the disclosure of which would have an adverse impact on aviation safety or security, as determined by the Administrator.

SEC. 807. PROHIBITION ON USE OF CERTAIN FUNDS.

The Secretary of Transportation may not use any funds made available pursuant to this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) to name, rename, designate, or redesignate any project or program authorized by this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) for an individual then serving in Congress as a Member, Delegate, Resident Commissioner, or Senator.

SEC. 808. STUDY ON AVIATION FUEL PRICES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study and report to Congress on the impact of increases in aviation fuel prices on the Airport and Airway Trust Fund and the aviation industry in general.
- (b) CONTENTS.—The study shall include an assessment of the impact of increases in aviation fuel prices on—
  - (1) general aviation;
  - (2) commercial passenger aviation;
  - (3) piston aircraft purchase and use;
- (4) the aviation services industry, including repair and maintenance services;
  - (5) aviation manufacturing;
  - (6) aviation exports; and
- (7) the use of small airport installations.

(c) ASSUMPTIONS ABOUT AVIATION FUEL PRICES.—In conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall use the average aviation fuel price for fiscal year 2010 as a baseline and measure the impact of increases in aviation fuel prices that range from 5 percent to 200 percent over the 2010 baseline.

SEC. 809. WIND TURBINE LIGHTING.

(a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a study on wind turbine lighting systems.

(b) CONTENTS.—In conducting the study, the Administrator shall examine the following:

- (1) The aviation safety issues associated with alternative lighting strategies, technologies, and regulations.
- (2) The feasibility of implementing alternative lighting strategies or technologies to improve aviation safety.
- (3) Any other issue relating to wind turbine lighting.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study, including information and recommendations concerning the issues examined under subsection (b).

SEC. 810. AIR-RAIL CODE SHARING STUDY.

- (a) CODE SHARE STUDY.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall initiate a study regarding—
- (1) existing airline and intercity passenger rail code sharing arrangements; and
- (2) the feasibility, costs to taxpayers and other parties, and benefits of increasing the intermodal connectivity of airline and intercity passenger rail facilities and systems to improve passenger travel.
- (b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In conducting the study, the Comptroller General shall consider—
- (1) the potential costs to taxpayers and other parties and benefits of the implementation of more integrated scheduling between airlines and Amtrak or other intercity passenger rail carriers achieved through code sharing arrangements;
- (2) airport and intercity passenger rail operations that can improve connectivity between airports and intercity passenger rail facilities and stations;
- (3) the experience of other countries with respect to airport and intercity passenger rail connectivity; and
- (4) such other issues the Comptroller General considers appropriate.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after initiating the study required by subsection (a), the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the study, including any conclusions of the Comptroller General resulting from the study.

SEC. 811. D.C. METROPOLITAN AREA SPECIAL FLIGHT RULES AREA.

- (a) SUBMISSION OF PLAN TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Secretary of Defense, shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a plan for the D.C. Metropolitan Area Special Flight Rules Area.
- (b) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The plan shall outline specific changes to the D.C. Metropolitan Area Special Flight Rules Area that will decrease operational impacts and improve general aviation access to airports in the National Capital Region that are currently impacted by the zone.

SEC. 812. FAA REVIEW AND REFORM.

- (a) AGENCY REVIEW.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall undertake a thorough review of each program, office, and organization within the Administration, including the Air Traffic Organization, to identify—
- (1) duplicative positions, programs, roles, or offices;
  - (2) wasteful practices;
- (3) redundant, obsolete, or unnecessary functions;
  - (4) inefficient processes; and
  - (5) ineffectual or outdated policies.
- (b) ACTIONS TO STREAMLINE AND REFORM FAA.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall undertake such actions as may be necessary to address the Administrator's findings under subsection (a), including—
- (1) consolidating, phasing-out, or eliminating duplicative positions, programs, roles, or offices;
- (2) eliminating or streamlining wasteful practices:
- (3) eliminating or phasing-out redundant, obsolete, or unnecessary functions;
- (4) reforming and streamlining inefficient processes so that the activities of the Administration are completed in an expedited and efficient manner: and
- (5) reforming or eliminating ineffectual or out-dated policies.
- (c) AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator shall have the authority to undertake the actions required under subsection (b).
- (d) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 150 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to Congress a report on the actions taken by the Administrator under this section, including any recommendations for leaislative or administrative actions.

SEC. 813. USE OF MINERAL REVENUE AT CERTAIN AIRPORTS.

- (a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may declare certain revenue derived from or generated by mineral extraction, production, lease, or other means at a general aviation airport to be revenue greater than the amount needed to carry out the 5-year projected maintenance needs of the airport in order to comply with the applicable design and safety standards of the Administration.
- (b) USE OF REVENUE.—An airport sponsor that is in compliance with the conditions under subsection (c) may allocate revenue identified by the Administrator under subsection (a) for Federal, State, or local transportation infrastructure projects carried out by the airport sponsor or by a governing body within the geographical limits of the airport sponsor's jurisdiction.
- (c) CONDITIONS.—An airport sponsor may not allocate revenue identified by the Administrator under subsection (a) unless the airport sponsor—
- (1) enters into a written agreement with the Administrator that sets forth a 5-year capital improvement program for the airport, which—
- (A) includes the projected costs for the operation, maintenance, and capacity needs of the airport in order to comply with applicable design and safety standards of the Administration; and
- (B) appropriately adjusts such costs to account for inflation;
  - (2) agrees in writing—
- (A) to waive all rights to receive entitlement funds or discretionary funds to be used at the airport under section 47114 or 47115 of title 49, United States Code, during the 5-year period of the capital improvement plan described in paragraph (1);

- (B) to perpetually comply with sections 47107(b) and 47133 of such title, unless granted specific exceptions by the Administrator in accordance with this section; and
- (C) to operate the airport as a public-use airport, unless the Administrator specifically grants a request to allow the airport to close; and
- (3) complies with all grant assurance obligations in effect as of the date of the enactment of this Act during the 20-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act.
- (d) COMPLETION OF DETERMINATION.—Not later than 90 days after receiving an airport sponsor's application and requisite supporting documentation to declare that certain mineral revenue is not needed to carry out the 5-year capital improvement program at such airport, the Administrator shall determine whether the airport sponsor's request should be granted. The Administrator may not unreasonably deny an application under this subsection.
- (e) RULEMAKING.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall promulgate regulations to carry out this section.
- (f) GENERAL AVIATION AIRPORT DEFINED.—In this section, the term "general aviation airport" has the meaning given that term in section 47102 of title 49, United States Code, as amended by this Act.

SEC. 814. CONTRACTING.

When drafting contract proposals for training facilities under the general contracting authority of the Federal Aviation Administration, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall ensure—

- (1) the proposal is drafted so that all parties can fairly compete: and
- (2) the proposal takes into consideration the most cost-effective location, accessibility, and services options.

SEC. 815. FLOOD PLANNING.

- (a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, shall conduct a review and submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the state of preparedness and response capability for airports located in flood plains to respond to and seek assistance in rebuilding after catastrophic flooding.
- (b) ELIGIBILITY OF DEMOLITION AND REBUILD-ING OF PROPERTIES.—Section 1366(e) of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 4104c(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(6) ELIGIBILITY OF DEMOLITION AND REBUILD-ING OF PROPERTIES.—The Director shall consider as an eligible activity the demolition and rebuilding of properties to at least base flood levels or higher, if required by the Director or if required by any State or local ordinance, and in accordance with project implementation criteria established by the Director."

SEC. 816. HISTORICAL AIRCRAFT DOCUMENTS.

- (a) Preservation of Documents.—
- (1) In GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall take such actions as the Administrator determines necessary to preserve original aircraft type certificate engineering and technical data in the possession of the Federal Aviation Administration related to—
- (A) approved aircraft type certificate numbers ATC 1 through ATC 713; and
- (B) Group-2 approved aircraft type certificate numbers 2–1 through 2–544.
- (2) REVISION OF ORDER.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall revise FAA Order

- 1350.15C, Item Number 8110. Such revision shall prohibit the destruction of the historical aircraft documents identified in paragraph (1).
- (3) CONSULTATION.—The Administrator may carry out paragraph (1) in consultation with the Archivist of the United States and the Administrator of General Services.
- (b) AVAILABILITY OF DOCUMENTS.—
- (1) FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT RE-QUESTS.—The Administrator shall make the documents to be preserved under subsection (a)(1) available to a person—
- (A) upon receipt of a request made by the person pursuant to section 552 of title 5, United States Code; and
- (B) subject to a prohibition on use of the documents for commercial purposes.
- (2) Trade secrets, commercial, and financial information.—Section 552(b)(4) of such title shall not apply to requests for documents to be made available pursuant to paragraph (1).
  - (c) Holder of Type Certificate.—
- (1) RIGHTS OF HOLDER.—Nothing in this section shall affect the rights of a holder or owner of a type certificate identified in subsection (a)(1), nor require the holder or owner to provide, surrender, or preserve any original or duplicate engineering or technical data to or for the Federal Aviation Administration, a person, or the public.
- (2) LIABILITY.—There shall be no liability on the part of, and no cause of action of any nature shall arise against, a holder of a type certificate, its authorized representative, its agents, or its employees, or any firm, person, corporation, or insurer related to the type certificate data and documents identified in subsection (a)(1).
- (3) AIRWORTHINESS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the holder of a type certificate identified in subsection (a)(1) shall only be responsible for Federal Aviation Administration regulation requirements related to type certificate data and documents identified in subsection (a)(1) for aircraft having a standard airworthiness certificate issued prior to the date the documents are released to a person by the Federal Aviation Administration under subsection (b)(1).

SEC. 817. RELEASE FROM RESTRICTIONS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary of Transportation is authorized to grant to an airport, city, or county a release from any of the terms, conditions, reservations, or restrictions contained in a deed under which the United States conveyed to the airport, city, or county an interest in real property for airport purposes pursuant to section 16 of the Federal Airport Act (60 Stat. 179) or section 23 of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 232).
- (b) CONDITION.—Any release granted by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a) shall be subject to the following conditions:
- (1) The applicable airport, city, or county shall agree that in conveying any interest in the real property which the United States conveyed to the airport, city, or county, the airport, city, or county will receive consideration for such interest that is equal to its fair market value.
- (2) Any consideration received by the airport, city, or county under paragraph (1) shall be used exclusively for the development, improvement, operation, or maintenance of a public airport by the airport, city, or county.
- (3) Any other conditions required by the Secretary.

SEC. 818. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

- It is the sense of Congress that Los Angeles World Airports, the operator of Los Angeles International Airport (LAX)—
- (1) should consult on a regular basis with representatives of the community surrounding the airport regarding—

- (A) the ongoing operations of LAX; and
- (B) plans to expand, modify, or realign LAX facilities; and
- (2) should include in such consultations any organization, the membership of which includes at least 100 individuals who reside within 10 miles of the airport, that notifies Los Angeles World Airports of its desire to be included in such consultations.

SEC. 819. HUMAN INTERVENTION MOTIVATION STUDY.

Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall develop a Human Intervention Motivation Study program for cabin crew members employed by commercial air carriers in the United States.

SEC. 820. STUDY OF AERONAUTICAL MOBILE TE-LEMETRY.

Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, in consultation with other Federal agencies, shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report that identifies—

- (1) the current and anticipated, with respect to the next decade, need by civil aviation, including equipment manufacturers, for aeronautical mobile telemetry services; and
- (2) the potential impact to the aerospace industry of the introduction of a new radio service that operates in the same spectrum allocated to the aeronautical mobile telemetry service.

SEC. 821. CLARIFICATION OF REQUIREMENTS FOR VOLUNTEER PILOTS OPER-ATING CHARITABLE MEDICAL FLIGHTS.

- (a) REIMBURSEMENT OF FUEL COSTS.—Notwithstanding any other law or regulation, in administering section 61.113(c) of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation), the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall allow an aircraft owner or operator to accept reimbursement from a volunteer pilot organization for the fuel costs associated with a flight operation to provide transportation for an individual or organ for medical purposes (and for other associated individuals), if the aircraft owner or operator has—
- (1) volunteered to provide such transportation; and
- (2) notified any individual that will be on the flight, at the time of inquiry about the flight, that the flight operation is for charitable purposes and is not subject to the same requirements as a commercial flight.
- (b) CONDITIONS TO ENSURE SAFETY.—The Administrator may impose minimum standards with respect to training and flight hours for single-engine, multi-engine, and turbine-engine operations conducted by an aircraft owner or operator that is being reimbursed for fuel costs by a volunteer pilot organization, including mandating that the pilot in command of such aircraft hold an instrument rating and be current and qualified for the aircraft being flown to ensure the safety of flight operations described in subsection (a).
- (c) VOLUNTEER PILOT ORGANIZATION.—In this section, the term "volunteer pilot organization" means an organization that—
- (1) is described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and is exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of such Code; and
- (2) is organized for the primary purpose of providing, arranging, or otherwise fostering charitable medical transportation.

SEC. 822. PILOT PROGRAM FOR REDEVELOPMENT OF AIRPORT PROPERTIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall establish a pilot program under which operators of up to 4 public-use airports may receive grants for activities related to the redevelopment of airport properties in accordance with the requirements of this section.

- (b) GRANTS.—Under the pilot program, the Administrator may make a grant in a fiscal year, from funds made available for grants under section 47117(e)(1)(A) of title 49, United States Code, to an airport operator for a project—
- (1) to support joint planning, engineering, design, and environmental permitting of projects, including the assembly and redevelopment of property purchased with noise mitigation funds made available under section 48103 of such title or passenger facility revenue collected under section 40117 of such title; and
- (2) to encourage airport-compatible land uses and generate economic benefits to the local airport authority and adjacent community.
- (c) ELIGIBILITY.—An airport operator shall be eligible to participate in the pilot program if—
  (1) the operator has received approval for a
- noise compatibility program under section 47504 of such title; and
- (2) the operator demonstrates, as determined by the Administrator—
- (A) a readiness to implement cooperative land use management and redevelopment plans with neighboring local jurisdictions: and
- (B) the probability of a clear economic benefit to neighboring local jurisdictions and financial return to the airport through the implementation of those plans.
- (d) DISTRIBUTION.—The Administrator shall seek to award grants under the pilot program to airport operators representing different geographic areas of the United States.
- (e) Partnership With Neighboring Local Jurisdictions.—An airport operator shall use grant funds made available under the pilot program only in partnership with neighboring local jurisdictions.
- (f) GRANT REQUIREMENTS.—The Administrator may not make a grant to an airport operator under the pilot program unless the grant is—
- (1) made to enable the airport operator and local jurisdictions undertaking community redevelopment efforts to expedite those efforts;
- (2) subject to a requirement that the local jurisdiction governing the property interests subject to the redevelopment efforts has adopted and will continue in effect zoning regulations that permit airport-compatible redevelopment; and
- (3) subject to a requirement that, in determining the part of the proceeds from disposing of land that is subject to repayment and reinvestment requirements under section 47107(c)(2)(A) of such title, the total amount of a grant issued under the pilot program that is attributable to the redevelopment of such land shall be added to other amounts that must be repaid or reinvested under that section upon disposal of such land by the airport operator.
- (g) EXCEPTIONS TO REPAYMENT AND REINVEST-MENT REQUIREMENTS.—Amounts paid to the Secretary of Transportation under subsection (f)(3)—
- (1) shall be available to the Secretary for, giving preference to the actions in descending
- (A) reinvestment in an approved noise compatibility project at the applicable airport;
- (B) reinvestment in another approved project at the airport that is eligible for funding under section 47117(e) of such title;
- (C) reinvestment in an approved airport development project at the airport that is eligible for funding under section 47114, 47115, or 47117 of such title:
- (D) transfer to an operator of another public airport to be reinvested in an approved noise compatibility project at such airport; and

- (E) deposit in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502)
- (2) shall be available in addition to amounts authorized under section 48103 of such title:
- (3) shall not be subject to any limitation on grant obligations for any fiscal year; and
  - (4) shall remain available until expended.
- (h) FEDERAL SHARE.-
- (1) In GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Federal share of the allowable costs of a project carried out under the pilot program shall be 80 percent.
- (2) ALLOWABLE COSTS.—In determining the allowable costs, the Administrator shall deduct from the total costs of the activities described in subsection (b) that portion of the costs which is equal to that portion of the total property to be redeveloped under this section that is not owned or to be acquired by the airport operator pursuant to the noise compatibility program or that is not owned by the affected neighboring local jurisdictions or other public entities.
- (i) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—Not more than $5,000,000 of the funds made available for grants under section 47117(e)(1)(A) of such title may be expended under the pilot program for any single public-use airport.
- (j) USE OF PASSENGER REVENUE.—An airport operator participating in the pilot program may use passenger facility revenue collected under section 40117 of such title to pay any project cost described in subsection (b) that is not financed by a grant under the pilot program.
- (k) SUNSET.—This section shall not be in effect after September 30, 2015.

SEC. 823. REPORT ON NEW YORK CITY AND NEW-ARK AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL FACILI-TIES.

Under previous agreements, the Federal Aviation Administration negotiated staffing levels at the air traffic control facilities in the Newark and New York City areas. Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a report on the Federal Aviation Administration's staffing and scheduling plans for air traffic control facilities in the New York City and Newark Region for the 1-year period beginning on such date of enactment.

SEC. 824. CYLINDERS OF COMPRESSED OXYGEN OR OTHER OXIDIZING GASES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsections (b) and (c), entities transporting, in the State of Alaska, cylinders of compressed oxygen or other oxidizing gases aboard aircraft shall be exempt from compliance with the regulations described in subsection (d), to the extent that the regulations require that oxidizing gases transported aboard aircraft be enclosed in outer packaging capable of passing the flame penetration resistance test and the thermal resistance test, without regard to the end use of the cylinders.
- (b) APPLICABILITY OF EXEMPTION.—The exemption provided under subsection (a) shall apply only if—
- (1) transportation of the cylinders by a ground-based or water-based mode of transportation is unavailable and transportation by aircraft is the only practical means for transporting the cylinders to their destination:
- (2) each cylinder is fully covered with a fireor flame-resistant blanket that is secured in place: and
- (3) the operator of the aircraft complies with the applicable notification procedures under section 175.33 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations.
- (c) AIRCRAFT RESTRICTION.—The exemption provided under subsection (a) shall apply only to the following types of aircraft:

- (1) Cargo-only aircraft transporting the cylinders to a delivery destination that receives cargo-only service at least once a week.
- (2) Passenger and cargo-only aircraft transporting the cylinders to a delivery destination that does not receive cargo-only service at least once a week.
- (d) DESCRIPTION OF REGULATORY REQUIRE-MENTS.—The regulations described in this subsection are the regulations of the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration contained in sections 173.302(f)(3), 173.302(f)(4), 173.302(f)(5), 173.304(f)(3), 173.304(f)(4), and 173.304(f)(5) of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations.

SEC. 825. ORPHAN AVIATION EARMARKS.

- (a) EARMARK DEFINED.—In this section, the term "earmark" means a statutory provision or report language included primarily at the request of a Senator or a Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner of the House of Representatives providing, authorizing, or recommending a specific amount of discretionary budget authority, credit authority, or other spending authority for a contract, loan, loan guarantee, grant, or other expenditure with or to an entity or a specific State, locality, or Congressional district, other than through a statutory or administrative formula-driven or competitive award process.
- (b) RESCISSION.—If any earmark relating to the Federal Aviation Administration has more than 90 percent of applicable appropriated amounts remaining available for obligation at the end of the 9th fiscal year beginning after the fiscal year in which those amounts were appropriated, the unobligated portion of those amounts is rescinded effective at the end of that 9th fiscal year, except that the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may delay any such rescission if the Administrator determines that an obligation with respect to those amounts is likely to occur during the 12-month period beginning on the last day of that 9th fiscal year.
  - (c) IDENTIFICATION AND REPORT.—
- (1) AGENCY IDENTIFICATION.—At the end of each fiscal year, the Administrator shall identify and report to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget every earmark related to the Administration and with respect to which there is an unobligated balance of appropriated amounts.
- (2) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Director shall submit to Congress and make available to the public on the Internet Web site of the Office a report that includes—
- (A) a listing of each earmark related to the Administration and with respect to which there is an unobligated balance of appropriated amounts, which shall include the amount of the original earmark, the amount of the unobligated balance related to that earmark, and the date on which the funding expires, if applicable;
- (B) the number of rescissions under subsection (b) and the savings resulting from those rescissions for the previous fiscal year; and
- (C) a listing of earmarks related to the Administration with amounts scheduled for rescission at the end of the current fiscal year.

SEC. 826. PRIVACY PROTECTIONS FOR AIR PAS-SENGER SCREENING WITH AD-VANCED IMAGING TECHNOLOGY.

Section 44901 is amended by adding at the end the following:

- "(1) LIMITATIONS ON USE OF ADVANCED IMAG-ING TECHNOLOGY FOR SCREENING PASSENGERS.—
- "(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection, the following definitions apply:
- "(A) ADVANCED IMAGING TECHNOLOGY.—The term 'advanced imaging technology'—

- "(i) means a device used in the screening of passengers that creates a visual image of an individual showing the surface of the skin and revealing other objects on the body; and
- '(ii) may include devices using backscatter xrays or millimeter waves and devices referred to as 'whole-body imaging technology' or 'body scanning machines'.
- '(B) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMIT-TEES.—The term 'appropriate congressional committees' means—
- "(i) the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and
- "(ii) the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives.
- "(C) AUTOMATIC TARGET RECOGNITION SOFT-WARE.—The term 'automatic target recognition software' means software installed on an advanced imaging technology that produces a generic image of the individual being screened that is the same as the images produced for all other screened individuals.
- "(2) USE OF ADVANCED IMAGING TECH-NOLOGY.—Beginning June 1, 2012, the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security (Transportation Security Administration) shall ensure that any advanced imaging technology used for the screening of passengers under this section-
- '(A) is equipped with and employs automatic target recognition software; and
- '(B) complies with such other requirements as the Assistant Secretary determines necessary to address privacy considerations.
  - '(3) EXTENSION.-
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—The Assistant Secretary may extend the deadline specified in paragraph (2), if the Assistant Secretary determines that—
- (i) an advanced imaging technology equipped with automatic target recognition software is not substantially as effective at screening passengers as an advanced imaging technology without such software: or
- "(ii) additional testing of such software is necessaru.
- "(B) DURATION OF EXTENSIONS.—The Assistant Secretary may issue one or more extensions under subparagraph (A). The duration of each extension may not exceed one year.
- '(4) REPORTS.—
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the deadline specified in paragraph (2), and not later than 60 days after the date on which the Assistant Secretary issues any extension under paragraph (3), the Assistant Secretary shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on the implementation of this subsection.
- "(B) ELEMENTS.—A report submitted under subparagraph (A) shall include the following:
- "(i) A description of all matters the Assistant Secretary considers relevant to the implementation of the requirements of this subsection.
- "(ii) The status of compliance by the Transportation Security Administration with such requirements.
- "(iii) If the Administration is not in full compliance with such requirements-
- '(I) the reasons for the noncompliance; and
- "(II) a timeline depicting when the Assistant Secretary expects the Administration to achieve full compliance.
- '(C) SECURITY CLASSIFICATION.—To the greatest extent practicable, a report prepared under subparagraph (A) shall be submitted in an unclassified format. If necessary, the report may include a classified annex."

SEC. 827. COMMERCIAL SPACE LAUNCH LICENSE REQUIREMENTS.

Section 50905(c)(3) of title 51, United States Code, is amended by striking "Beginning 8 years after the date of enactment of the Commercial Space Launch Amendments Act of 2015."

SEC. 828. AIR TRANSPORTATION OF LITHIUM CELLS AND BATTERIES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation, including a designee of the Secretary, may not issue or enforce any regulation or other requirement regarding the transportation by aircraft of lithium metal cells or batteries or lithium ion cells or batteries, whether transported separately or packed with or contained in equipment, if the requirement is more stringent than the requirements of the ICAO Technical Instructions.
  - (b) EXCEPTIONS -
- (1) Passenger Carrying aircraft.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), the Secretary may enforce the prohibition on transporting primary (non-rechargeable) lithium batteries and cells aboard passenger carrying aircraft set forth in under provision A100 special section 172.102(c)(2) of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on the date of enactment of this Act).
- (2) CREDIBLE REPORTS.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), if the Secretary obtains a credible report with respect to a safety incident from a national or international governmental regulatory or investigating body that demonstrates that the presence of lithium metal cells or batteries or lithium ion cells or batteries on an aircraft, whether transported separately or packed with or contained in equipment, in accordance with the requirements of the ICAO Technical Instructions, has substantially contributed to the initiation or propagation of an onboard fire, the Secretary-
- (A) may issue and enforce an emergency regulation, more stringent than the requirements of the ICAO Technical Instructions, that governs the transportation by aircraft of such cells or batteries, if that regulation-
- (i) addresses solely deficiencies referenced in the report; and
- (ii) is effective for not more than 1 year; and (B) may adopt and enforce a permanent regulation, more stringent than the requirements of the ICAO Technical Instructions, that governs the transportation by aircraft of such cells or batteries, if-
- (i) the Secretary bases the regulation upon substantial credible evidence that the otherwise permissible presence of such cells or batteries would substantially contribute to the initiation or propagation of an onboard fire;
- (ii) the regulation addresses solely the deficiencies in existing regulations; and
- (iii) the regulation imposes the least disruptive and least expensive variation from existing requirements while adequately addressing identified deficiencies.
- (c) ICAO TECHNICAL INSTRUCTIONS DE-FINED .- In this section, the term "ICAO Technical Instructions" means the International Civil Aviation Organization Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air (as amended, including amendments adopted after the date of enactment of this Act). SEC. 829. CLARIFICATION OF MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING WITH OSHA.

Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall-

- (1) establish milestones, in consultation with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, in a report to Congress-
- (A) for the completion of work begun under the August 2000 memorandum of understanding between the Administrations; and
- (B) to address issues that need further action, as set forth in the December 2000 joint report of the Administrations: and
- (2) initiate development of a policy statement to set forth the circumstances in which require-

2004," and inserting "Beginning on October 1, ments of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration may be applied to crewmembers while working in an aircraft.

SEC. 830. APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS FOR THE AIRPORT SECURITY SCREENING OPT-OUT PROGRAM.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 44920(b) is amended to read as follows:
- (b) APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 120 days after the date of receipt of an application submitted by an airport operator under subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall approve or deny the application.
- (2) STANDARDS.—The Under Secretary shall approve an application submitted by an airport operator under subsection (a) if the Under Secretary determines that the approval would not compromise security or detrimentally affect the cost-efficiency or the effectiveness of the screening of passengers or property at the airport.
- (3) REPORTS ON DENIALS OF APPLICATIONS. "(A) IN GENERAL.—If the Under Secretary denies an application submitted by an airport operator under subsection (a), the Under Secretary shall provide to the airport operator, not later than 60 days following the date of the denial, a written report that sets forth—
- "(i) the findings that served as the basis for the denial:
- "(ii) the results of any cost or security analysis conducted in considering the application;
- "(iii) recommendations on how the airport operator can address the reasons for the denial.
- "(B) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—The Under Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives a copy of any report provided to an airport operator under subparagraph(A)."
- (b) WAIVERS.—Section 44920(d) is amended-(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, and moving the subparagraphs 2 ems to the right;
- (2) by striking "The Under Secretary" and in-
- serting the following:
  "(1) IN GENERAL.—The Under Secretary"; and (3) by adding at the end the following:
- '(2) WAIVERS.—The Under Secretary may waive the requirement of paragraph (1)(B) for any company that is a United States subsidiary with a parent company that has implemented a foreign ownership, control, or influence mitigation plan that has been approved by the Defense Security Service of the Department of Defense prior to the submission of the application. The Under Secretary has complete discretion to reject any application from a private screening company to provide screening services at an airport that requires a waiver under this para-
- (c) RECOMMENDATIONS OF AIRPORT OPER-ATOR.—Section 44920 is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(h) RECOMMENDATIONS OF AIRPORT OPER-ATOR.—As part of any submission of an application for a private screening company to provide screening services at an airport, the airport operator shall provide to the Under Secretary a recommendation as to which company would best serve the security screening and passenger needs of the airport, along with a statement explaining the basis of the operator's recommenda-
- (d) RECONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS PEND-ING AS OF JANUARY 1, 2011.-
- (1) IN GENERAL.—Upon the request of an airport operator, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall reconsider any application for the screening of passengers and property that-
- (A) was submitted by the operator of an airport pursuant to section 44920(a) of title 49, United States Code;

- (B) was pending for final decision by the Secretary on any day between January 1, 2011, and February 3, 2011, and was resubmitted by the applicant in accordance with new guidelines provided by the Secretary after February 3, 2011; and
- (C) has not been approved by the Secretary on or before the date of enactment of this Act.
- (2) Notice to airport operators.—In reconsidering an application submitted under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall—
- (A) notify the airport operator that submitted the application that the Secretary will reconsider the application;
- (B) if the application was initially denied, advise the operator of the findings that served as the basis for the denial; and
- (C) request the operator to provide the Secretary with such additional information as the Secretary determines necessary to reconsider the application.
- (3) Deadline; standards.—The Secretary shall approve or deny an application to be reconsidered under paragraph (1) not later than the 120th day following the date of the request for reconsideration from the airport operator. The Secretary shall apply the standards set forth in section 44920(b) of title 49, United States Code (as amended by this section), in approving and denying such application.
  - (4) REPORTS ON DENIALS OF APPLICATIONS.-
- (A) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary denies an application of an airport operator following reconsideration under this subsection, the Secretary shall provide to the airport operator a written report that sets forth-
- (i) the findings that served as the basis for the denial: and
- (ii) the results of any cost or security analysis conducted in considering the application.
- (B) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives a copy of any report provided to an airport operator under subparagraph(A).

TITLE IX—FEDERAL AVIATION RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 901. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 48102(a) is amended-
- (1) in the matter before paragraph (1) by striking "of this title" and inserting "of this title and, for each of fiscal years 2012 through 2015, under subsection (g)";
  - (2) by striking paragraphs (1) through (8);
- (3) by redesignating paragraphs (9) through (15) as paragraphs (1) through (7), respectively;
- (4) in paragraph (3) (as so redesignated)-(A) in subparagraph (K) by adding "and" at
- the end; and
- (B) in subparagraph (L) by striking "and" at the end; and
- (5) by striking paragraph (16) and inserting the following:
- '(8) $168,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2012 through 2015.
- (b) Specific Program Limitations.—Section 48102 is amended by inserting after subsection (f) the following:
- "(g) Specific Authorizations.—The following programs described in the research, engineering, and development account of the national aviation research plan required under section 44501(c) are authorized:
  - "(1) Fire Research and Safety
  - "(2) Propulsion and Fuel Systems.
  - "(3) Advanced Materials/Structural Safety.
- "(4) Atmospheric Hazards—Aircraft Icing/Digital System Safety.
  - "(5) Continued Airworthiness.
- "(6) Aircraft Catastrophic Failure Prevention

- "(7) Flightdeck/Maintenance/System Integration Human Factors.
- "(8) System Safety Management.
- "(9) Air Traffic Control/Technical Operations Human Factors
  - "(10) Aeromedical Research.
- "(11) Weather Program.
- '(12) Unmanned Aircraft Systems Research.
- "(13) NextGen—Alternative Fuels for General Aviation
- "(14) Joint Planning and Development Office. ''(15) NextGen—Wake Turbulence Research.
- "(16) NextGen—Air Ground Integration Human Factors
- "(17) NextGen—Self Separation Human Fac-
- "(18) NextGen—Weather Technology in the
- Cockpit. "(19) Environment and Energy Research.
- "(20) NextGen Environmental Research—Aircraft Technologies, Fuels, and Metrics.
- "(21) System Planning and Resource Management.

''(22) The William J. Hughes Technical Center Laboratory Facility.'

- (c) PROGRAM AUTHORIZATIONS.—From the other accounts described in the national aviation research plan required under section 44501(c) of title 49. United States Code, the following research and development activities are authorized:
  - (1) Runway Incursion Reduction.
- (2) System Capacity, Planning, and Improve-
- (3) Operations Concept Validation.
- (4) NAS Weather Requirements.
- (5) Airspace Management Program.
- (6) NextGen—Air Traffic Control/Technical Operations Human Factors.
- (7) NextGen-Environment and Energy-Environmental Management System and Advanced Noise and Emissions Reduction.
- (8) NextGen—New Air Traffic Management Requirements.
- (9) NextGen—Operations Concept Valida-Validation Modeling.
- NextGen—System Safety Management Transformation.
- NextGen-Wake Turbulence—Recat-(11)egorization.
- (12) NextGen—Operational Assessments.
- (13) NextGen—Staffed NextGen Towers.
- (14) Center for Advanced Aviation System Development.
- (15) Airports Technology Research Program— Capacitu.
- (16) Airports Technology Research Program— Safety.
- (17) Airports Technology Research Program-Environment.
- (18) Airport Cooperative Research—Capacity.
- (19) Airport Cooperative Research—Environment
- (20) Airport Cooperative Research—Safety.

SEC. 902. DEFINITIONS.

- In this title, the following definitions apply: (1) Administrator.—The term
- trator" means the Administrator of the FAA. (2) FAA.—The term "FAA" means the Federal Aviation Administration.
- (3) Institution of higher education.—The "institution of higher education" has the same meaning given the term in section 101(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C.
- (4) NASA.—The term "NASA" means the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.
- (5) NOAA.—The term "NOAA" means the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. SEC. 903. UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS.

- (a) RESEARCH INITIATIVE.—Section 44504(b) is amended-
- (1) in paragraph (6) by striking "and" after the semicolon:

- (2) in paragraph (7) by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and
- (3) by adding at the end the following:
- '(8) in conjunction with other Federal agencies, as appropriate, to develop technologies and methods to assess the risk of and prevent defects, failures, and malfunctions of products. parts, and processes for use in all classes of unmanned aircraft systems that could result in a catastrophic failure of the unmanned aircraft that would endanger other aircraft in the national airspace system.'
- (b) Systems, Procedures, Facilities, and DEVICES.—Section 44505(b) is amended-
- (1) in paragraph (4) by striking "and" after the semicolon:
- (2) in paragraph (5)(C) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and
  - (3) by adding at the end the following:
- '(6) to develop a better understanding of the relationship between human factors and unmanned aircraft system safety; and
- '(7) to develop dynamic simulation models for integrating all classes of unmanned aircraft systems into the national airspace system without any degradation of existing levels of safety for all national airspace system users."

SEC. 904. RESEARCH PROGRAM ON RUNWAYS.

Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator shall continue to carry out a research program under which the Administrator may make grants to and enter into cooperative agreements with institutions of higher education and pavement research organizations for research and technology demonstrations related

- (1) the design, construction, rehabilitation, and repair of airfield pavements to aid in the development of safer, more cost effective, and more durable airfield pavements; and
- (2) engineered material restraining systems for runways at both general aviation airports and airports with commercial air carrier operations.

SEC. 905. RESEARCH ON DESIGN FOR CERTIFI-

CATION. Section 44505 is amended-

- (1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and
- (2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:
- "(d) RESEARCH ON DESIGN FOR CERTIFI-CATION.
- "(1) RESEARCH.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012, the Administrator shall conduct research on methods and procedures to improve both confidence in and the timeliness of certification of new technologies for their introduction into the national airspace system.
- "(2) Research plan.—Not later than months after the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012, the Administrator shall develop a plan for the research under paragraph (1) that contains objectives, proposed tasks, milestones, and a 5-year budgetary profile.
- "(3) REVIEW.—The Administrator shall enter into an arrangement with the National Research Council to conduct an independent review of the plan developed under paragraph (2) and shall provide the results of that review to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of the FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012."

SEC. 906. AIRPORT COOPERATIVE RESEARCH PROGRAM.

Section 44511(f) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking "establish a 4year pilot" and inserting "maintain an"; and

- (2) in paragraph (4)—
- (A) by striking "Not later than 6 months after the expiration of the program under this subsection," and inserting "Not later than September 30, 2012,"; and
- (B) by striking "program, including recommendations as to the need for establishing a permanent airport cooperative research program" and inserting "program".

SEC. 907. CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE.

- (a) GOVERNMENT'S SHARE OF COSTS.—Section 44513(f) is amended to read as follows:
- "(f) Government's Share of Costs.—The United States Government's share of establishing and operating a center and all related research activities that grant recipients carry out shall not exceed 50 percent of the costs, except that the Administrator may increase such share to a maximum of 75 percent of the costs for a fiscal year if the Administrator determines that a center would be unable to carry out the authorized activities described in this section without additional funds."
- (b) ANNUAL REPORT.—Section 44513 is amended by adding at the end the following:
- "(h) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Administrator shall transmit annually to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate at the time of the President's budget request a report that lists—
- "(1) the research projects that have been initiated by each center in the preceding year;
- "(2) the amount of funding for each research project and the funding source;
- "(3) the institutions participating in each research project and their shares of the overall funding for each research project; and
- "(4) the level of cost-sharing for each research project.".

SEC. 908. CENTER OF EXCELLENCE FOR AVIATION HUMAN RESOURCE RESEARCH.

- (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator may establish a center of excellence to conduct research on—
- (1) human performance in the air transportation environment, including among air transportation personnel such as air traffic controllers, pilots, and technicians; and
- (2) any other aviation human resource issue pertinent to developing and maintaining a safe and efficient air transportation system.
- (b) ACTIVITIES.—Activities conducted under this section may include the following:
- (1) Research, development, and evaluation of training programs for air traffic controllers, aviation safety inspectors, airway transportation safety specialists, and engineers.
- (2) Research and development of best practices for recruitment of individuals into the aviation field for mission critical positions.
- (3) Research, in consultation with other relevant Federal agencies, to develop a baseline of general aviation employment statistics and an analysis of future needs in the aviation field.
- (4) Research and the development of a comprehensive assessment of the airframe and power plant technician certification process and its effect on employment trends.
- (5) Evaluation of aviation maintenance technician school environments.
- (6) Research and an assessment of the ability to develop training programs to allow for the transition of recently unemployed and highly skilled mechanics into the aviation field.

SEC. 909. INTERAGENCY RESEARCH ON AVIATION AND THE ENVIRONMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator, in coordination with NASA and after consultation with other relevant agencies, may maintain a research program to assess the potential effect of aviation activities on the environment and, if warranted, to evaluate approaches to address any such effect.

(b) Research Plan.—

- (1) In GENERAL.—The Administrator, in coordination with NASA and after consultation with other relevant agencies, shall jointly develop a plan to carry out the research under subsection (a).
- (2) CONTENTS.—The plan shall contain an inventory of current interagency research being undertaken in this area, future research objectives, proposed tasks, milestones, and a 5-year budgetary profile.
  - (3) REQUIREMENTS.—The plan—
- (A) shall be completed not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act;
- (B) shall be submitted to Congress for review; and
- (C) shall be updated, as appropriate, every 3 years after the initial submission.

SEC. 910. AVIATION FUEL RESEARCH AND DEVEL-OPMENT PROGRAM.

- (a) In General.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator, in coordination with the Administrator of NASA, shall continue research and development activities into the qualification of an unleaded aviation fuel and safe transition to this fuel for the fleet of piston engine aircraft.
- (b) Requirements.—In carrying out the program under subsection (a), the Administrator shall at a minimum—
- (1) not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, develop a research and development plan containing the specific research and development objectives, including consideration of aviation safety, technical feasibility, and other relevant factors, and the anticipated timetable for achieving the objectives:
- (2) assess the methods and processes by which the FAA and industry may expeditiously certify and approve new aircraft and recertify existing aircraft with respect to unleaded aviation fuel;
- (3) assess technologies that modify existing piston engine aircraft to enable safe operation of the aircraft using unleaded aviation fuel and determine the resources necessary to certify those technologies; and
- (4) develop recommendations for appropriate policies and guidelines to facilitate a transition to unleaded aviation fuel for piston engine aircraft.
- (c) COLLABORATION.—In carrying out the program under subsection (a), the Administrator shall collaborate with—
- (1) industry groups representing aviation consumers, manufacturers, and fuel producers and distributors: and
  - (2) other appropriate Federal agencies.
- (d) REPORT.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall provide to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the plan, information obtained, and policies and guidelines developed pursuant to subsection (b).

SEC. 911. RESEARCH PROGRAM ON ALTERNATIVE JET FUEL TECHNOLOGY FOR CIVIL AIRCRAFT.

- (a) In GENERAL.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator shall establish a research program to assist in the development and qualification of jet fuel from alternative sources (such as natural gas, biomass, ethanol, butanol, and hydrogen) and other renewable sources.
- (b) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Administrator shall carry out the program through the use of grants or other measures authorized under section 106(l)(6) of such title, including reimbursable agreements with other Federal agencies.

- (c) PARTICIPATION IN PROGRAM.—
- (1) PARTICIPATION OF EDUCATIONAL AND RESEARCH INSTITUTIONS.—In carrying out the program, the Administrator shall include participation bu—
- (A) educational and research institutions that have existing facilities and leverage private sector partnerships; and
- (B) consortia with experience across the supply chain, including with research, feedstock development and production, small-scale development, testing, and technology evaluation related to the creation, processing, production, and transportation of alternative aviation fuel.
- (2) USE OF NASA FACILITIES.—In carrying out the program, the Administrator shall consider utilizing the existing capacity in aeronautics research at Langley Research Center, Glenn Research Center, and other appropriate facilities of NASA.
- (d) DESIGNATION OF INSTITUTION AS A CENTER OF EXCELLENCE.—
- (1) In GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator may designate an institution described in subsection (c)(1)(A) as a Center of Excellence for Alternative Jet-Fuel Research in Civil Aircraft.
- (2) EFFECT OF DESIGNATION.—The center designated under paragraph (1) shall become, upon its designation—
- (A) a member of the Consortium for Continuous Low Energy, Emissions, and Noise of the FAA: and
- (B) part of a Joint Center of Excellence with the Partnership for Air Transportation Noise and Emission Reduction FAA Center of Excel-

SEC. 912. REVIEW OF FAA'S ENERGY-RELATED AND ENVIRONMENT-RELATED RESEARCH PROGRAMS.

- (a) REVIEW.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator shall enter into an arrangement for an independent external review of FAA energy-related and environment-related research programs. The review shall assess whether—
- (1) the programs have well-defined, prioritized, and appropriate research objectives;
- (2) the programs are properly coordinated with the energy-related and environment-related research programs at NASA, NOAA, and other relevant agencies;
- (3) the programs have allocated appropriate resources to each of the research objectives; and
- (4) there exist suitable mechanisms for transitioning the research results into the FAA's operational technologies and procedures and certification activities.
- (b) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit a report to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate containing the results of the review.

SEC. 913. REVIEW OF FAA'S AVIATION SAFETY-RE-LATED RESEARCH PROGRAMS.

- (a) REVIEW.—Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator shall enter into an arrangement for an independent external review of the FAA's aviation safety-related research programs. The review shall assess whether—
- (1) the programs have well-defined, prioritized, and appropriate research objectives;
- (2) the programs are properly coordinated with the safety research programs of NASA and other relevant Federal agencies;
- (3) the programs have allocated appropriate resources to each of the research objectives;

- (4) the programs should include a determination about whether a survey of participants across the air transportation system is an appropriate way to study safety risks within such system; and
- (5) there exist suitable mechanisms for transitioning the research results from the programs into the FAA's operational technologies and procedures and certification activities in a timely manner.
- (b) AVIATION SAFETY-RELATED RESEARCH PROGRAMS TO BE ASSESSED.—The FAA aviation safety-related research programs to be assessed under the review shall include, at a minimum, the following:
- (1) Air traffic control/technical operations human factors.
  - (2) Runway incursion reduction.
- (3) Flightdeck/maintenance system integration human factors.
- (4) Airports technology research—safety.(5) Airport Cooperative Research Program-
- (5) Airport Cooperative Research Program safety.
- (6) Weather Program.
- (7) Atmospheric hazards/digital system safety.
- (8) Fire research and safety.
- (9) Propulsion and fuel systems.
- (10) Advanced materials/structural safety.
- (11) Aging aircraft.
- (12) Aircraft catastrophic failure prevention research.
  - (13) Aeromedical research.
  - (14) Aviation safety risk analysis.
  - (15) Unmanned aircraft systems research.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 14 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report on the results of the review.

SEC. 914. PRODUCTION OF CLEAN COAL FUEL TECHNOLOGY FOR CIVILIAN AIR-

- (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF RESEARCH PROGRAM.— Using amounts made available under section 48102(a) of title 49, United States Code, the Administrator shall establish a research program related to developing jet fuel from clean coal.
- (b) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Administrator shall carry out the program through grants or other measures authorized under section 106(1)(6) of such title, including reimbursable agreements with other Federal agencies.
- (c) PARTICIPATION IN PROGRAM.—În carrying out the program, the Administrator shall include participation by educational and research institutions that have existing facilities and experience in the development and deployment of technology that processes coal into aviation fuel.
- (d) DESIGNATION OF INSTITUTION AS A CENTER OF EXCELLENCE.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator may designate an institution described in subsection (c) as a Center of Excellence for Coal-to-Jet-Fuel Research.

SEC. 915. WAKE TURBULENCE, VOLCANIC ASH, AND WEATHER RESEARCH.

Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall—

- (1) initiate an evaluation of proposals related to research on the nature of wake vortexes that would increase national airspace system capacity by reducing existing spacing requirements between aircraft of all sizes;
- (2) begin implementation of a system to improve volcanic ash avoidance options for aircraft, including the development of a volcanic ash warning and notification system for aviation: and
- (3) coordinate with NOAA, NASA, and other appropriate Federal agencies to conduct research to reduce the hazards presented to commercial aviation related to—

- (A) ground de-icing and anti-icing, ice pellets, and freezing drizzle;
- (B) oceanic weather, including convective weather:
- (C) en route turbulence prediction and detection; and
- (D) all hazards during oceanic operations, where commercial traffic is high and only rudimentary satellite sensing is available.

SEC. 916. REAUTHORIZATION OF CENTER OF EX-CELLENCE IN APPLIED RESEARCH AND TRAINING IN THE USE OF AD-VANCED MATERIALS IN TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT.

Section 708(b) of the Vision 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act (49 U.S.C. 44504 note) is amended by striking "for fiscal year 2004" and inserting "for each of fiscal years 2012 through 2015".

SEC. 917. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT OF EQUIPMENT TO CLEAN AND MON-ITOR THE ENGINE AND APU BLEED AIR SUPPLIED ON PRESSURIZED AIRCRAFT.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator, to the extent practicable, shall implement a research program for the identification or development of appropriate and effective air cleaning technology and sensor technology for the engine and auxiliary power unit bleed air supplied to the passenger cabin and flight deck of a pressurized aircraft.
- (b) TECHNOLOGY REQUIREMENTS.—The technology referred to in subsection (a) shall have the capacity, at a minimum—
- (1) to remove oil-based contaminants from the bleed air supplied to the passenger cabin and flight deck; and
- (2) to detect and record oil-based contaminants in the portion of the total air supplied to the passenger cabin and flight deck from bleed air
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the research and development work carried out under this section.

SEC. 918. EXPERT REVIEW OF ENTERPRISE AR-CHITECTURE FOR NEXTGEN.

- (a) REVIEW.—The Administrator shall enter into an arrangement for an independent external review of the enterprise architecture for the Next Generation Air Transportation System.
- (b) CONTENTS.—At a minimum, the review to be conducted under subsection (a) shall—
- (1) highlight the technical activities, including human-system design, organizational design, and other safety and human factor aspects of the system, that will be necessary to successfully transition current and planned modernization programs to the future system envisioned by the Joint Planning and Development Office of the FAA;
- (2) assess technical, cost, and schedule risk for the software development that will be necessary to achieve the expected benefits from a highly automated air traffic management system and the implications for ongoing modernization projects; and
- (3) determine how risks with automation efforts for the Next Generation Air Transportation System can be mitigated based on the experiences of other public or private entities in developing complex, software-intensive systems.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containing the results of the review conducted pursuant to subsection (a).

SEC. 919. AIRPORT SUSTAINABILITY PLANNING WORKING GROUP.

- (a) In General.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall prepare and submit a problem statement to the Transportation Research Board for the purpose of initiating a study under the Airport Cooperative Research Program on airport sustainability practices.
- (b) FUNCTIONS.—The purpose of the study shall be—
- (1) to examine and develop best airport practices and metrics for the sustainable design, construction, planning, maintenance, and operation of an airport;
- (2) to examine potential standards for a rating system based on the best sustainable practices and metrics;
- (3) to examine potential standards for a voluntary airport rating process based on the best sustainable practices, metrics, and ratings; and
- (4) to examine and develop recommendations for future actions with regard to sustainability.
- (c) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of initiation of the study, a report on the study shall be submitted to the Administrator and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate.

TITLE X—NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD

SEC. 1001. RULEMAKING AUTHORITY.

Title I of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 10 the following:

"SEC. 10A. RULES AND REGULATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Mediation Board shall have the authority from time to time to make, amend, and rescind, in the manner prescribed by section 553 of title 5, United States Code, and after opportunity for a public hearing, such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

"(b) APPLICATION.—The requirements of subsection (a) shall not apply to any rule or proposed rule to which the third sentence of section 553(b) of title 5, United States Code, applies."

SEC. 1002. RUNOFF ELECTION RULES.

Paragraph Ninth of section 2 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 152) is amended by inserting after the fourth sentence the following: "In any such election for which there are 3 or more options (including the option of not being represented by any labor organization) on the ballot and no such option receives a majority of the valid votes cast, the Mediation Board shall arrange for a second election between the options receiving the largest and the second largest number of votes.".

SEC. 1003. BARGAINING REPRESENTATIVE CERTIFICATION.

Section 2 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 152) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Twelfth. Showing of interest for representation elections. The Mediation Board, upon receipt of an application requesting that an organization or individual be certified as the representative of any craft or class of employees, shall not direct an election or use any other method to determine who shall be the representative of such craft or class unless the Mediation Board determines that the application is supported by a showing of interest from not less than 50 percent of the employees in the craft or class."

SEC. 1004. OVERSIGHT.

Title I of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 151 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 15. EVALUATION AND AUDIT OF MEDIATION BOARD.

"(α) EVALUATION AND AUDIT OF MEDIATION BOARD.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In order to promote economy, efficiency, and effectiveness in the administration of the programs, operations, and activities of the Mediation Board, the Comptroller General of the United States shall evaluate and audit the programs and expenditures of the Mediation Board. Such an evaluation and audit shall be conducted not less frequently than every 2 years, but may be conducted as determined necessary by the Comptroller General or the appropriate congressional committees.

"(2) RESPONSIBILITY OF COMPTROLLER GEN-ERAL.—In carrying out the evaluation and audit required under paragraph (1), the Comptroller General shall evaluate and audit the programs, operations, and activities of the Mediation Board, including, at a minimum—

"(A) information management and security, including privacy protection of personally identifiable information;

"(B) resource management;

"(C) workforce development;

"(D) procurement and contracting planning, practices, and policies;

"(E) the extent to which the Mediation Board follows leading practices in selected management areas: and

"(F) the processes the Mediation Board follows to address challenges in—

"(i) initial investigations of applications requesting that an organization or individual be certified as the representative of any craft or class of employees;

"(ii) determining and certifying representatives of employees; and

"(iii) ensuring that the process occurs without interference, influence, or coercion.

- "(b) IMMEDIATE REVIEW OF CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Comptival troller General shall review the processes applied by the Mediation Board to certify or decertify representation of employees by a labor organization and make recommendations to the Board and appropriate congressional committees regarding actions that may be taken by the Board or Congress to ensure that the processes are fair and reasonable for all parties. Such review shall be conducted separately from any evaluation and audit under subsection (a) and shall include, at a minimum—
- "(1) an evaluation of the existing processes and changes to such processes that have occurred since the establishment of the Mediation Board and whether those changes are consistent with congressional intent: and
- "(2) a description of the extent to which such processes are consistent with similar processes applied to other Federal or State agencies with jurisdiction over labor relations, and an evaluation of any justifications for any discrepancies between the processes of the Mediation Board and such similar Federal or State processes.
- "(c) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'appropriate congressional committees' means the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate."

TITLE XI—AIRPORT AND AIRWAY TRUST FUND PROVISIONS AND RELATED TAXES SEC. 1100. AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.

SEC. 1103. TREATMENT OF FRACTIONAL AIR-CRAFT OWNERSHIP PROGRAMS.

- (a) FUEL SURTAX.—
- (1) In GENERAL.—Subchapter B of chapter 31 is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 4043. SURTAX ON FUEL USED IN AIRCRAFT PART OF A FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP PROGRAM.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—There is hereby imposed a tax on any liquid used (during any calendar quarter by any person) in a fractional program aircraft as fuel—

"(1) for the transportation of a qualified fractional owner with respect to the fractional ownership aircraft program of which such aircraft is a part, or

"(2) with respect to the use of such aircraft on account of such a qualified fractional owner, including use in deadhead service.

"(b) AMOUNT OF TAX.—The rate of tax imposed by subsection (a) is 14.1 cents per gallon.
"(c) Definitions and Special Pules—For

"(c) Definitions and Special Rules.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) FRACTIONAL PROGRAM AIRCRAFT.—The term 'fractional program aircraft' means, with respect to any fractional ownership aircraft program, any aircraft which—

"(A) is listed as a fractional program aircraft in the management specifications issued to the manager of such program by the Federal Aviation Administration under subpart K of part 91 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, and

"(B) is registered in the United States.

"(2) FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP AIRCRAFT PRO-GRAM.—The term 'fractional ownership aircraft program' means a program under which—

"(A) a single fractional ownership program manager provides fractional ownership program management services on behalf of the fractional owners.

- "(B) there are 1 or more fractional owners per fractional program aircraft, with at least 1 fractional program aircraft having more than 1 owner,
- "(C) with respect to at least 2 fractional program aircraft, none of the ownership interests in such aircraft are—
- "(i) less than the minimum fractional ownership interest, or
- (ii) held by the program manager referred to in subparagraph (A),

- "(D) there exists a dry-lease aircraft exchange arrangement among all of the fractional owners, and
- "(E) there are multi-year program agreements covering the fractional ownership, fractional ownership program management services, and dry-lease aircraft exchange aspects of the program.
- "(3) DEFINITIONS RELATED TO FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP INTERESTS.—
- "(A) QUALIFIED FRACTIONAL OWNER.—The term 'qualified fractional owner' means any fractional owner which has a minimum fractional ownership interest in at least one fractional program aircraft.

"(B) MINIMUM FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP INTER-EST.—The term 'minimum fractional ownership interest' means, with respect to each type of aircraft—

"(i) a fractional ownership interest equal to or greater than 1/16 of at least 1 subsonic, fixed wing, or powered lift aircraft, or

"(ii) a fractional ownership interest equal to or greater than 1/32 of at least 1 rotorcraft aircraft.

'(C) FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP INTEREST.—The term 'fractional ownership interest' means—

"(i) the ownership of an interest in a fractional program aircraft,

"(ii) the holding of a multi-year leasehold interest in a fractional program aircraft, or

"(iii) the holding of a multi-year leasehold interest which is convertible into an ownership interest in a fractional program aircraft.

"(D) FRACTIONAL OWNER.—The term 'fractional owner' means any person owning any interest (including the entire interest) in a fractional program aircraft.

"(4) DRY-LEASE AIRCRAFT EXCHANGE.—The term 'dry-lease aircraft exchange' means an agreement, documented by the written program agreements, under which the fractional program aircraft are available, on an as needed basis without crew, to each fractional owner.

"(5) SPECIAL RULE RELATING TO USE OF FRAC-TIONAL PROGRAM AIRCRAFT FOR FLIGHT DEM-ONSTRATION, MAINTENANCE, OR TRAINING.—For purposes of subsection (a), a fractional program aircraft shall not be considered to be used for the transportation of a qualified fractional owner, or on account of such qualified fractional owner, when it is used for flight demonstration, maintenance, or crew training.

"(6) SPECIAL RULE RELATING TO DEADHEAD SERVICE.—A fractional program aircraft shall not be considered to be used on account of a qualified fractional owner when it is used in deadhead service and a person other than a qualified fractional owner is separately charged for such service.

"(d) TERMINATION.—This section shall not apply to liquids used as a fuel in an aircraft after September 30, 2021.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subsection (e) of section 4082 is amended by inserting "(other than kerosene with respect to which tax is imposed under section 4043)" after "In the case of kerosene".

(3) Transfer of revenues to airport and airway trust fund.—Paragraph (1) of section 9502(b) is amended by redesignating subparagraphs (B) and (C) as subparagraphs (C) and (D), respectively, and by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

"(B) section 4043 (relating to surtax on fuel used in aircraft part of a fractional ownership program),".

"Sec. 4043. Surtax on fuel used in aircraft part of a fractional ownership program.".

(b) Fractional Ownership Programs Treated as Non-commercial Aviation.—Subsection

- (b) of section 4083 is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Such term shall not include the use of any aircraft before October 1, 2015, if tax is imposed under section 4043 with respect to the fuel consumed in such use or if no tax is imposed on such use under section 4043 by reason of subsection (c)(5) thereof".
- (c) EXEMPTION FROM TAX ON TRANSPORTATION OF PERSONS.—Section 4261, as amended by this Act, is amended by redesignating subsection (j) as subsection (k) and by inserting after subsection (i) the following new subsection:
- "(j) EXEMPTION FOR AIRCRAFT IN FRACTIONAL OWNERSHIP AIRCRAFT PROGRAMS.—No tax shall be imposed by this section or section 4271 on any air transportation if tax is imposed under section 4043 with respect to the fuel used in such transportation. This subsection shall not apply after September 30, 2015."
  - (d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—
- (1) SUBSECTION (a).—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to fuel used after March 31, 2012.
- (2) SUBSECTION (b).—The amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to uses of aircraft after March 31, 2012.
- (3) SUBSECTION (c).—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply to taxable transportation provided after March 31, 2012.

SEC. 1104. TRANSPARENCY IN PASSENGER TAX DISCLOSURES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7275 is amended—
- (1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d),
- (2) by striking "subsection (a) or (b)" in subsection (d), as so redesignated, and inserting "subsection (a), (b), or (c)", and
- (3) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:
- "(c) Non-tax Charges.—
- "(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of transportation by air for which disclosure on the ticket or advertising for such transportation of the amounts paid for passenger taxes is required by subsection (a)(2) or (b)(1)(B), if such amounts are separately disclosed, it shall be unlawful for the disclosure of such amounts to include any amounts not attributable to such taxes.
- "(2) INCLUSION IN TRANSPORTATION COST.— Nothing in this subsection shall prohibit the inclusion of amounts not attributable to the taxes imposed by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of section 4261 in the disclosure of the amount paid for transportation as required by subsection (a)(1) or (b)(1)(A), or in a separate disclosure of amounts not attributable to such taxes."
- (b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable transportation provided after March 31, 2012.

SEC. 1105. TAX-EXEMPT BOND FINANCING FOR FIXED-WING EMERGENCY MEDICAL AIRCRAFT.

- (a) In General.—Subsection (e) of section 147 is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The preceding sentence shall not apply to any fixed-wing aircraft equipped for, and exclusively dedicated to providing, acute care emergency medical services (within the meaning of section 4261(g)(2)).".
- (b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to obligations issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1106. ROLLOVER OF AMOUNTS RECEIVED IN AIRLINE CARRIER BANKRUPTCY.

- (a) General Rules.-
- (1) ROLLOVER OF AIRLINE PAYMENT AMOUNT.—
  If a qualified airline employee receives any airline payment amount and transfers any portion of such amount to a traditional IRA within 180 days of receipt of such amount (or, if later, within 180 days of the date of the enactment of this Act), then such amount (to the extent so

- transferred) shall be treated as a rollover contribution described in section 402(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. A qualified airline employee making such a transfer may exclude from gross income the amount transferred, in the taxable year in which the airline payment amount was paid to the qualified airline employee by the commercial passenger airline carrier
- (2) Transfer of amounts attributable to AIRLINE PAYMENT AMOUNT FOLLOWING ROLLOVER TO ROTH IRA.—A qualified airline employee who has contributed an airline payment amount to a Roth IRA that is treated as a qualified rollover contribution pursuant to section 125 of the Worker, Retiree, and Employer Recovery Act of 2008, may transfer to a traditional IRA, in a trustee-to-trustee transfer, all or any part of the contribution (together with any net income allocable to such contribution), and the transfer to the traditional IRA will be deemed to have been made at the time of the rollover to the Roth IRA, if such transfer is made within 180 days of the date of the enactment of this Act. A qualified airline employee making such a transfer may exclude from gross income the airline payment amount previously rolled over to the Roth IRA, to the extent an amount attributable to the previous rollover was transferred to a traditional IRA, in the taxable year in which the airline payment amount was paid to the qualified airline employee by the commercial passenger airline carrier. No amount so transferred to a traditional IRA may be treated as a qualified rollover contribution with respect to a Roth IRA within the 5-taxable year period beginning with the taxable year in which such transfer was made
- (3) EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE CLAIM FOR RE-FUND.—A qualified airline employee who excludes an amount from gross income in a prior taxable year under paragraph (1) or (2) may reflect such exclusion in a claim for refund filed within the period of limitation under section 6511(a) of such Code (or, if later, April 15, 2013).
- (4) Overall limitation on amounts transferred to traditional iras.—
- (A) IN GENERAL.—The aggregate amount of airline payment amounts which may be transferred to 1 or more traditional IRAs under paragraphs (1) and (2) with respect to any qualified employee for any taxable year shall not exceed the excess (if any) of—
- (i) 90 percent of the aggregate airline payment amounts received by the qualified airline employee during the taxable year and all preceding taxable years, over
- (ii) the aggregate amount of such transfers to which paragraphs (1) and (2) applied for all preceding taxable years.
- (B) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of applying the limitation under subparagraph (A)—
- (i) any airline payment amount received by the surviving spouse of any qualified employee, and any amount transferred to a traditional IRA by such spouse under subsection (d), shall be treated as an amount received or transferred by the qualified employee, and
- (ii) any amount transferred to a traditional IRA which is attributable to net income described in paragraph (2) shall not be taken into account.
- (5) COVERED EXECUTIVES NOT ELIGIBLE TO MAKE TRANSFERS.—Paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not apply to any transfer by a qualified airline employee (or any transfer authorized under subsection (d) by a surviving spouse of the qualified airline employee) if at any time during the taxable year of the transfer or any preceding taxable year the qualified airline employee held a position described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 162(m)(3) with the commercial passenger airline carrier from whom the airline payment amount was received.

- (b) TREATMENT OF AIRLINE PAYMENT AMOUNTS AND TRANSFERS FOR EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—For purposes of chapter 21 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and section 209 of the Social Security Act, an airline payment amount shall not fail to be treated as a payment of wages by the commercial passenger airline carrier to the qualified airline employee in the taxable year of payment because such amount is gross income under subsection (a).
- (c) Definitions and Special Rules.—For purposes of this section—
  - (1) AIRLINE PAYMENT AMOUNT.—
- (A) In GENERAL.—The term "airline payment amount" means any payment of any money or other property which is payable by a commercial passenger airline carrier to a qualified airline employee—
- (i) under the approval of an order of a Federal bankruptcy court in a case filed after September 11, 2001, and before January 1, 2007, and
- (ii) in respect of the qualified airline employee's interest in a bankruptcy claim against the carrier, any note of the carrier (or amount paid in lieu of a note being issued), or any other fixed obligation of the carrier to pay a lump sum amount.
- The amount of such payment shall be determined without regard to any requirement to deduct and withhold tax from such payment under sections 3102(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and 3402(a) of such Code.
- (B) EXCEPTION.—An airline payment amount shall not include any amount payable on the basis of the carrier's future earnings or profits.
- (2) QUALIFIED AIRLINE EMPLOYEE.—The term "qualified airline employee" means an employee or former employee of a commercial passenger airline carrier who was a participant in a defined benefit plan maintained by the carrier which—
- (A) is a plan described in section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 which includes a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code, and
- (B) was terminated or became subject to the restrictions contained in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 402(b) of the Pension Protection Act of 2006.
- (3) Traditional Ira.—The term "traditional IRA" means an individual retirement plan (as defined in section 7701(a)(37) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) which is not a Roth IRA.
- (4) ROTH IRA.—The term "Roth IRA" has the meaning given such term by section 408A(b) of such Code
- (d) SURVIVING SPOUSE.—If a qualified airline employee died after receiving an airline payment amount, or if an airline payment amount was paid to the surviving spouse of a qualified airline employee in respect of the qualified airline employee, the surviving spouse of the qualified airline employee may take all actions permitted under section 125 of the Worker, Retiree and Employer Recovery Act of 2008, or under this section, to the same extent that the qualified airline employee could have done had the qualified airline employee survived.
- (e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall apply to transfers made after the date of the enactment of this Act with respect to airline payment amounts paid before, on, or after such date.

SEC. 1107. TERMINATION OF EXEMPTION FOR SMALL JET AIRCRAFT ON NON-ESTABLISHED LINES.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—The first sentence of section 4281 is amended by inserting "or when such aircraft is a jet aircraft" after "an established line".
- (b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable transportation provided after March 31, 2012.

SEC. 1108. MODIFICATION OF CONTROL DEFINI-TION FOR PURPOSES OF SECTION 249.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 249(a) is amended by striking ", or a corporation in control of, or controlled by," and inserting ", or a corporation in the same parent-subsidiary controlled group (within the meaning of section 1563(a)(1) as"
- (b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 249(b) is amended-
- (1) by striking all that precedes "is the issue price" and inserting:
- '(b) ADJUSTED ISSUE PRICE.—For purposes of subsection (a), the adjusted issue price", and
- (2) by striking paragraph (2). (c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to repurchases after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE XII—COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTORY PAY-AS-YOU-GO-ACT OF 2010 SEC. 1201. COMPLIANCE PROVISION.

The budgetary effects of this Act, for the purpose of complying with the Statutory Pay-As-You-Go-Act of 2010, shall be determined by reference to the latest statement titled "Budgetary Effects of PAYGO Legislation" for this Act, jointly submitted for printing in the Congressional Record by the Chairmen of the House and Senate Budget Committees, provided that such statement has been submitted prior to the vote on passage in the House acting first on this conference report or amendment between the Houses.

And the Senate agree to the same. From the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, for consideration of the House bill and the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference:

Managers on the Part of the Senate.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 658), to amend title 49. United States Code. to authorize appropriations for the Federal Aviation Administration for fiscal years 2011 through 2014, to streamline programs, create efficiencies, reduce waste, and improve aviation safety and capacity, to provide stable funding for the national aviation system. and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference

The Senate amendment struck all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment that is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The committee of conference met on January 31, 2012 (the Senate chairing), and resolved their differences. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

TITLE I—AUTHORIZATIONS

AUTHORIZATION LEVELS ($ IN BILLIONS)

H101(a),102,103/S101,102,103,104

House bill

Section 101(a) authorizes the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) Airport Improvement Program (AIP) account at: $3.176 billion for Fiscal Year (FY) 2011; $3 billion for FY 2012; and $3 billion for FY 2013; and $3 billion for FY 2014. It prohibits the use of AIP funds for carrying out the Airport Cooperative Research Program or the Airports Technology Research Program and extends the obligational authority to September 30, 2014. It makes funds obligated in subsection (a) available until they are spent.

Section 102 authorizes the FAA's Facilities and Equipment (F&E) account at: $2.7 billion for FY 2011 and $2.6 billion for FYs 2012 through FY 2014. It removes references to the following accounts: enhanced safety and security for aircraft operations in the Gulf of Mexico; operational benefits of wake vortex advisory system; ground based precision navigational aids; ground based precision navigation; standby power efficiency program; and a pilot program to provide incentives for development of new technologies.

Section 103 authorizes the FAA's Operations account at: $9.403 billion for FY 2011 and $9.168 billion for FYs 2012 through FY 2014. It authorizes expenditures necessary for: the Air Traffic Control Collegiate Training Initiative; completion of Alaska aviation safety project regarding 3-D mapping of main aviation corridors; and carrying out the Aviation Safety Reporting System. The FAA's expenditure authority is also extended through 2014. The Secretary of Transportation is permitted to transfer funds from non-safety related programs if appropriated funds are insufficient to meet salary, operations, and maintenance expenses.

Senate hill

Section 101 authorizes the FAA's Operations account at $9.336 billion in FY 2010 and $9.62 billion in FY 2011.

Section 102 authorizes the FAA's Facilities and Equipment account at $3.5 billion in FY 2010, of which $500 million would be derived from the newly-created Air Traffic System Modernization Account (ATSMA); and $3.6 billion in FY 2011, of which $500 million would be derived from the new account established by this section.

Section 103 authorizes the FAA's Research, Engineering and Development (R,E,&D) account at $200 million in FY 2010 and $206 million in FY 2011. It replaces current statutory language in-§48102(a) (which has a breakdown of how the money should be allotted) with the authorization levels only and strikes several paragraphs for the R,E,&D account. It requires the FAA to establish a grant program to promote aviation research at undergraduate and technical colleges, including schools serving Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCU) students, Hispanic, Native Alaskan and Hawaiian pop-

Section 104 authorizes the FAA's AIP account at $4.0 billion for FY 2010 and $4.1 billion in FY 2011.

Conference Substitute

The conference committee agreed to the following funding levels:

Section 101 authorizes the FAA's Airport Improvement Program (AIP) account at $3.35 billion for FY 2012 through FY 2015.

Section 102 authorizes the FAA's Facilities and Equipment (F&E) account at: $2.731 billion for FY 2012, $2.715 for FY 2013, $2.730 billion for FY 2014 and FY 2015.

Section 103 authorizes the FAA's Operations account at: $9.653 billion for FY 2012, $9.539 billion for FY 2013, $9.596 billion for FY 2014, and $9.653 billion for FY 2015.

Section 901 authorizes the FAA's Research Engineering and Development (R,E,&D) account at $168 million annually for FY 2012 through 2015.

FUNDING OF AVIATION PROGRAMS

H104/S105

House bill

Section 104 modifies the formula that determines the amount made available from the Airport and Airways Trust Fund (Trust Fund) each year to fund the FAA. The section requires the Trust Fund support for aviation programs in FY 2011 be equal to 90 percent of the estimated Trust Fund revenue (taxes plus interest). In FY 2012, FY 2013 and FY 2014, the Trust Fund appropriation should equal the sum of 90 percent of the estimated Trust Fund revenue, plus the difference between actual revenue and the Trust Fund appropriation in the second preceding fiscal year. It extends the authorization of appropriations for the general fund to 2014 and makes technical corrections by striking "level" and inserting "estimated level" and by striking "level of receipts plus interest" and replacing it with "estimated level of receipts plus interest." Lastly, it amends enforcement of guarantees by inserting 2014 in place of 2007.

Senate bill

Section 105 extends the budgetary treatment for the FAA's accounts through FY

DELINEATION OF NEXT GENERATION AIR TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS

H105/S106 House bill

Section 105 requires the list of capital projects that are part of the Next Generation Air Transportation System (NextGen) system be included in the Airway Capital Investment Plan.

Senate bill

Section 106 is a similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House bill.

FUNDING FOR ADMINISTRATION EXPENSES FOR AIRPORT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

H106/S107(a)(b)

House hill

Section 106 authorizes funds for the Airport Improvement Program (AIP) administrative expenses (i.e., AIP approval and oversight, national airport system planning, airport standards development and enforcement, airport certification, and airport-related environmental activities).

Senate bill

Section 107(a)(b) authorizes the administrative expenses for the FAA's airports program through FY 2011.

Conference Substitute

No provision.

PASSENGER FACILITY CHARGES

H111/S201(b)

House bill

Section 111 defines Passenger Facility Charge (PFC), makes permanent a pilot program that allows the collection of PFCs at non-hub airports, and makes a technical correction changing references of PFCs from "fees" to "charges."

Senate bill

Section 201(b) makes a technical correction changing references of PFC from "fees' to "charges"

AIRPORT ACCESS FLEXIBILITY PROGRAM

H112/S201(a)

House bill

Section 112 establishes a pilot program, at no more than five airports, for off-airport intermodal ground access projects related to movement of airport passengers/property, subject to certain conditions.

Senate bill

Section 201(a) streamlines the administrative requirements associated with PFCs, while retaining audit controls and FAA project and expenditure oversight. It provides requirements on any airport authority wishing to increase its PFC, or wishing to impose a PFC to finance an intermodal ground facility.

Conference Substitute

No provision.

GAO STUDY OF ALTERNATIVE MEANS OF COLLECTING PECS

H114(a),113/S202

House bill

Section 114(a) defines "qualifications-based selection" (QBS) as a competitive procurement process under which firms compete for capital improvement projects on the basis of qualifications, past experience, and specific expertise.

Section 113 instructs the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) to conduct a study of alternative means of PFC collection to allow such charges be collected without being included in the ticket price.

Section 202 requires a pilot program for direct collection of PFCs via the internet or other means, except through air carriers, under which there would be no cap on the PFC. The GAO is directed to conduct a study of potential alternative means of PFC collec-

House bill modified by dropping definition of QBS.

QUALIFICATIONS-BASED SELECTION

H114(b)/S-

House hill

Section 114(b) expresses the sense of Congress that airports should consider the use of qualifications-based selection in carrying out capital improvement projects using PFCs collected with the goal of serving the needs of all stakeholders.

REFORM AND STREAMLINING OF PFC AUTHORITY AND COLLECTION

H-/S201(a)

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

Section 201(a) eliminates the existing statutory requirement that PFC funding may only be used for airport capital projects that preserve or enhance airport capacity, safety, or security, or reduce noise. It expedites the PFC application process by directing collection to begin upon filing of annual reports containing required information and after consultation with carriers and public notice requirements instead of waiting for FAA approval of each PFC application. This section establishes a process for filing objections to a PFC project, and allows the Secretary of Transportation to investigate excessive PFC collections or for revenue not being used per law. It provides exceptions to new processes used for intermodal ground access projects and for an increase in PFC, both of which require prior FAA approval before collection.

Conference Substitute

House bill.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS AND PFC PILOT PROGRAM AT NON-HUB AIRPORTS

H111(b)/S201(a)

House bill

Section 111(b) makes the pilot program for collecting PFCs at non-hub airports permanent.

Senate bill

Section 201(a) is a similar provision with minor technical differences.

Conference Substitute

UPDATE ON OVERFLIGHTS

H121/S706

House bill

Section 121 requires the FAA to guarantee existing overflight fees are reasonably related to agency costs for providing air traffic services, and requires the FAA to adjust the fees and begin collection of the appropriate amount. The FAA is authorized to periodically modify the fee based on the cost of providing such service.

Senate bill 7

Section 706 is similar to the House provision, but it directs the FAA to establish an Aviation Rulemaking Committee (ARC) to review overflight fees which the FAA must consult with before making any adjustments to the fees or collection is made.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified by removing language creating a special rule for FYs 2011 through 2015 which specified that "in each of fiscal years 2011 through 2015, section 45303(c) shall not apply to any increase in fees collected pursuant to a final rule described in paragraph (4)" and by removing language to issue a final rule with respect to the NPRM published in the Federal Register on September 28. 2010

REGISTRATION FEES

H122/S-

House bill

Section 122 requires the FAA to establish fees for registration, certification and related services. It specifies amounts for such fees in the provision for eleven services, and requires the FAA to periodically adjust the fees when cost data reveal that the cost of providing the service changes. Lastly, it specifies that fees should be treated as offsetting collections subject to appropriations. Senate bill

No similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House bill, but with no amounts specified for the fees.

AIRPORT MASTER PLANS

AEROTROPOLIS TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS H132/S3-

House bill

Section 132 directs the Secretary of Transportation to encourage development of aerotropolis transportation systems, which are planned and coordinated multimodal freight and passenger transportation networks that provide efficient, cost-effective, sustainable, and intermodal connectivity to a defined region of economic significance centered around a major airport, as determined by the Secretary.

AIRPORT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM (AIP) DEFINITIONS

H133/S208(j),215,714(a)

House bill

Section 133(a)(1) broadens eligibility for AIP spending to include firefighting and revenue equipment at an airport that serves scheduled passenger operations of air carrier aircraft designed for more than nine passengers instead of the current limit of 20.

Section 133(a)(2) allows AIP funds to be used for glycol recovery vehicles.

Section 133(a)(3) permits AIP funds to be used for mobile refueler parking within a fuel farm at a non-primary airport, if required by an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) rule, terminal development costs, air conditioning/heating/electricity from terminal facilities, and equipment for parked aircraft to reduce energy consump-

Section 133(b) amends the definition of airport planning to include an environmental management system and recycling.

Section 133(c) defines "general aviation

Section 133(d) defines "revenue producing aeronautical support facilities," which allows non-primary airports to use their entitlements to build or rehabilitate new facilities that can help generate revenue.

Section 133(e) redefines "terminal development" to include development of an airport passenger terminal building, including gates and access roads and walkways.

GRANT ASSURANCES

H136/S203

House bill

Section 136(a),(b) permits the Secretary of Transportation to allow grants to be used for relocating or replacing existing airport facilities.

Section 136(b)(1) revises requirements on acquiring lands to permit an airport to keep any funds obtained from the sale of lands acquired for noise compatibility purposes and reinvest those funds in the airport or transfer those funds to another airport consistent with the statute. It removes a requirement to return the proportion equal to the government share in acquiring the land to the Sec-

Section 136(b)(2) sets the priorities which apply to the Secretary's decision to approve reinvestment or transfer of proceeds from the sale of land acquired for noise compatibility. Priorities are: 1) reinvestments in an approved noise compatibility project; 2) reinvestment in an approved project that is eligible for funding; 3) reinvestment in an approved airport development project that is eligible for funding under §47114, 47115, or 47117; 4) transfer to a sponsor of another public airport to be reinvested in an approved noise compatibility project; and 5) deposit into the Airport and Airway Trust Fund.

Section 136(c) makes a technical correction to 47107(e)(2)(iii) by deleting "the Fund" and inserting "the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986."

Section 136(d) makes the Competition Disclosure Requirement pilot program permanent. No similar provision.

Senate hill

Section 203 is a similar provision.

Section 203 is similar, but allows airports that receive improvement grants for the purchase of land to lease the land and develop the land in a manner compatible with noise buffering purposes.

Section 203 adds that a lease by an airport owner or operator of land acquired for a noise compatibility purpose using an improvement grant will not be considered a disposal, and allows revenues from the lease to be used for ongoing airport operational and capital purposes.

No similar provision. No similar provision.

Section 203 adds the phrase "serving as noise buffer land" to clarify that such land is one of the land acquisitions subject to disposal at the earliest practicable time after it is no longer needed for the intended noise compatibility purpose.

Conference Substitute

House bill with the language from the Senate bill section 203 related to "serving as noise buffer land" added.

AGREEMENTS GRANTING THROUGH-THE-FENCE ACCESS TO GENERAL AVIATION AIRPORTS

H137/S-House bill

Section 137 requires that the sponsor of a general aviation airport will not be in violation of a grant assurance as a condition for the receipt of federal funds solely because the sponsor entered into an agreement to allow a person, who owns residential real property adjacent to the airport, access to the airfield of the airport.

No similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified to include language in the agreement between an airport sponsor and a property owner prohibiting any aircraft refueling from occurring on that property, and includes a definition of "general aviation airport".

GOVERNMENT SHARE OF PROJECT COSTS

H138/S204,207

House bill

Section 138 adds a special rule for transition from small hub to medium hub which limits the government share of funding to 90 percent for the first two years following the change in status. The government share is set at 95 percent for a project at an airport that is receiving subsidized air service and is located in an area that meets one or more of the criteria for economically depressed communities established by the Secretary of Commerce.

Senate bill

Section 204(a) establishes a special rule to allow for small hub airports that have increased operations and therefore are being reclassified as medium hub airports to retain their eligibility for two years at up to a 95 percent government share of projects costs.

Section 204(b) extends the project cost for transitioning Airport Improvement Project (AIP) projects through FY 2011.

Section 207 sets the government share at 95 percent for certain projects at small airports if it is funded by a grant issued to, and administered, by a State under the State block grant program or for any project at an airport other than a primary airport having at least 0.25 percent of the total number of passenger boardings at all commercial service airports.

ALLOWABLE PROJECT COSTS

H139/S214,205

House bill

Section 139(a) amends allowable AIP project costs to include costs for airport development incurred prior to the execution of the grant agreement if: 1) the cost is incurred in the same fiscal year as the execution of the grant agreement; 2) the cost was incurred before execution due to a short construction season in the vicinity of the airport; 3) the cost is in accordance with the approved airport layout plan; 4) the sponsor notifies the Secretary of Transportation before commencing work; 5) the sponsor has an alternative funding source available to fund the project; and/or 6) the sponsor's decision to proceed with the work does not affect the priority assigned to the project by the Secretary for the allocation of discretionary funds

Section 139(b) amends allowable AIP project costs to include costs incurred to improve the efficiency of an airport building (i.e., a measure designed to meet one or more of the criteria for being considered a highperformance green building as set forth under the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007), and: 1) the measure is for a project for airport development; 2) the measure is for an airport building that is otherwise eligible for construction assistance; and/or 3) if the measure results in an increase in initial project costs, the increase is justified by expected savings over the life cycle of the project.

Section 139(c) provides the Secretary discretion in determining that the costs of relocating or replacing and airport-owned facility are allowable, to those instances in which: 1) the Government's share will be paid with funds apportioned to the airport sponsor; 2) the Secretary determines that the relocation or replacement is required due to a change in the Secretary's design standards; and 3) the Secretary determines the change is beyond the control of the sponsor.

Section 139(d) clarifies that the Secretary may determine that the cost of constructing revenue-producing aeronautical support facilities at non-primary airports is allowable.

No similar provision.

Senate bill

Section 214 is a similar provision to House section 142(a), but requires the Secretary to consider the short construction season in some areas when selecting projects for AIP discretionary funding.

No similar provision.

Section 205 is a similar provision to House section 139(c).

No similar provision.

Section 205 includes a requirement for the Administrator to analyze the conclusions of ongoing studies with commercially available bird radar systems within 180 days of enactment and, if it is determined that the systems have no negative impact on existing navigational aids and that the expenditure is appropriate, shall allow purchase of bird-detecting radar systems as an allowable airport development project cost. If the Administrator concludes that such radar systems will not improve or will negatively impact airport safety, the Administrator shall issue a report explaining that determination.

Conference Substitute

VETERANS' PREFERENCE

H140/S208(b)

House bill

Section 140 amends the definition of "Vietnam-era veteran" and adds veterans from the Afghanistan/Iraq conflict and Persian Gulf War to the definition of those veterans eligible for employment preference on Airport Improvement Program (AIP) projects. It adds a provision requiring that a contract involving labor for carrying out an airport development project under a grant agreement include a preference for the use of small business concerns owned and controlled by disabled veterans.

SPECIAL APPORTIONMENT RULES

H142/S208(i), (h)

House bill

Section 142(a) gives the Secretary of Transportation authority to apportion to an airport sponsor in a fiscal year an amount equal to the minimum apportionment available to the airport sponsor in the previous fiscal year, if the airport received scheduled or unscheduled air service from a large certificated carrier in the calendar year used to calculate the apportionment, and the airport had more than 10,000 passenger boardings in the calendar year used to calculate the apportionment.

Section 142(b) continues a special apportionment for airports that remain affected by the decrease in passengers following the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, through 2012.

No similar provision.

Senate bill

Section 208(i) is a similar provision to House section 142(a) and (b).

Section 208(h) amends the special apportionment categories by change the special apportionment from "thirty five percent" to a fixed amount of "$300 million" annually for grants for various airport noise, compatible land use, and Clean Air Act compliance projects. It adds certain water quality mitigation projects to those on which such funds may be expended.

Conference Substitute

DESIGNATING CURRENT AND FORMER MILITARY AIRPORTS

H147/S220, 212

House bill

Current law allows the Secretary of Transportation to designate current or former military airports eligible for grants under the Military Airport Program (MAP). Section 147(a) adds to the items that must be considered to approve a grant the requirement that it preserves or enhances minimum airfield infrastructure facilities at former military airports to support emergency diversionary operations for transoceanic flights in locations in U.S. jurisdiction or control, and where there is a lack of airports within the distance required by regulations.

Section 147(b) allows up to three general aviation airports to participate in the FAA's Military Airport Program.

Section 147(c) makes current or former military airports eligible to be considered for AIP funding if that airport is found to be critical to the safety of trans-oceanic air traffic.

 $Senate\ bill$

No similar provision.

Section 220 is a similar provision to House section 147(b) and, however it allows a total of three general aviation airports to participate in the Military Airport Program.

CONTRACT TOWER PROGRAM

H148/S432

 $House\ bill$

Section 148(a) directs the Secretary of Transportation to extend the low activity (Visual Flight Rules) level I air traffic control tower (ATC) contract program to other low-activity towers meeting the requirements set forth by the Secretary of Transportation where the airport operator has requested to participate in the program.

Section 148(a) also adds a special rule which alleviates the responsibility of the airport sponsor or State or local government to paying the portion of the costs that exceed the benefits for a period of 18 months after the Secretary determines that a level I tower operating under this program has a benefit to cost ratio of less than 1.0.

Section 148(b) caps the maximum allowable cost share for an airport with fewer than 50,000 annual passenger enplanements at 20 percent of the cost of operating an ATC tower under the contract tower program, and sunsets this requirement on September 30,

Section 148(b) also permits the Secretary to use excess funds from the contract tower program intended for level I towers to fund activities for non-approach contract towers.

Section 148(c) increases the maximum amount of funds that can be expended in carrying out the Contract Tower Program for non-approach contract towers at not more than $8.5 million for each of FYs 2011 through 2014.

Section 148(d) increases the limitation on the amount of the federal share of the cost of construction of a non-approach control tower from $1.5 million to $2 million.

Section 148(e) requires the establishment of uniform safety standards and requirements for safety assessments of ATC towers that receive funding.

Senate bill

Section 432(b) is the same provision as House section 148(b) but caps the maximum allowable local share at 20 percent.

Section 432(a) is the same provision as House section 148(a).

Section 432(c) is a similar provision to House section 148(c), but it specifies that not more than $9.5 million in FY 2010 and not more than $10 million in FY 2011 can be used.

Section 432(d) is the same provision as House section 148(d)

Section 432(e) is the same provision as House section 148(e).

Conference Substitute

House bill modified by adjusting the authorization levels, and by deleting: (1) language capping the local cost share at 20 percent: and (2) provisions requiring the Secretary of Transportation to expand the Contract Tower Program. SALE OF PRIVATE AIRPORT TO PUBLIC SPONSOR H150/S206

House bill

Section 150(a) exempts funds from the sale of an airport to a public sponsor from use restrictions. This exemption applies where the Secretary of Transportation approves the sale, federal grants are provided for any portion of the public sponsor's acquisition of the airport, and certain amounts of remaining airport improvement grants are repaid to the Secretary.

Section 150(a) also specifies that recovery of grant funds are treated as recovery of prior year obligations

Section  $150(\bar{b})$  specifies that this section is applicable to grants issued on or after October 1, 1996.

Senate bill

Section 206 is a similar provision to House section 150(a), but it specifies that proceeds are repaid to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for airport acquisitions.

Section 153(a) makes a technical change to requirements for the National Plan of Integrated Airport Systems (NPIAS), which comprises all commercial service airports, all reliever airports, and selected general aviation airports

Section 153(b) permits the Secretary of Transportation to approve a project for terminal development (including multimodal terminal development) in a nonrevenue-producing public-use area of a commercial service airport if the sponsor certifies that the airport: (1) has all the safety equipment required and security equipment required by regulation; (2) provides access for passengers to the area of the airport boarding or exiting aircraft that are not air carrier aircraft; (3) costs are directly related to moving passengers and baggage in air commerce within the airport; and (4) meets the terms necessary to protect the interest of the govern-

Section 153(b) directs the Secretary to approve as allowable costs of terminal development (including multimodal terminal development) in a revenue-producing area and construction, reconstruction, repair and improvement in a non-revenue producing parking lot under certain circumstances.

Section 153(b) prohibits the Secretary from distributing more than $20 million from discretionary funds for terminal development projects at a non-hub airport or a small hub airport that is eligible to receive discretionary funds.

Section 153(c) makes technical changes to the annual reporting requirements by moving the due date to June 1 of each year. Also, it removes the first four report requirements and replaces them with: (1) a summary of airport development and planning completed; (2) a summary of individual grants issued; (3) an accounting of discretionary and apportioned funds allocated; and (4) the allocation of appropriations.

Section 153(d) makes a technical correction to the emission credits provision.

Section 153(e) makes a technical correction to section §46301(d)(2).

House bill

Section 156 requires the Secretary of Transportation to study and evaluate the formulation of the National Plan of Integrated Airport Systems (NPIAS) and report to Congress on the findings and recommended changes for formulating NPIAS and methods to determining the amounts apportioned to airports. The study is to address the following: 1) criteria used for including airports in the plan; 2) changes in airport capital needs as shown in the 2005-2009 and 2007-2011 plans, compared with the amounts apportioned or otherwise made available to individual airports between 2005 and 2010; 3) a comparison of the amounts received by airports under the AIP in airport apportionments, State apportionments, and discretionary grants during fiscal years with capital needs as reported in the plan; 4) the effect of transfers of airport apportionments under title 49 United States Code (U.S.C.); 5) an analysis on the feasibility and advisability of apportioning amounts under 47114(c)(1) to the sponsor of each primary airport for each fiscal year an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount subject to the apportionment for FY 2009 as the number of passenger boardings at the airport during the prior calendar year bears to the aggregate of all passenger boardings at all primary airports during that calendar year; 6) a documentation and review of the methods used by airports to reach the 10,000 passenger enplanement threshold; and 7) any other matters pertaining to the plan that the Secretary determines appropriate.

AIRPORT PRIVATIZATION PROGRAM

H158/S—

House bill

Section 158(a) amends current law relating to specific provisions for issuance of exemptions in connection with a transfer of airport operation to a private owner. This section authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to expand the number of airports from five to ten airports. The Secretary is authorized to exempt the selling airport sponsor from the revenue diversion prohibition after the Secretary has consulted the air carrier serving the primary airport, and in the case of non-primary airport, with at least 65 percent of owners of aircraft based at that airport (thereby eliminating the existing requirement that the selling airport sponsor obtain the approval of at least 65 percent of the air carriers serving the airport before the revenue diversion prohibition can be waived.)

Section 158(b) removes the requirement that the Secretary must ensure that the airport fee imposed on air carriers will not increase more than inflation; the percent increase on fees to general aviation will not exceed the percentage of fees imposed on air carriers; and collective bargaining agreements will not be abrogated by sale or lease. It prohibits an airport from imposing a fee on a domestic or foreign air carrier for a return on investment or recovery of principal with respect to consideration paid to public agency for the lease unless the air carriers approve.

Section 208(a) elevates the Director of the Joint Planning and Development Office (JPDO) to the level of Associate Administrator for NextGen, reporting directly to the Administrator. The responsibilities of the Director will include: 1) establishing specific quantitative goals for the safety, capacity, efficiency, performance, and environmental impacts of each phase of NextGen planning and development activities; 2) working to ensure global interoperability of NextGen; 3) working to ensure the use of weather information and space weather information in NextGen as soon as possible; 4) overseeing, with the Administrator and in consultation with the Chief NextGen Officer (CNO), the selection of products or outcomes of Research, Engineering and Development activities that should be moved to a demonstration phase; and 5) maintaining a baseline modeling and simulation environment for testing and evaluating alternative concepts to satisfy NextGen enterprise architecture requirements.

Section 208(a) directs the Associate Administrator for NextGen to also be a voting member on the Joint Resources Council.

Section 208(a) requires the JPDO to coordinate NextGen activities with OMB.

Section 208(a) requires the Department of Defense (DOD), Department of Homeland Security (DHS), Department of Commerce, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to designate a senior official to work with the FAA on NextGen implementation.

AUTOMATIC DEPENDENT SURVEILLANCE BROADCAST SERVICES

H211/S315

House bill

Section 204 requires an annual audit by the DOT IG of the FAA's ADS-B program to assist Congress in creating FAA accountability for implementing the ADS-B program. It directs the Administrator to initiate a rulemaking proceeding within one year after the date of enactment to issue guidelines and regulations relating to ADS-B In technology. Requires the Chief NextGen Officer to verify that the necessary ground infrastructure is installed and functioning properly, certification standards have been approved, and appropriate operational platforms interface safely and efficiently before the date on which all aircraft are required to be equipped with ADS-B In technology. The Administrator is directed to develop, in consultation with employee and industry groups, plans for the use of ADS-B technology, including testing, controller training, and policy for early aircraft equipage.

Senate hill

Section 315 is a similar provision, but requires a defined budget and the identification of actual benefits to national airspace system (NAS) users including small and medium-sized airports and the general aviation community. It requires two rulemakings by the FAA: 1) to complete a rulemaking procedure within 45 days of enactment and mandate that all aircraft should be equipped with ADS-B Out technology by 2015; and 2) to initiate a rulemaking procedure on ADS-B In technology and require all aircraft to be equipped with ADS-B In by 2018. The FAA is required to create a plan for ADS-B technology use by air traffic control by 2015, including a test of ADS-B prior to 2015 within the plan. It sets conditional extensions of the deadline for equipping aircraft with ADS-B technology.

Conference Substitute

ACCELERATION OF NEXTGEN TECHNOLOGIES  $\rm H213/S314,510$

House bill

Section 213(a) requires the Administrator to publish a report within six months (but after consultation with employee groups) that includes how FAA will develop: 1) Area Navigation and Required Navigation Performance (RNAV/RNP) procedures at 35 Operational Evolution Partnership (OEP) airports identified by FAA; 2) a description of requirements to implement them; 3) an implementation plan; 4) an assessment of the cost/benefit for using third parties to develop procedures; and 5) a process for creating future RNA/RNP procedures. (The FAA is directed to implement 30 percent of these procedures within 18 months, 60 percent within 36 months, and 100 percent by June 2015.

Section 213(b) establishes a charter with Performance Based Navigation ARC as necessary to establish priorities in navigation performance and area navigation procedures based on potential safety and efficiency benefits to the NAS, including small and medium hub airports. Section 213(c) states that performance and area navigation procedures under this section shall be presumed covered by categorical exclusion in Chapter 3 of FAA Order 1050.1E.

Section 213(d) directs the Administrator to submit a development plan in one year for nationwide data communications systems.

Section 213(e) instructs the Administrator to outline in the NextGen Implementation Plan what utilization of ADS-B, RNP and other technologies included as part of NextGen implementation will display position of aircraft more accurately, and the feasibility of reducing aircraft separation standards. Should it be deemed feasible to reduce aircraft separation standards, the Administrator shall produce a timetable for implementation of such standards.

Section 213(f) establishes a program in which the Administration will utilize third parties to develop air traffic procedures.

Senate bill

Section 314 directs the Administrator to publish a report within six months, after consultation with stakeholders, including the development of: 1) RNP/RNAV procedures at 137 airports; 2) a description of the activities required for their implementation; 3) an implementation plan that includes baseline and performance metrics; 4) assessment of the benefits/costs of using third parties to develop the procedures; and 5) a process for the creation of future RNP and RNAV procedures. The Administrator must implement 30 percent of the procedures within 18 months of enactment, 60 percent within 36 months of enactment, and 100 percent by 2014. The Administrator is directed to create a plan for the implementation of procedures at the remaining airports across the country. It would require 25 percent of the procedures at these airports to be implemented within 18 months after enactment, 50 percent within 30 months after enactment; 75 percent within 42 months after enactment, and 100 percent before 2016. The charter of the Performance Based Navigation ARC is extended and directs it to establish priorities for development of the RNP/RNAV procedures based on potential safety and congestion benefits. It would require that the process of the development of such procedures be subject to a previously established environmental review process. The FAA is directed to provide Congress with a deployment plan for the implementation of a nationwide data communications system to support NextGen air traffic control and a report evaluating the ability of NextGen technologies to facilitate improved performance standards for aircraft in the NAS.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified to change language to separate OEP and non-OEP airports to establish separate timelines and milestones, to require the FAA to provide a categorical exclusion for RNP/RNAV procedures that would lead to a reduction in aircraft fuel consumption, emissions and noise on an average per flight basis, and to direct the Administrator to establish a program under which the Administrator is authorized to utilize the services of qualified third parties in the development, testing, and maintenance of flight procedures.

LINE CHECK EVALUATIONS

H316/S722

House bill

Section 316 requires the Administrator to sunset, one year after the date of enactment, the requirement for a second yearly line check evaluation for airline pilots over the age of 60, unless the Secretary of Transportation certifies that the additional line check is necessary to ensure safety.

Senate bill

Section 722 is a similar provision, but does not require DOT safety certification.

SAFETY OF AIR AMBULANCE OPERATIONS H310/S507

House bill

Section 310 directs the FAA to issue a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) within 180 days to address air ambulance safety. It requires a follow up or rulemaking to address additional Helicopter Emergency Medical Services training. Operators are required to collect and report data to the Administrator on their operations, including the number of flights and hours flown and for the FAA to report on that data 24 months after enactment, and annually thereafter.

Senate bill

Section 507 is similar language, but includes fixed-wing ambulance operators within the NPRM and includes a deadline of 60 days. It does not require pilot training, radar altimeters, survivability equipment, or operational control centers to be addressed within the NPRM. It requires helicopter and fixed wing air ambulance operators to comply with regulations under 14 Code of Federal Regulations (C.F.R.) part 135 whenever there is medical personnel onboard, with certain exceptions. It also requires that terrain awareness and warning systems be onboard helicopter and fixed wing aircraft within one year. The FAA is directed to study and initiate a third rulemaking within one year of enactment to require devices similar to Cockpit Voice Recorders (CVR) and Flight Data Recorders (FDR).

Conference Substitute

House bill with modified language to change deadline for the first two rulemakings to June 1, 2012.

PROHIBITION ON PERSONAL USE OF CERTAIN DEVICES ON THE FLIGHT DECK

H313/S558

House bill

Section 313 prohibits the use of laptops and other personal wireless devices by the flight crew on the flight deck while the aircraft is being operated except if the device is being used for a purpose related to the operation of the aircraft, emergencies or safety, or employment related communications. It authorizes civil penalties for violation of this provision and gives the Administrator the ability to amend, modify, suspend or revoke an operator's certificate for violation of this provision. The Secretary of Transportation is required to initiate a rulemaking within 90 days of enactment; and a final rule is due two years after date of enactment. It directs the Administrator to conduct a study and report to Congress on the sources of distraction for flight crewmembers.

Senate bill

Section 558 is a similar provision, except only civil penalties are authorized for violation of this provision. It directs FAA to initiate a rulemaking within 30 days of enactment, and issue a final rule within one year of enactment.

INSPECTION OF REPAIR STATIONS LOCATED OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

H315/S521

House bill

Section 315 requires the Administrator to establish and implement a system for assessing the safety of foreign repair stations based on identified risks and consistent with U.S. requirements. The FAA is to initiate inspections as frequently as it determines is warranted by its safety assessment system. The Departments of Transportation and State are required to request members of the International Civil Aviation Organization to establish international standards for drug/alcohol testing of safety inspectors. The Administrator is directed to issue a proposed rule within one year of enactment requiring that all foreign repair station employees responsible for safety-sensitive maintenance functions are subject to an alcohol and controlled substances testing program that is determined acceptable by the FAA and is consistent with the applicable laws of the country in which the repair station is based. The FAA is to provide an annual report within one year of enactment, and annually thereafter, on the Administration's oversight of foreign repair stations and implementation of the foreign repair station safety assessment system. It instructs the Administrator to notify Congress within 30 days after initiating formal negotiations with a foreign aviation authority or other appropriate foreign government agency on a new maintenance implementation agreement.

Senate bill

Section 521 is a similar provision, but directs the FAA to inspect all repair stations, including those abroad, at least twice a year in a manner consistent with United States obligations under international agreements. The inspection results for foreign civil aviation authorities shall be considered if the foreign country has a maintenance safety agreement with the United States.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged and modified, removing language requiring that the report on part 145 repair stations be completed within 1 year of enactment and modified the annual inspections requirement from occurring "as frequently as determined warranted" to annually in a manner that is consistent with U.S. obligations under international agreements, with additional inspections authorized based on identified risks.

ENHANCED TRAINING FOR FLIGHT ATTENDANTS AND GATE AGENTS

H-/S562

House bill

LIMITATION ON DISCLOSURE OF SAFETY INFORMATION

H337/S554

House bill

Section 337 amends Chapter 447, by exempting the following reports and data from being subject to discovery or subpoena or admitted into evidence in a Federal or State court: an Aviation Safety Action Program (ASAP) report; data produced from a Flight Operational Quality Assurance (FOQA) Program; a Line Operations Safety Audit (LOSA) Program report; hazard identification, risk assessment risk control; safety data collected for purpose of assessing/improving aviation safety; and reports, analyses and directed studies based in whole or part on reports from the aforementioned programs including those under the Aviation Safety Information Analysis and Sharing (ASIAS) Programs. Any report or data that is voluntarily provided to the FAA shall be considered to be voluntarily submitted information within the meaning and shall not be disclosed to the public. The FAA may release documents to the public that include summaries, aggregations or statistical analyses based on reports or data described in this section, and the NTSB is not prevented from referring to relevant information. This exemption shall not apply to a report developed or data produced on behalf of a person if that person waives the privileges provided. Senate bill

Section 554 would limit the use of FOQA and ASAP and LOSA data in judicial proceedings. FOQA, ASAP or LOSA data would only be allowed in a judicial proceeding if the judge finds that a party shows that the information is relevant, not otherwise known or available, and demonstrates a particularized need for the information that outweighs the intrusion upon the confidentiality of these programs. If this information is used in a judicial proceeding, the court would be required to protect it against further dissemination with a protective order and place the information under seal. This section would also prohibit disclosure of this data through the Freedom of Information Act. This section would not prevent the NTSB from referring to information provided under the FOQA, ASAP or LOSA programs.

Senate bill

Section 733 amends title 18, United States Code, to add a new section 39A to make it a crime to knowingly aim the beam of a laser pointer at an aircraft in the special aircraft jurisdiction of the United States or at the flight path of such aircraft. An individual convicted of this crime is subject to criminal fines or imprisonment up to 5 years. This provision does not apply to: 1) individuals conducting research and development or flight test operations for an aircraft manufacturer or the Federal Aviation Administration; 2) Department of Defense (DOD) or Department of Homeland Security (DHS) personnel conducting research, development, operations, testing or training; or 3) an individual using a laser emergency signaling device to send a distress signal. Section 39A authorizes the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, to provide by regulation, after public notice and comment, additional exceptions to this provision as necessary and appropriate. The Attorney General must give written notice of any such proposed regulations to the House and Senate Committees on the Judiciary as well as other specified committees.

MAINTENANCE PROVIDERS

H314/S522

House bill

Section 314 requires the Administrator to issue regulations within three years to mandate that maintenance work on aircraft be performed only by individuals employed by a part 121 air carrier, a part 145 repair station, or a company that provides contract workers to part 121 carriers or part 145 repair stations if the individual meets part 121/145 requirements, works under the supervision of a part 121/145 carrier/station, and carries out the work in accordance with part 121/145.

Senate bill

Section 522 is a similar provision.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill with modifications, including heading changed to "Maintenance Providers." This section directs the Administrator to require that essential maintenance.  $\label{eq:conditional} \textbf{regularly scheduled maintenance, and work}$ pursuant to required inspection items must be performed by part 121 carriers, part 145 repair stations, or contractors meeting the requirements of part 121 or 145 certificate holders. Covered work performed by a contractor meeting the requirements of par 121 or 145 certificate holders are subject to the following terms and conditions: 1) the part 121 carrier shall be directly in charge of work; 2) the work shall be carried out according to the part 121 carrier's maintenance manual; and 3) the work shall be performed under the part 121 carrier's supervision and control.

121 air carriers are responsible for ensuring that all maintenance, whether performed by the air carrier itself or performed by another entity under contract with the carrier, is conducted in accordance with the air carrier's maintenance program. When maintenance is performed by another entity, the air carrier continues to be responsible for the oversight of these maintenance providers, who are considered to be an extension of the air carrier's maintenance program. This provision will ensure that oversight responsibility for maintenance remain with the 121 air carrier recognizing supervision and oversight of individuals may be with a Part 145 repair station.

Responsibility for oversight by 121 carriers is not meant to change the permitted work of the Part 145 repair stations. In particular, 145 stations can continue to supervise and oversee the activities of individuals that perform contract maintenance when it is necessary to obtain technical expertise.

STUDY OF AIR QUALITY IN CABINS

Senate bill

Section 517 requires the FAA to initiate a study of air quality in aircraft cabins. Additionally, the Administrator would be given the authority to require domestic carriers to allow monitoring of air quality on their aircraft while the study is conducted. The Administrator is required to initiate research and development work on effective air cleaning and sensor technology for the engine and auxiliary power unit for bleed air supplied to the passenger cabin and flight deck of a pressurized aircraft within 180 days of enact-

Conference Substitute

Senate bill modified by removing language requiring the FAA to determine the extent to which the installation of sensors and air filters on commercial aircraft would provide a public health benefit. The conference also agreed that the FAA's authority to monitor air quality may not impose significant costs to air carriers and may not interfere with the carrier's normal use of the aircraft.

IMPROVED PILOT LICENSES

H307/S-

House bill

Section 307 directs the Administrator to issue improved pilot licenses that are tamper-resistant, include a photograph of the individual, and are capable of accommodating a digital photograph, a biometric identifier, or any other unique identifier. It instructs the Administrator to develop methods to determine or reveal if part of license issued has been tampered with.

Senate bill

No provision. Conference Substitute

House bill modified by adding new language: 1) directing the Administrator to provide the relevant House and Senate Committees with a timeline for the issuance of pilot licenses; 2) specifying that the new licenses should incorporate biometric identifiers: and 3) requiring that the licenses must comply with established aviation security checkpoint clearance standards. The conference committee recognizes that the federal government is responsible for the screening of all individuals prior to entry into airport sterile areas and expects that efforts to utilize improved pilot certificates will be carried out by the federal government.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill modified by dropping policy statement principles. The conference committee believes that in initiating development of a policy statement the FAA shall consider the establishment of a coordinating body similar to the Aviation Safety and Health Joint Team established by the August 2000 memorandum of understanding that includes representatives designated by both Administrations to examine the applicability of current and future Occupational Safety and Health Administration regulations; to recommend policies forfacilitating the training of Federal Aviation Administration inspectors; and to make recommendations that will govern the inspection and enforcement of safety and health standards on board aircraft in operation and all work-related environments. Any standards adopted the Federal Aviation Administration shall set forth clearly the circumstances under which an employer is required to take action to address occupational safety and health hazards: the measures required of an employer under the standard; and the compliance obligations of an employer under the standard.

INTEGRATION OF CIVIL UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS INTO NATIONAL AIRSPACE SYSTEM H322/S320, 607(a)(b)(d)(e)(f)

House bill

Section 322 requires the Secretary of Transportation to develop a plan, in consultation with aviation and Unmanned Aircraft Systems (UAS) industry representatives, within nine months of enactment, for the safe integration of civil UASs into the Nation Airspace (NAS). This plan must contain a review of technologies and research to assist in this goal, recommendations for a rulemaking on the definition of acceptable standards, ensure civil UAS have sense and avoid capability, develop standards and requirements for operator and pilots of UASs, and recommendations. The plan must include a realistic time frame for UAS integration into the NAS, but no later than September 30, 2015. The plan must be submitted to Congress within one year of enactment. The FAA is required to initiate a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) for site integration of UAS within 18 months of the date of enactment of the integration plan.

Senate bill

Section 320 requires the FAA to develop a plan within one year to accelerate the integration of UASs into the NAS. This plan must include: 1) a pilot project that includes the integration of UAS into six test sites, representing geographic and climate differences within the United States, by 2012; 2) development of certification, flight standards, and air traffic requirements for UAS: 3) the dedication of funding for research on UAS certification, flight standards, and air traffic control (ATC); 4) coordination of research between NASA and DOD: and 5) verification of the safety of UAS before their integration into the NAS. This section would allow the FAA Administrator to include testing at six test sites as part of the integration plan by 2012. The FAA is directed to work with DOD to certify and develop flight standards for military unmanned aerial systems and to integrate these systems into the NAS as part of the UAS integration plan. The FAA Administrator is required to submit a report describing and assessing the progress made in establishing special use airspace for DOD to develop detection techniques for small UASs.

Section 607 allows the FAA to conduct developmental research on UASs. It would direct the FAA and the National Academy of Sciences to create an assessment of UAS capabilities and would require the National Academy of Sciences to submit a report to Congress on the subject. It requires the FAA to issue a rule to update the most recent policy statement on UASs. The FAA is directed to identify permanent areas in the Arctic where UASs may operate 24 hours a day. The FAA is to take part in cost-share pilot projects designed to accelerate the safe integration of UASs into the NAS.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged. The conference committee directs the Secretary to develop a plan to accelerate the safe integration of unmanned aircraft systems (UAS) into the national airspace system. The Secretary is directed to develop the plan in consultation with the aviation industry, federal agencies using UASs, and the UAS industry as soon as practicable, but no later than September 30, 2015. Concurrent with the integration planning, the Secretary is directed to publish, and update annually, a five-year roadmap describing the activities of the FAA's Unmanned Aircraft Program Office, and its efforts to safely integrate UASs into the national airspace system. The conference committee also directs the Secretary to promulgate rules to allow for integration of small UASs into the national airspace system. The conference committee also directs the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration to establish six test ranges until September 30, 2020. Test range locations are not designated in the legislation. Instead, the Administrator is directed to coordinate with, and leverage resources from, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Department of Defense to select the test ranges based on the criteria set forth in this section. This language is consistent with legislative direction in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2012 (Public Law 112-81). The intent of the committee is for the Administrator to establish a total of six test ranges under both laws, and not six ranges to be established under each law for a total of twelve. The conference committee directs the Secretary to develop a plan for the use of UASs in the arctic, as defined in this subtitle. Finally, the term "non-exclusionary airspace" was removed as the FAA does not recognize that term. The conference committee intends that when the FAA establishes the program to integrate UASs into the national airspace system at six test ranges, the Administrator shall safely designate airspace for integrated manned and unmanned flight operations in the national airspace system.

SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS

H323/S-House bill

Section 323 directs that within 180 days the Secretary of Transportation, prior to completing of the Commercial UAS integration plan, will determine if certain UAS may operate in the NAS. Assessment of the UASs will determine which types of UAS do not create hazard to users of NAS or national security, and whether a certificate of waiver or authorization of airworthiness is required. If the Secretary determines UAS may operate safely in the NAS, the Secretary shall establish requirements of the safe operation of such systems.

Section 324 directs that within 270 days the Secretary of Transportation will issue guidance on the operation of public UASs to expedite the certificate of authorization process, provide a collaborative process for expansion of access to the NAS, and provide guidance on public entities responsible when operating UASs. By December 31, 2015, the Secretary is required to implement operational and certification standards. The Secretary is directed to enter in agreements. within 90 days, with appropriate government agencies to simplify and expedite the process for issuing certificates of waiver or authorization regarding applications seeking authorization to operate public UAS in the NAS.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill with modifications, Language including model aircraft for the purposes of sports, competitions and academic purposes is removed and replaced with "hobby". The modified section includes language requiring that the model aircraft must be operated in a manner that does not interfere with and gives way, to all manned aircraft. In addition, language that requires that model aircraft flown within five miles of an airport will give prior notification to the airport and the air traffic control (ATC), and that model aircraft that are flown consistently within five miles of the ATC will do so under standing agreements with the airports and ATC. Lastly, language is added that will ensure that nothing in this provision will interfere with the Administrator's authority to pursue enforcement action against persons operating model aircraft who endanger the safety of the national airspace system. In this section the term "nationwide community-based organization" is intended to mean a membership based association that represents the aeromodeling community within the United States; provides its members a comprehensive set of safety guidelines that underscores safe aeromodeling operations within the National Airspace System and the protection and safety of the general public on the ground; develops and maintains mutually supportive programming with educational institutions, government entities and other aviation associations; and acts as a liaison with government agencies as an advocate for its members.

UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS TEST RANGE H326/S607(c)

House bill

Section 326 directs the Administrator no later than one year after enactment to establish a program to integrate UASs into the national airspace system at no fewer than four test ranges. The program will include safely designating nonexclusionary airspace for integrated unmanned flight operations, develop certification standards and air traffic requirements, coordinate and leverage the resources of National Air and Space Administration and Department of Defense, address both civil and public UAS, ensure the program is coordinated with NextGen, and provide for verification of safety of UASs. In determining test range locations the Administrator shall consider geographic and climate diversity and consult with NASA and the Air Force.

Senate bill

Section 607(c) is a similar provision, but it allows the Administrator to include testing at three test sites as part of the integration plan by 2012. It directs the FAA to work with DOD to certify and develop flight standards for military UASs and to integrate these systems into the NAS as part of the UAS integration plan. Section 320 establishes a test range program for 10 sites.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged into language that is included in Section 332 "Integration of civil unmanned aircraft into the national airspace system".

SUBTITLE C—SAFETY AND PROTECTIONS AVIATION WHISTLEBLOWER INVESTIGATION OFFICE

H334/S518

House bill

Section 334 establishes an independent Whistleblower investigation office within the FAA. The Director of this office is to be appointed by the Secretary of Transportation for a five year term. The office is in charge of investigating reports of agency or carrier safety violations, and is to make recommendations to the Administrator. It specifies that the Director cannot be prohibited from initiating an assessment of a complaint and that any evidence of criminal violations must be reported to the Administrator and Inspector General of the Department of Transportation (DOT IG).

Senate bill

Section 518 is a similar provision, but it does not require the Secretary to exercise authority under title 5 for the prevention of prohibited personnel actions or require direct reporting by the Director to the Secretary.

Conference Substitute

House bill with modified language to authorize the Director of the office created under this section to receive and investigate disclosures from employees of the Administration as well as employees of persons holding certificates issued under title 14 of the Code of Federal Regulations (C.F.R.), if those certificate holders do not have similar inhouse reporting programs, relating to possible violation of an order, a regulation, or any other provision of federal law relating to aviation safety.

Section 553(a), (b) directs the Administrator to submit an annual report to Congress regarding the recommendations issued by the NTSB consisting of the following: 1) whether the FAA plans to implement the recommendation of the NTSB: 2) if so, what actions the FAA plans to take to implement the recommendation: and 3) if the FAA chooses to not implement a NTSB recommendation, its reasoning for not doing so. This section would require the FAA to submit within 180 days to Congress the above information on all current NTSB recommendations not implemented so far.

Section 553(c) requires the FAA to implement NTSB recommendations relating to the proper installation of emergency locator transmitters (ELTs) on general aviation aircraft.

ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE MARKETING

H401/S417

House bill

Section 401 specifies that when deciding where to award an Essential Air Service (EAS) contract, the Secretary of Transportation must consider, whether the air carrier has included a plan in its proposal to market its services to the community.

The Secretary shall establish procedures by which each community that is notified of an impending loss of subsidy may work directly with an air carrier to ensure that the air carrier is able to submit a proposal to the Secretary that does not require a subsidy in excess of the per passenger subsidy cap.

RESTORATION OF ELIGIBILITY

H406/S418

House bill

Section 406 authorizes state and local governments to submit a proposal to restore essential air service to a location after that location's per passenger subsidy has been determined to be over the allowable dollar amount. To qualify for restoration of service, the Secretary must determine that the rate of subsidy per passenger under the proposal does not exceed the allowable amount and the proposal is consistent with the legal and regulatory requirements of the essential air service program.

Senate bill

Section 418 is a similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills modified to include proposals to restore essential air service to locations that have been determined to have fewer than 10 enplanements per day. To qualify for restoration of service, the Secretary must determine that the rate of subsidy per passenger under the proposal does not exceed the allowable amount, the proposal is likely to result in an average of at least 10 enplanements per day, and the proposal is consistent with the legal and regulatory requirements of the essential air service program.

ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE CONTRACT GUIDELINES H403/S413

House bill

Section 403 authorizes DOT to provide incentive payments to communities for achieving performance goals, and to execute longterm EAS contracts. Requires DOT to issue revised guidelines incorporating changes within 18 months after the date of enactment. Requires DOT to report to Congress on the extent to which the revised guidelines have been implemented, and the impact such implementation has had, every two years after the guidelines are established.

Senate bill

Section 413 is a similar provision, but it does not contain language on issuing guidance or the report.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified to extend the deadline for issuance of revised guidelines to one year after date of enactment.

ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE REFORM

H404/S415

House bill

Section 404 authorizes $97.5 million for Essential Air Service (EAS) in FY 2011, $60 million in FY 2012, and $30 million in FY 2013. These amounts are in addition to the $50 million per year the EAS program is authorized to receive under current law from overflight fees collected by the FAA. Beginning in FY 2014, section 404 limits the amount EAS would receive from overflight fees to the amount needed to provide EAS to eligible communities in Alaska and Hawaii. In addition, it directs the Secretary of Transportation to take such actions as may be necessary to administer the EAS program within the amount of funding made available for the program.

Senate hill

Section 415 authorizes $150 million per year for EAS, plus $50 million from overflight fees. It requires any overflight fees in excess of $50 million to be obligated for various EAS programs, including the code sharing pilot program under section 406 of Vision 100 and the alternate air service pilot program under 8 41745

Conference Substitute

Authorizes $143 million for EAS in FY 2012, $118 million in FY 2013, $107 million in FY 2014, and $93 million in FY 2015. In addition, authorizes all overflight fees collected by the FAA to be made available, until expended, to carry out the essential air service program.

SMALL COMMUNITY AIR SERVICE

House bill

Section 405 adds an additional factor that the Secretary of Transportation must consider in selecting communities for participation in the Small Community Air Service Development (SCASD) program. In addition to the existing criteria for participation in the program, the Secretary is required to give priority to multiple communities that cooperate to submit a regional or multistate application to improve air service. It eliminates the general fund authorization of appropriations for the SCASD program. funding it instead through overflight fee collections.

Senate bill

Section 413 extends the authorization for the SCASD program at its authorized funding level of $35 million per year through FY

Conference Substitute

Requires the Secretary to give priority to multiple communities that cooperate to submit a regional or multistate application to consolidate air service into one regional airport. Authorizes the appropriation of $6 million for the Small Community Air Service Development program for each of fiscal years 2012 through 2015.

> ADJUSTMENTS TO COMPENSATION FOR SIGNIFICANTLY INCREASED COSTS

H406/S418(g)

House bill

Section 406 permits the Secretary of Transportation to increase the rates of compensation payable to air carriers under the EAS program to compensate carriers for increased aviation fuel costs, without regard to any agreement, without requiring the negotiation of existing contracts, and without any notice requirement. It removes the 90 day period in which the Secretary may continue to pay the amount previous contracted for as EAS carrier who has given notice, but has been required to continuing operating. SUNSET OF ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE PROGRAM H408/S420.421

House bill

Section 408 sunsets the EAS program evervwhere except Alaska and Hawaii as of October 1, 2013.

Section 420 imposes limits EAS to locations that average ten or more enplanements per day, with an exception for Alaska. It authorizes the Administrator to waive this limitation with respect to a location if the Administrator determines that the reason the averages fewer location enplanements per day is not because of inherent issues with the location.

Section 421 limits EAS to locations that are 90 or more miles away from the nearest medium or large hub airport. It authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to waive this limitation as a result of geographic characteristics resulting in undue difficulty accessing the nearest medium or large hub airport.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill, except the requirement that locations be at least 90-miles away from the nearest large or medium hub airport is deleted; the requirement that locations have at least 10 enplanements per day only applies to locations that are within 175 miles of a large or medium hub airport; and an exception is added for locations in the State of Hawaii and Alaska. In addition, instead of sunsetting the program as proposed in the House bill, the conference substitute freezes the program at the communities currently participating. Specifically, except in Alaska and Hawaii, the conference agreement limits eligibility for EAS to those communities that, at any time from September 30, 2010, to September 30, 2011, either received subsidized EAS or were notified by the last carrier providing unsubsidized service to the community of the carrier's intent to terminate such service.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

H424/S713

Section 424 requires air carriers to permit passengers to carry a small musical instrument, such as a violin, guitar, onto the aircraft cabin if it if can be stowed safely in a suitable baggage compartment in the aircraft cabin or baggage or cargo storage compartment if the instrument can be stowed properly and there is space for such instruments. Air carriers are to permit passengers to bring a large instrument into the passenger compartment if the instrument can be stowed properly in a seat and the passenger has purchased a seat for the instrument. Air carriers must transport as checked baggage musical instruments that may not be carried on provided they meet certain weight and size limitations (i.e., if the sum of length, width, and height does not exceed 150 inches, weigh over 165 pounds, or exceed size and weight restrictions for that aircraft) and can be properly stowed. It directs, no later than two years after the date of enactment, the Secretary of Transportation to issue final regulations to carry out this section.

Senate bill

Section 713 is a similar provision, but it does not specify that passengers carrying musical instruments would be charged fees for that luggage. There is no deadline for the rulemaking to be completed by, but it includes a mandate to require carrier participation.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified to specify that passengers carrying musical instruments are subject to the same baggage fees assessed to all other types of carry-on baggage if a seat is not purchased for that instrument.

EXTENSION OF COMPETITIVE ACCESS REPORTS

Senate bill

Section 705 makes the requirement for air carriers to file competitive access reports permanent by eliminating the current sunset provision. The report must explain reason for the lack of accommodation and time frame for accommodation.

AIRFARES FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED SERVICES

H426/S433

House bill

Section 426 expresses the Sense of Congress that each domestic air carrier should seek to provide active duty members of the Armed Services who are traveling on leave or liberty at their own expense with: reduced air fares that are comparable to the lowest airfare for ticketed flights, and that eliminate to the maximum extent possible advanced purchase requirements; no baggage and excess weight fees, or reduced fees; flexible terms that allow members to purchase, modify, or cancel tickets without time restrictions, and to waive fees (including baggage fees), ancillary costs, or penalties; and proactive measures to ensure that all airline employees are trained in the policies pertaining to members of the Armed Forces who are on leave.

DISCLOSURE OF SEAT DIMENSIONS TO FACILITATE THE USE OF CHILD SAFETY SEATS ON AIRCRAFT

H--/S408

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

Section 408 directs the Administrator to prescribe regulations, within six months of enactment, to facilitate the use of child safety seats on aircraft. The regulations must require part 121 air carriers to post on their websites the maximum dimensions of a child safety seat that can be used on each aircraft operated by the air carrier to enable passengers to determine which child safety seats can be used on those aircraft.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill with modified language changing the deadline for the regulations from six months to twelve months. The conference committee also believes that passengers should be made fully aware of the location of final assembly of the aircraft on which they fly. Therefore, the committee believes the Secretary should require air carriers to position the "location of final assembly" notification immediately below the aircraft model number on the front page of the information placard.

SCHEDULE REDUCTION

H430/S-

House bill

Section 430 directs the FAA to convene a conference of air carriers to voluntarily reduce aircraft operations if the FAA determines that operations of those carriers are exceeding the hourly maximum departure and arrival rates, and the excess operations are likely to have a significant adverse effect on the NAS. It authorizes FAA to take action as necessary if there is no voluntary agreement to reduce schedules.

Senate hill

No similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified by adding new section specifying that the Administrator shall give priority to United States-flagged air carriers in permitting additional operations subsequent to any voluntary or non-voluntary reduction in operations.

FLIGHT OPERATIONS AT RONALD REAGAN WASHINGTON NATIONAL AIRPORT

H423/S737

House bill

Section 423 directs the Secretary of Transportation to grant an additional ten beyondperimeter exemptions (from 24 under current law to 34) at Washington Reagan National Airport (DCA). It increases the number of operations by which exemptions may increase operations during any one-hour period between 7:00 AM and 9:59 PM, from three to five. The Administrator is required to reduce the hourly air carrier slot quota at DCA by ten slots in order to grant the additional exemptions provided. These reductions are required to be taken in the 6:00 AM, 10:00 PM or 11:00 PM hours. Scheduling priority is to be given to new entrant air carriers and limited incumbent air carriers over operations conducted by air carrier grant exemptions. The highest scheduling priority is given to beyond-perimeter operations conducted by new entrant air carrier and limited incumbent air carriers.

Senate bill

Section 737 creates additional beyond perimeter commercial flights at DCA with 24 beyond-perimeter round trip flights (10 to limited incumbents or new entrants and 14 to incumbents) would be permitted, and an additional eight could be added later if the Secretary of Transportation determines that the first 24 did not negatively impact the airport. It specifies that if an incumbent carrier that uses a slot for service to a large hub airport within the perimeter receives one or more the 24 additional beyond-perimeter round trip flights authorized by this provision, it must discontinue the use of that slot for within-perimeter service and, in place of that service, operate beyond-perimeter service. It prohibits the Secretary from granting any more than two slot exemptions to an air carrier with respect to the same airport, except in the case of an airport serving an area with a population of more than 1 million. Any carrier receiving an exemption for bevond-perimeter service is prohibited from using multi-aisle or wide body aircraft, and from selling, trading, leasing, or otherwise transferring the rights to its beyond-perimeter exemptions, except through a merger or acquisition, and must use the slot within 60 days of receiving the exemption. If an incumbent carrier that uses a slot for service to a large hub airport within the perimeter receives one or more of the eight additional exemptions authorized by this provision, it must discontinue the use of that slot for within-perimeter service and, in place of that service, operate beyond-perimeter service. It authorizes Metropolitan Washington Aviation Authority (MWAA) to use revenues derived at either DCA or Washington Dulles International Airport (IAD) for operating and capital expenses (including debt service, depreciation and amortization) at the other airport.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged to direct the Secretary of Transportation to grant 16 exemptions for additional beyond perimeter commercial flights at Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport (DCA). Of the 16 exemptions created, the Secretary shall make eight available to limited incumbent air carriers and new entrant air carriers. When allocating such exemptions, the Secretary shall consider the extent to which the exemptions will provide air transportation with domestic network benefits in areas beyond the perimeter; increase competition in multiple markets; not reduce travel options for communities served by small hub airports and medium hub airports within the perimeter; not result in meaningfully increased travel delays; enhance options for nonstop travel to and from the beyond-perimeter airports that will be served as a result of those exemptions; have a positive impact on the overall level of competition in the markets that will be served as a result of those exemptions; or produce public benefits. including the likelihood that the service to airports located beyond the perimeter will result in lower fares, higher capacity, and a variety of service options.

The Secretary shall also make available eight slot exemptions for other incumbent air carriers qualifying for status as a nonlimited incumbent carrier at DCA. Each such non-limited incumbent air carrier may operate up to a maximum of two of the newly authorized slot exemptions. Each such non-limited incumbent air carrier, prior to exercising an exemption made available shall discontinue the use of a slot for service between DCA and a large hub airport within the perimeter, and operate, in place of such service, service between DCA and an airport located beyond the perimeter. Each such non-limited incumbent air carrier shall be entitled to return of the slot by the Secretary if use of the exemption made available is discontinued; shall have sole discretion concerning the use of an exemption including the initial or any subsequent beyond perimeter destinations to be served; and shall file a notice of intent with the Secretary and subsequent notices of intent, when appropriate, to inform the Secretary of any change in circumstances concerning the use of any exemption. Such notices of intent shall specify the beyond perimeter destination to be served and the slots the carrier shall discontinue using to serve a large hub airport located within the perimeter. Each such non-limited incumbent air carrier operating an exemption may not operate a multiaisle or widebody aircraft in conducting such operations and shall be prohibited from transferring the rights to its beyond-perimeter exemptions.

The Secretary shall afford a scheduling priority to operations conducted by new entrant air carriers and limited incumbent air carriers over operations conducted by other air carriers granted additional slot exemptions; a scheduling priority to slot exemptions currently held by new entrant air carriers and limited incumbent air carriers for service to airports located beyond the perimeter to the extent necessary to protect viability of such service; and consider applications from foreign air carriers that are certificated by the government of Canada if such consideration is required by the bilateral aviation agreement between the U.S. and Canada.

The exemptions granted by the Secretary may not be for operations between the hours of 10:00 p.m. and 7:00 a.m.; and may not increase the number of operations at DCA in any 1-hour period during the hours between 7:00 a.m. and 9:59 p.m. by more than five operations. A non-limited incumbent air carrier utilizing an exemption for an arrival after 10:01 p.m. must discontinue use of an existing slot during the same time period the arrival exemption is operated.

In determining a limited incumbent, the Secretary shall consider any air carrier operating 40 or fewer slots at DCA. The term 'slot' shall not include slot exemptions; slots operated by an air carrier under a fee-forservice arrangement for another air carrier, if the air carrier operating such slots does not sell flights in its own name, and is under common ownership with an air carrier that seeks to qualify as a limited incumbent and that sells flights in its own name; or slots held under a sale and license-back financing arrangement with another air carrier, where the slots are under the marketing control of the other air carrier. The Secretary shall prohibit the transfer of exemptions except through an air carrier merger or acquisition. The definition of airport purposes at the Metropolitan Washington Aviation Authority (MWAA) shall include a business or activity not inconsistent with the needs of aviation that has been approved by the Secretary.

 $\begin{array}{l} {\tt PASSENGER~AIR~SERVICE~IMPROVEMENTS} \\ {\tt H425/S401} \end{array}$

House bill

Section 425 requires that within 90 days of enactment, air carriers and each operator of a medium- or large-hub airport, file emergency contingency plans with the Secretary of Transportation for review and approval. Air carriers are required to update their plans every three years and airports must update every five years. The Secretary is also directed to establish a toll-free consumer complaints hotline telephone number for use of passengers. The Secretary is instructed to take action to notify the public of the DOT's consumer complaints hotline telephone number and related website. Air carriers providing scheduled air service are required to include on their website consumer complaints hotline information for DOT and the air carrier as well as a hotline telephone number on carrier signs displayed at airport ticket counters, and on any electronic confirmation of the purchase of a passenger ticket. It directs the Secretary to establish a website that contains a listing of the countries that may require a U.S. or foreign air carrier to treat an aircraft passenger cabin with insecticides prior to a flight to that country, or to apply an aerosol insecticide in an aircraft cabin used for such a flight when the cabin is occupied with passengers. Air carriers are required to update their emergency contingency plans every three years, and airport operators every five years.

Senate bill

Section 401 requires air carriers and airport operators to develop contingency plans to address situations in which the departure of a flight is substantially delayed while passengers are confined to an aircraft. Each plan would have to be submitted to the DOT for review and approval by the Secretary of Transportation, and would be required to address minimum standards established by the Department. At a minimum, the plans for air carriers must outline how the airline will guarantee that the passengers are provided: a) adequate food, potable water, and restroom facilities: b) cabin ventilation and comfortable cabin temperatures, and; c) access to necessary medical treatment. It specifies that airlines must allow passengers to deplane if three hours have elapsed since the doors have closed and the aircraft has not departed, or the aircraft has been landed for three hours but passengers have been unable to deplane. Exceptions to the deplane requirements would exist only when a pilot reasonably believes that the aircraft will depart within 30 minutes, or if the pilot believes that deplaning the passengers would jeopardize passenger security or safety. Airport operators would also be required to submit a plan to the DOT for approval that provides for the deplanement of passengers following extended tarmac delays. The Secretary would also be required to perform periodic reviews of the air carrier and airport operator plans, and would be authorized to impose civil penalties on air carriers or airport operators that fail to meet the requirements of such plans. It directs the DOT to create a consumer complaint hotline telephone number.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged and modified. The modified section includes House language requiring emergency contingency plans by air carriers and modified to include large, medium, small, and non-hub airports. Included in the section is modified language that would give passengers the option to deplane and return to airport terminal when there is an excessive tarmac delay, except if there is a safety, security or disruption of airport operations causes that would result from deplanement. The Secretary of Transportation is to determine the length of a tarmac delay that would be deemed "excessive". Lastly, the section includes House language on consumer complaints and use of pesticides in a passenger aircraft.

TITLE V—ENVIRONMENTAL STREAMLINING AND STEWARDSHIP

OVERFLIGHTS OF NATIONAL PARKS

H501/S709

House bill

Section 501 exempts operators in parks with 50 or fewer annual air tour flights from the statutory permitting requirement, with a provision for the National Park Service (NPS) director to withdraw an exemption on a park-specific basis if necessary to protect park resources or visitor experiences. It allows NPS and FAA to enter into a voluntary agreement with a commercial air tour operator as an alternative to creation of an air tour management plan. FAA and NPS must solicit public comments and must consult with occupants of affected tribal lands before entering into a voluntary agreement. It provides that a voluntary agreement may require payment of overflight fees. The FAA and NPS are permitted to terminate a voluntary agreement if: 1) NPS finds the agreement no longer protects park resources; or 2) FAA determines operations under the agreement adversely affect safety or the national aviation system. It permits modifications to interim operating authority, and allows a grant of interim authority to a new entrant operator, if: 1) the operator provides adequate information to NPS and FAA; 2) FAA determines modification would not adversely affect safety or the national aviation system; and 3) NPS determines modification would not adversely affect park resources. Commercial air tour operators must report the number of commercial air tours over parks.

Senate bill

Section 709 allows air tour overflights over a national park when a voluntary agreement has been reached between the operator and the appropriate representative of the national park. This section provides a waiver from the general rule prohibiting tour operations over national parks for national parks that have 100 or fewer air tour overflights each year. The Secretary of the Interior is instructed to assess a fee on commercial air tour operators operating over a national park to be used to fund the development of air tour management plans. It prescribes penalties for operators that do not pay this fee. This section provides the Director of NPS with flexibility in determining how to manage air tours at Crater Lake National Park.

House bill modified to include language on flexibility for Crater Lake National Park.

STATE BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM

H502/S209

House bill

Section 502 requires the issuance of guidance for carrying out the AIP State Block Grant Program (SBGP) rather than regulations. It adds to required standards a State must agree to meet in order to be eligible for a grant under the program with: National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969 standards, state and local environmental policy acts, executive orders, agency regulations and guidance, and other federal environmental requirements. Furthermore, it adds a provision that requires any federal agency, except the FAA, that is responsible for issuing an approval, license or permit to ensure compliance with a federal environmental requirement applicable to a project to be carried out by a State using funds from a block grant must: 1) coordinate and consult with the State; 2) use the environmental analysis prepared by the State for the project; and 3) supplement such analysis as necessary.

Senate bill

Section 209 codifies current practice that State participants in the State Block Grant Program have responsibility and authority to comply with applicable environmental requirements for projects at non-commercial service airports within the purview of the SBGP. The FAA administers the SBGP by authorizing participating states once a year to receive a block of funds for any eligible non-primary airport project. This section would make a minor change to 49 U.S.C. section 47128(a) by replacing the term "regulations" with "guidance" because the FAA has issued guidance in the form of the AIP Handbook, 5100.38, to implement its airport improvement program. It establishes a pilot program for up to three States that are currently not in the program to participate in the program.

TITLE VI-EMPLOYEES AND ORGANIZATION

FAA PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

H601/S313

House bill

Section 601 reforms the process by which the FAA resolves labor disputes with employee unions arising in the collective bargaining process. It requires the FAA and employee representatives to use the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS). If they are unable to come to an agreement on labor issues, or, by mutual agreement, they may adopt alternate procedures to resolve disputes. If the mediation is unsuccessful, the parties must submit their issues to the Federal Service Impasses Panel (FSIP) that will assist the parties in resolving the dispute by asserting jurisdiction and ordering binding arbitration by a private arbitration board of three members. The board will result from Executive Director of the FSIP will request a list of 15 names from the Director of the FMCS, the parties will select one arbitrator each from the list, and the two arbitrators selected with then choose the third. The arbitration board must render a decision within 90 days after the date of its appointment, and take into account the following factors: 1) the effect of its decision on the FAA's ability to attract and retain a qualified workforce; 2) the effect of its decision on the FAA budget; 3) the effect of its decision on other FAA employees; and 4) any other factors that would assist the board in reaching a fair resolution. Upon reaching a voluntary agreement or at the conclusion of the binding arbitration, the final agreement will be subject to ratification by the exclusive bargaining representative of the employees, if so requested by the bargaining representative. The final agreement must also be approved by the head of the agency.

FAA TECHNICAL TRAINING AND STAFFING H603/S708(a),(b)

House bill

Section 603 requires the Administrator to conduct a study on the adequacy of FAA's technical training strategy and improvement plan for FAA transportation systems specialists. The plan must include: recommendations to improve technical training strategy and improvement planning; a description of actions having been undertaken; and recommendations regarding cost-effective approaches to training. The FAA is to report to Congress within one year of enactment. It directs the Administrator to contract with the National Academy of Sciences within 90 days of enactment to conduct a study on the assumptions and methods FAA uses to estimate staffing needs for FAA transportation systems specialists and to ensure propermaintenance and certification in the most cost-effective manner. The Academy must submit its report to Congress one year after contracted.

Senate bill

Section 708(a) and (b) similar provisions but it requires the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) to study FAA Air-Transportation Systems Specialists training and report to Congress within a year of enactment. It includes air traffic controllers and engineers as part of the study; and, the Academy must report to Congress on its study 24 months after the date of execution of the contract for the study.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified removing language requiring the study to be done in the most cost effective manner. The modified provision directs the National Academy of Sciences, when conducting the study on the assumptions and methods used by FAA to estimate staffing needs for FAA systems specialists, to consult with the exclusive bargaining representative of systems specialists. Additionally, language was added requiring the National Academy of Sciences to "include recommendations for objective staffing standards that maintain the safety of the national airspace.'

SAFETY CRITICAL STAFFING

H604/S708(c),(d)

House bill

Section 604 requires the Administrator to implement, to the extent practicable and in the most cost-effective manner, the staffing model for aviation safety inspectors by October 1, 2011, following the recommendations outlined in the "Staffing Standards for Aviation Inspectors" report issued by the National Academy of Sciences in 2007. The FAA is required to consult with interested parties, including aviation safety inspectors, and submit the staffing model to Congress on an annual basis.

Senate bill

Section 708(c) and (d) directs the FAA to increase inspector staffing to levels in its staffing model. The Administrator is required to develop a staffing model for aviation safety inspectors, but differs from the House in that it allows 12 months from the date of enactment, development of a staffing model, but does not require the Administrator to follow the Academy's recommendations, and requires inspector staffing levels to be at least at the levels indicated in the staffing model. It specifies that no later than 180 days after enactment, the Administrator shall submit a report to Congress on the future of flight service stations in Alaska. The report will include: 1) an analysis of the number of flight service specials needed; 2) training needed and need for formal training and hiring program; 3) a schedule for necessary inspections, 4) upgrades and modernization of stations and equipment; and 5) a description of interaction between flight service stations operated by FAA and those operated by contractors.

The study must include examination of representative information on productivity, human factors, traffic activity, and improved technology on ATC, as well as an examination of recent Academy reviews of models from MITRE, and consideration of Administration's current and estimated budgets. The Academy is required to consult employee groups and industry representative in conducting the study. The Academy must transmit the study to Congress within two years of enactment.

Its findings must be submitted to the FAA and Congress. Based on the results of the GAO study, the GAO is directed to make recommendations on which facilities are in need of immediate attention, and assist the Administration in making programmatic changes so that aging facilities do not deteriorate to unsafe levels. The GAO is required to submit its report to Congress within one year of enactment.

Senate bill

Section 323 directs the FAA to create a task force on air traffic control (ATC) facility conditions. This task force must be composed of 11 members (7 appointed by the Administrator and four appointed by employees' unions). Four members are required to have expertise in hazardous building conditions and two members must have expertise in rehabilitation of aging buildings. This task force will have the power to obtain official data. The task force's duties would include studying: 1) the conditions of all ATC facilities; 2) reports from employees; 3) whether employees who reported illness were treated fairly; 4) utilization of remediation techniques; and 5) resources allocated to facility maintenance and renovation. Also, the task force would be required to make recommendations necessary to ensure that: 1) facilities needing the most immediate attention are prioritized; 2) the Administration is using scientifically approved remediation techniques; and 3) ATC facilities do not deteriorate to unsafe levels. The task force also must submit a report to Congress and the Administrator regarding its recommendations and activities within 60 days. Current law (section 44303(b)) allows the Secretary of Transportation to limit an airline's third-party liability to $100 million and also prohibits punitive damages against either an airline or the Government for any cause resulting from a terrorist event. A principal objective of the limitation was to encourage commercial insurance companies to provide a reasonably priced amount of third party war risk insurance by defining the maximum third party liability exposure of the airline for a single event. It requires the Administrator to make recommendations for the realignment and consolidation of FAA services based on the final criteria and a justification for each recommendation. This information will be published and transmitted to Congress within 120 days of enactment. The Administrator is directed to submit the recommendations to a new Aviation Facilities and Services Board (not subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act), consisting of: the Secretary of Transportation (DOT) or designee: two private sector members appointed by the DOT Secretary; and a U.S. Government Accountability Organization (GAO) representative (to be a non-voting member). Members would serve for three year terms. The Board will hold public hearings and develop a final report (with GAO input if requested by the Board) containing the Board's findings and conclusions based on public comments. The Board must publish the report and transmit a copy to Congress. The Administrator is prohibited from carrying out a Board recommendation if Congress passes a joint resolution of disapproval within 30 days of issuance of the Board's report. It authorizes the Administrator to make additional recommendations every two years. It specifies that Members of the Board will not receive compensation except for work injuries or travel expenses. The Administrator shall make available to the Board such staff, information and administrative services as may be required enabling the Board to carry out its responsibilities. In order for the Board to carry out its duties, the Administrator is authorized to appropriate for each of FYs 2011 through 2014, $200,000 to carry out this section. Senate bill

Section 308 creates a specific process for the FAA to complete a comprehensive study and analysis of the how the agency might realign its services and facilities to help reduce capital, operating, maintenance, and administrative costs on an agency-wide basis with no adverse effect on safety. The FAA would be required to develop criteria for realignment within nine months of passage and make any recommendations for action within nine months of the publication of the criteria. The Air Traffic Control Modernization Oversight Board would then be required to study the FAA's recommendations, provide opportunity for public comment, and report the Board's recommendations to Congress. The Administrator would be prohibited from consolidating additional approach control facilities into the Southern California TRACON, the Northern California TRACON, the Miami TRACON, or the Mem-TRACON until the Board's ommendations are completed.

House and Senate bills merged and modified. The language now requires the Administrator to develop, in conjunction with the Chief NextGen Officer and Chief Operating Officer of the Air Transportation Organization, a National Facilities Realignment and Consolidation Report within 120 days of enactment and allow 45 days for the submission of public comments on that report. The report shall be developed with the participation of: 1) representatives of labor organizations representing operations and maintenance employees of the air traffic control system; and 2) industry stakeholders. The purpose of this report is to support the transition to NextGen and to reduce capitol, opmaintenance, and administrative costs of the FAA without adversely affective The report shall include ommendations with justification and project costs and savings. It instructs the Administrator to submit a report to Congress within 60 days after the last day of the public comment period on the Administrator's recommendations on realignment and consolidation of services and facilities of the FAA and it directs the Administrator to follow this report during the realignment process. It maintains the House language on Congressional Disapproval which prohibits the Administrator for carrying out recommendation in the report should a joint resolution of disapproval be enacted within 30 days of submission of the report to Congress.

LIMITING ACCESS TO FLIGHT DECKS OF ALL-CARGO AIRCRAFT

H805/S-

House bill

Section 805 requires the FAA, within 180 days of enactment, to assess the feasibility of developing a physical means, or a combination of physical and procedural means, to prohibit individuals, other than authorized flight crewmembers, from accessing the flight decks of all-cargo aircraft. It requires a report within one year of enactment.

WIND TURBINE LIGHTING

H809/S611 House bill

Section 809 directs the Administrator to conduct a study, make recommendations, and report to Congress on wind turbine lighting systems within one year of the date of enactment. The study and recommendations must include the effect of wind turbine lighting on residential areas, the safety associated with alternative lighting strategies, the potential energy savings, and the feasibility of implementing alternative lighting strategies.

Senate bill

Section 611 requires the Administrator to survey and assess the leases for critical FAA facility sites and determine how close these facilities are to wind farms or areas suitable for the construction of wind farms. Following the assessment, the FAA would be required to report to Congress and the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) on its findings and recommendations. It would require the GAO to assess the potential impact wind farms have on the FAA's navigational aids and would require an assessment on methods and restrictions to mitigate the effects of wind farms on navigational aids. Upon receiving the GAO report, the FAA would be directed to issue guidelines for the construction of wind farms near critical FAA facilities.

House bill

Section 823 directs the Administrator to take actions, as seen necessary, to preserve original aircraft type certificate engineering and technical data in possession of the FAA. No later than one year after date of enactment, the Administrator shall revise an executive order to prohibit destruction of historical aircraft documents. The Administrator shall consult with Archivist of the U.S. and Administrator of General Services on the best methods to preserve these documents. The Administrator shall make these documents available under Freedom of Information Act. This provision does not affect the rights of the holder or owner of a type certificate identified above, or require holders or owners to provide, surrender or preserve any original or duplicate engineering data to FAA. Notwithstanding any other provision of the law, the holder of a type certificate identified in this section shall not be responsible for any continued airworthiness or FAA regulatory requirements.

AIR TRANSPORTATION OF LITHIUM CELLS AND BATTERIES

H814/S-

House bill

Section 814 requires the Administrator to not issue or enforce any regulation regarding the transportation by aircraft of lithium metal cells or batteries or lithium ion cells or batteries, if the requirement is more stringent than the requirements of International Civil Aviation Organization.

Senate bill

No similar provision.

Conference Substitute

House bill modified to require that, in almost all circumstances, regulations governing the air transportation of lithium metal or lithium ion cells or batteries be consistent with the provisions of the International Civil Aviation Organization Technical Instructions for the Safe Transportation of Dangerous Goods by Air (commonly known as the ICAO Technical Instructions), as in effect at the time the regulations were adopted. The only exceptions to this directive would be (a) to allow the retention of an existing U.S. prohibition on transportation of lithium metal batteries and cells on passenger aircraft, even if it is not embodied in the ICAO Technical Instructions, and (b) to allow adoption and enforcement of a targeted rule more stringent than the ICAO Technical Instructions in the event that an authoritative national or international governmental body provides a formal report finding that the presence of lithium metal or lithium ion batteries on an aircraft in compliance with the ICAO Technical Instructions was a substantial contributing factor to the initiation or promulgation of an onboard fire.

Where the conditions set forth in this section are met, the Secretary may issue a targeted emergency regulation that addresses solely the deficiencies identified in the report that triggered the regulation. That regulation may remain in effect for up to one year and is not subject to renewal. Either alternatively or consecutively, the Secretary may undertake a rulemaking in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act to adopt a permanent regulation. That permanent regulation must be based on substantial credible evidence that the cells or batteries of the type at issue could be expected to substantially contribute or propagate an onboard fire even if they were shipped in accordance with applicable ICAO Technical Regulations; be narrowly tailored to avoid disruption of the shipping of other cells, batteries or products; and employ the least expensive approach while addressing the identified safety concern.

LIABILITY PROTECTION FOR VOLUNTEER PILOT NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS THAT FLY FOR PUBLIC BENEFIT AND TO PILOTS AND STAFF OF SUCH NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION

H816/S1211-1213

House bill

Section 816 amends the Volunteer Protection Act of 1997 (VPA) to include volunteer pilots and volunteer pilot organizations within the scope of its protections. Under present law, nonprofit volunteer pilot organizations and their pilots that provide lifesaving medical flights without compensation are vulnerable to costly and often frivolous litigation that undermines the ability of these organizations to provide critical volunteer flight services in a timely manner. In addition, institutions that refer patients to volunteer pilot organizations are presently subject to legal jeopardy. Section 816 protects and promotes the important work of volunteer pilot organizations by creating limited protection against liability to volunteer pilot organizations and pilots so that they are able to procure necessary insurance and continue their important operations.

Senate hill

Sections 1221-1213 of the Senate bill contain a similar, but more limited, volunteer pilot provision. The Senate provision only includes volunteer pilots within the scope of its protections. Although the Senate provision does not provide protections to volunteer pilot organizations, it does protect and promote the important work of volunteer pilots.

Section 735 requires the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) Administrator to consider approving applications to participate in the Screening Partnership Program (SPP), which uses private screeners instead of TSA employees, for all airports with pending applications. This section requires the TSA Administrator to reconsider rejected applications for the SPP for a limited number of airports. If the TSA Administrator decides again to deny an application, they must report to Congress on the reason for the denial.

Conference Substitute

Senate bill modified to require the TSA Administrator to approve or deny, within 120 days, an application received by an airport to participate in the SPP. The Administrator is required to approve the application unless a determination is made that such approval would compromise security or have a detrimental effect on the on the cost-efficiency or effectiveness of security screening at that airport. The Administrator must provide a more in-depth explanation in a report to Congress if an SPP application is denied. This explanation must include: (1) the findings that served as a basis for the denial; (2) results of any cost or security analysis conducted in the reconsideration; and (3) recommendations on how the airport operator can address the reasons for the denial. This report has to be issued with 60 days of the denial. Airport Operators who apply for the SPP must also provide TSA a recommendation as to which company would best serve the airport along with an explanation for that choice. The modified provision also requires the reconsideration of SPP applications pending between January 1, 2011, and February 3, 2011, and outlines specific timelines to be followed in issuing decisions regarding SPP reapplications. The provision includes modifications to existing requirements which provide the Administrator with more flexibility in determining what companies can bid for SPP contracts.

The conference committee believes that in determining the cost efficiency and effectiveness of an applicant's screening services, the TSA Administrator shall compare the annual costs to the Federal government and related effectiveness measures associated with screening services at commercial airports using private-sector screeners with comparable costs associated with screening services by Federal screeners, applying the relevant cost and performance metrics equally to the private and Federal screening programs.

The conference committee agreed to amend title I of the Railway Labor Act by inserting after section 10 that the Mediation Board has authority from time to time to make, amend, and rescind, in the manner prescribed by section 553 of title 5, United States Code and after opportunity for a public hearing, such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

Runoff Elections

The conference committee agreed to amend Paragraph Nine of section 2 of the Railway Labor Act to require that in any runoff election for which there are 3 or more options (including the option of not being represented by any labor organization) on the ballot and no such option receives a majority of the valid votes cast, the Mediation Board shall arrange for a second election between the options receiving the largest and the second largest number of votes.

Showing of Interest

The conference committee agreed to amend section 2 of the Railway Labor Act by raising the showing of interest threshold for elections to not less than fifty percent of the employees in the craft or class.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

($ IN MILLIONS)

H1003(a)/S103

House bill

Section 1003(a) authorizes the Federal Aviation Administration's Research, Engineering and Development (R,E&D) account at $165.2 million in FY 2011, and $146.83 million in FY 2012, FY 2013, and FY 2014.

Senate bill

Section 103 authorizes the Federal Aviation Administration's Research, Engineering and Development account at $200 million in FY 2010 and $206 million in FY 2011.

 $Conference\ Substitute$

House and Senate bills merged to provide $168 million for Federal Aviation Administration's Research, Engineering and Development account in FYs 2012 through FY 2015.

UNMANNED AIRCRAFT SYSTEMS

H1004/S607(a)

House bill

Section 1004 requires the Administrator in conjunction with other appropriate federal agencies to develop technologies and methods to assess the risk and prevent defects, failures, and malfunctions of products, parts and processes for use in all classes of Unmanned Aircraft Systems (UAS) that could result in catastrophic failure of UAS or endanger other aircraft in the NAS. The Administrator is required to supervise research which will develop better understanding of the relationship between human factors and UAS safety and develop simulation models for integration of all UASs into the NAS without degrading safety for current users.

Senate bill

Section 607(a) permits the FAA to conduct developmental research on UASs. It authorizes the FAA, in conjunction with other federal agencies as appropriate, to develop technologies and methods to assess the risk of and prevent defects, failures, and malfunctions of products, parts, and processes, for use in all classes of unmanned aircraft systems that could result in a catastrophic failure.

RESEARCH PROGRAM ON RUNWAYS

H1005/S605

House bill

Section 1005 directs that when researching how to develop and maintain a safe and efficient NAS, the Administrator will include improved runway surfaces and engineered material restraining systems for runways at general aviation and commercial airports.

 $Senate\ bill$

Section 605 allows the FAA to continue a program that authorizes awards to nonprofit research foundations to improve the construction and durability of pavement for runways.

Conference Substitute

House and Senate bills merged. The provision contains modified Senate language in subsection (a) that will allow the Administrator to maintain a program that will make awards to carry out a research program under which the Administrator may make grants to and enter into cooperative agreements with institutions of higher education and nonprofit pavement research organization. The conference agreement includes House language to cover research that relates to engineered material restraining systems for runways at both general aviation and commercial airports. The conference agreement also includes Senate language on use of grants or cooperative agreements.

RESEARCH ON DESIGN FOR CERTIFICATION

H1006/S-

House bill

Section 1006 requires the Administrator to conduct research on methods and procedures to improve confidence in and the timeliness of certification of new technologies for introduction into the NAS within one year. It specifies that not later than six months after enactment, the FAA will develop a plan for the research that contains objectives, proposed tasks, milestones and a five year budget profile. The Administrator will enter into an arrangement with the National Research Council to conduct an independent review of the plan not later than 18 months after the date of enactment, with results of the review provided to Congress.

CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE

H1008/S608

House bill

Section 1008 changes the current Government share of costs for the Centers of Excellence so that the government's share of cost will not exceed 50 percent, with the exception that the Administrator may increase the share to a maximum of 75 percent for a fiscal year if the Administrator determines a center would be unable to carry out authorized activities without additional funds. An annual report is required listing the research projects initiated at each Center of Excellence, the amount of funding and funding source for each project, institutions participating, their shares of funding, and level of cost-sharing for the project.

Senate bill

Section 608 authorizes $1 million per year for each of fiscal years 2008 through 2012 for a Center of Excellence in applied research and training in the use of advanced materials in transport category aircraft.

Section 1012 directs the Secretary of Transportation to conduct a research program related to developing and qualifying jet fuel from alternative sources through grants and other measures. The program will allow for participation of industry and educational and research institutions that have existing facilities and experience in the research and development of technology for alternative jet fuels. The Secretary may collaborate with existing interagency programs, including the Commercial Aviation Alternative Fuels Initiative (CAAFI).

Senate bill

Section 603 requires the DOT to establish a research program to develop jet fuel from natural gas, biomass, and other renewable sources. It directs that the FAA, within 180 days, designate a Center of Excellence for Alternative Jet-Fuel Research for Civil Aircraft.

 $Conference\ Substitute$

Section 314 directs the Administrator to publish a report within six months, after consultation with stakeholders, including the development of: 1) RNP/RNAV procedures at 137 airports; 2) a description of the activities required for their implementation; 3) an implementation plan that includes baseline and performance metrics; 4) assessment of the benefits/costs of using third parties to develop the procedures; and 5) a process for the creation of future RNP and RNAV procedures. The Administrator must implement 30 percent of the procedures within 18 months of enactment, 60 percent within 36 months of enactment, and 100 percent by 2014. The Administrator is directed to create a plan for the implementation of procedures at the remaining airports across the country. It would require 25 percent of the procedures at these airports to be implemented within 18 months after enactment, 50 percent within 30 months after enactment; 75 percent within 42 months after enactment, and 100 percent before 2016. The charter of the Performance Based Navigation ARC is extended and directs it to establish priorities for development of RNP/RNAV procedures based on potential safety and congestion benefits. It would require that the process of the development of such procedures be subject to a previously established environmental review process. The FAA is directed to provide Congress with a deployment plan for the implementation of a nationwide data communications system to support NextGen ATC, and a report evaluating the ability of NextGen technologies to facilitate improved performance standards for aircraft in the NAS.

PRESENT LAW

Overview

Excise taxes are imposed on amounts paid for commercial air passenger and freight transportation and on fuels used in commercial aviation and noncommercial aviation (i.e., transportation that is not "for hire") to fund the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. The present aviation excise taxes are as fol-

Domestic air passenger excise tax

Domestic air passenger transportation generally is subject to a two-part excise tax. The first component is an ad valorem tax imposed at the rate of 7.5 percent of the amount paid for the transportation. The second component is a flight segment tax. For 2012, the flight segment tax rate is $3.80.4 A flight segment is defined as transportation involving a single take-off and a single landing. For example, travel from New York to San Francisco, with an intermediate stop in Chicago, consists of two flight segments (without regard to whether the passenger changes aircraft in Chicago).

The flight segment component of the tax does not apply to segments to or from qualified "rural airports." For any calendar year, a rural airport is defined as an airport that in the second preceding calendar year had fewer than 100,000 commercial passenger departures, and meets one of the following three additional requirements: (1) the airport is not located within 75 miles of another airport that had more than 100,000 such departures in that year; (2) the airport is receiving payments under the Federal "essential air service" program; or (3) the airport is not connected by paved roads to another air-

The domestic air passenger excise tax applies to "taxable transportation." Taxable transportation means transportation by air that begins in the United States or in the portion of Canada or Mexico that is not more than 225 miles from the nearest point in the continental United States and ends in the United States or in such 225-mile zone. If the domestic transportation is paid for outside of the United States, it is taxable only if it begins and ends in the United States.

For purposes of the domestic air passenger excise tax, taxable transportation does not include "uninterrupted international air transportation." Uninterrupted international air transportation is any transportation that does not both begin and end in the United States or within the 225-mile zone and does not have a layover time of more than 12 hours. The tax on international air passenger transportation is discussed below.

International travel facilities tax

For 2012, international air passenger transportation is subject to a tax of $16.70 per arrival or departure in lieu of the taxes imposed on domestic air passenger transportation if the transportation begins or ends in the United States.6 The definition of international transportation includes certain purely domestic transportation that is associated with an international journey. Under these rules, a passenger traveling on separate domestic segments integral to international travel is exempt from the domestic passenger taxes on those segments if the stopover time at any point within the United States does not exceed 12 hours.

&lt;sup>5</sup> In the case of an airport qualifying as "rural" because it is not connected by paved roads to another airport, only departures for flight segments of 100 miles or more are considered in calculating whether the airport has fewer than 100,000 commercial passenger departures. The Department of Transportation has published a list of airports that meet the definition of rural airports. See Rev. Proc. 2005-45.

In the case of a domestic segment beginning or ending in Alaska or Hawaii, the tax applies to departures only and is $8.40 for calendar year 2012.

"Free" travel

Both the domestic air passenger tax and the use of international air facilities tax apply only to transportation for which an amount is paid. Thus, free travel, such as that awarded in "frequent flyer" programs and nonrevenue travel by airline industry employees, is not subject to tax. However, amounts paid to air carriers (in cash or in kind) for the right to award free or reducedfare transportation are treated as amounts paid for taxable air transportation and are subject to the 7.5 percent ad valorem tax (but not the flight segment tax or the use of international air facilities tax). Examples of such payments are purchases of miles by credit card companies and affiliates (including airline affiliates) for use as "rewards" to cardholders.

Disclosure of air passenger transportation taxes on tickets and in advertising

Transportation providers are subject to special penalties relating to the disclosure of the amount of the passenger taxes on tickets and in advertising. The ticket is required to show the total amount paid for such transportation and the tax. The same requirements apply to advertisements. In addition, if the advertising separately states the amount to be paid for the transportation or the amount of taxes, the total shall be stated at least as prominently as the more prominently stated of the tax or the amount paid for transportation. Failure to satisfy these disclosure requirements is a misdemeanor, upon conviction of which the guilty party is fined not more than $100 per violation.

Tax on transportation of property (cargo) by air

Amounts equivalent to the taxes received from the transportation of property by air are transferred to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. Domestic air cargo transportation is subject to a 6.25 percent ad valorem excise tax on the amount paid for the transportation.8 The tax applies only to transportation that both begins and ends in the United States. There is no disclosure requirement for the air cargo tax.

Aviation fuel taxes

The Code imposes excise taxes on gasoline used in commercial aviation (4.3 cents per gallon) and noncommercial aviation (19.3) cents per gallon), and on jet fuel (kerosene) and other aviation fuels used in commercial aviation (4.3 cents per gallon) and noncommercial aviation (21.8 cents per gallon).9

Amounts equivalent to these taxes are transferred to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund.

B. Extension of Airport and Airway Trust Fund Expenditure Authority (sec. 1102 of the House bill, sec. 802 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1102 of the conference agreement, and sec. 9502 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

In general

The Airport and Airway Trust Fund was created in 1970 to finance a major portion of Federal expenditures on national aviation programs. Operation of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund is governed by the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code") 10 and authorizing statutes. The Code provisions govern deposit of revenues into the trust fund and approve the use of trust fund money (as provided by appropriation acts) for expenditure purposes in authorizing statutes as in effect on the date of enactment of the latest authorizing Act. The authorizing acts provide specific trust fund expenditure programs and purposes.

Authorized expenditures from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund include the following principal programs:

- 1. Airport Improvement Program (airport planning, construction, noise compatibility programs, and safety projects):
- 2. Facilities and Equipment program (costs of acquiring, establishing, and improving the air traffic control facilities):
- 3. Research, Engineering, and Development program (Federal Aviation Administration "FAA") research and development activities);
- 4 FAA Operations and Maintenance ("O&M") programs; and
- 5. Certain other aviation-related programs specified in authorizing acts.

Part of the O&M programs is financed from General Fund monies as well.11

Limits on Airport and Airway Trust Fund expenditures

No expenditures are currently permitted to be made from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund after February 17, 2012. Because the purposes for which Airport and Airway Trust Fund monies are permitted to be expended are fixed as of the date of enactment of the Airport and Airway Extension Act of 2012, the Code must be amended to authorize new Airport and Airway Trust Fund expenditure purposes. In addition, the Code contains a specific enforcement provision to prevent expenditure of Airport and Airway Trust Fund monies for purposes not authorized under section 9502. Should such unapproved expenditures occur, no further aviation excise tax receipts will be transferred to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. Rather, the aviation taxes would continue to be imposed, but the receipts would be retained in the General

HOUSE BILL

The provision authorizes expenditures from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund through September 30, 2014, and revises the purposes for which money from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund funds are permitted to be expended to include those obligations authorized under the reauthorization legislation of 2011 (i.e., the "FAA Reauthorization and Reform Act of 2011." which sets forth aviation program expenditure purposes through September 30, 2014).

Effective date.—The provision takes effect on date of enactment.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision authorizes expenditures from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund through September 30, 2013. The provision also amends the list of authorizing statutes to include the "FAA Air Transportation Modernization and Safety Improvement Act," which sets forth aviation program expenditure purposes through September 30, 2013.

Effective date.—The provision takes effect on April 1, 2011.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement authorizes expenditures from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund through September 30, 2015. The provision also amends the list of authorizing statutes to include the "FAA Modernization and Reform Act of 2012," which sets forth aviation program expenditure through September 30, 2015.

Effective date.—The provision takes effect on February 18, 2012.

C. Modification of Excise Tax on Kerosene Used in Aviation (sec. 803 of the Senate amendment)

PRESENT LAW

In general

Under section 4081, an excise tax is imposed upon (1) the removal of any taxable fuel from a refinery or terminal, 12 (2) the entry of any taxable fuel into the United States, or (3) the sale of any taxable fuel to any person who is not registered with the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") to receive untaxed fuel, unless there was a prior taxable removal or entry.13 The tax does not apply to any removal or entry of taxable fuel transferred in bulk by pipeline or vessel to a terminal or refinery if the person removing or entering the taxable fuel, the operator of such pipeline or vessel (excluding deep draft

&lt;sup>6</sup>Secs. 4261(c) and 4261(d)(4). The international air facilities tax rate of $12 is indexed annually for inflation, effective each January 1, resulting in the current rate of $16.70.

<sup>12</sup> A "terminal" is a taxable fuel storage and distribution facility that is supplied by pipeline or vessel and from which taxable fuel may be removed at a rack. A "rack" is a mechanism capable of delivering taxable fuel into a means of transport other than a pipeline or vessel. A terminal can be located at an airport, or fuel may be delivered to the airport from a terminal located off the airport grounds.

vessels), and the operator of such terminal or refinery are registered with the Secretary. <sup>14</sup> If the bulk transfer exception applies, tax is not imposed until the fuel "breaks bulk," i.e., when it is removed from the terminal, typically by rail car or truck, for delivery to a smaller wholesale facility or retail outlet, or removed directly from the terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft. <sup>15</sup>

The term "taxable fuel" means gasoline, diesel fuel (including any liquid, other than gasoline, that is suitable for use as a fuel in a diesel-powered highway vehicle or train), and kerosene. The term includes kerosene used in aviation (jet fuel) as well as aviation gasoline.

Section 4041(c) provides a back-up tax for liquids (other than aviation gasoline) that are sold for use as a fuel in aircraft and that have not been previously taxed under section 4081

Kerosene for use in aviation

In general

Present law generally imposes a total tax of 24.4 cents per gallon on kerosene. However, reduced rates apply for kerosene removed directly from a terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft.17 For kerosene removed directly from a terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft for use in commercial aviation, the tax rate is 4.4 cents per gallon.18 For kerosene removed directly from a terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft for use in noncommercial aviation, the tax rate is 21.9 cents per gallon. All of these tax rates include 0.1 cent per gallon for the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund. For kerosene removed directly from a terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft for an exempt use (such as for the exclusive use of a State or local government), generally only <sup>18</sup>Tax is imposed at this rate if the commercial aircraft operator is registered with the IRS, and the fuel terminal is located within a secured area of an airport. The IRS has identified airports with secured areas in which a terminal is located. See Notice 2005-4, 2005-1 C.B. 289, at sec. 4(d)(2)(ii) (2005) and Notice 2005-80, 2005-2 C.B. 953, at sec. 3(c)(2) (2005). If the fuel terminal is located at an unsecured airport, the fuel is taxed at 21.9 cents per gallon if the fuel is removed directly from the terminal into the fuel tank of an aircraft.

the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund tax of 0.1 cent per gallon applies. "Commercial aviation" generally means generally means any use of an aircraft in the business of transporting by air persons or property for compensation or hire. 19 Commercial aviation does not include transportation exempt from the ticket taxes and air cargo taxes by reason of sections 4281 or 4282 or by reason of section 4261(h) or 4261(i). Thus, small aircraft operating on nonestablished lines (sec. 4281), air transportation for affiliated group members (sec. 4282), air transportation for skydiving (sec. 4261(h)), and certain air transportation by seaplane (sec. 4261(i)) are excluded from the definition of commercial aviation. and accordingly are subject to the tax regime applicable to noncommercial aviation.

Refunds and credits to obtain the appropriate aviation  $tax\ rate$

If the kerosene is not removed directly into the fuel tank of an aircraft, the fuel is taxed at 24.4 cents per gallon, the rate applied to diesel fuel and kerosene used in highway vehicles. A claim for credit or payment may be made for the difference between the tax paid and the appropriate aviation rate (21.9 cents per gallon for noncommercial aviation, 4.4 cents per gallon for commercial aviation, and 0.1 cent per gallon for an exempt use).<sup>20</sup>

For noncommercial aviation, other than for exempt use, only the registered ultimate vendor may make the claim for the 2.5-cent-per-gallon difference between the 24.4 cents per gallon rate and the noncommercial aviation rate of 21.9 cents per gallon.<sup>21</sup> For commercial aviation and exempt use (other than State and local government use), the ultimate purchaser may make a claim for the difference in tax rates, or the ultimate purchaser may waive the right to make the claim for payment to the ultimate vendor.<sup>22</sup> For State and local government use, the registered ultimate vendor is the proper claimant.<sup>23</sup>

Commercial aviation claimants are permitted to credit their fuel tax claims against their other excise tax liabilities, thereby reducing the amount of excise tax to be paid with the excise tax return.

Transfers between the Highway Trust Fund and the Airport and Airway Trust Fund to account for aviation use Kerosene that is not removed directly from the terminal into an airplane (e.g., the jet fuel is transferred from the terminal by highway vehicle to the airport) is taxed at the highway fuel rate of 24.4 cents per gallon. The Highway Trust Fund is credited with 24.3 cents per gallon of the 24.4 cents per gallon imposed. The remaining 0.1 cent is credited to the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund. If a claim for payment is later made indicating that the fuel was used in aviation, the Secretary then transfers to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund 4.3 cents per gallon for commercial aviation use and 21.8 cents per gallon for noncommercial aviation use. These transfers initially are based on estimates, and proper adjustments are made in amounts subsequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in excess of, or less than, the amounts required to be transferred. Thus, to the extent claims for credit or payment are not made for the difference between the highway rate and the aviation rate, the Airport and Airway Trust Fund will not be credited for fuel used in aviation that was taxed at the 24.4 cents per gallon rate.

 $A viation\ gasoline$

The tax on aviation gasoline is 19.4 cents per gallon (including a 0.1 cent per gallon Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund component). If aviation gasoline is used in commercial aviation, the ultimate purchaser may obtain a credit or payment in the amount of 15 cents per gallon, such that the tax rate on such gasoline is 4.4 cents per gallon.<sup>24</sup> If aviation gasoline is sold for an exempt use, a credit or refund is allowable for all but the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund tax (0.1 cent per gallon).<sup>25</sup>

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision creates a separate category of kerosene for tax purposes: aviation-grade kerosene. Aviation-grade kerosene is taxed at 35.9 cents per gallon plus 0.1 cent per gallon for the Leaking Underground Storage Tank Trust Fund. Under the provision, aviation-grade kerosene used in noncommercial aviation will be taxed at the full rate. The rate of tax for aviation-grade kerosene used in commercial aviation and exempt use remains unchanged. 27

Because the tax on aviation-grade kerosene used in noncommercial aviation is equal to the full rate of tax collected, the provision repeals the ultimate vendor refund provisions for noncommercial aviation. In addition, the provision eliminates the interfund transfers from the Highway Trust Fund to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for kerosene used in aviation. Instead, the taxes imposed on aviation-grade kerosene will be credited to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund only.<sup>28</sup> The provision also provides a refund mechanism for aviation-grade kerosene used for a taxable purpose other than in an aircraft.

In the case of aviation-grade kerosene held on April 1, 2011, by any person, a floor stocks tax is imposed equal to the tax that would have been imposed if the increased rates had been in effect before such date less the tax actually imposed on such fuel. The tax is to be paid at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

The floor stocks tax does not apply to fuel held exclusively for any use to the extent a refund or credit of tax is allowable under the Code. The floor stocks tax does not apply if the amount of fuel held by a person does not exceed 2.000 gallons.

For purposes of the floor stocks tax, a controlled group is treated as one person. "Controlled group" for these purposes means a parent-subsidiary, brother-sister, or combined corporate group with more than 50-percent ownership with respect to either combined voting power or total value. Under regulations, similar principles may apply to a

The fuel is treated as used when such fuel is removed into the fuel tank. Sec. 4081(a)(4).

<sup>17</sup> If certain conditions are met, present law permits the removal of kerosene from a refueler truck. tanker, or tank wagon to be treated as a removal from a terminal for purposes of determining whether kerosene is removed directly into the fuel tank of an aircraft. A refueler truck, tanker, or tank wagon is treated as part of a terminal if: (1) the terminal is located within an airport; (2) any kerosene which is loaded in such truck, tanker, or tank wagon at such terminal is for delivery only into aircraft at the airport in which such terminal is located; and (3) no vehicle licensed for highway use is loaded with kerosene at such terminal, except in exigent circumstances identified by the Secretary in regulations. To qualify for the special rule, a refueler truck, tanker, or tank wagon must: (1) have storage tanks, hose, and coupling equipment designed and used for the purposes of fueling aircraft; (2) not be registered for highway use; and (3) be operated by the terminal operator (who operates the terminal rack from which the fuel is unloaded) or by a person that makes a daily accounting to such terminal operator of each delivery of fuel from such truck. tanker, or tank wagon. All provisions of law, including penalties, applicable with respect to the taxes imposed by section 4081 also apply to the floor stocks taxes to the extent not inconsistent with the provisions of the provision. For purposes of determining receipts to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, the floor stocks tax is treated as if it were a tax listed in section 9502(b)(1) (governing transfers of tax receipts to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund).

D. Air Traffic Control System Modernization Account (sec. 804 of the Senate amendment)

Under present law, there is no special sub-account of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund to which funds are dedicated for air traffic control system modernization.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision creates an Air Traffic Control System Modernization Account ("Modernization sub-account") within the Airport and Airway Trust Fund to ensure sufficient funding is provided for modernization of the air traffic control system. The Modernization sub-account is supported through annual transfers of $400 million from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund that are attributable to the taxes on aviation-grade kerosene. The funds are available, subject to appropriation, for expenditures relating to the modernization of the air traffic control system. Use of the funds also may include facility and equipment account expenditures.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

E. Treatment of Fractional Ownership Aircraft Program Flights (sec. 805 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1103 of the conference agreement, and new sec. 4043 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

For excise tax purposes, fractional ownership aircraft flights are treated as commercial aviation. As commercial aviation, for 2012, such flights are subject to the ad valorem tax of 7.5 percent of the amount paid for the transportation, a $3.80 segment tax, and tax of 4.4 cents per gallon on fuel. For international flights, fractional ownership flights pay the $16.70 international travel facilities tax.

For purposes of the FAA safety regulations, fractional ownership aircraft programs are treated as a special category of general aviation. Winder those FAA regulations, a "fractional ownership program" is defined as any system of aircraft ownership and exchange that consists of all of the following elements: (i) the provision for fractional ownership program management services by a single fractional ownership program manager on behalf of the fractional owners; (ii) two or more airworthy aircraft; (iii) one or more fractional owners per program aircraft, with at least one program aircraft having more than one owner; (iv) possession of at least a minimum fractional ownership interest in one or more program aircraft by each fractional owner; (v) a dry-lease aircraft exchange arrangement among all of the fractional owners; and (vi) multi-year program agreements covering the fractional ownership, fractional ownership program management services, and dry-lease aircraft exchange aspects of the program.

HOUSE BILL No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

Under the provision, transportation as part of a fractional ownership aircraft program is not classified as commercial aviation for Federal excise tax purposes. Instead, such flights would be subject to the increased Airport and Airway Trust Fund fuel tax rate for noncommercial aviation and an additional fuel surtax of 14.1 cents per gallon. For this purpose, a "fractional ownership aircraft program" is defined as a program in which:

- A single fractional ownership program manager provides fractional ownership program management services on behalf of the fractional owners:
- Two or more airworthy aircraft are part of the program:
- There are one or more fractional owners per program aircraft, with at least one program aircraft having more than one owner:
- Each fractional owner possesses at least a minimum fractional ownership interest in one or more program aircraft;<sup>30</sup>
- There exists a dry-lease aircraft exchange arrangement among all of the fractional owners;<sup>31</sup> and
- There are multi-year program agreements covering the fractional ownership, fractional ownership program management services, and dry-lease aircraft exchange aspects of the program.

The fuel taxes are dedicated to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. Consistent with the general extension of the taxes dedicated to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, the provision sunsets September 30, 2013.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable transportation provided after, and fuel used after, March 31, 2011.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement provides an exemption, through September 30, 2015, from the commercial aviation taxes (secs. 4261, 4271 and the 4.4 cents-per-gallon tax on fuel) for certain fractional aircraft program flights. In place of the commercial aviation taxes, the conference agreement applies a fuel surtax to certain flights made as part of a fractional ownership program.

a fractional ownership program.

Through September 30, 2015, these flights are treated as noncommercial aviation, subject to the fuel surtax and the base fuel tax for fuel used in noncommercial aviation.<sup>32</sup>

Specifically, the additional fuel surtax of 14.1 cents per gallon will apply to fuel used in a fractional program aircraft (1) for the transportation of a qualified fractional owner with respect to the fractional aircraft program of which such aircraft is a part, and (2) with respect to the use of such aircraft on the account of such a qualified owner. Such use includes positioning flights (flights in deadhead service).33 Through September 30, 2015, the commercial aviation taxes do not apply to fractional program aircraft uses subject to the fuel surtax. Under the conference agreement, flight demonstration, maintenance, and crew training flights by a fractional program aircraft are excluded from the fuel surtax and are subject to the noncommercial aviation fuel tax only.34 The fuel surtax of 14.1 cents per gallon sunsets September 30, 2021.

A "fractional program aircraft" means, with respect to any fractional ownership aircraft program, any aircraft which is listed as a fractional program aircraft in the management specifications issued to the manager of such program by the Federal Aviation Administration under subpart K of part 91 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations and is registered in the United States.

A "fractional ownership aircraft program" is a program under which:

- A single fractional ownership program manager provides fractional ownership program management services on behalf of the fractional owners:
- There are one or more fractional owners per program aircraft, with at least one program aircraft having more than one owner:
- With respect to at least two fractional program aircraft, none of the ownership interests in such aircraft can be less than the minimum fractional ownership interest, or held by the program manager;
- There exists a dry-lease aircraft exchange arrangement among all of the fractional owners; and
- There are multi-year program agreements covering the fractional ownership, fractional ownership program management services, and dry-lease aircraft exchange aspects of the program.

"qualified fractional owner" The term means any fractional owner that has a minimum fractional ownership interest in at least one fractional program aircraft. A "minimum fractional ownership interest" means: (1) A fractional ownership interest equal to or greater than one-sixteenth (1/16) of at least one subsonic, fixed wing or powered lift program aircraft; or (2) a fractional ownership interest equal to or greater than one-thirty-second (1/32) of at least one rotorcraft program aircraft. A "fractional ownership interest" is (1) the ownership interest in a program aircraft; (2) the holding of a multi-year leasehold interest in a program aircraft: or (3) the holding or a multi-year leasehold interest that is convertible into an ownership interest in a program aircraft. A "fractional owner" means a person owning anv interest (including the entire interest) in a fractional program aircraft.

<sup>32</sup> No inference is intended as to the treatment of these flights as noncommercial aviation under present law.

&lt;sup>34</sup>It is the understanding of the conferees that a prospective purchaser does not pay any amount for transportation by demonstration flights, and that if an amount were paid for the flight, the flight would be subject to the commercial aviation taxes and not treated as noncommercial aviation.

Amounts equivalent to the revenues from the fuel surtax are dedicated to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable transportation provided after, uses of aircraft after, and fuel used after, March 31, 2012.

Termination of Exemption For Small Jet Aircraft on Nonestablished Lines (sec. 806 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1107 of the conference agreement and sec. 4281 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

Under present law, transportation by aircraft with a certificated maximum takeoff weight of 6,000 pounds or less is exempt from the excise taxes imposed on the transportation of persons by air and the transportation of cargo by air when operating on a nonestablished line. Similarly, when such aircraft are operating on a flight for the sole purpose of sightseeing, the taxes imposed on the transportation or persons or cargo by air do not apply.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision repeals the exemption as it applies to turbine engine powered aircraft (jet aircraft).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for transportation provided after March 31, 2011.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment provision, repealing the exemption as it applies to jet aircraft, effective for transportation provided after March 31, 2012

F. Transparency in Passenger Tax Disclosures (sec. 807 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1104 of the conference agreement, and sec. 7275 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

Transportation providers are subject to special penalties relating to the disclosure of the amount of the passenger taxes on tickets and in advertising. The ticket is required to show the total amount paid for such transportation and the tax. The same requirements apply to advertisements. In addition, advertising separately states the amount to be paid for the transportation or the amount of taxes, the total shall be stated at least as prominently as the more prominently stated of the tax or the amount paid for transportation. Failure to satisfy these disclosure requirements is a misdemeanor, upon conviction of which the guilty party is fined not more than $100 per violation.35

There is no prohibition against airlines including other charges in the required passenger taxes disclosure (e.g., fuel surcharges retained by the commercial airline). In practice, some but not all airlines include such other charges in the required passenger taxes disclosure.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision prohibits all transportation providers from including amounts other than the passenger taxes imposed by section 4261 in the required disclosure of passenger taxes on tickets and in advertising when the amount of such tax is separately stated. Disclosure elsewhere on tickets and in advertising (e.g., as an amount paid for transportation) of non-tax charges is allowed.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for transportation provided after March 31, 2011.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except the Effective date is for transportation provided after March 31, 2012

G. Tax-Exempt Private Activity Bond Financing for Fixed-Wing Emergency Medical Aircraft (sec. 808 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1105 of the conference agreement, and sec. 147(e) of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

Interest on bonds issued by State and local governments generally is excluded from gross income for Federal income tax purposes.36 Bonds issued by State and local governments may be classified as either governmental bonds or private activity bonds. Governmental bonds are bonds the proceeds of which are primarily used to finance governmental functions or which are repaid with governmental funds. In general, private activity bonds are bonds in which the State or local government serves as a conduit providing financing to nongovernmental persons (e.g., private businesses or individuals).37 The exclusion from income for State and local bonds does not apply to private activity bonds, unless the bonds are issued for certain permitted purposes ("qualified bonds") and other Code requirements are met.38

Section 147(e) of the Code provides, in part, that a private activity bond is not a qualified bond if issued as part of an issue and any portion of the proceeds of such issue is used for airplanes.<sup>39</sup> The IRS has ruled that a helicopter is not an "airplane" for purposes of section 147(e).<sup>40</sup>

A fixed-wing aircraft providing air transportation for emergency medical services and that is equipped for, and exclusively dedicated on that flight to, acute care emergency medical services is exempt from the air transportation excise taxes imposed by sections 4261 and 4271.41

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision amends section 147(e) so that the prohibition on the use of proceeds for airplanes does not apply to any fixed-wing aircraft equipped for, and exclusively dedicated to, providing acute care emergency medical services (within the meaning of section 4261(g)(2)).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for obligations issued after the date of enactment.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

H. Protection of Airport and Airway Trust Fund Solvency (sec. 809 of the Senate amendment)

PRESENT LAW

The uncommitted cash balance in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund has declined significantly in recent years. At the end of Fiscal Year 2001, the uncommitted cash balance was $7.3 billion. At the end of Fiscal Year 2010, the balance was approximately $770 million.  $^{42}$

The current statutory formula requires that estimated Airport and Airway Trust Fund receipts each year must equal trust fund expenditures. However, amounts appropriated from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund are based on revenue receipt projections and have exceeded the amounts actually deposited into the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, resulting in declines in the uncommitted cash balance.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision amends section 9502 to limit the budgetary resources initially made available each fiscal year from the Airport and Airway Trust Fund to 90 percent, rather than 100 percent, of forecasted revenues for that year.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for fiscal years 2012 and 2013.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment provision, but this matter is addressed by section 104 of Title I of the conference agreement.

J. Rollover of Amounts Received in Airline Carrier Bankruptcy (sec. 810 of the Senate amendment and sec. 1106 of the conference agreement)

PRESENT LAW

The Code provides for two types of individual retirement arrangements ("IRAs"): traditional IRAs and Roth IRAs.43 In general. contributions (other than a rollover contribution) to a traditional IRA may be deductible from gross income, and distributions from a traditional IRA are includible in gross income to the extent not attributable to a return of nondeductible contributions. In contrast, contributions to a Roth IRA are not deductible, and qualified distributions from a Roth IRA are excludable from gross income. Distributions from a Roth IRA that are not qualified distributions are includible in gross income to the extent attributable to earnings. In general, a qualified distribution is a distribution that (1) is made after the five taxable year period beginning with the first taxable year for which the individual first made a contribution to a Roth IRA, and (2) is made on or after the individual attains age 591/2, death, or disability or which is a qualified special purpose distribution

The total amount that an individual may contribute to one or more IRAs for a year is generally limited to the lesser of: (1) a dollar amount ($5,000 for 2012); or (2) the amount of the individual's compensation that is includible in gross income for the year. 44 As under the rules relating to traditional IRAs, a contribution of up to the dollar limit for each spouse may be made to a Roth IRA provided the combined compensation of the spouses is at least equal to the contributed amount.

If an individual makes a contribution to an IRA (traditional or Roth) for a taxable year, the individual is permitted to recharacterize (in a trustee-to-trustee transfer) the amount of that contribution as a contribution to the other type of IRA (traditional or Roth) before the due date for the individual's income tax return for that year. 45 In the case of a recharacterization, the contribution will be treated as having been made to the transferee plan. The amount transferred must be accompanied by any net income allocable to the contribution and no deduction is allowed with respect to the contribution to the transferor plan. Both regular contributions and conversion contributions to a Roth IRA can be recharacterized as having been made to a traditional IRA. However, Treasury reg-ulations limit the number of times a contribution for a taxable year may be recharacterized.46

Taxpayers generally may convert a traditional IRA into a Roth IRA.<sup>47</sup> The amount converted is includible in income as if a withdrawal had been made, except that the early distribution tax (discussed below) does not apply. However, the early distribution tax is applied if the taxpayer withdraws the amount within five years of the conversion.

If certain requirements are satisfied, a participant in an employer-sponsored qualified plan (which includes a tax-qualified retirement plan described in section 401(a), an employee retirement annuity described in section 403(a), a tax-sheltered annuity described in section 403(b), and a governmental section 457(b) plan) or a traditional IRA may roll over distributions from the plan, annuity or IRA into another plan, annuity or IRA. For distributions after December 31, 2007, certain taxpayers also are permitted to make rollover contributions into a Roth IRA (subject to inclusion in gross income of any amount that would be includible were it not part of the rollover contribution).

Under section 125 of the Worker, Retiree. Employer Recovery Act of 2008 and ("WRERA"),<sup>48</sup> a "qualified airline employee" may contribute any portion of an "airline payment amount" to a Roth IRA within 180 days of receipt of such amount (or, if later, within 180 days of enactment of the provision). Such a contribution is treated as a qualified rollover contribution to the Roth IRA. Thus, the portion of the airline payment amount contributed to the Roth IRA is includible in gross income to the extent that such payment would be includible were it not part of the rollover contribution.

A qualified airline employee is an employee or former employee of a commercial passenger airline carrier who was a participant in a defined benefit plan maintained by the carrier which: (1) is qualified under section 401(a); and (2) was terminated or became subject to the benefit accrual and other restrictions applicable to plans maintained by commercial passenger airlines pursuant to section 402(b) of the Pension Protection Act of 2006 ("PPA").

An airline payment amount is any payment of any money or other property payable by a commercial passenger airline to a qualified airline employee: (1) under the approval of an order of a Federal bankruptcy court in a case filed after September 11, 2001, and before January 1, 2007; and (2) in respect of the qualified airline employee's interest in a bankruptcy claim against the airline carrier, any note of the carrier (or amount paid in lieu of a note being issued), or any other fixed obligation of the carrier to pay a lump sum amount. An airline payment amount does not include any amount payable on the basis of the carrier's future earnings or profits. The amount that may be contributed to a Roth IRA is the gross amount of the payment; any reduction in the airline payment amount on account of employment tax withholding is disregarded.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The amendment expands the choices for recipients of airline payment amounts by allowing qualified airline employees to contribute airline payment amounts to a traditional IRA as a rollover contribution. An individual making such a rollover contribution may exclude the contributed airline payment amount from gross income in the taxable year in which the airline payment amount was paid.

Qualified airline employees who made a qualified rollover contribution of an airline payment amount to a Roth IRA pursuant to WRERA are permitted to recharacterize all or a portion of the qualified rollover contribution as a rollover contribution to a traditional IRA by transferring, in a trustee-totrustee transfer, the contribution (or a portion thereof) plus attributable earnings (or losses) from the Roth IRA. As in the case of a recharacterization under present law, the airline payment amount so transferred (with attributable earnings) is deemed to have been contributed to the traditional IRA at the time of the initial rollover contribution into the Roth IRA. The trustee-to-trustee transfer to a traditional IRA must be made within 180 days of the amendment's enact-

If an amount contributed to a Roth IRA as a rollover contribution is recharacterized as a rollover contribution to a traditional IRA, the amount so recharacterized may not be contributed to a Roth IRA as a qualified rollover contribution (i.e., reconverted to a Roth IRA) during the five taxable years immediately following the taxable year in which the transfer to the traditional IRA was made.

Qualified airline employees who were eligible to make a qualified rollover to a Roth IRA under WRERA, but declined to do so, are now permitted to roll over the airline payment amount to a traditional IRA within 180 days of the receipt of the amount (or, if later, within 180 days of enactment of the amendment). As mentioned above, any portion of an airline payment amount recharacterized as a rollover contribution to a traditional IRA pursuant to the amendment is excluded from gross income in the taxable year in which the airline payment amount was paid to the qualified airline employee by the commercial passenger airline carrier. Individuals recharacterizing such contributions may file a claim for a refund until the later of: (1) the period of limitations under section 6511(a) (generally, three years from the time the return was filed or two years from the time the tax was paid, whichever period expires later); or (2) April 15, 2012.

An airline payment amount does not fail to be treated as wages for purposes of Social Security and Medicare taxes under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act 49 and section 209 of the Social Security Act, merely because the amount is excluded from gross income because it is rolled over into a traditional IRA pursuant to the amendment.

Surviving spouses of qualified airline employees are granted the same rights as qualified airline employees under section 125 of WRERA and under the amendment.

Effective date.—Effective for all transfers (made after date of enactment) of qualified airline payment amounts received before, on, or after date of enactment.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with three modifications. First, a qualified airline employee is not permitted to contribute (using either a rollover or recharacterization) an airline payment amount to a traditional IRA for a taxable year if, before the end of the taxable year, the employee was at any time a covered employee, as defined in section 162(m)(3),50 of the commercial passenger airline carrier making the qualified airline payment. Second, a qualified airline employee who was not at any time a covered employee may only roll over, or recharacterize, into a traditional IRA 90 percent of the aggregate amount of airline payment amounts received before the end of the taxable year. Third, individuals recharacterizing their contributions may file a claim for a refund until the later of: (1) the period of limitations under section 6511(a) (generally, three years from the time the return was filed or two years from the time the tax was paid, whichever period expires later); or (2) April 15, 2013.

K. Application of Levy to Payments to Federal Vendors Relating to Property (sec. 811 of the Senate amendment)

PRESENT LAW

In general

Levy is the IRS's administrative authority to seize a taxpayer's property, or rights to property, to pay the taxpayer's tax liability.<sup>51</sup> Generally, the IRS is entitled to seize a taxpayer's property by levy if a Federal tax lien has attached to such property,<sup>52</sup> and the IRS has provided both notice of intention to levy<sup>53</sup> and notice of the right to an administrative hearing (the notice is referred to as a "collections due process notice" or "CDP notice" and the hearing is referred to as the "CDP hearing")<sup>54</sup> at least 30 days before the levy is made. A Federal tax lien arises automatically when: (1) a tax assessment has been made; (2) the taxpayer has been given notice of the assessment stating the amount and demanding payment; and (3) the taxpayer has failed to pay the amount assessed within 10 days after the notice and demand. $^{55}$

The notice of intent to levy is not required if the Secretary finds that collection would be jeopardized by delay. The standard for determining whether jeopardy exists is similar to the standard applicable when determining whether assessment of tax without following the normal deficiency procedures is permitted.<sup>56</sup>

The CDP notice (and pre-levy CDP hearing) is not required if the Secretary finds that collection would be jeopardized by delay or the Secretary has served a levy on a State to collect a Federal tax liability from a State tax refund. In addition, a levy issued to collect Federal employment taxes is excepted from the CDP notice and the pre-levy CDP hearing requirement if the taxpayer subject to the levy requested a CDP hearing with respect to unpaid employment taxes arising in the two-year period before the beginning of the taxable period with respect to which the employment tax levy is served. In each of these three cases, however, the taxpayer is provided an opportunity for a hearing within a reasonable period of time after the levy.57 Federal payment levy program

To help the IRS collect taxes more effectively, the Taxpayer Relief Act of 199758 authorized the establishment of the Federal Payment Levy Program ("FPLP"), which allows the IRS to continuously levy up to 15 percent of certain "specified payments," such as government payments to Federal contractors (including vendors) that are delinguent on their tax obligations. With respect to Federal payments to vendors of goods, services, or property, the continuous levy may be up to 100 percent of each payment.59 The levy (either up to 15 percent or up to 100 percent) generally continues in effect until the liability is paid or the IRS releases the levy.

Under FPLP, the IRS matches its accounts receivable records with Federal payment records maintained by the Department of the Treasury's Financial Management Service ("FMS"), such as certain Social Security benefit and Federal wage records. When these records match, the delinquent taxpayer is provided both the notice of intention to levy and the CDP notice. If the taxpayer does not respond after 30 days, the IRS can instruct FMS to levy the taxpayer's Federal payments. Subsequent payments are continuously levied until such time that the tax debt is paid or IRS releases the levy.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision amends section 6331(h)(3) to add "property" to "goods or services" to allow the IRS to levy 100 percent of any payment due to a Federal vendor with unpaid Federal tax liabilities, including payments made for the sale or lease of real estate and other types of property not considered "goods or services."

Effective date.—The provision is effective for levies issued after the date of enactment.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment provision. Section 6331(h)(3) was amended to add "property" to "goods or services" to allow the IRS to levy 100 percent of any payment due to a Federal vendor with unpaid Federal tax liabilities in section 301 of the "3% Withholding Repeal and Job Creation Act," Pub. L. No. 112–56.

L. Modification of Control Definition for Purposes of Section 249 (sec. 812 of the Senate amendment, sec. 1108 of the conference agreement, and sec. 249 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

In general, where a corporation repurchases its indebtedness for a price in excess of the adjusted issue price, the excess of the repurchase price over the adjusted issue price (the "repurchase premium") is deductible as interest. 60 However, in the case of indebtedness that is convertible into the stock of (1) the issuing corporation, (2) a corporation in control of the issuing corporation, or (3) a corporation controlled by the issuing corporation, section 249 provides that any repurchase premium is not deductible to the extent it exceeds "a normal call premium on bonds or other evidences of indebtedness which are not convertible." 61

For purposes of section 249, the term "control" has the meaning assigned to such term by section 368(c). Section 368(c) defines "control" as "ownership of stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote and at least 80 percent of the total number of shares of all other classes of stock of the corporation." Thus, section 249 can apply to debt convertible into the stock of the issuer, the parent of the issuer, or a first-tier subsidiary of the issuer.

HOUSE BILL

No provision.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provision modifies the definition of control" in section 249(b)(2) to incorporate indirect control relationships of the nature described in section 1563(a)(1). Section 1563(a)(1) defines a parent-subsidiary controlled group as one or more chains of corporations connected through stock ownership with a common parent corporation if (1) stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of each of the corporations, except the common parent corporation, is owned (within the meaning of subsection (d)(1)) by one or more of the other corporations; and (2) the common parent corporation owns (within the meaning of subsection (d)(1)) stock possessing at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or at least 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of at least one of the other corporations, excluding, in computing such voting power or value, stock owned directly by such other corporations.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for repurchases after the date of enactment.

CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment provision.

M. Repeal of Expansion of Information Reporting Requirements (sec. 1101 of the Senate amendment)

PRESENT LAW

A variety of information reporting requirements apply under present law.62 These requirements are intended to assist taxpayers in preparing their income tax returns and to help the IRS determine whether such returns are correct and complete. The primary provision governing information reporting by payors requires an information return by every person engaged in a trade or business who makes payments for services or determinable gains to any one payee aggregating $600 or more in any taxable year in the course of that payor's trade or business.63 Payments subject to reporting include fixed or determinable income or compensation, but do not include payments for goods or certain enumerated types of payments that are subject to other specific reporting requirements.64 The payor is required to provide the recipient of the payment with an annual statement showing the aggregate payments made and contact information for the payor.65 The regulations generally provide exceptions from reporting of payments

<sup>61</sup> Regulations under section 249 provide that "[f]or convertible obligation repurchased on or after March 2, 1998, a call premium specified in dollars under the terms of the obligation is considered to be a normal call premium on a nonconvertible obligation if the call premium applicable when the obligation is repurchased does not exceed an amount equal to the interest (including original issue discount) that otherwise would be deductible for the taxable year of repurchase (determined as if the obligation were not repurchased)." Treas. Reg. sec. 1.249-1(d)(2). Where a repurchase premium exceeds a normal call premium, the repurchase premium is still deductible to the extent that it is attributable to the cost of borrowing (e.g., a change in prevailing yields or the issuer's creditworthiness) and not attributable to the conversion feature. See Treas. Reg. sec. 1.249-

<sup>63</sup> Sec. 6041(a). Information returns are generally submitted electronically on Forms 1096 and Forms 1099, although certain payments to beneficiaries or employees may require use of Forms W093 and W092, respectively. Treas. Reg. sec. 1.6041091(a)(2). The requirement that businesses report certain payments is generally not applicable to payments by persons engaged in a passive investment activity. However, for a brief period starting in 2011, the recipients of rental income from real estate were generally subject to the same information reporting requirements as taxpayers engaged in a trade or business such that recipients of rental income making payments of $600 or more to a service provider (such as a plumber, painter, or accountant) in the course of earning rental income were required to provide an information return to the IRS and to the service provider. Small Business Jobs Act of 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-240, sec. 2101, September 27, 2010. This rule was repealed in the Comprehensive 1099 Taxpaver Protection and Repayment of Exchange Subsidy Overpayments Act of 2011, Pub. L. No. 112-9, sec. 3, April 14, 2011.

to corporations, 66 exempt organizations, governmental entities, international organizations, or retirement plans.67 However, the following types of payments to corporations must be reported: Medical and health care payments; 68 fish purchases for cash; 69 attornev's fees; 70 gross proceeds paid to an attorney; 71 substitute payments in lieu of dividends or tax-exempt interest; 72 and payments by a Federal executive agency for services.73

Detailed rules are provided for the reporting of various types of investment income, including interest, dividends, and gross proceeds from brokered transactions (such as a sale of stock).<sup>74</sup> In general, the requirement to file Form 1099 applies with respect to amounts paid to U.S. persons and is linked to the backup withholding rules of section 3406. Thus, a payor of interest, dividends or gross proceeds generally must request that a U.S. payee (other than certain exempt recipients) furnish a Form W-9 providing that person's name and taxpayer identification number.<sup>75</sup> That information is then used to complete the Form 1099.

Failure to comply with the information reporting requirements results in penalties, which may include a penalty for failure to file the information return, 76 and a penalty for failure to furnish payee statements,77 or failure to comply with other various reporting requirements.78

66 The regulatory carveout for payments to corporations was expressly overridden for payments made after December 31, 2011 in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act ("PPACA"), Pub. L. No. 11109148, sec. 9006 March 23, 2010, which expanded the class of payments subject to reporting to include payments to corporations and payments of gross proceeds paid in consideration for any type of property. However, these rules were repealed in the Com-prehensive 1099 Taxpayer Protection and Repayment of Exchange Subsidy Overpayments Act of 2011, Pub. L. No. 112-9, sec. 2, April 14, 2011.

<sup>76</sup> Sec. 6721. The penalty for failure to file an information return generally is $100 for each return for which such failure occurs. The total penalty imposed on a person for all failures during a calendar year cannot exceed $1,500,000. Additionally, special rules apply to reduce the per-failure and maximum penalties where the failure is corrected within a specified period. Small Business Jobs Act of 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-240, sec. 2102, September 27, 2010.

The penalty for failure to provide a correct payee statement is $100 for each statement with respect to which such failure occurs, with the total penalty for a calendar year not to exceed $1,500,000. Special rules apply that increase the perstatement and total penalties where there is intentional disregard of the requirement to furnish a payee statement. Small Business Jobs Act of 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-240, sec. 2102, September 27, 2010.

SENATE AMENDMENT

The provisions repeals section 9006 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Pub. L. No. 111-148, which expanded the class of payments subject to reporting to include payments made to corporations and payments of gross proceeds paid in consideration for any type of property.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

N. Tax Complexity Analysis

Section 4022(b) of the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 (the "IRS Reform Act") requires the Joint Committee on Taxation (in consultation with the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of the Treasury) to provide a tax complexity analysis. The complexity analysis is required for all legislation reported by the Senate Committee on Finance, the House Committee on Ways and Means, or any committee of conference if the legislation includes a provision that directly or indirectly amends the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code") and has widespread applicability to individuals or small businesses.

The staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation has determined that a complexity analysis is not required under section 4022(b) of the IRS Reform Act because the bill contains no provisions that have "widespread applicability" to individuals or small busi-

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. MILLER of Michigan). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today on motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote incurs objection under clause 6 of rule XX.

Record votes on postponed questions will be taken later today.

TO EXTEND THE PAY LIMITATION FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS AND FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3835) to extend the pay limitation for Members of Congress and Federal employees.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The text of the bill is as follows:

H.R. 3835

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. EXTENSION OF PAY LIMITATION.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Section 147 of the Continuing Appropriations Act, 2011 (Public Law 111–242; 5 U.S.C. 5303 note), as added by section 1(a) of the Continuing Appropriations and Surface Transportation Extensions Act, 2011 (Public Law 111–322; 124 Stat. 3518), is amended—
- (1) in subsection (b)(1), by striking "December 31, 2012" and inserting "December 31, 2013"; and
- (2) in subsection (c), by striking "December 31, 2012" and inserting "December 31, 2013".
- (b) APPLICATION TO LEGISLATIVE BRANCH.—
- (1) MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.—The extension of the pay limit for Federal employees through December 31, 2013, as established pursuant to the amendments made by subsection (a), shall apply to Members of Congress in accordance with section 601(a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (2 U.S.C. 31).
- (2) OTHER LEGISLATIVE BRANCH EMPLOY-EES.—
- (A) LIMIT IN PAY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no cost of living adjustment required by statute with respect to a legislative branch employee which (but for this subparagraph) would otherwise take effect during the period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act and ending on December 31, 2013, shall be made.
- (B) DEFINITION.—In this paragraph, the term "legislative branch employee" means—
- (i) an employee of the Federal Government whose pay is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate or the Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives; and
- (ii) an employee of any office of the legislative branch who is not described in clause (i).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Ross) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I ask unanimous consent that the Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3835, to extend the pay limitation for Members of Congress and Federal employees. Our Federal employees provide an essential work function for the Federal Government. They're good people. They do good work. And they do good work so long as it's essential government functions. We appreciate their service, and believe Federal employees should be compensated fairly.

Yet, current Federal salaries and benefits are not in line with the marketplace when compared to the private workforce. Federal civilian workers receive generous benefits, pay, and job security. In fact, there is a four times greater chance of losing your job in the private sector than there is with the Federal workforce.

Our Federal workforce performs essential functions. We appreciate their service, and believe Federal employees should be compensated fully.

On Monday, the Congressional Budget Office released a study which found that total compensation for Federal employees was 16 percent greater than for private sector workers. When they looked at the benefits of hardworking taxpayers, they take home 72 percent less in benefits than their government counterparts.

To top it off, these hardworking private sector taxpayers, with a high school diploma or some college, make 32 to 36 percent less than Federal employees with the same education level. Those who work the hardest to pay taxes are the ones bearing the burden of a bloated Federal government.

The contrast between the Federal Government and private sector is troubling. With 13 million Americans unemployed, why would we allow automatic raises to occur for a group of workers whose average compensation exceeds $100,000, and for the Members of Congress, whose compensation is $174,000?

The reality is that the Federal Government has no incentive or no obligation to reduce salaries in order to be competitive to stay in business. We simply raise taxes, or we go into more debt. And our government continues to borrow. Just yesterday, for example, the CBO released a report that our Federal budget deficit will top another $1 trillion for a fourth straight year in a row. This is unprecedented. It is unsustainable.

The President's fiscal commission, a bipartisan commission, the Simpson-Bowles Commission, a commission which not only the President but this Congress should consider, has recommended a 3-year freeze on civilian payroll and Member pay. In its report, the Commissioners reminded us that "in time of budget shortfalls, all levels of government must trim back." Following this advice, the President, to his credit, did recommend, and this Congress did freeze Federal employee pay through 2012. This measure alone saved the Federal Government $60 billion

As Americans continue to sacrifice, we must lead by example. H.R. 3835 continues the temporary freeze on across-the-board annual salary adjustments for Federal civilian workers.

Federal employees will continue to receive salary increases under the step program. Now, this has been going on, even despite the Federal pay freeze, a step increase, 3 percent every year. 99.9 percent of all Federal employees eligible for a step increase received it. Where else can a pay freeze equal a 3 percent increase a year but in Washington, DC?

Office of Personnel Management Director Berry said that there should be no place in the Federal Government for non-performers to hide. This chart proves that we continue to fund government at a rate well in excess of that given to the private sector.

If we want to look for ways to cut, maybe we should look in some of the Federal office buildings, because 6 out of every 1,000 employees do not receive a 3 percent increase, despite a pay freeze. These step increases which continue under this bill, if passed, will result in a $1,303 average annual salary increase per Federal employee.

The bill before us today builds on the President's fiscal commission. It follows the President's request to freeze Federal pay for Federal employees. It is consistent with the House resolution, and mirrors the provisions of the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act of 2011 passed by this House last December.

Opponents of this bill will argue that Federal employees have already done more with less for the last 2 years. They will claim that supporters of this bill view Federal employees as a cost to cut, and that we want to cut the budget on the backs of Federal employees. I disagree with that.

We have been fortunate, very fortunate throughout the years to have a very good Federal workforce, to have talented and hardworking individuals who have chosen public service. However, our appreciation for their service does not bring a mandate to pay them above market rates, with little regard to their individual performance.

In its March 2011 report to the President, the Pay Agent—and let's go over who the Pay Agent is. The Pay Agent makes up the Secretary of Labor and the Directors of the Office of Management and Budget and the Office of Personnel Management, all appointed by the President, all approved by a Democratic-controlled Senate. This is what they say. They express serious concern about a process that requires a single percentage adjustment in the pay of all white collar civilian Federal employees in each locality area. Adding to their comments: We believe the underlying model and methodology for estimating pay gaps should be reexamined to ensure that the private sector and Federal sector pay comparisons are as accurate as possible.

There is a reason why the Federal pay law has never been implemented as originally enacted. It is based on an outdated, one-size-fits-all model. In testimony before the Federal Workforce Subcommittee, Director Berry agreed that the Federal pay system could use a reexamination, and it "does not reflect the complexity of the world we live in."

Study after study has shown that, when compared to the private sector, the Federal Government, on average, pays more than required to recruit and retain a skilled workforce. Paying across-the-board wages that are higher than market rate with no measure of individual performance means less money available to meet the salary required of highly skilled workers such as scientists and professionals, as this graph accurately demonstrates.

We need to bring these high-level professionals in the Federal Government in parity with the others, and this bill will allow us to do that. It shows where we are out of whack from the private sector.

Madam Speaker, I ask Members and Federal employees to share in the sacrifice necessary to help millions of Americans suffering under the Obama economy, and urge support of H.R. 3835.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I stand in strong opposition to this legislation, but I want to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

□ 1240

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I listened to the gentleman's comments. The gentleman is new to the Congress and probably doesn't have the background in terms of how this developed as to how we pay Federal employees.

As the sponsor of the Federal Employee Pay Comparability Act in 1990, signed by George Bush who worked with President Bush's OMB and OPM on this legislation, obviously one of the things we did was to say if the private sector doesn't get an increase, the public sector won't get an increase. We keyed the increases to the economic cost index, which is all to say that we need to tighten our belts when the private sector tightens their belts.

Which is why, as I think I caught the gentleman's reference, that over the last 2 years, Federal employees have in fact received cuts to existing law which will result in a $60 billion savings. I think the gentleman said that, but it bears repeating. It's not as if the Federal employees haven't tightened their belts. They have. In point of fact, the pay council to which he referred believes on average that Federal employees are in fact behind, not ahead.

Now, I'm aware of the CBO report that was just issued. Mr. CUMMINGS has responded to that. Clearly, what they said is there is a disparity. Those on the lower end of the scale are doing better. Those on the upper end of the scale aren't doing so well. None of them are getting paid as much as the gentleman is who made this speech or that I'm getting. None of them are making as much as we are.

Now, what we have here is a very clever political effort to have Members vote either for their pay or against their pay being adjusted by a cost-of-living adjustment.

I'm going to vote against this bill. I am for bringing a bill to this floor which will freeze our salaries, and I would hope that a unanimous consent to do so would not be objected to on your side of the aisle. I've been for that for the last 2 years, and I have worked in a bipartisan way over the years not to demagogue Members and have Members get cost-of-living adjustment. The sponsor of this bill, as a matter of fact, is quoted as saying how much difficulty he's having supporting his family on his salary.

Now, the fact of the matter is we ought to put a bill on this floor and freeze our salaries. Federal employees have already contributed $60 billion of benefits to which they otherwise would have been entitled because we, for the last 2 years, with my support, have frozen their salaries at the cost-of-living adjustment.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, I would hope that the bill that is sponsored by Mr. VAN HOLLEN, that there would not be an objection to a unanimous consent request to bring that bill to the floor so that Members could express that, yes, we're prepared to tighten our belts one more notch.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. HOYER. But what we should not do is pretend that we're going to balance the budget by undermining middle class workers, middle class workers who work for, in my opinion, the finest country on Earth and who give excellent service, extraordinary service to the people of this country, and who, per capita, are fewer than they were 20 years ago per capita.

The fact of the matter is that we ought to have a bill, we ought to pass Mr. VAN HOLLEN'S bill, we ought to take the politics out of this.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has again expired

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield the gentleman an additional 10 seconds.

Mr. HOYER. Then I tell my friends what we ought to do is we ought to pass a big deal. We ought to pass a $4 trillion to $5 trillion to $6 trillion big deal to get the fiscal house of the United States of America in order. It ought to include all things on the table including Federal employee pay and benefits, including the military pay and benefits and expenditures, and domestic expenditures, as well as entitlements. I've said that. That's what we ought to do. We ought not to piecemeal it as this bill reflects.

I hope that we'll support Mr. VAN HOLLEN's bill.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. I yield 3 minutes to my colleague from the great State of North Carolina (Ms. Foxx).

Ms. FOXX. Madam Speaker, I thank Mr. DUFFY for introducing this bill.

As a consistent opponent of automatic pay increases for Members of Congress, I am pleased to support the bill before us today which would extend the pay freeze for Federal employees and Members of Congress for another year through December 31, 2013.

With the record-shattering budget deficits racked up under the Obama administration, immediate action is needed to restrain runaway government increases and do no more harm to hardworking American taxpayers.

President Obama's liberal Democrat enablers in Congress attempt to ignore the true solution by suggesting endless tax increases, which never have and never will represent the long-term solution to our budget problem.

Excessive pay is part and parcel of a Federal Government that's too large and over budget. While the Federal Government will never be subject to market forces the way the private sector is, fundamental reform of the Federal compensation system is needed.

The simple truth also is that Federal employees are more highly unionized than their counterparts in the private sector. According to a CBO report issued last month: "The Federal Government and the private sector also differ in the extent to which their workers are represented by unions, which can influence employees' compensation. About 21 percent of Federal workers are members of unions, compared to only 8 percent of private sector workers."

As a result, the Federal Government pays comparatively higher compensation and provides more generous benefits and job security than private employers.

It's offensive to those unemployed Americans struggling to find a job to see unionized Federal employees continue to enjoy comparatively high compensation which is used to pay dues to government unions which spend heavily to elect politicians who promise them concessions.

According to the Heritage Foundation: "Government unions were the top political spenders outside the two major parties in the 2010 election cycle."

That's why I'm pleased Mr. DUFFY is offering H.R. 3835, which is a modest bill estimated to save taxpayers $26.2 billion. This bill also freezes the pay of Members of Congress, which so many taxpayers believe is important in demonstrating our shared commitment to reining in the spiraling Federal ledger. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I stand in strong opposition to this bill. Federal workers, Madam Speaker, are literally the backbone of our government. They support our troops on the battlefield, and they take care of our veterans when they return home. They protect our borders, safeguard our food supply, ensure that seniors receive their Social Security checks, and hunt down terrorists like Osama bin Laden. They carry out each and every Federal program, service, and initiative Congress has created.

Despite the critical nature of the services that Federal workers provide, the majority believes that their pay should be frozen for yet another year, that their retirement benefits should be slashed, and that the size of the Federal workforce should be reduced sharply, even though it is smaller now than it was under Presidents Reagan and George H.W. Bush.

Federal workers have already made tremendous sacrifices to address our Nation's budget deficits. The 2-year pay freeze to which they are currently subject will save taxpayers $60 billion. Further, Federal workers face the possibility of layoffs and furloughs in coming years as automatic spending reductions mandated by the Budget Control Act of 2011 reduce agency budgets for salaries.

The only workable solution to our country's budget deficit is a balanced one that includes shared sacrifice, including from the wealthiest among us. To date, however, our Republican majority has yet to bring before this House a single bill that will require millionaires and billionaires to contribute more toward deficit reduction. Instead, they are preoccupied with tak-

As a result, the Federal Government ing money out of the pockets of middle ays comparatively higher compensa-class public servants.

For these reasons, last week I led 17 Members in sending a letter to conferees working on extending the payroll tax cut urging them to reject any and all measures that would disproportionately harm Federal workers. I will continue to oppose any measure that would further cut Federal employee pay or benefits.

Madam Speaker, I'm disappointed but not surprised given the way the majority has run the House that we are now considering this bill under regular order. Instead, the majority introduced a bill on Friday in a pro forma session and is now rushing it to the House floor before any action by appropriate committees can be taken.

□ 1250

I am also disappointed that this measure was placed on the suspension calendar, thereby blocking any amendments to the underlying legislation. Finally, I am disappointed that this bill unfairly links the pay of Federal employees to the pay of Members of Congress.

I strongly support Mr. VAN HOLLEN'S bill. The merits of pay increases for Federal workers should be debated separately from our consideration of the pay of Members of Congress. In short, this bill appears to be a disingenuous and disrespectful attack against Federal workers and the regular order of the House.

For these reasons, I strongly urge Members to oppose the bill, and I call on the House leadership to allow us to consider legislation through regular order that does not punish Federal workers in order to score political points.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. I yield 5 minutes to the sponsor of this bill, my distinguished colleague from Wisconsin (Mr. DUFFY).

Mr. DUFFY. I appreciate the gentleman from Florida for yielding.

I think it is important that we review the history of Federal employee pay freezes. In the last Congress, this came up under a Democrat-controlled House, a Democrat-controlled Senate, and a Democrat President. They voted for a 2-year payroll freeze for Federal employees. They rightly excluded our military, and I think everyone in this House agrees that our military should get a pay increase. But who they wrongly failed to include in the pay freeze were Members of Congress. They didn't include Members of Congress, but every other Federal worker they did include.

So now, today, I've brought a bill to the floor to extend the pay freeze for one more year. My bill is the exact same bill as the Democrats' bill from 2 years ago. The only difference is that I've carved in Members of Congress. Every Member in this House will have his pay frozen just like every other Federal worker's. That is the right thing to do. That's what should have been done 2 years ago but was not done.

I was here to listen to the gentleman from Maryland, the former majority leader, who is outraged that he doesn't have an opportunity to singly vote for a pay freeze for Members of Congress. Yet, as the majority leader, he had the opportunity to include Members of Congress in his bill. Republicans didn't have a say. It was a Democrat House, a Democrat Senate, a Democrat President, and Members of Congress were not included. Now to come here today and to be outraged and say that the Republicans are disingenuous because we have carved in Members of Congress doesn't hold water.

I think it is important to also look at the facts behind Federal employees as they are compared to the private sector. The Congressional Budget Office came out and said that Federal employees make 16 percent more on average than those in the private sector. At this point, what my friends across the aisle have come to the House floor to say is, in a very difficult economy, we want the private sector, which is really the American taxpayer—the ones who have been forced to make concessions with regard to pay, the ones who have been asked to work less hours to keep their jobs-my friends across the aisle come to the House floor and say what we want these American taxpayers to do is to not get a pay raise themselves, but to pay for a pay increase for Federal workers who already make 16 percent more than they do.

That doesn't make sense. I hear a lot of conversation from my friends across the aisle about fairness and parity. Well, I think you should start to use the term "fairness" today. There should be parity between the private sector and the public sector.

I come from central and northern Wisconsin, and we have a large manufacturing sector in the community in my district. Time and time again, there are rules, there are regulations, there is red tape, and there are taxes that attack our way of life that come from this town of Washington, that attack the way of life in Wisconsin. We bring it up. We talk about it. We complain about it. And guess what? My friends across the aisle turn a deaf ear to our complaints. But today we're going to do a 1-year extension of a Federal employee pay freeze, and they are outraged by that. They are listening, they are advocating, they are arguing for more Federal pay.

Come on. Use fairness today. Use the argument of parity today. This was your bill. This is a 1-year extension.

The final point: The President's debt commission, Simpson-Bowles, said we should have a 3-year freeze on Federal pay. That's what my bill does. I don't want the argument to be that my friends across the aisle don't really care about the Federal employee pay freeze and that they only care about their own pay freeze, because that is the only difference. The only difference in my bill is that I've included Members of Congress.

This makes sense. Let's come together. The American people are sick of the partisan bickering. They would expect that there are issues on the left and that there are issues on the right that this House could and should fight about, but I think they're sick of commonsense issues that come down in the middle that we should agree on. Let's get together. Let's pass this bill. Let's freeze Federal employees' salaries for one more year.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland (Mr. VAN HOLLEN).

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, I think the record should be clear that every year that the Congress has frozen Federal employee pay, we have also frozen congressional pay. What we have not done is try to hold Federal employee pay hostage to what we do on congressional pay. We should also be very clear that all of us on the Democratic side support freezing congressional pay in the year 2013.

Indeed, Mr. CUMMINGS and I, Mr. HOYER and others have introduced legislation to do just that. It's H.R. 3858. The Democratic leadership asked that we be able to bring that up on the suspension calendar today, and we were denied that opportunity.

So I now ask unanimous consent that, after we complete debate on this bill, we add to today's suspension calendar H.R. 3858 so that we can vote as a body on freezing congressional pay.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the guidelines consistently issued by successive Speakers, as recorded on page 752 of the House Rules and Manual, the Chair is constrained not to entertain the gentleman's request unless it has been cleared by the bipartisan floor and committee leaderships.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. This illustrates the point exactly.

As I said, Madam Speaker, we have been denied that opportunity by the Republican leadership, so I want to just be clear.

We were denied the opportunity today to have an up-or-down vote on freezing congressional pay. That's what we should do, and the refusal to allow us to do that demonstrates that what we're really seeing is an effort to use congressional pay as a political weapon to punish all Federal employees: to prevent any COLAs—cost-of-living adjustments—for Federal employees. Otherwise we would be able to bring up that bill separately.

Now, what we're seeing again is an effort to single out Federal employees as scapegoats for the economic problems that they had nothing to do with—they had nothing to do with the meltdown on Wall Street; they had nothing to do with the previous administration that helped bring our economy to this position. Yet what we're seeing today is what we're seeing in States, where we have Governors in Wisconsin, where we have Governors in Ohio, where we have other, mostly Republican, Governors scapegoating public servants in their States and singling them out as if they were the problem.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield the gentleman an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Federal employees have already seen a 2-year freeze, which saved $60 billion, and Federal employees are willing to do their share. What we should not do is single them out. Now, the President has asked for a one-half percent cost-of-living adjustment. That still is short of the 1.7 percent cost-of-living that they will face.

So it's time that we stop saying to those folks who are out there every day helping keep our food safe, helping track down Osama bin Laden, other people who help protect our borders, and do other things that we're going to single them out for unfair treatment as part of the budget. Let's take it up as part of the full budget and not single them out the way we're doing here.

Congress of the United States, House of Representatives, Washington, DC, February 1, 2012. Hon. Eric I. Cantor, Majority Leader,

House of Representatives.

REPRESENTATIVE CANTOR: We are writing to request that the bill, H.R. 3858 to extend the pay freeze on Members of Congress, be placed on the suspension calendar. Federal employees have seen no cost-of-living adjustment for two years and will lose $60 billion in income over 10 years.

We believe that members should have the opportunity to vote to freeze the pay of members of Congress without cutting pay for all Federal employees.

Sincerely,

CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, Member of Congress. NANCY PELOSI, Member of Congress. STENY H. HOYER, Member of Congress.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Utah (Mr. CHAFFETZ).

Mr. CHAFFETZ. I want to thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for bringing forward this important bill.

I want to refer to some facts here because we do have some good, hardworking Federal employees. Make no mistake about it: They're just as patriotic, if not more, than everybody else in our country. They work hard, and they deserve just compensation. But the compensation trajectory on which we're going forward in this country, Madam Speaker, is neither sustainable nor fair

I was hoping that when the majority leader was addressing us that he would yield to the question, because one of the stats he threw out is that none of these people are earning as much as Members of Congress. Yet I would point out, for instance, that at the end of 2009 in the Department of Transportation, there was one person earning a salary of $170,000.

$\sqcap$ 1300

And yet 18 months later, there were 1,690 employees in the Department of Transportation earning at least $170,000 in compensation.

I would also point out that since President Barack Obama took office, until now, there are an additional 144,700 civilian Federal employees. These are new people added to the payroll, more than 144,000 new people on the payroll.

In 2010, more than 50 percent of all General Schedule employees received a step increase or a promotion, hardly a pay freeze that President Obama would have led us to believe was happening. Also for 2010, 62.9 percent of all General Schedule employees received an award or bonus. Now, in these dire economic times and people trying to tighten their belts in the private sector, I think it's stunning that close to 63 percent of our General Schedule employees, Federal employees, got an award or a bonus.

Now, this new CBO study that came out this week right here, the average Federal benefits that exceeded the private sector levels by 48 percent, the benefits that are being given to the Federal employees exceed the private sector by 48 percent, according to the CBO. And the total average Federal compensation is 16 percent when you weigh that in with the other base pay. 16 percent above the private sector. Now, you can find an isolated case where maybe somebody is being undercompensated, but you can find a whole lot more people that are being overcompensated.

Now, most people, if you ask in your mind, how many Federal employees out there are earning at least $100,000 in their base pay, Madam Speaker, that number is in excess of 450,000 people on our Federal payroll who are earning in excess of $100,000.

In fact, if you go back and look at the payroll, the total Federal payroll for the Federal Government, in 2008 it was roughly $400 billion; in 2011 it's projected to be $452 billion. You should also look at one of the more stunning numbers that I saw, Madam Speaker, and that is from 2010 to 2011, there were 16,000 Federal employees that moved up to having at least a base pay of $100,000.

So to suggest that there has been some sort of pay freeze in place, I would argue, is wholeheartedly incorrect. It is a matter of fairness and balance.

I appreciate Mr. DUFFY for his fine work in bringing this bill forward because we should limit the pay of Members of Congress. We should also do so for the Federal civilian workforce.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I find it interesting that the other side constantly brings up the CBO report. The much better report is the Bureau of Labor Statistics report. They have more experience at this, and they show that Federal employees were paid 26 percent less than private sector employees.

I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, Washington is the headquarters of the Congress. It is not the headquarters of Federal employees. Eighty-five percent of them live in other cities and in towns and suburbs.

Let's all agree that deficit reduction is a priority, and that it is appropriate to lead from the top. Nor should Federal employees be exempt from this leadership by example. But it starts at the top, not at the bottom of the Federal workforce.

These Federal employees live under often greatly differing costs of living, depending on where they live in the country. It is up to us to lead by example, not Federal employees, although they should not be exempt from this leadership role.

However, it is an unfair ruse to compare the most-favored Federal employees, Members of Congress, with the least favored, Federal employees across the board. Some are paid a great deal, some are paid very little, some come from high-cost areas of the country, some come from low-cost areas of the country.

Most of our constituents will understand who we were voting for and who we were voting against.

Democrats have a long history of respecting civil servants. Republicans have spent years deriding them in good times and bad. They know full well also that Congress would not dare take a raise now, and they know that Federal employees should not become, as they apparently have, the proverbial piggy bank for all-purpose deficit reduction.

We have had two freezes that were almost automatic on Federal employees. That's the very reason why this bill should be sent to committee to determine what is fair now in the third year after $60 billion in cuts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield the gentlelady an additional 30 seconds.

Ms. NORTON. Precisely because there have been two almost automatic freezes with no hearings, it is time to send this bill to the committee to determine what is fair for Federal employees. Have they contributed enough or, using my standard, leadership by example, should they contribute more? If you want to lead by example, Members of Congress should stand up and ask for a freeze for themselves, by themselves, like men and women.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, at this time I have no further speakers, and I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, may I ask how much time remains.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland has  $7\frac{1}{2}$  minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Florida has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH).

Mr. LYNCH. I thank the gentleman.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 3835, which would extend the current-year pay freeze for Federal workers for an additional year through 2013. This will be the third year of a pay freeze.

Similar to most of my colleagues who have spoken here today, I do support a freeze for Congress. I have voted six times to freeze Congress' pay.

While my good friend from Utah does point out that there are some high-end, high-salaried Federal employees, you have to remember that we have surgeons at the VA, very competent doctors at the VA that serve our veterans. We have scientists at NIH. We have very, very good attorneys at the SEC prosecuting very complex fraud cases. To attract those individuals, we do need to attract very competent and highly skilled individuals, and that's where those higher salaries are aggregated.

But we should be reminded that the vast majority of our Federal employees are middle-income earners. Oddly enough, we could have addressed this if this bill had gone through committee, through regular order. This bill has come to the floor without going through committee. It has not been subject to amendment.

We could have come up with a bill that said, okay, we are going to freeze the pay of high-income Federal employees. We didn't do that.

So you've got people out there making $30,000, $40,000 a year, secretaries and other staff, that their pay has been frozen for. If this goes through, it will be 3 years. So we could have done a better job if this bill had gone through the regular order and gone through committee.

I'm also concerned about the rationale behind this legislation. Similar to many of my colleagues today, while I support the freeze on congressional pay, we see a lot of legislation coming up in this Congress that attacks Federal employees, and I think this is one more example of that.

I totally oppose it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CUMMINGS. I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. LYNCH. I thank the gentleman. This is another in a series of legislative attacks that have targeted our Federal workers throughout the 112th Congress. It will further erode employee morale and diminish the Federal Government's ability to attract the best and brightest to perform the important jobs that we need to perform. Our dedicated civil servants play a vital role in such critical areas as law enforcement, national defense, public health, and the delivery of services to America's veterans, elderly, and the disabled. They should not bear a disproportionate burden when it comes to addressing our Nation's budget problems

So I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing any further efforts to balance the Nation's budget on the backs of our hardworking Federal employees by voting 'no' on H.R. 3835.

□ 1310

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. CHAFFETZ).

Mr. CHAFFETZ. Madam Speaker, earlier it was referenced that there was another study showing that the compensation was 26 percent lower than the private sector. I would point out that that did not include compensation for benefits. Certainly when you look at someone's total compensation plan, you have to look at the benefits they are achieving.

I would also point out that in the CBO study on pages 10 and 11, the total compensation is actually more askew for the lower-educated people. People who earned high school diplomas or less are getting 36 percent more than they would in the private sector. It's actually the higher end, people with professional degrees or doctorates who are actually being undercompensated, at least according to this study. And they only account for about 7 percent of our workforce.

So if you look at the bulk of our workforce, some roughly 93 percent, you're going to see a double digit percentage increase versus the private sector.

This is not an attack on our Federal workforce. Be grateful that you have a job. What we have to understand is that it's the taxpayers' money, and we have to be frugal with it.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN. Madam Speaker, I thank my very good friend, the distinguished ranking member of the committee, for yielding me this time to rise in strong opposition to an extension of the current pay freeze for Federal employees.

This legislation is a cynical attempt to tap into misguided resentment fostered by the far right against the Federal Government and the 2 million men and women who serve our Nation as civil servants.

Of those 2 million, let me point out to my colleagues that nearly two out of three civil servants work for the Department of Defense, the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Veterans Affairs, and the Department of Justice. In other words, two out of three Federal employees work in jobs related to our national security at home and abroad or caring for our veterans. Every one of those employees now seems to be the target of this body's misguided anger, and that's just wrong.

Most of our Federal employees work for the Defense Department to enhance our security. Employees at the Department of Homeland Security work to ensure that nuclear materials aren't smuggled into our country by those who want to do us catastrophic harm. The Federal Bureau of Investigation works to investigate and prosecute cybercriminals that steal billions of dollars of intellectual property from our defense and civilian industrial base every year. This body claims to care about preventing nuclear terrorism and halting cyber crime, yet we want to punish those charged with carrying out that mission.

Last year, a constituent of mine was awarded a "Sammie" from the Partnership for Public Service for his work at the VA helping to address veterans struggling with the human toll of warfare. My constituent has devoted 30 years of his career building a national network of small, community-based centers where veterans traumatized by combat obtain counseling, job assistance, medical referrals, and other services. The Partnership rewarded him last year, but today the House wants to forfeit his pay raise for a third consecutive year.

This bill is the product of an ideologically extreme group of people who got elected by insisting that our government is broken. And now that they're elected, they want to try to prove that is the case. It's not the case. We ought to be proud of our government and reject this bill.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume

As I listen to the debate and as I listen to the other side—and I do want to associate myself with the words of my colleague, Mr. Moran, and the others who have spoken—over and over again we hear on the one side of the mouth coming from our Republican colleagues that they love our Federal employees so much and they do such a great job,

This legislation is a cynical attempt but on the other hand they say they tap into misguided resentment fos- want to freeze their pay.

One of the things that I have found so interesting, and we've heard the argument over and over, is when it came to taxes with regard to the millionaires and billionaires, they didn't want to tax them one penny more, not one dime. But yet, the person who works here in this building, the ones that work at Social Security and other places, the ones that Mr. Moran just talked about, the ones who are protecting the homeland, they say to them: We want to make sure we freeze your pay. There's something awfully wrong with that picture.

I believe very strongly that we all should share in the benefits, and we should share in the sacrifice, too. They didn't ask for one dime, not a dime more from the millionaires and the folks that are making all of the money. But yet still you've got people in the Federal system, according to the CBO report, if you want to go there, and that CBO report says those people with a master's degree or above, they are making 23 percent less. What about them? What about the people who day after day sacrifice and could possibly be making a lot more money in the private sector, what about them? Some of them, by the way, are on our staffs.

So I would just urge—and again, it's been implied that we on this side have a problem with a pay freeze for our Members of Congress. We don't have a problem with that. I will go on the record saying that. And these issues should be divided.

With that, Madam Speaker, I urge Members to vote against this very bad bill, and I yield back the balance of my time

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I'm new here. I'm one of those freshmen. I'm one of those freshmen who's been told you don't know how Washington works. I'm one of those freshmen who's been told you need to get in line, that's been told you need to get in line.

Well, if successive 4 years of trilliondollar deficits is the way Washington works, then I don't want it working that way. You see, I wasn't sent here to learn how Washington works; I was sent here to change the way Washington works.

And when we have a President proposing a military budget that cuts our military back to pre-World War II levels, and yet we continue to increase our Federal payroll while private sector payroll employment goes down, there's something wrong with the way Washington works.

Washington is broken, and I submit to you that we need to lead by example. We have done so already by reducing our MRAs, our Members' accounts, by 11 percent. We've done so already by reducing our committee budgets. But we need to go further if we're going to lead by example, because you see, leadership is not a title. Leadership is an act. And I submit to you, Madam Speaker, that today we lead by example, and I urge my colleagues to support the passage of H.R. 3835, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Madam Speaker, once again the Republican leadership is attacking America's 2.3 million civilian Federal employees. In a brazen act of political opportunism, Speaker BOEHNER is using the public's well-founded dissatisfaction with Congress to bludgeon public servants. H.R. 3835, which we will vote on under suspension of the rules on Wednesday, will freeze pay for Members of Congress... and Federal employees.

Two million of the 2.3 million Federal emplovees-which is 86%-do NOT live in the Washington, DC metropolitan region. They live in what has been referred to fondly as the "real America." The region with the highest percentage (37 percent) of Federal employees is the South, home of such venerable institutions as the Oak Ridge research lab, Red Stone Arsenal, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The majority of Federal employees work on defense and homeland security. They guard our borders, protect the safety of airline travel, fight forest fires, and track down online child predators. Would it be unreasonable to point out that passage of this bill could aid and abet terrorists, cross-border gun runners, and child pornographers?

We can all anticipate the anonymous PAC-funded television ads that will run against those of us who oppose this ignominious legislation: "Call and ask why Congressman X voted to raise his own pay." The other consequences of this bill, should it pass, are far worse. Freezing pay of a workforce that already receives 26 percent less than the private sector, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, will further degrade critical public services and weaken an already fragile economy.

Federal employees' pay has been frozen for the last two years. While private sector pay has grown, Federal pay has stagnated. By denigrating public service and dismantling Federal pay and benefits, we are crippling our ability to recruit and retain the next generation of top tier public servants. The victims of this assault on public employees are our constituents—the public we are supposed to serve—who rely on services provided by Federal employees every day in every American community.

İ respectfully request that we maintain whatever shreds of dignity this institution has left and reject H.R. 3835.

Mr. WAXMAN. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this latest attack on Federal workers.

H.R. 3835 is not a balanced proposal.

Federal employees have already been asked to make significant sacrifices to help reduce our debt. So far, they have contributed $60 billion through a two-year pay freeze and they face the prospect of furloughs and layoffs in the coming years as the Budget Control Act's automatic cuts reduce agency budgets. Despite this, House Republicans continue to push for expanded concessions in compensation and benefits.

H.R. 3835 would require Federal workers to forego an additional $26 billion in pay over the next decade even though Federal employees actually earn less than their private sector counterparts when factors such as skill and education level are taken into account.

H.R. 3835 is not a serious attempt to address the budget deficit. The $26 billion it would raise over 10 years would cover only 2 percent of the projected budget deficit for FY 2012 alone. True deficit reduction will need to be balanced and sacrifice will need to be shared.

H.R. 3835 is also misguided policy.

The Federal government should not be an employer of last resort. Our citizens depend on our ability to recruit the most qualified individuals to treat our wounded veterans, inspect our food, oversee nuclear power plants, protect us from terrorism, and provide a broad range of other critical services. While H.R. 3835 would get us almost nowhere in tackling our long term debt, and shield the wealthiest individuals and corporations from making any kind of contribution, it would have a devastating long-term effect on the quality of government services and operations.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this legislation.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 3835. This bill is yet another example of the Republican majority's desire to play political games instead of promoting commonsense legislative solutions to our Nation's problems.

Madam Speaker, I believe this is exactly the wrong time to raise salaries for me and my colleagues in Congress. We shouldn't get it. But I do not believe that millions of hardworking Federal employees should be punished. They already gave $5 billion with their salary freeze over the past two years.

One of my top priorities in Congress is protecting the rights of middle class families, which includes many millions of Federal workers. I have the utmost respect for the hard work and public service that Federal civilian employees perform each and every day, and I believe they deserve to be compensated fairly. Federal workers are not overpaid. Comparison studies show that for the educational level and job category, they are paid less than others. In fact, Federal workers with a professional or doctorate degree earn 23 percent less, on average, than their private sector counterparts. In order to attract the most talented men and women to Federal service, it is imperative that we offer competitive salaries and benefits. This legislation sends the wrong message to the millions of men and women who serve the American people. It tells them that we may value the work that they do on behalf of the American people, but not enough to compensate them fairly.

Madam Speaker, this bill is a game. It is not a serious attempt to address the deficit or debt. It is "gotcha" politics. Pay for Federal workers did not get us into a deficit—two unpaid wars, a prescription drug benefit, and several tax cuts for the rich blew a hole in the budget. But rather than address those root causes, the majority today is blaming hardworking Federal employees.

Madam Speaker, rather than this phony bill, I am a cosponsor of Ranking Member VAN HOLLEN's legislation to extend the pay freeze for Members of Congress through 2013 without affecting the salaries of the men and women of our Federal workforce. Members of Congress should not get a pay increase this year. This is something we all agree on, Mr. Speaker. When the legislation to forego a cost of living pay raise in 2011 came before this body in April 2010, it passed by a vote of 402 to 15. Bring this bill to freeze Members' aput hrough 2013 to the floor and I will support it. So would most of our colleagues. I believe.

Mr. MARINO. Madam Speaker, it is undeniable that our nation faces dire economic circumstances. This Congress must continue to cut spending and reduce the size and scope of Washington. I strongly support the efforts of House Republicans to make responsible and necessary cuts to the federal workforce. A responsible federal pay freeze is an important part of that equation, particularly for Members of Congress, the President, and political appointees.

However, I rise today to express concerns regarding H.R. 3835 which we are now considering. I believe that the current pay freeze and a continuation of it has a disproportionate impact on employees that face mandatory retirement age, such as many of our law enforcement officers. These employees put their lives at risk every single day to defend our safety and freedom.

I recently toured several federal prisons located in my district and it is unbelievable what these guards go through to ensure that some of the most violent criminals in America remain behind bars. Due to the physical and mental abuse that these guards go through during their careers, it is mandatory that they retire at 57. Unfortunately, the officers currently near the mandatory retirement age will not be able to make up any lost salary by working a few extra years.

Additionally, I am concerned about the effects a continued pay freeze will have on recruitment and retention of federal law enforcement officers. Prison officers already face a long and rigorous hiring process and deplorably low wages. The prospect of not seeing an increase in pay will add yet another barrier to recruiting the best and most fit to guard our prisons and protect our safety.

I will support this legislation because I believe that Members of Congress and political appointees should not see a pay increase and that a responsible pay freeze is needed. I ask the sponsor of this legislation, House and Senate leaders, and the administration to consider the lasting impacts of a pay freeze on the federal law enforcement officers who put their lives at risk every single day to ensure that our families are safe.

Mr. RAHALL. Madam Speaker, today, I voted in favor of extending the pay freeze on Members of Congress. While Members of Congress should not be getting raises during a recession, our federal employees who provide services to our military members and ensure senior citizens receive their checks on time do not deserve to bear the brunt of cost-cutting efforts. The federal employees who daily show up for work in a spirit of service to our country deserve our respect and support.

Federal employees deserve thanks for the work they do, often at lower pay than they could command in the private sector, out of a spirit of service to our country. These federal workers don't deserve to be the pawns in cynical political showdowns. Shared sacrifice is necessary from all Americans as we continue finding ways to balance budget and to preserve critical programs, targeting one group over another out of political spite is not the answer. Federal workers are hard working American and I thank them for their efforts on behalf of the American people.

Mr. REYES. Madam Speaker, tonight the U.S. House of Representatives will vote on a Republican bill that attacks federal employees and aims to balance the budget on the backs of hard-working federal civil servants for political points. Republicans claim this bill freezes the salaries of Members of Congress, but what they fail to mention is that this bill would also freeze the pay of federal employees, including 10,000 civil servants in El Paso.

Federal employees have already made significant sacrifices to help reduce the government's budget deficit. They are now enduring a two-year pay freeze that took effect in January 2011. Federal employees also face the possibility of layoffs and furloughs in coming years as automatic spending reductions mandated by the Budget Control Act of 2011 cut federal agency budgets.

Republicans need to stop attacking federal employees. This pointless legislation only serves to distract from the real issue: helping revitalize the economy and create jobs. I will continue to stand with federal employees and their families.

The Republican message is clear to our hard-working federal employees, over 12,000 in El Paso, who secure our border, care for our veterans, and protect our air and water—they would rather freeze the wages of middle class workers than raise taxes on the millionaires and billionaires. I want to reassure all federal employees in El Paso that I will continue to work hard against attacks that jeopardize their livelihood and ability to support their families.

Mr. WOLF. Madam Speaker, I do not believe that Members of Congress should receive a pay raise, and that is why I am voting for this bill. However, today's bill isn't just a vote on whether or not to freeze salaries for Members of Congress. The second part of this legislation extends the pay freeze for federal employees for a third consecutive year. This gives me serious pause. These issues should not be tied together. There should be one vote on Member salaries and a separate vote on extending the pay freeze for federal employees.

I am concerned that the language in this bill pertaining to federal employees' pay has not been considered through the normal process. I'm not arguing that freezing Members' salaries needs a hearing. That's obvious. Freezing our pay doesn't need to be vetted.

Federal employees are the issue. This bill has been rushed to the floor less than a week after being introduced. No hearings have been held. Only 40 minutes of debate are being allowed. No amendments are permitted.

Has anyone fully considered the impact that a three-year pay freeze will have on the CIA, the NSA, the National Reconnaissance Office and the National Counter Terrorism Center?

Or the impact on the FBI, which has, since 9/11, disrupted scores of terrorist plots against our country?

Or the impact on our military, which is supported by federal employees every day on military bases across the Nation?

Or the impact on VA hospitals across the country, which are treating military veterans from World War II to today?

Or the impact on the Border Patrol?

Or the impact on NASA, its astronauts, engineers and scientists, especially on the nine-year anniversary of the tragic loss of the Columbia crew and a week after the 45th anniversary of the loss of the Apollo 1 crew?

Or the impact on NIH, and other federal researchers, scientists and doctors?

Clearly, federal employees don't just sit behind desks. They are members of our communities who are out in the field, often in harm's way, protecting our Nation. Just here in northern Virginia, residents recently mourned the loss of two federal employees who died in the line of duty—U.S. Park Police Sergeant Michael Andrew Boehm of Burke, and National Park Service Ranger Margaret Anderson, who previously worshipped in Lovettsville.

Their sacrifices remind us that many federal employees are often put in dangerous situations. Since 1992, nearly 3,000 federal employees have paid the ultimate price while serving their country, according to the Office of Personnel Management. The first American killed in Afghanistan, Mike Spann, was a CIA agent and a constituent of mine from Manassas Park. I attended his funeral. Over 100,000 CIA, FBI, DEA agents, and State Department employees have served side-by-side with our military to carry out the War on Terror in locations such as Iraq and Afghanistan. Two years ago, I attended funerals for some of the seven CIA agents who were killed by a suicide bomber at Forward Operating Base Chapman near Khost on the Afghanistan-Pakistan bor-

And we should not forget that the CIA agents who planned and helped execute the raid that killed Osama Bin Laden are federal employees.

Every day, Border Patrol agents and ICE agents are working to stop the flow of illegal immigrants and drugs across our borders. Federal firefighters work to protect federal lands and mitigate the spread of deadly fires. Immediately following the December 2011 shooting at Virginia Tech, some of the first law enforcement officers on the scene were ATF agents. These are but a few examples of the vital jobs performed by federal employees.

Federal employees who are not in harm's way on a daily basis are also dedicated public servants. The medical researchers at the National Institutes of Health working to develop cures for cancer, diabetes, Alzheimer's and autism are all federal employees. Dr. Francis Collins, the physician who mapped the human genome and serves as director of the NIH, is a federal employee. The National Weather Service meteorologists who track tornadoes and hurricanes, as well as the FDA inspectors working to stop a salmonella outbreak, are federal employees.

It is cheap grace to claim that today's legislation will in any way address our Nation's fiscal obligations. The national debt is over $15 trillion. It is projected to reach $17 trillion next year and $21 trillion in 2021. We have annual deficits of more than $1 trillion. We have unfunded obligations and liabilities of $65 trillion. This bill does not even direct the Congress to use the "savings" from today's bill to be used for deficit reduction or any other particular purpose.

I am concerned that this vote is merely an attempt to position the House to use federal employees as a "pay-for" to fund the further extension of the payroll "holiday" legislation that is currently before a conference committee.

This is wrong. And my vote today to freeze Members' salaries should not be construed in any way to indicate that I would support such a position from the conference committee. Let me be clear, the payroll "holiday" should expire on schedule at the end of this month. It does nothing more than steal from the Social Security Trust Fund, which is already going broke. And, according to recent polling reported by The Hill, most Americans haven't noticed any benefit from this "holiday."

Social Security is unique because it is paid for through a dedicated tax on workers who will receive future benefits. The money paid today funds benefits for existing retirees, and ensures future benefits. Because you pay now, a future worker will pay your benefits. That is why, until last year, this revenue stream was considered sacrosanct by both political parties.

Social Security is on an unsustainable path. Today's medical breakthroughs were simply not envisioned when the system was created in 1935. For example, in 1950, the average American lived for 68 years and 16 workers supported one retiree. Today, the average life expectancy is 78 and three workers support one retiree. Three and a half million people received Social Security in 1950; 55 million receive it today. Every day since January 1, 2011, over 10,000 baby-boomers turned 65. This trend will continue every day for the next 19 years. Do these numbers sound sustainable to anyone?

The Social Security Actuary has said that by 2036 the trust fund will be unable to pay full benefits. This means that everyone will receive an across-the-board cut of 22 percent, regardless of how much money they paid into the system.

After months of passionately debating the importance of reducing the deficit, the president and Congress are now continuing to advocate for a payroll "holiday" that's barely, if at all, improved our economic outlook and further contributes to our crushing debt burden.

And does it make sense that everyone, regardless of income, will get money from this "stimulus?" Does anyone think that Warren Buffet changed his buying habits as a result of this temporary suspension? Or did General Electric's CEO, Jeffery Immelt, the head of President Obama's Council on Jobs and Competitiveness who recently shipped GE's medical imaging division from Wisconsin to China, benefit from this "holiday?" Leadership from both parties have stated that extending this policy is paramount. I regret that time is being spent on a flawed policy instead of tackling the difficult choices to address our nation's unfunded spending obligations.

We all know what needs to be done to address the deficit and debt and that is why I have supported every serious effort to resolve this crisis, including the Bowles-Simpson recommendations, the Ryan Budget, the "Gang of Six," the "Cut, Cap and Balance" plan and the Budget Control Act.

I also was among the bipartisan group of 103 members of Congress who urged the supercommittee to "go big" and identify $4 trillion in savings. I voted for the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution, which would have established critical institutional reforms to ensure that the federal government lives within its means. In addition, since 2006, I have introduced my own bipartisan legislation, the SAFE Commission, multiple times.

While none of these solutions were perfect, they all took the necessary steps to rebuild and protect our economy. In order to solve this problem, everything must be on the table for consideration—all entitlement spending, all domestic discretionary spending, including defense spending, and tax reform, particularly changes to make the tax code more simple and fair and to end the practice of tax earmarks and loopholes that cost hundreds of billions of dollars annually.

Yet on the floor today, the Congress won't even, at a minimum, commit the savings from this bill towards deficit reduction. There is something fundamentally wrong with this scenario.

I've always had a policy where my staff in Washington, Herndon and Winchester were treated the same as federal employees. They work hard. But when federal employees faced furloughs, so did my staff. And because federal employees work under a pay freeze, my staff is working under a pay freeze. I have always felt that federal employees, and congressional staff, committee and leadership staff, should be treated equally. I feel that the moral choice has always been to treat everyone equally.

Above all, we should not let today's vote distract us from having the difficult conversations that are necessary to ensure that programs and services are reduced in a manner that responsibly lowers the deficit. There is never a convenient time to make hard decisions, but the longer we put off fixing the problem, the worse the medicine will be and the greater the number of Americans who will be hurt. America is living on borrowed dollars and borrowed time. We must stop leaving piles of debt to our children and grandchildren.

It was disappointing to hear the president deliver a campaign speech from the floor of this House during the State of the Union. It is disappointing that this House is now following his lead.

Federal employees live, work, pay taxes, liaise with contractors and businesses, and spend the money that is driving the private sector growth here in Virginia. We shouldn't use them as offsets for a failed policy that steals from Social Security.

Voting to freeze member pay is the easy thing to do. Let's be sure that today's actions don't distract us from the tough choices ahead. We should let the payroll "holiday" expire on schedule. We should put everything on the table—including discretionary spending, tax earmarks and loopholes, defense spending, and entitlements to address our nation's debt. We should be balancing our books to eliminate the need for sequestration. It's time to get to work.

Let's not continue to kick the can down the road as we wait for a better political moment. I stand ready to continue to work with my colleagues to find real, comprehensive reforms to our spending, tax, and entitlement systems to ensure that these programs exist. Our children and grandchildren deserve nothing less.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 3835, which would extend the pay limits for federal employees through 2013. Nearly 2 million federal civilian workers stand to be affected by this pay freeze if it is enacted by Congress.

For the last two years, federal employees and their families have suffered the consequences of an across-the-board pay freeze. While the cost of vital goods such as food and gas, medical expenses, and rent continue to rise, H.R. 3835 seeks to prolong that burden on millions of families by extending this pay freeze for another year. Federal employees and their families are no less affected by downward trends in the economy than any others in the workforce, and it is unfair to ask that they continually make these sacrifices when Congress will not even ask the same sacrifice of millionaires, billionaires, and the largest corporations.

These kinds of pay freezes do more than just take precious disposable income away from working families. So many federal workers came to the federal government because they have excellent credentials and are committed to public service. By limiting the amount of money that the federal government can offer to prospective employees, Congress is effectively limiting its own ability to attract and retain highly-educated and highly-skilled workers to carry out important roles such as national security, maintaining critical transportation infrastructure, and caring for our veterans.

Madam Speaker, H.R. 3835 is simply another partisan attempt to hold working families hostage for petty political gain. Federal employees have already contributed $60 billion toward reducing the deficit the past two years, and it is time to finally ask the wealthiest businesses and members of society to start paying their fair share. H.R. 3835 is sorely misguided and I will oppose this bill in any way that I can.

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 3835 because of the negative cost it puts on the backs of our federal public servants. At a time when Congress must make tough budget choices, I fully support a freeze on the salary of Members of Congress. That is why I am a cosponsor of H.R. 3858, a clean bill that would freeze Congressional pay.

However, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are playing politics with the federal workforce. It is shameful that some of my colleagues want to blame the federal workforce for our country's problems and to make them pay the cost for climbing out of the recession. These hard working men and women provide vital operational support to our military members; ensure our senior citizens receive their Social Security checks; protect our borders; ensure the safety of our environment, food, and water; treat our wounded veterans; and research cures for cancer and other deadly diseases.

The Federal Government is our country's largest employer, providing jobs to about 2 million civilian employees. Roughly 85 percent of the federal workforce is located outside the metro Washington, DC area. These federal families are facing the same economic challenges as families across America. Federal workers already are subject to a two year pay freeze that will save more than $60 billion over the next decade. An additional third year of pay freezes on federal employee salaries as proposed in today's legislation further undermines the federal government's ability to attract and retain the highest talent. It also threatens to close the pipeline of new talent moving up the federal civil service. A report from the Partnership for Public Service highlighted that employees with high-demand skills are those most likely to have alternative employment options.

Until we have the opportunity for a clean vote, I must urge a no vote on H.R. 3835, legislation that places too much cost on the federal workforce.

Mr. PIERLUISI. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3835, which would extend an existing pay freeze on federal employees for a third straight year, through December 2013.

Federal employees often forego private sector employment to serve our nation. They perform essential services, ensuring that our mail is delivered, that our Social Security checks are issued, and that our drinking water remains clean. Federal employees also investigate drug smuggling, issue patents, and provide health services and other benefits to our Island's veterans. These are only a few of the many functions that federal employees perform every day in their work for the American people.

Federal employees are willing to do their share to reduce the deficit. However, it is unfair to place the burden of reducing the deficit entirely on their backs. Federal employees have already contributed $60 billion toward deficit reduction by accepting a two-year pay freeze. We should not ask this one particular group to make additional sacrifices when we are not asking other Americans to make similar sacrifices.

I urge my colleagues to reject this bill and to treat federal employees with the respect they deserve.

Mr. KUCINICH. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3835, a bill to extend the pay limitation for Members of Congress and Federal employees. There is an attack on the idea that government has a role in the proper functioning of society. That battle has resulted in the privatization of government services, which leads to inefficiencies and higher bills for taxpayers. Across the country we are also seeing an attack on government workers who frequently work long hours in support of our great nation.

Federal employees have already sacrificed because of our shrinking budget. These men and women are members of the middle class, and they are already subject to an unwarranted two-year pay freeze in the form of a $5 billion cut to their wages and benefits by the end of 2012. They also face the possibility of layoffs and furloughs in coming years as automatic spending reductions mandated by the Budget Control Act of 2011 reduce agency budgets for salaries.

Federal employees are public servants who do work that is essential to this country every day: they guard our borders, care for our wounded veterans, deliver our mail, ensure the safety of our food supply, and provide many other sometimes invisible, but important services.

This bill inappropriately groups the pay and benefits of Members of Congress with the men and women of our federal civil service. In so doing, it attempts to turn Federal employee pay into a political issue. I am not opposed to extending the pay freeze for Members of Congress. However, I stand with the workers. The merits of pay increases for Federal employees should be debated separately from our consideration of pay for Members of Congress.

I stand with the workers; that is why I voted against this bill.

Ms. McCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3835, a bill that represents more of a political stunt by Republicans than an honest way to address the shared sacrifice needed across the Federal Government in these difficult fiscal times. Members were not allowed to consider a bill offered by Representative CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, H.R. 3858, that would have prevented members of Congress from receiving an automatic pay raise in 2013. I would have voted in favor of that bill. With so many Americans still looking for work and struggling to pay their bills, it is only fair and right that members of Congress put their needs first. However, Republicans chose to tie our salary freeze with those of Federal employees. Previously, they had not been linked. I regret that House Republicans thought it was more important to score political points than showing the American people that Members of Congress on a bipartisan basis support the existing Congressional pay freeze. Such actions only serve to deepen the cynicism of Americans who have grown increasingly fed up with the polarization of Congress.

Mr. WITTMAN. Madam Speaker, I don't think there is anyone in this country who supports increasing pay for Members of Congress. I certainly don't, which is why I voted in favor of H.R. 3835 on Wednesday. Throughout my tenure in this body, I have continually voted to cut, freeze, and otherwise limit pay for Members. With so many folks across Virginia's First District and the nation struggling to feed their families or find a job, Congress has got to lead by example and show that it is serious about tackling this country's economic woes in a responsible manner.

An important part of being responsible, however, is the ability to be fair, and I fear that H.R. 3835 sets an unfair precedent by targeting a particular group of public servants who are already tasked to do so much for their country: federal employees. Government workers have been under a pay freeze since December of 2010, and this legislation would extend that freeze through 2013. These hardworking patriots serve our nation on a daily basis, whether it be keeping our skies safe for travelers with the FAA or supporting our troops on the front lines of the war on terror with the CIA. From the lowest GS-1 to the highest GS-15, the federal workforce is full of dedicated and committed citizens who exemplify patriotism in everything they do. There is no question that changing the unsustainable trajectory of this nation will take sacrifice from us all, but continually singling out federal employees is an ineffective and unjustified response to the nation's fiscal struggles.

Although I have serious concerns with the federal employee pay freeze, I ultimately voted for this legislation because Congress must lead by example and freeze our own pay first. I would like to remind my colleagues that long after we are all gone, federal employees will continue to selflessly serve this nation, as they have since its inception. Repeatedly singling them out is no way to thank them for their dedicated contributions. I am hopeful that future deficit reduction efforts in this body will focus on more realistic methods of savings that truly address the drivers of our debt so that we can foster an environment of job creation and prosperity in this country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Ross) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3835.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Mr. ROSS of Florida. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

ADJUSTING EXPENSES OF CERTAIN HOUSE COMMITTEES IN 112TH CONGRESS

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 496) adjusting the amount provided for the expenses of certain committees of the House of Representatives in the One Hundred Twelfth Congress.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. RES. 496

Resolved,

SECTION 1. ADJUSTMENT OF AMOUNTS OF COM-MITTEE EXPENSES FOR THE ONE HUNDRED TWELFTH CONGRESS.

(a) AGGREGATE AMOUNT FOR CONGRESS.—Notwithstanding section 1(b) of House Resolution 147, the amount paid out of the applicable accounts of the House of Representatives with respect to the One Hundred Twelfth Congress for the expenses (including the expenses of all staff salaries) of each committee named in such section shall be as follows: Committee on Agriculture, $11,848,132; Committee on Armed Services, $14,900,023; Committee on the Budget, $11,680,246; Committee on Education and the Workforce, $16,158,348; Committee on Energy and Commerce, $21,678,149; Committee on Ethics, $6,218,310; Committee on Financial Services, $16.825.969; Committee on Foreign Affairs, $17,331,982; Committee on Homeland Security, $16,347,050; Committee on House Administration, $10,118,345; Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, $9,977,660; Committee on the Judiciary, $16,265,122; Committee on Natural Resources, $15,235,867: Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, $20,546,873; Committee on Rules, $6,566,883; Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, $12,671,660; Committee on Small Business, $6,598,427; Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, $19,195,872; Committee on Veterans' Affairs, $7,049,575; and Committee on Ways and Means, $18,975,444.

(b) SECOND SESSION LIMITATIONS.—Notwithstanding section 3(b) of House Resolution 147, the amount provided for the expenses of each committee named in such section which shall be available for expenses incurred during the period beginning at noon on January 3, 2012, and ending immediately before noon on January 3, 2013 shall be not more than the following: Committee on Agriculture, $5,658,638; Committee on Armed Services, Committee on the Budget, $7,374,759; $5,647,061; Committee on Education and the Workforce, $7,812,094; Committee on Energy and Commerce, $10,697,209; Committee on Ethics, $3,393,775; Committee on Financial Services, $8,384,705; Committee on Foreign Affairs, $8,379,512; Committee on Homeland Security, $7.903.326; Committee on House Administration, $5,169,169; Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, $4,823,910; Committee on the Judiciary, $7,863,716; Committee on Natural Resources, $7,366,101; Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, $9,933,819; Committee on Rules, $3,174,898; Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, $5,986,023; Committee on Small Business, $3,383,536; Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, $9,280,649; Committee on Veterans' Affairs, $3,446,830; and Committee on Ways and Means, $9,174,079.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BRADY) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Res. 496.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 496. This resolution adjusts the amounts provided for the expenses of the select and standing committees of the House of Representatives in the 112th Congress.

□ 1320

Last November, the Committee on House Administration held a full-day hearing at which we heard from our chairs and ranking members. At that hearing, we discussed how each committee absorbed the 5 percent budget reduction implemented at the beginning of the 112th Congress and how, as we continue to reduce government spending, they will manage additional reductions this year.

Madam Speaker, I know, as a committee chairman myself, that we face the difficult task of doing more with less. Yet I also know that my constituents, all of our constituents, need us to do more with less and to rein in government spending. Families have been required to tighten their belts, and they constantly ask us to do the very same thing. They do not suggest it is easy, because it has not been easy for them. But they ask of us that which they have asked of themselves. Today's economy has forced our constituents to sacrifice and, as I say, tighten their financial belts to make ends meet at home. Congress should not be and will not be immune.

While most committees are taking a 6.4 percent cut in line with the reduced funding levels of the 2012 legislative branch appropriation, certain committees faced with additional oversight responsibilities in 2012 were cut at a smaller percentage in order that they might be able to conduct their work.

Particularly daunting will be the Armed Services' charge of managing the automatic sequestration of $600 billion in defense cuts triggered by the Budget Control Act. And I hasten to add that is in addition to, or on top of, the $400 billion cut that is already being enforced by prior decisions by this Congress and the President.

In addition to Armed Services, the Ethics Committee, tasked with holding Members and staff to the highest ethical standards, has requested and will receive a reprieve from funding reductions.

To help offset these exceptions and match the reduced appropriations, we've identified and reduced authorizations of three committee budgets that we feel are able to absorb a slightly higher reduction in 2012. In addition to our committee, the Committee on House Administration, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, and the Committee on Small Business will receive a slightly higher reduction than the 6.4 percent applied to the remaining House committees.

Madam Speaker, as we've demonstrated over the past year, this House is committed to living within its means and leading by example by putting an end to excessive spending. Our committees do vitally important oversight of the executive branch and Federal agencies, and that ought to be underscored if we are, in fact, going to be successful in holding down and controlling spending in the executive branch. We, the legislative branch, are the extension of the people we represent in an oversight capacity, and that is an extremely important responsibility. Our committees, as I say, do vitally important oversight of the executive branch and our Federal agencies; and while these reductions in committee funding will require committees to allocate their resources more judiciously, I am confident, based on the hearing, that they are prudent and manageable.

Madam Speaker, these are extraordinary times. We face extraordinary debt, deficits, and unemployment. Trillion-dollar deficits year after year after year would be practically unheard of just a couple of years ago; yet, unfortunately, they have become commonplace. That is unacceptable. We haven't had an unemployment rate at the levels we have seen for such a sustained period of time since the Great Depression. Those are not facts that I like to recite on this floor, but those are the real facts that face our constituents every single day.

Unfortunately, my area, over the last several years, we have had a higher unemployment rate than that which has prevailed in this country. California has had an unemployment rate, I believe, that has been the third worst in the entire country. We are not immune from what is being felt by the rest of the country. And when I am home, as I am sure other Members have found in their districts when they are home, we constantly hear the refrain, Where are the jobs? And following that, we hear the refrain, Why don't you get your House in order, referring to the entire Federal Government. Why don't you bring spending under control, because we believe it has a specific and direct and immediate drag on our ability to create jobs in this country. That ought to be, along with national defense, homeland security, our greatest objective.

And so this is just a small part of our effort to be responsible. Through the adoption of this resolution and the 5 percent cut during our first session of the 112th Congress, this House is doing its job to step up to the plate and reduce spending and find cost savings wherever possible. We are taking bold steps to demonstrate our commitment to reduced spending and tighter budgets

This is not easy. I don't suggest it is. It is not easy to say that we are going to bring our budgets down and that our employees are not going to have increased salaries along with Members of Congress, but it is at least what we ought to do.

Combined, I would say these measures—that is, last year and this year—represent the largest percentage cut to committee budgets since the 104th Congress, when the House then adopted a resolution with an amendment by then-House Administration Committee Member JOHN BOEHNER to reduce committee funding by 30 percent.

Madam Speaker, H. Res. 496 was reported out of the committee in December, and I now look forward to its passage by the House. I support H. Res. 496 and urge my colleagues to do the same.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 496, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 496, which would reduce spending in most of the committees of the House by an average of 6.4 percent below the level provided in House Resolution 147, which was adopted last March. That resolution, which passed the House unanimously, cut committee funding 5 percent lower than the levels for the 111th Congress.

I've been pleased to work in a bipartisan fashion with my friend and my chair, Mr. LUNGREN, to find ways to reduce the cost of running Congress. We have worked together in finding cuts in printing, subscription, and technology services, and we have worked together opposing cuts to the Capitol Police and in providing for the safety of our visitors and our staff. But this deeper cut to committees is the wrong cut at the wrong time.

In reality, we have no idea what effect these new cuts will actually have on committee operations. Testimony at our committee's oversight hearing last November by both chairs and ranking members confirmed that additional budget cuts could undermine our ability to conduct legislative and oversight operations.

I am fearful that further cuts to committees could continue to handicap our ability to effectively oversee the executive branch. We are cutting deeply into committees who oversee billions of dollars of Federal spending. We may not agree on this resolution, but we certainly agree that Congress is the first watchdog on executive power and executive spending. We need the necessary tools, and they need the necessary tools, to do that work.

I urge my colleagues to defeat this resolution. I urge a "no" vote, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. At this time, Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. HARPER), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Elections on House Administration.

Mr. HARPER. Madam Speaker, as a member of the Committee on House Administration, I rise in support of H. Res. 496, the 2012 committee funding resolution, with full knowledge of the impact the reduced funding levels contained in this measure will have on the committee system.

For example, the chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, on which I also serve, stated during the day-long hearing on this resolution that his committee would not be able to hold valuable field hearings during 2012 and would have to restrict other committee activities. More severe still, more than one ranking member stated that committee staff would have to be laid off as a result of the funding reductions contained in the resolution. This is unfortunate, but many American families have faced reduced activities and layoffs as a result of the current economic times, and Congress cannot exempt itself from such pain.

This resolution will roll back committee funding to pre-2007 levels and is, I think, a necessary action as we cut spending throughout the Federal budget. The committee went to considerable lengths to be fair both to all the chairmen but also to the minority with no change made to the traditional funding split between the majority and minority. This resolution will mean that the current Congress will spend almost 10 percent less than the previous Congress did. It requires every Member of this body, in a nonpartisan manner, to participate in the austerity that the American people and the rest of their government are experiencing.

I commend Chairman LUNGREN for his work on this resolution, and I urge a "yes" vote on the resolution.

□ 1330

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia, Dr. GINGREY, who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Oversight on the House Administration Committee.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in strong support of H. Res. 496, offered by my good friend, the chairman of the House Administration Committee, Mr. LUNGREN.

With all due respect to the ranking member, Mr. Brady from Pennsylvania, I have to agree with the chairman that this runaway spending that we have seen occur over the last 4 to 6 years has got to stop. And the American people clearly, Madam Speaker, are looking to Members of Congress to tighten their own belt. And that's why I think it's very important that we give them the message that we're willing to cut our own salaries, we're really willing to cut our own benefit package. And we have done that; we have voted to do that.

And these cuts, as painful as they are in regard to our House committees—indeed, 9.5 percent when we include this cut over all of the committees, although we do cut the House Committee on Armed Services by a lesser amount, and we plus-up the House Ethics Committee, and we think that's very important.

It is so crucial that we bite the same bullet that everybody else has to bite. And this bloated spending, this runaway spending that occurred during the previous majority in this House has got to stop. Spending $850 billion on a failed stimulus program, increasing the deficit—doubling it, in fact—having over $1 trillion worth of deficit spending for now 4 years in a row when we anticipate the President's next budget, this has got to stop.

So we have to put our money where our mouth is, we have to walk the same walk as everybody else, and we have to tighten our belt. So, Madam Speaker, that's why I stand here today as a member of the Committee on House Administration and one of the subcommittee chairs in strongly endorsing and supporting these necessary, painful cuts in H. Res. 496. I hope we will have support on both sides of the aisle. I'm confident we will.

I respect, as I say, the ranking member. He's a great Member, he works in a bipartisan way, and that's what this is all about.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. NUGENT), a distinguished member of the House Administration Committee and the Rules Committee.

Mr. NUGENT. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution. This is an important resolution because it brings us back to the greatest cut since the 104th Congress.

You know, in tough times like today where the American people are pinching pennies to get by, shouldn't they have the same expectation of those that serve them in this great House? I believe they should.

You know, when talking to people in my district, they ask and say, what are you doing to get your house in order? By supporting this piece of legislation, this truly talks about cutting the spending in D.C. While it's a small amount comparative to the whole budget, it is the right step in the right direction. It is about doing more with less. The American people are doing that today. So why shouldn't this government do the same thing? I appreciate where the chairman, Mr. Lun-GREN, has brought us in regards to this important piece of legislation. It really moves us in the right direction.

Cuts across the board are tough; and if you notice what this committee did is it didn't cover everybody the same, didn't treat everybody the same. Under Chairman LUNGREN's leadership, and also the ranking member, they did it, I believe, in a bipartisan way, that didn't take away from the minority in regards to funding as it relates, nor differently than it did from the majority.

So, Madam Speaker, I strongly support this resolution as we move forward to cut the budget of committees in this House, just like the American people have had to cut their budgets in their house.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I continue to reserve.

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I'm prepared to close out the debate. I have no other speakers. So if the gentleman would finish his time, I would be happy to as well.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. I thank the gentleman again.

I urge my colleagues to defeat this resolution, and I urge a "no" vote.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I would just say that this is an effort on our part to give an example to the rest of the government. This will be a culmination of about a 10 percent cut overall to the committees of this House. We have had combined cuts in terms of our own MRAs, that is, the amount that each Member has for his budget. And I think as we go forward and having to make some very difficult decisions with respect to future controls of spending on the Federal establishment in its entirety, it will serve us well that we have shown the way, that we can make difficult decisions in this regard, and that this is an appropriate, responsible action to take.

With that, I would urge my colleagues to vote for H. Res. 496.

I yield back the balance of my time. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 496.

The question was taken; and (twothirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING THE PRINTING OF THE 25TH EDITION OF THE POCK-ET VERSION OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on House Administration be discharged from further consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 90) authorizing the printing of the 25th edition of the pocket version of the United States Constitution, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the concurrent resolution is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 90

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring),

SECTION 1. POCKET VERSION OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on House Concurrent Resolution 90.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO PRINT STAND-ARDS FOR ELECTRONIC POSTING OF HOUSE AND COMMITTEE DOC-UMENTS AND DATA

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Standards for the Electronic Posting of House and Committee Documents and Data, which were adopted by the Committee on House Administration on December 16, 2011, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on the Standards for the Electronic Posting of House and Committee Documents and Data.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

WELFARE INTEGRITY NOW FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES ACT OF 2011

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3567) to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to require States to implement policies to prevent assistance under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program from being used in strip clubs, casinos, and liquor stores, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The text of the bill is as follows:

H.R. 3567

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Welfare Integrity Now for Children and Families Act of 2011" or the "WIN for Children and Families Act".

SEC. 2. SPENDING POLICIES FOR ASSISTANCE UNDER STATE TANF PROGRAMS.

- (a) STATE REQUIREMENT.—Section 408(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 608(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
- "(12) STATE REQUIREMENT TO PREVENT UNAUTHORIZED SPENDING OF BENEFITS.—
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—A State to which a grant is made under section 403 shall maintain policies and practices as necessary to prevent assistance provided under the State program funded under this part from being used in any electronic benefit transfer transaction in—
- "(i) any liquor store;
- $\lq\lq$ (ii) any casino, gambling casino, or gaming establishment; or
- "(iii) any retail establishment which provides adult-oriented entertainment in which performers disrobe or perform in an unclothed state for entertainment.
- "(B) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—
- "(i) LIQUOR STORE.—The term 'liquor store' means any retail establishment which sells exclusively or primarily intoxicating liquor. Such term does not include a grocery store which sells both intoxicating liquor and groceries including staple foods (within the meaning of section 3(r) of the Food and Nutrition Act of 2008 (7 U.S.C. 2012(r))).
- "(ii) CASINO, GAMBLING CASINO, OR GAMING ESTABLISHMENT.—The terms 'casino', 'gambling casino', and 'gaming establishment' do not include a grocery store which sells groceries including such staple foods and which also offers, or is located within the same building or complex as, casino, gambling, or gaming activities.
- "(iii) ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER TRANS-ACTION.—The term 'electronic benefit transfer transaction' means the use of a credit or debit card service, automated teller machine, point-of-sale terminal, or access to an online system for the withdrawal of funds or the processing of a payment for merchandise or a service.".

- (b) PENALTY.—Section 409(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 609(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
- "(16) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO ENFORCE SPENDING POLICIES —
- "(A) IN GENERAL.—If, within 2 years after the date of the enactment of the WIN for Children and Families Act, any State has not reported to the Secretary on such State's implementation of the policies and practices required by section 408(a)(12), or the Secretary determines, based on the information provided in State reports, that any State has not implemented and maintained such policies and practices, the Secretary shall reduce, by an amount equal to 5 percent of the State family assistance grant, the grant payable to such State under section 403(a)(1) for—
- "(i) the fiscal year immediately succeeding the year in which such 2-year period ends; and
- "(ii) each succeeding fiscal year in which the State does not demonstrate that such State has implemented and maintained such policies and practices.
- "(B) REDUCTION OF APPLICABLE PENALTY.— The Secretary may reduce the amount of the reduction required under subparagraph (A) based on the degree of noncompliance of the State.
- "(C) STATE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR INDI-VIDUAL VIOLATIONS.—Fraudulent activity by any individual in an attempt to circumvent the policies and practices required by section 408(a)(12) shall not trigger a State penalty under subparagraph (A)."
- (c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 409(c)(4) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 609(c)(4)) is amended by striking "or (13)" and inserting "(13), or (16)".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. BOUSTANY) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the subject of the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise today, Madam Speaker, in support of H.R. 3567, a bill to ensure tax-payer dollars in the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program are used as intended, and that is to provide support for low-income families and children and to help them move from welfare to work.

The TANF program was created in 1996, replacing the prior welfare program with one focused on work, providing short-term help, child care, and other work supports to get people back on their feet and earning a paycheck. In the years following, TANF was lauded as one of the most effective reforms in our social welfare system in American history. Employment rates of those on welfare surged, caseloads plummeted, child poverty rates fell, and taxpayers were confident they were actually helping poor families, knowing that they were providing them with a hand up and not a handout.

Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, an issue has arisen in TANF that is eroding public confidence in the program. This is the issue of TANF funds, money meant to help poor children and their families, being accessed and used in liquor stores, strip clubs, and casinos. What started less than 2 years ago as research by one reporter in Los Angeles has grown into dozens of investigations across the country, with each new investigation adding to the story of how millions of dollars in TANF funds have been accessed in these locations.

Let me just mention some of what has been uncovered:

An Arizona investigation found welfare funds were accessed in liquor stores over 100 times in just 3 months;

A California reporter uncovered that welfare recipients cashed out over $4.8 million in TANF funds in casinos over a 3-year period;

A Colorado news organization found cash was being withdrawn in strip clubs, casinos, and liquor stores, despite a State law on the books prohibiting such transactions;

An investigative report in Georgia revealed $150,000 in TANF money was withdrawn in liquor stores, bars, and nightclubs:

KING 5 News in Seattle found 13,000 TANF recipients who had collectively withdrawn approximately $2 million from casinos in 2010.

Madam Speaker, this is unacceptable. This is unacceptable to the American people.

When the L.A. Times revealed their shocking statistics on the millions in welfare that had been accessed in casinos, liquor stores, and strip clubs, the Governor of California took action to block these transactions immediately. Washington and New Mexico have prohibited access to welfare benefits in casinos. Texas prohibits the use of welfare benefit cards in liquor stores and casinos as well.

The legislation before us today would ensure that taxpayer dollars in the TANF program are being used as intended, and that is to assist poor families with their basic needs and to support them in their efforts to become self-sufficient. Under this bill, States would be required to block welfare benefit card transactions in casinos, liquor stores, and strip clubs and would be penalized if they do not implement such policies within 2 years of this bill becoming law. company ends up having to settle for $158 million in my home State of Texas

This bill will also help restore the public's trust in the integrity of the program while ensuring families across the country continue to receive the assistance they need to move from government dependence to independence.

The bill we're considering today simply consists of one of the TANF provisions in H.R. 3659, the Welfare Integrity and Data Improvement Act that was unanimously passed in the House in December. A provision closing what has been called the "strip club loophole" was also included in the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act that also passed the House in December and is now in conference with the Senate.

With the exception of several technical changes suggested by the Department of Health and Human Services, it is also identical to bipartisan legislation introduced in the Senate last year by Senator HATCH and cosponsored by Senator BAUCUS, the ranking member and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, respectively. I thank them for their hard work on this bill as well.

Passing this bill today will send three clear messages:

First, the House is serious about this bipartisan, bicameral reform becoming law, ensuring welfare funds are spent on families and children as intended;

Second, conferees on the yearlong payroll tax, UI and TANF extenders bill, should include this bipartisan provision in their conference agreement;

Third, if those conference discussions break down, the Senate will be able to join us in quickly passing this important bipartisan reform and getting it to the President's desk.

I urge all my colleagues to support this important legislation.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I'm against fraud. I think everyone here is against it. I'm for what's in this bill. That's why I voted for it back in December, and I'll vote for it next month, too, if that will make for more cooperation here in the House. I think, in a way, this is this election year's "welfare Cadillac." And I was against welfare Cadillacs, if there ever were any of those, too.

This year, we have the "strip club loophole" that has been defined as a political term to suggest that we have a lot of problems with poor people abusing their benefits. And to the extent that any poor person abuses even a dollar of these benefits and keeps those benefits out of the mouths of hungry children, providing the clothes those kids need to go to school, I'm against that, and I plan to vote against it today.

I favor comprehensive legislation against fraud in public assistance. It concerns me when a pharmaceutical company ends up having to settle for $158 million in my home State of Texas because they allegedly lied about drug safety and bribed officials. It concerns me when a pharmaceutical company in the State of Texas has an $84 million Medicaid fraud case brought against it. I think we need to be concerned about fraud in all of its aspects.

I'd feel better about this bill, however—because I think repassing it will accomplish practically nothing, I'd feel much better about this legislative effort if there were just an ounce of the concern that is voiced about the very few people who abuse these benefits, if the same level of concern were expressed about the many who are there who are counting on the safety net, as flawed and frayed as it is, who were concerned about them and their families and their struggle to share in the American Dream and were doing something to get that approved.

Yes, we approved this piece of legislation as part of a broader extension of the Temporary Assistance to Needy Families program in December. And why hasn't that become law?

It is separate legislation pending in the Senate. It is also part of the broader legislation extending the provisions on unemployment, on payroll tax relief. It ought to become law because we need to be concerned about those families that are playing by the rules as well as the very few who are not playing by the rules.

Now, the gentleman has said that in some States action has already been taken—California, notably—to deal with the few who might be cashing their benefits at a casino or a liquor store or whatever. Texas, my home State, was cited as one of those States that has already taken action. I think that's great. There's not anything to keep the States from taking action on this already, if this is a serious problem.

Now, some of them have not acted, not because of a lack of concern about fraud but because the mechanics of correcting these electronic benefit cards may actually be more expensive than the cost that is being experienced by the small number of people that might abuse the card.

You take Arizona, for example. Governor Brewer has plenty of time to shake her finger in the face of the President of the United States, to support legislation to discriminate against Hispanic families, who have been in that State for longer than she and her family have been in the State. If she thinks this is a serious problem, why doesn't she act at the State level, as Texas and California and some other States have done, to address this problem?

I would submit, while I don't object to this legislation in and of itself, that the bigger problem that we face is that the number of poor American families has surged over the last 4 years, up 27 percent. Ten million people are below what is officially agreed on as being the poverty line. And this Temporary Assistance to Needy Families program provides a few of those families a little bit of assistance, to have a chance to turn their lives around until they can find longer term employment to provide for their families.

□ 1350

How much money are we talking about that might be abused or wasted at one of these facilities, which might just happen to be the maintenance crew at the casino that use their benefits there. Or it might just happen to be the only store convenient in a poor neighborhood is one that's mostly selling alcoholic beverages, that they choose to do that. How much might they be abusing?

Let me tell you in my home State of Texas the median benefit for a single parent with two children is $244 for an entire month to take care of those two children, 16 percent of the poverty level

I want to be concerned, yes, about a dollar that is wasted. These are hard-earned tax dollars that go into these programs. We need to be concerned about every cent of abuse. But we also need to be concerned about the many who stand to benefit, who stand to have hope taken away if they don't see these benefits extended.

My concern about that is not merely academic because of what happened last year, the bipartisan agreement that had extended through many years called the supplemental program, which was really a survival program for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families in poorer States like Texas. The Republicans chose to discontinue that program even though it had enjoyed bipartisan support and had received support letters from a number of Republican officials in our area. They chose to not continue that, and that has severely weakened the safety net in our State. That's not being contin-

Whether they intend to abandon the entire Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program or cut it back substantially, it's hard to tell, given the fact that they're going only with the very modest provisions of this bill and not pushing to provide assistance to all of those who need that help.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I am very pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Human Resources on the House Ways and Means Committee, the gentleman GEOFF DAVIS from the great State of Kentucky, the author of the TANF reauthorization, who cares deeply about the integrity of this program.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Madam Speaker, I would like to take a moment before speaking on this measure to respond to the gentleman's remark, my friend, the distinguished gentleman from Texas and ranking member on the subcommittee.

We've worked very hard over the last year on the issue of data standardization, correcting flaws in the system, got the first data standardization language in the history of the country, an act that would begin to address issues like this. I beg to respectfully disagree with the position that the ranking member took on this, talking about the idea of convenience with the casino or adult establishments.

As somebody who grew up in interesting circumstances and has done a lot of volunteer work over the last 30 years with folks with challenges, the first question that I would ask if somebody is in need of assistance is, what in the world are they doing using a card to get cash inside of a casino. I'm not impugning anybody's integrity, but as somebody who can look across the river from where I live where there are several casinos, there are more than enough establishments, and I think the deeper question that we have to address is how our funds are going to be used when we help those who are in need. There are legitimate needs that these people have, and we've got to make sure that this program is tight, that it has the integrity to function so that every dollar is going to meeting those basic needs. I think it's a very small thing to bring this type of integrity to the program.

I rise in support of H.R. 3567, the Welfare Integrity Now for Children and Families Act of 2011, introduced by my close friend from Louisiana, Congressman CHARLES BOUSTANY.

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, or TANF, is a program that provides support for low-income families and children that helps them to move from welfare to work. It was a successful reform since it replaced the New Deal-era welfare programs in 1996, and TANF has been successful at cutting welfare dependence by 57 percent.

Are there opportunities to improve the program, to strengthen the program? Absolutely. There are a variety of issues and core processes that need to be addressed to bring more private sector practices into the management and administration of the program, like the data standardization that I talked about earlier, to allow us to understand how funds are being used and how better to serve those who are being helped by providing information to those on the front line.

Even more importantly, though, by promoting work among single parents, who are the most common welfare recipients, it helps significantly reduce child poverty in female-headed families over time. Even at today's elevated unemployment rates, TANF continues to promote more work and earnings and less poverty.

Despite this overall progress, TANF can and should be strengthened. Recently, concern has been raised about TANF benefits being withdrawn and used at strip clubs, liquor stores, and casinos. This is inappropriate as a use of taxpayer dollars and an outright abuse of taxpayer trust. Indeed, as my colleague from Louisiana highlighted, many local news investigations and exposés have verified this unfortunate abuse of a well-intended program.

One of the most shocking reports to me was from King 5 News in Seattle, Washington. They discovered through an investigation that 13,000 TANF recipients withdrew approximately $2 million at casinos just in 2010.

I think it's very reasonable from an oversight position to ask the question, why are they in the casino in the first place? The use of these dollars can't possibly be meeting basic grocery needs and things like that in an establishment like that or any other type of adult establishment.

Luckily, some States like Washington, New Mexico, and Texas have begun to take action on a local basis, but I believe this is one issue that we need to address at the Federal level, at the core, first by stopping this problem as a symptom and then dealing with the deeper systemic and process issues that we can establish through data standardization and simple controls so these cards will not even work in such an establishment.

H.R. 3567 would close the so-called "strip club" loophole within 2 years of enactment. The States would be required to block welfare benefit card transactions in casinos, liquor stores, and strip clubs. In plain language, welfare benefits could no longer be accessed at any of these facilities.

The same provision was included in H.R. 3630, the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act, as well as H.R. 3659, a standalone TANF extension bill introduced by Congressman ERIK PAULSEN, both of which passed the House in December. This bipartisan, bicameral program integrity provision will safeguard taxpayer funds from abuse and ensure that TANF benefits will continue to provide a helping hand to families that are in need.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3567

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I commend the gentleman for his service as our subcommittee chair and on the data issue that will be important in reducing any kind of abuse of public assistance.

I now yield 2 minutes to my colleague from the Budget Committee and someone who's very knowledgeable about this, Ms. Moore from Wisconsin.

Ms. MOORE. Madam Speaker, I rise in strident opposition to the underlying bill. I think that it's fairly cynical in these tough economic times when half of all Americans are either in poverty or at the precipice of poverty the Republicans want to impose even more barriers on families trying to access much-needed benefits.

I really don't think that this bill adds to self-sufficiency of families but rather is just more mean-spirited berating of low-income people who are eligible for these benefits, much like the mythical welfare queen or even the food stamp President.

This bill that includes the provision that blocks EBT cards from being used at liquor stores, strip clubs, and casinos, the proponents of this argue that there is no reason to use EBT cards in places like this. But I say it is an issue of universal access. I mean, if you want to stop to buy gas for your automobile and you live in Nevada and you work at one of the clubs or hotels, or you're living in a food desert in Chicago where the closest ATM is a liquor store, what stops people from going to Whole Foods and using the ATM card there and then going to a casino? It is just another effort to berate those people who are in the lower class.

My colleague has already mentioned the additional burden that this imposes on States and financial institutions who will have to reconfigure thousands of ATMs.

My friends on the right side love to use the term "class warfare." And they love to say that we're just trying to pick on the 1 percent of this country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired. Mr. DOGGETT. I yield the gentlelady

1 additional minute.

Ms. MOORE. But I say who's really working for the least of these?

Instead of hindering the American people, we need to be helping them, to provide greater access. Instead of passing these unproductive, symbolic, mean-spirited pieces of legislation, we need to create jobs and opportunities. I hope that the American people, Madam Speaker, can see the difference.

□ 1400

Mr. BOUSTANY. I want to thank the gentlewoman for raising the concern about ensuring that TANF recipients have adequate access to their benefits in a variety of locations. That's a very important consideration.

This bill requires States to block access to welfare benefits in casinos, liquor stores, and strip clubs. However, we know some grocery stores, convenience stores, and local markets may sell groceries but also sell alcohol and that some States may have gambling machines there as well. Because of this, the bill allows States to make accommodations for such stores so that they would not have to block transactions in places that sell groceries but that also sell alcohol. If a grocery store happens to have a gaming machine or if it's located in the same building or complex as a casino, there are provisions made in this.

So I thank the gentlewoman for raising this issue, but I'm glad that we can ensure the integrity of this program. I would submit the most important thing we can do is to ensure the integrity of the program so that it is there for the children and families that need it. Yet we want to ensure that there is not an overt abuse of these funds in strip clubs, casinos, and liquor stores while allowing for reasonable exceptions.

Also, I thank the gentlelady and the ranking member from Texas for raising the concern as to the issue of implementation cost, and I want to address that as well.

Some States have expressed that we have a loophole that could potentially be too costly or too difficult to close. However, I want to point out that these difficulties have been overstated. Washington State said the same thing when it was told $2 million in TANF funds were being withdrawn in casinos in 1 year.

Madam Speaker, I submit for the RECORD an article from KING 5 News in Seattle, Washington, that speaks directly to this issue. It talks about the surprising number of TANF withdrawals in casinos in the State, and it reports the State said the same things that we're hearing today in that it may be hard to close this loophole or that it would be too expensive to stop.

This article goes on to read:

"It turns out the fix wasn't difficult or expensive. For the Iron Horse Casino, it took about 4 minutes on the phone. Kealy." the casino owner. "says, in minutes and at no cost, his ATM vendor blocked EBT cards . . . Kealy and many other casino owners didn't wait for orders from the State. They already reprogrammed their ATMs . . . He's a board member of the Washington Restaurant Association. which he says is preparing to ask bars and taverns—businesses that are more alcohol than food oriented—to block EBT access to their cash machines. Kealy says that would mean another 2,000 ATMs couldn't be accessed for welfare cash benefits."

So I appreciate the concerns about the cost, but I believe closing this loophole simply won't be as difficult as some are making it out to be.

[From KING5.com, Sept. 23, 2010]
MORE BUSINESSES MAY PULL PLUG ON WELFARE CASH CARDS
(By Chris Ingalls)

Many casinos in the state have taken steps to cut off the flow of cash to welfare recipients. This follows a KING 5 Investigation that showed millions of tax dollars being dispensed through casino cash machines.

Now we've learned thousands more ATMs could be blocked at other businesses where welfare dollars may not belong. Bars and taverns in Washington may follow the lead of casinos, which have already started reprogramming their ATMs so they won't dispense cash from EBT cards that are distributed to welfare recipients.

State records show the two ATMs at the Iron Horse Casino in Auburn dispensed $780 in welfare in the month of July alone.

"Whew! It's unbelievable," said Iron Horse customer Louie Vaccaro. "We have so many problems in this state. To hear something like that is mind boggling."

"I was surprised by that," says the casino's owner Chris Kealy. "I did not know those cards could be used at these machines."

Kealy saw our stories last week that showed more than $2 million in welfare cash withdrawn from ATMs in and around casinos in the last year. Initially the Department of Social and Health Services, DSHS, said putting a stop to those questionable withdrawals might be too difficult or costly.

"If we find that this is a small incidence that's happening, it might not justify the expense that it would try to prevent that activity," said Deputy DSHS secretary Troy Hutson in a story we aired last week.

It turns out the fix wasn't difficult or expensive. For the Iron Horse Casino, it took about four minutes on the phone. Kealy says in minutes, and at no cost, his ATM vendor blocked EBT cards—debit-type cards which DSHS uses to distribute cash benefits to 68,000 of the state's most needy residents.

Organizations representing both tribal and non-tribal gambling establishments in Washington pledged their full support when DSHS's secretary made an announcement two days after KING 5 Investigation aired.

"I want to shut down every ATM in gambling establishments that has EBT access," said Susan N. Drevfus.

Kealy and many other casino owners didn't wait for orders from the state. They already re-programmed their ATMs. And Kealy isn't stopping with his own casino. He's a board member of the Washington Restaurant Association, which he says is preparing to ask bars and taverns—businesses that are more alcohol than food oriented—to block EBT access to their cash machines. Kealy says that would mean another 2,000 ATMs couldn't be accessed for welfare cash benefits.

"The taxes you are paying are supposed to help fund basic needs, human services," Kealy says. "We're all in this together. I'm supportive of that. But I'm not supportive of those dollars being used in facilities like this."

Gambling is one of the few restrictions on the use of welfare cash. It is illegal. Welfare cheats can still get their money at other ATMs, but casinos hope to stack the deck against them and send the message that welfare dollars aren't welcome on gaming floors.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield myself 30 seconds to place into the RECORD a letter from the National Conference of State Legislatures as well as a letter from the American Public Human Services Association and the National Association of State TANF Administrators.

The gentleman may be right. He clearly lacks confidence in States' rights in these areas. The letter from the National Conference of State Legislatures points out that there is a financial burden that would be imposed on the States and that "the States have existing contracts with vendors that may have to be changed at a significant cost to the States." Let us hope that does not happen.

They come out firmly in opposition to this bill. I do not share that opposition, but I think they raise a legitimate concern about the added cost as well as the lack of confidence of my Republican colleagues in the ability of the States to police their own programs.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF STATE LEGISLATURES, January~30,~2012.

Hon. John Boehner, Speaker of the House, Washington, DC. Hon. NANCY PELOSI, Minority Leader, Washington, DC.

DEAR SPEAKER BOEHNER AND MINORITY LEADER PELOSI: On behalf of the National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL), we write in opposition to H.R. 3567, the "Welfare Integrity for Children and Families Act of 2011," which is scheduled for a vote on the Floor under Suspension of the Rules on Wednesday, February 1. States share your concern about the inappropriate use of Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) benefits; however, NCSL strongly believes that these decisions are appropriately made at the state level.

When Welfare Reform was enacted in 1996 (P.L. 104-193), state and federal policymakers agreed to forgo the open-ended entitlement of AFDC for the flexibility afforded in the fixed TANF block grant. In this agreement, policy decision making authority was left up to the states including state legislatures. Mandating states to limit Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) transactions preempts state authority over the TANF block grant and undermines the strong state-federal partnership undertaken in 1996. Additionally, NCSL is concerned about the financial burden this mandate would impose on states, many of whose fiscal situation is still perilous. States have existing contracts with EBT vendors that might need to be changed at significant cost to the state if this bill becomes law.

States are addressing the issues raised in H.R. 3567. To date, California and Washington have limited the use of EBT cards and addressed the complex implementation process of limiting EBT card usage. Many additional states are looking at similar EBT limitations and other ways to combat fraud and abuse in their current sessions.

If you have any questions regarding what states are doing to address the concerns of H.R. 3567 or to discuss the bill, please do not hesitate to contact Sheri Steisel (sheri.steisel@ncsl.org) or Emily Wengrovius (emily.wengrovius@ncsl.org).

Sincerely,

THE HONORABLE TOM
HANSEN,
South Dakota Senate,
Chair NCSL Human Services & Welfare Committee.
THE HONORABLE BARBARA
W. BALLARD,
Kansas House of Representatives, Chair
NCSL Human Services & Welfare Committee.

AMERICAN PUBLIC HUMAN SERVICES ASSOCIATION AND NATIONAL ASSO-CIATION OF STATE TANF ADMINIS-TRATORS.

Washington, DC, December 12, 2011.

Hon, MAX BAUCUS. Senator, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC. Hon. DAVID CAMP. Representative, Washington, DC. Hon. LLOYD DOGGETT, Representative, Washington, DC. Hon. ORRIN G. HATCH, Senator, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC. Hon. GEOFFREY DAVIS, Representative, Washington, DC Hon. SANDER M. LEVIN, Representative. Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BAUCUS, SENATOR HATCH, REPRESENTATIVE CAMP, REPRESENTATIVE LEVIN, REPRESENTATIVE DAVIS, AND REPRESENTATIVE DOGGETT: We are writing today to share our comments on provisions included in the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act of 2011.

The American Public Human Services Association (APHSA) and the National Association of State TANF Administrators (NASTA) represent the state health and human services commissioners and the state TANF administrators, respectively. Both APHSA and its TANF affiliate, NASTA, appreciate the need for a fair and flexible block grant program that also ensures accountability for the use of precious federal funds.

Therefore, on behalf of the state health and human service commissioners and the state TANF administrators, we would like to thank you for including proposed legislation that would guarantee funding security for state TANF programs for the remainder of the federal fiscal year. This is greatly appreciated as states continue to work with families dealing with the impacts of the recession. APHSA is also encouraged to see continued interest in improving the interoperability of data systems by establishing uniform, nonproprietary data elements. However, there is one provision of this language that our members find troubling.

Our members are concerned about the proposed mandate (Section 2304) included in this bill which would require states to develop and implement policies and procedures for state EBT cards, blocking their use at casinos, liquor stores and strip clubs. We believe that, at this moment, there is not enough known about the issue of potential EBT card abuse at these establishments to justify a federal mandate such as the one being proposed; furthermore, if a need does indeed exist for such legislation, we believe that it would be more appropriate for the issue to be addressed in a more thorough five-year reauthorization of the TANF program.

Currently, the Government Accountability Office is conducting an audit of ten states to determine what policies and practices are already in place to track and prohibit the use of EBT cards in specific circumstances or at certain venues. While some states have moved forward with implementation of policy that bars the use of EBT cards at certain types of businesses, not every state has seen the implementation of such a policy necessary, desirable, or cost-effective.

While blocking access to EBT cards at specific ATMs might be possible with existing technology, it is neither easy nor free of cost for the state. Most states do not have access to ATM addresses, only numeric codes, Shutting down ATMs requires considerable time (including on-site visits) to determine which codes are connected to ATMs in questionable locations, followed by constant monitoring to ensure that they remain inactive. Additionally, at this point it seems certain that some states will have more difficulty than others implementing this mandate due to differences in vendors or how their benefits system is set up. Finally, it is important to note that blocking ATM and/or POS device access at these locations will not prevent someone who is determined to patronize these businesses from making a withdrawal at a bank and spending that cash to purchase goods anywhere he or she wants.

APHSA and NASTA have cooperated fully with GAO in its work and we are very much looking forward to the results of the report. That being said, we hope that Congress appreciates that the passage of any legislation mandating policy changes, such as the one proposed in the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act, ought to happen only after GAO completes the work commissioned by Congress. The results of the GAO study will provide the necessary information to help determine how states have addressed this issue already and whether or not this is indeed an issue that requires new statutory language.

Again, the state commissioners and the state TANF administrators appreciate the stability provided by this bill for FY 2012 and look forward to the opportunity to discuss the TANF program, as well as the larger issue of integrated human services administration, in the year to come as Congress prepares for a thorough reauthorization of the TANF block grant. If you have any questions please contact Ron Smith or Robert Ek.

Sincerely,

TRACY L. WAREING,
Executive Director, APHSA.
PAUL LEFKOWITZ,
Chair, NASTA.

With that, Madam Speaker, I would yield 2 minutes to a former member of the House Ways and Means Committee, who is very familiar with these issues, and I hope a soon-to-return member of the House Ways and Means Committee, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. I thank the chairman very much for yielding.

As I listen to the debate and the discussion and as I listen to my colleague from Wisconsin talk about universal access, I am reminded of something that I read relative to the period of not just dissent but a takeover of Germany. I remember something that a rabbi said: They came for the Comunists. I was not a Communist. They came for the Socialists. I was not a Socialist. Then they came for me, and nobody was left.

It seems to me that, when we go after those individuals who are the most vulnerable people in our society and when we categorize and stereotype and make believe that if they get a card that they're going to be at the casino and that they're going to be at the strip joint, well, I can tell you that the people I know who get cards as TANF recipients are not usually found at a casino, and they're not found at a strip joint. As a matter of fact, if I thought that this legislation would provide one iota—one scintilla—of help for TANF recipients, I would be the first in line to support it. The reality is I don't believe it provides any help and that it does not provide any assistance, and I will certainly not be voting for it.

All lawmakers agree that we should limit waste, fraud and abuse of taxpayer dollars. We all agree that government assistance should be used for basic necessities, such as shelter and food. Unfortunately, the Republican bill is not a good faith effort to limit waste, fraud and abuse; in contrast, it fans the flames of prejudice with stereotypes portraying our Nation's poor as abusing government support. Simply put, this bill is a stereotype to rally the cry of the right wing that the poor in our country do not deserve government help.

Rather than proposing programs to spur the economy or get Americans working, this Republican leadership simply takes cheap political shots. There is no evidence of rampant abuse of federal assistance to fuel lewd and lascivious lifestyles. In the state of California that represents one third of the Nation's TANF caseload, over a 3 year period, only .04 percent of Electronic Benefit Transactions occurred at gaming establishments and only .001 percent at adult entertainment establishments. In Florida, over a two year period, only .03 percent of Electronic Benefit Transactions occurred at stores with liquor licenses and .06 percent at casinos or pari-mutuel betting locations. This is not widespread fraud and abuse, as the Republican bill will have you believe.

This bill is a false solution in search of a non-existent problem that serves to portray the poor as undeserving and fraudulent. The TANF extension is under consideration within the Payroll Tax Extension Conference. So, why is this provision on the Floor of the House this week moving separately? Solely to denigrate the poor and impugn their character to make the poor appear undeserving of government assistance.

If the Republican Leadership was serious about trying to address any potential fraud, they would have addressed this issue systematically in the context of reauthorization.

If the Republican Leadership was truly serious about addressing misuse of TANF dollars, they could have required States to detail how they are protecting against abuse while simultaneously ensuring that the state's response does not deny TANF recipients access to adequate access points and while ensuring that TANF recipients have Electronic Benefit access with minimal fees and surcharges.

If the Republican Leadership was truly serious about addressing possible misuse of TANF dollars effectively, they would have addressed the States' concerns about inability to regulate these transactions and the costly burden such government over-regulation would inflict. Indeed, the American Public Human Services Association and the National Association of State TANF Administrators have raised concern about whether there is truly a need for such legislation and about the costs of such policies.

If the Republican Leadership was truly serious about the use of TANF cards at certain establishments, they would have considered why low-income people may need to use ATMs located in these venues—mainly lack of access to a financial institution. In Illinois, an estimated 304,000 households have access to no bank, with an additional 773,000 households having only limited access to financial institutions. This is true in rural and urban areas. So, rather than trying to understand why a small percentage of low-income people use TANF cards in adult locations, the Republican Leadership declares, asserts, and decries these citizens are de-frauding the government.

I-along with all my colleagues-staunchly oppose waste, fraud and abuse of government dollars. However, the purpose of this bill is not to curb abuse; simply put, H.R. 3567 seeks to discredit the poor. Rather than suggesting ways to help the unemployed access well-paying jobs, rather than advancing ways to cut taxes for the middle-class, rather than proposing ways to help our elderly maintain affordable health care, and rather than identifying ways to stop using taxpayer dollars to subsidize billions of dollars in profits of the oil industry or the private airplanes and tax shelters of the ultra-wealthy, the Republican Leadership again targets the poor-characterizing them as cheats and frauds.

Unfortunately, I know that this smear campaign against Americans who are struggling will continue. I am sure we will soon see bills denigrating the unemployed, those needing food stamps, the homeless, people who have historically struggled with substance abuse, and people who have gone to jail and are trying to get their lives back on track.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the Human Resources Subcommittee, Mr. DAVIS.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. I do feel compelled to respond since Martin Niemoller—the famous German Christian pastor who was quoted after World War II when talking about inaction—was dealing with the issue of the Holocaust, the scale of which was so unbelievably beyond the pale of a small technical fix that we're talking about here that, I believe, the gentleman diminished the value of whatever argument he was making by even quoting him.

If I seem to recall my history correctly when I was running a business in 1996, during the welfare debate, Martin Niemoller was resurrected from the dead again, using the same quote that somehow, if we just touch anything that will provide integrity to our programs with which we want to help the poor, that, in fact, this is the march down the slippery slope to the complete takeover and removal of civil rights.

Come on, folks. This is a technical business discussion. If we were running a business together—and I believe the government should be run that way—I think we'd be sitting around a table in the operations room while planning ways to legitimately cut costs to more efficiently help our customers and to eliminate waste.

In using the gentleman's own argument that he brought up, this is the question again: If the vast majority—and I happen to agree with him—don't go in those places in the first place, why would we not want to put in a simple program control for that small percentage that does to prevent them from wasting taxpayer dollars?

From the casinos that we have across the river, from some of the economic hardship that comes from that and from my constituents who have families who have been damaged by this, I know, in walking inside any number of the casinos on the Ohio River, that I'm not seeing grocery stores, that I'm not seeing provisions for food. What I'm seeing are ATMs and access to free chips and for gambling—not to eat.

I think this begs the deeper question: To the average man or woman on the street, if we ask the question "Is it reasonable?" absolutely.

I want to bring us back to the central point here as to what this does. First is the idea that it costs too much, and I'll speak for my other life as a systems professional. The gentleman from Louisiana rightly pointed out that the fixing of the system is actually an easy thing to do, and we will find ready participation and cooperation from those who are involved because they understand the stakes in this. The goal of their businesses is not a further recvcling of poverty. The goal of their businesses is to make sure, to some degree. that money is not used in a manner that reflects poor stewardship. I think, ultimately, this is a backstop to assure that money that belongs to the United States taxpaver that's being given to them as assistance is going to be used in a proper manner.

At the end of the day, that refutes the baseline of these arguments—again, going back to the great success that our staffs have had and that the gentleman from Texas and I have had over the course of the last year to really begin to move serious, nonpartisan process reforms that will help to fix deficiencies in the system which are not Democrat or Republican at their root but are addressing real questions of broken processes.

If we were sitting there among ourselves in a business together that we were running or if we were sitting with our families and if we noticed that there were an issue, hey, we could put a stop to that and we could fix that. Why don't we do the same thing here? It's not an unreasonable request to look at that.

Again, some of the speakers are not on our subcommittee, and I think we've had great success in keeping the tone of the debate focused on the core process problems, not on extremely energetic and emotional rhetoric that really doesn't address this root issue. That would be my request as we move forward. This is a good fix. It is a cheap way to save taxpayer money to legitimately help those in need.

□ 1410

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Madam Speaker and Members, I came to the floor to address this issue. Despite the fact that I understand that it's kind of a good political issue in an election year where many people will use this to say I'm saving the government money and I'm keeping those folks on welfare who don't deserve government support anyway from using this money or this EBT card to have access in ways that will allow them to be in and take advantage of casinos and strip joints, et cetera, and it's a very sexy argument and it looks good and you'll get a lot of play off of it, so I understand that coming to the floor to protect the poor and the most vulnerable is not popular, but think about it, just think about it.

Many of you come from districts where there are liquor stores. These are small businesses, and most of these liquor stores now serve more other products than they do liquor. They have milk; they have juice; they have bread; they have meats. They have the kinds of things that many of these poor families need and they buy at liquor stores.

Why do they buy them at liquor stores? Because they're in these food deserts that you have heard the First Lady talk about, areas all over this country, whether it is rural or whether it is urban, where they don't have grocery stores. They don't have the big chains. All they have are these small business that are liquor stores who carry all of the products that a family could use to feed their family, not just liquor.

And so I would ask you to take a real close look at this and at least exclude the liquor stores. These small businesses are very important all over this country. Yes, they sell liquor. Many of us don't like the idea that even in some of these places there are problems, but the folks who go there don't have to buy liquor. If there are problems at any of these liquor stores, local law enforcement should do its job.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield the gentlelady 1 additional minute.

Ms. WATERS. And so when you include liquor stores, all you're doing is attacking some small businesses who are providing foodstuffs—not just liquor, but foodstuffs; not only in inner cities, but in rural communities—that families need. So this is punishment, this is being very harsh on the most vulnerable people in our society to include liquor stores in this group of stores that you would not like to have the welfare recipients use.

Again, I could go along with strip joints; I could go along with casinos. But as I travel across the country, I cannot go along with excluding liquor stores from being able to provide food that's needed to these poor families that live in these food deserts where there are no grocery stores, no chains, no other place for them. And when they have transportation problems, it really does wreak havoc on them trying to get even to a place where they could buy food.

So if you would understand that and work to try to make sure that this doesn't stay in here, I would appreciate it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentlewoman has again expired.

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield the gentlelady an additional 30 seconds.

 $\operatorname{Mr.}$  STARK. Would the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. WATERS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. STARK. Isn't it true that in most of the liquor stores and other establishments of that type they charge no fees for cashing the checks because they want people to get the cash to gamble? In many of our districts in California they don't have to go to these payday loan places and pay exorbitant fees to get a check cashed and so that it really, in many ways, it is helpful in our communities.

Ms. WATERS. It is very helpful. With the liquor stores, they help to stimulate the economy. They sell all of these foodstuffs. They hire a few people. Some families have three and four family members.

So, yes, I would ask that you exclude liquor stores from this consideration.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thought I made it clear, and I think Chairman Davis did also, earlier, that there are provisions to allow for exceptions as long as the facility serves food. We're talking about stores that purely sell liquor. So I think the gentlelady's concerns are addressed with the bill as written.

Furthermore, I would just say that on this side of the aisle, we care very deeply about this program. There's broad agreement it's a valuable program. It's worked.

If you care about children and you care about needy families in this country, then you should care about ensuring the integrity of the program and making sure that the dollars that taxpayers put forth for these needy families, these needy children, actually go to those families and not buying liquor and patronizing strip clubs and going to casinos.

That's what this bill intends to address. That's what it does address. It creates the proper flexibilities for the concern that the gentlelady has and others on the other side of the aisle have about access. If food is sold, access will not be denied.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DOGGETT. Well, I couldn't agree with the gentleman more about the importance of preserving, in his words, "the integrity of this program." That means that none of the public funds are wasted or used in an improper way, but it also means that the program's integrity is preserved to deliver the assistance that is needed for the many, many families that are playing by the rules and need a helping hand. And that's the only area we have difference in this regard as far as I personally am concerned.

The House has already spoken on this electronic benefits issue. I don't see any harm in the House speaking again this week or next week or next month—I don't see a great deal of gain from repassing it, but why not? But what I do see harm in is if the many, many people that are playing by the rules and need this assistance see their safety net shredded the way these same folks shredded the safety net last year when they did not renew the bipartisan TANF supplemental program that has been so important in poor States with large populations of poor people, like Texas.

There are families there, there are State programs there that are harmed by the unjustified refusal to extend that program. At least with what's left in the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program, which we passed here as a freestanding bill in December with this provision in it, let's pass that entire bill. Hopefully, this message says little more than say that the House still feels today the same way that it felt 6 weeks ago.

That's fine, but let's get this entire Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program approved and in place so the States and the families that depend upon it will have it there.

I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. There's some confusion about what is excluded or included. As I understand it, a liquor store that just sells just juice or milk would not be considered a store that sells food.

Is that correct? Is that your understanding?

I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BOUSTANY. If food products are sold at a store?

Ms. WATERS. Milk.

Mr. BOUSTANY. If any type of food product, including milk, is sold at a store, States can except those from the provisions in this bill.

Ms. WATERS. Reclaiming my time, that is not my understanding, and I would hope we could work together.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Would the gentle-woman yield?

tleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BOUSTANY. The definition is staple foods, which include milk.

Ms. WATERS. Milk is included in the

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I would ask if the gentleman has vielded back all of his time?

Mr. DOGGETT. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUSTANY. I am pleased to yield the remaining time to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. DAVIS), the chairman of the subcommittee, a gentleman who has diligently worked in good faith with the ranking member to reauthorize a TANF program with integrity that ensures that children and needy families get the assistance that they need.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized for the balance of the time which is 3 minutes.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Madam Speaker, again I remind all of my colleagues that when we talk about such matters, it's helpful to focus on tone. The one thing I'm going to respond to. when the comment was made "that you people shredded," I would have to remind all Members in the Chamber and the Speaker that, in fact, that was passed in a Democratic House when the Speaker was Ms. Pelosi and the leader of the Senate was Senator REID.

We have worked in good faith through this process. And what I would remind folks about the fundamental question as we look at this, the real issue here—and I grew up in a dysfunctional family. I know what it means to see dysfunctional alcoholism with a stepfather leaving and spending the money in places that were inappropriate; and I think it's a fair question, as someone who has lived that as a little boy, to say, wait a minute, if Dad wants to run off with the EBT card and go to one of the boats over in Indiana, we as a body have a responsibility. Democrat and Republican, who care very deeply for this country and for our citizens, to say wait a minute, that's not an appropriate use.

The businesses themselves will cooperate. There's a contextual issue to allow the States to deal with the specific uniqueness of providers of foodstuffs. But at the same time, I think that if an EBT card is being used in a place that may have a drink rack inside of it and pole dancers on the other end, that is not, under any standard of morality, a place where the EBT card should be used.

I can think of no mother who would want the money spent there. I can think of no circumstance that would justify it. And, frankly, having my own stepfather come home drunk and beat up me and my mother after running

Ms. WATERS. I yield to the gen- around out in town with what money she basically earned, I would say in this case it's unacceptable.

> Let's come back to the real world, and I'm not going to yield my time. Let's come back to the real world and look at the reality of this. What is being asked is a procedural and a process change to give better stewardship to a program on which we agree about the fundamentals, specifically, the data standardization and control. There's virtually no cost to this.

> I understand we have honest differences of opinion here; but I would appreciate that the rhetoric be toned down and we focus on the reality of this. If we ask any mom or dad or recipient or taxpayer out on the street this fundamental question, I think overwhelmingly, when they heard it in the context of reality and not sometimes the things that happen in the Chamber here, they would look at it from a different perspective. That's what we're asking.

> With that, I ask all Members to support this very reasonable, very measured, very balanced way to fix a flaw in a program that can be made better as a result of that, be better stewards of our taxpayer dollars. And with that, I urge passage.

> Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

> This bill closes a loophole that, if left uncorrected, would continue to allow millions in welfare funds to be distributed in liquor stores, casinos, and strip clubs.

> Now that this issue has been highlighted by news organizations across the country, we must stop this abuse of taxpayer funds and ensure this money is used as it should beto help poor children and families make ends

> A number of States have already closed this loophole, but this bill will help restore the public's confidence in the program and ensure that States work together to end this abuse once and for all.

> I strongly encourage my colleagues to support this measure, as they have done previously, so that we can ensure taxpayer dollars are used as they should be.

> Ms. LEE of California. Madam Speaker, as the Co-Founder of the Congressional Out of Poverty Caucus, I rise in strong opposition to this shameful bill, H.R. 3567.

> This is a distasteful and misleading bill that tries to make it seem like every American in poverty is somehow immoral or criminal.

> Nothing could be further from the truth. The vast majority of TANF recipients want nothing more than a good job to support their families and build a bridge to reach their American Dream.

> Now, no one wants TANF dollars to be spent in casinos or in adult entertainment venues, but this bill does nothing to actually prevent that. Shutting down ATM's in those locations doesn't stop the money being spent there. In addition, this bill would force states to certify nearly every small business as a nonliquor store and how are the standards to be established and maintained?

This bill would create an entire nation wide bureaucracy to address a problem that affects less than 4 one hundredths of one percent (.04%) of all TANF funds and would completely fail to save any money at all.

Instead of passing a jobs bill, Republicans are once again just looking to distract from the real issues, this time by attacking American families in need.

This bill is just a sad attempt to divide our nation by mimicking the Ronald Reagan myth about the Cadillac driving welfare queen. It was untrue then and it is still untrue today.

As a single mother who once relied on food stamps and assistance to get by during a very difficult period in my life, I am appalled to see Republican politicians attack struggling American families just because they need a helping hand. TANF benefits keep children in homes and in school. TANF benefits keep American families from suffering abject poverty.

What we should be doing is helping these families reignite their American Dreams. not making blanket accusations against every low income family in America.

Mr. PAULSEN. Madam Speaker, thank you and thank you Dr. BOUSTANY for introducing this legislation.

I rise today as a co-sponsor of H.R. 3567. the Welfare Integrity Now for Children and Families Act because at a time when millions of Americans are still out of work, and our economy is struggling to recover, we must take every step available to safeguard taxpayer dollars.

Madam Speaker, between January of 2007 and June of 2010 nearly $5 million in stateissued benefits were withdrawn from ATMs in California casinos alone.

We need to correct this problem, and H.R. 3567 does just that.

This provision requires all states to take steps to end this abusive practice, safeguarding taxpayer funds from abuse by ensuring that welfare funds are not accessed in strip clubs, liquor stores, and casinos-a practice which has been highlighted in news stories across the country.

This bill ensures all states take action to close this loophole. I note that this policy is the same as that introduced by Senators HATCH and BAUCUS, the Ranking Member and Chairman, respectively, of the Senate Finance Committee, so it has strong support in the other body as well.

Let's continue the momentum, pass this legislation, and prove to the American people that we are here to get things done in 2012.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Speaker, last week I voted against the so called "Welfare Integrity Now for Children and Families Act of 2011. H.R. 3567.

H.R. 3567 would require states to prevent the use of Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program benefits in a liquor store, casino, or strip club.

This bill is being disguised as one that would ensure taxpayer dollars are being appropriately spent. In reality, this bill is being brought to the floor to demean individuals who rely on TANF benefits and to imply that they are immoral.

It is ludicrous to suggest that there is a national problem necessitating that Congress stop TANF recipients from spending their money at strip clubs.

TANF is a long-standing program, previously known as Aid for Families of Dependent Children, that is one of the most important parts of our national safety net and that keeps almost 2 million families from the brink of starvation.

What is missing from this bill is any discussion that in many underserved neighborhoods, the closest ATM is located in one of these establishments. Preventing the use of TANF cards at these establishments could result in TANF beneficiaries not being able to access their benefits. Instead of debating how Congress could pass laws that would help with economic redevelopment in underserved communities, we are spending our time vilifying individuals receiving benefits and then sanctimoniously taking credit for preventing any misseek to demean the President by calling him the food stamp President.

Further, this bill would cost money—not save it. In New Jersey, it is estimated that this bill would cost $100,000 to implement and Governor Christie's office wrote to express their concerns about the bill.

For a bill that is supposed to be ensuring that taxpayer dollars are being well spent, this bill would hinder individuals from obtaining their legitimate benefits and cost states more money. Every Member of Congress should have opposed this bill which was more offensive than silly.

H.R. 1173 is another attempt by the Republicans to embarrass individuals who are on hard economic times instead of helping them find a job.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. BOUSTANY) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3567, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOUSTANY). Pursuant to House Resolution 522 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 1173.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1173) to repeal the CLASS program, with Mrs. MILLER of Michigan in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The CHAIR. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered read the first time.

General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed 1 hour, with 40 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and 20 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) each will control 20 minutes. The gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. BOUSTANY) and the gentleman from California (Mr. STARK) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, it has been more than 2 years since the CLASS Act was first debated as part of the President's health care takeover debate. We knew then that the program was flawed and unworkable; yet the Democratic-controlled Congress ignored these concerns and instead rushed the CLASS program through as part of the President's health care law.

Now, 2 years and more than $800 billion later, we have finally heard from the President and his administration that while they have wasted taxpayer dollars, this program is in fact not implementable. Surprised? Well, you shouldn't be.

The truth is that unbiased analysts such as the American Academy of Actuaries had raised concerns with the program as early as July of 2009, some 5 months before the President's plan was even considered on the Senate floor. Members from both sides of the aisle also raised concerns about the program's long-term sustainability during this debate. Most disturbing is what we came to find in a bicameral investigation last year that revealed concerns from within HHS were rampant during PPACA debate, but they were never brought to light by the Democratic leadership or the Obama administration. Yet the program was rushed through so that we can, as then-Speaker Pelosi noted, "find out what's in it.'

On October 14, 2011, Secretary Sebelius announced what honest accounting told us was inevitable: the Obama administration finally admitted there was no viable path forward and, therefore, was halting any further efforts of implementing the CLASS program.

The failure of Health and Human Services to implement the CLASS program certainly is not a surprise. However, it is a catastrophic consequence of what happens when Congress rushes to enact costly policies and dismisses warnings from independent experts. Most troubling are the budget gimmicks used to sell the CLASS program and, indeed, the entire law.

The Congressional Budget Office, CBO, estimated the CLASS program would save money by collecting premiums from enrollees, premiums that will now never be collected in light of a failed implementation.

We knew, Madam Chair, the savings estimates for the President's health care plan were wrong. It defied common sense that such a massive spending expansion would have no cost. Now the President will have to explain to the American people why the health care law—ObamaCare, PPACA, Patient Protection, Affordable Care Act, Unaffordable Care Act—he'll now have to explain to the American people why this health care law will cost them $80-plus billion more than what they were told

□ 1430

That is more than $80 billion on top of the trillions the President has added to the books since he took office in January of 2009.

Today, we will have the opportunity to start over on long-term care reform, an issue that's important to all of us as we hear from constituents regularly about the growing cost of long-term care services. The market has not even been penetrated 10 percent, Madam Chair. We will now begin that process. But first, we must take this section out of the health care bill known as CLASS. We must take it off the books.

I urge my colleagues to support just what this bill does, remove CLASS from the statute, H.R. 1173, repeal the failed CLASS program so that we can now move forward with reforms that do work.

With that, Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, there are millions of Americans currently in need of a longterm care program and many more that will require these services in the future. Despite the great achievements of our country, the U.S. lacks an affordable and ethical system of financing long-term care services. CLASS program is a significant step towards finding a realistic solution to this problem. However, many of my Republican colleagues have taken a stance against CLASS without proposing any real solutions for long-term care access in America, and I strongly oppose H.R. 1173 and consider it to be a blatant disregard of a growing crisis in sumers while saving Medicaid dollars. this country.

American families have too few long-

Madam Chair, Republicans continue to propose repeal of various aspects of the Affordable Care Act. We heard my colleague from Georgia today. And how many other times how many on the other side have said, well, let's just repeal the Affordable Care Act, let's repeal pieces of the Affordable Care Act? But they never come up with any meaningful alternatives. And the same is true today. They're talking about outright repeal of CLASS without any meaningful suggestion of an alternative.

My message to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle is that we should mend the CLASS Act and not end it. This country is already facing a longterm care crisis, but the problem is only going to get worse. As our population continues to age, an estimated 15 million people are expected to need some sort of long-term care support by 2020. If we don't solve the need for affordable long-term care in this country soon, we will also jeopardize our entitlement programs. Currently, Medicaid pays 50 percent of the cost of long-term services, and that price tag is quickly rising every year. The CLASS program was designed to allow people to stay at home and prevent the cost of nursing home care that burdened Medicaid.

Now, I want to correct one thing. I know in the Rules Committee some of my colleagues talk about the administration's position on this bill. The administration made it quite clear in a hearing that we had on this bill that they're opposed to repeal of the CLASS Act. They acknowledge that there are workable solutions under the CLASS program, but didn't feel that they have the legal authority—I stress legal authority—to implement them. So the Department of Health and Human Services has more work to do, and I have suggested on numerous occasions that the CLASS Advisory Council, which is organized under the legislation, be convened in order to offer their expertise.

The CLASS program is a framework that will facilitate a solution to our long-term care crisis. However, all I continue to hear from my colleagues on the other side of the aisle is that Congress can't do anything. It's this negative attitude, the idea that Congress can't address any problem. And I just sincerely hope that my colleagues, when they come to the table, come up with a workable solution. Don't just tell me we have to repeal things, we can't do anything, and the government can't do anything. Cowardly running away from the problem through repeal is simply not the answer.

Overall, the CLASS Act promotes personal responsibility and independence. Those are the values that you talk about a lot. It allows the government to put choice in the hands of consumers while saving Medicaid dollars. American families have too few long-term care options, and they need our help. Rather than repeal CLASS, we need to continue the dialog in the development of a viable plan forward.

Again, let's mend it, not end it. Moving forward with H.R. 1173 shuts the door on a problem that simply cannot be ignored.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Lance), a very valued member of the Subcommittee on Health.

Mr. LANCE. Madam Chair, I rise today in support of repealing the CLASS Act.

In hearings before the Energy and Commerce Committee, my colleagues and I learned that the CLASS program was a ticking time bomb fiscally, a new entitlement program that Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius has said is "totally unsustainable" financially. Richard Foster, chief actuary of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, wrote in 2009: "Thirty-six years of actuarial experience lead me to believe that this program would collapse in short order and require significant Federal subsidies to continue." And Senate Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad has called the CLASS program "a Ponzi scheme of the first order." To her credit. Secretary Sebelius in October called for an end of the CLASS program, adding that there was not "a viable path forward for CLASS implementation at this time."

Madam Chair, we have a serious longterm care problem that is driving patients into bankruptcy and weighing down an overburdened Medicaid program. But before we can develop bipartisan solutions to address this important issue, we must first repeal the misguided CLASS program. Only then can we begin anew and properly address the long-term health care problem

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield such time as he may consume to the ranking member of the full committee, Mr. WAXMAN.

Mr. WAXMAN. Thank you for yielding that time to me, Mr. PALLONE.

Madam Chair, I rise today in strong opposition to H.R. 1173. This bill is another Republican attempt to tear down and dismantle programs that provide health care in the United States. Now we have Medicare, and the Republican alternative to Medicare is to just shift more costs on to seniors, give them a voucher and let them pay more if they want more than that voucher will provide, and that voucher is not going to provide much over time.

On Medicaid, they just want to shift the costs on to the States so the States can tell a lot of very poor people, I'm sorry, we don't have enough money to take care of you, but we're not required to under Federal law. They said that they didn't want the Affordable Care Act; they wanted to repeal it. But they haven't told us what they want to put in its place. They said that this was going to be repeal and replace. They have proposed a repeal, but we have no proposal to replace it.

Republicans now want to take a part of the Affordable Care Act, the CLASS program, that is the one and only significant new initiative to put in place to deal with our country's long-term care crisis. Those who are supporting this bill say that the CLASS Act is not the right solution to our long-term care problem. Well, I don't think it's perfect, either. But the solution is to amend the program, to make it work, not just repeal it and leave nothing in its place.

If we leave nothing in its place, we have the status quo. And what does the status quo mean? The status quo means that for some who are on Medicare, they will have a minimal amount of coverage for their long-term care services. And to get any other help, people will have to go through the indignity of impoverishing themselves. A system that is in place for the very poor would be called upon then, the Medicaid system, to cover their longterm care needs, especially if they had to go to a nursing home. Well, many elderly and disabled individuals will be forced to leave their families and community of friends for institutionalization because that's all that some States will cover.

Families will have to do what they call "spend down." They have to spend their money until they're in poverty. So they lose their dignity along the way in order to qualify for Medicaid assistance. The CLASS Act was trying to take some of the burden off Medicaid, some of the indignity away from seniors. Medicaid expenditures for the most part are paying for long-term care, and that will escalate even further. In 2010 alone, Medicaid spending for these services cost some $120 billion.

$\sqcap$ 1440

And we have a baby boomer population that is continuing to age. The number of Americans in need of long-term care assistance will grow, compounding each of these problems.

So what is the Republican answer to this problem? Nothing. Just repeal the program that attempts to give some effort to deal with these costs for people who need long-term care.

Let's not lose this incremental piece. Let's figure out how to add on to it, how to change it, but don't repeal it.

I urge my colleagues to reject H.R. 1173

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I just want to remind everyone that under the CLASS Act there's not one person in the United States who would receive long-term care benefits under that act because it doesn't work.

At this time I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. McKinley).

Mr. McKINLEY. Madam Chair, I rise today in favor of H.R. 1173. This bill would save hardworking taxpayer dollars and eliminate a costly and flawed ObamaCare provision known as the CLASS Act.

This program was sold as a self-sustaining program, one that would reduce Federal spending. However, the program was problematic from the start. The President and the Democrat leadership in the Congress knew this fact over  $2\frac{1}{2}$  years ago and still included the CLASS program in the health care bill.

During an investigation, it was revealed that Obama administration officials and Senate Democrats were very much aware that this was not going to work and that Department officials warned for a year before passage that the CLASS program would be a fiscal disaster. As far back as May of 2009, the CMS Chief Actuary sent an email that warned officials that the program doesn't look workable. These 200 pages of exhibits from the investigation show that Department officials were voicing concern to Senate leadership all the way up until passage in December of 2009. This was all concealed from Congress and the American public.

After enactment, the concerns continued. On February of 2011, Secretary Sebelius testified before the Senate Finance Committee that the CLASS program is totally unsustainable in its present form. And finally, this past October, the Department announced that the program was still not financially feasible. What we are seeing now is that, as well intended as it is, the CLASS program is unworkable.

The objective of providing long-term health care is laudable and should be a priority of Congress. Therefore, we must identify a long-term, commonsense solution for our health care. That is why last week I asked GAO to conduct a study of the Medicaid Long-Term Care Partnership Program and survey States on how to improve the partnership program so that more Americans can properly plan for their long-term care needs.

This public-private partnership between States and long-term care insurance plans was designed to reduce Medicaid expenditures by lessening the need for some people to rely on Medicaid to pay for long-term health care services.

The partnership program is not the only solution to our long-term health care, but it is a helpful tool to help Americans plan for their health care long-term needs, unlike the unsustainable and costly CLASS Act embedded in ObamaCare.

The repeal of the CLASS Act marks a small victory. Let's not try to force this costly program on the backs of hardworking American taxpayers without fully investigating how we can improve existing programs or how we can create an affordable, sustainable, long-term care program.

I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" on H.R. 1173.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield 2 minutes to the champion for senior citizens, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. Schakowsky).

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I thank the gentleman.

You know, there's a lot of areas of agreement. We all agree that we're in the midst of a long-term care crisis. We agree that today there are 10 million Americans in need of long-term care services and support. By 2020, that number will grow to 15 million, and by 2050, the number of seniors who need long-term care will reach 26 million.

The costs associated with long-term care are high. We agree on that. Nursing homes can cost over $70,000 a year, and 20 hours a week of home care can cost nearly $20,000. But repealing the CLASS Act does nothing to address the glaring need for adequate coverage of long-term care services and support. The CLASS Act addressed a number of critical needs, including providing a way for persons with disabilities to remain independent in their community and bringing private dollars into the long-term services system to reduce reliance on Medicaid without impoverishing individuals and families. We agree that the CLASS Act is far from perfect, but it does provide a framework to begin to deal with the problem.

So it seems to me if we all agree on the need, not only the need for long-term care but the need to do better, then instead of repealing the CLASS Act and passing H.R. 1173 with no effective alternative, we could, right now today, sit down and work together to repair this program. Ignoring it or even postponing this long-term care crisis simply is not going to make it go

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chair, I'd like to speak to H.R. 1173, the Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011, which repeals the CLASS program which was rushed into law in the President's health reform bill.

Last February, HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius publicly admitted that the more than $80 billion CLASS Act was "totally unsustainable." But it was not until 8 months later, on October 14, that the Department of Health and Human Services announced it was not moving forward with the implementation of the CLASS program "at this time."

On October 26, 2011, Assistant Secretary Kathy Greenlee testified before our subcommittee that the Department had spent $5 million in 2010 and 2011 trying to implement the program. The Secretary's conclusion that the CLASS program could not meet the law's 75year solvency requirement and was not sustainable was not a surprise to anyone who had been following the issue. Even before its inclusion in the President's health care law, PPACA, in March of 2010, we were warned by the administration's own actuary, the American Academy of Actuaries; Members of Congress from both parties; and outside experts that the program would not be fiscally sustainable. On July 9, 2009, approximately 8 months before PPACA was signed into law, CMS's own actuary, Richard Foster, wrote "36 years of actuarial experience lead me to believe that this program would collapse in short order and require significant Federal subsidies to continue.'

I support the intent behind the CLASS program to help Americans purchase long-term care policies that most of us will end up needing at some point, but only about 9 million Americans actually purchase. Long-term care costs are frighteningly high, and many Americans face bankruptcy or ending up on Medicaid, or both, in order to get the care they need.

But while the goals of the program were worthy, good intentions do not make up for fundamentally flawed, actuarially unsound policies designed to show the illusion of savings. The President has left us with a budget hole of more than $80 billion. The irresponsible nature of the CLASS program's inclusion in the health care law is just a sample of the budget gimmicks used to pass the health care law in the dark of the night nearly 2 years ago. The President will have to explain why, years later, the taxpayers are left with a failed program that will cost this Nation at least $80 billion. That is more than 150 Solyndra scandals.

□ 1450

Shelving this failed program is not enough. As long as it is on the books, it will continue to create substantial uncertainty in the private sector about what the government's role in long-term care insurance will be. Let's repeal the CLASS program, not try to tinker around the edges of a fundamentally flawed model, and take up real solutions to this problem instead.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1173, to repeal the failed CLASS program so that we can move forward with reforms that work.

And with that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. I yield, Madam Chair, 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS).

Mrs. CAPPS. I thank my colleague from New Jersey for yielding.

Madam Chair, I rise today in opposition to this bill. We all know that we have a long-term care crisis in this country. What we have now is an unsustainable patchwork approach, with wealthy people having access to private plans, while almost everyone else finds the costs incredibly prohibi-

These are the folks who fall through the cracks every day, spending down all their assets until there's nothing left, and then relying on our strained Medicaid program for care. This is what the CLASS program tries to avoid. It should provide a modest, but meaningful, benefit to individuals who need support to stay out of costly nursing homes, benefits they've already paid into.

We can all agree that the CLASS program, as currently written in the statute, is not perfect, but few things are. We can use it as a framework upon which to fix and implement this program, one that would be amended, improved and made sustainable, rather than destroyed.

Repealing the CLASS Act does not remove the Nation's need for long-term care. Rather, it makes the path to sustainable solutions much more difficult. Moreover, in the majority's rush to repeal, they have overlooked a vital component that will also be affected by this bill, the National Clearinghouse for Long Term Care.

The clearinghouse, which was established with close-to-unanimous Republican support, is the only dedicated place for individuals to learn about their long-term care options. However, a vote for this bill is a vote to strip funding from this vital public resource. In fact, the original bill abolished the program altogether until I fought to save it in our committee.

And while the authorization has been saved, we all know that a program without any funding is not much of a program. So the result is yet one more obstacle for American families trying to care for their loved ones. These are the people who will lose out, and definitely lose out by this repeal.

So I strongly urge my colleagues to vote against this bill.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair. I vield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Lipinski).

Mr. LIPINSKI. I rise today in support of fiscal responsibility and in support of H.R. 1173. The CLASS program was created with a good intention, relieving the crushing burden of long-term care. But we have known from the beginning that this program would not be able to sustain itself without a massive bailout from taxpayers. The CBO said so. Medicare's Chief Actuary said so; and, more recently, Secretary Sebelius concluded the CLASS Act was totally unsustainable and decided not to implement it; and for this, I give her cred-

But the program is still in law. And given the trillion-dollar deficits that we face, the only option right now is to knowledged the program is unworkable make sure that the taxpayers are not left with an unsustainable program in a big bill.

This debate should not be about the health care law in general. It should be about this program. It should be about doing what is fiscally responsible, and that is eliminating the CLASS program and getting to work right now in a bipartisan manner on a solution to long-term care.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair. can I inquire how much time remains on each side.

The Acting CHAIR (Mrs. EMERSON). The gentleman from New Jersey has 9 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 7½ minutes re-

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, at this time I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yield-

H.R. 1173 would eliminate the potential for many of our citizens to be able to afford long-term care that provides services and other supports. This effort to remove support services is not the solution, but instead a faulty and irresponsible policy initiative which would burden people in our health systems. Regardless of when individuals may need these services, there is a lack of financing options to help them pay for the services they need to maintain their health, independence, and dignity when they lose the capacity to perform basic daily activities without assist-

Medicare does provide limited pay for long-term care services. Medicaid does cover, but pays only for services for people with very limited means. Many private long-term care insurance plans are costly and difficult to acquire. I say that the real answer is to retain services that we are currently poised to provide

I oppose H.R. 1173.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. GUTHRIE).

Mr. GUTHRIE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise today in support of H.R. 1173, to repeal the CLASS Act established in the Patient Protection Affordable Care

The CLASS Act was unsustainable and unworkable from the time it was enacted. Even at the time the health care bill was passed, it was evident that the health care program was completely unworkable. The CLASS Act is such an egregious budget gimmick that even Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius has admitted the program is unsustainable.

Repeal of the CLASS Act isn't as scary as those on the other side would have you think it would be. In fact, the Obama administration has already acin its current form and has halted efforts to establish the program. However, the CLASS Act remains on the books.

I strongly support ensuring Americans have access to long-term care. In order to move forward with a new plan, we need to get the CLASS Act off the books.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. Delauro).

Ms. DELAURO. I rise in strong opposition to the repeal of the CLASS Act.

We are at another start of another session of the Congress, and this majority is following the same playbook as last year. The American people are waiting for this institution to do something—anything—to create jobs and restore our economic prosperity instead of putting forward ideological bills that have nothing to do with jobs and that are intended to roll back health care and senior care in America. Right now, less than 10 percent of Americans over 50 have long-term health care insurance, even though a large percentage of individuals will need long-term care services at some point.

Some studies indicate that up to twothirds of Americans that live beyond 65 will need long-term care. The CLASS Act, a bipartisan addition to the 2010 health reform, seeks to help provide access to quality, affordable insurance for long-term care. The program must be actuarially sound and legally solid.

Why would we repeal this bill? It is time for the majority to stop playing games and to get serious about fixing the economy. America needs more jobs, not less health care.

I urge my colleagues to stand up for seniors and oppose this repeal.

Mr. PITTS. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Doggett).

Mr. DOGGETT. Is it just too much to ask that seniors that are struggling in a nursing home after a lifetime of work get a little economic security, that they get a little dignity? Is it too much to bring just a little peace of mind to a family that is burdened with a parent that is suffering from Alzheimer's or some other debilitating condition? Sadly, this does appear to be too much to ask from some here.

One year ago, the House Republican majority's first major action, once they gained control of Congress, was to repeal health insurance reform. At the time they did that, they said they were for "repeal and replace." But the only replacement they offered for their repeal was a little flimsy 1½-page bill that I call "the 12 platitudes."

They proved to be only platitudes because during the intervening months, health care or any other kind of health care for the American people.

Today, they continue to deny Americans actual solutions to health care problems, and once again, they have a flimsy 1½ page bill. They don't have "repeal and replace," they have "repeal and deny." They're in a state of denial that there is a problem with long-term care, and they continue to deny meaningful relief to families that are struggling with health care bills, and particularly, long-term health care bills.

There is a 75 percent chance that some American who reaches age 65 will find themselves in need of long-term care. Paying for that care can bankrupt a family and the children of a parent who needs that kind of care. An average cost for nursing home services, for example, of $70,000 can surely and quickly sink a lifetime of savings.

The CLASS Act is far from perfect. It needs to be changed. But instead of repealing it, we ought to be focusing on necessary changes. Where is the commitment to doing something about long-term care? There haven't even been hearings on how to resolve this problem.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PALLONE. I yield the gentleman

another 30 seconds. Mr. DOGGETT. There was a legendary Texas House Speaker of this body, Sam Rayburn, who said that it takes a master carpenter to build a barn but any mule, I think he said, can tear one down.

Well, it's time that we get together to build a solution for long-term health care, not just tear it down.

Mr. PITTS. It is unconscionable to promise something to people when you know it won't be there.

Your own administration admits the CLASS Act doesn't work. Zero people will be enrolled in the CLASS Act. They have a program that does not work, a program they know that does not work. That is building a false sense of security in people instead of working on the real policy.

I yield 2 minutes at this time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HEN-SARLING), our conference chair.

Mr. HENSARLING. Madam Chair, it is clear that the President's policies have failed. One in seven now have to rely on food stamps. Half of America now is either classified as low income or in poverty, and millions remain unemployed.

Yesterday, the Congressional Budget Office announced one more of the President's failures, and that is, he is on track to deliver his fourth trillion dollar-plus deficit in a row.

Somebody needs to tell the President we've got to quit spending money we don't have for jobs we never get.

One more failure, Madam Chair, is the President's health care program. from hardworking, small business people in the Fifth District of Texas.

I heard from a furniture businessman in Garland, Texas, who told me: I could start two companies and hire multiple people, but based on this administration and the lack of facts with ObamaCare. I'll continue to sit and wait.

I heard from a gentleman who ran a music business in Palestine, Texas: Our business is hampered by the uncertainty of tax policy, regulations, and ObamaCare.

I had one in Dallas, Texas, after having to lay off 24 people in the last 2 years, who wrote to me and said: You know what? We're going to have to terminate one more in February due almost entirely to the impact on my business of the health care reform we have. We are stymied.

There is no doubt that the President's health care plan is killing jobs. House Republicans have repealed it in its totality. It has been blocked by the President, by Democrats. So if we can't do it in its totality, we'll do it piecemeal

We need to start out by repealing the CLASS Act, which Secretary Sebelius has said is totally unsustainable. Democrat Senate Budget Committee Chairman KENT CONRAD called it a Ponzi scheme of the first order.

The President's policies have failed. It's time to enact the House Republican Plan for America's Job Creators. It's time to repeal the CLASS Act.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pascrell).

Mr. PASCRELL. Madam Chair, I'm tired of hearing the President is a failure. I'm tired. You can smirk all you want. There's no perfection on this floor. There's no perfection down the street. You didn't give these speeches in 2008 when we were losing 500, 600, 700,000 jobs a month. Not one of you came to the floor. Shame on you.

Now what we want to do, we want to turn our backs on those 10 million Americans currently who need longterm care. We have no alternative.

We all agree that there needs to be change in the present system that has yet to work. We have to find a way to make long-term care both accessible and affordable. These problems will not simply disappear. They're not going to go away.

This bill certainly does not fix these problems. The bill does not even provide an alternative. All it does is attack the progress made in the Affordable Care Act. You've tried to wean it down. You've tried to bevel it. You've tried to covet. You tried to take all the money away that's going into it in order to have a system in this country that was not sustainable in the first place.

Sixty-two percent of small businesses over the last 5 years went under be-they've done nothing about long-term Not a week goes by that I don't hear cause they couldn't pay their health care bills, and you stand there with no alternative whatsoever. Whatever happened to the "replace" part of the "repeal and replace?" Remember that? That nonsense we heard last year?

Without the CLASS Act or an alternative, people who struggle the most with daily tasks due to illness will be the ones to suffer. You know that. You know there are millions of people out there suffering, yet we have not come up with an alternative plan. Yet you condemn this, yet you accuse everybody of failing, but you don't have a plan yourself.

Where is your heart for the middle class? Have you no heart?

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE ACTING CHAIR

The Acting CHAIR. Members should remember that all remarks must be addressed to the Chair and not to one another in the second person.

Mr. PITTS. I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey has 2 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. PALLONE. I suggest that you go next because I only have myself, and then we're going to move to Ways and Means.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I believe we have the right to close, and we have just one speaker.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PALLONE. I yield myself the balance of the time.

Madam Chair, I just want to stress again, you know, I hear from the other side of the aisle over the years how people should take personal responsibility. The idea of the CLASS Act is that people pay into the trust fund, and then when they become disabled, they take the money out to pay for services so that they can stay in their home and don't have to go to a nursing home.

Now, when they do that, they save the government money because this is their own money that is being spent to keep them in their home, to keep them in the community so they don't have to spend down and then eventually become a ward of the State, essentially, because Medicaid ends up paying for their nursing home care.

So this is a solution to a long-term care problem. Not a complete solution, but certainly a partial solution.

I agree with Mr. PASCRELL, which is that when I listen to the other side of the aisle, the gentleman from Texas was quite clear: Let's repeal the entire Affordable Care Act. If we can't repeal the whole thing, then we'll repeal it piecemeal piece by piece, which is what's going on here today. Well, again, it's not a very responsible position unless you come up with an alternative.

We're in the Energy and Commerce Committee. We've had hearings on this. I've yet to hear anyone come up on the Republican side with an alternative. All they keep saying is let's just repeal this and we'll figure something out down the line.

The problem with that is that Mr. PASCRELL said there are 10 million Americans who need long-term care. Soon it will be 15 or eventually 20 million. So every day that goes by there is not a solution for these people, and the disabled community and the senior citizen community are crying out for some kind of relief.

So all I say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle is, don't just keep talking about repeal. I'll use the term "mend it, don't end it." Let's not end today the effort to try to find long-term care solutions for America's seniors and for the disabled.

$\Box$ 1510

It simply isn't fair to come here on the floor repeatedly and say "repeal, repeal, repeal" and not have an answer. At any time, I am more than willing to sit down with the chairman of the subcommittee or with any other Member and come up with a bipartisan solution, but I haven't heard it yet.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, to close on our side, I yield such time as he may consume to a distinguished member of the Health Subcommittee, the gentleman from Georgia, Dr. GINGREY.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Madam Chairman, as the co-lead sponsor of this bill, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1173. I commend Dr. BOUSTANY and Chairman PITTS for their leadership on this issue, and I thank Mr. LIPINSKI on the Democratic side.

In response to a question I put to him in March of last year, CBO Director Douglas Elmendorf wrote: "The Secretary of Health and Human Services has now concluded that the CLASS program cannot be operated without mandatory participation so as to ensure its solvency." HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius called the program insolvent, and Democratic Senator Kent Conrad, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, called the program in 2009 a Ponzi scheme. In fact, he went on to say that it would make Bernie Madoff proud.

Madam Chair, during its consideration in 2009, CMS Actuary Richard Foster told the Obama administration staff: "Thirty-six years of actuarial experience lead me to believe that this program would collapse in short order and require significant Federal subsidies to continue." He was ignored. In fact, he was eventually cut out of the email loop. The Health Committee on the Senate side and the staff of Senator Kennedy didn't want to hear any more from him.

Subsequently, in December of 2010, the President's fiscal commission recommended Congress reform or repeal—not amend—the CLASS Act. The commission report stated: "Absent reform, the CLASS program is . . . likely to require large general revenue transfers or else collapse under its own weight. The commission advises the CLASS Act be reformed in a way that makes it credibly sustainable over the long term. To the extent this is not possible, we advise it be repealed."

In February of 2011, Secretary Sebelius testified before a Senate Finance Committee hearing that the CLASS program was "totally insolvent" as structured and needed to be reformed in order to work. Then, in October of 2011, the Secretary released a report on the CLASS Act that essentially found the Obama administration could not make the program actuarially sound or credibly sustainable, to quote the President's fiscal commission, over a 75-year period.

Thank God for Senator Judd Gregg for putting that amendment in on the Senate side that called for fiscal sustainability and the certification by the Secretary over a 75-year period of time or it could not go forward, and that's exactly what happened.

Based on the evidence the CLASS program is not simply flawed—it is broken. As currently written, it poses a clear danger to the fiscal health of our budget and to the American taxpayer. In defending this broken program, some of my colleagues have told me that there is no need to repeal CLASS because the Secretary has already abandoned it. Yet every day that we delay in repealing CLASS, we prevent Congress from passing meaningful, true long-term care reform. All sides admit that CLASS does not work, so the prudent step is to repeal it.

In closing, I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation so that we can get to the meaningful reform of long-term care and have the market-place work its magic in regard to this so that the penetration is greater than the current penetration, which is less than 10 percent.

With that, Madam Chairman, I would urge all of my colleagues to support the repeal of a broken, failed program, the CLASS Act.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may con-

As a physician, I know firsthand of this really dire need to solve the problem for many families across this country who are struggling with their long-term care needs. I am the oldest of 10 children, and my father was a physician. He died 3 years ago from a lengthy illness, and required a lot of care at home. He did not have long-term care, but we gladly bore that burden and were able to provide for him even though it was somewhat of a strain.

This is a serious problem facing every single family in this country. Yet what we've seen now is a program that was created in ObamaCare, a program that is clearly unsustainable by the administration's own admission. After almost a year now of wrangling about this, they've finally come to the conclusion that we knew before the bill passed: that this even was unsustainable, that it was unworkable, that it was fatally flawed.

As a physician, I know the worst thing you can do for someone is to create false hope, and that's what this has done. As long as this stays on the books, on the statute books, we're not going to get anything done on this. We're not going to solve it. Now, there are many good ideas on both sides of the aisle, and we've discussed some of them in the Ways and Means Committee. There are bills on both sides of the aisle on which I believe we could work together in a true bipartisan fashion to solve this problem—but the CLASS program is clearly not the answer.

Washington should learn three lessons from this debacle, ObamaCare's failed government-run program:

First, don't ignore reality. Democrats ignored the expert actuarial warnings when they used CLASS as a budget gimmick in ObamaCare. President Obama cannot create a self-funded sustainable program that prohibits underwriting unless he intends to force healthy Americans to participate. What does that mean? Madam Chair, that means an individual mandate, another individual mandate.

Many constitutional scholars think that this is unconstitutional. We don't need another individual mandate. In fact, Senator HARKIN said that the problem with CLASS is that it's voluntary. I think he basically put the cards on the table and showed that what they want to do to fix CLASS is to give us another individual mandate. Most enrollees in CLASS will be highrisk, causing premiums to skyrocket under the current program, making CLASS even less appealing to average American families. The premiums will be unsustainable, and it will require subsidies from the taxpayer.

So, the first lesson: Don't ignore reality.

The second lesson: Don't break the law.

The administration planned to break the law by excluding Americans made eligible by the statute. When the Congressional Research Service attorneys warned of lawsuits, I sent letters to Secretary Sebelius for her legal authority to make this change. She then subsequently suspended the program, but this doesn't correct the bad law. Unless we repeal CLASS, the Department of Health and Human Services will break the law when it misses the deadline in October and again in 2014. That's not a very good example to set for the American people to have the administration breaking the law.

So, first, don't ignore reality. Second, don't break the law.

Third, don't compound our Nation's long-term fiscal problems.

A Democrat under the Clinton administration, former Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin, wrote: Since the CLASS program is a new unfunded entitlement, it should be repealed because it will increase the deficit over the long term. In fact, the President's own deficit commission agrees that our grandchildren simply cannot afford a new budget-busting entitlement.

We can do better than this, Madam Chair, and we can work together to solve this problem. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this CLASS repeal, to support H.R. 1173. Beyond this, we will have the impetus to actually do some real work to create a real program that works for the American people. We can make it easier for disabled Americans to save for future needs; we can expand access to affordable, private long-term care coverage; and we can better educate Americans on the need for retirement planning.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington, DC, January 31, 2012. Hon. KATHLEEN SEBELIUS, U.S. Department of Health & Human Services, Independence Ave., SW., Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY SEBELIUS: We write this as a follow up to our unanswered November 2011 letter to President Obama regarding the failed CLASS program. In the letter, we asked whether the Administration has a legal obligation to implement the program.

Last year, you announced you could not find "a viable path forward for CLASS implementation at this time." Legal experts at the Congressional Research Service (CRS) say you do "not appear to have discretion to decide whether or not to designate a plan by October 1, 2012." If the deadline expires, they say you will be "committing a facial violation" of the 2010 health law. Finally, "the CLASS Act does not preclude judicial review" and "a failure by the Secretary to designate a CLASS benefit plan by October 1, 2012 . . . would appear to be a final agency action from which 'legal consequences will flow.'"

In light of the findings by the CRS, does the Obama Administration intend to openly violate the law as the 2012 and 2014 deadlines for CLASS expire? If not, when do you intend to resume implementation of CLASS? What justifications can the Administration provide to Congress and the American people in the event that the Secretary's failure to adhere to the law results in a costly court battle, effectively delaying meaningful long-term care reform in the process? Please expedite a written response to these questions.

Democrat and former Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin wrote: "Since the CLASS program is a new unfunded entitlement, it should be repealed because it will increase the deficit over the long term."

Our grandchildren simply cannot afford a new budget-busting entitlement. We urge you to join us in support of CLASS repeal, and to support bipartisan efforts to expand access to affordable private long-term care coverage.

We appreciate your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

CHARLES W. BOUSTANY, JR., MD, Member of Congress. PHIL GINGREY, MD, Member of Congress.

I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1520

Mr. STARK. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume

I'd like to point out that the last time I watched television, they told me that we still have troops in Afghanistan who should be brought home. And we've not addressed the Medicare physician payment cuts, the payroll tax cut extension, unemployment insurance extension. Roads, bridges, and public transit systems are falling apart, and Congress hasn't brought forth legislation to invest in the infrastructure to repair those vital structures. And we continue to have an imbalanced Tax Code that lets Members of Congress get richer at the expense of working families, and we've done nothing to change that.

Yet rather than tackle any serious problems, the Republicans are using the very little time that they permit Congress to be in session to debate repealing the law that the President has already made clear will not be implemented. In other words, we should repeal a law that isn't going to happen. Now, that's a vital use of our time. He's clearly stated, the President has, that the CLASS Act, as part of the Affordable Care Act, can't meet the tests put in the statute.

Now, remember that Republicans probably would like to repeal all of ObamaCare, and I'm not sure exactly which part they want mostly to repeal. In other words, I assume that the 2.5 million youngsters who now get health insurance, the Republicans would like to kick them off the rolls and let them go to work or earn their own way to health insurance.

It's lowered prescription drug costs, ObamaCare has, for millions of seniors, for a bill that the Republicans wrote that was too costly. I presume the Republicans would like to raise the cost of pharmaceuticals for seniors. Republicans generally like to do anything that the pharmaceutical obviously asks them to do, and I'm surprised they haven't brought that up yet.

I understand that my good friend, Dr. BOUSTANY, actually has the makings of a bill that would help long-term care. And I also understand that the only reason he hasn't introduced it—I'd be glad to make it an amendment if it's ready to go right now—is that the health insurance industry doesn't like it. Well, if the health insurance industry doesn't like it, it must be spectacular, and I hope we'll see it. Maybe you'll tell us a little bit about it, and I'd like to applaud it because he has done some great work in this area, and we need to do this.

The fully implemented ObamaCare, health care, whatever you want to call it, by 2014 will extend affordable, quality medical care to 32 million uninsured Americans. That's a plan. Maybe we could change it. Maybe we could make it quicker. Maybe we would extend it to more people. Maybe we could save some money. But that has to come from the other the other side of the aisle.

We oppose this, and I'd like to think that our Republican friends would work with us to improve it and move us in that direction.

I'd like to highlight a letter of opposition to repealing the CLASS Act that is signed by more than 70 organizations representing millions of senior citizens, people with disabilities, and people suffering from various diseases. These groups include: AARP, the Autism National Committee, the AFLCIO, and Easter Seals, and United Cerebral Palsy.

They urge Congress to "reject H.R. 1173, and instead focus on a constructive path forward."

I ask that this letter be inserted into the Congressional Record as part of this debate.

JANUARY 31, 2012

Hon. John Boehner,

Speaker of the House, House of Representatives, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC.

Hon. NANCY PELOSI,

Democratic Leader, House of Representatives, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR SPEAKER BOEHNER AND DEMOCRATIC LEADER PELOSI: The undersigned organizations write to oppose legislation, H.R. 1173, to repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) program and respectfully urge members to reject such legislation.

In 2008, 21 million people had a condition that caused them to need help with their health and personal care. Medicare does not cover long-term services and supports (LTSS), yet about 70 percent of people over age 65 will require some type of LTSS at some point during their lifetime. As our population ages, the need for these services will only grow. In addition, about 40 percent of the individuals who need LTSS are under age 65 and LTSS can enable individuals to work and be productive citizens.

Regardless of when individuals may need these services, there is a lack of financing options to help them plan and pay for the services they need to help them live independently in their homes and communities where they want to be. Family caregivers are on the frontlines. They provided care valued at $450 billion in 2009—more than the total spending on Medicaid that year. Private long-term care insurance helps some people pay for the cost of services, but it is not affordable for most, and some people are not even able to qualify for it. Too often, the cost of services wipes out personal and retirement savings and assets that are often already insufficient—as a result, formerly middle class individuals are forced to rely on Medicaid to pay for the costs of LTSS. There are few options for individuals to help them pay for the services they need that could help them delay or prevent their need to rely on Medicaid, the largest paver of LTSS.

That's why we support the CLASS program—to give millions of working Americans a new option to take personal responsibility and help plan and pay for these essential services. CLASS could also take some financial pressure off Medicaid at the state and federal levels-paid for by voluntary premiums, not taxpayer funds. For us, this is about the financially devastating impact that the need for LTSS has on families across this country every day and the essential, compelling and urgent need to address this issue. Every American family faces the reality that an accident or illness requiring long-term care could devastate them financially. This issue affects the constituents of every U.S. Representative. CLASS is an effort to be part of the solution. The CLASS actuarial report established that CLASS can still be designed to be a "value proposition," although development work was still needed. The actuarial report also noted that federal actuaries ". . . agreed that certain plans, designed to mitigate the adverse selection risk can be actuarially sound and attractive to the consumers." Rather than repeal CLASS, we urgecontinued dialogue and development of a viable path forward. The need to address LTSS and how these services will be paid for in a way that is affordable to individuals and society as a whole will not go Families will continue to need a workable LTSS option to protect themselves; and a path forward is essential because the need for these services will only continue to grow. We appreciate your consideration of our views that are based on the experiences of millions of families across this country. We urge you to reject H.R. 1173, and instead focus on a constructive path forward.

LEADERSHIP COUNCIL OF AGING ORGANIZATIONS, January 30, 2012.

DEAR MEMBER OF CONGRESS: The Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, (LCAO) strongly opposes H.R. 1173, legislation to repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) program. Please do not support this bill when it comes to the House floor this week.

The Leadership Council of Aging Organizations (LCAO) is a coalition of 66 national nonprofit organizations concerned with the well-being of America's older population and committed to representing their interests in the policy-making arena.

We support the CLASS program as a promising means of effectively financing the longterm services and supports that thousands of Americans come to need as they age or develop a disability. Every family faces these potential costs. CLASS gives families a framework for responsibly planning for their own long-term services and supports needs.

Our currently fragmented system of paying for long-term services and supports is in danger of crumbling under the weight of the baby boom generation. Already an estimated 10 million Americans need long-term services and supports, and this number is projected to increase to 26 million by 2050. Acknowledging the growing demand for services, the law also created the Personal Care Attendants Workforce Advisory Panel, work which must move forward if we are to build the strong workforce that America needs to provide personal care services.

CLASS was developed to provide a coordinated, national public-private system for delivering long-term services and supports. Nearly half of all funding for these services is now provided through Medicaid, which is a growing burden on states and requires individuals to become and remain poor to receive the help they need. There is also an institutional bias in Medicaid whereby approximately two-thirds of all spending is directed towards nursing homes and other institutions instead of preferred communitybased services and supports.

CLASS is a promising approach to effectively meeting the costs of long-term services and supports. Thousands of Americans do not qualify for private long-term care insurance due to underwriting practices, and this kind of insurance is unaffordable for many more. Reverse mortgages assume home ownership with substantial equity, which excludes thousands more individuals and fami-

There is no effective and affordable alternative to CLASS at this time. We urge you to vote against H.R. 1173 when it comes to a vote this week in the House.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM L. MINNIX, Jr., President and CEO, Chair, LCAO.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF STATE, COUNTY AND MUNICIPAL EMPLOY-EES, AFL-CIO.

Washington, DC, January 24, 2012.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of the 1.6 million members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), I write to urge you to oppose H.R. 1173, the misnamed Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011. The bill repeals the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) program, which was designed to be a voluntary insurance program to help American workers pay for long-term care services and supports that they may need in the future.

The need for the CLASS program is huge and growing. Nearly 70% of people turning 65 today will need, at some point in their lives, help with basic daily living activities, such as bathing, feeding and dressing. Repealing the CLASS program and replacing it with absolutely nothing offers no help to millions of Americans who want to maintain their health, independence, and dignity when they lose the capacity to perform basic daily activities without assistance.

Medicare does not cover long-term care services. Medicaid does cover long-term care but Medicaid pays only for services for people with very limited financial means. Private long-term care insurance can be costly and difficult to purchase, especially if an individual has a pre-existing condition. Indeed, only about one-in-ten Americans age 55 and older has long-term care insurance.

The CLASS program is not perfect and may need modifications, but now is not the time to accept the status quo for the financing of long-term services and supports, which relies by default almost exclusively on Medicaid. Repealing the CLASS program is not a solution and promotes a fiscal default policy of increasing Medicaid costs and requiring middle-class Americans to impoverish themselves in order to obtain long-term care. We urge you to oppose H.R. 1173.

Sincerely.

CHARLES M. LOVELESS.  $Director\ of\ Legislation.$

LEADINGAGE,

Washington, DC, January 17, 2012. DEAR WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE MEM-

BER: I understand that the Ways and Means Committee will vote January 18 on H.R. 1173, legislation to repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) program.

I strongly urge you oppose this bill. American families need the CLASS program to effectively plan for the costs of long-term services and supports.

These costs now are covered primarily by Medicaid, an entitlement program that is a growing and unsustainable burden on both federal and state budgets. Currently Medicaid covers 49% of the total cost of paid long-term services and supports, making it the predominant source of financing in this field.

These costs will not disappear if the CLASS program is repealed, and there is no effective alternative to cover them. All but the wealthiest Americans have insufficient income and savings to cover the cost of long-term nursing home care or even extensive services provided in a home- and community-based setting. Private long-term care insurance, for which there already are tax incentives, covers only a small fraction of long-term services and supports. Reverse mortgages are becoming less useful as a source of long-term services and supports financing due to the current state of the real estate market.

Without CLASS, people who need help with the most basic activities of daily living will continue to be thrown onto the Medicaid rolls. The federal and state governments will have to continue paying for needed long-term services and supports, but without the revenues that the CLASS program would generate.

Over the last several decades, policy-makers, health economists and other experts have given much thought and debate to the issue of financing long-term services and supports. CLASS developed out of all of this deliberation as the proposal with the most promise for establishing a healthy, ethical and affordable system of financing these costs. This program can give families an affordable means of planning for their futures and for the long-term services and supports needs that inevitably arise.

I hope you and members of your family will never come to need the kinds of services for which CLASS was designed to pay. But if you ever do, you will understand fully why the CLASS program has attracted such broad support.

Repealing CLASS would undo years of work toward an effective means of financing long-term services and supports needed and used by thousands of Americans and their families. What other option addresses these needs?

Please oppose H.R. 1173 when it comes before the Ways and Means Committee. Sincerely,

WILLIAM L. MINNIX, JR.,

President and CEO.

Madam Chair, how much time do I have remaining?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from California has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. STARK. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KIND).

Mr. KIND. I thank my friend from California for yielding me this time.

Madam Chair, I rise in support of the resolution. I do so because I believed at the time when the CLASS Act was inserted in the Affordable Care Act it wasn't a sustainable program. And sure enough, when Secretary Sebelius and those at the Department of Health and Human Services had a chance to analyze it and try to implement it, they reached the same conclusion.

I just hope that today my Republican colleagues don't take too much glee or delight over the fact that this resolution will pass and it repeals yet another small section of the Affordable Care Act, because just by repealing it without replacing it doesn't solve the problem with the rising long-term health care costs that our Nation faces.

I know my friend Dr. BOUSTANY shares his interest in trying to find a fix to this situation, and I hope that the parties are able to come together and address one of the paramount challenges that we're still facing in health care: How do you incent young, healthy people to invest in their long-term health care needs? It's difficult to do.

And I appreciate the work by those who supported CLASS, recognizing the challenge that we faced and trying to come up with a solution. This just wasn't the answer.

And to my Democratic colleagues, I never believed that passage of the Affordable Care Act-which I did support—was the end-all, be-all for health care reform. In fact, the great potential of the Affordable Care Act was the vast experimentation that needs to take place in reforming the health care delivery system and the payment system to learn what's working and what isn't working and then drive the system to greater efficiency, better quality outcomes, and a better bang for our buck. That, to me, is what health care reform is going to look like in the years to come. It's going to be an ongoing effort trying to determine what is working and what isn't. The CLASS Act, clearly, the way it was structured, was something that wasn't going to work.

So I agree with the resolution today that we should repeal it. It's the same conclusion the administration, having a chance to look at it, reached themselves. But it doesn't leave us off the hook of trying to find a solution to one of the great challenges of long-term health care in this country.

So I would encourage my Republican colleagues—and I know many of them share this sentiment, that this does not end the work that has to go on. We've got to figure out a way to start talking to each other, listening, trusting each other to come up with some solutions. This isn't that solution today.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Chair, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. HERGER), the distinguished chairman of the Health Subcommittee on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. HERGER. Madam Chair, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1173, the Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act.

It's now clear that long before the Democrats' health care overhaul was passed, the Obama administration knew that the CLASS Act was a seriously flawed program that could not be implemented. For example, Medicare actuary Rick Foster said way back in June of 2009: "Thirty-six years of actuarial experience lead me to believe that this program would collapse in short order and require significant Federal subsidies to continue."

Yet these warnings went unheeded and the CLASS Act remained in the health care bill 9 months later because it created an illusion of budget savings, an illusion based entirely on the fact that it was designed to collect premiums for a full 5 years before it would have to start paying benefits. Yesterday the Congressional Budget Office estimated that the cost of Federal health care entitlement programs will more than double over the next decade.

Madam Chairman, for the sake of our Nation's future, we must get these costs under control. The CLASS Act is an unsustainable program that, if it ever begins operating, would inevitably need a major taxpayer bailout. By repealing it today, Congress can send a clear message that we are going to start finding solutions to rising health care costs instead of making the problem worse.

Mr. STARK. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Chair, may I ask how much time remains?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Louisiana has  $3\frac{1}{2}$  minutes remaining, and the gentleman from California has  $5\frac{1}{2}$  minutes remaining.

Mr. BOUSTANY. I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Kansas (Ms. Jenkins), a member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

□ 1530

Ms. JENKINS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

There aren't many areas where the former Kansas Governor and current Secretary of Health and Human Services, Kathleen Sebelius, and I agree, but one thing that we do agree on is that the CLASS Act portion of the President's health care package is completely unviable and needs to be stopped.

That's why I was glad to hear the Secretary backtrack on her prior support and pull the plug on the program, and it's why I support a statutory repeal of the CLASS Act today. This act was designed as a new national entitlement for purchasing community-living assistance services, and it was used by this administration as a pay for to substantiate their faulty claim that ObamaCare was going to reduce the deficit.

However, as I and many others pointed out at the time, the deficit reduction claim was bogus and based on budget gimmicks that proved false when HHS began implementation. You see, the CBO can only project the cost of bills in a 10-year budget window, so the Obama administration used a budget trick by setting up the CLASS Act to begin collecting premiums in 2012 but not paying out benefits until 2017.

Great for years 1 through 10, but very bad for years 5 through 15 or later.

This gimmick led CBO to report that the program would reduce the deficit, but it certainly doesn't take a CPA to realize that these initial savings can't be sustained over time. While we anxiously await the Supreme Court's decision on the constitutionality of ObamaCare's individual mandate, I urge my colleagues to support the repeal of this failed portion of the bill today so we can get this budget gimmick off the government's books.

Mr. STARK. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Chair, I'm pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentle-woman from Tennessee (Mrs. Black), a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mrs. BLACK. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chair, I rise today in support of my colleague from Louisiana's legislation repealing this unsustainable budget gimmick created to make the health care law look less expensive.

The CLASS Act was a long-term entitlement that was plagued with problems from the very beginning. From day one, concerns were raised about the CLASS program's unsustainable cost structure, and the administration ignored it.

I have a chart that was presented to us in our Ways and Means Committee in the markup of this bill, and from the very beginning there were six different occasions, and up until March 20 when it was passed, of experts who said this was unsustainable, and they've already been referenced by prior speakers.

Since that time of passage there were four others, including Secretary Sebelius in October of 2011, who also said: "I do not see a viable path forward for the CLASS implementation."

This program, again, has been unsustainable from the very beginning. I think what is so sad is we continue to put our head in the sand and make the American people believe that this program is somehow workable. This needs to be removed from our law so we can start again. This is a nonpartisan issue, and we all need to work together in a bipartisan way. As a nurse for over 40 years working with the elderly, I recognize the need for long-term care.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Louisiana has 1 minute remaining and the right to close. The gentleman from California has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. STARK. Madam Chair, in closing, I repeat that there are real problems in this country of much more urgency than trying to repeal a bill that doesn't do anything, that won't work, that the President has said won't be effective. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting "no" on this Republican agenda to tear down our health system. It's mugwumpish. It just sticks your head in the sand and says let's repeal things and let's not go about fixing it.

As I said before, I'm sure Dr. BOU-STANY has a great bill, and I'm hoping that he'll bring it to us and we can proceed to deal with the problem of longterm care for our senior citizens.

I have seven children who would like to see that done very quickly and get me off their hands, thank you very much. And so anything we can do together, I look forward to working with the distinguished gentleman.

With that, I yield back the balance of

Mr. BOUSTANY. Madam Chair, I'm pleased to yield my remaining time to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. PAULSEN), a distinguished member of the Ways and Means Committee.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. PAULSEN, Madam Chairman, I also want to rise in strong support of repealing this misguided CLASS Act. We knew from the start that the CLASS Act was fiscally unsustainable. But the President and those who supported the new health care law used this and inserted it as a budget gimmick to help pass the law. This new program was an illusion, an illusion that was crafted so government would start collecting funds long before it would pay anything out, making it seem as if it would raise revenue and save money. But in the long run it was obvious and it was clear the program would have disastrous effects.

The CMS Chief Actuary himself said that if implemented, the program would collapse. And after months of failed attempts, even the administration has finally admitted that the program was unworkable.

Madam Chair, Minnesota families and small businesses are tired of the smoke and mirrors coming out of Washington. Let's do the right thing today and repeal this terrible program, and let's focus on what's really important: putting Americans back to work. I want to thank my colleague on the Ways and Means Committee from Louisiana. He's a doctor, he's a physician, he's a leader in health care. Let's do the right thing and repeal this legislation

Mr. STEARNS. Madam Chair, we need to repeal this bad legislation. As Chairman of the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, we looked into the CLASS Act and the actions of HHS. We issued a bicameral report on the failures of this fiscally reckless program.

Some Senate Democrats expressed that they "had grave concerns that the real effect of the [CLASS Act] would be to create a new federal entitlement with large, long-term spending increase that far exceed revenues."

Perhaps the most damning indictment came from the Senate Budget Chairman who characterized CLASS Act as "a ponzi scheme of the first order, the kind of thing that Bernie Madoff would have been proud of."

This legislation is so fiscally unsound that even the Secretary of HHS has announced that she does "not see a viable path forward for CLASS implementation at this time." This despite all her statements in support of CLASS when the Democrats were ramming Obamacare down our throat.

Under CBO rules, the CLASS failure will cost American taxpayers $86 billion—the most recent CBO project of the supposed savings from the CLASS Act. However, if CLASS had gone into effect, it would have increased our deficit by the third decade.

We need to repeal this fiscally unsound entitlement. We need to stop wasteful spending. We need to bring our country back to the path of fiscal responsibility and repealing CLASS is an important first step.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1173, "The Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011." This bill would repeal title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and Supports, CLASS, Program—a national, voluntary long-term care insurance program for purchasing community living assistance services and supports. Title VIII also authorized and appropriated funding through 2015 for the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information, clearing house. H.R. 1173 would rescind any unobligated balances appropriated to the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information.

The CLASS Act was designed to provide an affordable long-term care option for the 10 million Americans in need of long-term care now and the projected 15 million Americans that will need long-term care by 2020.

The CLASS program would allow the disabled to be treated with respect and class. Yet, once again, instead of focusing on creating jobs, instead of finding means to reduce our deficit, instead of addressing the most pressing needs of our nation today, my Republican colleagues have put forth a measure that targets the aging and the disabled. They are supporting a measure that literally lacks class. This measure is a blatant attempt to repeal the Affordable Health Care Act one title at a time

Like many Members of this body, I am disappointed that the Department of Health and Human Services, DHHS, has not been able to implement the CLASS provision of the Affordable Health Care Act. Although the CLASS program is not perfect, I cannot in good conscience support repealing it at a time when we have no viable alternative for affordable long-term care.

We have a growing aging population some of whom will require long-term care. CLASS provides the aging and the disabled with a solution that is self-sustaining, at no cost to tax payers.

As the estimated 76 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964 become elderly, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security will nearly double as a share of the economy by 2035.

With each generation, Americans have been fortunate to live longer lives; we continue to plan on how to meet the needs of the aging and the disabled. It is reasonable to assume that over time the aging of baby boomers will increase the demand for long-term care. Estimates suggest that in the upcoming years the number of disabled elderly who cannot perform basic activities of daily living without assistance may be double today's level.

Repealing the CLASS program does nothing to address the fact that private long-term care insurance options are limited and the costs are too high for many American families, including many in my Houston district, to afford.

In 2000, spending from public and private sources associated on long-term care amounted to an estimated $137 billion, for persons of all ages. By 2005, this number has risen to $206.6 billion.

Unless we act now, the costs associated with long-term care will continue to rise. As it stands, families are bearing the brunt of these costs. Less than a decade ago those who needed long-term care spent nearly $37.4 billion in out-of-pocket expenses. This is not sustainable for the majority of families; less than a decade ago we were not recovering from a recession.

The issue before us today is how we intend to treat our aging and disabled at a time when they are in need of assistance that will have a direct impact on their quality of life.

CLASS comes into effect when a person is at his most vulnerable. For example, when individuals are unable to clothe or bathe themselves. CLASS would allow some individuals to remain in their home. It gives the aging, the disabled and their families a viable option. Long-term care encompasses a wide range of services for people who need regular assistance because of chronic illness or physical or mental disabilities.

Although long-term care might include some skilled nursing care it consists primarily of help with basic activities of daily living, such as bathing, eating, and dressing, and with tasks necessary for independent living such as shopping, cooking, and housework, in essence helping people who need help.

Traditionally, most long-term care is provided informally by family members and friends. Some people with disabilities receive assistance at home from paid helpers, including skilled nurses and home care aides. Nursing homes are increasingly viewed as a last resort for people who are too disabled to live in the community, due to a number of factors, cost being one.

Madam Chair, I believe that we must leave the framework that exists in place and work with seniors, families, industry, HHS and others to find a way to make the CLASS Act or an alternative long-term care program work. We cannot and we must not allow Medicaid to continue to be the only affordable long-term care service available to Americans. American families should not have to spend down their savings or assets to access long-term care. We must not forget that this is an issue we must address. As of January 1, 2011, baby boomers will begin to celebrate their 65th birthdays for that day on 10,000 people will turn 65 every day and this will continue for the next 20 years

My career in Congress has been dedicated to expanding access to affordable, quality health care for the residents of the state of Texas, Houstonians, and all Americans, and the CLASS Act furthers that goal. It is clear that the CLASS Act is not perfect, and almost no piece of legislation can ever be, but that's why we rely on the professionals in federal agencies to work on implementation of the law.

I strongly believe that we can find a way to make this program work and I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will work with me to ensure that affordable long-term care is available for anyone who needs it.

American families spend almost twice as much on health care through premiums, paycheck deductions, and out-of-pocket expenses as families in any other countries. In exchange, we receive quality specialty care in many areas that is the envy of many. Yet, they do not receive significantly better care than countries that spend far less.

Considering the amount that we spend on health care, it is surprising that Americans do not live as long as people in Canada, Japan, and most of Western Europe. Our health care system was in need of an overhaul. The landmark bill signed by President Obama in 2010 is designed to provide coverage to millions of people who currently lack it.

Under the Affordable Health Care law more than 32 million additional Americans are expected to get insurance, either through an extension of Medicaid or through exchanges where low and moderate income individuals and families will be able to purchase private insurance with federal subsidies.

A key part of the new health law also encourages the development of "accountable care organizations" that would allow doctors to team up with each other and with hospitals, in new ways, to provide medical services. There are dozens of good provisions in the Act that will ultimately benefit the public, if they are not repealed one title at a time. The CLASS Act is a good provision too—I stand by that notion—but just improperly designed.

At this stage, any change is difficult and change especially during a recession is extremely difficult. It is not possible to change a system as large and as hugely flawed, as ours without some disruptions. We are using fresh thinking and innovation to make sure everyone benefits—our citizens, our health care providers, small businesses, large corporations. It hink the public is starting to slowly accept it. Over the course of several years and as more beneficial provisions take effect, this law will be more accepted, popular and possibly expanded.

Unfortunately, some in this Congress seems intent on not just undoing the CLASS Act, but the entire Affordable Health Care law. Everyone should have equal access to affordable health care and affordable health care service. Repealing a program that is intended to assist the aging and the disabled is not where this Congress should be spending its energy. We should be focused on legislation, like the one I proposed that would reduce the deficit, boast our nation's energy production, and create jobs. It appears as though my Republican colleagues seem more focused on putting forth bills that would cut taxes, cut services to the aging and disabled, and cut discretionary spending. Our priority should be to focus on legislation that will create jobs.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Chair, H.R. 1173 exemplifies the GOP agenda in the 112th Congress: to reject constructive Democratic ideas, and fail to introduce any practical solutions to our nation's problems.

I think we are all in agreement that the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports, CLASS, Program-in its current form—needs work. However, simply repealing it conveniently ignores that we have a longterm care crisis in this country. Private longterm care insurance is too costly for most Americans and the alternative, spending down their assets in order to qualify for Medicaid, is financially devastating. Medicaid now accounts for nearly half of all long-term care spending, and as the nation's baby boomers age, federal and state budgets will face further strain. The CLASS program is intended to lessen the burden, providing working families a national, voluntary, and premium-financed insurance program that enables them to responsibly plan for long-term care.

Secretary Sebelius made the right decision to delay implementation of program because, under existing parameters, it could not be done in a financially solvent way. The Congressional Budget Office, CBO, estimated that the program would run surpluses through approximately 2029 but would begin adding to the budget deficit after that. We need to fix that. But let's try to mend it, not end it. Let's exhaust all of our options, confer with experts and beneficiaries, and see if we can find a viable path forward for the CLASS program. We must make every effort to make it solvent before we leave seniors and disabled individuals to the status quo for the foreseeable future.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Virginia. Madam Chair, we are not prepared, either as families or as a society, to pay for the long-term care supports and services most of us will need before we die.

Today 10 million Americans require some level of long-term assisted care, and that number is on pace to triple as the Baby Boom generation ages. Annual costs top more than $200 billion, and that doesn't count the time and energy of family caregivers. The growing demand and costs for long term care cannot be ignored, yet that is precisely what this legislation does.

Not only does this legislation repeal the voluntary, self-supporting long-term care insurance program created by the Affordable Care Act, but it also repeals funding for the national clearinghouse of information on long-term care services that helps seniors, their families and caregivers navigate the maze of options.

HHS said it could not implement the CLASS Act as written. It did not say such a program should not be implemented at all. In fact, HHS said that 15 million Americans will require some form of long-term care in 2020, yet fewer than 3 percent will have long-term insurance coverage. It went on to say that allowing that to persist will only increase the burden on taxpayers at a time when we're working to reduce such federal health care costs.

Madam Chair, this is nothing more than an ideologically-driven attempt to undermine the President's signature initiative and score political points at the expense of our seniors. I urge my colleagues to reject this bill, so we can pursue a workable solution to this mounting challenge that threatens the safety and security of our seniors and our economy.

Mr. HOLT. Madam Chair, I rise today in opposition to the so called "Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011", H.R. 1173.

H.R. 1173 would repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports (CLASS) Act, which was included in health reform

The CLASS Act would make it easier for people to save for long-term care services. This program would give working adults the opportunity to plan for long-term care needs by providing cash benefits that can be used to purchase non-medical services and supports like home health care. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the CLASS Act would reduce the federal deficit and Medicaid spending.

Our nation is facing a long-term care crisis and repealing the CLASS Act does not help. Over ninety percent of Americans do not have long-term health insurance coverage. This crisis becomes more serious over the next two decades, when the number of Americans 65 and older will be 71 million—making up around 20 percent of the U.S. population. Long-term care is expensive: nursing homes can costs over $70,000 a year and home health care costs hundreds of dollars a day.

Instead of debating how to help Americans pay for long-term care, we are spending our time repealing the only program that is trying to help.

I oppose H.R. 1173 and urge my colleagues to vote no on this piece of legislation.

Mr. DINGELL. Madam Chair, I rise today in opposition of H.R. 1173. This bill is yet another in a long list of efforts by the Republicans to dismantle and repeal the Affordable Care Act piece by piece. Despite the fact that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle st in Committee hearing rooms and profess to support addressing our long term care crisis, one of their first pieces of legislation on the floor this session is a bill that will repeal one option to address this crisis.

H.R. 1173 does nothing to protect the security of our country's retirees. Repealing the CLASS Act does not protect the 70 percent of today's 65 year olds who will need some sort of health or personal care in the future. Nor does repealing the CLASS Act do anything for the 40 percent of long term care users between the ages of 18–64.

While I recognize that the CLASS Act is not fiscally feasible in its current form, I also recognize that a lack of a long term care initiative is not financially feasible for Americans. The average cost of a nursing home is currently a staggering $78,000 per year while in-home long term care averages $21,600 per year. We must continue to try and solve the problem of our nation's lack of adequate long term care options, and I call on my Republican friends to come to the table and work with us to do so.

Instead of wasting valuable floor time, my Republican friends should take this opportunity to work with Democrats as well as the Department of Health and Human Services to find a solution to this critical issue. We all must continue to champion the effort to create a safe and secure future for our nation's citizens.

It is my concern that if the CLASS Act is repealed, the impetus to implement a crucial long term care act will fall by the wayside. If my friends across the aisle wish to repeal this provision, it is vital they work expeditiously to implement a substitute for CLASS.

In 2008, 21 million Americans utilized some form of long term care. That number is only going to continue to increase, and it is our duty to protect the quality of life of our fellow Americans. I urge my colleagues to vote against H.R. 1173 until we have a viable long term care program to replace the CLASS Act.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Chair, I rise today in opposition of H.R. 1173, legislation to repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports program. America has a long-term care crisis, and it is only getting worse. Currently, there are over 10 million Americans who require long-term care, and this number is expected to grow to 15 million by 2020.

Long-term care places a huge burden on family budgets. CLASS makes long-term care more affordable and accessible by providing a national, voluntary, self-sustaining insurance program for the purchase of long-term care services and supports.

While CLASS may need to be tweaked, it should not be repealed without the existence of a viable alternative. Rather than repeal this bill today, Republicans and Democrats need to work together to identify ways to strengthen CLASS so that it becomes a sustainable long-term care program. Our nation's seniors are counting on us, and we must not let them down.

As our population ages, the need for long-term care services will only grow. Repealing the CLASS Act, without providing a viable alternative, will result in millions of seniors exhausting their retirement savings and personal assets. I cannot support H.R. 1173, as it undermines the personal dignity of our seniors.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Madam Chair, today I rise in strong support of the Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act. This important legislation repeals the failed government-run long-term care insurance program, known as the CLASS Act, which was included in the President's Health Care Law, PPACA.

Nearly two years ago, with total disregard for the will of the American people, Congress passed and President Obama signed the health care reform overhaul into law. This law, which I voted against, is defined by federal regulations, mandates, a myriad of new big government programs, and a significant increase in federal spending and debt at a cost to our country too high to bear.

The CLASS program is a prime example of the inherent problems with this new law. In fact, the Obama Administration announced in October that they would halt implementation of the CLASS program, recognizing that the program was unsustainable despite claims that it would save as much as $80 billion over 10 years.

Today the House has an opportunity to pass the Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act, which is an important piece to dismantling the President's Health Care Law and allows Congress to consider new long-term care reform proposals that work for the American people without busting the federal budget.

Madam Chair, I intend to continue working to repeal and defund the new health care law that kills jobs, raises taxes, threatens seniors' access to care, will cause millions of people to lose the coverage they have and like, and increases the cost of health care coverage.

While we can all agree that our current health care system needs to be reformed, the new health care law was not the right way to do it. Instead we must focus on a positive, patient-centered strategy that puts patients, families and doctors, not Washington bureaucrats, in control of personal health care decisions.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Madam Chair, I rise today in firm opposition to this legislation that would repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports Act, the CLASS Act.

As part of the Affordable Care Act, the CLASS Act is our nation's first real attempt to provide voluntary, fiscally-responsible, long-term care for the more than 70 percent of Americans who will need such support at some point in their lifetimes.

As the Representative to thousands of seniors in Florida's 20th district, I know too well how hard our families strive to plan and pay for the long term care services that most of them so desperately need.

By repealing the CLASS Act, this Congress abandons millions of middle class seniors, Americans with disabilities, and all families struggling to provide long term care for loved ones.

Of course, we are willing to admit that this program isn't perfect. But that is no excuse for the Republicans' "repeal and abandon" approach to legislation—and our nation's seniors

Rather than pull the rug out from under our seniors and loved ones—I urge my colleagues to work to fix this vital program.

Mr. PAYNE. Madam Chair, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 1173. While my Republican colleagues see H.R. 1173 as a solution to the Department of Health and Human Services' letter to Congress about the CLASS Act, I strongly contend that repeal is not the answer. According to the Department's announcement, there is no viable way forward to implement the CLASS Act at this time but families impacted by accidents and illnesses are also without a viable way forward to meet longterm care needs. The cost of long-term care can be extremely taxing. In 2010, the privatepay rate for a semiprivate room in a nursing home averaged $205 per day, or about $75,000 per year. In comparison, the median total household income for elderly Social Security beneficiaries in 2008 was $20,000 per year. The CLASS Act was established as part of the Affordable Care Act in response to the growing number of citizens with long-term health care needs and the repeal of this act would only impose enormous financial, emotional and physical burdens on these citizens. This is an issue that affects every American family. No one regardless of class, race or creed is exempt from a potential accident or illness requiring long-term care. It is estimated that 15 million Americans will need some kind of long-term care by 2020, but fewer than three percent have a long-term care policy. We should not abandon this effort, rather Congress should come together to find a sustainable solution to address this challenge.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Chair, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 1173, a bill that would repeal the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports program (CLASS). Instead of repealing the CLASS Act and leaving millions of Americans in need of long-term care with the status quo, Congress should be working together to improve the program.

Madam Chair, the CLASS program was designed to provide Americans with a voluntary long-term care insurance program that would make long-term care more affordable and accessible. Statistics show that there are currently over 10 million Americans in need of long-term care; by 2020, that number is expected to grow to 15 million. We have an obligation to ensure that those in need of longterm care have affordable options available to them.

The United States is facing a long-term care crisis. With the Nation's baby boomers nearing retirement, we can expect to see the number of seniors in need of long-term continue to rise in the coming years. Due to the high costs of obtaining long-term support services, it is estimated that there are 52 million unpaid caregivers-mostly relatives of those in need-providing long-term care in the home.

In my district, there are over 115,000 seniors and 12,557 residents collecting Social Security disability insurance-most of whom will most likely need long-term care services at some point in their lifetime. In addition, there are 85,444 of my constituents who are nearing retirement age and would benefit from the peace of mind of having insurance coverage for long-term care.

Each year, families pay more than $50 billion out-of-pocket to provide long-term support services to loved ones. Many of these families are already hard-pressed financially, but do not have any other options available to them. Working to fix the CLASS program will provide working adults a national, voluntary, and premium-financed insurance program for the purchase of long-term care services and supports. Instead of working to fix the CLASS Act, the Republican majority is trying to repeal this important program in its entirety.

Madam Chair, it is estimated that about 70 percent of people over 65 will require lonaterm care services at some point during their lifetime. Medicare covers only minimal longterm care services such as short-term skilled nursing care and limited home health services.

Medicaid now accounts for nearly 50 percent of all long-term care spending nationwide. Unfortunately, Americans wishing to utilize Medicaid for long-term care services must impoverish themselves in order to qualify. In many cases, families are left with no choice but Medicaid after they are forced to spend down their income and assets to pay for costly long-term care services.

Insurance policies in the private market which cover long-term care services are often too expensive for most Americans, and currently pay for only about 7 percent of spending on long-term care. Approximately only nine percent of Americans aged 50 or older have private insurance policies that cover long-term care services. The CLASS Act seeks to address the lack of available coverage by making long-term care services more accessible and affordable for working families.

The CLASS Act provides a framework with which to build a viable long-term care program. Repealing this much needed program brings us back to square one in our effort to provide working families with a national insurtheir long-term care needs.

Madam Chair, this is just another GOP attempt to dismantle the Affordable Care Act one piece at a time. The American people deserve better and Congress needs to work together to ensure that Americans of all income levels have access to long-term care services in the event that they become necessary.

Madam Chair. I urge my colleagues to vote against passage of this misguided legislation that simply ignores the need to address our Nation's long-term care crisis.

The Acting CHAIR. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5minute rule for a period not to exceed 3 hours.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Energy and Commerce printed in the bill shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and shall be considered read.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 1173

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011"

SEC. 2. REPEAL OF CLASS PROGRAM.

(a) REPEAL.—Title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300ll et seq.; relating to the CLASS program) is repealed.

(b) Conforming Changes.—

(1)(A) Title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Public Law 111-148; 124 Stat. 119, 846-847) is repealed.

- (B) The table of contents contained in section 1(b) of such Act is amended by striking the items relating to title VIII.
- (2) Section 1902(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)) is amended-
- (A) by striking paragraphs (81) and (82);
- (B) in paragraph (80), by inserting "and" at the end: and
- (C) by redesignating paragraph (83) as paragraph (81).
- (3) Section 6021(d) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 2005 (42 U.S.C. 1396p note) is amended-(A) in paragraph (2)(A)(iv)—
- (i) by inserting "not" before "include"; and (ii) by striking "and information" and inserting "or information"; and
  - (B) in paragraph (3)—
- (i) in the heading, by striking "APPROPRIA-TION" and inserting "FUNDING";
- (ii) by striking "2015" and inserting "2012":

(iii) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $3,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2013 through 2015.".

The Acting CHAIR. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those received for printing in the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in a daily issue dated January 31, 2012, or earlier and except pro forma amendments for the purpose of debate. Each amendment so received ance program that enables them to plan for may be offered only by the Member who causes it to be printed or a designee and shall be considered read if printed.

Are there any amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON LEE OF TEXAS

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as fol-

SEC. 3. STUDY ON THE IMPACT OF NOT HAVING LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE ON THE FEDERAL, STATE, AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

- (a) STUDIES.—Section 2 shall not take effect until-
- (1) the Director of the Congressional Budget Office completes a macroeconomic study and submits a report to the Congress on the impact on the Federal, State, and local governments of not having long-term care insurance; and
- (2) the Secretary of Health and Human Services completes a study and submits a report to the Congress on the best practices necessary to have a viable, financially secure, and solvent long-term care insurance program.
- (b) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding section (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Madam Chair, first of all, let me say that I was on the floor yesterday regarding the CLASS Act and my approach to the CLASS Act. And I recognize that we have had some difficulty with putting together the right balance, the right financial structure for a very large program. But it does not mean that it does not have purpose.

The CLASS program deals with longterm care. In my readings I've determined that private families and loved ones have given in essence $450 billion in private care, meaning that they have taken care of their loved ones on their own; $101 billion has been spent by the Medicaid program. And I said yesterday that I've had the experience of taking care of a dear mother who I lost in 2010, and right now an aunt who I am taking care of in 2012. And I've seen a number of friends and others who need long-term care. And so the idea of disposing of it to me seems incomplete, without projecting back to Health and Human Services how can we get this done.

My amendment would not repeal the CLASS Act until the completion of a macroeconomic study.

□ 1540

We must determine the cost of not having long-term care insurance on the Federal, State and local governments before we repeal any programs like CLASS that are self-sustaining. CLASS is not taxpayer funded. The lack of affordable care is a very serious problem which, if not addressed, will only add to our growing national debt. H.R. 1173 would repeal the CLASS Act in its totality, and I believe that that is the wrong direction to go. And so I would be offering my amendment to help 26 million Americans who need long-term care services in the near future.

The CLASS Act is a positive intent, and it deals with the fact that we all must have balance of burden and benefit. We have to recognize that there are those whom we have to help. My amendment would ask for that study to be engaged and to ask for the Secretary to come back with an analysis of how devastating the impact would be and how high the deficit would grow. As the former executive director for the National Governors Association noted, failure to reform the underfunded, uncoordinated patchwork of long-term care supports and services is a failure to truly reforming health care.

Long-term care is not just for the elderly. It's for those who have had catastrophic illnesses, maybe the injured football player or the injured skier or a major accident when our loved ones need our attention. And, oh, how much can be done with long-term care. How do I know it? My mother went into a nursing home and could not walk—but she walked out.

Yes, there is value to helping people restore their lives. And baby boomers are already turning 65; 10,000 people will turn 65 every day as of January 1, 2011, over the next 25 years. And I'm grateful that because of health care and the Affordable Care Act, they will be living longer. Therefore, I'm asking that we not throw the baby out with the bath water. Allow the Secretary to do this study and to do this study that will be helpful to all of us. By 2050, the number of individuals using long-term care will increase.

I would like to reserve the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman may not reserve the balance of her time.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Let me just say, Madam Chair, to my disappointment, I wanted to reserve to engage with my friend. But let me just say this: that care involves home residential care, skilled-nursing facilities, and it will likely double from the 10 million services in 2000 to, as I said earlier, 26 million people.

So it makes sense to accept my amendment that would allow this macroeconomic study to look closely at the benefit and the burden of not having long-term care. I can assure you that we will be better informed to be able to have those instructions, and I would ask my colleagues to support this amendment.

Madam Chair, I rise today in support of my amendment #2, to H.R. 1173, "The Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011." My amendment would delay the repeal of the CLASS program until the completion of a macroeconomic study. We must determine the costs of not having long-term care insurance on the federal, state, and local governments before we repeal programs, like CLASS, that are self sustaining. CLASS is not tax payer funded! The lack of affordable care is a very serious problem which, if not addressed, will only add to our growing national debt

H.R. 1173 would repeal Title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and Supports (CLASS) Program—a national, voluntary long-term care insurance program for purchasing community living assistance services and supports. Title VIII also authorized and appropriated funding through 2015 for the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information (clearing house). H.R. 1173 would rescind any unobligated balances appropriated to the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information.

I ask my colleagues to ensure that the 26 million Americans, who will need long term care services in the near future, will be able to purchase this care at reasonable prices.

The CLASS Act is a noble and notable attempt to legislate this issue but when the Administration realized that the legislation did not do what we thought it would they came forth and did the right thing and deemed it to be unsustainable.

Policy won out over politics because it would be easy to obfuscate and forge ahead with implementation even in the face of an obviously problematic bill. This indeed was a bold act of integrity for the Department of Health and Human Services.

The inclusion of the long term care infrastructure (CLASS) in health care reform was a signature issue for one of the foremost advocates in this bicameral body, the late Senator Ted Kennedy who worked tirelessly to achieve its enactment.

As Raymond Scheppach, former Executive Director for National Governors' Association noted, "failure to reform the under-funded, uncoordinated patchwork of long-term care supports and services is a failure to truly reforming health care." This failure defines the revolving door of our health care system.

An estimated 10 million Americans currently need long term care services, and that number is projected to reach 26 million by 2050. Nearly half of all funding for these services is now provided through Medicaid, which is an ever-growing and inexorable burden on states and requires individuals to "spend down" or, become and stay poor to receive the help they need.

This spend-down activity runs contrary to the American notion of putting something away for a rainy day, or to allow for passing on to your heirs so that they can see a better day than you.

Éstimates suggest that in the upcoming years the number of disabled elderly who cannot perform basic activities of daily living without assistance may double today's level. CLASS provides the aging and the disabled with a solution that is self sustaining, at no cost to tax payers.

As the estimated 76 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964 become elderly, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security will nearly double as a share of the economy by 2035.

Baby boomers are already turning 65. As of January 1, 2011, 10,000 people will turn 65 every day and this will continue for the next 20 years. It is reasonable to assume that over time the aging of baby boomers will increase the demand for long-term care.

In addition, individuals 85 years and older are one of the fastest growing segments of the population. In 2005, there are an estimated 5 million people 85+ in the United States; this figure is expected to increase to 19.4 million by 2050. This means that there could be an increase from 1.6 million to 6.2 million people age 85 or over with severe or moderate memory impairment in 2050.

Repealing the CLASS program does nothing to address the fact that private long-term care insurance options are limited and the costs are too high for many American families, including many in my Houston district, to afford.

An estimated 10 million Americans needed long-term care in 2000. Most but not all persons in need of long-term care are elderly. Approximately 63% are persons aged 65 and older (6.3 million); the remaining 37% are 64 years of age and younger (3.7 million).

The lifetime probability of becoming disabled in at least two activities of daily living or of being cognitively impaired is 68% for people age 65 and older.

By 2050, the number of individuals using paid long-term care services in any setting (e.g., at home, residential care such as assisted living, or skilled nursing facilities) will likely double from the 10 million using services in 2000, to 26 million people. This estimate is influenced by growth in the population of older people in need of care.

Of the older population with long-term care needs in the community, about 30% (1.5 million persons) have substantial long-term care needs—three or more activities of daily living limitations. Of these, about 25% are 85 and older and 70% report they are in fair to poor health. 40% of the older population with long-term care needs are poor or near poor (with incomes below 150% of the federal poverty level).

Between 1984 and 1994, the number of older persons receiving long-term care remained about the same at 5.5 million people, while the prevalence of long-term care use declined from 19.7% to 16.7% of the 65+ population. In comparison, 2.1%, or over 3.3 million, of the population aged 18–64 received long-term care in the community in 1994.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, again, this amendment continues to ignore the reality around the CLASS program.

The CLASS program has been reviewed by outside analysts, by the HHS actuary and the Congressional Budget Office; and just last year the Obama administration finally admitted what so many already knew, the CLASS program is not workable. In fact, the Congressional Budget Office has certified that not a single person would ever receive benefits from the CLASS program. Any effort to preserve a failed program on the books simply delays any real attempt to ensure every American has access to affordable long-term care coverage.

From the start, the CLASS program was a Big Government idea that independent analysts believed was flawed and unworkable. The American Academy of Actuaries, the Congressional Budget Office and even officials at the Department of Health and Human Services run by Secretary Sebelius had grave concerns about the workability of this program. It has been studied. It does not work. If you would have done this study before you passed it, we would not have wasted millions of taxpayer dollars on a program that was doomed from the start. Perhaps we should visit what the failed implementation of the CLASS program has done, rather than spend millions on a study of what its removal would do.

I begin by reminding my colleagues that the CLASS program has done nothing to help reduce Federal or State spending. In fact, the Department spent at least $5 million to implement a failed program and an $80 billion hole in the Federal budget. I would also remind my colleague that the CLASS program has done nothing for consumers who are left with a failed program that was overpromised to the public as part of the President's monstrous health care law.

We must move to take the CLASS program off the books so that we can move forward with solutions that work with the private market that are affordable for consumers and don't place additional strain on the Federal and State budgets.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Chair, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. I yield to the gentlewoman from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I thank the gentleman. Madam Chair, first of all, I want to make sure that my amendment is amendment No. 2 to H.R. 1173, and I have another amendment which is amendment No. 1.

But I do want to respond to the gentleman and just indicate that best practices have not been assessed. The point of my amendment is to get us focusing on what the numbers need to be to increase the viability of life and care for those needing long-term care, juxtaposed against the enormous debt and deficit that will occur if no one has long-term care or we continue to have to utilize Medicaid, which is at $101 billion, private insurance is only at $14.5 billion, and then the burden on family members, aging family members, their care. They have put in their pound of support at $450 billion. We can at least pay attention to new numbers by asking for best practices to be assessed.

I believe if we do that, we will have the opportunity to do the right thing by the American people; and we will be, in essence, being productive. No one can deny the fact that having insurance that has people being eliminated from insurance for preexisting conditions is not good. No one can say that having children on your insurance to 26 is not good. No one can say that not being kicked out of a hospital bed because you have flat-lined on your insurance is not good. It is good.

We recognize that coming together in a bipartisan manner, we can, in fact, make this right, and we can find a way to help those families right now. Alzheimer's, where families are taking care of that loved one, they need support; and they need it in a structure that can help provide them with resources for long-term care.

I ask my colleagues to support a thoughtful amendment that deals with providing additional information. I thank the gentleman for his time. I ask my colleagues to support the Jackson Lee No. 2 amendment on a macroeconomic study on the benefits and burdens of repealing the CLASS Act.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON LEE OF TEXAS

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. 3. ENSURING MARKET PENETRATION FOR PRIVATE LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2 shall not take effect until such date as the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies to the Congress that at least 60 percent of individuals in the United States who are 25 years of age or older have private long-term care insurance.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Texas is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Madam Chair, I rise with great concern about H.R. 1173. And, again, I want to make it very clear that in all the course of traveling throughout my district when the Affordable Care Act was passed in 2010, there was a great deal of emotion and celebration. I take, for example, those senior citizens who were continuously falling through the hole on Medicare part D. This particular legislation helped close the doughnut hole where seniors' prescription drugs did not skyrocket, so they would not have to make a decision among their drug prescriptions or their rent or what they ate

□ 1550

This amendment is very clear. It simply states Congress resolves that health care is necessary for a healthy population, humane treatment of impoverished citizens, and to help reduce the budget deficit, and that long-term care insurance represents one-third of Federal and State spending on Medicaid. It's a simple statement of fact, Madam Chairwoman, and I would ask that this simple statement of fact be added to this legislation. I think it will be a positive statement. It will give us the connectedness to say that we have got to get back to the drawing boards and make sure that we have, in fact, the right kind of insurance for people in need.

I can't imagine why we would want to abandon those who need long-term care. As I've indicated, it may be a young person who faces a catastrophic illness or accident; it may be a child suffering from a chronic disease: it may be some of our friends who suffer from issues dealing with mental health. In my own community, just recently, one of our major hospitals with mental health beds was closed down, 148 beds. Who knows what will happen to those patients, some of whom actually stayed in that facility for a period of time. We know we don't have enough mental health beds and beds for those who need long-term care, suffering from conditions dealing with their mental health.

My amendment is recognition of the fact that the issue of long-term care services is not going away. The enormous cost of not providing the rainy-day umbrella, the cushion for families and those who are suffering from devastating disease just cannot happen. It cannot be swept under the rug. The cost curb is steep and growing, and we cannot continue to kick the can down the road. Long-term care, again, is fundamental. And so, this particular legislation acknowledges that.

Forty percent of long-term care users today are between the ages of 18 and 64, as I said. While most people who need long-term care are in their seventies and eighties, as I said, many younger people are facing the horror of disability or a disability without any way of paying for it, without giving relief to their family members. Long-term care is expensive and can quickly wipe out hardworking families' savings, which gives many families a Hobson's choice: spend down and wipe out years of hardworking services to qualify for Medicaid.

For those of you who don't know how Medicaid works, because we want to be responsible with Federal tax dollars, you have to be down to zero—your house has to be sold, your car has to be sold, any assets have to be sold, and everything you have goes back into the system.

Well, I know there are people who believe that they want to pay part of this burden, but there are others who understand that, in addition to paying, why should they be made completely indigent? Why can't that person remain in their home, even with care—which is another part of long-term care. It gives the opportunity for families to be together and for that individual who is injured to be able to be taken care of inside their home with a loving family but yet having the long-term care providers.

This is a simple statement. I hope my colleagues will not oppose the idea that long-term care is important and that we have to respond to it by way of ensuring that we don't grow the deficit. The average lifetime long-term care spending for a 65-year-old is $47,000; 16 percent will spend $100,000 and 5 percent will spend $250,000.

There's no doubt that we need relief. Nationwide, the median annual cost of a nursing home in 2010 was $75,000, room and board, in an assisted living facility. This is a crisis that will impact the debt; and, therefore, I would argue that repealing the CLASS Act without a positive statement, Madam Chair, of how important it is is tragic.

I ask my colleagues to support the Jackson Lee amendment. Stand up and be counted for the value of long-term care support here in America.

Madam Chair, I rise today in support of my amendment #1 to H.R. 1173, "The Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011." My amendment states, "Congress resolves that health care is necessary for a healthy population, humane treatment of impoverished citizens, and to help reduce the budget deficit; and that long-term care insurance represents one-third of federal and state spending on Medicaid."

H.R. 1173 would repeal Title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and Supports (CLASS) Program—a national, voluntary long-term care insurance program for purchasing community living assistance services and supports. Title VIII also authorized and appropriated funding through 2015 for the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information (clearing house). H.R. 1173 would rescind any unobligated balances appropriated to the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information.

My amendment is recognition of the fact that the issue of long-term care services is not going away. It cannot be swept under the rug. The cost-curve is steep and growing. We cannot continue to kick the can down the road: long-term care is fundamental.

As our nation's population ages, there is an increasingly urgent need to find effective ways to help Americans prepare for their individual long-term care needs. Almost seven out of ten people turning age 65 today will need some help with their activities of daily living at some point in their remaining years.

Forty percent of long-term care users today are between the ages of 18 and 64. While most people who need long-term care are in their 70s and 80s, many younger people, particularly those living with a significant disability, also may need assistance.

Long-term care is expensive, and can quickly wipe out hardworking families' savings, which gives many families a Hobson's choice: spend-down and wipe out years of hardearned savings to qualify for Medicaid.

While costs for nursing home care can vary widely, they average about $6,500 a month, or anywhere from $70,000 to $80,000 a year. And these costs are only becoming more expensive.

People who receive long-term care at home spend an average of $1,800 a month. The average lifetime long-term care spending for a 65 year old is $47,000; 16 percent will spend $100,000 and 5 percent will spend $250,000. And many of these people have other expenses as well.

Nationwide, the median annual cost of a nursing home in 2010 was $75,000; room and board in an assisted living facility, with no additional help, was $37,500; an attendant that provides home care and no medical tasks, like the dispensing of medication, is paid approximately $19 an hour.

These expenses are left to America's seniors and people with disabilities (and their adult children) to pay for out of pocket until their pockets are all but empty. As this body knows well, Medicare only covers short-term and limited long-term care services, and the Medicaid safety net is only available to those who have depleted virtually all of their resources as a result of being frail or suffering from dementia. Many people are left in dire situations and are truly at society's mercy.

Today, there are many Americans with disabilities who want to and are able to work and thereby maintain independence and contribute financially to their families. However, if they depend upon an attendant to drive them to their job or help them shop, use the toilet, or bathe, they must have enough additional financial resources to pay for such assistance, or have low enough incomes to qualify for Medicaid.

Long-term care insurance is the most popular of the private options available, but less than 3-percent of the American people have long-term care insurance, meaning there is a wide gap and acute lack of awareness. The CLASS Act sought to bridge this gap and has come up a little short. However we cannot, as a Congress, pretend the problem is going away.

My amendment recognizes that long-term care must be addressed as millions of baby boomers have already begun turning 65. The aging population and the disabled need viable options for their care. Taking away a program that is intended to meet the future needs of our aging is the wrong approach. We should be focused on ways to boost our economy, providing increased access to affordable care to seniors, low income, and the disabled, and job creation. We should not be eliminating programs that aim to sustain our aging population.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PITTS. Madam Chair, this amendment continues to ignore the reality. The CLASS program is simply not workable. Keeping the CLASS program and pretending that it will ever work does absolutely nothing and offers no help to millions of Americans who want to maintain their health. Any effort to preserve a failed program on the books simply delays any real attempt to ensure every American has access to affordable, long-term care coverage.

From the start, the CLASS program was a Big Government idea that independent analysts believed was flawed and unworkable. In fact, the Obama administration officials pointed out serious concerns with the CLASS program as early as the beginning of 2009. While those concerns went ignored by the administration until earlier this fall, now is not the time to stall its repeal.

Yesterday, Senator HARKIN told reporters that the only way to make CLASS work is to make it mandatory. Are the supporters of the CLASS Act really advocating another mandate? Keeping CLASS on the books is a step in that direction.

Keeping the CLASS program on the books also further threatens the private market and the nearly 8 million Americans who have private long-term care insurance today. You cannot have a functioning long-term care insurance market if there is a continued threat of a government takeover of that market.

We need long-term care reform that builds on what the private market provides, not destroys it. I hope that those on the other side of the aisle have the courage to admit their mistake, repeal this law, and begin to work on a real, workable long-term care policy.

I urge Members to oppose this amendment.

Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Tennessee is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Madam Chairman, I oppose the amendment, and I stand here today in support of repealing the CLASS Act.

You know, it's been almost 2 years since we sought passage of the ObamaCare bill in this Chamber, and it is something that we have worked since taking the majority to repeal this and get it off the books; and, indeed, what we are seeing is a need to get this CLASS Act off the books.

Despite the Federal Government's best efforts, there is no way to show that this is going to save money. Indeed, in a budget gimmick, as we were discussing this bill in committee a couple of years ago, what they did was to come in and say, Oh, this will save $80 billion. Oh, let's add title 8 to the bill, let's add sections 8001 and 8002 to this legislation, and let's create this little pool here where we're going to have near-term expenses that are supposed to yield us some long-term savings. The problem is all the new math you wanted to put to work on this, Madam Chair, there was no way to show that it was ever going to save money. And, indeed, Secretary Sebelius, who is the Health and Human Services Secretary, was forced to admit last October that there was no path forward for this pro-

So what we need to do is to say this was a mistake. It doesn't save money. It is not going to address a problem. It is something that needs to come off the books. It is a way we can step forward and we can take a program off the books. And I encourage my colleagues to support ending the CLASS Act, getting it off the books.

I yield back the balance of my time. The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. DEUTCH

Mr. DEUTCH. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as fol-

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 3. PREVENTING AN INCREASE IN MEDICAID SPENDING.

Section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect until 90 days after the date on which the Comptroller General of the United States certifies to Congress that failure to implement the CLASS program established under title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act will not increase State and Federal spending for long-term care under the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DEUTCH. Madam Chair, although I regret that this Congress is considering the full repeal of a promising effort to address the looming have to admit I'm not surprised. This is the action of a Congress deserving of America's low opinion of us.

We know the facts. A vote against this amendment is a vote for increased Medicaid spending.

No one is immune from becoming disabled or growing old, yet just 10 percent of Americans over age 50 can afford long-term care insurance. As a result, a staggering 90 percent of Americans rely on long-term care provided by Medicaid. It is no wonder that over a third of Medicaid spending is on longterm care, not on checkups for impoverished children, not on prenatal care for poor, expectant mothers. No. it is the expensive, institutionalized longterm care funded by Medicaid.

The goals of the CLASS program represented an alternative to this system on which we all could have agreed, a fully solvent, affordable, premium-financed, long-term care program. It empersonal phasizes responsibility, lessens the burden on taxpayers, and reduces unnecessary Medicaid spend-

Sometimes, as things happen here, Congress passes imperfect legislation. But rather than address these imperfections, the legislation before this House today gives up on our grappling with this long-term care crisis altogether.

We've overcome challenges like this before. In the early 1980s, Social Security faced a crisis. So what happened? Did my Republican friends, concerned about having an imperfect law on the books, castigate what they called "RooseveltCare" and bring to the floor a two-page bill to revoke the Social Security Act? That's not, thankfully, what happened. What did happen was that Democrats and Republicans worked together, with President Reagan, and strengthened Social Security. As a result, Social Security continues to keep millions out of poverty. ensuring against the universal risk of old age, disability, or death of a breadwinner

The amendment I offer today would prevent repeal of the CLASS Act from taking place if failure to implement the CLASS program would increase State and Federal Medicaid spending.

Greater reliance on the safety net has led many to conclude that Medicaid has become unaffordable. Instead of cutting basic health care for our most vulnerable—the elderly, the disabled, poor children—we ought to reduce Medicaid spending. We ought to put more Americans back to work. We ought to make private health insurance more affordable.

There are many prescriptions for reducing Medicaid spending; but let's be clear, repeal of the CLASS Act and upholding our long-term care crisis is not among them. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that even the im-long-term care crisis in our country, I perfect CLASS bill that passed would reduce Medicaid spending by at least $2 billion.

> If more older Americans had access to affordable long-term care insurance, middle class seniors could secure a less costly, more independent lifestyle in their own homes instead of spending down into poverty to receive expensive, institutionalized care.

> What message is Congress sending by repealing CLASS? We are proclaiming the current system, that which incentivizes elder poverty and forces seniors to blow through their life savings, is just fine. Save nothing. Pass what you do have on to your children before you get sick. Own little property, and don't purchase long-term care insurance. Follow this plan and you'll be eligible for expensive, institutionalized care through Medicaid. If CLASS is repealed, it is exactly the children and grandchildren that my friends on the other side say they worry about who will pay the cost.

> A premium-financed long-term care program would shift people from reliance on Medicaid. This should be our shared goal. We ought to work together to fix a program that represents the first real path toward making affordable long-term care available to middle class families who want to secure themselves against possible poverty.

> I respectfully ask my colleagues to support this amendment, because reducing Medicaid spending while improving the lives of seniors and persons with disabilities is a conversation worthy of this office.

And with that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR (Mr. YODER). The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment would simply ignore the millions of dollars that have been spent by this administration to reach the same conclusion that so many unbiased analysts had said for years: The CLASS program is unworkable, causing a liability for the potential beneficiary and the taxpayers alike.

This amendment would promote reckless governing that maintains a failed program for further meddling. The CLASS program has done nothing to decrease Medicaid spending, and its inclusion in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act was a budget gimmick, a budget gimmick that will cost the American taxpayers $80 billion over the next 10 years.

Alternative policies, such as the Long-Term Care Partnership Program, which was signed into law by President Bush, have decreased Medicaid spending and deterred Americans from making Medicaid their primary payer of long-term care services. That program alone has done more for Medicaid spending than CLASS ever will.

We can and should do more to decrease Medicaid spending and ensure Americans have the access they need to affordable long-term care coverage, but government intrusion into the market is not the way to go. However, we cannot move forward in thinking about better long-term care policies with this failed program hanging over us.

Yesterday, Senator Harkin made it clear that the problem with the CLASS program was that it was voluntary. A vote in favor of this amendment is a vote in favor of another mandate on the American people.

Enough is enough. We must get this failed program off the books so that we can move forward in establishing long-term care policies that work for the American taxpayers, not those that further bankrupt this country.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTCH).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. DEUTCH

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 3. CLASS PROGRAM FLEXIBILITY.

- (a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect until such date on which each of the following has been satisfied:
- (1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services submits to Congress a report including a determination made by the Secretary on whether or not the Secretary has the authority to implement the CLASS program under title XXXII of the Public Health Service Act and develop and implement the benefit plans described in subsection (c).
- (2) In the case the Secretary determines the Secretary does not have the authority described in paragraph (1), the Secretary includes in the report described in such paragraph recommendations for statutory changes needed, and a recommended list of statutory provisions that would need to be waived, to provide the Secretary with such authority.
- (3) In the case the Secretary determines the Secretary does not have the authority described in paragraph (1), not later than 90 days after the submission of such report and recommendations, Congress has considered and rejected such recommendations.
- (b) Exceptions.—
- (1) Section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect

if the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines under subsection (a)(1) that the Secretary has the authority described in such subsection and the Secretary develops the 3 benefit plans described in subsection (c)

(2) In the case the Secretary determines under subsection (a)(1) that the Secretary does not have the authority described in such subsection and Congress has not considered and rejected the recommendations described in subsection (a)(2) by the deadline described in subsection (a)(3), section 2 (other than subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section) shall not take effect and the Secretary shall have the authority to waive the provisions recommended by the Secretary to be waived under the report described in subsection (a)(2).

(c) ACTUARIALLY SOUND BENEFIT PLANS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall develop 3 actuarially sound benefit plans as alternatives for consideration for designation as the CLASS Independence Benefit Plan described in section 3203 of the Public Health Service Act that address adverse selection and have market appeal, regardless of whether such plans satisfy the requirements described in subsection (a)(1) of such section.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Chairman, this amendment reads, "The Secretary shall develop three actuarially sound benefit plans."

This amendment's small fix gives the administration the ability to implement a program that enjoys the support of two-thirds of all Americans, including, I should add, over half of Republicans. The stipulation for moving forward, however, is that CLASS is implemented on an actuarially sound basis.

The distinguished gentleman from Louisiana and author of the underlying bill has expressed some opposition to my amendment, suggesting that it will waive the solvency requirement. I respect the gentleman's work and service, but I regret that the claim is simply untrue.

This amendment gives the Secretary waiver authority only after three requirements are met. The plan must be actuarially sound, must address adverse selection, and must have market appeal.

The deliberate obfuscation of this amendment's intention is a textbook example of why American's are fed up with Washington. I would work with anyone in any party to protect the financial security of middle class and near-retirees. But when attempts to improve the existing law in a fiscally responsible way are treated in this manner, it is no wonder why we can't get things done.

The bill's proponents say, Trust us. We'll replace this. Unfortunately, over a year ago they said the same thing about the Affordable Care Act. Instead we had repeal and replace, minus the replace.

As we all know, the CLASS program, as drafted, is facing challenges of implementation. Critics have focused on fiscal sustainability. The good news is that there is a fiscally sustainable path forward. With greater flexibility, a program could be designed that addresses adverse selection and improves market appeal.

□ 1610

We must remember that even with implementation, CLASS would only be a start addressing a very serious long-term care crisis.

Looking back on our history would serve us well today. In the infancy of Social Security, Senator William H. King, a Democrat from Utah, supported the Clark amendment which would have undercut the Social Security program. He was concerned that Social Security would crowd out private pensions and conditioned his support of Social Security upon a guarantee that the Clark amendment would later be taken up.

When Congress returned, Senator King was asked about the amendment. He said, You can forget about the amendment. The passage of the Social Security Act has got everybody talking about pension plans. You can forget it forever.

Americans ought to be talking about long-term care. We should all be lucky enough to grow older. We should all be lucky enough to retire in south Florida.

However, no one is immune from the frailty of old age, and no one is exempt from disability.

I can't help but think of a very impressive man from south Florida, a good friend named Alan Brown, who, on January 2, 1988, at the age of 20, was hit by a strong wave at the beach that caused a catastrophic spinal cord injury that leaves him a quadriplegic to this day.

Mr. Brown has an endless list of expenses from his wheelchair and medication, to disability through accessible transportation, and long-term care. Even while holding two jobs, he struggles to support his family in the face of rising health care costs.

As lawmakers, it is our responsibility to remember that those who are young and healthy may not always remain so and act on the fact that long-term care is out of reach for the majority of Americans. Any one of us could experience an unpredictable accident like Mr. Brown. If that is not compelling enough, the inevitability of aging should be.

What message is this Congress sending when our response to the long-term care crisis is "just say no"? Why should Americans be thinking about long-term care if their leaders in Congress answer a complicated and systemic problem with a politically charged two-page bill?

If the Secretary were given the flexibility in my amendment, the CLASS program would remain the furthest thing from an entitlement, as it would remain fully financed by premiums. This fix to CLASS is true fiscal responsibility, an individual retirement security; and I respectfully urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, the amendment No. 5, or Deutch 2, is an amendment essentially that the Secretary of Health and Human Services has already looked at, some of these provisions, in eight different ways in trying to come up with some possibility of certifying the fiscal solvency of this CLASS Act within the 75-year budget window, the out-years.

Thank goodness, Mr. Chairman, for the wisdom of Senator Judd Gregg on the Senate side when that amendment was accepted in the health committee. I don't know whether it was unanimously accepted by the Democrats, but I think it was. Again, the prescience and the wisdom of Senator Gregg is something the American people should be, and I think will be, eternally grateful for.

The Secretary looked at the possibility of saying that we'll make this fiscally solvent if we eliminate eligibility for anybody with a preexisting condition. Then they said, Well, no, that's not going to work. So let's say, how about a 15-year waiting period for someone with preexisting conditions. Finally, ultimately, looked at the possibility of yet again making this part of ObamaCare, the CLASS program, a mandatory participation. How has that worked out for them thus far in regard to the exchange in young people being forced, under the ruse of the Constitution, of the commerce clause, to do that under the penalty of law, increase taxes or penalties, or whatever they want to call it? Well, the Supreme Court will ultimately make that decision.

Mr. Chair, the Secretary had every opportunity to look at this. We are talking about, I say to the gentleman from Florida, over an 18-month period of time, and they absolutely could not certify it.

You can delay and delay and delay, but what part of "no" does the gentleman not understand? No, this will not work. This amendment is unnecessary. We know that this program will not work.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle, they want to leave the provision in the bill. They want to let it stand there so they can somehow maybe with the next administration or with the next chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee or whomever on their side of the aisle might want to resurrect Freddy Krueger one more time on the backs of the American taxpayer. This is a fiscal train wreck.

Mr. Chairman, the bill actually calls for the provision of a plan at a date certain, October of 2012. I'm an OB/GYN physician. That's less than 9 months. That goes quickly. I know that about 9 months.

When you get there, folks that are looking and counting on the CLASS program long-term care insurance, they want to sign up for it. And the Federal Government says, I know it's on the books, I know it's still part of the law. I know we are obligated to have a program for you to choose from by October 1, 2012; but we decided not to go forward with it. What's to prevent them from suing the Federal Government? While these lawsuits are pending and going on and on and onas an attorney jobs bill, it would have some merit. In the meantime, the private market for long-term care insurance, they are not innovative. They are not going to do anything until the legality of that is cleared up.

We feel very strongly that this would be a bad amendment, and I strongly opnose it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTCH).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida will be postponed.

Ms. MOORE. Mr. Chair, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Wisconsin is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MOORE. Here we are again, ladies and gentlemen. The lights are up, the music is playing and my Republican colleagues are doing the same old song and dance for the American people. The Republicans have spread out their sand, and they're doing their best soft-shoe routine, trying to convince the American people that the repeal of this bill is in their best interest. As the saying goes, if it ain't broke, don't fix it. Yet we find ourselves here debating the repeal of a law that would have sought to address the long-term crisis burgeoning in this country.

Mr. Chairman, to most people, finding a solution to the long-term care insurance crisis in this country seems like a good law. It must be if 56 national groups, including AARP and SEIU, are against repealing the CLASS Act.

Once again, my Republican colleagues are trying their best to distract the American people from their not seeking a solution with this repealthe-bill sideshow.

As we debate this repeal, I have heard so many of our colleagues refer to the President needing to come and apologize for introducing this provision in the Affordable Care Act. It occurs to me that the effort to embarrass the President, to harass him, to defy him, that that is more important than finding a solution to the growing challenge of the aging population. Indeed, it is an emerging burgeoning problem.

$\square$ 1620

Ten million Americans need long-term care. Over the next decade, another 5 million Americans will require this care, bringing the total to 15 million people. The problem is only becoming more challenging with estimates that nearly 70 percent of people—the baby boomers—will need some level of long-term care after turning 65. An additional issue is that this is a heavy burden on family budgets.

This law was seeking to provide a national, voluntary, and self-sustaining insurance program for assistance services to aid elderly and disabled people. It would allow individuals to live independently at home and in the community for as long as possible without impoverishing themselves.

It seems that my Republican colleagues are content to defer the dreams of millions of Americans to live with some sort of dignity as they age. As we enjoy this Black History Month, it reminds me of one of my favorite poets, an African American poet who would be 110 years old today, Langston Hughes:

What happens to a dream deferred? Does it dry up like a raisin in the Sun? Or fester like a sore—and then run? Does it stink like rotten meat? Or crust and sugar over—like a syrupy sweet? Maybe it just sags like a heavy load. Or does it explode?

Republicans want to put one man out of a job and would defer the dreams of millions of Americans. Yet, while they continue their song and dance, Mr. Chair, denying seniors the long-term care that they deserve and putting more and more Americans out of work, I hope the American people recognize who is really on their side before we see the American Dream of living and retiring in dignity explode.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. LEE of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. LEE of California. Let me first thank Congresswoman Gwen Moore for her very passionate and very clear statement. I thank both she and Congressman Ellison for their unwavering leadership and conviction on the real

As a former cochair of the Congressional Progressive Caucus and as a cofounder of the Congressional Out of Poverty Caucus, I rise in strong opposition to this bill.

Mr. Chairman, members of the Progressive Caucus are here because, once again, the Republican leadership would rather attack the President than help the millions of struggling seniors, people with disabilities and their families who are faced with a system that fails to meet their very basic needs. This should really be a nonpartisan issue, but we are here today because Republicans are more focused on ending Medicare and repealing a long-term care program than they are on creating jobs to put Americans back to work.

Last year, the Republicans' first order of business was to eliminate mind you, eliminate—the Medicare guarantee for America's seniors under the Ryan budget proposal. This year, it's the same old story. Instead of focusing on jobs or on extending middle class tax cuts, unemployment assistance, or fixing the Medicare physician pay rate, this Tea Party Congress continues to waste time on pointless bills just to score political points.

Repealing the CLASS program will do nothing-nothing-to address the long-term crisis for the 10 million Americans who need care now and the 5 million more who will require it over the next 10 years. Killing this program without offering any alternative is, frankly, irresponsible. The law may not be perfect, but repealing the bill does not make the problem go away. We should be doing everything we can to ensure that senior citizens and the disabled also have a shot at the American Dream. We should not destroy this for them just because of their ages or their disabilities. Why in the world would the Republican Tea Party want to throw them under the bus?

We should work to find a real solution that meets the needs of the millions of baby boomers who are retiring now, of the senior citizens and the disabled, and we should work to ensure that they get the long-term care over the next decade that they will need. Rather than repeal this bill today, we need to give experts time to identify changes that would make the CLASS program stronger, and Congress needs to focus on the real priorities of the day, which are jobs and the economy.

We have work to do, and we don't have a minute to waste. Let's not waste another year without a jobs bill and without extending vital unemployment benefits and payroll tax reductions to millions of Americans while our economy continues to recover. It is time for the Republican Tea Party to stop walking away from our senior citizens and the disabled and to work with us to continue middle class tax cuts, issues facing the American people unemployment assistance, and to ensure that seniors can keep seeing their doctors.

> We need to come together now to enact bold programs and policies that provide equal opportunity and equal access for every single American no matter their race, no matter their employment status, no matter their humble beginnings, no matter their ages, no matter their disabilities. Americans can't wait. This Congress should not wait. We need to really figure out a way to do the right thing on behalf of our senior citizens and the disabled, but I have to say that today, unfortunately, this bill moves us in the wrong direction.

> I yield back the balance of my time. Ms. HAHN. I move to strike the last word

> The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

> Ms. HAHN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to H.R. 1173, the Republican legislation to repeal the CLASS program.

CLASS was designed to be the first Federal voluntary long-term care program, making long-term care more accessible and affordable for millions of Americans. The idea behind the CLASS program is to provide Americans, especially our seniors, with peace of mind if they suffer from an unexpected longterm illness or injury.

We have a long-term care crisis in this country. According to Secretary Sebelius, "an estimated 15 million Americans will need some kind of longterm care, and fewer than 3 percent have a long-term care policy." Because Medicare and other existing programs do not cover these services, we must work together to find a solution. As my Republican friends know, however, the CLASS program as enacted will not be implemented. Secretary Sebelius informed Congress last October that she did not "see a viable path forward for CLASS implementation at this time." In other words, this legislation we are debating today is not needed.

Instead of legislation to create jobs and grow our economy, our Republican friends are focused on repealing a program that has already been suspended. I want to encourage my friends on the other side of the aisle to take a step back and focus on the things we could be doing together to make long-term care more affordable and accessible.

I have encountered in my own life the issue of providing long-term care. My dear, sweet mother, before she passed away last summer, received long-term care services for years, and I will always remember the warmth and affection her caregivers showed her and my family day in and day out. What we should be doing today is ensuring that the hardworking men and women who provide care for our seniors in their own homes earn a living wage, because these jobs are the jobs that make a difference and that bring happiness to those who need their help the most.

With robust job growth predicted in the health care sector over the next decade, it is imperative that we support long-term care services and those who provide those services. This is a win-win for the American economy. Not only do long-term care services provide jobs, but we know, if our seniors can be taken care of in their own homes, it can save Americans money in the long run. I fear, however, that this legislation is meant as a step towards dismantling the health care reform law that Congress passed and that the President signed, a law that will help millions of Americans obtain better and more affordable health care coverage over the next decade.

Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, insurance companies cannot deny coverage to people with preexisting conditions. Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, Americans now have access to free preventative care services. Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, small businesses can receive tax credits to provide their employees with health coverage. Thanks to the Affordable Care Act, children can stay on their parents' insurance until they're 26. We just hope they don't move back home.

To my colleagues on the other side, let's not work to strip these provisions, putting power back in the hands of forprofit insurance companies. We do not need this legislation. Instead of repealing a program that is not moving forward, why don't we work on replacing it with a better long-term care program. The Affordable Care Act is not a perfect law. That's why we should be working together to fix the problems, not just to repeal them. Those problems will remain even if we repeal this part of the law. Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to stop this needless debate and legislation and get to work on the real issues at hand.

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Chair. I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to repealing the CLASS Act.

You know, we all get old, or hopefully we will all get old and reach an elderly status, and we will then perhaps become physically unable to get around a whole lot and we may need to have some long-term care. Tea Partiers will need it. Occupy Wall Streeters will need it. Mitt Romney and his group of 15 percent taxpayers will need it. The only question is whether or not the 99ers and the Tea Partiers will be able to afford it. That is the only question. We're in the same boat.

The CLASS Act was included in the health care law in order to help elderly and functionally disabled Americans purchase the services they need, which would enable them to continue living in their communities, as opposed to being forced into expensive private care which most of us can afford.

So I understand that HHS had determined that the CLASS Act cannot be implemented as written based on financial considerations; but, ladies and gentlemen, that's no reason to throw out or repeal this worthwhile initiative. We certainly need to improve it, but there's no need to repeal it.

No matter what side of the political aisle you sit on, you cannot ignore that we need to improve access to long-term care. Approximately 10 million Americans are in need of long-term care, and this number is expected to increase to 15 million over the next decade. America is aging.

In 2009, an estimated 62 million unpaid family caregivers provided $450 billion in care. At what cost to their jobs, to their family life with their children?

In 2011, the average annual cost of a nursing home was $70,000. Who can afford that?

The cost of long-term care is an unsustainable burden on family members who, while also holding a job and raising a family, struggled to provide their disabled or elderly relatives with the care that they need to continue living within their own communities.

The CLASS Act is a voluntary program. It's no mandate. Don't get it twisted. There is no mandate, individual mandate for the CLASS Act. It's a voluntary program that relies on free market principles of responsibility and competition that my colleagues in the Republican Party claim to revere. There's no mandate in this program. It would allow families of all means to plan for a secure future where a long life or a disability does not lead to financial ruin.

Take, for instance, one of my constituents, Linda Rawlins. Linda was the primary caregiver for her elderly mother until her recent passing. Linda told me that she supports the CLASS Act because millions of Americans just like her feel overwhelmed or face financial distress due to their roles as family caregivers who cannot receive any kind of assistance.

Although Linda's mother received long-term care through a local senior assistance program that enabled her to continue living at home, Linda knows that not everyone is so lucky. Having access to long-term care services enabled Linda's mother to live independently with grace and with dignity. It allowed Linda to keep her job and helped relieve the emotional and financial strains placed on her and her family as she oversaw her mother's care.

Linda and I feel like everyone should have that kind of support, and the CLASS Act is a good place to start. Repealing the CLASS Act without any attempt to improve it is a rash political move, and I urge my colleagues to oppose the bill.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. My good friend, my very good friend from Georgia, the gentleman from DeKalb, made the statement about what is the reason; there is really no reason to strike this; why not leave it on the books. And I think that's the argument we have heard all afternoon in regard to the position of the Democratic side.

But let me just read a few passages from a report that we requested from the Congressional Research Service as to why, in response to my friend from DeKalb and my good colleague from Georgia:

Judicial review assumes that the Secretary takes no further action to comply with the CLASS Act's statutory mandate to designate a benefit plan by October 1, 2012.

The Secretary would appear to be committing a facial violation of the statutory requirement to designate such plan. Her failure to take such action conceivably could be challenged in court under the Administrative Procedure Act, APA, which defines agency action to include the failure to act.

They go on to say:

The CLASS Act does not preclude judicial review and the Secretary's designation of a benefit plan is a mandatory, as opposed to a discretionary requirement.

So judicial review does not appear to be precluded. Therefore, if the Secretary fails to perform the action required by the statute, that inaction would appear to be reviewable.

I continue:

A failure by the Secretary to designate a CLASS benefit plan by October 1, 2012, presumably predicated upon a determination by her—that is not possible to develop three actuarially sound benefit plans that meet all the requirements of the act—would appear to be a final agency action from which "legal consequences will flow."

Inaction by the Secretary in designating a plan by the deadline could be found by a reviewing court to constitute noncompliance with a statutory mandate. Thus, after October 1, 2012, the Secretary's failure to take an action legally required of her would appear to meet the standard for judicial review of agency inaction unlawfully withheld under the APA, Administrative Procedure Act, provision prescribing the scope of judicial review of agency action.

I asked one of my colleagues a few minutes ago, What part of "no" do you not understand?

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Thank you, my friend from Georgia.

What you've just said is that it's essentially a failure to act, to publish regulations or to promulgate regulations that would lead to the enactment of this CLASS Act, becomes a final agency action. In other words, failure to act becomes a final agency action which then enables an appeal or judicial review, the review being for the purposes, I suppose, of failing to follow the law, which would, of course, be in support of the underlying legislation, the CLASS Act.

□ 1640

So I would argue that the regulation that you cite would actually enhance the ability of us to come to a reasonable way of financing this voluntary program.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Reclaiming my time from the gentleman, look, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is an attorney. I'm just an old country doctor. But, you know, this is plain language, and I'll be happy to provide his office with a copy of this Congressional Research Service report. I'm not going to get deep into the weeds of the legal argument back and forth, but this is about as plain as the nose on your face.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized for 5 minutes

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, I tell you what's as plain as the nose on your face, what's as plain as the nose on your face is that the Republicans are getting rid of a plan for long-term care without offering any alternative plan in its place. They're just stripping what's there without saying here's what we're going to do.

But I have a memory, Mr. Chairman. What I remember is that for long stretches of time in the last decade, Republicans had both houses and the Presidency, didn't do anything on health care other than do a big giveaway to Big Pharma. When the Democrats get in, we do a plan. We pass the Affordable Care Act. Does it need tinkering? Probably so, like all bills do. But instead of trying to work with us and do something good for the American people, Republicans say we're just going to strip the Democratic plan for long-term care. And this is too bad, because it seems to me that long-term care, Mr. Chairman, is a legitimate issue for us to work together on. But we're not working together. One side passes a bill; the other side just tries to get rid of it. I think it is high time that we start trying to work together, but we don't have a cooperative partner. Washington Republicans have proven once again that they would rather try to embarrass President Obama than help American seniors.

Last year, Republicans' first order of business was to eliminate the Medicare guarantee for America's seniors. This year it's the same old story, Mr. Chairman. No health care, no Medicare, no long-term care for millions of Americans.

Instead of a plan to create jobs or to extend middle class tax cuts or to address unemployment assistance or to fix the Medicare physician pay rate, Republicans are wasting time on divisive and pointless bills.

I do respect the gentleman's desire to have me yield, but I must very, very respectfully decline to yield because I have limited time. But if I have any extra time, I will be happy to yield to the gentleman, but it will have to be when I'm done.

Today, we could be dealing with the real issue—fixing the long-term care crisis. And I'm sure that everyone in this whole body, Republican and Democrat, ought to be concerned about it because all of us, no matter what our ideological beliefs may be, have people who need long-term care. So we've got to be about this business.

You know what, Mr. Chairman? Ten million Americans currently need long-term care, and the problem is only getting worse. The number of Americans 62 years and older is 20 percent higher than it was 10 years ago. Long-term care is a huge burden on families. An estimated 62 million—let me say that one more time, Mr. Chairman—62 million unpaid family caregivers provided care valued at $450 billion in 2009, more than the total spending in Medicare that year.

But Republicans are offering no solution to the long-term care crisis. They may say anything that they want, but they're not coming here with a bill that we can debate. They're just attacking what has already been done, which is so easy to do. Way better to be a critic than to be someone who produces solutions.

So, Mr. Chairman, I want to tell you a little bit about somebody in my district, Mary. Mary says: My mother is 90 and seriously ill and now in a nursing home. Her bill is over $6,500 a month. Mary goes on to say she will soon run out of money, referring to her mom. Why do people have to become indigent before they receive help?

That's a good question, I think. That's a question warranting our attention, but our Republican friends have no plan to protect families like Mary's. They're not here with a plan. They just want to strip and rip and take down what Democrats have already done. And people are in need of help.

So, Mr. Chairman, repealing the CLASS Act will not help Mary's family. We need to make the CLASS program stronger, not get rid of it. We need to amend it, not end it. We need to improve it. And that's why 56 national groups wrote to Congress saying please don't repeal the CLASS Act, including AARP, SEIU, and the National Council on Aging, people who really know what they're talking about when it comes to long-term care.

So I urge our Republican friends on both sides of the aisle to come together with us to make a strong long-term program for seniors rather than just tearing down and stripping down. It's as plain as the nose on your face, Mr. Chairman: Americans need long-term care

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. WELCH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Vermont is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELCH. We have a serious challenge here. We have people who need long-term care. We have very serious fiscal constraints. And the question before us really is, do we repeal the program altogether when there is a serious long-term program, as if by legislative magic a repeal suddenly makes the serious and acute problem vanish altogether. We know that doesn't happen. It may address a fiscal issue, but it doesn't solve the fiscal issue and enormous emotional pain that individuals who are trying to take care of their senior parents will face. So the problem doesn't go away if this legislation is passed. It simply means the pain will continue and probably intensify.

So the real challenge for Congress is that when there is a problem that we acknowledge is real and rising for the American people, and the folks who need long-term care are in red States and blue States, they're in your district and they're in mine, the real question is whether we address that as actively and as aggressively as we can, taking responsible steps to make certain that we can pay for what we promise

The worst thing that we can do in my view is pass legislation that has almost as its predicate the notion that by repealing the commitment that this Congress made 2 years ago, the problem doesn't exist. It does, and we all know that. You've heard the statistics-10 million Americans currently need longterm care. That is a tough challenge for those families. Over the next decade, that is going to rise to 15 million. It is a rising challenge, and the longer we defer, the more difficult it will be for us to address it. Sixty-two million Americans, good Americans, generous Americans, serve as unpaid caregivers to elderly family members. How long can that be sustained?

While nearly 70 percent of Americans will need some level of long-term care in their lifetime, only 8 percent are able to buy long-term care insurance. That's where we do need a public policy program that's going to match the resources required with the need that's rising.

The CLASS Act was designed to make progress, giving older Americans and their families some sense of security. It's not perfect. The most vigorous proponents of that legislation acknowledge it's not perfect. But what that we pass on the Republican side or the Democratic side can any of us claim is perfect?

What we have to do together is try to make an imperfect bill better. But what we can't do is abandon the very serious challenge that those 10 million Americans in need of long-term care have.

I yield back the balance of my time.

 $\Box$  1650

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from California is recognized for 5 minutes

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman and Members, this bill is just another attempt to dismantle health care reform. Last year, House Republicans passed H.R. 2 to repeal the entire Affordable Care Act. The landmark health care reform law that was enacted almost 2 years ago is what I'm referring to.

The Affordable Care Act has already made a difference in the lives of millions of Americans. Let me just recount for the Members of this House what the Affordable Care Act has done and is doing.

It prevents insurance companies from dropping people because they get sick. It prevents insurance companies from denying coverage to children with pre-existing conditions. It allows young adults to remain on their parents' health insurance until they turn 26. It provides free preventive care to seniors under Medicare. It is phasing out the "doughnut hole" and helping seniors obtain affordable prescription drugs. Finally, it provides tax credits to help small businesses purchase health insurance for their employees.

When H.R. 2 failed to move in the Senate, House Republicans began passing bills to dismantle the Affordable Care Act piece by piece and inch by inch. They passed H.R. 1213, which repeals funding for the organization of health benefit exchanges, marketplaces where American families will be able to choose an affordable health care plan. They passed H.R. 1214, which repeals funding for the construction of school-based health clinics. They passed H.R. 1216, which repeals funding for the training of primary care physicians.

Now they're trying to repeal the CLASS Act. The CLASS Act is the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports Act, and it establishes a program to facilitate access to longterm health care services. Who can be against that? The CLASS Act is a voluntary program to provide participants with a cash benefit that can be used to purchase a variety of long-term care services, such as home modifications, accessible transportation, personal assistance services, homemaker services, respite care, home health aids, and nursing support. The program would be funded entirely by the premiums paid by those who choose to participate.

House Republicans' ČLASS Act repeal also repeals funding for the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Health Information. The clearinghouse provides online information about long-term care costs and planning options

Our Nation is indeed facing a longterm health crisis. People are living longer. As a result, there's a growing need for long-term care for elderly and disabled Americans. There are 10 million people who need long-term care in the United States today. That number is expected to grow to 15 million in the year 2020. There are an estimated 52 million unpaid caregivers providing long-term care services in American homes today. American families are paying more than $50 billion every year on out-of-pocket expenses for longterm care. These families need options, and they need our support.

The CLASS Act does not need to be repealed. If House Republicans believe this program should be fixed, then they should try to fix it. However, they have not even attempted to improve this program or develop other options to make long-term care services available to American families who need them.

It is long past due for House Republicans to stop trying to dismantle health care reform and start working with us in a constructive, bipartisan manner to improve our Nation's health system. I would urge my colleagues to oppose this bill and support solutions to America's long-term care crisis. Ladies and gentlemen, what we are discussing today is precisely what Occupy Wall Street was all about. It's about what are we going to do to deal with that 99 percent out there who simply need some safety nets that their government could easily assist with.

Health care is a problem in this country. Not everyone can afford it, and I would ask my colleagues to take the politics out of this issue. The American public needs this health care reform. And the Occupy Wall Street people who are out there simply sent a message to say, okay, America, stop being simply on the side of the 1 percent, look at the 99 percent. I would urge my colleagues to do that.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from New York is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill to repeal the CLASS Act. Last year, we watched as Republicans implemented a slash-and-burn offensive against almost every and any Federal program that helps people. No matter that the program helps women or children or seniors or sick people; let's get rid of it.

Apparently, this year is no different. With this bill, Republicans have set their eyes on the CLASS Act, which when implemented, will help provide some relief to aging Americans as well as to those who love and care for them. The CLASS program was designed to combat the rapidly increasing cost of long-term care, costs that currently account for nearly half of all health care spending in this country, by helping enrollees in this program to afford a variety of long-term care services, such as home modifications, assistive technology, accessible transportation, respite care, home health care aids and nursing support.

Currently, long-term care facilities cost on average $70,000 per year, and home health care aides can cost $25 per hour in some areas. How many middle class families can afford that?

I understand the concerns that my Republican colleagues have voiced. As currently structured, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that the program will not be solvent beyond about 2029, about 20 years from now. But what is the Republicans' knee-jerk solution to all budget issues? To trash a program, a necessary program, that will provide much-needed support for seniors today and in the future.

This is completely wrong-headed. We should not destroy this program and ignore the problem. People will still grow older, hopefully, and they will need assisted living, they will need home health care, and they will need accessible transportation. At some point, we are going to have to face this issue.

The current situation, where Medicaid will pay for this but only after the family has impoverished itself and eliminated all their assets, it's not a long-term solution, it's not a tolerable solution. Why should middle class families who have worked all their lives have to impoverish themselves if an elderly relative needs home health care or assisted living or a nursing home?

Our job here is to make people's lives better, to identify problems and to find solutions. We have certainly identified a problem. There is simply no denying that only the wealthiest among us can possibly afford to pay $70,000 a year for a nursing home.

So let's do our jobs. Let's roll up our sleeves and work to make this program better. Let's work to make it solvent, not simply eliminate it. Let's not simply abandon middle class Americans who are scared to death that after working their entire lives and playing by the rules, they will have to bankrupt their children and grandchildren just to have any sense of dignity as they grow older.

This is not the American Dream. We don't want to tell our old people, get lost, get out of sight, go into the poorhouses and the almshouses we had before Social Security. We don't want to tell our seniors, you can't have the health care, the home assisted living, the home health care aides that you need. We don't want to tell our families that you must impoverish yourselves, sell off all your assets because your mother or your grandmother is sick or can no longer live independently.

This is why we have government, to solve problems for all of us that we cannot solve for ourselves individually. That is the reason for government, to provide for the common welfare, as the Constitution says. We know we have this problem. We know as the population ages the problem is going to get worse and more intense, not better. We know the problem is not going to go away. So let's deal with it.

After many, many years, Congress in the Affordable Care Act finally passed the CLASS Act program to start dealing with this. There are problems with it. Yes, the financing that was brought into that program is only sufficient for about 20 years.

□ 1700

That gives us only 20 years to fix the program.

Now, the sooner we fix it, the sooner we amend the financing, the easier it will be to do it. The longer we wait, the harder.

So what do the Republicans want to do? Kill the whole program, put our heads in the sand, ignore the problem, and to heck with the senior citizens and to heck with their children who worry about how they're going to have their parents live their last years in dignity. That is not the American Dream. It is not right.

I urge my Republican colleagues to rethink this. Withdraw this bill. This program is not being implemented immediately. Figure out how to finance it better. Figure out how to deal with this problem. Don't simply say let's ignore the problem and to hell with our senior citizens. That is not the American Dream. We simply must do better.

We've made a start. Let us continue that start. Let us build on it. Let us not destroy the beginnings that we have made.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Washington is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Well, Mr. Chairman, tomorrow is Groundhog Day. We've been in session this year for 1 month. And this is the 1st day of the days and haven't done one single thing for the working Americans in this

Now, this bill is the whole reason why the Occupy Wall Street movement is out there and why the opinion of the performance of the Congress is so low. This bill has absolutely nothing to do with creating jobs, training the unemployed, helping businesses grow, or moving the country forward. It is about the ninth time we've brought a piece of so-called ObamaCare—Obama does care, you know. They brought it out here, and they keep trying to repeal it, which is not what the people want us working on. Instead, the Republicans are giving us just a bunch of press releases. I can see them going out of the offices now to the Tea Party all over the country—rile up the base, rile up the base, oh, yeah, and nothing is being done for the people.

The second problem is that the Republicans aren't being straight with the American people. This bill does more than the Republicans are saying. The Republicans aren't just repealing the CLASS Act. The Republicans are trying to kill another important and inexpensive program that seniors and families depend on. They're defunding the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information, an important and useful government Web site that seniors and their families use to take an active role in understanding, planning, and financing their long-term needs. Remember, these are the most frail people in our society, and they rely on this information to plan for their futures.

Mr. Chairman, two-thirds of personal bankruptcies in this country are caused by medical bills, and a lot of those astronomical bills are caused by the debilitating costs of long-term care. And the Republicans aren't trying to solve the problem. Instead, the Republicans want to repeal the first ever Federal law creating a stand-alone long-term care program. Bill Frist, the Republican leader in the Senate some years ago said, Don't repeal it; fix it. But the Republicans can't figure out how to fix it because they don't care about seniors.

Granted, this CLASS Act needs to be fixed. It's not a perfect bill. We know that. And that's what we should be doing so that the country stops allowing long-term health care costs to bankrupt families. That the Republicans don't care enough to do anything about chronic bankruptcies caused by long-term care is bad enough, but the Republican wrecking ball goes even further. The Republicans are trying to get a scalp. They want to please their base by repealing a part of ObamaCare, that law that insures 31 million more Americans and saves taxpayers money—so-called ObamaCare. that law that already is driving down 2nd month, and we've had 2 legislative health care costs and getting Americans better service for less money.

In 40 years of legislating, I've seen State houses shift parties, Congress shift parties, but I've never, ever seen a legislative body that failed as badly as this one. This is the most unproductive Congress I've ever seen. And if you think this bill is going to go out of here and go over to the Senate, even the Republican leader, MITCH McCon-NELL, wouldn't want this brought up as the bill that we deal with.

The Republicans are running their demonize everything and do-nothing agenda, and it's having the predictable results. It gets the base whipped up and angry, but it accomplishes nothing for jobs, nothing for health care, nothing for the deficit, nothing for the economy. The American people need the CLASS Act fixed. They need to be able to continue to rely on the Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information.

As the Republicans put out their plan for wasting this entire year of 2012 not serving the American people, the voters should look very carefully at what they actually are doing. When they put out their platform, you know, it's going to say, What did you do? Well, I voted "no." I voted "no." I voted "no." I voted "no." They will have nothing positive to put on that agenda. What did you do? Well, I tried to get rid of the EPA. I didn't want clean air. I didn't want clean water. And I didn't want labor unions. And, and, "no," "no." "no."

This is a terrible piece of legislation. It should be fixed. There's none of us who would stand up here and say it's a perfect piece of legislation, but I urge my colleagues to vote "no."

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FINCHER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FINCHER. I yield to my colleague from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY).

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I appreciate the opportunity to respond to my good friend and the good doctor, my colleague from the State of Washington, who made reference to, I think, Groundhog Day.

Now, my name, Mr. Chairman, is PHIL GINGREY, but as I sat here over the last couple of hours listening to the argument on the other side of the aisle, I feel like Phil Connors, and that was the weatherman. Bill Murray, if you recall, played that role, the weatherman at Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, covering Groundhog Day. And believe me, we have been listening to Groundhog Day from my colleagues on the other side over and over and over again, and it is indeed getting just a little bit tiring.

My friend also said, the gentleman, the doctor from the State of Washington, Mr. Chairman, and I quote him: "I've never seen a Congress that has failed as much as this one." Well. I'm going to tell you, I have never seen a provision of law in a bill that has failed as much as the CLASS Act. And they can beat this to death-and I think they have done that. Mr. Chairmanbut I have in my hand here a summary sheet of the HHS analysis of the CLASS Act over an 18-month period of time.

And they have tried to model eight different options to make this fiscally solvent, and required by the lawthank goodness, thank goodness for the amendment from the Senator from Rhode Island, the Honorable Judd Gregg, at the time chairman or ranking member of the Budget Committee. The eight options, none of them work. I mean, there are things like a work requirement. There are things like not allowing anybody with a preexisting condition to be in the program, allowing people with preexisting conditions to be in the program but only eligible for a benefit for 15 years, and on and on and on. Actually, the one option that's not on this printout, I guess, is option number nine, and that would be the option, Mr. Chairman, of requiring every individual to sign up for the long-term program under the CLASS Act.

Now, the question on all of these options was: Does the Secretary have legal authority? And in most of the eight: Not completely; HHS vulnerable to legal challenge. Not completely; vulnerable to legal challenge. Not completely-again, vulnerable. No authority. No authority. No authority. No authority.

Well, number nine, individual mandate, making everybody sign up for it, yes, got the authority to do that. She could have done that. But I'm sure that my colleagues and her advisors and the administration probably—and I state this rhetorically. Do you want another mandate to which the American people can rail against us in the next election? And she is smart enough to know that option number nine was not unacceptable.

So, again, we could go on and on. We could do this for another couple of hours and continue this Groundhog Day ruse, but, as I said earlier, Mr. Chairman, what part of "no" do they not understand?

□ 1710

Now, look, when this amendment was added at the last moment back in 2009 by the chairman of the Subcommittee on Health, Mr. PALLONE, during the Energy and Commerce Committee debate on the CLASS Act. Chairman PALLONE stated, and I quote him: "I can't stress enough that we are not actually setting this up. We are simply suggesting." That was the end of the quote. In fact, Chairman PALLONE asserted that the program would not take effect until subsequent legislation was passed.

Well, Mr. Barton, who, at the time, was the ranking member of the overall Committee of Energy and Commerce, said this: "Well, reclaiming my time, I am going to support the Pallone amendment without binding anybody on my side to support it, with the understanding that if this moves forward, there will be a hearing on this in this committee, and there will be bipartisan efforts to flesh it out. Do I have that assurance from the chairman?" And Mr. Pallone responded, "You certainly have my assurance."

And then the chairman, HENRY WAX-MAN, overall chairman of the committee said, fine with me, but he is the subcommittee chairman.

We never had one hearing. We never had an opportunity to flesh it out.

Defeat this amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. My good friend from Georgia, some things bear repeating. I love February 2. It happens to be my daughter, Erica's, birthday. Some call it Groundhog Day. I call it a day of great celebration for a bit of joy that came into our lives.

So it's a day for many that is happy. It's a day that many humorously look forward to great weather. Some remember our good friend, Bill Murray, and it is a day that symbolizes repetition

Sometimes the pain of Americans deserves to be repeated over and over again. And I'd like to answer my good friend, not speaking for Mr. PALLONE, but, in actuality, we have the opportunity now to have bipartisan hearings. Nothing is precluded. Mr. PALLONE's statement was accurate. He was not writing the structure of long-term care. He was indicating that, for Americans, it was vital.

What is disappointing is that my friends on the other side of the aisle are willing to give up so easily. I don't understand that. Where's the American genius?

Of course, they will cite HHS; but they know that Congress directs HHS. They know that the repeal of this legislation for long-term care will simply kill the opportunity for Americans to find relief.

As we look to the future, we are just a month away until taxes go up on middle class families, and Americans looking for work lose their unemployment insurance, and seniors face losing access to their doctors. We could be working on that, move the conference committee a little faster. But we're now adding an extra burden. Let's repeal the CLASS Act.

It doesn't disturb me that HHS has made several tries, and in a time frame has not found a cure yet. But knowing research and knowing science and being near and in the community of the Texas Medical Center, I know how long it takes to get a good answer in health care.

But what I do want to stress to my friends, can they deny that 82 percent of Americans say that taking care of relatives who are aging or ill is demanding? Eighty-two percent of them say that; 72 percent indicate that taking care of them is overwhelming; 56 percent said that as they are taking care of their sick relatives, they are getting ill.

Yet we want to abandon the discussion on long-term care when I've already said on the floor of the House that $450 billion of that long-term care is already in private hands. It's in families. It's through their labor. They are overwhelmed.

Only $14 billion is in the private industry sector. See how much they're standing up to the bar, and $101 billion in Medicaid.

We have to find a solution that balances benefit and burden. Listen to a constituent from Texas who took care of her son after he was seriously injured in a roadside bombing while patrolling in Iraq. She did not return home 7 years in order to be with her son.

Debbie initially took a leave of absence from her job, but ended up resigning to become a full-time caregiver for her son. Because she no longer had a paid job, and her husband was the only one working, they had to start using their retirement savings to survive. Her son is now better, great news, and active in the community. And she continues her work. But the catastrophic impact to the family continues on.

Rhonda has gone from a part-time, visiting caregiver to her elderly parents to a live-in, full-time caregiver. Even after the death of her own 23-year-old daughter in a car accident, and her only brother becoming disabled after an illness, before 2001 she was a full-time working mother of two.

Where is the relief for these humans, these individuals, these people in need? Where is it? It's in the amendment I offered that indicated that it is important to note that long-term care is important, and a study should engender to be able to determine that.

But more importantly, let's, again, look at this in a way that we take our time and look at the macroeconomics and take into consideration how we can best configure this. But let me tell you very clearly that if we repeal this CLASS Act, the burden will fall on local and State governments and the millions of caregivers who already, through their own effort and their own toil, with love, I will tell you with love, expend $450 billion that we don't compensate them for, lose their jobs, raise the deficit, add to the debt because they are not able to take care of themselves.

And as we see, some 76 million baby boomers, Mr. Chairman, going forward. Let me just say, don't repeal this bill. It bears repeating. Help those who need your help.

Mr. Chair, I move to strike the last word. Today, I am joined by Members of the Congressional Progressive Caucus, to call attention to the grievous threats posed by to H.R. 1173, "The Fiscal Responsibility and Retirement Security Act of 2011", to key provisions in the Affordable Health Care Act.

H.R. 1173 bill would repeal title VIII of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and Supports (CLASS) Program—a national, voluntary long-term care insurance program for purchasing community living assistance services and supports.

This piece of legislation is yet another example of the Republican Majority failing to act on the top priorities of the American people. At a time when we should be focused on building our economy; advancing underserved and underrepresented communities, addressing the needs of our Nation's seniors; and focusing on the deficit, as well as, unemployment insurance. Instead of generating bold new ideas to help small businesses hire more Americans, to aid in the revitalization efforts of our manufacturing industry, to advance the cause for energy independence, to address the needs of families hurt the most by this economic down turn.

Instead, The Republicans have brought forward a bill to repeal a self sustaining program for the aging and the disabled. The CLASS program is meant to help someone who is unable to bath, cloth, or conduct basic life actives. We should not be attacking programs that are designed to address issues of long term care.

Title VIII also authorized and appropriated funding through 2015 for the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information (clearing house). H.R. 1173 would rescind any unobligated balances appropriated to the National Clearinghouse for Long-Term Care Information

The CLASS Act was designed to provide an affordable long-term care option for the 10 million Americans in need of long-term care now and the projected 15 million Americans that will need long-term care by 2020.

Individuals need long-term care when a chronic condition, trauma, or illness limits their ability to carry out basic self-care tasks, called activities of daily living (ADLs), (such as bathing, dressing or eating), or instrumental activities of daily living (IADLs) (such as household chores, meal preparation, or managing money).

Long-term care often involves the most intimate aspects of people's lives—what and when they eat, personal hygiene, getting dressed, using the bathroom. Other less severe long-term care needs may involve household tasks such as preparing meals or using the telephone.

Estimates suggest that in the upcoming years the number of disabled elderly who cannot perform basic activities of daily living without assistance may be double today's level.

CLASS provides the aging and the disabled with a solution that is self sustaining, at no cost to taxpavers.

As the estimated 76 million baby boomers born between 1946 and 1964 become elderly, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security will nearly double as a share of the economy by 2035.

Baby boomers are already turning 65. As of January 1, 2011, baby boomers have begun to celebrate their 65th birthdays for that day on 10,000 people will turn 65 every day and this will continue for the next 20 years.

It is reasonable to assume that over time the aging of baby boomers will increase the demand for long-term care.

Repealing the CLASS program does nothing to address the fact that private long-term care insurance options are limited and the costs are too high for many American families, including many in my Houston district, to afford.

In 2000, spending from public and private sources associated on long-term care amounted to an estimated $137 billion (for persons of all ages). By 2005, this number has risen to $206.6 billion.

Individuals 85 years and older, the oldest old, are one of the fastest growing segments of the population. In 2005, there are an estimated 5 million people 85+ in the United States. This figure is expected to increase to 19.4 million by 2050. This means that there could be an increase from 1.6 million to 6.2 million people age 85 or over with severe or moderate memory impairment in 2050.

An estimated 10 million Americans needed long-term care in 2000. Most but not all persons in need of long-term care are elderly. Approximately 63 percent are persons aged 65 and older (6.3 million); the remaining 37 percent are 64 years of age and younger (3.7 million)

The lifetime probability of becoming disabled in at least two activities of daily living or of being cognitively impaired is 68 percent for people age 65 and older.

By 2050, the number of individuals using paid long-term care services in any setting (e.g., at home, residential care such as assisted living, or skilled nursing facilities) will likely double from the 13 million using services in 2000, to 27 million people. This estimate is influenced by growth in the population of older people in need of care.

Of the older population with long-term care needs in the community, about 30 percent (1.5 million persons) have substantial long-term care needs—three or more activities of daily living limitations. Of these, about 25 percent are 85 and older and 70 percent report they are in fair to poor health.

Forty percent of the older population with long-term care needs are poor or near poor (with incomes below 150 percent of the Federal poverty level).

Between 1984 and 1994, the number of older persons receiving long-term care remained about the same at 5.5 million people, while the prevalence of long-term care use declined from 19.7 percent to 16.7 percent of the 65+ population. In comparison, 2.1 percent, or over 3.3 million, of the population aged 18–64 received long-term care in the community in 1994.

While there was a decline in the proportion (i.e., prevalence) of the older population receiving long-term care, the level of disability and cognitive impairment among those who received assistance with daily tasks rose sharply. The proportion receiving help with three to six ADLs increased from 35.4 percent to 42.9 percent between 1984 and 1994. The proportion of cognitive impairment among the 65+ population rose from 34 percent to 40 percent

INFORMAL CARE GIVERS AND FAMILY

Informal caregiver and family caregiver are terms used to refer to unpaid individuals such as family members, partners, friends and neighbors who provide care.

Informal caregivers and family can be primary or secondary caregivers, full time or part time, and can live with the person being cared for or live separately.

Estimates vary on the number of family and informal caregivers in the United States, depending on the definitions however:

52 million informal and family caregivers provide care to someone aged 20+ who is ill or disabled.

44.4 million caregivers (or one out of every five households) are involved in care giving to persons aged 18 or over.

34 million caregivers provide care for someone age 50+.

27.3 million family caregivers provide personal assistance to adults (aged 15+) with a disability or chronic illness.

5.8 to 7 million people (family, friends and neighbors) provide care to a person (65+) who needs assistance with everyday activities

8.9 million informal caregivers provide care to someone aged 50+ with dementia. By the year 2007, the number of care giving households in the U.S. for persons aged 50+ could reach 39 million.

Over three-quarters (78 percent) of adults living in the community and in need of long-term care depend on family and friends (i.e., informal caregivers) as their only source of help; 14 percent receive a combination of informal and formal care (i.e., paid help); only 8 percent used formal care or paid help only.

Even among the most severely disabled older persons living in the community, about two-thirds rely solely on family members and other informal help, often resulting in great strain for the family caregivers.

The use of informal care as the only type of assistance by older Americans aged 65 and over increased from 57 percent in 1994 to 66 percent in 1999. The growth in reliance upon informal care between 1994 and 1999 is accompanied by a decline in the use of a combination of informal and formal care from 36 percent in 1994 to 26 percent in 1999.

30 percent of persons caring for elderly long-term care users were themselves aged 65 or over; another 15 percent were between the age of 45–54.

For the family caregiver forced to give up work to care for a family member or friend, the cost in lost wages and benefits is estimated to be $109 per day.

HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED CARE

Most people—nearly 79 percent—who need Long-Term Care live at home or in community settings, not in institutions.

More than 13.2 million adults (over half younger than 65) living in the community received an average of 31.4 hours of personal assistance per week in 1995.

Only 16 percent of the total hours were paid care (about $32 billion), leaving 84 percent of hours to be provided (unpaid labor) by informal caregivers.

The trend towards community-based services as opposed to nursing home placement was formalized with the Olmstead Decision (July, 1999)—a court case in which the Supreme Court upheld the right of individuals to receive care in the community as opposed to an institution whenever possible.

The proportion of Americans aged 65 and over with disabilities who rely entirely on formal care for their personal assistance needs has increased to 9 percent in 1999 from 5 percent in 1984.

Between 2000 and 2002, the number of licensed assisted living and board and care facilities increased from 32,886 to 36,399 nationally, reflecting the trend towards community-based care as opposed to nursing homes. Most assisted living facilities, however, are unlicensed.

Most assisted living facilities (ALFs) discharge residents whose cognitive impairments become moderate or severe or who need help with transfers (e.g. moving from a wheelchair to a bed). This limits the ability of these populations to find appropriate services outside of nursing homes or other institutions.

NURSING HOME CARE

The risk of nursing home placement increases with age—31 percent of those who are severely impaired and between the ages of 65 and 70 receive care in a nursing home compared to 61 percent of those age 85 and older.

In 2002, there were 1,458,000 people in nursing homes nationally. Older individuals living in nursing homes require and receive greater levels of care and assistance. In 1999, over three-quarters of individuals in nursing homes received assistance with four to six ADLs. Of the population aged 65 and over in 1999, 52 percent of the nursing home population was aged 85 or older compared to 35 percent aged 75–84, and 13 percent aged 65–74. Between 1985 and 1999 the number of adults 65 and older living in nursing homes in creased from 1.3 million to 1.5 million. In 1999, almost three-quarters (1.1 million) of these older residents were women.

The issue before us today, is how we intend to treat our aging and disabled at a time when they are in need of assistance that will have a direct impact on their quality of life.

Traditionally, most long-term care is provided informally by family members and friends. Some people with disabilities receive assistance at home from paid helpers, including skilled nurses and home care aides.

Nursing homes are increasingly viewed as a last resort for people who are too disabled to live in the community, due to a number of factors, cost being one.

Mr. Chair, I believe that we must leave the framework that exists in place and work with seniors, families, industry, HHS and others to find a way to make the CLASS Act or an alternative long-term care program work.

We cannot and we must not allow Medicaid to continue to be the only affordable long-term care service available to Americans. American families should not have to spend down their savings or assets to access long-term care.

American families spend almost twice as much on health care through premiums, paycheck deductions, and out-of-pocket expenses as families in any other countries.

Considering the amount that we spend on health care, it is surprising that Americans do not live as long as people in Canada, Japan, and most of Western Europe. Our health care system was in need of an overhaul.

Under the Affordable Health Care Act, signed into law in 2010 more than 32 million additional Americans are expected to get insurance, either through an extension of Medicaid or through exchanges where low and moderate income individuals and families will be able to purchase private insurance with Federal subsidies.

A key part of the new health law also encourages the development of "accountable care organizations" that would allow doctors to team up with each other and with hospitals, in new ways, to provide medical services. There are dozens of good provisions in the Affordable Health Care Law that will ultimately benefit the public, if they are not repealed one title at a time. The CLASS Act is a good provision too—I stand by that notion—but just improperly designed.

While family caregiving can be a very satisfying job, those who become primary caretakers for their senior loved ones must understand that doing so will touch many aspects of their lives—including work, home and family. This data was developed from the responses of more than 8,000 family caregivers who visited the caregiverstress.com Web site since 2005. The results demonstrate the impact stress can have on family caregivers and they illustrate why it's important to tap into resources that can provide help or support.

I yield back the balance of my time.
Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, across the United States, anguished families are sitting down at their kitchen table. They're reviewing their financial situation. Many are trying to figure out how in the world they're going to afford their personal long-term care needs or that of a loved one or another family member.

People who've worked hard their whole lives, who are already coping with a sluggish economy, are being crushed under the weight of long-term care costs, depleting their savings and sometimes spending themselves into bankruptcy.

As we know, Mr. Chairman, long-term care is not covered in most health care plans. If you're already old and sick, you probably can't qualify for a separate long-term care policy; and if you can, it's likely to be insanely expensive. Medicare pays only for the first 100 days of nursing-home care, and Medicaid is only available to the very poor. But you don't have to be poor to be overwhelmed by nursing-home costs that average $72.000 a year.

We can't forget that we live in an aging society. As our largest generation, the baby boomers, move into their retirement years, and while advances in science and technology have, thankfully, allowed us to live longer, it means that many of us will require more extended, more expensive care. All this has created a perfect storm in which the long-term care crisis will get even worse, not better.

In the coming years, Mr. Chairman, we're going to find ourselves in turmoil over long-term care. So why aren't we putting our heads together on both sides of the aisle and coming up with ideas to solve this dilemma? After all, we're all going to be old.

Instead, we're here today because the majority appears to want to repeal the one modest attempt to help Americans cope with long-term care costs. If the program needs improvement, I ask them, then let's fix it. That's what taxpayers are paying us to do, not throw up our hands and walk away from this problem.

$\sqcap$ 1720

But my friends in the majority seem to have a different version and vision of public service. It seems that instead of providing service to the public, they view it as their job to dismantle and disembowel any government investment that improves the lives of regular people. Nothing seems to drive them to distraction like the commonsense reforms of the Affordable Care Act. They have no innovative health care ideas of their own. They're simply nostalgic for the cruel and unfair health care system that we have finally begun to leave behind us.

So we need to be building on health care reform. We do not need to be whittling away at it. Vote "no," my colleagues, on the repeal of the CLASS Act.

I yield back the balance of my time. Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. As I come to the floor today to speak against this repeal, I cannot help but remember the faces of the individuals with disabilities, individuals with very serious long-term care needs, sitting through the long markup a couple months ago only to, at the end of the day, see the committee majority vote to repeal the CLASS Act. If an expression could convev a thousand words, theirs did that day. I know because I had the same expression, and I felt the exact same way: disappointed and frustrated, saddened at the very real possibility that they and our seniors would be left out in the cold when they are at their most vulnerable.

I'm sure that they and millions of other people with special needs and seniors are watching this now, and they, like all of us here now, know that repealing the CLASS Act will not make 10 million Americans' long-term care needs disappear, and it certainly will not make them suddenly affordable for the overwhelming majority of most families.

The Secretary did the responsible thing. She put the implementation on hold because the actuarial studies did not show that the program, as designed, was sustainable. None of us who supported and voted for the Affordable Care Act thought that everything in it was perfect. Much of it was well put together, well-planned, well-designed. But there were some that we thought might need to be tweaked or even revised in bigger ways, but we needed to take that first big important step in the right direction to make sure that the health care needs of our fellow Americans would be met.

The Secretary in her letter to the Speaker said that the report reflected "The development of information that will ultimately advance the cause of finding affordable and sustainable long-term care options."

So what we should be doing is looking at those options or charging an institute like the Institute of Medicine to look at them and recommend a way forward.

Everyone knows that we have a long-term care crisis in the United States. There are 10 million vulnerable men, women, and children who need this care, and we know that over the next decade that number will grow to 15 million. We also know that there are grave racial, ethnic, as well as geographic disparities that exist across the 10 million Americans with unmet long-term health care needs.

We also know that long-term health care burdens family budgets, as well as Medicaid programs in the States that administer them across our Nation. Only about 8 percent of Americans buy long-term care insurance because the premiums are too expensive in many cases for most individuals to afford.

Despite these facts, and these are indeed facts, and as we have seen time and time again, rather than identify and support a medically, economically, and socially responsible solution to this critically important problem, in their zeal to attack the Affordable Care Act and undermine the provisions that have already begun to help all of our constituents, our friends on the other side of the aisle would rather slam that door shut and not continue to work with us to find ways to meet this critical need.

We need to have a plan to ensure access to affordable long-term care, and repealing and dismantling the CLASS Act with no safeguard or stopgap in place first is definitely not the right way to go.

I, like everyone here, Republican and Democrat, have 10 million reasons to take a stand and to fight for those who cannot fight for themselves, to provide a voice for the voiceless and to remind our colleagues and those watching that this fight cannot be over and that we cannot stop until our long-term care crisis is addressed and those who need it, as many of us, Republican and Democrat will, address it in a manner that meets the high ideals of this country.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, when it comes to health care and those who need it and can't afford it, I constantly remind myself that but for the grace of God, there go I. You don't believe in God? But for the grace of chance and circumstance, but for the goodness of luck, there go I.

The question we have to ask ourselves is what kind of country are we going to be? Are we going to be a country wherein health care becomes wealth care? Where only the wealthy can afford what is available? The technology's available. The pharmaceuticals are available. But only the wealthy can afford that which is available in the richest country in the world.

Are we going to be a country wherein pregnancy is a preexisting condition; if you are pregnant and you don't have insurance, you cannot get it? Is that the kind of country we are going to be? Are we going to be a country wherein senior citizens who are in need of pharmaceuticals cannot get them because they can't afford them, but if you're wealthy, you can. But for the grace of God, there go I.

No one deserves the status in life to which he or she is born. Born wealthy? You didn't earn it. Born poor? You don't deserve it.

The question is whether we will understand that it can happen to any one of us and that we are a country that can afford to make a difference in the lives of those who are sick and cannot take care of themselves.

So the issue today has not been whether we can afford it or whether we can do it. The question is, do we have the will? We can find the way.

I would yield to my colleague from Georgia, whom I have great respect for and for whom I hold no animus. I just would like to ask you, is it not true, my dear friend, that we can work this out and find a way to get it done? Is it not true? Can we not find a way to get this done?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Well, here again, when Mr. Barton, the ranking member of the committee, asked very specifically, Mr. Chairman, when he asked very specifically in the markup on the House side back in 2009, if I vote "yes" for that, will we have hearings to—I think it was "to flesh this out."

He was assured, of course, by the chairman at the time of the Health Subcommittee, Mr. PALLONE, and also the chairman of the overall committee, Mr. WAXMAN of California, said, Hey, it's okay with me. No hearings were held.

So this business of can't we work this out, but yet we were reaching out, and it never happened.

I yield back to my friend.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. If I may reclaim my time.

I do welcome comments about the past, my dear friend.

But I'm asking you, given that you do have some degree of influence given that you're in the majority, why can we not do now what was not done? I'm not privy to all of what wasn't done and should have been done. But why can we not do now what wasn't done? Why can we not now work to mend, rather then end, something that can benefit persons who cannot help themselves? Why can we not do it now? What prevents us?

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman asked me a specific question, and I want to respond to my friend.

You know, the point I will make to him is that we can work together. We absolutely can.

Mr. Chairman, we have discussed this with Mr. Pallone. I have done so personally, as I know my physician colleague on Energy and Commerce, Mr. Burgess, has had a conversation with Mr. Pallone.

□ 1730

We can work together, but we have to remove this failed program first because of that looming deadline of October 1, 2012, where we'll get sued if we don't have a program. So I'd be glad to work with the gentleman.

The Acting CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I ask that I be extended the courtesy that the gentleman from Georgia received when he received an additional 5 minutes. I don't need an additional 5 minutes. I would just like to continue this dialogue that we have had, and he did receive an additional 5 minutes earlier.

The Acting CHAIR. Is the gentleman requesting unanimous consent for an additional 5 minutes?

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. I ask unanimous consent to continue briefly this dialogue with the gentleman.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting CHAIR. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. In regard to you yielding an additional 5 minutes to me, in fact, that is not true.

Mr. Chairman, as you know, the gentleman from Tennessee, Representative

FINCHER, moved to strike the last word and was afforded the 5 minutes, as we all are, and he yielded to me.

I certainly would oppose the gentleman's unanimous consent request for you to—I don't think you have the authority to do that quite honestly.

The Acting CHAIR. Objection is heard.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. I would ask the Chair for a ruling first as to whether the Chair has the authority to do it. Then, if I am incorrect, let the record always reflect that I will extend an apology when I have made a mistake. So if I have made a mistake, I will do so; but I do ask that the Chair give a ruling as to whether or not we can have the unanimous consent request granted.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, could I make a parliamentary inquiry?

The Acting CHAIR. The Chair will first respond to the inquiry of the gentleman from Texas.

The time of the gentleman may be extended in the Committee of the Whole only by unanimous consent.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, could I make an inquiry at this time?

The Acting CHAIR. Does the gentleman have a futher inquiry?

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Before I leave the podium, if I may, I would like to prevail upon my friend whom I am having a colloquy with to show some sense of desire to continue this and reach some sort of—

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Texas will suspend.

The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. May I ask for the unanimous consent now, Mr. Chairman?

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has requested unanimous consent to extend his time. There has been an objection to that request.

Does the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia seek recognition?

Ms. NORTON. I ask the Chair: Is it true that there will be no more Members heard on this issue after 5:40?

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I'm going to have to insist on regular order here.

The Acting CHAIR. In answer to the gentlewoman's parliamentary inquiry, there is a 3-hour time limit for consideration of amendments that has not yet been reached.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Chairman, roughly 70 percent of us at some point are going to have difficulty taking care of ourselves independently, and we're going to need some sort of long-term care or support. So as the population ages, of course the need for these services only increases.

the substance, or at least as we identify the problem, there is an enormous amount of agreement. We all know that the costs associated with longterm care are very high, that nursing homes can cost over $70,000 a year, and that just 20 hours a week of home care costs nearly $20,000 a year. For working families, there are few practical options in order to plan and pay for longterm care and support services. Only about 3 percent have a private policy covering long-term care while the majority is forced to spend its way into poverty to qualify for the Medicare safety net coverage of those costs.

We know this. We all agree on this. What the CLASS Act did was to address a number of critical needs, including providing a way for persons with disabilities to remain independent and in their communities by bringing private dollars into the long-term care services system in order to reduce the reliance on Medicaid without impoverishing individuals and their families.

Mr. Chair, here is how: if a person must go into a nursing home—and those are the potential long-term people, Americans—if such Americans must go into a nursing home, first they spend down their resources, and then they go into a nursing home at a cost of about $80,000 a year.

We all agree that the CLASS Act is far from perfect, but it provides a beginning framework to begin to deal with the problem.

I got a letter from Jonathan Lavin, CEO of AgeOptions in Oak Brook, Illinois, a service provider. He emailed me, actually, to say:

Please do not vote to repeal the CLASS Act. Such a vote will reverse the hope of millions of Americans that one day they may collectively insure themselves for the eventuality of a debilitating disability. When we see a young former Congresswoman gunned down and a healthy vibrant Illinois Senator struck by a stroke, we realize that any of us may suffer from a disability.

A broad-based, effective insurance program will assist those who face such life-altering challenges. We understand why the CLASS Act is delayed in implementation since the economic situation is so dire, but we cannot understand deliberately acting to eliminate the potential for such legislation to do so much good after the economy recovers.

Every American faces the reality that an accident or illness requiring long-term care could devastate them financially.

While this issue affects everyone, I want to focus on the importance of the CLASS Act for women in this country.

Long-term care is very much a women's health issue. Women live longer than men. Their life expectancy exceeds those of men by some 5 years. Because they live longer, women are at greater risk of needing long-term care services to help them when they become disabled or too sick or frail to care for themselves. Women tend to need more resources for long-term care. Women tend to be ill for longer periods of time, and women are less likely to have a family member to care for them.

Over 70 percent of nursing home residents and nearly two-thirds of homecare users are women. Because women, far more than men, take on the role of caregiver, women are the ones who end up staying at home, sometimes giving up careers to provide care for a sick or disabled family member, adults and children alike. Indeed, women make up three-fourths of the home-care work-

CLASS would help make these challenges easier. It would help provide the care women may require if and when they need long-term care or supports for themselves. It would help provide relief or a break, if you will, for those women who spend all day every day at home taking care of others in need of long-term care.

To take away this program is to take away the first real opportunity that the women of this country have to deal with the long-term care challenges they face day in and day out both as patients and as caregivers. Like so many other Republican assaults on the Affordable Care Act, H.R. 1173 is, in fact, an attack on women and women's health.

Like all those other assaults, we should push back and reject this one. CLASS is just one of the many advancements for women's health that is included in the Affordable Care Act. As you have heard many times today, let's fix it, not repeal it, so it can work for women and all Americans as intended.

Instead of passing H.R. 1173 and repealing the CLASS Act with no effective alternative in place, we can and should work together to repair this program. Ignoring the long-term care crisis won't make it go away.

I yield back the balance of my time. Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chair, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from the District of Columbia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, we have here one for the books. The Democrats offer a 100 percent private-sector solution to the most costly health care crisis affecting the American people, and Republicans want to repeal it. This is going to go down in history.

The Obama administration is a victim of its own honesty. It, in good faith, put the CLASS Act into the health care bill knowing that we can't do without it. Then the administration looked carefully at the cost factors, and it did the right thing. It informed the Congress that it was suspending implementation of the CLASS Act. It certainly did not repeal it or ask for its repeal, nor should we. Here is why: the Medicare crisis before us, as I speak, is dwarfed by the long-term care crisis. We know it because that crisis, the

I've been listening to this debate. On care. Women tend to be ill for longer CLASS crisis if you will, is already be substance, or at least as we iden-periods of time, and women are less here.

□ 1740

That crisis, my friends, is long-term care. Who pays for it? We pay for it. We, the taxpayers, because Medicaid pays for it. They're coming at an increasing clip because the fact is that the number of Americans who are living longer, who don't have the resources themselves, grows exponentially. Government is now paying 100 percent.

Let's look at the CLASS Act. That is a 100 percent privately financed plan. It means that we should all, not wait for long-term care to be needed when we would have to ask the government, through Medicaid, to pay for nursing home care. We should begin now to take care of our own long-term needs.

What are you going to do if we don't have the CLASS Act—pass off the elderly who are in the nursing homes? To where? To whom?

Clearly, the CLASS Act is the only solution, unless you want the Federal Government to continue to pick up the loss for those who need long-term care, and that is what people in nursing homes are there for. Only 8 percent of Americans buy long-term care insurance.

I bought long-term care insurance, and then I was a little concerned to read that people who have bought long-term care insurance find they are not going to get what they thought they paid for.

I think this House ought to be having hearings on what is out there now if we want to encourage people to buy their own long-term care insurance. We are doing none of that. We are not encouraging people to do what the CLASS Act would encourage them to do. Instead, we are saying repeal this private sector solution.

That makes no sense, because when the crisis comes, the elderly are going to come to us. They are going to say they have no long-term care; they want what the last generation had. You spend down your resources and then Medicaid picks it up. That's the solution on the table now. If you want a private solution, this is golden. It is in law.

We should grab it, keep it, have hearings on it. How can we make it feasible? Thank the administration for deciding not to implement it. They had an alternative. They could have allowed it to lie dormant, gone on with the rest of the health care bill. Instead, they told the truth.

Now we are here trying to repeal it, knowing full well that when the crisis is upon us, we will never be able to put forward a private, 100 percent private solution because it will be too late.

Take this for what it's worth. You have a bird in hand.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, to summarize briefly, first of all, there is no CLASS program. The gentlelady was right; this is a woman issue. Women have been promised something that they'll never get with the CLASS Act. Zero people will be enrolled in the CLASS Act. They have a program that doesn't work, they know it won't work, and it's a false sense of hope to say that it will.

HHS studied for 18 months eight different scenarios to fix the CLASS Act from $391 a month premium to $3,000 a month premium. They concluded the same result: The CLASS Act is not fixable. Short of a mandate, there's no way to fix the CLASS Act.

Now, our friends on the other side have had several opportunities to offer amendments to fix the CLASS Act. First of all, H.R. 1173 was marked up in the Energy and Commerce Health Subcommittee, and they didn't offer an amendment. At full committee, the Democrats didn't offer a comprehensive plan to fix the program. And now, with nearly 4 hours of debate, still no amendments to fix the program. Without a mandate, there's no way to fix it.

Mr. Chairman, we must get this program off the books and start over. It was wrong when it was passed. It's simply a liability in our budget, and the American taxpayers who would reject any further attempt by the Federal Government to require something upon them, that is another mandate.

I urge a vote for H.R. 1173 to repeal this CLASS Act. Let's start over again. I yield back the balance of my time. ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE ACTING CHAIR

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments printed in the Congressional Record on which further proceedings were postponed, in the following order:

Amendment No. 2 by Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas.

Amendment No. 1 by Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas.

Amendment No. 4 by Mr. DEUTCH of Florida.

Amendment No. 5 by Mr. DEUTCH of Florida.

The Chair will reduce to 2 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote after the first vote in this series.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON LEE OF TEXAS

The Acting CHAIR. The unfinished business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson LEE) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the noes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate amendment.

The Clerk redesignated the amendment.

$\sqcap$ 1829

So the amendment was rejected. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Stated for:

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Chair, on rollcall 16, I was away from the Capitol due to prior commitments to my constituents. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

The Acting CHAIR (Mr. DOLD). The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Acting CHAIR. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. YODER) having assumed the chair, Mr. DOLD, Acting Chair of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 1173) to repeal the CLASS Program, and, pursuant to House Resolution 522, reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

Mr. GARAMENDI. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit at the desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. GARAMENDI. I am in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Garamendi moves to recommit the bill H.R. 1173 to the Committee on Energy and Commerce with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith, with the following amendment:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. 3. ENSURING LONG-TERM CARE SERVICES FOR SENIORS WITH ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE AND OTHER DISABLED IN-DIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2 shall not take effect until such date as the Secretary of Health and Human Services certifies that a national voluntary insurance program is in effect for purchasing community living assistance services and supports for individuals who—

(1) have-

- (A) Alzheimer's disease or other cognitive impairment;
- (B) chronic diabetes, heart disease, or advanced stages of cancer;
- (C) a disability or traumatic injury; or
- (D) any other serious disease or health condition; and
- (2) require assistance with two or more activities of daily living (such as eating, bathing, dressing, and toileting).
- (b) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), section 2(b)(3)(B) shall take effect upon the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GARAMENDI. Mr. Speaker, I want all Members to pause for a moment and think about your family, think about your community, and the people you represent. I want you to put in your mind Alzheimer's and the effect that it has on the individuals and families. Now are you envisioning the effect of Alzheimer's, not only on the individual but on the family?

I want you to put in your mind that terrible auto accident that left that young child totally disabled. I want you to put in your mind the diabetic, think about the diabetic, long-term diabetes, and the effect that it has.

Now, the point of my amendment is not to kill this bill but rather to amend it in such a way that it can be taken up on the floor with all of us supporting this.

Long-term care is a major challenge for families, for individuals, and for this Nation. Today 5.4 million Americans have Alzheimer's, and at the end of this decade, it's expected to double, more than 10 million.

Keep that vision of the Alzheimer's patient in mind. It may be someone in your family or in your circle. Twenty-four million Americans have diabetes, 26 million have heart disease. Think of that stroke victim. You know that person. They've been our colleagues, disabled, and in many cases, totally disabled.

What this amendment does is to deal with a profound problem in America. How do we care for those who are disabled, unable to care for themselves for a lengthy period of time? How do we do that? There is no effective way to do it today until that individual and family is flat broke.

There is no mechanism today to deal with this problem unless you have become totally bankrupt, no assets, and then you get to go on the Medicaid program, a burden on our general fund and on every State's general fund.

This amendment offers a solution. This amendment says that we will keep the CLASS Act in effect but seek a national voluntary insurance program. Now, I happen to know insurance, and

I happen to know that all of the longterm insurance programs out there have failed to work because they are narrow, because they've been unable to reach across the broad spectrum of America to provide a broad base of risk. You need a very, very large pool to deal with this very large and very expensive problem.

If my amendment is adopted, we will be able to go forward and to repair the CLASS Act into a voluntary insurance program that would involve the entire Nation and thereby provide a premium that is affordable. The present programs do not.

As we know from the CLASS Act itself and the work done by the Department of Health and Human Services, it too is flawed. But the problem remains. The problem has not disappeared. It is in fact in every one of our families and, quite possibly, with us as individuals.

We need a solution. Whether you're a Democrat or a Republican, we have to find a solution to this problem because now it falls back. When all other resources are gone for the individual and the family, it falls back onto the general fund of the State and the Federal Government. Not a good solution at all.

So I ask for your support on this. If you adopt this amendment, we will immediately vote on the CLASS Act itself, and it will be repealed, but not real. It will be maintained as we work forward towards a solution. That's our task here. That's our task as Members of Congress. Find solutions for the real problems that face every American.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I claim the time in opposition to the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GINGREY of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California in mentioning these categories of suffering seniors, people with Alzheimer's disease, chronic diabetes, heart disease, advanced stages of cancer, disability, or traumatic injury, I'd like to tell the gentleman and my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, Mr. Speaker, that we on this side of the aisle always have these victims in our mind, in our heart, in our prayers. But we have the compassion and the honesty not to promote and present a ruse and false hope. That's what this socalled CLASS Act non-program does to these suffering individuals that suffer from these chronic medical conditions and disabilities.

H.R. 1173 is an opportunity for this Congress to reverse one of the most costly coverups—yes, coverups—this administration has imposed upon the American taxpayer. The failure of this administration to implement the CLASS program came as no surprise to the many of us who had actually listened to the concerns from the unbiased actuaries—even the administration's own chief health actuary, Richard Foster, from CMS-about the certain failure of the CLASS program.

The concerns, Mr. Speaker, were bipartisan during debate on the President's health care law, and even the President's own fiscal commission called for the program's repeal.

So today we have the opportunity to finally get this failed program off of the books. This administration has spent millions of dollars and, yes, eight ways of Sunday, here they are, colleagues, eight ways, short of having yet another mandate that all people have coverage.

□ 1840

They have tried to implement a program that never had a chance of being implemented, and today we're faced with an $80 billion hole in the budget that this administration claims would be filled by the implementation of the CLASS program.

Listen, colleagues, key Senate Democrats, like Senator HARKIN, believe that there is still one last option worth considering: another unconstitutional mandate on every American. In fact, in comments to reporters yesterday, Senator HARKIN made the claim that the problem with the current CLASS program is that it is voluntary. In the opinion of the esteemed Senator, it needs to be mandatory.

The need for long-term care reform is an important issue, and I am confident that solutions can be accomplished and that we can do this in a bipartisan way as they have been done before on this issue. We cannot, however, continue to deny the fact that the CLASS program is an abject failure and that its repeal is necessary today.

I say to my Democrat colleagues, admit your failure. You rushed this provision into the health care law. I understand your compassion toward the late Senator Kennedy and your wanting this to be a legacy for him, but it was his staff that maybe misled the committee and the Democrat majority. Admit your failure. Get over it. Vote to repeal this failed CLASS Act, and live to fight another day.

I recommend that we vote down this motion to recommit and for the bill to be repealed.

I yield back the balance of my time. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

> The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Michaud moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 3630 be instructed to recede from section 2123 of the House bill, relating to allowing a waiver of requirements under section 3304(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, including a requirement that all money withdrawn from the unemployment fund of the State shall be used solely in the payment of unemployment compensation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 7 of rule XXII, the gentleman from Maine (Mr. MICHAUD) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BRADY) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I would like to yield 4 minutes to the gentlelady from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR).

Ms. KAPTUR. I thank my esteemed colleague, Congressman MIKE MICHAUD of Maine, for allowing me this time to join him and to rise in support of his motion to instruct conferees on a payroll tax cut extension bill that strikes a section that undermines the normal procedures of unemployment compensation to people who are out of work as it diverts those funds to other

Here we have the hardest of hearts that exist in this House, the majority on the other side of the aisle, who allowed the market to crash in 2008, putting millions of people out of work and then throwing millions more out of their homes and turning a cold eye toward them. And then proposed to cut heating assistance to those who are struggling across this country, and then a majority on the other side voting to not extend unemployment benefits to the victims. I didn't see any enthusiasm over there for prosecuting the big banks on Wall Street and those who had committed the fraud that got us into this mess in the first place. No, they want to cut it out of the hearts of the victims.

Now, the House Republican proposal in H.R. 3630 would allow States to apply for waivers to bypass basic proto the permanent unemployment extension program. States already have ample flexibility to determine eligibility for unemployment insurance benefits and to set the amount of those benefits, but they must now operate under a basic set of rules. For example, States are required to spend unemployment insurance funds solely on unemployment benefits. They must pay benefits when due, and they may not condition eligibility on issues beyond the fact and cause a person's unemployment. The Republican bill would circumvent these basic protections.

Under the proposed waiver policy, States could divert unemployment funds to other purposes, which seems particularly ill-timed when over half of the States' unemployment trust funds are insolvent because there's so many people still out of work. This diversion policy could lead to jobless individuals being denied weekly unemployment benefits and instead being offered less useful benefits. Furthermore, a waiver could allow new requirements to be imposed on unemployment insurance recipients, including a requirement that they perform a community service job to be eligible for benefits.

Unemployment insurance is an earned benefit for people who have worked hard. It's insurance. Effectively they have paid into those insurance funds and have lost their jobs through no fault of their own. These individuals must actively search for work to be eligible. I have people in my district that have sent out 400 resumes, knocked on hundreds and hundreds of doors. They want to work. And many receive services through the Federally funded onestop employment centers. Regrettably, House Republicans that have consistently targeted this system for steep cuts in services at a time when they are needed most again have a proposal

You know, I really wonder why they don't focus as much attention on prosecution of the Wall Street perpetrators who got us into this mess in the first place. I think you've got the telescope turned around in the wrong direction. You ought to be caring for those who have an ethic of work and who have earned these benefits. And we need to recoup money to balance the budget and to meet our societal needs by making sure that prosecution occurs for those who took the Republic to the cleaners and are still fat and happy sitting in the same chairs that they were in back in 2008 up there on Wall Street.

So I would say to the gentleman I rise in strong support of your effort to instruct the conferees and to protect the earned benefits of those in our society who build this country forward through thick and thin no matter what. They have earned the right to their unemployment benefits.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I think there is bipartisan agreement—Republicans and Democrats—on extending unemployment benefits for a full year.

Clearly, we're in tough economic times. But here we are 2½ years after the recession officially ended, and yet we have 27 million people who can't find a full-time job. We have a lower unemployment rate principally because so many Americans have simply given up looking for work. What we know is the current unemployment system is not working.

I think we can all agree that an unemployment check is no substitute for a paycheck. We know the longer a person stays unemployed, the harder it is for them to get back in the workforce. Most studies show that after 2 years, the chances of you getting back in the workforce becomes very, very slim, yet the government today subsidizes that unemployment for almost that full 2 years.

There's agreement that the sooner we get people back to work the better it is for them, and the better it is for our economy. But what the Federal Government is doing today, it isn't working. We have a system from the 1930s. We need an unemployment system for the 21st century, for today's economy. Commonsense reforms are in order, but the Democrat motion to instruct that we just heard about destroys those reforms to put people back to work.

Under the House bill, we allow States, those who know the economies better, who know their workers best, to put together innovative programs to get people off unemployment and back into the workforce where they belong. Under the House bill, for example, we require workers to actually look aggressively for a job. You would think that's common sense, but under Federal law today a person can go 1½ years receiving unemployment benefits and not be looking for a job. In some States, you don't have to look for a job at all. Well, that's not acceptable. And those without a GED or a high school diploma, those whose chances of getting a job are the slimmest, those who are laid off first and hired last, they struggle. But under the House bill, we allow States to put together the programs that actually get those workers that education.

□ 1930

For example, if you're 40 years old and don't have a GED, the truth of the matter is you still have a quarter of a century left in the workforce. We want to help you get that education, to be a better applicant, to get a better job, to have a brighter future. But this bill denies States the ability to help get that education for their workers.

We give States the ability to tailor job training programs to get people, again, back to work. This is what the President talked about when he cited Georgia Works and other issues on job creation. The Democrat motion stops States who know their local economies best from putting, again, these job trainings in place for their workers.

And finally, in the House bill, we recognize and believe it's time to stop subsidizing drug use through Federal benefits. Now, I wonder how many people this morning went to work in the dark; how many single moms struggled to get their kids to school before they went to work; how many people are driving home right now, are going to miss their kid's practice, they were at work; how many told their Boy Scout they couldn't be at the campout this weekend because they had to work on Saturday; how many people working one, two, three jobs that Washington takes money from their paycheck to help people who are unemployed.

And all the House bill does is to ensure that States are allowed to help people get that education, get that job training, end subsidizing drug use, so they're better applicants with a brighter future. We don't require States to do this. We allow States to have waivers, to be innovative to do that.

At the end of the day, the truth of the matter is we have so many companies who tell us they want to hire good workers with good salaries, but these workers can't pass even a basic drug test. Look, if you've got a casual drug habit or a more serious problem, finance it on your own. You're not going to take tax dollars from your neighbor who's working one or two or three jobs to finance your drug habit. In fact, your future is dimmed because of it. And if States decide not to implement a drug screening program, it's their decision; it's not Washington's.

The Democrat motion makes sense only if you work in Washington and think the current status quo is working. It is not. So I respectfully oppose the motion, support the proposed waiver authority, as well as its other provisions.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. I want to thank the gentleman from Maine for his everpresent leadership on the issue of unemployment insurance and also for fighting for jobs for Americans, because we're really here looking at two problems. One is the problem of making sure that those who are on unemployment are going to get benefits so they can survive, and the other one is the massive unemployment that we have in America. I mean, obviously, these matters are interrelated.

Let me speak first to Mr. MICHAUD's motion to instruct conferees.

This provision to remove Section 2123 from H.R. 3610, this section severely undermines the unemployment insurance system that nearly 8 million Americans rely on. It allows States to apply for waivers that would change how unemployment insurance funds are allocated, and it does this under the guise of strengthening reemployment programs. In reality, these proposed waivers would allow States to use unemployment insurance funds for purposes other than paying out benefits.

Think about this. If people are on unemployment insurance, they need those benefits. They need full benefits. You don't want the State to find an excuse to siphon those benefits to some other purpose. And by allowing the use of unemployment insurance funds for purposes other than providing unemployment benefits to those who rely on them, we would be weakening a system that has provided assistance to unemployed Americans for decades.

The rationale for the reallocation is deceptively camouflaged. It's being described as fulfilling additional benefits to the unemployed, such as bolstering job training programs and reemployment programs. Yet, in reality, diverting funds from the unemployment insurance fund to other equally important programs is not a viable solution and will, ultimately, undermine the unemployment insurance system that millions rely on.

The truth of this matter is that this Congress has been shirking its responsibility to independently and to adequately fund these programs.

Section 2123 of this legislation also gives the States the ability to create their own eligibility requirements, which could impede otherwise eligible recipients from collecting their benefits. The waivers permitted under Section 2123 would give States the opportunity to impose new eligibility requirements on unemployment insurance recipients that are unrelated to their employment history and current unemployment status. This includes giving the States the right to require a high school diploma or GED as a prerequisite for receiving unemployment benefits.

Now, think about that. You have so many people who, because of family situations, have not been able to finish high school, and they're working to support their families. They get laid off, and then they're told, Well, wait a minute. Because you don't have a high school diploma, you can't get any benefits. This is a double punishment for people.

What we should be doing is enabling people who are unemployed to be able to get a college education paid for while they're unemployed, so that when they're graduated or better educated, that when they come back into the workforce they can help make a greater contribution to our country.

Frivolous requirements like giving States the right to require a high school diploma or GED as a prerequisite for receiving unemployment benefits will do nothing but prevent benefits from reaching those who need them the most.

In my home State of Ohio, the unemployment rate is still above 8 percent. Just last week, more than 20,000 Ohioans were on the brink of losing their extended benefits. The men and women of this country should not have the added stress of monitoring the government's attempt to deny or delay their unemployment benefits. We have to protect the integrity of the unemployment insurance program and those that rely it.

And while we're at it, we also have to start thinking about creating jobs in this country. We have at least 13 million people who are unemployed and another 6 million who are underemployed. It's time we got America back to work, then we wouldn't be having this debate about unemployment insurance.

While people are unemployed, they should get the benefits, and they should be full benefits. But we should also be creating jobs, and that's not what we're doing. We need new mechanisms to create jobs. We shouldn't tell people, Well, the government doesn't have any money.

Well, we're borrowing money from China, South Korea, and Japan. Why don't we start—spend the money into circulation. Look at what the Federal Reserve does. The Federal Reserve creates money out of nothing, gives it to banks. The banks park the money at the Fed. They gain interest. Our businesses are starved for lack of capital.

What if we, the government, took back the constitutional right that we have under article I, section 8, to spend or create money, coin money, spend it into circulation, create millions of jobs, put our country back to work, rebuild our infrastructure? More money for education, more money for health

America's best days are ahead of it if we start to think about the mechanisms we have to create jobs in this country. In the meantime, we sure better protect those people who are unemployed.

The mechanism I talked about, it's called the NEED Act, National Employment Emergency Defense Act. We have a means of getting people back to work. In the meantime, if they're not working, let's make sure we don't curtail their unemployment benefits.

Support the Michaud amendment.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WALDEN), one of the leaders of getting this economy and America back on track and people back into good-paying jobs.

Mr. WALDEN. Mr. Speaker, let me make a couple of points about this motion to instruct, which I oppose.

Section 2123, which is the issue here, allows up to 10 States per year to apply for waivers to test innovative ideas to help people get a job, to help people get back to work, so it's only up to 10 States. And waiver programs would have to be cost neutral, rigorously evaluated, and then we could understand the policies.

Look, I think the folks at home in my great State of Oregon are just as compassionate, if not more so, than what happens here in Washington. I think they can be creative, too, in helping.

And, in fact, in 2011, Oregon launched its version under a waiver of the National Career Readiness Certificate program. Now, what that did was certify 10,760 work-ready individuals in the State that they have the appropriate math, reading, and other skills necessary to get back and contribute to the workforce.

□ 1940

Now, that hiring tool brought nearly 400 businesses, communities, and workers together and then simplified the job-search hiring process. These are the kinds of innovative ideas that we could use to actually help people get a job.

This is a horrible economy. We've had 11 recessions since World War II. This is the worst one in terms of coming out of it. So the policies that have been in place the last couple of years haven't worked.

The American people were promised if we spent a trillion dollars we don't have, including interest on the stimulus, unemployment wouldn't go above 8 percent; and yet here we are, record unemployment, record deficits. Trillion-dollar year after year after year deficits under the Obama administration, and people still out of work, highest poverty level since the great antipoverty campaigns began. This has to change. We have to get people back to work

One of the issues that we're going to deal with in the conference committee, I hope, you want to do something about jobs, then let's stop this Boiler MACT rule from going into place. The EPA Boiler MACT rule threatens to cripple American manufacturers. We've lost more jobs there since back to, I think, World War II; and this rule by EPA would cut another 200,000 jobs.

So let's roll back the job-killing regulations. Let's get Americans back to work, and let's leave creativity to the States to help us find better ways to take care of those who are unemployed.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The reason why I offered this motion is to protect unemployment insurance for the millions of jobless Americans that qualify for it.

At the end of the last session, the House considered H.R. 3630, a bill that would extend the payroll tax cuts as well as the unemployment insurance. Unfortunately, the bill also included provisions that would undermine the unemployment insurance program as we know it today.

While I disagree with many of these provisions, my motion to instruct focuses on one particular provision: the provision would roll back a requirement that States must spend all unemployment funds solely on unemployment benefits.

Now, I know that there might be some who disagree with the size of the unemployment program and how many weeks individuals should be able to get their unemployment benefits. But I think we can all agree that money intended to help the unemployed make ends meet while they're looking for work should not be used for something else.

There are several reasons why maintaining the integrity of the unemployment program makes sense.

First, there are still more than 13 million Americans out of work as a result of the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. These Americans rely on unemployment benefits to feed their families and pay the rent until they can find another job.

To allow States to use these funds intended to support these families for programs could result in those who have lost their jobs to receive a benefit that does not help them make ends meet and would be useless.

Some might argue that this provision will give States more flexibility to implement the unemployment program. I strongly support giving States the flexibility to implement national policies in a way that makes sense to some of the States, but there's already a great flexibility in the unemployment insurance program.

States already choose and adjust employers' tax rates, benefit levels, and duration and eligibility criteria. This provision goes too far and jeopardizes unemployment benefits themselves, and it won't help the millions of unemployed Americans get back to work.

Second, unemployment benefits help individuals find other jobs. According to CBO, extension of unemployment insurance benefits in the past few years increased both employment and participation in the labor force over what they would have been otherwise.

Recent research from the Brookings Institute concluded that unemployment insurance does not increase the time that people remain unemployed. They found that unemployment benefits may actually keep more people in the labor force through its requirement that beneficiaries seek work.

The fact is unemployment benefits remain a crucial resource for American workers who lost their jobs as a result of the Great Recession and not because of their job performance. ing for any purpose other than unemployment benefits for struggling families simply makes no sense.

Third, unemployment benefits stimulate the economy. CBO identified increasing aid to the unemployed as one of the policies that would have the largest effect on output in employment and therefore trigger economic growth. That's because individuals who receive unemployment benefits don't put it in their savings account. They spend that money on things like putting food on the table for their families.

If we divert money from the unemployment program, this economic stimulus effort will be lost, and our economic recovery will be even slower than it is now.

I think it is important to remind ourselves that the unemployment benefits are given to eligible individuals who have previously had a job but have lost it for reasons out of their control.

During the Great Recession, millions of Americans were given pink slips. Even now, our economy has started to show small signs of recovery, but there are certain areas in Maine's labor market where the unemployment rate is more than 20 percent. These families aren't going on vacations or buying luxury cars. They're spending all of their money in their savings accounts, emptying their 401(k)s and simply doing without. They need unemployment benefits to help them stay afloat and to help them find a job.

My motion simply instructs conferees to take out this harmful provision so that we can ensure that the unemployment funding is spent on unemployment benefits.

In this environment of reining in government spending and making sure taxpayers' dollars are used effectively, I think it makes sense to make sure that the unemployment benefits cannot be spent on some other program that won't help families or the economy like the unemployment insurance.

So I urge my colleagues to support this motion to ensure that the unemployment benefits continue to go to Americans who lost their jobs and are trying to get back on their feet.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from North Dakota (Mr. BERG), one of the new freshman members of the Ways and Means Committee who has taken a leadership role, who understands it's not an unemployment check the workers are seeking, it's a paycheck.

Mr. BERG. I thank the gentleman from Texas who understands the best solutions come from those people that are closest to the problem.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to the Democrats' motion to instruct. With section 2123 of House bill 3630, we give States the waiver author-

Using unemployment insurance fund- ity for unemployment insurance to test and expedite re-employment on individuals who are receiving unemployment benefits. We are empowering the States, who know their workers best. to be creative, to be innovative and to do more for workers to get them back to work

> In my home State of North Dakota where the unemployment rate is the lowest in the Nation, we have tremendous re-employment programs that are operated through job service. The participants in these re-employment programs have even said, I would make this program a permanent feature so that all people who are unemployed have a chance to utilize it. And others who said, You will learn something you never thought about before. No one goes away without something.

> Instead of continuing the same Washington business-as-usual, inflexible approach to unemployment insurance, it's critical that we make commonsense reforms now.

> To me it's obvious: States know their workers best. Let's empower them. It's time for Washington to learn from the States, give them the flexibility they need.

> With that, I urge my colleagues to oppose the Democrat motion to instruct and support the underlying bill.

□ 1950

Mr. MICHAUD, I vield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening in support of Congressman MICHAUD'S motion to instruct conferees.

Every single one of us in this Chamber woke up this morning and came to work. We're lucky to have jobs, jobs that are a source of dignity and selffulfillment. But, Mr. Speaker, 13 million Americans woke up this morning with no jobs to go to, with no salaries to help support their families. These 13 million Americans are jobless, not because there is something wrong with them, but because something is wrong with the U.S. economy and with the policies designed to keep 1 percent of the population comfortable at the expense of the remaining 99 percent. The recession happened to the American people. They didn't bring it on them-

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle see it differently. Instead of willingly extending jobless Americans the hand up they're entitled to, the majority insists on punishing jobless Americans for their predicament. They want to manipulate the unemployment insurance program that everyone pays into, that everyone deserves to access when they fall on hard times. They want to give States the permission to use unemployment insurance funds for something other than unemployment insurance.

How convenient. I'd like to propose that we use war spending for something other than war spending.

States already have plenty of flexibility in designing their unemployment insurance systems, so this Republican proposal just appears to be an attempt to divert money away from unemployment, to erect more barriers to accessing these benefits at the very moment they're needed the most.

Here is an idea: Instead of undermining jobless benefits, why doesn't the Republican majority put its energy into a real strategy to create jobs for these unemployed workers.

This morning in the Education and the Workforce Committee, we heard from a Republican Governor who spoke positively about the imperative of job creation and of the importance of Federal investments in infrastructure, workforce and career training.

I hope my friends in the majority will listen to this fellow Republican. I hope they will stop playing games with unemployment insurance. I hope they will remove this provision that allows States to take the unemployment insurance money away from unemployed peoples and, instead, pass a big, bold jobs plan. That will remove workers from the unemployment ranks.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. RENACCI), a small business owner, himself, who has helped create 1,500 new jobs in the United States.

Mr. RENACCI. I want to thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the Democratic motion to instruct and in support of an initiative in this bill that I believe will have a positive impact on our Nation's staggering unemployment rate.

In these uncertain economic times, we must allow States the ability to pursue innovative, pro-work strategies, and we must grant them the flexibility to build effective employment programs. Every day, I hear from businesses in my district in Ohio that are ready to hire but that cannot find the right person. Most of those currently collecting unemployment insurance want to return to work as soon as possible.

We must implement measures and expedite reemployment without adding to the deficit. A concept for granting States the flexibility to redirect a portion of unemployment benefits to an employer was included in the original bill. In exchange, the employer would hire a qualified unemployed worker at a higher rate than that individual would have received on unemployment.

This commonsense legislation is a win for the unemployed, for employers, and for taxpayers. I urge Members to support the underlying bill and to oppose any effort to limit this initiative.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Holt).

from Maine for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this is a simple motion. We want to ensure that unemployment funds are used for those who are unemployed. We want to make sure that unemployment funds, as promised, are given to those who are unemployed. It shouldn't be a partisan issue. There are unemployed Republicans. There are unemployed Democrats. There are unemployed Independents. Our motion says to them. We're not turning away from you, but evidently, it seems to be a partisan issue.

Let me repeat in clear English what this means when they talk about waivers. In clear English, it means that this bill, the House Republican bill, would allow States to divert unemployment funds for other purposes. States already have ample flexibility. They say they need flexibility, but "flexibility" really is a euphemism for denying benefits. It's an invitation to deny benefits. Right now, States are required to spend unemployment insurance funds solely on unemployment benefits. They must pay the benefits when they're due. They may not condition eligibility on issues beyond the fact of unemployment and cause a person's unemployment. Unless we accomplish what the gentleman from Maine is trying to accomplish here, this legislation would circumvent these basic protections.

Of course, it's fine for States to innovate and to pursue innovative ideas to help people get jobs; but for heaven's sake, don't experiment with the livelihoods of people who have lost their jobs. It's called unemployment insurance. No, it's not taking money from hardworking Americans. I couldn't believe my ears when I heard that here on the floor. Insurance is for those people who never expected they would be unemployed. I'll show you thousands of people in New Jersey-and I'm sure my friend here could show you thousands in Maine—who never thought they'd be unemployed for a week or a month or 6 months or 99 weeks. There are more people who have been unemployed for 99 weeks in the past year than at any time since the Great Depression.

Taking money away from hardworking Americans, I couldn't believe it. I never thought I would hear this on the floor.

Unemployment insurance is not welfare. It is provided to people who have worked hard. In effect, they've paid into an insurance fund. They've lost their jobs through no fault of their own, and they have to actively seek work to be eligible. Unemployment insurance also helps the public at large, the economy at large. It's not just helping those families—and it certainly does help those families: those spouses, those children. As my friend from Maine pointed out, the unemployment insurance money isn't stashed under a mattress. The family spends

Mr. HOLT. I thank the gentleman that money, and it helps the economy at large.

Even with the minuscule improvements in the economy recently, longterm unemployment remains up around record levels. There are millions of fewer jobs in the economy today than before the recession start-

Jeffrey from Plainsboro, New Jersey, wrote me:

I was wondering if the extension for unemployment benefits will be extended. My wife has been unemployed for close to 2 years, and despite trying to get a job, we see her 99week deadline fast approaching. I am a car salesman who works on commission, so you can imagine, business is down. Please let me know if there is a light at the end of the tunnel Thanks

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TIP-TON). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MICHAUD. I yield the gentleman an additional minute.

Mr. HOLT. Now, I think he would be outraged if he knew that somebody here on the floor was associating his wife with drug abusers, who shouldn't get the unemployment insurance benefits that she deserves.

Robert from Somerset wrote to me to

I am an unemployed Vietnam vet who received my last unemployment check last week. What can I do about this? If you have any suggestions, I would appreciate it. Why is it so hard for you and the other Members of Congress, our Representatives, to help us by voting for the extension of unemployment benefits? Banks do not have to beg, but we do. I don't recall any of the bank management risking their lives for our country.

If they're interested in experimentation for how to do things better, why don't they experiment with maybe denying the banks and investment banks some of the benefits they've gotten? I think this veteran would be outraged for somebody to tell him that the government is subsidizing his unemployment and destroying his motivation to work.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members are reminded not to traffic the well while another Member is under recognition.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. REED), one of the new leaders, a freshman Member of the House Ways and Means Committees, a gentleman who with his brother has run a successful business for 15 years and understands the system we have today simply isn't working.

Mr. REED. I thank the gentleman. my colleague, for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as my colleague indicated, I am a small business owner. I am proud of the business that we started up in Corning, New York, and the many people that we have employed in that business, Mr. Speaker.

I also know that during times when people are in trouble or businesses are in trouble, they have to make the hard decision of laying some people off, and I can empathize and understand when those individuals are in that situation.

But what we're talking about here tonight, ladies and gentlemen, is just some commonsense reforms to allow the States to have the flexibility to do what is best for them in their local jurisdictions to try to empower the men and women from their districts so that they have the opportunity to go back to work. I wholeheartedly disagree with the concept that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle are arguing for tonight to strip that language that would give States the flexibility to do commonsense reforms in unemployment, not taking away the unemployment program—no one is talking about doing that.

What we're talking about, ladies and gentlemen, is implementing the ability for States to have people get an education, or require people to get a GED, to give them tools so that when they go into the marketplace they have the ability to get a paycheck again rather than an unemployment check. That should be a goal that we in Washington, D.C., share across both aisles, and we should send the message to America, You know what? We get it in Washington. We don't necessarily have all the answers here. We should defer to the people closer to the people back in our States and in our local communities.

This is what our proposal is about. That is where these commonsense reforms are coming from, and, again, no one is talking about taking out the net that's associated with unemployment insurance. We're talking about commonsense reforms that will give people the tools to get back to work and take care of themselves.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson Lee).

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. I would like to thank the gentleman from Maine for providing an opportunity for civility and dialogue on the true grit of the American constituency.

I am amazed, I'm shocked, that we would be here on floor of the House denigrating an institution that has been accepted as a rainy day umbrella, I have said it often, for individuals who've toiled in the hot sun and skyscrapers on building infrastructure, on driving buses and trains, or however they may have provided for their families, and they have now lost their jobs.

They dutifully paid into the insurance pool called unemployment insurance. They followed the laws of their State. Some of them may be veterans who are now in the civilian workforce, and they are chagrined that they find themselves unemployed. Now we have those who would say idle hands are the devil's workshop and who want to insist that these are drug addicts, that they're uneducated, that they need a GED, and that they have all kinds of baggage that will not allow them to be gainfully employed.

Mr. Speaker, I'm very sorry to say that is not true. I know in my own community we are more fortunate than others regarding the amount of unemployed individuals.

But I know in the devastated communities people want to work. I have had individuals come to my office over and over again. I have seen people line up in the hot sun across this Nation this past summer attempting to get jobs. So I simply want to join with the gentleman's motion to instruct.

I want this to be the motion to instruct for dignity. I want to thank you for insisting that workers who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own are not, in essence, drug addicts. That means conspicuous drug addicts because sometimes people need counseling. Rather than stigmatizing, why don't we have a component that says you have job skill training, if you need counseling, you get counseling.

Let's not denigrate the unemployed. Pass the unemployment insurance.

Let's call for dignity.

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Look, if you think what's working is fine, we don't need to change anything. You think 27 million people trying to find a full-time job, many of them who have been out of work for 6 months or more, if you think that's great, the status quo is perfect, then this motion to instruct is what you want.

But I believe, and many people believe on both sides of the aisle, that we can do better; that those who are unemployed and looking for a job truly want a paycheck. They don't long for that unemployment check every 2 weeks or each month. They long for a job every day.

And what we want to do is to turn loose those who know their community and economy best to put together the innovative program, to put people back to work sooner rather than later, because we know the longer you stay out of work, the harder it is to find that job. The less education you have, the harder it is to find that job and to keep that job.

And so the question at hand here is, should we allow our local communities, our local States, to work with businesses, to work with workers, design programs to get people back to work sooner rather than later? It's worked before in other areas.
