Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the nomination of Christopher Wray to be Director of the FBI. Mr. Wray possesses the skill, the character, and the unwavering commitment to impartial enforcement of the law we need in an FBI Director. Based on the unanimous vote Mr. Wray received from the Judiciary Committee, I am confident my colleagues believe this as well.

Mr. Wray has an accomplished record as a lawyer. He was a Federal prosecutor for a number of years and went on to serve in various senior roles at the Department of Justice, including leading the criminal division at the Department.

Mr. Wray earned the Department's highest award for public service and leadership. His prior record of service demonstrates his competence in leading within the Federal Government and demonstrates he will be able to lead effectively at the FBI. He has shown he has the expertise needed to address the wide range of policy issues currently facing the FBI.

Of course, my colleagues and I asked Mr. Wray about his positions on many such issues during his hearing. He answered those questions very well, but the most important thing we wanted to learn from him had to do with his view of the job and where his loyalties lie.

As all of us in this body know, when we take the oath of office, we affirm that we will support and defend the Constitution of the United States. We don't pledge support to any member of the government or even to a political party. We pledge our loyalty to the Constitution and to the rule of law.

Many Members asked Mr. Wray very pointed questions about loyalty during his hearing. I was impressed with his plainspoken, candid answers, and I take him at his word when he says that his "loyalty is to the Constitution and the rule of law" and when he says that he will "never allow the FBI's work to be driven by anything other than the facts, the law, and the impartial pursuit of justice. Period—full stop."

Now, if he is confirmed, Mr. Wray will step into this role at a crucial moment, not only in the history of the FBI but in the history of this Nation. As we know, multiple investigations are underway, including by this body, to clearly lay out Russia's activities that attempted to influence the 2016 election. These are important and sensitive investigations, and they cannot be inappropriately influenced by people in powerful positions in any way whatsoever. This applies to the FBI Director.

Mr. Wray was asked very directly what he would do if presented with the opportunity to influence these investigations in any way. He told the committee that he will not condone tampering with investigations and that he would resign rather than be unduly influenced in any manner.

Mr. Wray's record of service and his reputation give us no reason to doubt him. He was forthright when he was asked specific questions about the events leading up to his being offered the job of FBI Director by President Trump. He made no loyalty pledges then, and I expect him never to make such a pledge moving forward.

Mr. Wray will also face the challenge of running the FBI, motivating its staff, and ensuring that the FBI operates effectively and efficiently. My colleagues know I haven't been pleased with how the FBI has—or has not—replied to the Judiciary Committee's inquiries and requests for information, and this doesn't apply just to this Senator but all the Senators on the committee, and it doesn't matter whether Republican or Democratic. They are entitled to ask questions, and they ought to get answers. That is the constitutional responsibility of oversight that all 535 Members of Congress have.

Not being satisfied with the FBI in the past, I asked Mr. Wray directly about the FBI's responsiveness to Members of this body. He promised me, and in turn other Members of this body, that he will prioritize responsiveness and transparency to this body. This will allow us to do our vitally important job of oversight over the Nation's top law enforcement agency. I am glad Mr. Wray is ready to work in partnership with the Senate to help us perform our role very effectively.

I expect to see improved responsiveness from Mr. Wray to our letters and to see enhanced protection for whistleblowers within the FBI who come forward—and they do that at great risk to themselves—to let this body know where abuses of power are going unnoticed. We owe it to these brave people we call whistleblowers, but they are patriotic people, to give them the protection they deserve. The culture for giving this protection starts at the top with the new FBI Director, Mr. Wray.

As I mentioned before, Mr. Wray was voted out of our committee unanimously. The fact that all of my colleagues—Democratic and Republican—trusted Mr. Wray with their "yea" vote says what we need to know about Mr. Wray's ability to perform the important role of FBI Director and to do it with integrity, with competence, with professionalism, and the utmost respect for the Constitution and the rule of law. We can't ask for Mr. Wray to do anything more than that.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting to confirm Christopher Wray as the next Director of the FBI.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. LANKFORD). The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I have a rare privilege and honor right now. A lot of times, the Presiding Officer and I come to the well to make speeches that we have to, that we ought to, or that somebody wanted us to. Rarely do we have the opportunity to come to the well of the Senate and speak about an individual from our own State whom we know personally who is impeccable in their reputation, has served America in many ways, and has now been appointed to a job that is essential to the health, safety, and welfare of the American people. I speak of Christopher Wray of Georgia.

Christopher Wray is my friend. Christopher Wray worked for the law firm of King & Spalding, the same one Griffin Bell, Larry Thompson, and Sam Nunn worked for—a great law firm with a tie to our government and our country.

At a time for an appointment to be the great one, this is the time. We know there have been issues from time to time with the FBI. We all know we are looking for somebody who can do the job and do it well, in a fair and impartial way, without any question of impropriety. Christopher Wray is exactly that type of person.

He is the person who helped convict Zacarias Moussaoui and coordinated with local law enforcement in the prosecution of the Washington, DC, snipers who terrorized our city for so long. He is a dedicated and committed prosecutor.

He has been selected many times to work for the Department of Justice. He went to the Department of Justice under Larry Thompson as an assistant. He worked there at the same time as Griffin Bell. He also worked during many of the investigations into the terrorists who attacked America. He is the right man at the right time in the right place.

So if ever there were a time—

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, will my colleague yield for a brief moment?

Mr. ISAKSON. I am happy to yield to the minority leader.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I will have a statement in support of Mr. Wray after the Senator from Georgia finishes speaking.

Mr. ISAKSON. Put an exclamation point after that.

Mr. SCHUMER. I am in full support of Mr. Wray, and I thank my colleague for the courtesy.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I know when it is a good time for me to shut up. When the minority leader has come to the floor to endorse the guy I am talking about, the last thing I want to do is wear it out.

Let me end my remarks by saying that Christopher Wray is the type of person CHUCK SCHUMER wants, the type of person I want, and the type of person we are looking for as the chief law enforcement officer of our country. He will make himself proud, he will make our State proud, and he will do the right thing at the right time in all places for the people of the United States of America.

I urge every Member of the Senate to heartily vote in support of Christopher Wray to be Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the United States of America.

I yield back.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, shortly we will take a vote on the nomination of Christopher Wray to be the next FBI Director.

The job of FBI Director has always been a crucial one. The responsibility is great and so are the expectations, and the demands facing our next FBI Director are perhaps greater than any time in our history.

This is a serious time for the FBI, and for the Nation. The firing of Director Comey, the shifting explanations from the White House as to why Mr. Comey was fired, and the disdain this White House has shown for the rule of law mean that now, more than ever, the Senate has an obligation to critically evaluate any potential FBI Director.

Now more than ever, we need an FBI Director who is independent, impartial, fearless, and has the strength of will to occupy a job that has been put under enormous political strain by the White House.

No doubt, Christopher Wray has been put up for a tough job. In considering his nomination, it was important to me to take the measure of the man and determine whether he was up to the challenge. I met with him privately for an hour, and I closely studied his record and his performance in his hearings.

Based on his career in public service and the commitments he made to me in our meeting and to the Judiciary Committee in his confirmation hearing, I believe that Christopher Wray deserves the approval of the Senate.

He committed to informing the Judiciary Committee of any attempts to interfere with Special Counsel Mueller's Russia probe and said he would consider any attempted interference to be unacceptable and inappropriate.

He committed to impartiality and independence, pledging that the FBI will follow the facts, the laws, and the Constitution, without regard to partisan political influence.

After a sterling career at the Justice Department, and based on the recommendation of hundreds of U.S. Attorneys who have validated his integrity, there is no reason not to believe that Mr. Wray will live up to these commitments as Director of the FBI.

I will vote yes on his nomination, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Thank you.

Mr. ISAKSON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I yield back all time on our side and their side as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the Wray nomination?

Mr. ISAKSON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2017

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act.

I will make some short comments, and then I would like to defer to Senator WHITEHOUSE, and then I would propose a unanimous consent request.

I think we will soon be able to pass the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act. I reintroduced this measure this year with Senator WHITEHOUSE.

The bill before us is almost the same as the one the Judiciary Committee cleared by voice vote in the 114th Congress, and it is very similar to the one we hotlined last year. We hotlined it in April, and all the Members of this Chamber had several months to review it. We had one objection, and we cleared it earlier this week.

The bill would extend a Federal law known as the Juvenile Justice Delinquency Prevention Act for 5 more years. The centerpiece of this 1974 legislation, which Congress last extended 15 years ago, in 2002, is its core protections for youth. These core protections call for juveniles to be kept out of adult facilities, except in very rare instances. They ensure that juveniles will be kept separated from adult inmates whenever they are housed in adult facilities. They call for reducing disproportionate minority contact in State juvenile justice systems.

States adhering to these requirements receive yearly formula grants to support their juvenile justice systems.

This bill would promote greater accountability in government spending. The Judiciary Committee, which I chair, heard from multiple whistleblowers that reforms are urgently needed to restore the integrity of the formula grant programs that are the centerpiece of our current juvenile justice law. The Justice Department's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention administers this formula grant program. This program would be continued for 5 more years under the bill, but the Justice Department would have to do more oversight if this bill is enacted.

This bill also calls for evidence-based programs to be accorded priority in funding. The goal is to ensure that scarce Federal resources for juvenile justice will be devoted mostly to the programs that research shows have the greatest merit and will yield the best results for these young people.

Finally, I want to take this opportunity to thank our many cosponsors. This bill is truly a bipartisan effort, and many Senators contributed provisions to strengthen this bill since we introduced it last April. The bill reflects the latest scientific research on what works best with at-risk adolescents.

At this point, I would ask that the Presiding Officer turn the floor over to Senator WHITEHOUSE. I want to thank Senator WHITEHOUSE for being so persistent in this effort, as well. I thank him for his great help.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Thank you, Mr. President, and thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman GRASSLEY has been a wonderful colleague in this effort. It is the culmination of years of work, including multiple committee hearings, briefings at home in Rhode Island and elsewhere, and really working the regular order of the Senate to get this done. Chairman GRASSLEY has been both patient and persistent, and I really appreciate his leadership.

I also thank our ranking member on the Judiciary Committee, Senator FEINSTEIN, for her work. I thank Senator RAND PAUL. He would have liked to have seen a stronger bill, but it simply—as would we have, by the way. He held on for a while, hoping we could strengthen it, but it turned out there was objection to that—and he was gracious about yielding—and now we are able to move forward bipartisanship and unanimously.

The history of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act is a noble history. It is because of this law that children aren't locked up in adult prisons any longer. It is because of this law that children don't get placed in solitary confinement for extended periods or shackled when they are arrested for things like running away from home or not coming to school, but it had been a while since this bill was updated.

The last time it was reauthorized was 13 years ago, and we have learned a lot about adolescent development and the best practices for dealing with children in those 13 years. So we are moving forward today.

I look forward to working with my chairman on the broad-based criminal justice reform that he is championing in the committee, but there is no reason we shouldn't go forward with getting juvenile justice right while we move on to other areas.

I particularly want to thank him and recognize the groups involved for the patient work that was done over many years with all sorts of interested groups. We had to make this right. We wanted to minimize conflict. We wanted to maximize what we were able to accomplish, and the result is, we have over 150 organizations that have endorsed this legislation, from the ACLU to the national association that supports probation and parole officers, from Boys Town to the National Association of Counties and the National Center for Victims of Crime.

The bill focuses the way it should, on evidence-based and trauma-informed programs that have emerged in the last 13 years. It focuses on protecting juveniles who are held in adult facilities, making sure they are fully separated in sight and sound from adult inmates. It limits the narrow circumstances under which they may be confined in isolation, and it requires data-driven approaches to reduce ethnic and racial disparities.

We recognize that kids now are much more vulnerable to substance abuse issues and that they, too, face mental health challenges, and we try to bring this bill together so States have to provide appropriate treatment and recognition when the cause of what is going on in that child's life is substance abuse or a mental health challenge.

We make it a good deal harder to incarcerate for the status offenses. A status offense is an offense that wouldn't even be an offense if an adult did it. It is only because you are a child that it is even an offense at all—skipping school or running away from home and so forth. There are better ways to deal with those children than incarcerating them, and we steer in this direction, promoting the community-based alternatives to the tension.

For instance, we have community courts in Rhode Island that work really well, where the family is engaged, the child is engaged, and the community is engaged. They really learn a lesson from what they did. They have to do something helpful in order to kind of remediate themselves with their community. It has been very successful. So there are real things that can be done. Of course, separating a child from their family in order to try to improve their situation is usually something that backfires. You need to have the family engaged.

Consistent with Senator PORTMAN's remarks, we also recognize that very often some of the times that children get in trouble is because they have been traumatized. They have been either the victim of violence themselves or witnessed violence in ways that have created trauma and, in many cases, are sadly the victims of child sex trafficking.

So we focus on States identifying and responding to those particular children to make sure, if that is what is behind what is going on, that those needs are met—simple things. We banned the use of shackles on girls once they are pregnant. It shouldn't be asking too much, and it is about time we stopped shackling girls, particularly pregnant girls.

Last, something near and dear to my chairman's heart, it improves the accountability and the oversight of the Federal grants program. I know that has been a goal he has pursued for a long time. The chairman is one of the most determined Members of the Senate when it comes to transparency and accountability, and so I am very pleased to be his partner in that particular piece of the bill.

With that, I yield the floor back to Chairman GRASSLEY so he may take us through the formal steps of passing this law. It is a very happy moment for me, and I extend my appreciation to Chairman GRASSLEY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, once again, thanks to Senator WHITEHOUSE for his cooperation and working so hard over the course of the last two Congresses to get this done.

I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 860 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title. The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 860) to reauthorize and improve the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Grassley amendment at the desk be considered and agreed to and the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 741) was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: To improve the bill)

Beginning on page 40, strike line 23 and all that follows through page 41, line 23.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I know of no further debate on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further debate on the bill?

Hearing none, the bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (S. 860), as amended, was passed, as follows:

HEALTHCARE

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, this afternoon, Senator MURRAY, the Senator from Washington State who is the ranking member of the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, and I, the chairman of the committee, made a joint bipartisan announcement that the Senate's HELP Committee will hold hearings beginning the week of September 4 on the actions Congress should take to stabilize and strengthen the individual health insurance market so Americans will be able to buy insurance at affordable prices in the year 2018. We will hear from State insurance commissioners, from patients, from Governors, from healthcare experts, and insurance companies. Committee staff will begin work this week, working with all committee members to prepare for these hearings and discussions. That was the announcement Senator MURRAY and I made today.

Now, in my own words, the reason for these hearings is that unless Congress acts by September 27, when insurance companies must sign contracts with the Federal Government to sell insurance on the Federal exchange next year, millions of Americans with government subsidies in up to half of our States may find themselves with zero options for buying health insurance on the exchanges next year, 2018. Many others without government subsidies will find themselves unable to afford health insurance because of rising premiums, copays, and deductibles.

There are a number of issues with the American healthcare system, but if your house is on fire, you want to put out the fire. The fire, in this case, is the individual health insurance market. Both Republicans and Democrats agree on this.

Our committee, the HELP Committee, had one hearing on the subject on February 1 and will work intensively between now and the end of September in order to finish our work in time to have an effect on health insurance policies next year, sold in 2018.

I am consulting with Senator MURRAY to try to make these hearings as bipartisan as possible and to involve as many committee members as possible. I will be consulting with Senator HATCH and Senator WYDEN so the Finance Committee is aware of any matters we discuss that might be within its jurisdiction. A number of Senators, both Democratic and Republican, have approached Senator MURRAY and me and said they would like to be in-involved. We are going to find a way for them to be involved and update them on our progress.

In these discussions—the ones I am describing—we are dealing with a small segment of the total health insurance market. Only about 6 percent of insured Americans buy their insurance in the individual market. Only about 4 percent of insured Americans buy their insurance on the Affordable Care Act exchanges. While these percentages are small, they represent large numbers of Americans, including many of our most vulnerable Americans. We are talking about roughly 18 million Americans in the individual market. About 11 million of them buy their insurance on the Affordable Care Act exchanges. About 9 million of these 11 million have Affordable Care Act subsidies, and unless we act, many of them may not have policies available to buy in 2018 because insurance companies will pull out of the collapsing markets. It would be like having a bus ticket and no bus coming through town.

Just as important, unless we act, costs could rise, once again, even making healthcare unaffordable for the additional 9 million Americans in the individual market who receive no government support to help buy insurance, roughly 2 million of them who buy their health insurance on the exchanges but who don't qualify for a subsidy, and roughly 7 million who buy their insurance outside of the exchanges. This means they have no government help paying for their premiums, their copays, and their deductibles.

As we prepare for these discussions, I have urged again that President Trump temporarily continue the cost-reduction payments through September so Congress can work on a short-term solution for stabilizing the individual markets in 2018. These cost-sharing reduction subsidies reduce copays, reduce deductibles, and reduce other out-of-pocket costs to help low-income Americans buy their health insurance on the exchanges. We are talking about those who make under 250 percent of the poverty level or roughly $30,000 for an individual or $60,000 for a family of four. Without payment of these cost-sharing reductions, Americans will be hurt. Up to half the States will likely have bare counties, with zero insurance providers offering insurance on the exchanges, and insurance premiums will increase by roughly 20 percent, according to the American Health Insurance Plans.

In my opinion, any solution that Congress passes for a 2018 stabilization package would need to be small, bipartisan, and balanced. It should include funding for the cost-sharing reductions, but it also should include greater flexibility for States in approving health insurance policies which should reduce costs.

Now, it is reasonable to expect that if the President were to approve continuation of cost-sharing subsidies for August and September and if Congress, in September, should pass a bipartisan stabilization bill that includes cost-sharing for 1 year—that is 2018—it is reasonable to expect that the insurance companies in 2018 would lower their rates. They have told us—in fact, Oliver Wyman, an independent observer of healthcare, has told us that lack of funding for cost-sharing reductions would add 11 to 20 percent to premiums in 2018.

So if the President, over the next 2 months, and the Congress, over the next year, take steps to provide certainty that there will be cost-sharing subsidies, that should allow insurance companies to lower the premiums they have projected they will charge in 2018. In fact, many insurance companies have priced their rates for 2018 at two different levels—one with cost-sharing and one without cost-sharing. So it is important not only that the President improve temporary cost-sharing for August and September but that we, the Congress, in a bipartisan way, find a way to approve it for at least 1 year so we can keep the premiums down.

Now, this is only one step in what we want to do about health insurance and about the larger question of healthcare costs so we will proceed step by step. A subsequent step will be to try to find a way to create a long-term, more robust individual insurance market, but for the short-term, our proposal is that by mid-September, we will see if we can agree on a way to stabilize the individual insurance market to keep premiums down and make affordable insurance available to all Americans.

I thank the Presiding Officer.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I am here to speak about something else, but let me take just a moment and thank my chairman for what he has done. I had the experience of serving on the HELP Committee with Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY when we did the Education bill last year.

Education is nearly as fraught a topic politically around here as healthcare is, and what we saw in a thoughtful, regular-order process that was developed under Chairman ALEXANDER's leadership was a very considerable piece of work with real effect.

Sometimes we agree on something on both sides of the aisle in this body because there is nothing to it. It is "National Peaches Week" or something, and everyone votes for that. But when it is something big and something consequential, that is where difficulties begin to emerge, and what the chairman was able to work in the committee was something big and something consequential on healthcare. To the end of my days in the Senate, I am going to remember that closing vote, when the clerk of the committee called the roll, and every single member of the HELP Committee voted in favor of the measure. It came out of the committee unanimously, and with that burst of energy, it came through the floor fine, and it passed the House without too many changes. It was just a remarkable piece of work. So I have seen what the HELP Committee can do under Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY, and I am filled with confidence that the process can be terrific there, and I am filled with goodwill toward a successful outcome.

I just think what the chairman has said is terrific, and I wanted to say a few words of appreciation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 17 minutes in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CLIMATE CHANGE

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, what I would like to speak about is a new form of fossil fuel-funded climate denial spin that has just entered the climate debate. They are always up to something, and here is their latest. The Trump administration's two great scientists, Scott Pruitt and Rick Perry, the Frick and Frack of climate denial, have called for a science showdown, where climate denial and climate science can have it out for once and for all—red team versus blue team. “Fossil fuel man” Pruitt has even called for the showdown to be peer reviewed. Well, what is comical about that is that climate science has been peer reviewed all along. That is how it gets to be science—by going through and surviving the process of peer review by other scientists.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter to Administrator Pruitt from a wide range of scientific organizations pointing out to him this very fact, that climate science is called climate science because it has been through scientific peer review.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JULY 31, 2017.

Hon. SCOTT PRUITT,
Administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, DC.

DEAR ADMINISTRATOR PRUITT: As leaders of professional scientific societies with our collective membership of hundreds of thousands of scientists, we are writing in response to reports that you are working to develop a “red team/blue team” process that challenges climate science.

We write to remind you of the ongoing research, testing, evaluations, and debates that happen on a regular basis in every scientific discipline. The peer review process itself is a constant means of scientists putting forth research results, getting challenged, and revising them based on evidence.

Indeed, science is a multi-dimensional, competitive “red team/blue team” process whereby scientists and scientific teams are constantly challenging one another's findings for robustness. The current scientific understanding of climate change is based on decades of such work, along with overarching, carefully evaluated assessments within the United States and internationally.

As a reflection of that work, 31 scientific societies last year released a letter, updated from 2009, to reflect the current scientific consensus on climate change. We urge you to give its text consideration, along with America's Climate Choices, the work of our premier United States scientific body, the National Academy of Sciences.

Of course, climate science, like all sciences, is an ever-changing discipline: our knowledge is always advancing. Robust discussion about data interpretation, methodology, and findings are part of daily scientific discourse. That is how science progresses. However, the integrity of the scientific process cannot thrive when policymakers—regardless of party affiliation—use policy disagreements as a pretext to challenge scientific conclusions.

Given your interest in the state of climate science, we would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to better understand your perspective and rationale for the proposed activity; and to discuss climate science, including which areas are at the frontiers of scientific knowledge and which are well-established because of thousands of studies from multiple lines of evidence.

We look forward to hearing from you, and your office may contact Lexi Shultz, Kasey White, or Joanne Carney to coordinate a meeting.

Sincerely,

Rush D. Holt, Ph.D., Chief Executive Officer, American Association for the Advancement of Sciences; Robert Gropp, Ph.D., Co-Executive Director, American Institute of Biological Sciences; Chris McEntee, Executive Director and CEO, American Geophysical Union; Ellen Bergfeld, Ph.D., Chief Executive Officer, American Society of Agronomy, Crop Science Society of America, Soil Science Society of America; Brian Crother, Ph.D., President Elect, American Society of Ichthyologists and Herpetologists; Crispin B. Taylor, Ph.D., Chief Executive Officer, American Society of Plant Biologists; Barry D. Nussbaum, Ph.D., President, American Statistical Association; Olin E. Rhodes, Jr., Ph.D., President, Association of Ecosystem Research Centers.

Linda Duguay, Ph.D., President, Association for the Sciences of Limnology and Oceanography; Robin L. Chazdon, Ph.D., Executive Director, Association for Tropical Biology and Conservation; Katherine S. McCarter, Executive Director, Ecological Society of America; David Gammel, Executive Director, Entomological Society of America; Vicki McConnell, Ph.D., Executive Director, Geological Society of America; Paul Foster, Ph.D., President, Organization of Biological Field Stations; Raymond Mejia, Society for Mathematical Biology; Luke Harmon, Ph.D., President, Society of Systematic Biologists.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Climate denial, on the other hand, avoids peer review as if it were Kryptonite, so this call for peer review of the contest between climate science and climate denial is almost comical, except for the evil intent behind it and, of course, the stakes. How very risky and dangerous continuing to get this climate issue wrong is for our country.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an op-ed written by John Holdren, until recently the President's climate adviser, called “The perversity of ‘red-teaming’ climate science.”

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From bostonglobe.com, July 25, 2017]

THE PERVERSITY OF ‘RED-TEAMING’ CLIMATE SCIENCE

(By John P. Holdren)

EPA administrator Scott Pruitt is reportedly giving serious consideration to investing the taxpayers' money in a “red team-blue team” effort to determine whether current scientific understandings about climate change are actually right. The idea is that a “red team” made up of officials from government agencies with responsibilities related to climate would try to poke holes in mainstream climate science, while a similarly constituted “blue team” would have the task of defending the mainstream consensus against this critique. Supposedly, this process would shed new light on what is known and what is not about human influence on the global climate. But the argument that such a process would be helpful is some combination of naive and disingenuous.

All of science works through the continuous application of the skeptical scrutiny of key findings by essentially everybody working in a given field. This happens in part through the peer-review process that findings must survive before being published in a scientific journal. It happens far more widely through the scrutiny of the wider community of experts in any given field once the findings have been published. That scrutiny is intense, not least because scientists make their reputations in substantial part by providing corrections and refinements to the published findings of others. This is the essence of the cumulative and self-correcting nature of the scientific enterprise as a whole.

Precisely because climate science has policy implications that appear to challenge the status quo in global energy supply, moreover, the degree of professional skeptical scrutiny to which key climate-science findings have been subjected has far exceeded even the already pervasive and rigorous norm. Climate science has been repeatedly “red-teamed,” both by groups of avowed contrarians sponsored by right-wing groups and by the most qualified parts of the world's scientific community. The right wing's “red team” efforts have consistently been characterized by brazen cherry-picking, misrepresentation of the findings of others, recycling of long-discredited hypotheses, and invention of new ones destined to be discredited. Almost none of this material has survived peer review to be published in the respectable professional literature.

Of course, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change itself, which works under the auspices of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change, can be regarded as a “red team-blue team” operation, in which every conclusion must pass muster with a huge team of expert authors and reviewers from a wide variety of disciplines and nations (including from Saudi Arabia and other major oil producers inclined to be skeptical). The IPCC has produced five massive assessments of climate science (in 1990, 1995, 2001, 2007, and 2013–14), each more emphatic than the last in its conclusions that human-produced greenhouses gases are changing global climate with ongoing and growing impacts on human well-being.

Climate-change science has likewise been reviewed regularly by committees of the US National Academy of Sciences, the United Kingdom's Royal Society, the World Meteorological Organization, the American Geophysical Union, and many other reputable bodies, all of which have contributed to and confirmed the overwhelming consensus of knowledgeable scientists on the five key points that really matter for policy: (1) The Earth's climate is changing in ways not explainable by the known natural influences; (2) the dominant cause is the build-up of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere that has resulted from burning coal, oil, and natural gas, and from land-use change; (3) significant harm to humans and ecosystems from these changes is already occurring; (4) the harm will continue to grow for decades because of inertia in the climate system and society's energy system; and (5) the future harm will be much smaller if the world's nations take concerted, aggressive evasive action than if they do not.

What, then, could explain the interest in a new "red team-blue team" effort on climate science organized by the federal government? Some proponents may believe, naively, that such a rag-tag process could unearth flaws in mainstream climate science that the rigorous, decades-long scrutiny of the global climate-science community, through multiple layers of formal and informal expert peer review, has somehow missed. But I suspect that most of the advocates of the scheme are disingenuous, aiming to get hand-picked non-experts from federal agencies to dispute the key findings of mainstream climate science and then assert that the verdict of this kangaroo court has equal standing with the findings of the most competent bodies in the national and international scientific communities. The purpose of that, of course, would be to create a sense of continuing uncertainty about the science of climate change, as an underpinning of the Trump administration's case for not addressing it. Sad.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, let's go back to the basics here. The basic fact is that the scientific truth of climate change threatens the business model of enormous industries that spew carbon dioxide, and it challenges the ideology of rightwing fanatics who spew hatred of government. That is what the background is to all of this, and there has been a scheme for years to protect the industry's business model and the ideology of its associated cohort of fanatics. That scheme from the industry and the rightwing fanatics has been to attack climate science. They have been at it for years.

If you are a huge polluting industry or a rightwing fanatic, how do you go about attacking science? Well, you can't win a real attack on the science, precisely because the polluter nonsense could not make it through peer review. Peer review is the most basic test to enter scientific debate, but they fail at peer review because their argument is bogus, phony, and it is a front. So the scheme has always been to avoid peer review because it is a test they would fail.

If you are going to fail the peer review test, what do you do? Instead of a direct attack through peer review journals, they attack science from the side. They create a phony parallel science, a simulacrum of science that doesn't have to face peer review. Their phony science doesn't even have to be true. In fact, they don't care whether it is true; indeed, I contend that some of them know it is not true and are engaged in deliberate, knowing fraud. But, in any event, getting to the truth is not the point of this phony parallel science. The goal is political, not scientific.

What they want is for government—us—to let them keep polluting. Polluting with their product makes them big, big money, and they don't want to stop. So the goal is not to enter the scientific debate on scientific terms. This is no quest for truth; this is a quest to influence public opinion. So the polluter nonsense doesn't have to be true; it just has to sound legitimate enough to influence an uninformed public. The goal is to fool the public and mess with politics. That is how they keep the political pressure off having to clean up their act. Their battlefield is the public mind, and their goal is to pollute the public mind with false doubts about the real science.

The climate denial apparatus that Pruitt and Perry serve just needs to create the illusion that there is still scientific doubt, and it just has to create that illusion in the minds of a non-scientific audience—the average voter, people who don't know any better and shouldn't be expected to. To do this, they have set up an elaborate con game to help them foment this illusion that there is a real contest here.

Their first trick, of course, is to hide the hand of the funders who back this scheme behind innocent or respectable-sounding names. If people saw the hand of ExxonMobil or Koch Industries behind this scheme, well, the jig would be up, so they have to back front groups—dozens, indeed, of front groups. The front groups take nice, cozy words like "heritage" and "heartland" and "prosperity," and they stick them on the front of the front group.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "EPA is asking a climate denier think tank for help recruiting its 'red team'" in this effort at the conclusion of my remarks.

This article points out that they are actually recruiting one of these phony front groups, the Heartland Institute, comparing climate scientists to the Unabomber, so you know that is going to be a fair contest between climate science and climate deniers when the group involved is a fossil-funded group that has compared climate scientists to the Unabomber. Of course you want them in the debate, don't you? It is laughable, except for the fact that it is really not.

The other thing these groups do is they go down the shelves of American history and they grab the names of heroes and they slap these great names onto other phony front groups. Even the great GEN George C. Marshall has had his name slapped on a front group.

I am a big fan of General Marshall. He is a hero of mine. Winston Churchill called him "the organizer of victory" in World War II. The Marshall plan saved Europe after that war. He won a Nobel Prize, deservedly. But in General Marshall's life of dedicated service to our country, he had his share of sorrows, and one of those sorrows was that he had no children. So today, there are no living children or grandchildren to defend his name. Any rascal can put General Marshall's name on a bogus enterprise, and these rascals did. It is beyond low.

So that is the first trick: Hide the polluters' hand behind an innocent or respectable-sounding name.

The second trick is camouflage. They ape real science by setting up groups with names that sound like scientific organizations. So when the United Nations convenes the real Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, they put up a Nongovernmental International Panel on Climate Change.

They ape scientific activities. If scientific organizations have conferences, they have conferences. If scientific organizations have colloquiums, they have colloquiums. If scientific organizations publish findings, they publish findings. The difference is, it is all phony. None of it is peer reviewed. It is not real science; it is a masquerade designed to give the appearance of science without any of the rigor of peer review and the other attributes of real science.

They even ape the publications of real science. I don't have the chart with me, but there is a publication by the legitimate U.S. Global Change Research Program that is entitled "Global Climate Change Impacts in the United States." That is for real. It is real science. Then there is a look-alike publication called "Addendum: Global Climate Change Impacts in the United States," which was cooked up by the Koch brothers-backed CATO Institute—same print, same text, same color. It virtually is a masquerade of the real item.

The first thing is to hide industry's hand behind the front group, and the second is to mask propaganda activities in camouflage that resembles actual scientific activity without having to pass any tests of scientific activity.

The last thing is to run the operation like a marketing campaign, since, well, that is what it is. You wouldn't market soap in peer-reviewed scientific journals, would you? First of all, the journals wouldn't publish it. Secondly, that is not your audience anyway. It is the same here. It doesn't do these scoundrels any good to be publishing in peer-reviewed scientific journals, even if they could get their nonsense published there. The people who read scientific journals know better. That is not their audience, and they know that they will lose in front of a scientific audience. They would shrivel up like the Wicked Witch. So they want to go right to the public with Madison Avenue-quality salesmanship and glossy messaging, marketing their dressed-up climate denial nonsense like you would market a new soap or spaghetti sauce. Go straight to TV, straight to talk radio, straight into the political debate.

The notion that the climate denial crowd now wants a scientific showdown—some “high noon” for climate denial—is ridiculous. First, they do not. We know they do not. They have been dodging away from peer review for years. They want peer review like the Wicked Witch wanted water.

So what are they up to?

Their gambit is yet another climate denial rhetorical trick to misdirect people to the thought that maybe climate science has not been peer reviewed either.

Climate science is nothing but peer reviewed—that is how it gets to be science—but this bit of trickery sets up in the unknowing person's mind the thought that climate science might not be peer reviewed. If our Frick and Frack of climate denial, Pruitt and Perry, had said outright that climate science is not peer reviewed, that would be a flat lie, and they would be caught out. Instead, they performed this rhetorical bank shot just to lay that suggestion out there, knowing perfectly well that it is false. It is a little like the old “when did you stop beating your wife?” trick. It lays out a false predicate by insinuation where the fact, itself, could not be properly asserted.

The purpose here, like the purpose of all climate denial schemes, is to buy more time for the polluters. Think how long this imaginary process of preparing for climate denial “high noon” will take. Oh, they could spin this out for years.

One thing you can bet is that game day will never come, but in the meantime, they have the craftily embedded lie out there that climate denial and climate science stand on an equal footing and just await peer review to decide between them, and now that lie can just hang out there, leaking its poison into the public debate.

I have to ask: Who thinks this stuff up? They have made a new art form out of propaganda. Think what a schemer you have to be to think this stuff up. That is the kind of people we are dealing with here, and in this bizarre world, Frick and Frack hold high office.

The problem is that there actually is a judge here. A real “high noon” will actually come. As the old saying goes, time will tell. When it comes to climate change, the laws of physics and chemistry and biology are at work. The things that CO₂ concentrations do in the atmosphere are going to happen no matter what we say or believe about them. The laws of physics do not depend on political beliefs. The chemistry of what happens when seawater is exposed to more and more CO₂ is going to happen, and it will follow the laws of chemistry, not our opinions or beliefs.

What we humans say or what we believe or what we have been conned into believing by the climate denial scheme will not matter at all. Our views—our opinions—are not part of the equation. Fill one room with climate deniers and fill another room with climate scientists, and the same chemistry experiment will have the same results in both rooms. Chemistry does not care about our opinions.

The way trees and animals and fish and insects and viruses and bacteria react to new temperatures and new levels of acidity and new environments we have no say in. The fossil fuel industry can cow westerners into silence or even con them into believing the industry's climate denial nonsense, and the bark beetle will not care. It will not even know that the con game is being run. The bark beetle will just keep eating its way up the warming latitudes and altitudes and killing pine forests by the hundreds of square miles.

What science does for us is give us the ability, as humans, to understand the laws of science so that we can predict what will and will not happen. Science provides mankind with headlights so that we can look ahead and see what the future portends, but turning off those headlights by denying the science or trying to distract the driver so that we are not even looking out the windshield will not change what is ahead. Whatever is coming at us is still coming at us. We just will not see it in time to steer around it in order to minimize the collision or slow down and soften the impact. We will not have time because we will have given that time to the polluters. Time is what they want—more time for the polluters to make big money.

All of this lying, all of this science denial is actually, truly, an evil thing, and the cleverer it gets with these bank shot, faux “high noon” showdown, tricky lies, actually, the more evil it is. The people who are behind this are doing a very grievous wrong. They are dishonorable, dishonest, and disgraceful. Time will tell us just how wicked they are.

EPA IS ASKING A CLIMATE DENIER THINK TANK FOR HELP RECRUITING ITS ‘RED TEAM’

(By Erin Auel)

The Environmental Protection Agency has asked the Heartland Institute, a D.C.-based rightwing think tank that denies the human causes of climate change, to help identify scientists to join the agency's so-called red team-blue team effort to “debate” the science of climate change, according to the Washington Examiner.

The move is part of EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt's efforts to undercut established climate science within the agency. In an interview with Reuters earlier this month, Pruitt suggested the possibility of creating a red team to provide “a robust discussion” on climate science and determine whether humans “are contributing to [warming].”

The Heartland Institute offers a model of what the EPA red team might look like. Their contrarian Nongovernmental International Panel on Climate Change—often referred to as a red team—publishes regular volumes of a report called “Climate Change Reconsidered.”

Heartland communications director Jim Lakely told the Washington Examiner the red team exercises to critique climate science are necessary “to critically examine what has become alarmist dogma rather than a sober evaluation of climate science for many years.” But, as many scientists and experts have noted, the peer review process for scientific publications already requires and facilitates rigorous examination.

For years, the Heartland Institute has spread misinformation about climate change and attacked the credibility of climate scientists. In 2012, the group launched a billboard campaign with the photographs of Ted Kaczynski (the Unabomber), Charles Manson, and Osama bin Laden, saying those men “still believe in global warming.” Heartland's website at the time declared “the most prominent advocates of global warming aren't scientists. They are murderers, tyrants, and madmen.”

More recently, the group announced plans to send a report titled “Why Scientists Disagree About Global Warming” to every K-12 teacher and college professor in America. The report incorrectly denies humans' contributions to rising global temperatures.

Pruitt has adopted much of the misinformation that Heartland promotes. Since being confirmed, Pruitt has continued to question the science behind climate change and repeated climate denier talking points claiming that humans are not the main contributors to a warming planet.

And Heartland experts have already had an active role in Trump's administration. Dan Simmons, currently an assistant to Energy Secretary Rick Perry, is still listed as an author on Heartland's website. Myron Ebell, a noted climate denier, led Trump's EPA transition team and has written several pieces opposing climate policy for Heartland.

Heartland has received funding from several fossil fuel companies, though it no longer publicly discloses its funders. In 2012, leaked documents from the group showed the group received contributions from the Charles G. Koch Charitable Foundation and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, among others. It has also received funding from ExxonMobil to support work to refute the human causes of climate change.

Last month, Heartland announced former Kansas congressman Tim Huelskamp will become president of the organization. During his political career, Huelskamp's top donor was Koch Industries, and he received more than $250,000 in campaign contributions from the oil and gas industry. Koch Industries and the Koch family foundations have been one of the biggest funders of organizations that deny humans' role in causing climate change and oppose policies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

It remains to be seen who will staff the EPA's red team. NYU professor Steve Koonin, a scientist who formerly worked with both BP and the Obama administration, is reportedly the top contender. In 2014, Koonin wrote a Wall Street Journal op-ed detailing the ways in which climate science is not settled, which included the extent to which humans are causing climate change, a now-frequent talking point among Trump administration officials.

In April, Koonin published another op-ed in the Wall Street Journal, suggesting that a Red Team/Blue Team would be "a step toward resolving . . . differing perceptions of climate science."

CLIMATE DISRUPTION

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, climate disruption is a seminal challenge of our generation. It affects everything from our farms to our forests to our fishing. We see the impact in disappearing glaciers, melting permafrost, shrinking ice sheets, raging forest fires, dying coral reefs, migrating animals and insects, and more powerful storms.

The world is changing right in front of us. It is appropriate to call this climate disruption because our climate is broken, and it is affecting so many things that we value. In response, communities across the globe are transforming their energy economies—from increasing the energy efficiency of buildings, vehicles, and appliances to replacing a carbon-polluting fossil-fuel-energy economy with a renewable and clean-energy economy.

How much do you know about the changes under way? Let's find out. Welcome to episode 4 of the Senate Climate Disruption Quiz.

Here we go. First question: Atmospheric carbon dioxide is at its highest level in at least how many years? Is it 88 years? Is it the highest level in the last 8,000 years? Is it the highest level in the last 800,000 years, or is it the highest level in the last 80 million years?

Think about your answer.

The correct answer is C, 800,000 years.

In September 2016, we reached a historic milestone. The carbon dioxide readings for the planet reached 400 parts per million. For perspective, before the industrial revolution, before we started burning fossil fuels in massive quantities, that number was about 280 parts per million.

Here is something that is even scarier. The rate is going up faster and faster. In 1965 and 1975, it was going up at about 1 part per million per year. Then, a couple of decades later, it was 2 parts per million per year, and the last 2 years, it has gone up at a rate of 3 parts per million per year.

As the human civilization, we have to turn this around. We have to not only slow it down, but we have to turn it around and lower those levels of carbon dioxide if we are going to save our blue-green planet.

Question No. 2, which Governor announced that he or she will hold a global climate summit here in America next year?

Is the answer Jerry Brown? Is the answer Governor Rick Snyder of Michigan, Governor Susana Martinez of New Mexico, or Governor Rick Scott of Florida?

The answer—now that you have decided which one you think is right—is A, Governor Jerry Brown of California. He announced on July 6 that he will bring together entrepreneurs, mathematicians, professors, climate experts, and others from around the world in September 2018 for a summit to “combat the existential threat of climate change.”

This meeting is being viewed as a very significant undertaking to keep the conversation going forward, because in the absence of the United States being deeply involved in the Paris Agreement, the United States has to be involved in many other ways. This issue is too big, and the challenge is too great for us to be sitting it out.

Let's turn to question No. 3. The world's first floating wind farm is being constructed off the coast of which country? Is it Germany? Is it off the coast of the United States? Is it Scotland? Or is it France?

I might point out that, when we see a floating wind farm, we are talking about a wind farm in which the sea floor is deep enough that it can't be anchored; that is, the turbine cannot be anchored on the sea floor. There is a hint, a little clue.

Do you have your answer?

The correct answer is C, Scotland.

The Peterhead wind farm, off the coast of Scotland, is using revolutionary technology to harvest wind power in waters that are too deep for wind turbines to be anchored on the seabed.

The wind farm's first turbine was just towed into place. Once finished, it will include five 6-megawatt turbines. By the way, those are much larger turbines than the ones we have on land in the United States. The blades will be 246 feet long. Together, the group of turbines will be able to power 20,000 homes by the end of the installation.

Maybe we will see some of those appearing off the coast of the United States in the future.

Let's turn to question No. 4. Glacier National Park in 1910 had 150 glaciers. How many are there today? Are there 200? Are there 150? Are there 25? Or are there 10?

What is the answer?

The answer is C, 25.

Here we are in just a century, and we have gone from 150 glaciers in Glacier National Park to only 25 left. According to Dan Fagre, a USGS research ecologist, “within 20 years, the bulk of the remaining glaciers will be too small to be considered active glaciers.”

When these glaciers are gone, it will have a significant impact on Montana and its economy. They typically put off a significant amount of water in late August and early September. They feed streams that would otherwise dry up. They provide cool water that plays a critical role in the life cycles of both insects and fish. If you are planning to see the glaciers in Glacier National Park, go soon.

Let's turn to question No. 5. Tesla, the electric car company, is set to install the world's largest grid-scale battery in which country? Are they going to install that battery in China, in Australia, in Mexico, or in Spain?

If you had time to ponder the question and develop your answer, the answer is not China, which you might expect because China is so large and is so engaged in renewable energy today, nor is it Mexico or Spain. It is Australia.

Australia has embraced renewable energy. In 2016, renewable sources produced more than 17 percent of the country's electricity. South Australia has raced ahead of the rest of the country in embracing renewables, particularly wind power.

Until now, it has not been able to adequately store the energy generated by the region's wind farms. Later this year, Tesla will install the world's largest lithium-ion grid-scale battery and pair it with one of the wind farms, in a major leap forward for large-scale renewable energy use.

The idea is that the 129-megawatt-hour battery, which is capable of putting out 100 megawatts of power at a time, will help stabilize South Australia's electrical grid and provide backup power if there is a shortfall.

More and more, as we have wind on the grid and as we have solar power on the grid, batteries are being turned to as a strategy to even out the flow of electricity.

There you have it, folks. Five questions in episode 4 of the Senate Climate Disruption Quiz. They are questions ripped right from the headlines. Facts on the ground are changing fast, as climate disruption increases and communities across the globe are responding. We are racing the clock. There is no time to spare.

Stay engaged in the fight to save our beautiful blue-green planet. In the near future, I will bring you episode 5 of the Senate Climate Disruption Quiz.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

POLICY JUSTIFICATION

Republic of Iraq—Follow-On Technical Support (FOTS) for U.S. Origin Navy Vessels and a Ship Repair Facility

The Government of Iraq has requested a possible sale of Follow-On Technical Support

(FOTS) for various U.S.-origin navy vessels and a ship repair facility in Iraq to include procurement of spare and repair parts, support and test equipment, publications and technical documentation, personnel training equipment, engineering and logistics support services, and other related elements of logistics and program support. The estimated total program value is $150 million.

The proposed sale will contribute to the foreign policy and national security of the United States by helping to provide for a stable, sovereign, and democratic Iraq, capable of combating terrorism and protecting its people and sovereignty.

Iraq intends to use this maintenance support to ensure the Navy is fully-operationally capable of providing coastal defense and security. The various vessels to be supported are: patrol boats, offshore support vessels, fast assault boats, and Rigid Hull Inflatable Boats. The proposed sale of Follow-On Technical Support will increase the Iraq Navy's material and operational readiness. Iraq will have no difficulty absorbing this support into its armed forces.

The proposed sale of this support will not alter the basic military balance in the region.

The prime contractor will be Swiftships, LLC, Morgan City, LA. There are no known offset agreements proposed in connection with this potential sale.

Implementation of this proposed sale will require annual trips to Iraq and in-country presence involving U.S. Government and contractor representatives for technical reviews, support and oversight for approximately three years.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this proposed sale.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF HALEY'S METAL SHOP, INC.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, today I wish to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Haley's Metal Shop, Inc., in Biddeford, ME. Spanning five generations, Haley's Metal Shop has successfully persisted through challenging economic swings and rapid technological advancements. In their 100 years of operation, Haley's Metal Shop has been an exemplary family-run small business. As such, I am proud to celebrate their 100 years of service in the Biddeford community and the State of Maine.

Haley's Metal Shop began in 1917 when Robert Jordan founded his tin-smith business in Biddeford. Jordan trained his son-in-law, Joe Haley, in the trade, and together, they formed Jordan and Haley. When Jordan retired in the 1950s, Joe Haley took on his son, Tom. Joe and Tom expanded the business's scope to incorporate new innovations, like air conditioning, and changed the company name to Haley's Metal Work, Inc. When Joe's children, Joyce and Brian, came of age, they elected to join the family business too. The brother and sister made advancements in both the technical and administrative branches of their business. Today Brian, and son Matthew continue the five-generation family tradition of running the business together.

Over the past 100 years, Haley's Metal Shop has grown and modernized to specialize in customized temperature regulation systems, including HVAC, central air, and geothermal heat and cooling, in addition to metal fabrication and sheet metal installations. In the State of Maine, where winter temperatures make home heating especially critical, Haley's Metal Shop's 24-hour emergency service helps keep the heat on in Maine homes.

I applaud Haley's Metal Shop for its emphasis on employee development and supporting local communities. Haley's Metal Shop employs over 40 people, including four father-son pairs. They support their staff by providing on-the-job training to help employees develop new and important skills in this technical field. Haley's Metal Shop has made it their commitment to give back to the community by contributing to various organizations over the years, such as the United Way of York County, Biddeford's Community Bike Center, the Maine Cancer Foundation, and the Biddeford Free Clinic, among others. These commendable efforts both in the shop and in the community help make Haley's Metal Shop a great part of Biddeford and of Maine.

I am pleased to join the Biddeford community in congratulating the Haley family and the dedicated employees of Haley's Metal Shop for this remarkable centennial achievement. I look forward to following their continued growth, and I thank them for their innovation, entrepreneurship, and hard work serving communities in the State of Maine.

TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL DANIEL S. ARTINO

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to commend LTC Daniel S. Artino for his dedication to duty and service as an Army legislative fellow and congressional budget liaison for the Assistant Secretary of the Army. Dan was recently selected to command an Apache battalion and will soon depart for Fort Bliss, TX.

A native of Stow, OH, Dan was commissioned as an aviation officer after his graduation from the U.S. Military Academy, where he earned a bachelor of science degree in international relations. He also earned a master's degree in legislative affairs from George Washington University.

Dan has served in a broad range of assignments during his Army career. He has led troops as an attack platoon leader, a headquarters company commander, and as the commander of an attack reconnaissance company flying Apache helicopters. He has served overseas in Germany and deployed several times into combat in support of operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. Dan's leadership has been felt from the platoon to the brigade level.

In 2015, Dan was selected to be an Army congressional fellow, and my office was fortunate to host him. For the next year, Dan served the State of Mississippi and the Nation admirably. In his subsequent role as congressional budget liaison, Dan ensured the Army's budget positions were well represented to the Senate and House Committees on Appropriations.

I have enjoyed the benefit of Dan's counsel over the past 3 years. It is a pleasure to recognize and commend Dan for his service to this country and to wish him and his wife, Cathy, all the best as they continue their journey in the U.S. Army.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO DAVID HOLLISTER

• Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, today I wish to pay special tribute to my longtime friend and former legislative colleague, David Hollister. On August 14, 2017, the city of Lansing will be renaming their city hall the "David C. Hollister City Hall," a very fitting tribute to this dedicated public servant.

Over the years, Dave Hollister has been a mentor, a colleague, and a friend to me. I first met Dave when I was a student at Michigan State University, working at the Cristo Rey Community Center in Lansing. As a teacher, he encouraged my first run for office: the Ingham County Board of Commissioners. I later served with him for over a decade in the Michigan House of Representatives and have worked closely with him over the years in his various public service roles.

In today's divisive political climate, Dave Hollister represents the very best of public service. He has selflessly served in State and local government. Without acclaim, he has worked tirelessly to do what is right for people. Able to bring people together to forge solutions on the most difficult problems, he is a community organizer in the truest sense of the word.

Naming the Lansing City Hall after Dave Hollister is not only a fitting tribute to him, but a tribute to the kind of public service his life represents.

After serving in the Michigan House of Representatives, Dave was elected mayor of the city of Lansing in 1993. While mayor, he inspired and led what is known as the "Lansing Works! Keep GM!" movement. Dave brought together community leaders in government, business, and labor and convinced General Motors to stay and invest over $1 billion in the Lansing area. This effort saved thousands of jobs and prevented a crisis in the region. Dave's leadership serves as a model of teamwork for leaders and communities across our country.

Keeping General Motors in Lansing is just one example of Dave's leadership. After serving as mayor, he was appointed director of the Michigan Department of Labor and Economic Growth in 2003. Subsequently, Dave served as president and CEO of Prima Civitas, a nonprofit economic and community development organization based in East Lansing. Congratulations to my dear friend, David Hollister, on receiving this special distinction from the city of Lansing. It is my hope that the newly renamed city hall will serve as a lasting testament to your brand of public service to the people of the city of Lansing and the great State of Michigan.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BOOKER:

S. 1689. A bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act to provide for a new rule regarding the application of the Act to marijuana, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BOOKER. Madam President, I rise to talk about the Marijuana Justice Act—a bill I introduced today that would end the Federal prohibition on marijuana and start to end the War on Drugs. For far too long we have approached drug use and addiction as something we can jail ourselves out of. It is beyond clear that approach has failed. It is time we start to address the persistent and systemic racial bias that has plagued our criminal justice system and adopt policies that will move us forward, not backward. It is time to de-schedule marijuana.

Since 2001, arrests for marijuana have increased across the Country and now account for over 50 percent of all drug arrests in the United States. The ACLU conducted a thorough study of over 8 million marijuana arrests between 2001 and 2010. It found that 88 percent of those were for marijuana possession. Alarming, the study also found that African Americans are 3.73 times more likely to be arrested for marijuana possession than their white peers, even though they use marijuana at similar rates.

Over the last five years, States have begun to legalize marijuana in an effort to push back on the failed War on Drugs and combat the illicit drug market. Currently, eight States and the District of Columbia have legalized marijuana and more States are taking up measures to follow suit. We know from the experiences of States that have already legalized marijuana that we will gain far more than we lose—these States have seen increased revenues and decreased rates of serious crime, and a reallocation of resources toward more productive uses. In Colorado, arrest rates have decreased and State revenues have increased. Washington saw a 10 percent decrease in violent crime over the three-year period following legalization.

However, the Federal government still treats marijuana as an illegal substance. It is time for the Federal government to end the Federal prohibition of marijuana.

Today, I introduced the Marijuana Justice Act, a bill that would remove marijuana from the list of controlled substances, thereby ending the Federal prohibition. The bill would also automatically expunge records for people who were convicted of Federal marijuana use and possession offenses. We must help people with criminal records get back up on their feet and obtain jobs, and expunging their records is an important step in that process.

The legislation would allow individuals currently serving time in Federal prison for marijuana offenses to petition a court for a resentencing. One of the greatest tragedies from the Fair Sentencing Act was that it did not provide retroactive relief to individuals serving time under the old crack and powder cocaine sentencing laws. The Marijuana Justice Act would allow people currently serving time for a marijuana offense to seek immediate relief.

The bill would also use Federal funds to encourage States where marijuana is illegal to legalize the drug if they disproportionately arrest or incarcerate low income individuals or people of color. Too often drug laws are enforced disproportionately against minorities and the poor. This is unacceptable and belies our values.

Finally, the Marijuana Justice Act would establish a community reinvestment fund, which would invest money in communities most affected by the War on Drugs. Building new libraries, supporting job training, and investing in community centers will improve public safety and is the right thing to do after decades of failed drug policies.

The Marijuana Justice Act is a serious step in acknowledging, that after 40 years, it is time to end the War on Drugs. It is time to stop our backward thinking, which has only led to backward results. It is time to lead with our hearts, our heads, and with policy that actually works.

S. 1693. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to clarify that section 230 of that Act does not prohibit the enforcement against providers and users of interactive computer services of Federal and State criminal and civil law relating to sex trafficking; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I would like to talk today about the criminal act of sex trafficking.

Today we introduced legislation that is incredibly important to combating sex trafficking. The Senate also passed a resolution today by unanimous consent to provide information to the Justice Department that comes out of an investigation that we did in the U.S. Senate regarding sex trafficking. This is an important day in pushing back.

Let me talk about this for a second in personal terms. Imagine, if you will, that your daughter is missing. You do everything you can do to find her. Finally, you see her picture on the internet, and she is being sold for sex. That may sound like a horror movie to you, but it is very real. Unfortunately, it is happening across our country.

Families in Ohio and in your State have experienced this nightmare situation. Let me tell you about Kubiiki Pride. Kubiiki Pride gave powerful testimony before the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations in the Senate. Ms. Pride said her daughter had been missing for 9 months when she found her picture on the top website for commercial sex activity—backpage.com. She was actually glad to have found her daughter. So she called backpage.com and said: That is my daughter. She has been missing for 9 months. She is 14 years old. Thank you for taking down the ad.

Backpage.com said to her: Did you pay for the ad?

She said: No. It is my 14-year-old daughter.

They said: We are not going to take down the ad. You didn't pay for it.

Imagine if this were your daughter. Imagine how you would feel.

These traffickers are using the internet to sell girls and women. Congress has a responsibility to act. We have a responsibility to act because human trafficking is now becoming a national crisis.

Human trafficking, including sex trafficking, is a $150 billion-a-year industry. That makes it the second biggest criminal enterprise in the world, only behind the drug trade. And this ruthless, corrupt industry is growing significantly. Why? Because of the internet in the digital age. Victims of sex trafficking told me: ROB, this has gone from the street corner to the smart phone.

Since 2007, the Polaris Project—a leading anti-trafficking advocacy group—received 33,000 reports of human trafficking through its various hotlines.

By the way, Polaris endorsed our legislation, which I appreciate.

In 2016 alone, Polaris-operated hotlines received 8,000 reports of human trafficking. Almost 25 percent of trafficking incidents reported to Polaris in the past decade happened just last year. Human trafficking reports through these hotlines went up dramatically—35 percent—between 2015 and 2016. There is no reason to believe this trend will reverse unless we act.

This is a 21st-century epidemic. The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children noted an 846 percent increase in reports of suspected child sex trafficking through its CyberTipline from 2010 to 2015. In just 5 years, that is an increase of over 800 percent. They found this dramatic spike to be “directly correlated to the increased use of the internet to sell children for sex.” That is what is going on.

How is this happening? People are being bought and sold on public domains accessible from a simple search. And the majority of online sex trafficking can be traced to one website called backpage.com. The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children said 73 percent—three-quarters of all suspected sex trafficking it receives from the general public through its CyberTipline comes from this one website.

According to leading anti-traffic organizations, including Shared Hope International, service providers working with child sex trafficking victims have reported that between 80 percent and 100 percent of the victims they help were bought and sold on backpage.com.

My experience in Ohio is similar to that. I will tell you anecdotally, as I talked to women and girls who had been victims of sex trafficking, almost all of them tell me they have been sold on backpage. By the way, almost all of them tell me that they had become addicted in the process to an opioid, heroin, or prescription drugs and that is used to keep their dependency on their trafficker.

In January of this year, a nearly 2-year investigation by the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations produced a report finding backpage to be more deeply complicit in illegal online sex trafficking than anyone imagined. Everyone already knew sex trafficking was taking place on this website. It is there. But our report found that backpage actively and knowingly facilitated the criminal sex trafficking of women and children; then it covered up evidence of these crimes to increase its own profits. This is the information we have now provided to the Department of Justice.

We also know from a recent Washington Post report that, despite its claims, backpage aggressively solicited and created sex-related ads to lure customers to its website. It claims it “leads the industry” in its screening of illegal activity, including sex ads for children, but that isn’t true. To the contrary, it appears the industry backpage leads is online sex trafficking, valuing its profits more than the rights of vulnerable women and young children. They have known their site has been used for illegal sex trafficking for years, but instead of putting a stop to it, the company has actively facilitated these crimes.

That is why Congress has to act. Last month, I, along with Senators McCASKILL and CARPER, launched a criminal review of backpage.com. Today, the Senate passed a resolution releasing materials from our 18-month investigation to the Department. I hope the Department of Justice will join in this fight against backpage, but I believe achieving justice for these victims requires a legislative fix once and for all.

There is a recent documentary, and I would encourage you to look at it. It is powerful and tough, but it is important. It is called “I am Jane Doe.” It chronicles the cases of three young girls who were sex trafficking victims bought and sold on backpage. In 2014, these girls brought cases against backpage, accusing them of knowingly assisting in their trafficking. The ads on backpage for each of these girls explicitly promoted their youth. These were underage girls.

The court found that the victims made a strong case that backpage tailored its site to make underage sex trafficking easier, but the court ruled that third-party websites facilitating sex trafficking are immune from charges brought on by victims, no matter how complicit the website was in the crime, citing the blanket immunity granted by a 1996 law called the Communications Decency Act, or CDA.

Around the same time in Massachusetts, three young victims sued backpage after they were bought and sold on their website for sex. They, too, argued that backpage made sex trafficking easier. This case reached the First Circuit Court of Appeals, but backpage was once again spared of any legal ramifications because of the Communications Decency Act, specifically section 230 of that law—the clause courts credit to giving third-party providers blanket immunity from crimes committed through their website.

Despite its ruling, the court recognized the immoral nature of backpage appearing to profit from online prostitution but maintained they couldn’t do anything about it because the law protected these acts. The court opinion stated that in order to fix the problem, “the remedy is through legislation, not litigation.” That is who we are. We are the legislators. The court of appeals said: Congress, do your job.

Numerous judicial decisions have suggested that Congress must act, before the courts, to bring justice to the victims and families of online sex trafficking. That is my intention in introducing this legislation today.

I believe that we need to have free internet. All of us do. I believe that the Communications Decency Act is a well-intentioned law that has an important purpose. But the law was not intended to protect those who willingly facilitate illegal conduct, such as sex trafficking, and it wasn’t intended to protect backpage.com. That is why today I, along with a number of my colleagues from both sides of the aisle, have introduced this bill called the Stop Enabling Sex Traffickers Act. It clarifies section 230 of the Communications Decency Act to ensure that websites that knowingly facilitate sex trafficking can be held liable and the victims can get justice. It is very narrow. You have to knowingly be involved in supporting, assisting, and facilitating sex trafficking. This will not be a broad net.

The Stop Enabling Sex Traffickers Act puts in place three narrowly crafted and commonsense reforms.

First, it allows victims to seek justice against websites that knowingly facilitate crimes against them.

Second, it eliminates the Federal liability protections for websites that assist, support, or facilitate a violation of Federal sex trafficking laws—laws already on the books.

Finally, it will enable State law enforcement—not just the Department of Justice—to take legal action if these businesses violate Federal sex trafficking laws. Forty-seven attorneys general asked for this.

The internet revolutionized illegal sex trafficking, and Federal law has not kept pace. It is time for this 21-year-old law to be brought into this century. The Stop Enabling Sex Traffickers Act is legislation our courts have been calling for, our attorneys general have been calling for, and most importantly, what victims and their families have been insisting that we do.

Again, this law was never intended to protect sex traffickers who prey on the most innocent and vulnerable among us. This narrowly crafted bill gives law enforcement the tools they need to go after criminals who traffic women and children online for sex.

There are some groups who have been critical of this effort to hold backpage accountable and stop this online exploitation. They have suggested that this bipartisan bill could impact mainstream websites and service providers—the good actors out there. That is false. Our bill does not amend, and thus preserves, the Communications Decency Act’s Good Samaritan provision. This provision protects good actors who proactively block and screen for offensive material and thus shields them from any frivolous lawsuits. That is in the legislation and needs to be in there.

This bipartisan legislation preserves internet freedom, while holding those who actively facilitate online sex trafficking accountable.

I recently visited the Ranch of Opportunity in Washington Court House, OH. This is a place of hope for girls between ages 13 and 18 to find healing and recovery during a residential treatment program. Most of the girls at the ranch, I am told, have been victims of sex trafficking. As I heard heartbreaking stories from these girls who have had their most basic human rights stripped from them, backpage came up. As I said earlier, it almost always does. We can never take back the horrors they had to endure. What we can do and what this legislation will do is bring justice to these victims and their families.

I am proud to stand with my 20, now 25, bipartisan colleagues, as well as 18 anti-human trafficking advocacy groups and law enforcement organizations around this country, to support this legislation as we fight against this abhorrent evil.

In a letter of support, the president and CEO of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children said: “This bill will help ensure justice for child sex trafficking victims and clarify remedies available to civil attorneys and State attorneys general to assist victims in holding everyone responsible who participated in their trafficking.”

That is what it is about. It is about securing justice for those who have had their most basic human rights taken away, and it is about protecting vulnerable women and children. Victims of sex trafficking know evil far worse than many of us can ever imagine. The trauma they go through is unbelievable. We owe it to them to fix flaws in the justice system that allow people complicit in these crimes to profit from human misery and suffering. The Stop Enabling Sex Traffickers Act will do that.

Thank you, Mr. President.

By Mr. REED (for himself, Mr. CASEY, and Mr. COONS):

S. 1694. A bill to improve quality and accountability for educator preparation programs; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, we know that the quality of teachers and principals are two of the most important in-school factors related to student achievement. Yet the pipeline into the profession has been neglected. If we want to improve our schools, it is essential that we invest in the professional preparation of teachers, principals, and other educators. As such, today, I am reintroducing the Educator Preparation Reform Act with my colleagues Senators CASEY and COONS to ensure that the Federal government continues to be a partner in addressing this critical national need.

Today, we are facing a crisis in education. According to a research brief from the Learning Policy Institute, we have seen dramatic declines in enrollment in teacher preparation programs—an estimated 35 percent decline between 2009 and 2014. We also continue to see high rates of attrition among educators. If these trends continue, there will be an estimated gap of more than 100,000 between the number of teaching positions open and the number of teachers available to be hired annually through 2025.

The impact of these shortages falls the hardest on our most vulnerable students in our highest need communities. Rhode Island is no exception. Providence, our largest school district, is facing an acute shortage of teachers certified to teach English language learners. My home State has also reported shortages in special education, science, math, and school nurses.

We cannot solve this problem without improving both teacher and principal preparation. We need to make sure that our educator preparation programs are worthy of the professionals entering the field and the students they will serve. That is why it is more urgent than ever that we enact the Educator Preparation Reform Act.

Our legislation builds on the success of the Teacher Quality Partnership Program, which I helped author in the 1998 reauthorization of the Higher Education Act. It continues the partnership between high need school districts, institutions of higher education, and educator preparation programs to reform pre-service programs based on the unique needs of the partners. Among the key changes are specific attention and emphasis on principals and the addition of a residency program for new principals. Improving instruction is a team effort, with principals at the helm. This bill better connects teacher preparation with principal preparation. The Educator Preparation Reform Act will also allow partnerships to develop preparation programs for other areas of instructional need, such as for school librarians, counselors, or other academic support professionals.

The bill streamlines the accountability and reporting requirements for teacher preparation programs to provide greater transparency on key quality measures such as admissions standards, requirements for clinical practice, placement of graduates, retention in the field of teaching, and teacher performance, including student-learning outcomes. All programs—whether traditional or alternative routes to certification—will report on the same measures.

Under our legislation, States will be required to identify at-risk and low-performing programs and provide them with technical assistance and a timeline for improvement. States would be encouraged to close programs that do not improve.

We have been fortunate to work with many stakeholders on this legislation. Organizations that have endorsed the Educator Preparation Reform Act include: the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, American Association of State Colleges and Universities, Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities, Council for Christian Colleges and Universities, Higher Education Consortium for Special Education, Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities, National Association of Elementary School Principals, National Association of Secondary School Principals, National Association of State Directors of Special Education, National Disability Rights Network, National Network of State Teachers of the Year, Public Advocacy for Kids, Rural School and Community Trust, and the Teacher Education Division of the Council for Exceptional Children.

I look forward to working to incorporate this legislation into the upcoming reauthorization of the Higher Education Act. I urge my colleagues to join us in this effort and support this legislation.

SENATE RESOLUTION 241—SUPPORTING THE GOALS AND IDEALS OF NATIONAL PURPLE HEART RECOGNITION DAY

Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. MANCHIN, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mr. TESTER, Ms. WARREN, Mr. MARKEY, Ms. BALDWIN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. PETERS, Mrs. CAPITO, Mr. BOOZMAN, Mr. FRANKEN, Mr. MERKLEY, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. ERNST, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. THUNE, Mr. MORAN, Mr. DAINES, Mr. ROUNDS, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. RISCH, Mr. BOOKER, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. VAN HOLLEN, Mr. HELLER, Mr. NELSON, Mr. DONNELLY, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a resolution supporting the goals and ideals of National Purple Heart Recognition Day. I am pleased to have been joined in sponsoring this resolution by the senior Senator from West Virginia, Senator Manchin, and 25 of our Senate colleagues.

The Purple Heart's history goes as far back as the founding of our Nation.

General George Washington established what is now known as the Purple Heart Medal when he issued an order establishing the Military Badge of Merit on August 7, 1782. General Washington wished for the award to be used to recognize meritorious action performed by members of the Continental Army, and it took the form of a purple heart.

The Military Badge of Merit was discontinued after the Revolution and was not revived until 1932, when the Purple Heart medal was authorized as its official successor decoration. On February 22, 1932, the 200th Anniversary of the birth of George Washington, then-Army Chief of Staff General Douglas MacArthur resurrected the award, and it was redesignated as the Purple Heart. Quite appropriately, this reestablished Purple Heart Medal exhibits the bust and profile of George Washington.

It is around this time that the Purple Heart became synonymous with those unfortunate heroes who were killed or wounded in combat. Since 1932, the U.S. Military has awarded more than 1.8 million Purple Hearts.

Mr. President, just as the Purple Heart Medal has held a special meaning to its millions of recipients and their families, it also has special significance to my family. My father is a World War II veteran who was wounded twice during the Battle of the Bulge in Europe. He earned two Purple Hearts and the Bronze Star, and it was from him that I first learned to honor and respect our veterans.

The Purple Heart is a reminder that freedom is a gift purchased at the greatest possible price, and it is for that reason that I introduce this resolution. It is vitally important for all Americans to learn the history of this important military award, and understand and honor the sacrifices of the many men and women in uniform who have earned the Purple Heart. I am grateful to all of my colleagues who joined me in supporting this resolution.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection: the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. RES. 241

Whereas, on August 7, 1782, during the Revolutionary War, General George Washington established what is now known as the Purple Heart Medal when he issued an order establishing the Badge of Military Merit;

Whereas the Badge of Military Merit was designed in the shape of a heart in purple cloth or silk;

Whereas, while the award of the Badge of Military Merit ceased with the end of the Revolutionary War, the Purple Heart Medal was authorized in 1932 as the official successor decoration to the Badge of Military Merit;

Whereas the Purple Heart Medal is the oldest United States military decoration in present use;

Whereas the Purple Heart Medal is awarded in the name of the President of the United States to recognize members of the Armed Forces who are killed or wounded in action against an enemy of the United States or are killed or wounded while held as prisoners of war;

Whereas the Purple Heart Medal has been awarded to an estimated 1,800,000 recipients; and

Whereas August 7, 2017, is an appropriate day to celebrate as National Purple Heart Recognition Day: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the goals and ideals of National Purple Heart Recognition Day; and

(2) encourages all people of the United States—

(A) to learn about the history of the Purple Heart Medal;

(B) to honor recipients of the Purple Heart Medal; and

(C) to conduct appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs to demonstrate support for people who have been awarded the Purple Heart Medal.

(C) LIMITATION ON USE OF NEW EVIDENCE.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by clauses (ii) and (iii)—

(i) in accordance with subparagraph (E), take such actions as may be necessary to develop such records, opinions, or examinations in accordance with section 5103A of title 38, United States Code;

PRO BONO WORK TO EMPOWER AND REPRESENT ACT OF 2017

MR. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of S. 717 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 717) to promote pro bono legal services as a critical way in which to empower survivors of domestic violence.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

MR. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The bill (S. 717) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Pro bono Work to Empower and Represent Act of 2017” or the “POWER Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Extremely high rates of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking exist at the local, State, and national levels and such violence or behavior harms the most vulnerable members of our society.

(2) According to a study commissioned by the Department of Justice, nearly 25 percent of women suffer from domestic violence during their lifetime.

(3) Proactive efforts should be made available in all forums to provide pro bono legal services and eliminate the violence that destroys lives and shatters families.

(4) A variety of factors cause domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking, and a variety of solutions at the local, State, and national levels are necessary to combat such violence or behavior.

(5) According to the National Network to End Domestic Violence, which conducted a census including almost 1,700 assistance programs, over the course of 1 day in September 2014, more than 10,000 requests for services, including legal representation, were not met.

(6) Pro bono assistance can help fill this need by providing not only legal representation, but also access to emergency shelter, transportation, and childcare.

(7) Research and studies have demonstrated that the provision of legal assistance to victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking reduces the probability of such violence or behavior reoccurring in the future and can help survivors move forward.

(8) Legal representation increases the possibility of successfully obtaining a protective order against an attacker, which prevents further mental and physical injury to a victim and his or her family, as demonstrated by a study that found that 83 percent of victims represented by an attorney were able to obtain a protective order, whereas only 32 percent of victims without an attorney were able to do so.

(9) The American Bar Association Model Rules include commentary stating that “every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, has a responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer”.

(10) As representatives of the Department of Justice, the duty of United States Attorneys is to present “equal and impartial justice to all its citizens”, which should include, especially, survivors of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking who might not otherwise know how to seek advice and protection.

(11) As Federal leaders who have knowledge of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking in their localities, United States Attorneys should encourage lawyers to provide pro bono resources in an effort to help victims of such violence or behavior escape the cycle of abuse.

(12) A dedicated army of pro bono attorneys focused on this mission will inspire others to devote efforts to this cause and will raise awareness of the scourge of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking throughout the country.

(13) Communities, by providing awareness of pro bono legal services and assistance to survivors of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking, will empower those survivors to move forward with their lives.

SEC. 3. U.S. ATTORNEYS TO PROMOTE EMPOWERMENT EVENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, and not less often than once each year thereafter, each United States Attorney, or his or her designee, for each judicial district shall lead not less than 1 public event, in partnership with a State, local, tribal, or territorial domestic violence service provider or coalition and a State or local volunteer lawyer project, promoting pro bono legal services as a critical way in which to empower survivors of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking and engage citizens in assisting those survivors.

(b) DISTRICTS CONTAINING INDIAN TRIBES AND TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS.—During each 3-year period, a United States Attorney, or his or her designee, for a judicial district that contains an Indian tribe or tribal organization (as those terms are defined in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 5304)) shall lead not less than 1 public event promoting pro bono legal services under subsection (a) of this section in partnership with an Indian tribe or tribal organization with the intent of increasing the provision of pro bono legal services for Indian or Alaska Native victims of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking.

(c) REQUIREMENTS.—Each United States Attorney shall—

(1) have discretion as to the design, organization, and implementation of the public events required under subsection (a); and

(2) in conducting a public event under subsection (a), seek to maximize the local impact of the event and the provision of access to high-quality pro bono legal services by survivors of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault, and stalking.

SEC. 4. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REPORT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Not later than October 30 of each year, each United States Attorney shall submit to the Attorney General a report detailing each public event conducted under section 3 during the previous fiscal year.

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than January 1 of each year, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a compilation and summary of each report received under subsection (a) for the previous fiscal year.

(2) REQUIREMENT.—Each comprehensive report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include an analysis of how each public event meets the goals set forth in this Act, as well as suggestions on how to improve future public events.

SEC. 5. FUNDING.

The Department of Justice shall use existing funds to carry out the requirements of this Act.

HARIPRASAD SWAMIJI MAHARAJ
AT THE JAIN TEMPLE OF CHI-CATO ON AUGUST 12TH

HON. RAJA KRISHNAMOORTHY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Mr. KRISHNAMOORTHY. Mr. Speaker, today I honor His Divine Holiness Hariprasad Swamiji Maharaj, spiritual leader and founder of the Yogi Divine Society—a Hindu spiritual and humanitarian charitable organization—as he makes a historic visit to Yogi Divine Society members and devotees across North America.

His Divine Holiness Hariprasad Swamiji Maharaj has dedicated his life to the principle of Atmiyata (Spiritual Affinity with one and all). He became a Sadhu (religious devotee) in 1965 and was made diksha (being appointed saint) by his spiritual educator Guruhari Yogiji Maharaj. HONORING ROBERT “IAN”
MALONEY

HON. MAXINE WATERS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Ms. MAXINE WATERS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to highlight Robert “Ian” Maloney, a May 2017 graduate of Georgetown Preparatory School and a newly accepted member of the Brown University class of 2021. Last year, I had the great pleasure of speaking at Georgetown Preparatory School about the call to serve and to give back to the community.

I accepted the invitation to speak at that school because Ian reached out and asked me to do so. Ian is a remarkable young man whom I have known since his birth. Ian was President of the Black Student Association. He is also a member of the National Honor Society and a National Hispanic Scholar, and he is passionate about serving others and giving back. He is committed to social justice and drawing attention to the scourge of homelessness.

Ian asked me to speak at Georgetown Preparatory School because he had made a promise to the school's Headmaster, Mr. Jeff Jones. Mr. Jones was the school's first African-American Headmaster and Interim President, and a leader who fostered diversity. At the time that Ian requested that I speak, Mr. Jones was awaiting a heart transplant at Cedars-Sinai Hospital in my Congressional District. Sadly, Mr. Jones would die two months after I spoke. However, several days before he had passed, he called to wish Ian continuing success in his studies and called on him to carry the torch and to continue to serve others.

Mr. Speaker, Ian wishes to honor the call and the memory of his Headmaster, Mr. Jeff Jones. Ian is a very special young man, and I wish him success in his academic endeavors. I truly believe that he has a very bright future ahead and that he will continue to give back to his community and make a positive difference in the world.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. SAM GRAVES

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Mr. GRAVES of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, on July 28, 2017 I missed a series of Roll Call votes. Had I been present, I would have voted “YEA” on Nos. 436, 437, and 438.

IN HONOR OF JOHN CHRISTOPHER LAMONICA

HON. BARBARA COMSTOCK

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Mrs. COMSTOCK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to commemorate the life of Mr. John Christopher LaMonica.

Mr. LaMonica's career in broadcast journalism is a catalogue of the major events of 20th century history. From Central Asia to the Middle East to Southern Africa; from the secret nuclear cities of Siberia to New Orleans during Hurricane Katrina; he used facts to tell stories with moral truths.

Originally from Rye, New York, Mr. LaMonica attended Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service. In 1979, he became an Adjunct Fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. He cut his teeth as a consultant for Henry Kissinger and became a newsman with Ted Koppel, working for decades as an investigative producer for ABC News Nightline. In 2006 he took the legacy of journalism from that program with him to Discovery, where he produced cutting-edge documentaries with Mr. Koppel on subjects ranging from the history of race relations in America to surviving cancer. Mr. LaMonica continued that work as an executive producer at Al Jazeera America.

The sum total of years spent away from his family in Russia and Iran and some of the most dangerous places on earth rewarded Mr. LaMonica with numerous National Emmys, several Dupont-Columbia and Peabody awards, the Overseas Press Club Edward R. Murrow Award, and the Global Health Council Excellence in Media Award. In 1987, he earned the Benton Fellowship in broadcast journalism from the University of Chicago. But what meant the world to Mr. LaMonica was that it can be said of him that he was a great father, the best grandfather, and, quite simply, a good man.

In addition to his journalistic endeavors, Mr. LaMonica continuously gave back to our community. His philanthropic efforts included his involvement with the Knights of Columbus, HOPE in Northern Virginia and the Zambia Orphans of AIDS, and the St. Peter Claver Society.

Mr. LaMonica died peacefully in his bed at home in Virginia on March 13, 2016, after battling cancer for nearly a year. He is survived by his wife, Teresa; her son; their three children; and four grandchildren, who still miss the man they called “Papa Jay.”

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in celebrating the life of, and bidding farewell to Jay LaMonica. May he rest in peace, and his family be comforted.

RECOGNIZING THE SERVICE AND

REDMAN

HON. KEN BUCK

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the service and sacrifice of Sergeant Chris Redman, and to congratulate him for being inducted into the Honorary Rolls of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, the "Blackhorse Regiment." I believe that our nation's men and women in uniform are America's greatest assets. They have made incredible sacrifices for our country and deserve our utmost support and respect for their service.

Sergeant Redman has dedicated his life to protecting all Americans through his service as a sergeant in the United States Army and as a police officer. He received numerous recognitions while in the Army and has continued to serve the Blackhorse Regiment since his retirement. In addition to his selfless service to our country, Sergeant Redman has also been a great leader and supporter of the Blackhorse Regiment in his community, coordinating reunions and raising money for scholarship funds.

Our nation owes no greater debt of gratitude than the one we owe our veterans. They and their families should be commended. On behalf of the 4th Congressional District of Colorado, I extend my best wishes and deepest gratitude to Sergeant Redman.

Mr. FORTENBERRY. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, July 27, 2017, I was unavoidably detained and thus missed roll call votes 430 through 435.

HONORING THE SERVICE OF MA-RINE CORPORAL LUKE
McDERMOTT

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Ms. STEFANIK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and recognize the service and sacrifice of Marine Corporal Luke McDermott.

Corporal McDermott was serving his second deployment in Afghanistan when on June 9, 2010, an improvised explosive device detonated underneath his vehicle during a routine security patrol. The damage caused by this explosion cost Corporal McDermott both of his legs, but it did not take away the fighting spirit which enabled him to persevere through the difficult recovery process.

It is a true testament to Corporal McDermott's character that these injuries have not prevented him from pursuing life to its fullest. In addition to actively training and traveling with the U.S. National Sled Hockey team, he has continued his service to the global community by participating in a volunteer trip to study social development in Morocco.

Through the generous work of Homes for our Troops, Corporal McDermott will soon become a resident of New York's 21st District, and we are proud to welcome him. Since 2004, the organization has built 236 adapted homes for veterans, and now Homes for our Troops is providing Corporal McDermott with an accessible residence in Clayton, New York. Here, he can live comfortably and pursue his dreams of working toward a law degree.

I would like to thank Corporal McDermott for his service to our county and for the sacrifices he has made for our way of life. He is a deserving recipient of the incredible opportunity that Homes for our Troops provides.

RECOGNIZING HOWARD L.
CHAMBERS

HON. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Ms. SÁNCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Howard L. Chambers, City Manager for Lakewood, California in my Southern California district who is retiring after over 41 years of public service. Howard is concluding his career as the longest serving city manager with any single city in California, exemplifying his love and dedication towards the City of Lakewood and its people.

Howard was born and raised in Lakewood, having attended Lakewood schools and working at the local YMCA and the City of Lakewood's recreation program. As his life progressed Howard never strayed too far from his beloved city, attending college at nearby California State University, Long Beach where he received a Bachelor of Science degree. Howard became Lakewood's top executive in 1976, after receiving a Master of Arts degree in Planning and Administration from Pepperdine University and serving as Executive Assistant to the Lakewood City Manager.

During his tenure with the City of Lakewood, Howard always provided strong leadership and knowledgeable direction for major projects. While his accomplishments are far too numerous to name, I want to highlight the building of the Weingart Senior Center, The Centre at Sycamore Plaza, the S. Mark Taper Foundation Vista Lodge, the West San Gabriel River Parkway Nature Trail, and, most recently, the new Pumpkin Playground at San Martin Park. He also oversaw the renovation of the Veterans Memorial Plaza and Douglas jet plane at Del Valle Park.

Over the past decades, Howard has worked tirelessly to ensure Lakewood operates on firm financial footing and never outside its fiscal means. During the recent economic downturn, Lakewood was able to maintain funding for all city services and avoid employee layoffs thanks to Howard's budgetary foresight.

Howard has also played an influential role amongst his peers in city management, through his leadership roles in League of California Cities, the California Contract Cities Association, the California Joint Powers Insurance Authority, the Gateway Cities Council of Governments, and the International City/County Management Association. Howard was recently honored by the League of California Cities with the 2017 Wes McClure Award of Distinction for outstanding career service, leadership, ethics, expertise and innovation as a city manager.

I wish to commend Howard Chambers on his many years of outstanding public service and dedication to the City of Lakewood and its residents. I wish him the very best in retirement.

Holy God, You make the clouds Your chariot and walk upon the wind. You illuminate the darkness with Your presence and provide for the salvation of our souls. Great is Your faithfulness.

Today, make our lawmakers heirs of peace, demonstrating that they are Your children, as they strive to stay within the circle of Your loving providence for their lives. May they take pleasure in doing Your will, knowing that by so doing, they are fulfilling Your purposes in our world.

Lord, You are never far from us, but often we are far from You. So show us Your ways and teach us Your paths. Thank You that Your mercy is from everlasting to everlasting upon those who come to You with reverence. May Your glory endure forever.

We pray in Your great Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The President pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COTTON). The majority leader is recognized.

WORK BEFORE THE SENATE

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, as I said yesterday, the Senate has more work ahead this legislative period, including passing the FDA user fees legislation and confirming a number of nominees.

We have made important progress already, and just last night we passed the critical Veterans Choice legislation. That bill, which is now on its way to the President's desk, will allow many veterans to bypass long wait and travel times at VA facilities by accessing private care.

We also confirmed several nominees. We confirmed eight officials who will be critical to advancing administration policy in the Defense Department. It is a good start, but we have other nominees to confirm for many other positions, both security- and nonsecurity-related, across many different agencies and departments. In the national security realm, for instance, we must confirm nominees for the Department of Homeland Security, Department of State, and the intelligence community.

The Senate also came together to confirm a well-qualified judicial nominee for the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, as well as the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Christopher A. Wray. The position of FBI Director is one of great importance when it comes to protecting the American people, especially at a time when we face a range of threats both at home and abroad. Wray's impressive credentials, demeanor, and commitment to the rule of law make clear that he is the right person to lead the Bureau in its efforts to keep our communities safe. The work of an FBI Director is difficult, but I am confident that Wray is capable of shouldering this important responsibility and that he will lead the FBI with the strength and professionalism that the position demands.

Our work on nominees continues today. We will, for instance, take a procedural vote on the nomination for the National Labor Relations Board later this morning. But there is more to do. I was pleased to hear the Democratic leader reaffirm his interest in working with us now to clear more nominees before the conclusion of this work period. Many of these nominees have been held up far too long, leaving the administration without a number of key officials at various agencies.

I look forward to our Democratic colleagues working with us to finish up the FDA user fees legislation that I mentioned earlier, as well. Members will continue to work on other issues in the meantime, such as tax reform, which is one of the things the Senate—led by the Finance Committee—will turn its collective attention toward after the State work period.

TAX REFORM

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, during the 8 years of the Obama administration, our economy failed to live up to its full potential—meager growth rates, wages that failed to keep pace, and a decline in opportunities. Middle-class families were hurting, and they needed policies that would allow the economy to begin to grow again. Unfortunately, the last administration often gave them exactly the opposite. Some were sins of commission, such as making things worse with an aggressive regulatory rampage. Others were sins of omission, such as failing to address an outdated tax code that has made American companies increasingly uncompetitive in a global economy and, as a result, has moved investment and jobs offshore.

Then, in November Americans chose to go in a different direction. They elected a pro-growth President who would sign legislation from a pro-growth Congress. Ever since, we have been working to turn the tide back in favor of the middle class. We have undertaken what has been described as the “most ambitious regulatory rollbacks since Reagan.” We have pursued policies that can once again encourage job growth and American investment.

Just last week, the administration and congressional leaders and, most importantly, the chairmen of the Senate Finance and the House Ways and Means Committees issued a joint statement outlining shared principles for unleashing the American economy through comprehensive tax reform. Comprehensive tax reform represents the single most important action we can take now to grow the economy and to help middle-class families finally get ahead. It is no secret that the current Tax Code is overly complex and highly punitive and makes it harder for individuals and small businesses to succeed.

Fortunately, we now have a once-in-a-generation opportunity to fundamentally rethink it. It has been over three decades since that last happened. In the years since, the international economy has grown much more competitive. American workers and American businesses have only found it harder to keep up with foreign contenders. Put simply, the rest of the world is running circles around us in this area, making it more difficult for American firms to hire, invest, and compete.

The time has come to fix this so we can help our economy grow and help the individuals and families we represent realize their true potential. For families, we want to make their taxes simpler, fairer, and lower. For small businesses, we want to provide the conditions they need to form, invest, and grow. For all American businesses and their employees, we want to ensure they have the best chance to compete with foreign companies and succeed. We want a tax system that encourages American companies to bring jobs home again.

These are some of the key goals of tax reform. They sound like goals we should all share, regardless of party. For years, the tax-writing committees have focused on this particular subject—holding hearings, soliciting input from stakeholders, and considering the views and priorities of Members, both on and off these committees. They are eager now to begin the process of developing tax reform legislation that achieves the shared goals I outlined above.

The administration and congressional leaders stated:

We have always been in agreement that tax relief for American families should be at the heart of our plan. . . . And we are now confident that . . . there is a viable approach for ensuring a level playing field between American and foreign companies and workers, while protecting American jobs and the U.S. tax base.

Our expectation is for this legislation to move through the committees this fall under regular order, followed by consideration on both the House and Senate floors. There is a great deal of bipartisan consensus about what ails our Tax Code, and my hope is that our friends on the other side of the aisle will join us in a serious way to address it, because the American people deserve a tax system that works for them instead of against them. They deserve a tax code that encourages companies to bring jobs home instead of encouraging just the opposite. Americans deserve true comprehensive tax reform.

I appreciate the good work of our colleagues in the administration and by Members in both Chambers already to get us there, particularly Finance Committee Chairman ORRIN HATCH. Chairman HATCH has been working hard with his fellow Finance Committee members—Senators from both sides of the aisle—literally for years, on this issue, and he continues to lead the way today. Under his leadership and the leadership of Chairman BRADY in the House, Congress's tax-writing committees will advance these principles through regular order, so that Members on both sides of the aisle will have an opportunity to participate in this historic effort, if that is what they choose to do.

This will not be an easy process, but the people we represent are depending on us for help. Now is the time to deliver tax reform, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to accomplish it.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

HEALTHCARE

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, first, on the topic of healthcare: I was very happy to hear the statement from Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY yesterday in which they pledged the HELP Committee to the task of restabilizing and strengthening the markets, particularly by guaranteeing the cost-sharing reduction program. As Chairman ALEXANDER said: "Without the payment of these cost-sharing reductions, Americans will be hurt." That is clear. Everyone has said it, even the insurance industry, and yet President Trump continues to treat this critical program as if it is some kind of political hostage. The President treats the critical program as if it is some kind of hostage.

Insurers in three States—North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Iowa—have each released separate rates for 2018: one if the payments are made, and one that is 20 percent higher if they are not. In these three States, premiums will be 20 percent higher if President Trump refuses to carry out the law. Every American will see that increase in their monthly bill and know it is a Trump premium tax.

Insurers from coast to coast have said that uncertainty surrounding the cost-sharing reductions are the No. 1 threat to the stability of our markets. State insurance commissioners—many of them Republican—are announcing higher rates for next year and directly blaming the President's failure to guarantee these payments, as the insurance commissioner of Idaho did yesterday.

We have enough problems in the world right now without President Trump creating entirely new ones out of political spite and a petty vindictiveness. When you lose politically, you don't take it out on the American people. That is not Presidential; that is just small.

So we would say to the President: Stop holding this critical program as if it is some kind of political hostage, stop the sabotage, make the payments this month so Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY can get to work in a bipartisan way on a longer stabilization package.

Let me salute a large number of my Republican colleagues who agree we have to do cost sharing. They have realized that just sticking with President Trump—particularly when his motivations are not Presidential but are sort of nasty, vindictive—is a bad idea. I salute you because, for the good of America, we have to work together.

TAX REFORM

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, now, on taxes, another matter. Yesterday, my friend the majority leader brought down the curtain on bipartisan tax reform before a discussion between our two parties could even start, dismissing the prospect of Democratic input, promising the Republicans would again use reconciliation to lock us out of the process, repeating the same mistake they did with healthcare.

Leader MCCONNELL's announcement just came a few hours after 45 Members of the Democratic caucus sent him a letter saying we were open to bipartisan discussions on tax reform. We had three simple, straightforward principles. Let me read the Democratic principles on tax reform: First, don't cut taxes for the 1 percent—the top 1 percent. They are doing fine. God bless them.

Second, don't increase the debt and deficit, something many of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have been talking about for a long time.

Third, negotiate in a fair and open process, not reconciliation but hearings, amendments, the things that have made America great and have brought this Senate the acclaim over the decades it has had.

Now, I would like to know which of these principles the majority leader does not agree with. I would like to know. Is he closing the door on bipartisanship because he so dearly wants to cut taxes on the top 1 percent? The wealthy are doing great right now—God bless them—but they don't need another tax break while middle-class families and working Americans are struggling just to make ends meet. Many of us on this side of the aisle suspect that to some, that is the No. 1 motivation—not tax reform, not close loopholes, not clean up the system but give that top 1 percent a huge tax break to please so many like the Koch brothers.

Again, I would ask the leader: Are you closing the door on bipartisanship simply because you want to cut taxes on the top 1 percent or maybe the leader is closing the door on bipartisanship because he has a fervent desire to blow up the deficit? That sure doesn't sound like something Republicans have been interested in over the years—they have been spending lots of time, with good reason, deficit scolding and debt scolding—or is my friend from Kentucky, our majority leader, closing the door on bipartisanship because he thinks reconciliation, which means you exclude the Democrats from the get-go, is a good process because he doesn't want to have hearings, because he doesn't want amendments, and maybe it is the same reason on healthcare? Maybe they are ashamed of their proposal. I would like to see somebody on the floor get up and say: We believe in tax cuts—on the Republican side get up on the floor and say: We believe in tax cuts for the top 1 percent. That is why we want to do this.

But, no, they want to hide it, cloak it, give a crumb to the middle class, and say: See, we are helping you.

We all know that what happens after we have a big deficit, they come back and say: Now, let's cut Social Security, now let's cut Medicare because we don't have the money. We don't have the money because they cut taxes on the rich, the very wealthy.

I don't know which of these three principles the majority leader is against, but when he closed the door on Democrats—when we sent him this letter which simply outlined our principles, that is all we wanted to do, give him notice we agree on these three things, at least on our side—which one or all of them made him close the door?

We Democrats hoped we could work together on tax reform, but the majority leader has drawn down the curtain before the play has even begun. Republicans will spend the entire first year of this Congress trying to pass their agenda on reconciliation, a process that deliberately excludes Democrats, excludes hearings, excludes amendments, with no shred of bipartisan input. Just like with healthcare, I believe it will be another dead-end road for Republicans.

I tell my friend the majority leader—I quote his speech in 2014, entitled “Restoring the Senate.” I truly believe—I truly believe that Leader MCCONNELL believes in the institution of the Senate, and he has shown examples of that most recently when he said we don't want to change the rules, despite President Trump pushing to do that, but here is what he said in 2014:

When the Senate is allowed to work the way it was designed to, it arrives at a result acceptable to people all along the political spectrum. But if it's an assembly line for one party's partisan legislative agenda, [it creates] instability and strife rather than good, stable law.

Those are the majority leader's words. Well, if you believe that, my dear friend from Kentucky, then why are you instituting reconciliation, the exclusionary process, before we even begin the debate? And why—might the American people ask—haven't you learned the lesson of healthcare that that process doesn't work?

The American people want to see us work together. We may not always succeed. It may not be easy. It is hard work, but we ought to try. This assembly line of partisan legislation—no Democratic input, no hearings, no amendments—is not what any of us want to see. It is not what the American people are calling out for, and it will not produce good, stable law.

Again, I would ask the majority leader to reconsider these three principles probably supported by 80 percent of the American people. Why aren't our Republicans supporting them? Why are they running away from them?

TRADE

Mr. SCHUMER. Finally, Mr. President, on the issue of trade, according to reports, the Trump administration is preparing an open investigation into China's trade practices, focusing on economic espionage and the theft of intellectual property.

I certainly applaud the sentiment. I have been decrying for years how the Chinese have been taking advantage of us in a way that has sent trillions of dollars of American wealth to China and millions of jobs to China so we should certainly go after them. The problem is, we don't need another investigation to know what China is up to. That is what the President called for: Let's investigate—another investigation.

It is clear what China is up to. By dumping counterfeit and artificially cheap goods into our markets, denying U.S. companies fair access to its markets, and relentlessly stealing and exporting intellectual property of U.S. companies, China, as I said, has robbed the U.S. economy of trillions of dollars and caused the loss of millions of good-paying U.S. jobs.

Estimates by our own government—already made estimates; we don't need a study, President Trump—pin the cost of cyber espionage alone at $400 billion a year to the U.S. economy—$400 billion a year, and 90 percent of it comes from China's Government. This is not a benign process. This is not some rogue company. This is the Chinese Government.

Here is what our four-star general, Keith Alexander, the former Director of the National Security Agency and commander of the U.S. Cyber Command said. He called the loss of industrial information and IP through cyber theft “the greatest transfer of wealth in history”—the greatest transfer of wealth in history.

That pains me—this country, with its entrepreneurial vigor, with its acceptance of people from all corners of the globe for centuries to go work hard and create good things, China is stealing it. They are not doing it on their own. Every American, when they hear that statement, it should make them cringe. It makes me cringe almost every day.

Those are the facts. So I would say to President Trump: We don't need another study that takes months and months to complete while no action is taken. We need a plan of action now.

Unfortunately, this is what the Trump administration is doing on all issues of trade. They really talked tough on the issue of steel and aluminum dumping. As someone who has aluminum plants in the State up there in Massena—Alcoa—and all along Lake Ontario—what used to be called Alcan is now called Novelis—I know the issue of aluminum dumping. It hurts jobs in my State. The President early on talked tough, tweeted tough on illegal steel dumping, illegal aluminum dumping, but it is 7 months into this administration, and we are still reviewing its effects on our economy.

The administration failed to secure any deal with China in a number of forums, and they continue to delay on action that was promised in June. Tough talk and tweets are cheap, but strong and decisive action on trade is required. American workers have waited too long for our country to crack down on abusive trade practices that rob our country of millions of good-paying jobs.

Today, I am proud to announce that the Democratic Party will be laying out our new policy on trade, which includes, among other things, an independent trade prosecutor to combat trade cheating, not one of these endless WTO processes that China takes advantage of over and over again; a new American jobs security council that will be able to review and stop foreign acquisitions of U.S. companies if they are likely to have a detrimental effect on U.S. jobs; penalties for Federal contractors that outsource jobs; stronger “Buy American” rules; and an outsourcing tax on companies that leave the United States.

On the issue of NAFTA negotiations, we are laying out a set of tough principles that must be a bottom line for any new NAFTA text. I voted against NAFTA in 1994. That was 23 years ago. We have seen how it has hurt us in so many ways. There have been some benefits, but overall the loss of jobs is painful. More jobs and higher wages have to be our guiding principle, and it needs full transparency with workers and the public at the table, not just corporations.

So I hope the administration—and I always said when I heard Donald Trump campaign that my views on trade are probably closer—I am closer to his views than I was to either President Obama's or President Bush's. I hope he will listen to us and work with us. These are good things to do. We can do them quickly. We can save jobs, create good-paying jobs. But I say to the President: We don't need another investigation, another study that languishes for months and maybe even years. We need strong, bold action on trade, and Democrats will offer those strong bold ideas later this morning.

Thank you.

I yield the floor.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to resume consideration of the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Marvin Kaplan, of Kansas, to be a Member of the National Labor Relations Board for the term of five years expiring August 27, 2020.

The assistant Democratic leader.

DACA

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, many times over the last 6 months, I have come to the Senate to speak out on issues and to disagree with President Trump. It is clear that we have very profound political differences when it comes to the issues that face us, but I come to the floor this morning in an unusual position to express my gratitude to President Trump for a position he has taken, which I think is the right position for America.

Let me explain. Five years ago, President Barack Obama created the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Program, known as DACA. It enabled approximately 790,000 talented young people to contribute more fully to this country. They are teachers, nurses, engineers, small business owners, and more. DACA, which was an Executive action by President Obama, provides a temporary legal status to immigrant students who arrived in the United States as infants, toddlers, and children. They have to come forward under this Executive action and register with our government. They have to pay a substantial fee for processing. Then they have to submit themselves to a criminal and national security background check. If they are successful, they are given 2 years of temporary relief from deportation.

This program is based on the Dream Act, a bill that I first introduced in the U.S. Senate 16 years ago—in 2001. That bill would give undocumented students who grew up in this country a chance to become legal and to earn their way to citizenship.

These young people have come to be known as Dreamers. They came to the United States under the age of 16, some of them 1 or 2 years old. They grew up in the United States, going to our public schools, singing the “Star Spangled Banner,” pledging allegiance to the only flag they have ever known, the American flag. They are American in every way except for their immigration status. We have already invested in them, as you can tell—invested in their education, bringing them up in American schools. I can’t believe it makes any sense for the future of our country to squander their talents by deporting them to countries that many of them have never known.

A recent study by the Center for American Progress finds that ending DACA, President Obama’s Executive action, would cost our economy at least $433 billion in gross domestic product over the next 10 years. The Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy estimates that the 1.3 million young people eligible for DACA pay $2 billion each year in State and local taxes.

As I said at the beginning, I have had many differences with President Trump, particularly on the issue of immigration in some of the speeches and statements he has made, but I do appreciate—personally appreciate—that this President has kept the DACA Program in place.

I have spoken directly to President Trump only two times—three times, perhaps. The first two times—one on Inauguration Day—I thanked him for the kind words he had said about Dreamers and the DACA students and those protected by the President’s Executive action.

President Trump said to me: Don’t worry about those kids.

Well, Mr. President, I continue to worry about those kids. I worry about them now more than ever, not because I have heard any change of heart or reversal from you but because of other circumstances that are bringing this issue to a head. The Texas attorney general, Ken Paxton, and nine other States have threatened to sue you, Mr. President, unless by September 5 you rescind the memorandum that established DACA by President Obama and announce that your administration will not renew or issue any new DACA permits. This direct, specific threat to the DACA Program has left hundreds of thousands of these Dreamers anxious, concerned, and worried about their future.

Last week I was joined by Senator CHUCK SCHUMER, our Democratic leader, and 40 other Senate Democratic colleagues in writing a letter to President Trump, asking him to order his Attorney General, Jeff Sessions, to use all legal options to defend DACA so that these young people can continue to contribute to a country they love.

Some of my friends on the other side of the aisle oppose the DACA Program. To them I say: If you don’t support DACA, let’s immediately pass the bipartisan Dream Act. If you think President Obama went beyond his Presidential authority with this Executive action, then let’s take up this matter where it should be taken up, here in the legislative branch of the government in the U.S. Senate.

I recently reintroduced the Dream Act with my friend and colleague, LINDSEY GRAHAM of South Carolina. Now that I am in the mood of thanking Republican leaders, including President Trump, let me thank Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM, as well as Senator JEFF FLAKE and Senator LISA MURKOWSKI. They have stepped forward to join me in cosponsoring this Dream Act.

Our government should give these young people a chance to earn their way to citizenship. They were brought to this country as children. They didn’t make the family decision to cross the border. They have been raised in this country. They have created no problems in terms of criminal background. They have gone to our schools. All they are asking for is a chance.

When we introduced the Dream Act a week or so ago, Senator GRAHAM said that the young people who have received DACA should be treated fairly and not have the rug pulled out from under them. LINDSEY GRAHAM is right.

Over the years, I have come to the floor nearly 100 times to tell the stories of these Dreamers and to make it personal so that we come to know who they are and why I have taken the time to make this a major part of my service in the Senate. These stories put a human face on the DACA Program and on the Dream Act. They show what immigration actually means to our country in real terms.

This is Juan Martinez. When he was less than 2 years old, Juan was brought to America from Mexico. He grew up in Dallas, TX, with his parents and brothers. He was an honor student in high school. He graduated and was valedictorian of his class with a 3.9 GPA, a member of the National Honor Society, an active member of the debate team, and in student government.

He was an accomplished student, but he was also a very active community volunteer. Juan helped organize food drives at the local food banks, he cared for children at recreation centers while their parents worked, and he volunteered in soup kitchens.

In his senior year of high school, he applied to his dream school—once my dream school—Georgetown University, and he was accepted. As a college student, Juan has studied international politics, concentrating on security, minoring in the Arabic language. In his first year of college, Juan was elected as a student senator.

In his spare time here in Washington, he mentors disadvantaged high school students so that they can apply successfully for college. His dream one day is to work for our government, to help our country—the country that he calls home—and to make the world a safer place.

Juan sent me a letter, and this is what he said:

Thanks to DACA I can focus on my studies without worrying that it may all be taken away from me any second. I have always thought of myself as an American, but it is thanks to DACA that I can begin to truly feel like one, too. And that feeling is something I am thankful for every single day.

Juan and other Dreamers have so much to contribute to this country. But without DACA, without a similar protection, Juan could be deported back to Mexico, a country where he hasn't been since he was 2 years old.

Would we be a stronger nation if we lost Juan Martinez—if he were deported? I don't think so. I think the answer is clearly no.

When we introduced the Dream Act last week, Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM said: "The moment of reckoning is coming."

I would say to the President first: Again, thank you. Thank you for allowing DACA to continue under your administration. Thank you for keeping your word to me and so many others when you said that these young people don't have to worry. But we are reaching a moment, Mr. President, when we have to come together and do something. We need you and you need us so that we can pass important legislation and you can sign it—legislation that will give these young people the protection they deserve, the opportunity they seek, the chance to make America a greater nation.

I know the reality of this issue. I know it from both political sides. I witnessed it for over a decade. I know it is not popular, Mr. President, that you have taken this position, to stand behind the Dreamers and those protected by DACA, but you told me that you thought it was the right thing to do, and I am sure you still feel that way.

Your new Chief of Staff, General Kelly, and I have had many conversations about this, and I believe that he, too, thinks that legislation is necessary to protect these young people. I hope we can come together. I stand ready. Senator GRAHAM stands ready. We have a bipartisan coalition prepared to work with you.

Let's not let this decision be made in a courtroom somewhere far from Washington. Let's take on our responsibility, yours as President and ours in the Senate, to address this critical issue that really cries out for justice. This is the time to do it. The concern, anxiety, and stress is higher than ever among these populations of people affected by DACA and the Dream Act and, of course, their families as well. I hope you will join us in creating a legal option that will defend the DACA Program and will work with us in Congress to make the Dream Act the law of the land so that we can say to young people like Juan Martinez and hundreds of thousands of others: Yes, we will give you your chance—give you your chance to prove that you can become a valuable part of America's future, give you a chance to make America a stronger nation. That is all they have asked for, and that is something we, on a bipartisan basis with the President, should give them.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DAINES). The Senator from Texas.

HEALTHCARE

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I note in this morning's news that insurance companies that provide health insurance policies on the ObamaCare exchanges are projecting that insurance premiums will go up about 30 percent next year.

Since 2013, we have seen the nationwide average of premiums go up 105 percent. That was before this latest announcement. We know that in 2017, the national average increase in premiums was 25 percent, and in Arizona, for example, it was 145 percent.

So why did all of the Senate Democrats vote against making progress on a solution toward these runaway premiums I have talked about ad nauseam on the Senate floor?

We have almost become numb to the pain people across this country are experiencing because of the skyrocketing rate of their insurance premiums, and we know that 28 million, roughly, have dropped out and are uninsured. In my State alone, because of the individual mandate, which is the penalty the government imposes for one's failing to buy a government-approved health insurance plan—as the Presiding Officer knows because I got the figures from him—more than 400,000 Texans who earn less than $25,000 a year paid the penalty because they could not afford to buy the insurance. All in all, about a million Texans paid the penalty because of the individual mandate.

When we tried to do something about that last week, in working with our House colleagues, what was the response from the other side? It was crickets—silence. Unfortunately, the people who were hurt by ObamaCare are still being hurt by ObamaCare.

Now, here is the narrative. I have already seen it on social media and have read about it in the paper and elsewhere. Some people are saying: Well, the reason insurance companies are saying that premiums are going to go up 30 percent next year is that President Trump will not commit to the subsidies for insurance companies, the so-called CSRs.

That is utterly false. How do they explain the 105-percent increase from 2013 to currently? How do they explain last year's increase in insurance premiums, 25 percent, on average, and 145 percent in places like Arizona before President Trump even took office? It is a demonstrably false narrative, and I cannot tell you how disappointed I am that we were not able to make some progress toward a solution on behalf of the people whom I represent in my State but also on behalf of the people whom we all represent across the United States.

I dare say, as we search for a path forward, we ought to get our facts straight, and the idea that premiums are going to go up 30 percent next year, unless something changes, is a product of the failure of ObamaCare. It is nothing that this administration has done or will do that has caused that. So let's get our facts straight because starting with the correct facts is absolutely essential to coming up with real solutions.

WORK BEFORE THE SENATE

Mr. President, we sometimes are our own worst enemy in the U.S. Senate. We do something really important, really good, and really bipartisan, and then we do not tell anybody about it. We leave it to them to discover it for themselves. Last night, for example, we passed major, bipartisan, bicameral legislation to continue the Veterans Choice Program. At a time when so much is polarized here in Washington and people are hungry for bipartisan and solution-oriented leadership, when they get it on something like the Veterans Choice Program, we do not talk about it. This is really important to our veterans—people to whom, I believe, we have a solemn commitment as a result of their service to our country.

Over the last few years, we have heard how the Veterans Health Administration has been plagued by inefficiency, unaccountability, and poor quality of care. The VA has been hindered too long by unnecessary bureaucratic hurdles, which have been incredibly frustrating and deadly. I am afraid, in some cases, for our veterans. We have heard stories about veterans having to travel hours to get medical care, sometimes causing them to accept lower quality care or to forgo that care entirely. Sadly, in some cases, veterans turn to coping mechanisms, self-destructive activity—self-medicating—with drugs or alcohol because they simply cannot get access to genuinely helpful medical care.

The Veterans Choice Program was designed to help address that by ensuring that veterans could receive timely appointments close to where they live. If they had to drive too far or if they had to wait too long for an appointment at a veterans facility, we said: You could show up at your local healthcare provider's, and we will pay for it through the Veterans Choice Program.

The VA Choice and Quality Employment Act of 2017 continues that important program and guarantees veterans that they will have access to care without interruption.

This bill also strengthens the VA's ability to recruit, train, and retain its valuable workforce, which will help the VA continue to improve veterans' care. I am glad we were able to pass this legislation last night to ensure that this program can continue serving veterans. In moving forward, both Chambers should continue to work with the VA to get the agency back on track and right the years of poor quality of care and of service to our veterans for whom, I believe, we have a sacred obligation, a solemn commitment, based on their service to our country.

Next, we will focus on another important piece of legislation. This is authorizing the Food and Drug Administration's user fee program.

This is how the Food and Drug Administration actually considers and approves new drugs that can save lives and improve the quality of lives. These partnerships between the public and private sectors ensure that patients will have access to safe and effective drugs and medical devices while also maintaining America's position as a global leader in medical innovation. Faster approvals mean treatments and cures reach patients sooner. Increased competition leads to lower costs, and that, in turn, means more lives saved. This is another example of what, I believe, will be a bipartisan accomplishment of the current Senate and current Congress.

I heard one of our colleagues last week stand in front of the Nation and say nothing ever gets done. Well, we are doing some important things. The Veterans Choice Program and the FDA reauthorization bill are important, lifesaving bills that are being passed on a bipartisan basis.

Then, of course, there is the backlog of the President's nominees.

I have never seen anything quite like it. We had an election on November 8, but for many of our colleagues, the election remains undecided. They do not accept the verdict of the American people and the electoral college that President Trump won the election and that Hillary Clinton lost. That is how they, somehow, justify their consistent foot-dragging and obstruction when it comes to the President's nominees for important offices, including his Cabinet.

It is the President's prerogative to nominate whom he wants to serve in the executive branch, but it is our duty, our responsibility, to carefully consider their qualifications before coming together to confirm them. Now, we have had people who had been waiting months for their nominations to be confirmed and who were confirmed by almost unanimous votes of the Senate, which tells me we were delaying those votes unnecessarily. If they were truly controversial, I think it would be reflected in the votes for their confirmations, but they are not.

Let me just name one—our former colleague, Kay Bailey Hutchison, who has been nominated to serve as the Ambassador to NATO. I cannot think of a more qualified person than my good friend, the former Senator from Texas. Our country needs leadership in Brussels, at NATO, to help counter Russian aggression and threats and intimidation against our allies in the region, but that is just one example.

Last night, the Senate confirmed the FBI Director—I am grateful for that—but they also confirmed—again, in the dead of night when nobody was paying attention—eight other Department of Defense nominees. Now, if our Democratic colleagues had good reason to delay those confirmations because they felt like they were controversial, that is their right, but evidently they were willing to let those people who had been nominated to the Department of Defense be confirmed, basically, by consent after months and months of delay.

We have a lot of other nominations that are backlogged due to the unfortunate obstruction and foot-dragging of our Democratic colleagues, and I, for one, do not think we ought to leave in August—this month—without a big, robust package of the confirmations of these noncontroversial nominees.

It is time to get over the election. That was on November 8. We used to see a difference between elections and the responsibility of governing. Regardless of who wins the election, we still have the responsibility to govern. Some people seem to have forgotten that.

Again, I hope we have a big, robust package of noncontroversial nominations approved before we leave for the rest of the month of August. I think it is too important to leave town without that. We need our President to succeed so the country can succeed. This is what every American who voted for President Trump hoped for, and they trusted him to choose men and women for his Cabinet to lead and guide our country. I have to say, he has done a remarkably good job in the people whom he has chosen for his Cabinet so let's come together and confirm these appointees so the administration can better serve our Nation and all Americans.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, thank you.

I come to the floor today to urge my colleagues to vote no on the nomination that we will vote on shortly.

On the campaign trail, President Trump promised to put workers first. Instead, President Trump's administration has rolled back worker protections and prioritized corporate interests at the expense of workers.

It is critical, now more than ever, that the NLRB remain independent and committed to advocating for workers and their right to organize, but I am deeply concerned that President Trump's nominee, Mr. Kaplan, does not have a record of supporting the rights of workers and unions.

At his nomination hearing, Mr. Kaplan confused basic labor issues and decisions, further proving he lacks the knowledge and experience to serve on this important board. NLRB members should be committed to standing up for workers, and it is clear Mr. Kaplan does not make the cut.

I urge my colleagues to join me in doing what President Trump has failed to do, and that is to put workers first. Vote against this nomination.

Thank you.

I yield the floor.

The motion is agreed to.

The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to stand up for the workers President Trump is failing. As a candidate running for President, Mr. Trump promised workers that he would put them first and that he would bring back good-paying, respectable jobs to their communities, but since day one, President Trump has done the exact opposite. He has rolled back worker protections and made it harder for families to be more secure.

Now, this doesn't come as a surprise to me, especially when I look at President Trump's record as a businessman. I have to say that he has refused to allow even his own hotel workers to organize or join a union, preventing them from having the opportunity to better advocate for safer working conditions and better pay.

We all know that strong unions have helped to create our middle class, and for many working families in the 20th century, a good union job, or the right to collective bargaining, helped them move up the economic ladder. But over the past few decades, we have seen a decline in unions and union membership across the country. As a result of that, our economy has started to favor corporations and those at the top. This paved the way for President Trump and billionaires like him to take advantage of their workers, with little recourse for everyday people who are the backbone of our country.

The National Labor Relations Board gives workers the opportunity to file charges against corporations when they are illegally fired or when corporations retaliate against workers for exercising their rights. President Trump should be familiar with the NLRB, as his own businesses have had complaints filed numerous times. That is precisely why it is so important that the Board is independent and is committed to advocating for workers and their right to organize.

The preamble of the National Labor Relations Act clearly states that it is the policy of the United States to encourage collective bargaining and to give workers a voice, allowing them to speak up for fair wages and safe working conditions. It is the responsibility of the NLRB to ensure that workers are being treated fairly and to resolve disputes between corporate management and workers.

So it is clear to me that Board members should believe in the core mission that I just stated of the NLRB and should be committed to standing up for workers and their right to collective bargaining, which is exactly why I have very serious concerns about Mr. Marvin Kaplan's record, which has largely been in opposition to the work and mission of the NLRB.

As a labor staffer in the House of Representatives, Mr. Kaplan prepared and staffed hearings where Republicans consistently attacked the NLRB. In fact, I would be hard-pressed to name a single example of Mr. Kaplan supporting the rights of workers and unions.

In addition to Mr. Kaplan's opposition to the core mission of the Board, I also have deep reservations about Mr. Kaplan's lack of legal experience practicing before the NLRB. When I asked Mr. Kaplan about his lack of practical qualifications, his responses were telling: Have you ever represented a party, employer, or a union in an unfair labor practice case or representation case before the Board? No. Have you ever represented a worker in an employment matter? No.

What is more, when asked to speak on the pressing questions facing the Board at his confirmation hearing, he actually confused basic labor issues and decisions, further calling into question whether he has the experience and knowledge to serve on this critically important Board.

This is not a difficult concept for workers across the country to grasp. If you are not qualified for a job that is this important or if you want to undermine the basic goals of the law, you shouldn't get the job.

So I will be voting no on Mr. Kaplan's confirmation. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I know my colleagues on both sides of the aisle want to strengthen our economy and rebuild our middle class. So I hope we can stand with working families across the country who today are simply asking for a fair shot.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. SCHATZ. Mr. President, there are two reasons why every Member of the Senate should vote against confirming Marvin Kaplan to the NLRB. The first is that he is just not qualified.

The NLRB is the Federal agency that enforces our labor laws. It protects the rights of workers and the private sector to organize for better wages and better working conditions. It is up to them to make sure that their employers follow the law and that when there is an issue between employers and employees, everyone acts reasonably.

Democrats and Republicans who have served on the NLRB have been the top labor and employment attorneys in their fields. They have had long careers working on labor issues, either as lawyers or as law professors. Many of them have spent time as staffers on the NLRB board. In other words, they understand the labor issues better than anyone. They may have a unique perspective on it one way or the other—sort of pro-management or pro-labor—but there is no question that previous nominees and previous members of the Board know labor law.

Marvin Kaplan doesn't fit this profile. He is not a lawyer with any relevant labor experience. He has no record and no public positions on relevant labor law. What he is is a well-connected Capitol Hill staffer. His only qualification, that I can find, is that he has drafted some legislation for a committee in the House of Representatives. That does not stack up against the resumes of any other member who has served on the Board—Democrat or Republican.

This lack of experience is dangerous. It means he will not know the intricacies and the historical development of labor law. He will simply be a rubberstamp who brings a political agenda to the Board, because he has no on-the-record opinions on these issues of his own.

That was clear from the hearing on his nomination, when he would not properly commit to recuse himself from any issues he had worked on and to approach issues with an open mind, which brings me to the second reason. If somehow Senators can make an excuse for his lack of experience, we can't deny that this is the opposite of the message that Congress should have received during the 2016 election.

In November, Americans made clear that Washington had failed working families and that we have not done enough to stand up for American workers.

Now here we are about to confirm a nominee to the NLRB, and the only experience he has is that he has drafted legislation to hurt American workers.

The Board is about to face some important decisions. They could reverse a decision that holds big companies accountable for how their contractors treat workers. The future of American workers and their ability to organize will be influenced by this Board, which includes any members confirmed by the Senate.

If Mr. Kaplan is appointed, it will further silence workers who already feel that they aren't being heard in Washington, DC.

A vote for Mr. Kaplan is a vote that ignores the voices of American workers. It is a vote that further politicizes the NLRB at a time when we need to shore up our institutions against blind, corrosive ideology.

I urge my colleagues to vote no on this nominee.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CASEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. ERNST). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CASEY. Thank you, Madam President.

I rise to speak in opposition to the nomination of Marvin Kaplan to serve as a member of the National Labor Relations Board. Mr. Kaplan has spent much of his career as a staff member in Congress, where he worked to undermine unions and the rights of workers to bargain collectively.

A key role of the National Labor Relations Board is to preserve the right of workers to bargain collectively. The Board itself is charged with enforcing the National Labor Relations Act, which Congress passed in 1935 in the depths of the Great Depression. The act gave workers the right to join unions, and it encouraged and promoted collective bargaining as a way to set wages and settle disputes over working conditions.

This law that passed in the 1930s—and is still in effect today—is not simply a benefit to workers; it also benefits businesses, and it also benefits the economy. Section 1 of the act says, in pertinent part: “The inequality of bargaining power between employees . . . and employers . . . substantially burdens and affects the flow of commerce, and tends to aggravate recurrent business depressions, by depressing wage rates and the purchasing power of wage earners.”

There are a lot of important words there. When you have inequality of bargaining power, the findings of the Congress at the time said that would burden and affect the flow of commerce. So that tells you the impact on commerce. It also says that when you have inequality of bargaining power, that aggravates business depressions, and the result of that is depressing wages and depressing purchasing power.

Everyone here knows that when we are measuring the American economy today—I am sure this has been true for many generations but especially today—the consumer plays a substantial role in our economy. So if that consumer, that worker has lower wages, that is not good for anyone. So giving workers the right to both organize and collectively bargain allows them to demand higher wages, thereby increasing their incomes and that purchasing power which is so critically important. That, in turn, of course, increases consumption and demand for goods, which, of course, increases production and employment. So all of these are tied together. Wages and benefits affect the economy, not just the worker and his or her family.

I believe there is now a concerning trend to weaken the National Labor Relations Act and to tilt the Board against workers. Mr. Kaplan's nomination is another sign of this disconnect between the rhetoric of the administration claiming to be pro-worker and its actions that are of late anything but pro-worker. The administration claims it is here to support workers, but at every turn, we have nominees who have spent their careers working in the opposite direction.

We know that in the 1950s and 1960s, the economy worked well for working Americans because 35 percent of workers were in a labor union. The decline of unions, the decline of the workers' voice, and the decline of collective bargaining have helped to lead us where we are today—stagnant wages over a long period of time, as well as power, wealth, and income, of course, concentrated at the top.

So we know that unions helped workers to win higher wages, job security, and unprecedented benefits, including paid vacations, paid sick leave, and pensions that gave those workers and their families a measure of security, but it also increased their purchasing power, and it also, of course, strengthened the economy. American family incomes grew by an average of 2.8 percent per year from 1947 through 1973, with every sector of society seeing its income roughly double.

We know now that in the last number of years, it has been a different story. Families across Pennsylvania and the United States know that the story is much different. It is not a coincidence that union membership has declined from its peak of 35 percent of private sector employment in the 1950s to less than 7 percent of private sector employment today. This is all the more reason to stop this assault on workers and labor unions.

Nominees with a partisan history of working to undermine unions or undermine the National Labor Relations Act or undermine the National Labor Relations Board should not be confirmed to a position where they are supposed to act as an arbiter to protect the rights of workers to form a union and to bargain collectively. So I urge my colleagues to oppose the nomination of Marvin Kaplan to the National Labor Relations Board.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWN. Madam President, during his campaign, President Trump made a lot of big promises to workers in Ohio and across the country. He told them he would look out for them.

In a letter I sent to the President 2 days after the election, on November 10 or 11, asking the President to work with me to renegotiate NAFTA, insisting on “Buy American” provisions and infrastructure, the President scrawled across the top of the letter: “I will never let down workers.”

He said he would look out for them, but too often the people he puts in charge are along the lines of this latest nominee to the National Labor Relations Board, Marvin Kaplan. Mr. Kaplan has devoted his career—imagine such a thing—to working to strip workers of their rights and trying to undermine the workers' watchdog he is now seeking to join. I never question people's motives in this body. I just don't quite understand why somebody would devote his work life to trying to take away workers' rights and undermine labor protections. Someone who views unions and collective bargaining as a threat to be dealt with rather than as essential rights to be protected has no business serving on the National Labor Relations Board.

The National Labor Relations Board was created, in part, at this desk. Then Senator Hugo Black of Alabama, in the early 1930s, sat at this desk. At this desk, one of the pieces of legislation he wrote was the minimum wage law. One of the other pieces of legislation he worked on with Senator Wagner was the National Labor Relations Act. In those days, people understood that you had created the National Labor Relations Act to strengthen workers, to create workers' rights, and to protect those workers' rights.

Mr. Kaplan's nomination sets that on its head. It is the latest in a long, long line of evidence that we in this country simply don't value work the way that we used to. Workers have continually seen their rights undermined. Workers' wages have been stagnant. People who work hard and play by the rules don't have the standard of living they had in our parents' generation or even half of a generation ago.

We see companies refusing to pay overtime to workers who have earned it. We see companies misclassify workers so that companies can pay them less. We see executive salaries and CEO compensation going up and up and up.

Yet for the broad middle class in this country, for people who aspire to be middle class, for low-wage workers, they have simply not gotten a raise for the last 20 years. So then, are we going to appoint somebody to the National Labor Relations Board—the President says we are going to confirm somebody to the National Labor Relations Board—who has devoted his entire career to undermining workers, to taking away workers' rights, to scaling back workers' protections, and to scaling back wages—all these things we as a country never stood for?

I don't know what is happening in this country that we think it is right to deprive workers of their wages, to take away overtime, to basically hit workers day after day after day in their pocketbooks, all while productivity goes up, profits go up, and while executive compensation goes up.

When I was a kid, the average CEO-to-worker ratio of pay was about 35 to 1 or maybe even less than that. Today it is often 300 or 400 to 1. The CEO will make 300 times what the average worker in the same company makes. How much is enough? What moral principle says to pay a CEO 300 or 400 times what a worker makes? How much do they need? Why do they keep doing that?

They keep doing that in part because of people like Mr. Kaplan, who always sides with the CEOs against the workers. As we think about this, I think everybody in this body can learn something from Pope Francis. At the end of June, Pope Francis spoke to workers in Italy at the Italian Confederation of Trade Unions. He was talking about something we do not think about much in this town that really ought to be at the heart of everything we do. He talked about the value and the dignity of work. An employer—a CEO—cannot say that he—and it is usually a “he”—values work when he takes away workers' rights. He cannot say he appreciates the dignity of work, when he scales back their wages or cheats them out of their overtime or takes away, by misclassification, the dollars she has earned.

When Pope Francis talked about the dignity and value of work, he meant all work. He meant looking out for the little guy whether she punches a time clock or fills out a timesheet or makes a salary or earns tips, whether she is a contract worker or a temporary worker, whether he works in a call center or in a bank or on a factory floor.

I went to my high school reunion in Mansfield, OH, about a year and a half ago. I sat across from a bank teller who works for one of the largest banks in the United States. She has worked at that bank for 30 years. She makes $30,000 a year, and she has worked at a bank, as a bank teller, for most of the last 30 years. That is not respecting the dignity of work. That is simply undermining the value of work.

Pope Francis said:

The person thrives in work. Labour is the most common form of cooperation that humanity has generated in its history.

Work is a form of civil love . . . that makes the world live and carry on.

Yet too often that work—the cooperation that gives life purpose and that powers our country—does not pay off for the people who are doing it. While corporate profits are up, the GDP is up, and executive salaries have exploded upward, wages have barely budged. Workers simply have not shared in the wealth they have created.

I went to an auto plant once after the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement. At my own expense, I flew to Texas. I was representing a congressional district in Northeast Ohio then. I rented a car with a friend, went across the border from New Mexico, and I visited an auto plant in Mexico. It was an American company, but it was in Mexico.

This auto plant looked just like an American auto plant. It was clean, and it was up-to-date. In fact, it was newer than most of our auto plants. The floors were clean, the workers were working hard, and the technology was up-to-date.

Do you know the difference between the American auto plant and the Mexican auto plant? The Mexican auto plant did not have a parking lot because the workers did not make enough. They were not paid enough by this American auto company. They were not paid enough in Mexico to buy the cars they make. The work was not respected, profits were going up, the GDP was going up, executive salaries were going up, and the workers were not sharing in the wealth they created.

This is a universal problem. It affects blue-collar workers, and it affects white-collar workers. It is in the industrial heartland of Ohio, and it is on the farmlands of Iowa. It is a problem on both coasts. People earn less. People cannot save for retirement. People feel less stable—all while working harder, all while producing more for their employers, which feeds right into huge executive compensation, but they do not share in the wealth they create for their companies. They are also less likely to have a union card that protects them.

So the President's appointment to the National Labor Relations Board is pretty much a guy who has tried to make sure unions do not get a foothold in our economy and in our companies.

The Pope spoke about the labor group. He said it performs an “essential role for the common good.”

He said:

It gives voice to those who have none . . . unmasks the powerful who trample on the rights of the most vulnerable workers, defends the cause of the foreigner, the least, the discarded.

This is the Pope talking.

Think about airline baggage handlers. Airline baggage handlers used to make a good union wage. They used to work for United. They used to work for American. They used to work for Delta. Now they work for private companies that are contracted by United, American, and Delta. Airline baggage handlers' wages in the last 10 years have dropped 40 percent. They are working just as hard—they are probably working harder—but they are making 40 percent less than they used to.

Again, the Pope said:

. . . unmasks the powerful who trample on the rights of the most vulnerable workers, defends the cause of the foreigner, the least, the discarded.

The capitalism of our time does not understand the value of the trade union because it has forgotten the social nature of the economy, of the business. This is one of the greatest sins.

We know from rightwing attacks on the labor movement, from so-called right-to-work bills to Mr. Kaplan's efforts to undercut rules that protect workers, that too many in this country do not understand the value of the trade union.

Right now, in Mississippi, auto-workers at Nissan are organizing and trying to form a union, and the corporation has responded. This foreign corporation has responded with despicable intimidation tactics. This is one of the most powerful, profitable companies in the world that is attacking workers one at a time in Mississippi.

One worker said: “There is no atmosphere of free choice in the Canton plant—just fear—which is what Nissan intends.”

It is shameful the lengths that this corporation is going to—all to prevent workers from bargaining for fair pay. It is why we need a strong, not an undercut, weakened, emasculated National Labor Relations Board. We need a strong National Labor Relations Board to defend these workers and defend our laws on the books because an attack on unions is an attack on all workers. It is an attack on our economy as a whole because it depresses wages.

There is the idea that you give tax cuts to the richest people in the country and that you make sure executive salaries are $5- and $10- and $15 million. You squeeze workers so they do not get increases. Is that a good economy? No. The money does not trickle down and build the economy. You build the economy from the middle out. We know that.

In the 1990s, we built the economy from the middle out, with 22 million private sector jobs during the Clinton years. In the Bush years, they had two huge tax cuts for the rich under the Wall Street Journal theory that it would trickle down and everybody would be better. There was literally no net private sector job increase during the Bush years. There were 22 million private sector jobs in the Clinton years and zero net growth in the Bush years. That is because, during the Bush years, they believed the economy was built from the top down. It is not large businesses that drive the economy—it is the workers. That is how you grow the economy—from the middle class out. If work is not valued, Americans cannot earn their way to better lives for their families no matter how hard they work.

That is what I think of when I hear Pope Francis talk about the social nature of our economy. Work has to support families and communities. Today businesses seem to be more focused on cutting costs than on investing in their workforces. Workers are often nothing more than a line item in a budget, a cost to be minimized. More businesses use temp workers, more businesses use contractors—look at the airlines—and more businesses use subcontractors. They pay a lower wage. They provide less job security. They roll back their retirement benefits. They undercut their health benefits, and they take away legal protections. We have to change this.

This spring, I laid out a plan to make work pay off by raising wages and benefits, including retirement, giving workers more say and more power in the workplace, encouraging companies to invest in their greatest asset—the American worker. My plan to restore the value of work has to include the labor movement. Modernizing labor law means recognizing the right of all workers, even those in alternative work arrangements, to collectively bargain for higher pay and better wages.

Pope Francis concluded:

There is no good society without a good union, and there is no good union that is not reborn every day in the peripheries that does not transform the discarded stones of the economy into its cornerstones.

We are a country of discarded stones—of people who rose from humble beginnings and joined together to build institutions that were greater than any one of us. We need laws that reflect that—that reflect the dignity of work and that reflect, as in the Pope's words, the dignity of every discarded stone, of each and every American who works too many hours for too little pay.

The last thing we need for the National Labor Relations Board is another nominee who does not value work, who demeans work, and who demeans the workers and the unions who do it. Everyone in this town ought to listen a little more to Pope Francis and a little less to corporate lobbyists, a little less to big banks, and a little less to Wall Street. Maybe, then, we will start to make hard work pay off again for American workers. We can start today by rejecting this anti-worker nominee.

I yield the floor.

HONORING NEBRASKA'S SOLDIERS WHO LOST THEIR LIVES IN COMBAT

Mrs. FISCHER. Madam President, I rise to continue my tribute to Nebraska's heroes and the current generation of men and women who lost their lives defending our freedom in Iraq and Afghanistan. Each of these Nebraskans has a special story to tell.

CORPORAL MATTHEW ALEXANDER

Madam President, today, I recall the life and the service of Army CPL Matthew Alexander, a native of Gretna, NE.

Matthew was drawn to the military at a young age. His parents Mel and Monica and brother Marshall described him as always eager to be part of a team. He practiced martial arts, played the piano, and participated in band as a kid. As a member of the Gretna High School band, Matthew helped to organize the uniforms and shoes before concerts to ensure that all of the band members were ready to perform. He helped his band mates play at their best, and his caring and compassionate nature stood out among his classmates.

Matthew and his wife Kara had been friends since childhood. Kara described the teenage Matthew as somebody who could not sit still and who loved to learn. He took a keen interest in history and English classes in high school. He was also comfortable in talking with anyone and often referred to the mothers of his friends as "Mom." Kara recalled how Matthew always had a grin or a smile on his face. Matthew also loved his church youth group, and he embraced his Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Matthew always wanted to be a soldier, and the 9/11 terrorist attacks further solidified his desire to defend his country. He enlisted in the Army shortly before graduating from Gretna High School in May of 2004, and he shipped off to basic training that summer.

After he finished training, Matthew attended the Advanced Individual Training to become an infantry soldier. This was the first step toward his dream of joining the Army Special Forces. He was assigned to the 5th Battalion, 20th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade Division, 2nd Infantry Division, and like both of his grandfathers, Corporal Alexander was stationed at Fort Lewis in Washington State.

When he first arrived, his unit had just returned to Fort Lewis from a deployment. Matthew had to wait until the next deployment cycle to go overseas. He did not like that delay. As a brave soldier, eager to defend his country, Matthew wanted to be in the fight. Several months later, Matthew's unit deployed to Mosul, Iraq. They assisted with the training of the Iraqi militia.

From the beginning of Operation Iraqi Freedom, Mosul has been the center of battle. The fighting escalated in 2006 during the Sunni awakening. During the training of Iraqi forces and while conducting combat patrols, troops in Mosul encountered enemy attacks on a daily basis.

Matthew returned home on leave in February of 2007, and he proposed to Kara. They were married 2 weeks later, on February 14, Valentine's Day. Regarding their very short engagement, Kara simply explained that Matthew felt strongly about being married before he returned to combat.

When Matthew returned to Iraq, he learned that his unit had moved to Baqubah. The Battle of Baqubah began in March. The enemy used hit-and-run tactics to harass Allied forces that were trying to control the city. During April and May, the fighting intensified, and casualties were high. Some likened the fierce fight to the close quarters of the combat of Vietnam.

It was in this heat of battle that CPL Alexander showed heroism and leadership when an IED hit a Bradley Fighting Vehicle on one of his missions. As Matthew's section rushed to the burning Bradley, the other vehicle commander told him to block off the southern approach and prevent the enemy from attacking up the road. While the Bradley continued to burn and take machine gun fire, Matthew acted without further instructions, and he saved lives. He set up his vehicle to prevent the attacking enemy forces from shooting accurate fire into those helping with that rescue operation. For his valor, Matthew received the Army Commendation Medal.

One of the members of Matthew's platoon, SSG Mark Grover, remembered Matthew feeling surprised to have been recommended for the honor. He said that he was just doing the right thing to protect his fellow soldiers.

Days before a mission on Sunday, May 6, Matthew called home to talk to his mother Monica and to Kara. Tragically, this was the last time he spoke to loved ones. While on the mission, an improvised explosive device detonated near his vehicle, killing him instantly.

Corporal Alexander was laid to rest on May 18, 2007, in a rural cemetery between Gretna and Elkhorn, NE. Hundreds of Patriot Guard riders led the funeral procession and over 1,500 people filled Gretna High School to say their final goodbyes. Staff Sergeant Grover traveled to Gretna to represent the Third Platoon, nicknamed the “Gladiators,” at the service. Grover was riding in the armored vehicle just in front of the one carrying Matthew at the time of the explosion. He said that the entire company loved Matthew and that he was one of the best soldiers in the platoon.

To honor Matthew’s life, his family established Matt’s Music Memorial. The charity helps children interested in music but who can’t afford an instrument, and they receive one from the local community. As Matthew’s father Mel put it, Matthew had two passions: music and the military. However, you didn’t need money to join the military.

CPL Matthew Alexander is truly a hero. He served with great compassion and respect.

I join Nebraskans and Americans across our country in saluting his willingness and his family’s sacrifice to keep us free, and I am honored to tell his story.

Thank you, Madam President.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that all postclosure time on the Kaplan nomination expire at 5 p.m. today; that if the nomination is confirmed, the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table; that the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action, and the Senate then resume legislative session and be in a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TILLIS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO FALLEN SOLDIERS’ MOTORCYCLE BRIGADE

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, a few moments ago, I had the opportunity to meet with a group called the Tribute to Fallen Soldiers. They have an annual cross-country motorcycle ride in honor of soldiers who died during combat. The motorcycle brigade escorts the Fallen Soldiers Memorial Flame from Eugene, OR, all the way to Arlington National Cemetery. Along the way, they visit Gold Star families—families who have a loved one who died on the battlefield in service to the United States of America.

One couple who came today was Terry Burgess and Elizabeth Burgess, whose son Bryan lost his life fighting in Afghanistan, and they shared with me, in the military tradition, a medal.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to use a visual aid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MERKLEY. Mr. President, this medal has a picture of their son. It says: “In memory of SSG Bryan A. Burgess, who lived from April 23, 1981, through March 29, 2011.” On the back of it, it has a picture of a memorial that shows a pair of boots and a rifle and a hat and “never forget.”

The Tribute to Fallen Soldiers is about never forgetting our fallen soldiers. We put them into situations of enormous stress and challenge and danger, and they are there for all of us. In those particular situations, time and again, one of our soldiers loses their life. So may we never forget our soldiers who have died, our soldiers who have been wounded, and may we continue to reach out to Gold Star families to provide a community of support to them.

I completely respect and appreciate the Tribute to Fallen Soldiers’ motorcycle brigade that rides across the country visiting with Gold Star families, making sure they have that community of support and making sure they know that the sacrifices of their son or daughter are not forgotten.

TRANSGENDER MILITARY BAN

Mr. President, while focusing on the military, I want to shift to another aspect of military service, and I am going to start by thinking about the foundation of our country, our “we the people” Nation. “We the People” are the first three words of our Constitution, the mission statement of our Nation. We are not a nation that is founded of, by, and for the powerful, not a nation founded to govern of, by, and for the privileged, but for the people. It was a very deliberate strategy of our Founders not to repeat the type of structure in America that they saw in Europe, where government became beholden and in servitude to simply the powerful class.

Throughout our history, we have strived to live up to this vision of a nation where every individual has the opportunity to thrive. Time after time, we have broken down barriers, we have overcome discrimination, and we have thrown open the doors of opportunity for one group after another—for women, for Africa Americans, for indigenous peoples, for immigrants, for the disabled.

Freedom, said President Lyndon Baines Johnson, “is the right to be treated, in every part of our national life, as a person equal in dignity and promise to all others.” So we strive to reach that perspective, that point where our vision of the pursuit of happiness embraces freedom as Lyndon Baines Johnson described it—“the right to be treated, in every part of our national life, as a person equal in dignity and promise to all others.” It has not been easy.

It was Martin Luther King who saw how challenging it was to progress toward that vision, and he noted that “human progress is neither automatic nor inevitable. . . . Every step towards the goal of justice requires sacrifice, suffering, and struggle; the tireless exertions and passionate concern of dedicated individuals.” And it is with that tireless exertion, that passionate concern, that dedication, that we have made progress time and time again.

But last week, we did not make progress. Last week, we fell back from this vision of opportunity, the freedom to engage in our national life with the respect and promise accorded to all others. This step back came in the form of an attack by President Trump and Attorney General Sessions on our LGBTQ Americans. President Trump announced a ban on transgender Americans serving in the military, and Attorney General Sessions filed an amicus brief in Zarda v. Altitude Express arguing that discrimination is completely legal under the law, including the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Well, let’s talk for a moment about our members of the military who have joined a Volunteer military, who have gone through significant training—and I am not just referring to boot camp but the ongoing training in specialty after specialty—so they can operate that radar effectively that provides warning to an entire ship, or that communication device to make sure that patrol is where it is supposed to be and able to follow instructions in the field, or any of the hundreds of specialties within the military that these individuals step forward and gain training on. Each one of them is significant to the overall success of the entire unit. Well, that is something President Trump didn’t understand last week when he attacked and said that he is going to throw our transgender individuals out of the military.

What is important isn’t whether you are gay or lesbian or transgender, it is whether you serve with your heart and soul and sinew the purpose of the security of the United States, and those individuals who do are respected within their units. They contribute to those units. The lives of each member depend on the success of the other team members. They are a team. And to reach in, in a cavalier fashion, as the President did, and say “I am going to rip thousands of these team members out of their units” is wrong in so many ways. It is disrespectful, of course, of those individuals and their dedicated service to our Nation. It is disrespectful and damaging to the units in which they serve and provide those various skills which they have worked so hard to acquire and which we have worked so hard to make sure they have the chance to acquire. And it certainly damages the security of the United States of America to eject individuals with those talents and that training from our military. Therefore, that should be reversed.

By the way, it was done without consultation with our military leaders. A Commander in Chief proposing a policy through a tweet without consulting with the experts who have dedicated their lives to the national security of our Nation—that in and of itself is a real betrayal of responsibility.

Attorney General Sessions filed an amicus brief in Zarda v. Altitude Express, and this brief says that title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which provides protection against discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, and sex, does not provide protection against discrimination in terms of one's LGBT status. By the way, that is the opposite of what court after court has ruled.

What happened, one might ask, to the President Trump who, as Candidate Trump, said: "Thank you to the LGBT community!" As a candidate, he said: "I will fight for you." What happened to the President who, after the attack on the Pulse nightclub in Orlando, said in a tweet: "Will fight for you." This last week, the President did not fight for you in that community; instead, he attacked that community, and he apparently approved of Attorney General Sessions attacking that community.

This is why we need the Equality Act. The Equality Act would clarify that when we say no discrimination on the basis of sex, that is broadly applying to one's status of who they are or whom they love.

If we go back to President Johnson's presentation of the issue in America, where he said every individual—the matter of freedom is that you have the opportunity to be treated as having the same promise and be treated with the same respect as everyone else, that it is all about being able to thrive in the United States, or to put it quite simply, not having a door slammed in your face when you go to rent an apartment, not having a door slammed in your face when you go to a restaurant or a movie theater, not having a door slammed in your face when you seek to be part of a jury. That is what freedom is in this country. That is the freedom that Attorney General Sessions and President Trump are seeking to rip away from a sizable share of Americans, and that is simply wrong. That is why we need the Equality Act—to make sure that this is remedied. That is why we need the courts to stand up against discrimination on the basis of who you are and whom you love.

It has been a week in which the President attacked and damaged our military and Attorney General Sessions attacked and betrayed and attempted to steal freedom from a vast swath of Americans. That is a very sad week on both counts, and we in this Chamber should stand up and say: That is not OK. We will fight for the security of the United States of America, and we will fight for opportunity for every single American.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COTTON). The Senator from Missouri.

RURAL BROADBAND

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, August is Rural Broadband Month at the Federal Communications Commission. The Commerce Committee just today put forward nominees for the Commission, and the Commission does matter. But I want to talk today specifically about highlighting the importance of broadband in rural America and rural Missouri.

In January of this year, I joined a number of my Senate colleagues on a bipartisan letter to President Trump regarding the importance of broadband and expanding its access to all of the country and, particularly, the parts of our country that are not currently served.

As part of any infrastructure legislation that the Congress is talking about, I think we and the administration need to consider policies that advance infrastructure not just solely in terms of roads, bridges, and ports, which are important, particularly where the Presiding Officer and I live, in Arkansas and Missouri. That transportation network means so much to us, but also important is how people are able to communicate and compete. High speed internet access cannot be overlooked as we consider what our infrastructure should look like going forward.

Broadband can be delivered by wireless or wireline technology. It can be brought to customers by traditional communications companies in rural areas. Often, now, rural electric co-ops show great interest and capacity to do this, as do others. Following the significant steps that Congress took to deregulate the market as part of the 1996 Telecommunications Act, the broadband industry has really responded. They invested a lot of money. In fact, they invested $1.5 trillion of private money to deploy better and faster networks. If you have access to one of those networks, you know what a difference it makes.

In 2015 alone—that is the last number I have access to—the investment by traditional wireline companies, wireless companies, and cable providers was $76 billion. All of that is really good, except that there is a real divide between the rural areas of my State and the rural areas of the country and the other more populated areas.

Some people say: Oh, that is just a myth; there is no digital divide. I would have them look at any number of articles. One article in the Wall Street Journal in June made the point that 39 percent of the United States' rural population lacks access to broadband. That sounds like a pretty big divide to me—that 39 percent of the entire rural population of the country doesn't have broadband, and 61 percent of rural Missourians lack access to broadband. These numbers are not acceptable.

Most private investment has been directed, as you would assume it would be, toward high populations, highly populated and easily accessed areas, and future customers. This is like the same problem the country had 100 years ago transitioning to telephones. It was hard to get a telephone to a house that was 5 miles away from the nearest house, as opposed to a house that was in the same apartment building to the nearest apartment. It is a lot harder to do that. The government at that time said that there would be a universal service fee on phone bills, and then use that money to ensure that everybody would have equal access to what was obviously seen as a really important way to communicate. The concept of Universal Service was enshrined in the 1996 act. It said that rural households should have the same access to advanced telecommunications enjoyed by their urban counterparts. It is a good goal for a lot of reasons.

I saw some figures this week. When looking at the overdose deaths and the opioid problems in the country, they are much greater in rural counties than they are in urban centers. In our State, Kansas City, our biggest city by population and any of the five counties that touched it weren't anywhere close to the top list of other areas in our State that had this problem. It matters when you are not connected. It matters when opportunities that you otherwise would have simply aren't there because somehow a service that is essential to our society today isn't available to you in the same way it is available to others. I am not saying it should be free to some and cost other people something, but it should be available to you in the same way that it is available to others in our society, as the 1996 Telecommunications Act stated.

Broadband is necessary to attract and retain business for banks, factories, distribution centers, and small businesses. It is necessary to start and maintain a business, large or small. If business is going to compete outside the local marketplace, there has to be that connectivity. Frankly, in order to compete in the local marketplace and to have the ability to buy at the best price and to get the kind of products needed, the internet really matters.

Broadband is always there. We have to have it if we are going to compete in the world economy. Many people in rural America are able to do that in ways that nobody would have dreamed about 10 years ago, but not everybody has that same access.

Certainly, it is critical for schools and libraries. Just today, a parent was telling me that students can't do their homework anymore unless they can get internet access somewhere close to where they live. Students depend on the internet for education and opportunity where we live today.

A revolution has taken place in agriculture. The great food-producing economy that we have produces more food all the time. It actually produces more food with fewer people. So that creates some displaced people who otherwise would have had those jobs, but it also uses wireless infrastructure, data, and GPS structures to decide what should happen in a field at a given time in that part of the field. There are data centers, autonomous systems, and fiber optics that are a part of agriculture today. If you are linked to broadband and you are in your combine and have a problem, sometimes that problem can be solved in a couple of minutes by quickly accessing your system, seeing where the problem is, resetting what you need to set and moving on, as opposed to the other option, which is calling the repair person, having the technologist come out with their computer, hook it up to your combine, and 5 or 6 hours later, at a time when you are in the critical moments of your annual livelihood, suddenly you are working again, when you could have been working 5 or 6 minutes later if you had been connected like many farmers are today.

Broadband is more than just economic opportunity. Rural hospitals and health clinics are able to use telemedicine to bring services at a level that otherwise would not be available. This is particularly important in mental and behavioral healthcare. A lot of people are every bit as comfortable or more comfortable with telehealth than they are with somebody in the room with them. Also, with intensive care, suddenly all of the resources that may be available 100 miles away can be right there at the point where questions are asked and that information is handled. Suddenly, somebody's life is saved because of the capacity to have that kind of communication.

For years I have tried to lead when I could, and joined my colleagues when they were leading, with numerous letters to the FCC urging it to reform the Universal Service Program for the digital era. Most people who don't have a line to their phone have a way to get a phone in their hand now, but they don't have a way to get this important way to communicate and to compete. It is frustrating, when we see the limited resources we have—the government resources—to put into something like this to see limited funds go to places where you are just creating another provider and more competition, except that the second provider has government money on its side to compete with the first provider that went in with its own money. There is a big difference between unserved and any level of underserved. If you are unserved, like 69 percent of rural Missourians, the idea that somebody else doesn't have enough competition in the place they live doesn't seem to make very much sense to you. If there is a competitive marketplace and somebody wants to go in there and compete and get the prices down, that is all fine, but I think the government focus should be just like it was with telephones 100 years ago—to see that people had the opportunity to have that phone the same as their neighbors in more densely populated areas.

The President recently designated Ajit Pai to be the Chairman of the FCC. We are finally seeing the Commission take actions to address rural broadband. In February, I wrote to the Chairman and urged him to act on the $2 billion available for rural broadband and open this money up to auction so new entrants into the field, like electric co-ops, can competitively bid alongside everybody else. The FCC has decided to do that.

Tomorrow the Commission will consider a notice to initiate the pre-auction process for this money to deploy fiber optics in parts of Missouri. This will complement other initiatives underway, as the FCC looks at how to address rural broadband. They have launched a $4.5 billion auction for mobile wireless service in rural areas. They are suspending out-of-date rules that forced small carriers to raise telephone rates. They are launching a proceeding to reduce costs for companies upgrading from copper to fiber optic networks—another FCC initiative. They are launching a broadband advisory committee. These are all steps in the right direction, where you and I live. They will make a difference.

I look forward to continuing to work with the Chairman and others on the Commission on this issue. I think rural broadband is particularly leveling in creating the opportunities that we would like to see. The Commission will now be back up to its five-member intention of how many people are supposed to be there, making those decisions.

There is still work to be done. We need to reduce the digital divide. Connectivity is critical. We also need policies that support efficient network structures that allow people to not just connect to a network but to connect with a network that really works.

Let me talk about one other Missouri issue that relates here.

I said earlier that Kansas City is now our biggest city, our most populous city. Still, St. Louis, I think, by region, is the bigger region, but the city of St. Louis is not as big as Kansas City. In Kansas City, they have an internet exchange called KCIX. It is a peering center that offers tremendous benefits to secondary educational institutions, to high schools, to vocational programs, and to others so they really maximize how they communicate with each other and have the availability of resources in one place much more equally available in others, and large amounts of bandwidth can be diverted by using this peering infrastructure.

Frankly, what is happening in Kansas City this fall is that the North Kansas City School District will establish connections to KCIX. It is estimated that it may save the district almost $500,000 a year in bandwidth just by looking at peering. If peering helps there, maybe peering is one of the other things we can look at that will help solve the rural broadband challenge as well.

We are going to be working on this. There will be legislation. There will be continuing efforts to urge the FCC to stay on point. We need to do what we can to make communities in rural America productive and competitive and as healthy as they can be.

By the way, there are a lot of stories here to be told. I hope the next time I come to the floor on this topic that I will come to the floor with some things that are happening in my State that would not have happened if there had not been the access to broadband in not very big communities that are suddenly doing business all over the United States and all over the world.

How we do that is by not letting any of our country wither away, where we have existing infrastructure and schools and sidewalks and water systems and by being sure the people who want to live there can live there, just like we are being sure now, as we see a revitalization of some of our downtowns and inner cities. People will want to move back to them and will have reasons and desires to want to do that. We are seeing an upswing there.

I think we can see the same kind of thing happen in other parts of the country if we work to be sure we have an equity of opportunity. One of the major things that will provide that will be having access to broadband that works. I hope we can continue to fight that fight and see the progress we have made just in the last 6 months.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

GREAT LAKES ENVIRONMENTAL SENSITIVITY
INDEX BILL

Mr. PETERS. Mr. President, as we head into the month of August, many Americans are planning to spend time along our beautiful coasts. Our country is fortunate to have such a wide variety of natural resources along the Gulf of Mexico, Alaska, Hawaii, and the east and west coasts. However, I am partial to America's best coast: The 4,500 miles of U.S. coastline along the Great Lakes.

Our coastal resources make it possible to move cargo and goods around the world. They provide opportunities for outdoor recreation like fishing and boating and trips to the beach. Our coasts are not only beautiful, providing some of the most scenic vistas and picturesque landscapes our country has to offer; these ecosystems also provide many tangible benefits. They serve as flooding buffers, critical habitats for fish and wildlife, and locations for ports and other marine infrastructure.

In the Great Lakes, our freshwater coastline contains one-fifth of the entire world's fresh water and provides drinking water for over 40 million people. We must be stewards of these areas so that future generations can also benefit from them. In order to do so, we must properly document and keep track of this precious resource.

That is why I partnered with Senator YOUNG to introduce the bipartisan Great Lakes Environmental Sensitivity Index Act of 2017 to require NOAA to update environmental sensitivity index maps and map products. The bill passed unanimously out of the Commerce Committee this morning by a voice vote and now heads to the full Senate floor for consideration.

Environmental sensitive index—or ESI—maps provide an inventory of our valuable natural and human-use resources along our coasts. These maps chronicle sensitive ecosystems and the presence of various species as they migrate through regions and habitats for threatened and endangered species. They also document where we can access coastal resources from beaches and parks to docks, ferries, and boat ramps.

We must maintain an up-to-date inventory of these precious coastal resources so that we know exactly where we need to focus our response efforts in a worst-case scenario of a harmful oil or chemical spill. Accurate documentation of these resources and their vulnerabilities is critical to both deploying the right response effort when a spill or accident occurs and assessing the damage and restoration efforts needed after the fact.

In places like the Straits of Mackinac, where a 64-year-old oil pipeline sits at the bottom of the lake bed, it should be our top priority to have a current inventory of what shoreline resources could be impacted by a pipeline leak. Models have shown that a pipeline spill in the Straits of Mackinac could likely result in oil reaching the shores of Mackinac Island within hours, which would be an absolute catastrophe for Michigan's top tourist attraction.

ESI maps don't just help with oilspill response; they can also be used for coastal development activities, and they even have significant research applications. They provide a clear reference point prior to natural disasters or major storms that may damage, destroy, or significantly alter resources along our coasts. Decision makers at the local and State level may use them for restoration efforts or to make informed decisions about how to balance all of the various uses in that coastal zone.

ESI maps need regular updates in order for them to be truly effective. These updates are happening now for other areas of the country. Stretches of the west coast, along the Gulf of Mexico, and along the east coast have all received updates over the last 5 years.

One region is continually absent from these updates: my home region of the Great Lakes. In fact, the most recent updates for some of the Great Lakes were completed over 20 years ago, but Lake Erie and parts of Lake Michigan haven't been updated for over 30 years. This bill gives the proper direction and resources to make sure these long overdue updates move forward.

Supporters of the bill so far include the Great Lakes Charter Boat Association, the Coastal States Organization, the Great Lakes Commission, the Alliance for the Great Lakes, the National Wildlife Federation, the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, and the group For Love of Water. With nearly 3,300 miles of coastline in Michigan, the second-most coastline of any State in the Nation, we need to update Great Lakes environmental sensitivity index products as soon as we can.

Modernizing these maps will provide a better picture of what resources could be at risk in the event of a disaster and will be an important tool to help us keep our Great Lakes safe and clean for future generations.

I look forward to working with Senator YOUNG and the rest of my colleagues in the Senate to move this bill forward and make sure that we have the tools we need to make the best decisions for the Great Lakes, no matter the challenges and opportunities facing us.

Thank you.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, today the Senate will vote on the confirmation of Marvin Kaplan to be a member of the National Labor Relations Board, NLRB. I am glad that we are moving this nomination because the National Labor Relations Board needs to function as intended.

The board hasn't been full in nearly 2 years. I am certainly not the only one of us who thinks a full Board is important. One Democratic senator said at a hearing on May 16, 2013: "I strongly support a fully functioning NLRB with five members. I think confirming the entire slate will ensure that the NLRB is working for American workers and American employers."

Another said at the same hearing: "What we don't need now—the last thing we need here in Washington or across the country—is more rancor, more division, more ideology, at a time we need this Board fully functioning. We need five people to get confirmed here. Any Senator who is standing in the way of getting five people confirmed and having a functioning Board has a lot of explaining to do . . ."

Then-Chairman Harkin said in September 2014: "Keeping the NLRB fully staffed and able to do its work will send a strong message to the American people that yes, Washington can work, and our government can function."

The National Labor Relations Board has five members with 5-year, staggered terms, and a general counsel with a 4-year term. There is no statutory requirement regarding party affiliation, but the tradition has been for the President to appoint members on a 3-2 ratio favoring the administration, with nominations for the two minority seats recommended by the Senate minority leader.

While we may often disagree with the opinions of the nominees for the other party's seats—many of us have ensured they had an up or down vote. For example, since 2013, I have voted for cloture for two board members and the current general counsel who I then voted against confirming.

Marvin Kaplan has been nominated for a position that has sat vacant for 23 months since President Obama declined to nominate a Republican for the then-minority seat. My hope is that this nominee will help restore some balance to the labor board.

After years of playing the role of advocate, the Board should be restored to the role of neutral umpire. Board partisanship didn't start under President Obama, but it became worse under him. When the Board is too partisan, it creates instability in our Nation's workplaces and does not serve the intent of the law—which is stable labor relations and free flow of commerce.

For example, under President Obama, the Board took three harmful actions, including the joint employer decision—which threatened to destroy the American dream for owners of the Nation's 780,000 franchise locations; the ambush elections rule, which can force a union election before an employer and many employees have a chance to figure out what is going on; and the micro-union decision, which gave factions of employees within single stores a path to forming their own unions.

Nominee Marvin Kaplan is currently chief counsel for the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, where he has served since August 2015. From 2009 to 2015, Kaplan worked as counsel for the House Education and Workforce Committee and the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

Today some Senators have argued about Mr. Kaplan's experience practicing law. I want to note that Mr. Kaplan is in fact well-qualified under the National Labor Relations Act statute. He is an experienced lawyer. He earned his law degree at Washington University in St. Louis and is a member of the New York and New Jersey State bars. The years he has spent considering cases and writing opinions at the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, OSHRC, are an excellent preparation for the work of the National Labor Relations Board, NLRB. I will also point out that there have been a number of NLRB members confirmed with limited experience representing clients in labor law matters.

Mr. Kaplan has an admirable record of public service spanning a decade. He could have taken a number of different career paths, but he chose public service, and that should be praised. There is bipartisan respect for Mr. Kaplan.

At a July 2015 business meeting of the House Education and the Workforce Committee, Ranking Member Bobby Scott said this of Mr. Kaplan: "A lot is said about the working relationships around here and how bad they are from time to time. Staff can contribute to that. I just would like to say that Mr. Kaplan has not been part of that; he's been very cooperative even when you disagree. We have been able to work with my staff, have had good working relationships; a cooperative relationships. I want to add my two cents worth to your congratulations and God speed."

Mr. Kaplan was nominated to be a member of the NLRB on June 20, 2017. We held his hearing on July 13, and he completed all paperwork in accordance with the HELP Committee's rules, practices, and procedures. Our rules require that their HELP paperwork be submitted 5 days before their hearing. We received Mr. Kaplan's HELP paperwork and his Office of Government Ethics, OGE, paperwork on June 26, 17 days before his hearing. Mr. Kaplan also offered to meet with all HELP members. Mr. Kaplan met with 10 of them, including 5 Democrats. Following the hearing, Mr. Kaplan responded to 53 questions for the record, QFRs, or 81 if you include subquestions, and those responses were provided to Senators prior to the markup. The HELP Committee favorably reported out his nomination on July 19.

Recent comparisons show that this process was far from rushed. In comparison, under Chairman Harkin, the HELP Committee held hearings and markups on NLRB nominees with far less time for consideration. For former Board member Kent Hirozawa's seat, which Mr. William Emanuel has been nominated to fill, Mr. Hirozawa's hearing was held 7 days after his nomination, and his markup was held the next day. Former Board member Nancy Schiffer's hearing was held 7 days after her nomination. The HELP Committee also held a markup on her nomination the next day. Committee members were not able to get responses to any QFRs from Kent Hirozawa or Nancy Schiffer before being forced to vote on them.

I look forward to voting for this nominee. I hope the Senate will take up the nomination of William Emanuel, also for the NLRB, very soon, so we have a full board.

Mr. PETERS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRUZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VENEZUELA

Mr. CRUZ. Mr. President, I stand here today to speak about the devastation befalling Venezuela—the people raging in the streets against unfair elections, the dissidents being seized from their homes and detained by security forces, and those starving without food and water.

Venezuela—once one of the most richly resourced countries in Latin America—is being dismantled by Nicolas Maduro and his flailing Chavista regime. It is a human tragedy impacting more than 30 million people who are literally witnessing society collapse around them.

The numbers, sadly, speak for themselves. According to estimates from the International Monetary Fund, Venezuela's GDP contracted by almost 20 percent last year, with inflation reaching some 550 percent and unemployment spiking to more than 21 percent. The Pharmaceutical Federation of Venezuela estimates that the country suffers from an 85-percent shortage of medicine and a 90-percent deficit of medical supplies, including those needed to treat various types of cancer.

Men and women, young and old, are going hungry. Thanks to Maduro's destruction of the Venezuelan currency, flour, cooking oil, and other basic commodities have disappeared from store shelves. Students and teachers leave their classrooms for hours on end to stand in line, hoping to receive a loaf of bread as a week's meal. The most vulnerable are going on what are called Maduro diets—skipping meals and reducing their food consumption.

And Maduro's response? The would-be dictator is threatening to seize businesses that don't produce enough and has told Venezuelans that doing without makes them tougher. Thousands of Venezuelans have crossed borders in search of food and medicine, while Maduro and his cronies spin conspiracies and rail against phantom enemies on state media. The situation is so dire that the regime has begun "rewarding" some of its most loyal supporters with toilet paper.

Alongside the disintegration of Venezuela's economy is the specter of Maduro's growing dictatorship. We have just witnessed the sham election of a so-called constituent assembly, which Maduro intends to use to try to rewrite Venezuela's Constitution, to crush what is left of its free political institutions, and to consolidate his grip on power. His electoral commission lied about the turnout and downplayed the number of government workers whom the regime pressured to participate. While Maduro preached dialogue on television, his security forces were busy rounding up political opponents and murdering peaceful demonstrators.

This was not Maduro's first power grab. Earlier this year, his handpicked supreme court temporarily dissolved Venezuela's duly-elected National Assembly and stripped its members of immunity in what the head of Organization of American States called a "self-coup." The regime backtracked only after ferocious pressure and condemnation.

But this week's actions make plain Maduro's intent to complete the process begun under his mentor, Hugo Chavez, to transform Venezuela into a full socialistic dictatorship. We have seen that socialism doesn't work. We have seen the ravages of government control of the economy. The Venezuelan people are suffering, and when combined with dictatorship, it is a toxic mix.

Maduro's actions must not continue unchallenged. I support the Treasury Department's sanctions against senior Venezuelan officials, including Maduro, placing him in the ignominious company of Kim Jong Un and Robert Mugabe. We must keep the pressure on and continue to isolate and delegitimize Maduro's regime, for behind Maduro can be found China, with its billions in infrastructure investments, and Russia, with its growing control over Venezuela's energy sector, and Iran, whose Hezbollah proxy launders money with Maduro's acquiescence.

Yet Maduro is not without opposition. Brave men and women in the tens of thousands have taken to the streets to demand a better future for themselves and their families. Many dozens have been killed by the regime's security forces, and hundreds have been detained. These freedom-loving people represent the best of Venezuela and fearlessly follow in the footsteps of generations of dissidents against Socialist repression.

Just yesterday, Maduro's security forces seized two prominent opposition leaders—Leopoldo Lopez and Antonio Ledezma—for daring to criticize his regime on social media. These two men were carted away in the middle of the night, leaving their loved ones traumatized and frantic without information.

To Lilian and Mitzi, the wives of these two extraordinary men, I want to say that you are two of the strongest people I have ever been blessed to meet. You inspire me. Your husbands' fight inspires me and millions of Americans and people across the globe. I urge you to continue to stand and fight on behalf of your husbands and the many others who are held captive by the Chavista government.

I look forward to welcoming Leopoldo and Antonio back to freedom and, I hope, they will play leading roles leading a free Venezuela, a post-Maduro Venezuela.

Members of my own family have lived through this sort of oppression in Cuba, where a lawless government can raid your home without warning, arbitrarily detain your relatives and neighbors, and ensure that you hardly, if ever, see them again.

To Lilian and Mitzi, I will continue to raise my voice and to call for action—real action—to help Leopoldo, Antonio, and every other Venezuelan willing to stand and risk everything to live in a free and prosperous and democratic country. It is well past time to consign Chavismo to the dustbin of history.

To the millions of Venezuelans waiting in lines for food, clothes, and medicine, struggling with galloping inflation, fearful of Maduro's henchmen detaining their friends and families or gunning them down in the streets, and thinking themselves helpless in the face of their country's decay, you are not alone and should not be afraid.

America and our allies will help see you through this crisis and help you recover. Each new outrage from the Maduro regime only makes our solidarity with you grow. You are strong and Maduro is weak. You are Venezuela's future, and Maduro is its past. You will win, and Maduro will lose.

Venezuela is not the private preserve of a "busdriver turned authoritarian thug in a tracksuit," but instead Venezuela is a proud and free nation with a glorious past and an even greater future.

Through its words and deeds, the Maduro regime has abandoned what little legitimacy it might have had. When this regime expires, Venezuela will restore its place at the forefront of Latin America and become a good friend and partner to America once again.

We stand with the Venezuelan people as your friend against this socialist oppression, and we tell you that there are brighter days ahead, brighter days of economic cooperation, of energy growth, of abundance of prosperity, of throwing off the shackles of totalitarianism.

Estamos contigo Venezuela, tus mejores dias estan por venir.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TOOMEY).

The Senator from New Mexico.

PROTECT CHILDREN, FARMERS, AND FARMWORKERS FROM NERVE AGENT PESTICIDES ACT

Mr. UDALL. Mr. President, this May, a spray of pesticide from a nearby orchard drifted over to a field, exposing nearly 50 farmworkers in California. They soon became sick with nausea and vomiting. Several were hospitalized. The workers described it as a living nightmare.

The chemical they were exposed to is called chlorpyrifos, a neurotoxic pesticide related to sarin gas. It has been in use since it was developed by Dow Chemical over 50 years ago. Today, it is most often used on fruits and nuts, including strawberries, citrus, apples, and pecans from my home State of New Mexico. It is also used on grains and vegetables like broccoli and cauliflower.

A few years ago, Bonnie Wirtz also experienced the effects of chlorpyrifos. Bonnie is a farmer in Minnesota. She was exposed when spray drift came into her home through the air-conditioner. Her heart started racing, almost to the point of cardiac arrest, and she couldn't breathe. At the hospital, her nurse practitioner told her she wasn't surprised. She had seen others with similar reactions.

About 10 years ago, Claudia Angulo—a farmworker in California's San Joaquin Valley—was exposed to chlorpyrifos when she was pregnant. Claudia worked sorting oranges, apples, broccoli, and other produce treated with the chemical. When her son Isaac was born with a mental disability and attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, or ADHD, she suspected the pesticides she was exposed to.

A few years ago, European scientists tested some of Isaac's hair. He had traces of over 50 pesticides in his body, and the highest concentration was chlorpyrifos. It has long been known that exposure to chlorpyrifos can be deadly. After years of study, researchers in the United States and a number of other countries now believe there is a strong connection between chlorpyrifos exposure and mental disability, ADHD, and memory deficit in children. They believe the chemical damages children's developing brains, even if they are exposed before birth. Latino children, whose parents are exposed to the pesticide, and grow up near fields treated with it, are at the greatest risk.

Scientists believe the pesticide poses a threat even to children exposed to it from produce from the grocery store or through drinking water. The connection is so strong that scientists at the Environmental Protection Agency recommended that the EPA ban all uses of the pesticide in 2015. The agency had already negotiated a ban on household use 15 years ago.

This March, the EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt ignored his own scientists and the body of scientific evidence that chlorpyrifos is dangerous. Instead, he reversed course and refused to ban chlorpyrifos. That is why I rise to talk about this danger to our children.

When moms and dads feed fruits and vegetables to their children, they are trying to do the right thing. They shouldn't have to worry that these foods are laced with dangerous nerve agents. They shouldn't have to worry that the farmworkers who picked that produce or the farmers living near it were exposed.

I have been part of the fight to protect public health and the environment from toxic chemicals most of my life. I remember when Rachel Carson published "Silent Spring" in 1962. My father, Stewart Udall, was her champion when she was fiercely attacked by the chemical industry.

Just over a year ago, I led the bipartisan effort to reform the broken Toxic Substances Control Act. I spent several years working to reform how the EPA regulates chemicals, fighting to stand up a credible program that could be respected, that could restore confidence in the EPA on chemical safety.

I am very disappointed to have to do this, to introduce a bill on a related matter, pesticide regulation. Normally, I would argue that Congress should stay out of the business of regulating individual chemicals. That is why the EPA was created, to make thoughtful, science-based decisions on issues that affect public health and the economy.

In his first decision at the EPA, the administrator has shown his hand. He did not respect the science, not even his own scientific team, and not even when the science is overwhelmingly decisive. If the EPA and this administration will not act to protect the public, to protect children, then Congress must.

I have studied the case for banning chlorpyrifos. There is no question it needs to come off the market. In this situation, I believe Congress must step in to protect children's health. That is why I have introduced the Protect Children, Farmers, and Farmworkers from Nerve Agent Pesticides Act—to do what the EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt refuses to do: ban chlorpyrifos.

Let's look at the reasons for banning chlorpyrifos. There are three very good ones. There are three reasons, I believe, this bill is necessary. First, Administrator Pruitt is wrong. The science is established that chlorpyrifos is a threat to health in its current use. The EPA has studied and studied the toxicity of chlorpyrifos for over a decade. I have talked to the scientists who have been studying it for over 30 years.

In a December 2014 risk assessment, the EPA found chlorpyrifos caused unsafe drinking water contamination. Based on that assessment, the EPA formally proposed, in November 2015, to revoke the use of chlorpyrifos on food. As recently as December 2016, the EPA reaffirmed its determination.

The pesticide is intended to act on the nervous system of insects, but it can act on the human nervous system as well. It can cause immediate symptoms like nausea, vomiting, convulsions, respiratory paralysis—as Bonnie Wirtz and farmworkers in California experienced. In extreme cases, it can kill.

More worrisome, even low-level exposure of chlorpyrifos to developing fetuses in young children can interrupt the development processes of the nervous system. Exposure during gestation or childhood is linked with lower birth weight, slower motor development, and attention problems.

Long-lasting effects on child brain development from in utero exposure also include impaired perceptual reasoning and working memory and undermined intellectual development by age 7. Exposure to organophosphate pesticides like chlorpyrifos is associated with changes in children's cognitive, behavioral, and motor performance. In plain English, chlorpyrifos damages children's brains.

Second, chlorpyrifos was one of the most widely used household insecticides until the EPA raised concerns in 2000—17 years ago. Household use was phased out. That same year, the EPA discontinued use of chlorpyrifos on tomatoes altogether and restricted its uses on apples and grapes. Currently, chlorpyrifos is still widely used in agriculture, but its use is on the decline.

In 2012, EPA required no-spray buffers around schools, homes, play fields, daycare centers, hospitals, and other public places. Growers are already working to find alternatives.

The third reason is, scientists, doctors, advocates, I, and many of our colleagues were shocked when Administrator Pruitt changed course on chlorpyrifos in March, choosing to wait until 2022—5 years from now.

The American Academy of Pediatrics wrote a letter to Administrator Pruitt in June telling him that “EPA has no new evidence indicating that chlorpyrifos exposures are safe.” As a result, EPA has no basis to allow continued use of chlorpyrifos, and its insistence on doing so puts all children at risk.

The science hasn't changed since the EPA proposed to ban chlorpyrifos in 2015 and in 2016. Only the politics have.

The law should protect Americans from unsafe pesticides. Under the Food Quality Protection Act, the EPA Administrator “may establish or leave in effect a tolerance for a pesticide chemical residue in or on food only if the Administrator determines that the tolerance is safe.”

“‘Safe’ means . . . that there is a reasonable certainty that no harm will [come] from aggregate exposure.”

If the Administrator can't determine that a pesticide is safe, the Administrator must revoke or modify the tolerance.

In the case of chlorpyrifos, Administrator Pruitt did not determine the pesticide is safe with reasonable certainty, nor could he. Instead, he hid behind his claim that the issue requires years more study.

This issue has been the subject of litigation for many years. When the EPA asked the Federal court over-seeing the lawsuit for a mere 6-month extension for more study, the court gave a resounding no. It called the request “another variation on the theme of ‘partial reports, missed deadlines, and vague promises of future action’ that has been repeated for the last nine years.”

The EPA Administrator has now given himself a 5-year extension. He is failing to follow the Food Quality Protection Act, and he is tying up the Federal Government in more unnecessary and wasteful taxpayer-funded litigation. In the meantime, children, farmers, and farmworkers are at risk because the Administrator refuses to follow the law.

It doesn't stop there. Administrator Pruitt wants to dismantle protections for farmworkers. The EPA is proposing to delay two rules vital to protecting our Nation's farmworkers: The agricultural worker protection standard and the certificate of pesticide applicators rule. Farmworkers have one of the highest rates of chemical exposure among U.S. workers. They are regularly exposed to pesticides. Despite the urgent need to protect them and their families, they actually are less protected than other workers.

We don't know exactly why Administrator Pruitt is choosing to believe a chemical company over respected scientists at his own Agency and around the world, but we can follow the money and guess one reason. While the President and the Administrator ignore science and the law, they have not ignored Dow Chemical Company. Dow gave the President $1 million for his inauguration. Its CEO attended the signing ceremony when the President issued his Executive order requiring agencies to roll back what he called unnecessary regulations. The CEO even got the signing pen. And the CEO met with Administrator Pruitt shortly before the order not to ban one of Dow's big moneymakers.

Administrator Pruitt may choose to put aside science, public health, and environmental protection in favor of big chemical profits, but Congress should not. I urge all of my colleagues, especially those across the aisle, to stand with me and pass this protection for children, families, farmers, and farmworkers.

I thank my cosponsors and the cosponsors who are coming aboard every day: Senators BLUMENTHAL, BOOKER, DURBIN, GILLIBRAND, HARRIS, MARKEY, MERKLEY, and CARDIN.

There have been many public health and labor groups that have stood up on this issue—just to name some of them today: National Hispanic Medical Association, Learning Disabilities Association of America, Farmworker Justice, Project TENDR, United Farm Workers, Earthjustice, GreenLatinos, Labor Council for Latin American Advancement, LULAC, National Resources Defense Council, Environmental Working Group, Pesticide Action Network, Pineros y Campesinos Unidos del Noroeste, Mana, and others.

The pesticide registration information act is currently moving through Congress. This gives Congress the opportunity to address chlorpyrifos use and worker protection. This bill is a good start for those discussions.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARDNER). The Senator from Connecticut.

VETERANS LEGISLATION

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Mr. President, sometimes bipartisanship and comity do work. They have in the last 24 and 48 hours on two measures that are critically important to help our Nation's veterans have access to benefits and healthcare that they vitally need, that they deserve, and that they have earned. Those measures relate to appeals reform and to the Choice Program.

Last night the Senate passed by unanimous consent—which means without any objection—H.R. 2288, the Veterans Appeals Improvement and Modernization Act of 2017.

I am proud to have worked on this measure with the chairman of the VA Committee, Senator ISAKSON, when I was the ranking member of that committee during the last session. I thank him for his leadership, his vision, and his commitment to this very important cause.

This bipartisan measure now goes to the President. It provides a significant step toward securing benefits veterans have earned. Once these reforms are fully funded—and they should be—our Nation's veterans will no longer be bogged down by a cumbersome, time-consuming, irksome, and, in fact, aggravating process that denies them fair and full consideration when they appeal their claim's denial. This reform will begin—it is only a beginning—a better system involving transparency and communication for veterans and their families.

As ranking member of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, I heard testimony that the Department of Veterans Affairs' appeals process desperately needs updating and reform. We all in this body have heard from our constituents again and again and again about the antiquated delay and burdensome process that exists today. The average wait time on an appeal today is 5 years. Let me repeat that. The average wait time on an appeal is 5 years. Nearly half a million veterans are caught in a quagmire—often a quicksand—of repeated consideration, unable to claim benefits because of the VA's existing backlog.

Between fiscal year 2015 and fiscal year 2017, the number of pending appeals increased from about 380,000 to 470,000. That is an increase of more than 20 percent. The increase in those appeals was the "bad news" side of improvements in the process to consider the initial appeal. There were more appeals because more claims were disposed of, but that is no excuse for that kind of delay in appeals.

We worked with the VA and veterans groups to devise a new appeals system that allows veterans to choose an option that is right for them. The bill that passed yesterday will create three separate paths. They can choose among them for veterans seeking redress from a decision by the Veterans Benefits Administration. This reform is vitally important because it gives Secretary Shulkin the authority to test the new system before its full implementation.

I know it will take time to implement these changes. It should take less time than is predicted because the Veterans Administration owes it to our heroes—the men and women who have served and sacrificed for our Nation. My constituent caseworkers in Hartford have tried to assist many individual veterans with their claims, and these efforts must continue around the country in all of our offices even as these new reforms are implemented.

The second area where we joined together in a bipartisan way relates to the Choice Program. We have agreed to continue funding by providing $2.1 billion and authorizing 28 new leases for medical facilities across the country to improve access to the high-quality care provided at VA hospitals. Make no mistake, this action is a down payment, not the final word. I am going to continue to champion further reforms to make sure we improve VA healthcare and enhance access to VA medical facilities.

I am particularly concerned by recent findings made by the VA inspector general, Michael Missal, about a troubling lack of health information sharing between VA and non-VA providers relating to chronic pain treatment. To put it very simply and bluntly, the lack of information sharing makes opioid addiction far more likely than it should be, especially among veterans who seek care from private providers through the Choice system.

Connecticut was one of the first States in the country to have a statewide prescription drug monitoring program. I urged Secretary Shulkin at a hearing last year to make sure the VA prescription drug monitoring program exchanges information with the State system, which has data from private providers. The sharing of information is vital to prevent doctor shopping and excessive prescriptions. Without it, veterans potentially are susceptible to weaknesses and gaps that enable them to seek excessive prescriptions of opioid pain killer treatment that can lead to addiction and worse.

We cannot allow the Veterans Choice Program to exacerbate opioid addiction. We must do everything we can to stop the opioid epidemic that is ravaging our communities. As Senator MANCHIN of West Virginia and other colleagues have made clear, the VA must close the information gap on opioid prescriptions through improved opioid safety initiative guidelines and enhanced prescription drug monitoring programs. While we work in Congress to reform the Choice Program, I call on the VA to immediately take certain commonsense steps, none of them novel or original. They have been identified by the inspector general:

First, require all participating VA Purchased Care providers to receive and review evidence-based guidelines for prescribing opioids.

Second, implement a process to ensure all Purchased Care consults for non-VA care include a complete, up-to-date list of medications and medical history.

Third, require non-VA providers to submit opioid prescriptions directly to a VA pharmacy for dispensing and recording in the patient's VA electronic health record.

Fourth, ensure that if facility leaders determine that a non-VA provider's opioid prescribing practices conflict with the guidelines, immediate action is taken to ensure the safety of all veterans receiving care from that non-VA provider.

These are basic protections for our veterans. They are protections against overprescribing opioids or negligent misconduct—and worse—on the part of non-VA providers and others.

My hope is that we are beginning on a path to better information sharing between those prescription drug monitoring programs at the State level for non-VA providers and the VA facilities and providers who care for our veterans directly. That information sharing is not a luxury or convenience; it is a necessity.

We must help veterans of every era with their need for prompt appeals dispositions and effective healthcare that also protects them from opioid addiction. I am hopeful the Senate will quickly pass the Harry Walker Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act, which has been unanimously approved by the House, to make comprehensive improvements to the GI bill. I helped to draft this measure and lead it, and I am proud the House has approved it.

We must also help veterans of all eras suffering from toxic exposure and make sure we award a Congressional Gold Medal to the American Legion and make USERRA protections for our servicemembers meaningful and enforceable. These steps are part of an unfinished agenda that we owe our veterans. We cannot shirk that duty. We cannot postpone it. It is an obligation, not a convenience.

I look forward to moving forward with these efforts, as we have done with Choice and with the appeals reform, and to learning what we know already—that we can work together across the aisle when it comes to keeping faith with our veterans and making sure that no veteran of any era is left behind.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

TRIBUTE TO BILL REED

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Bill Reed, an Arkansan who is retiring after more than 34 years of dedicated service at Riceland Foods, the world's largest miller and marketer of rice.

Bill is a member of the company's senior management team whose responsibilities include government affairs, public relations, and the Riceland Sustainability Initiative. His interest in agriculture at a young age led him to pursue degrees in this field. Bill earned a bachelor's degree with honors in plant and soil science from the University of Tennessee and a master's degree in agricultural journalism from the University of Wisconsin.

In 1976, he moved to the Natural State to work as a State specialist with the University of Arkansas Cooperative Extension Service. He has continued his commitment not only to Arkansas but to Arkansas agriculture for more than 40 years.

Bill is recognized as one of the most passionate advocates on behalf of the Arkansas rice industry. Bill is constantly looking out for the rice farmers and businesses by promoting policies to grow the industry and pushing for expanding markets. His advocacy extended beyond the boundaries of agriculture. He was always ready to lend a hand to me or to my staff on any issue important to Arkansas.

He shares his passion for agriculture throughout the State, country, and the world as a representative of Riceland on numerous boards and trade associations, including the USA Rice Federation and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives. In addition, Bill serves as chairman of the Associated Industries of Arkansas, vice president for agriculture of the Arkansas State Council on Economic Education, and vice chairman of the board of visitors of Phillips Community College of the University of Arkansas.

He is a faithful servant of Jesus Christ and is leading his life as Christ calls us to do. In recent years, Bill began seminary school, and his retirement from Riceland will allow him to pursue the ministry full time and help people in need.

I appreciate Bill's friendship, and I am confident that he will excel in this role, just as he had done as an advocate for Arkansas rice. I wish him well in all of his future endeavors and look forward to the great work he will continue to do in helping the great State of Arkansas.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to legislative session and that following my remarks the Senate resume executive session as under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(b) ELEMENTS.—The framework required by subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) Developing standardized guidance and training for all participants in the grant programs described in subsection (a).

(2) Conduct of regular risk assessments.

(3) Conducting desk reviews and site visits.

(5) Such other oversight and monitoring tools as the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Management Agency considers necessary to mitigate and minimize fraud, waste, abuse, and mismanagement relating to the grant programs described in subsection (a).

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee-reported substitute amendment be considered and agreed to, the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HARRY W. COLMERY VETERANS EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE ACT OF 2017

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 3218, which was received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3218) to amend title 38, United States Code, to make certain improvements in the laws administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I am pleased that today the Senate is unanimously passing the Harry W. Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2017, known as the Forever GI Bill, which would make important improvements to the GI bill.

The bill removes time restrictions on using the GI bill, enabling future recipients to use benefits their entire lives as opposed to within the current 15-year timeline. It provides 100 percent GI bill eligibility to Purple Heart recipients. It also increases GI bill funding for Reservists, Guardsmen, dependents, surviving spouses, and surviving dependents.

While the bill includes many provisions I support, I also have ongoing concerns about institutions of higher education, especially for-profit colleges, which prey on veterans using GI bill benefits. I do not believe this bill goes far enough to provide the type of protections we owe to our servicemembers and the kind of institutional accountability that taxpayers deserve.

I am particularly concerned that the Forever GI Bill does not address the 90/10 loophole which incentivizes for-profit colleges to aggressively recruit and prey on veterans. Under current law, for-profit colleges are prohibited from receiving more than 90 percent of their revenue from Federal taxpayers, but due to a loophole in the law, such revenue does not count Department of Veterans Affairs GI bill or Department of Defense Tuition Assistance funding. This means that, by targeting veterans and servicemembers, for-profit colleges can actually receive 100 percent of their revenue directly from Federal taxpayers.

And many do. According to data released by the Department of Education in 2016, 193 institutions received more than 90 percent of their revenue from Federal taxpayers when Department of Education, Department of Veterans Affairs, and Department of Defense funds were counted together.

I have long called for this loophole to be corrected and for the percentage of Federal revenue to be returned to the original 85 percent. I will soon reintroduce legislation, the Protecting Students and Taxpayers, POST, Act, to address this issue.

While not addressed in the Forever GI Bill we are passing today, I look forward to working with my colleagues—including Senator CARPER who has authored another bill on this topic which I support—veterans service organizations, and others to consider this and other important accountability concerns.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 3218) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume executive session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Ms. WARREN. Mr. President, for months the American people have been gripped by the sideshow surrounding President Trump. It seems like every day another shoe drops on the Russia investigation, another White House staffer is fired, and President Trump tweets something that upends the government and causes our allies to move even further away from us.

Despite all of this commotion, all of the drama, and all of the disorganization, there is one thing that Trump and the Republicans in Congress have carried out since day one with complete precision. They have carried out a comprehensive all-out assault on American workers. Day by day, week by week, month by month, President Trump and congressional Republicans have acted to undermine the safety and economic security of hardworking Americans.

Just observe what they have done. On December 8, President Trump nominated Andrew Puzder, who was then CEO of fast food giants Hardee's and Carl's Jr., to lead the Department of Labor. That is right. His first major announcement affecting workers was to nominate a man who made his fortune on the backs of hard-working Americans to the top position in government charged with protecting American workers.

On February 1, just days after he was inaugurated, President Trump delayed a rule protecting workers from workplace exposure to a lethal cancer-causing substance called beryllium. On February 3, President Trump stood with big bank CEOs to announce an Executive order to make it easier for investment advisers to cheat hard-working Americans out of $17 billion a year in retirement savings. On March 1, the Trump administration delayed the rule protecting workers from lethal cancer-causing beryllium a second time. On March 6, congressional Republicans followed the directive of big business lobbyists and voted to make it easier for government contractors to steal wages from their employees. On March 16, President Trump released his budget blueprint, proposing to slash funding for the Labor Department, whose job is to stand for American workers, by 21 percent. On March 22, congressional Republicans voted to make it easier for employers to hide injuries and deaths that their workers suffer on the job. On March 24, the Trump administration delayed a rule that required mine operators to conduct safety inspections and tell miners about any hazardous conditions they discovered before the workers go into the mines. On March 30, congressional Republicans voted to block cities from offering retirement accounts to more than 2 million employees who don't have access to a retirement account at work. On April 4, President Trump delayed the rule preventing investment advisers from cheating hard-working Americans out of their retirement savings. This 60-day delay alone cost Americans an estimated $3.7 billion. On April 6, the Trump administration delayed a rule protecting construction workers from deadly silica poisonings. On May 3, Republicans in Congress voted to keep State governments from offering retirement accounts to employees who don't have access to accounts at work, yanking access away from 15 million Americans. On May 23, President Trump called for massive budget cuts to the Department of Labor, including the complete elimination of workers' safety training programs, programs for older workers, and funding for workers with disabilities. And on June 23, President Trump proposed exempting the construction and shipbuilding industries from the rule to protect workers from lethal cancer-causing beryllium, a move that could prove fatal to workers in these industries.

That is a pretty despicable record—despicable but consistent. Workers get slammed over and over. Today, Senator McCONNELL has brought us down to the floor to sock it to American workers one more time before he sends us home for summer recess. Today, we are voting on the nomination of Marvin Kaplan to serve on the National Labor Relations Board.

Pause here for just a second. The NLRB is probably the most important independent Federal agency that you have never heard of. They are responsible for protecting the legal rights of workers to come together and bargain with their bosses for higher wages and better working conditions.

Starting a union is not easy. Large employers fight union organizing campaigns tooth and nail. They hire armies of union-busting lawyers to run smear campaigns against the unions or to delay or kill organizing efforts.

That is why the NLRB is so very important—to serve as a referee that ensures employers play by the rules and workers get a chance to exercise their legal rights. It is the NLRB's job to stand up for workers—workers like the nearly 4,000 workers at the Nissan plant in Canton, MS, who, beginning tomorrow, will vote on whether to elect a union to represent them. That is what the NLRB has traditionally done—stood up for workers. Just last week, they filed a complaint against Nissan, alleging that the corporation has violated the law by running a union-busting drive, warning workers that they would lose wages and benefits if they took the step of joining a union.

It is also the NLRB's job to do the routine but important work of overseeing the elections. Just last month, the NLRB conducted a secret ballot election at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, MA, where nearly 300 service workers elected to be represented by SEIU 1199.

With a Republican Congress and President determined to deliver the knockout blow to the middle class, hard-working Americans need an NLRB that is on their side. President Trump's nominee to the NLRB, Marvin Kaplan, has no experience practicing labor law, but we actually know where he stands on protecting workers.

As a Republican House staffer, here is what he has done. He spent years actively working to strip workers of their right to organize under the law. He spent years working to overturn rulings by the NLRB that would protect workers' rights. He worked on the legislation to delay union elections by at least 35 days, giving employers and their armies of lawyers and lobbyists more time to fight off organizing efforts. He worked on legislation to make some workers ineligible to join unions at their workplaces. He even fought efforts to ensure that Americans get paid the overtime they deserve.

So after 8 months, the Republicans are about to go on vacation, but not before they jam the NLRB with a new anti-worker nominee. The biggest problem in Washington is that this place works great for giant employers and for giant corporations with armies of lawyers and lobbyists. But workers and their families just get ignored. President Trump doesn't seem to have any problem turning his back on millions of hard-working people, but that is not what we are here for.

I will be voting against Marvin Kaplan, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

UNITED STATES INTELLIGENCE PROFESSIONALS DAY

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of S. Res. 222 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 222) designating July 26, 2017, as "United States Intelligence Professionals Day."

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motions to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 222) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

(The resolution, with its preamble, is printed in the RECORD of July 19, 2017, under "Submitted Resolutions.")

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, for several years now I have regularly come to this floor to publicly acknowledge the contributions made by our great Federal employees. This is a tradition I inherited from one of our former colleagues, Senator Ted Kaufman of Delaware. Senator Kaufman, who had been a longtime staffer himself before he served as a Senator, would come to this floor on a regular basis to acknowledge and celebrate the tireless work and occasional heroics performed by many of our Federal employees. When Senator Kaufmann left this body, I gladly picked up that mantle and since then have come to the floor to draw attention to the extraordinary contributions of many of our Federal workers.

Over the past few years, this recognition has included a Social Security executive who eliminated a claims backlog to more quickly meet the urgent needs of thousands of Social Security recipients with grave terminal illnesses. We have also celebrated the work of a Department of Homeland Security official who saved taxpayers $750 million by streamlining her agency's procurement processes, and we proudly highlighted the work of a group of engineers at NASA Langley Research Center in Virginia, who, in 2010, designed a capsule that proved to be crucial in saving the lives of 33 Chilean miners who were trapped underground.

Too often, our Federal workers are disrespected and demeaned by those who would attempt to use them as scapegoats for all that is allegedly wrong here in Washington. In reality, thousands of our Nation's dedicated civil servants work tirelessly every day to make our government work for and by the people.

Today, I wish to focus for a moment on one such group of outstanding Federal employees—those who work across our Nation's intelligence agencies to keep our Nation safe. Most of these professionals work in anonymity. Many risk their lives far away from the limelight. That is how it should be, for they are sworn to secrecy, even from their families and loved ones.

Over the last decade and a half, our intelligence professionals have increasingly been deployed overseas into war zones and other high-threat environments. Regrettably, some have made the highest sacrifice—laying down their lives for their country.

For their service, the risks they take and the sacrifices they make every day and because they do not hear this nearly enough, let me say “thank you” to the intelligence community.

As a Senator from the Commonwealth of Virginia, I am proud to represent thousands of current and former members of the intelligence community who live, work, or retire in our great State. I am also proud to represent these individuals in my current capacity as vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

My colleagues and I on the committee have again submitted a resolution that marks July 26 as “United States Intelligence Professionals Day.” It was on that day 70 years ago that President Truman signed the National Security Act of 1947, which laid the foundation for today's U.S. intelligence community. It was earlier in my statement that we passed that resolution. In recent years, our committee has had success, as we try to protect our intelligence community, with greater intelligence sharing and interoperability and because of investments in people and systems.

Many challenges remain—from the constant barrage of leaks to the security of the supply chain, to outdated processes for security clearances. I hope that this year's intelligence authorization bill will begin to address some of these issues.

Yet today it is the people in the intelligence community whom I want to acknowledge—their professionalism, their dedication to duty and country, their silent service, their sacrifices.

The men and women of the Nation's intelligence agencies deserve our respect and our thanks. They do not deserve to be belittled, disrespected, or threatened, and certainly not from their Commander in Chief.

To the men and women of the intelligence community—these great Federal employees—I conclude with this: We, simply, do not say it enough, but thank you for your service. Thank you for your dedication, and thank you for the great work you do—often unheralded.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. RUBIO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RACE FOR CHILDREN ACT

Mr. RUBIO. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to voice my support for the FDA Reauthorization Act. Within this legislation is a very important measure that will support the development of innovative and promising cancer drugs—the RACE for Children Act, which is a law that I introduced with Senator MICHAEL BENNET of the State of Colorado.

RACE for Children is sorely needed, as it would close a loophole that exists in current Federal law and prompt companies—pharmaceutical companies—to examine the safety and the efficacy of powerful cancer drugs and how they work on children. This, in turn, will provide doctors with the necessary information to properly treat children battling cancer.

Pediatric cancer is a leading cause of death by disease among children. A startling statistic: One in every 285 children is diagnosed with cancer before the age of 20. While the good news is that researchers are continuing to make significant advances to treat and cure cancer for adults, the progress to develop safe drugs for pediatric cancer sadly lags far behind.

One of the problems is that current law, the way it is today, directs pharmaceutical companies to study the safety and the efficacy of adult drugs on children. So if you develop a drug on diabetes or heart disease or anything for adults, it also requires you to do some of that on children because you want to make sure that it works on both populations and you don't want to keep a drug out of the market for children that could work for them. Of course, this requirement is only in place if the FDA believes that there is a pertinent need—in essence, a condition that children suffer from. There are some conditions that are unique to adults; there are few, if any, pediatric populations who have that disease, so maybe they would decide it wasn't pertinent to require it.

However, this provision in the law specifically exempts cancer drugs. In essence, it says to a pharmaceutical company: If you are going to study the safety and the efficacy of a drug on adults, if there is a pertinent need, if there is a real population out there that suffers from the same condition in children, you have to test it on children, as well, except if it is a cancer drug. One of the reasons that exemption is in there is because technology—medical technology at the time that law was put in place—didn't allow researchers to target the genetic structure of cancer. In essence, at the time, it didn't allow them to say: We can go in and find the genetic markers of a specific cancer and test against it. That is why it didn't have that requirement.

Now, however, we do have that capability. Today, the technology exists to pinpoint the similarities in adult and childhood cancer genomes. So the technology has now reached a point where you can treat the specific genome of a cancer whether it is in an adult or in a child. That is how far the technology has advanced, but the law has not been updated to keep up with it. The result is that there are a lot of adult advances being made, and we don't know if they work on children because they haven't been forced to test it.

So the RACE for Children's Act, which is a law that Senator BENNET and I offered and is included in the FDA reauthorization, closes that loophole.

Let me say that getting to this point here on the floor was not easy. So I do need to take a moment to thank the chairman, Senator ALEXANDER of Tennessee, and obviously Senator BENNET, but also the pediatric cancer community, including organizations like the Live Like Bella Foundation in my hometown of Miami, Lambs for Life, the Alliance for Childhood Cancer, St. Jude's, St. Baldrick's, Nemours Children's Hospital, Arnold Palmer Hospital, the American Cancer Society, and so many others that came together to the table to address this important issue in a way that would not limit future innovations for cancer treatment. It has taken over a year and a half to reach this point, and I am grateful to all of them for their participation because I would not be standing here giving this speech without it.

Suffice it to say that, tragically, many of my colleagues in Congress, here in the Senate but also across the country, have been affected by cancer.

Whether you are fighting cancer yourself or it is your child, your sister, your brother, your cousin, your friend, I want to make one thing clear: You are not alone in your struggle.

I would venture to say that I do not know anyone who has not been impacted by pediatric cancer. I have it in my own family, and some have confronted it in theirs, in loved ones and children who went to school with your kids. In fact, Live Like Bella Foundation was founded for a young girl by the name of Bella from Miami. She was a classmate of my nephew in grade school, and she lost her battle with cancer. Her father has been a tireless advocate for this cause. He moved Heaven and Earth to try to reach a point where they could find a cure for her. That did not come in time. He has now made it the mission of his life to honor her life by continuing this work. So we have all been impacted in some way.

As I said, unfortunately, across this country this disease is a reality. I want to share some stories of a few of the children who have been impacted by cancer and who have impacted our office and helped us to make this a priority over the last year and a half.

The first is the story of a young boy named Jeremy. He is only 5 years old and has been in treatment for 4 of those 5 years. He has had more than 150 surgeries so far, and ultimately had to have his eyes removed because of cancer, which left him completely blind, obviously.

Then there is Tatum, who was diagnosed with a rapidly developing brain tumor just before she was supposed to start kindergarten. Her parents were told by the doctors that they should take her home and they should enjoy the little time they had with Tatum because they had no options to treat her.

There is Princeton, who was diagnosed with cancer when he was 5 years old. He is now 7. In those 2 years he has undergone 6 chemo cycles, a bone marrow transplant, 9 surgeries, 12 rounds of radiation, and 6 cycles of immunotherapy. Because of this intense and time-consuming treatment schedule, Princeton built friendships with others who were also in the hospital for treatment. Sadly, he has lost many of these friends.

Princeton's best friend was Trevor. Trevor passed away right before Princeton's birthday party. Princeton came to my office asking the Senate to do more for kids like them. Here is what 7-year-old Princeton said: "I don't want my friends to die, and I don't want me to die."

There is the story of Derek. He was a healthy, happy baby until he developed an aggressive form of cancer and it produced tumors all over his body. His body was literally taken over by tumors. At only 5 months of age, baby Derek lost his battle against cancer.

These are real stories. They are real, heartbreaking stories—stories of our neighbors, friends, and family and what they have endured.

But with the developments in medicine today, there is no reason these children shouldn't have a second chance. Yet the treatment options for children with cancer is much more limited than it is for adults, and some of the reasons why are the issues we are trying to address about this law here today.

Recent advancements in cancer treatment enable oncology drugs to specifically target the genetic structure of the cancer, and that makes it possible to transition certain adult cancer drugs for pediatric use. However, the basic information you need to do that—about dosing and safety—needs to be determined to guide the doctors responsible for treating these children. These treatments, these advances are providing new-found hope for cancer patients, but mostly only for adult cancer patients.

Fortunately, we have a chance and an opportunity to change this, and that is the goal of the RACE for Children Act.

The House recently passed the RACE for Children Act as part of the FDA user fee reauthorization bill that is before us here today. It is now our turn to do so and to send this important and potentially lifesaving legislation to the President for his signature.

In a place where we have had some heated debates over the last 7 years, since I have been here—6½, and more to come—sometimes it feels as though, perhaps, our service here doesn't make much of an impact. But from time to time, we have unique opportunities to vote on laws and legislation that slightly alter the arc of history and potentially help people. Standing here today, I can't tell you if there will be 1,000 children, 100,000 children, or 5 children who will benefit from a cancer treatment because of this new requirement in which these adult drugs will have to be tested on children. We don't know.

Standing here today, believing that we all walk on Earth and our days are numbered to the glory and grace of God, frankly, we don't know if one of our own children, God forbid or someone we deeply love or one of our children's classmates will be impacted by pediatric cancer. But we know that 1 in about 300 children will be. So the chances are that at some point, we will once again have someone we care deeply about impacted. We hope that when that moment comes, if it does, that there will be options for their parents and their doctors and that they will have the opportunity to use for them treatments that perhaps would not have been available, had this requirement not been in the law. That is why I hope and I urge my Senate colleagues to join me in supporting this initiative.

In fact, sometimes we give these speeches with a sense of mystery: If this passes; if it doesn't pass; there is no reason this isn't going to pass. We all expect the FDA reauthorization bill to pass. I imagine when people vote on this tomorrow, they will read the title of the bill, "FDA Fee Reauthorization." It sounds like taking care of the normal course of business—it is important in its own right, by the way—that this is just this bureaucratic exercise to reauthorize an expiring law. Embedded in that law is a very important law, one that I hope will lead to real life-changing innovation in a way that will impact lives, change and save the lives of children here in our country but ultimately in other parts of the world as well.

That is why I felt it was important to come to the Senate floor and, obviously, urge my colleagues to support this initiative but also to urge my colleagues to be proud of it.

We are about to go home, whether it is tomorrow or next week, and answer to our constituents for all the things we didn't do. There are some significant issues we have not confronted and solved for the country, but this is a significant issue. There aren't going to be a lot of articles written about it; there aren't going to be blaring headlines on the websites about it, mailers and campaign commercials. That doesn't mean it isn't important. We live in a society where oftentimes good news doesn't draw ratings, and good news doesn't drive eyeballs and clicks to a website. It doesn't make it unimportant. It doesn't make it insignificant.

This is significant. This is an opportunity. This is evidence that more often than perhaps people realize, fellow Americans of different points of view, representing diverse States and communities, who approach the political process with very different ideologies and aims, come together to make a difference. I am pleased that while there are many things we have not done, we will leave here tomorrow or next week knowing that at least we did one thing that will matter. It is an important thing because these children whom we are trying to help do not have the time to continue waiting for us to step up and take action.

I thank the Chair.

With that, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TILLIS). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VERMONT POLICE CHIEF'S RESPONSE TO PRESIDENT TRUMP

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, Brandon del Pozo proudly serves as the chief of police in Burlington, VT—Vermont's largest city. He arrived in Vermont 2 years ago, after serving for nearly two decades with the New York Police Department, where he rose through the ranks and learned hard lessons on the streets of such a large urban center. One needs only to sit with Chief del Pozo for a short while to understand his commitment to community service and to community.

So it comes as no surprise that Chief del Pozo grew alarmed when he heard President Trump recently tell a law enforcement gathering that police should not be "too nice" to those who are placed under arrest, seeming to suggest that police should go against the very policies that exist to protect against police misconduct. We cannot tolerate this kind of public comment and certainly not from the President of the United States. There is nothing the least bit humorous in any of this. In fact, President Trump's comments have undermined the efforts of police departments across our Nation to build trust within their communities at a time when that trust is most needed.

As a doctoral candidate holding three master's degrees, Chief del Pozo is well studied in the rules of engagement. He is also a talented writer. In an essay he submitted to CNN, Chief del Pozo responded directly to the President's comments, writing: "Policing requires dealing with the emotions cops are bound to feel when they witness the worst things one person can do to another. It is criminals who act on these emotions and attack other people. Restraint is what separates policing from vigilantism."

It is a viewpoint that is real, told through the eyes of an experienced street cop who works in reality, not reality TV. I ask unanimous consent that Chief del Pozo's full CNN essay be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From CNN, July 31, 2017]

TRUMP ON POLICE BRUTALITY: HAR HAR HAR

(By Brandon del Pozo)

When I was a New York Police Department cop in East Flatbush in 2000, I once rushed into an apartment building with fellow officers on a call of an assault. We found a boy in the hallway under attack. He was crying, and bleeding from stab wounds inflicted by his mother's boyfriend. The boy ran into my arms. Our sergeant confronted his attacker. He could have shot the man. Instead, he fought him into submission.

The boy had been stabbed because he had called the police while the man was attacking his mother. She was lying on the hallway stairs in a pool of blood. That her son had served as a distraction was probably the only reason she survived. "You saved our lives," the boy sobbed. He hugged me. His blood and tears wet my shirt.

As the suspect sat there in handcuffs waiting to be led away, I asked him why he had stabbed a child. "Boy gotta learn not to get in a man's business," he said. "So now he learned." A fury rose within me that nearly caused me to shake. "We should have shot you," I said.

But we didn't shoot him, nor did we lay a hand on him once he'd surrendered. Policing requires dealing with the emotions cops are bound to feel when they witness the worst things one person can do to another. It is criminals who act on these emotions and attack other people. Restraint is what separates policing from vigilantism.

Now we have a President who appears to want police to satisfy their primal urges. Either as a joke—as White House press secretary, Sarah Huckabee Sanders has now suggested—or as one of many true things that have been said in jest, President Donald Trump addressed a roomful of officers on Long Island on Friday and invited them to be "rough" with their suspects. He advised them to be free with their hands as they shoved arrestees into squad cars, to "not be too nice." His grin and his pause for an ovation erased any uncertainty about his message.

An elected official could only say what Trump said if he didn't understand policing. People who've gained this type of experience know the real possibility of a cop losing his temper, how hard we have to guard against it, and how much it would erode the trust we strive for between police and the people they serve.

It also seems like the President doesn't understand certain things about America. There has been enough confirmed police brutality here to send chills down the spine of a reasonable person watching the President and a crowd of cops joke and laugh about it. It's like laughing about the dire consequences of inadequate health care, or the opioid crisis.

It's also clear that President Trump has never had to fire or arrest a police officer: The cop sits there in front of you, replaying a moment in his mind, wishing he could take it back. He put on the uniform to be one of the good guys, and now he's on the opposite side of the table. He worries about supporting his family.

The way to get our officers to retirement safely, after a satisfying career, is to lead them through policing's cauldron. Excessive force could get them fired or arrested. Making light of it is a failure of leadership.

It was hard to watch a roomful of officers laugh and applaud in response to Trump's remarks. The only charitable explanation was that it indicated a sense of relief that the President understood how vicious some criminals are and how frustrating the work of bringing them to justice can be. The more likely explanation is that the President has a talent for bringing out the darker side of people, and this was another example of it.

What we witnessed will drive a deeper wedge between the police and the citizens whose mistrust of them has grown. It will cast doubt on legitimate uses of force.

What troubles me the most about the President's remarks, however, is the way they patronized police officers. He has never held a wounded child in his arms or had to decide whether to punch or shoot a man with a knife. He has never had to race to the scene of a police shooting and choke on his feelings as he hunts for a suspect with precision and restraint. His remarks failed to take police work and its hazards seriously.

When I later served as a precinct commander in the Bronx, a sergeant of mine was suspended because he stood there and did nothing as he watched an officer slam a handcuffed suspect's head into the street. A narcotics detective had been shot during a scuffle with a drug crew, the responding officers were blind with rage, and one exacted revenge. When a video surfaced, the emotions didn't convey. It just looked thuggish, like the cop was a criminal, too. By his own account, it seems the President would also have been inclined to stand there and do nothing. There are thousands of American police chiefs who know what these situations require. They want to protect their officers by leading them in the right direction. We don't need the President joking with them about giving in to their baser instincts.

TRIBUTE TO MARY ALICE MCKENZIE

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, it is a privilege for each of us to represent our constituents, and it is a great honor to be able to recognize the contributions many of them make to our communities at home. On this occasion, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Mary Alice McKenzie, a fixture in the Burlington, VT, community. Ms. McKenzie has served as the executive director of the Boys & Girls Club of Burlington since 2007, and during her tenure at the club, she has had a lasting impact on the lives of thousands of Vermont children. The community is grateful for her service.

Ms. McKenzie comes from a business and legal background—a nontraditional path to her current position that provided her with a unique set of skills. Mary Alice began her work at the Boys & Girls Club after serving as the chief executive officer of McKenzie Meats from 1985 to 2000. She then spent several years in the Vermont State college system as general counsel and served with the law firm Paul Frank & Collins before taking over at the Boys & Girls Club of Burlington in 2007.

At the Boys & Girls Club, Mary Alice has focused her efforts on education. When she realized how few club kids were going on to higher education, she enacted the Early Promise program, which targets children at a young age who may need additional academic services and then provides college scholarships to older youth. As of today, the scholarship fund has investments totaling $2.3 million from which to draw. In a short time, the club hopes to be able to help 60 Burlington children achieve their academic goals in high school and beyond.

The Boys & Girls Club plays an important role in the lives of more than 1,000 Burlington children. Aside from the academic services, the club also works to ensure a safe and stable community for its young members. When Ms. McKenzie began hearing reports of suspected drug use occurring in a park across the street from the club, she assembled a task force of local law enforcement officials, social workers, and policymakers to work towards a solution that would ensure the safety of club kids. The Boys & Girls Club expanded activities in the park and eventually took over use of an old storage building which is now an academic center.

Ms. McKenzie has also focused her efforts on children who have experienced trauma. Under her leadership, the club has started a program to help children deal with the issues that stem from trauma at a young age. Their goal is to create stability for children whose home lives may be turbulent due to issues such as homelessness and addiction. These are profoundly difficult situations for youth to handle, and the efforts of the staff at the Boys & Girls Club are surely appreciated.

These efforts have not gone unnoticed. Not only is Ms. McKenzie beloved by members of the club who tell stories of her kindness and generosity, but in 2014, Ms. McKenzie was granted Champlain College's Distinguished Citizen Award for her years of service to the community. This award was well deserved; there are few people who dedicate themselves to service in the way that Mary Alice McKenzie has.

During her tenure at the Boys & Girls Club of Burlington, Mary Alice McKenzie has repeatedly identified significant issues within the community and worked to find creative and lasting solutions. As she concludes her years of service with the club, it is clear that her efforts have paid off. The Boys & Girls Club has more teens moving on to college than ever before, and the club continues to expand, providing an invaluable space for Burlington's youth to spend their free time. I am very grateful for Mary Alice's tireless dedication, and I look forward to seeing what the future of her career brings. Marcelle and I think of her as a dear friend.

CBO ESTIMATE OF H.R. 2430

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, for the information of my colleagues, the Congressional Budget Office released its estimate of H.R. 2430, the FDA Reauthorization Act of 2017, in July 2017. Information related to this House-passed bill can be found at the Congressional Budget Office's website with the following link: <https://www.cbo.gov/system/files/115th-congress-2017-2018/costestimate/hr2430.pdf>

FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION USER FEE REAUTHORIZATION

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the commitment letters from the Secretary of Health and Human Services to the chairman of the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives regarding reauthorization of the Biosimilar User Fee Act, Generic Drug User Fee Act, Prescription Drug User Fee Act, and Medical Device User Fee Amendments.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH & HUMAN SERVICES, Washington, DC, January 4, 2017.

Hon. LAMAR ALEXANDER,
Chairman, Committee on Health, Education,
Labor and Pensions, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Generic Drug User Fee Amendments of 2012 (GDUFA) enacted as title III of the Food and Drug Administration Safety and Innovation Act [Pub. L. 112-144], expires at the end of Fiscal Year 2017. With this letter the Administration is providing our recommendations for the reauthorization of GDUFA for the Fiscal Years 2018-2022 (GDUFA II).

Under GDUFA, the revenues generated from fees paid by the generic pharmaceutical industry have been used to expedite the process for the review of generic drugs and to support and augment regulatory science and drug development. The expenditure of these funds is in accordance with the statute and provides resources to meet the performance goals and procedures that were developed by the Food and Drug Administration [FDA] in consultation with representatives of regulated industry. FDA estimates that the fees negotiated in GDUFA II will average approximately $493.6 million per year, adjusted annually for inflation.

Throughout this process, the FDA has solicited input and worked with various stakeholders, including representatives from consumer, patient, academic research, and health provider groups, and negotiated with the regulated industry, to develop reauthorization recommendations for GDUFA that would build upon and enhance the success of the program. In addition, we have complied with the statutory requirements to solicit public comments on our recommendations, and the summary of public comments is posted on the agency web site.

Our recommendations build upon the successes of existing programs and performance goals with step-wise improvements allowing FDA the resources to establish a generic drug review program that can keep up with the ever-expanding generic drug industry. The recommendations will bring all Abbreviated New Drug Applications (ANDAs) under a common review goals scheme which calls for faster review cycles of 10 months for standard ANDAs and eight months for priority ANDAs. Priority status will be reserved for drug shortages, first generics, sole source generics and other public health priorities. The negotiated recommendations provide that FDA will communicate deficiencies to industry throughout rather than at the end of a review cycle, increasing the chances for applicants to remedy deficiencies and obtain approval in fewer cycles. This will allow for improved predictability and transparency and enable industry advanced business planning.

The agreement also establishes a robust Pre-ANDA program for complex products. The program will include meetings with applicants, guidance development and regulatory science enhancements aimed at allowing applicants with complex products to submit more complete applications and FDA to be more prepared for such submissions.

FDA will also make improvements to the facility assessment program in order to increase predictability, transparency and safety. In addition, FDA has committed to accountability and reporting enhancements. FDA will conduct activities to evaluate the financial administration and resource allocations of the GDUFA II program to help identify areas to enhance operational and fiscal efficiency and transparency. FDA will also expand GDUFA program performance reporting to enable the regulated industry, patients and consumer groups, and other stakeholders to better gauge the generic drug program's performance.

Lastly, the agreement would revamp the user fee structure. GDUFA II will be funded at a level commensurate with the volume of ANDA submissions—the primary workload driver of the program. This will allow FDA the resources necessary to meet all of its commitments. In order to maintain a predictable fee base and to more closely align fee responsibility with program costs and fee-paying ability, FDA and industry have agreed to shift the burden more toward annual program fees. To address specific small business concerns, FDA and industry have proposed three distinct small business considerations. We anticipate that the proposed GDUFA II will increase public access to affordable, generic drug products.

The following five enclosures are provided for your consideration: The proposed GDUFA II statutory language; a redline of current law; the GDUFA Reauthorization Performance Goals and Procedures—Fiscal Years 2018 through 2022; the Background for the Proposed Changes for Reauthorization of GDUFA in Fiscal Years 2018 through 2022; and the summary of public comments.

Thank you for the opportunity to present our recommendations to reauthorize this vital program. We would be pleased to brief your staff on the details and want to work closely with Congress in order to reauthorize the program in a timely manner. The Office of Management and Budget has advised that the bill and the enclosed performance goals are in accord with the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

SYLVIA BURWELL,
Secretary.

GDUFA REAUTHORIZATION PERFORMANCE GOALS AND PROGRAM ENHANCEMENTS FISCAL YEARS 2018-2022

This document contains the performance goals and program enhancements for the Generic Drug User Fee Act (GDUFA) reauthorization for Fiscal Years (FYs) 2018-2022, known as GDUFA II. It is commonly referred to as the "goals letter" or "commitment letter". The goals letter represents the product of the Food and Drug Administration's (FDA's) discussions with the regulated industry and public stakeholders, as mandated by Congress. The performance goals and program enhancements specified in this letter apply to aspects of the generic drug review program that are important for facilitating timely access to quality, affordable generic medicines. FDA is committed to meeting the performance goals specified in this letter and to continuous improvement of its performance.

Unless otherwise stated, goals apply to cohorts of each fiscal year (FY).

F. GDUFA I Bridging

1. Continue to review and act on ANDAs and ANDA amendments, PASs and PAS amendments and controlled correspondence submitted prior to October 1, 2017 that have been assigned GDUFA I goal dates pursuant to the GDUFA I review metrics applicable to those submissions.

2. Review and act on 90% of ANDAs and ANDA amendments with Target Action Dates (TADs) by the goal date. The TAD for an ANDA or ANDA amendment becomes its GDUFA II goal date. (Attachment A shows how FDA, until September 30, 2017, assigned TADs to ANDA amendments not subject to GDUFA I review goals.)

3. Review and act on 90% of ANDAs and ANDA amendments pending FDA as of October 1, 2017 that were not subject to GDUFA I goal dates and either (a) were not previously assigned TADs or (b) were previously assigned TADs that came due prior to October 1, 2017 but remain pending in the same review cycle as of October 1, 2017, by GDUFA II ANDA and ANDA amendment goal dates that FDA will assign on October 1, 2017. No such goal date shall be later than July 31, 2018.

4. Review and act on amendments received on or after October 1, 2017, to any ANDAs submitted prior to October 1, 2017, pursuant to the amendment review goals set forth in (A)(3)–(5) of this section.

II. ORIGINAL ANDA REVIEW PROGRAM ENHANCEMENTS

A. ANDA Receipt

1. FDA will strive to determine whether to receive ANDAs within 60 days of the date of ANDA submission.

2. To enable FDA to rapidly determine whether to receive an ANDA pursuant to 21 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) 314.101, and with consideration of final agency guidances that address ANDA receipt determinations, FDA will issue a Manual of Policies and Procedures (MAPP) by October 1, 2017 setting forth procedures for filing reviewers on communication of minor technical deficiencies (e.g., document legibility); and on deficiencies potentially resolved with information in the ANDA at original submission, in order to provide applicants with an opportunity for resolution within 7 calendar days. If such a deficiency is resolved within 7 calendar days, that deficiency will not be a basis for a refuse-to-accept decision.

3. At the time of receipt, FDA will notify the applicant in the acceptance letter whether the ANDA or PAS is subject to priority or standard review

B. ANDA Review Transparency and Communications Enhancements

To promote transparency and communication between FDA and ANDA applicants, FDA will apply the review program enhancements below to the review of all ANDAs. The goal of these program enhancements is to improve predictability and transparency, promote the efficiency and effectiveness of the review process, minimize the number of review cycles necessary for approval, increase the overall rate of approval, and facilitate greater access to generic drug products.

1. FDA will issue the appropriate Information Request(s) (IR(s)) and/or Discipline Review Letter(s) (DRL(s)) from each review discipline as soon as the discipline has completed its review, with the first IR(s) and/or DRL(s) at about the mid-point of the review.

2. Following the IR and/or DRL at about the mid-point of the review, IRs and/or DRLs will, as appropriate, continue from each review discipline on a rolling basis.

3. Neither IRs nor DRLs stop the review clock or add to a GDUFA goal.

4. If an applicant is unable to completely respond within the time frame requested by FDA, including any extensions that may be granted by FDA, then FDA will generally issue a Complete Response Letter (CRL).

5. FDA will continue to issue IRs and/or DRLs late in the review cycle, until it is no longer feasible, within the current review cycle, for applicant to develop and FDA to review a complete response to the IR and/or DRL.

6. FDA should continue to work through the goal date if in FDA's judgment continued work would likely result in an imminent tentative approval that could prevent forfeiture of 180-day exclusivity or in an imminent approval.

7. FDA will strive to act prior to a goal date when the review is done and there are no outstanding issues.

8. If in the ordinary course a Regulatory Project Manager (RPM) learns that a major deficiency is likely forthcoming, the RPM will notify the Authorized Representative that a major deficiency is likely forthcoming. If the Authorized Representative raises concerns or seeks additional information regarding the forthcoming major deficiency, the RPM will encourage the Authorized Representative to review the forthcoming deficiency upon receiving it.

9. If in the ordinary course an RPM learns that FDA is likely to miss the goal date for the submission, the RPM will notify the Authorized Representative of the outstanding discipline(s), the general nature of the delay (when possible), and the estimated time-frame for receiving the response.

10. The Authorized Representative may periodically request a Review Status Update. In response to the Authorized Representative's request, the RPM will timely provide a Review Status Update.

11. FDA will include in the CRL its basis for classifying a responding amendment Major.

12. Applicants may opt for a post-CRL teleconference to seek clarification concerning deficiencies identified in a CRL. FDA will grant appropriate requests for teleconferences requested by applicants upon receiving first cycle major complete response letters. FDA will also grant appropriate requests for teleconferences requested by applicants upon receiving subsequent major complete response letters or minor complete response letters. FDA will provide a scheduled date for 90 percent of post-CRL teleconferences within 10 days of the request for a teleconference, and conduct 90 percent of such post-CRL teleconferences held on the FDA-proposed date, within 30 days of receipt of the written request.

C. Review Classification Changes During the Review Cycle

1. If during a review cycle of an ANDA or PAS, the review classification of the ANDA or PAS changes from Standard to Priority, FDA will notify the applicant within 14 days of the date of the change.

2. If a previous ANDA or ANDA amendment was subject to priority review, but a subsequent ANDA amendment is subject to standard review, FDA will notify applicant within 14 days of the date of receipt of the solicited amendment.

3. A request for a change may occur at any time during the review.

4. Once an ANDA or PAS submission is classified as being subject to priority review, the application will retain such priority review classification status until FDA takes an action on the submission.

5. FDA will include an explanation of the reasons for any denial of a review status reclassification request.

6. If an applicant requests a teleconference as part of its request to reclassify a major amendment or standard review status, FDA will schedule and conduct the teleconference and decide 90% of such reclassification requests within 30 days of the date of FDA's receipt of the request for a teleconference. This goal only applies when applicant accepts the first scheduled teleconference date offered by FDA.

D. ANDA Approval and Tentative Approval

If applicants submit and maintain ANDAs consistent with the statutory requirements for approval under 505(j); respond to IRs and DRLs completely and within the time frames requested by FDA and timely submit all required information under 21 CFR parts 314 and 210, including information concerning notice (21 CFR 314.95), litigation status (21 CFR 314.107), and commercial marketing (21 CFR 314.107); then FDA will strive to approve approvable ANDAs in the first review cycle; to approve potential first generics on the earliest lawful ANDA approval date, if known to FDA; and to tentatively approve first to file Paragraph IV ANDAs so as to avoid forfeiture of 180-day exclusivity.

E. Dispute Resolution

1. An applicant may pursue a request for reconsideration within the review discipline at the Division level or original signatory authority, as needed.

2. The Office of Generic Drugs (OGD) Office of Regulatory Operations Associate Director will track each request for Division level reconsideration through resolution.

3. Following resolution of a request for reconsideration, an applicant may pursue formal dispute resolution above the Division level, pursuant to procedures set forth in the September 2015 Guidance, Formal Dispute Resolution: Appeals Above the Division Level.

4. FDA will respond to appeals above the Division level within 30 calendar days of the Center for Drug Evaluation and Research's (CDER's) receipt of the written appeal pursuant to the applicable goal.

a. In FY 2018, the goal is 70 percent.

b. In FY 2019, the goal is 80 percent.

c. In FY 2020, 2021, and 2022 the goal is 90 percent.

5. CDER's Formal Dispute Resolution Project Manager (or designee) will track each formal appeal above the Division level through resolution

F. Other ANDA Review Program Aspirations

1. FDA aspires to continually improve the efficiency of the ANDA review program.

2. The absence of a GDUFA II commitment for a specific program function does not imply that the program function is not important. For example, other program functions include determinations whether listed drugs were voluntarily withdrawn from sale for reasons of safety or effectiveness and ANDA proprietary name reviews.

III. PRE-ANDA PROGRAM AND SUBSEQUENT MID-REVIEW-CYCLE MEETINGS FOR COMPLEX PRODUCTS

A. Rationale for Pre-ANDA Program, Guidance on Enhanced Pathway for Complex Products

The goal of the pre-ANDA program is to clarify regulatory expectations for prospective applicants early in product development, assist applicants to develop more complete submissions, promote a more efficient and effective ANDA review process, and reduce the number of review cycles required to obtain ANDA approval, particularly for Complex Products.

1. FDA will issue guidance describing an enhanced pathway for Complex Products, including policies and procedures for Product Development Meetings, pre-submission meetings, and mid-review cycle meetings. An ANDA applicant who was granted a Product Development Meeting has the option of a pre-submission meeting with FDA and also the option of a mid-review-cycle meeting with FDA, subject to policies and procedures to be set forth in the guidance.

B. Controlled Correspondence

1. FDA will review and respond to standard controlled correspondence and to complex controlled correspondence with meaningful responses that can more consistently inform drug development and/or regulatory decision making pursuant to the applicable metric goals.

C. Product-Specific Guidance

1. FDA will issue product-specific guidance identifying the methodology for developing drugs and generating evidence needed to support ANDA approval, for 90 percent of new chemical entity New Drug Applications that are approved on or after October 1, 2017, at least 2 years prior to the earliest lawful ANDA filing date.

2. This goal shall not apply to Complex Products. FDA will strive to issue guidance for a Complex Product as soon as scientific recommendations are available.

3. FDA will continue to develop and issue product-specific guidance based on requests from industry and public health priorities as set forth in the CDER Prioritization MAPP.

4. Industry may request that FDA develop product-specific guidance via email to genericdrugs@fda.hhs.gov.

D. Product Development Meetings

1. FDA will grant a prospective applicant a Product Development Meeting if, in FDA's judgment:

a. The requested Product Development Meeting concerns:

i. Development of a Complex Product for which FDA has not issued product-specific guidance or

ii. An alternative equivalence evaluation (i.e., change in study type, such as in vitro to clinical) for a Complex Product for which FDA has issued product-specific guidance,

b. The prospective applicant submits a complete meeting package, including a data package and specific proposals,

c. A controlled correspondence response would not adequately address the prospective applicant's questions, and

d. A Product Development Meeting would significantly improve ANDA review efficiency.

2. Dependent on available resources, FDA may grant a prospective applicant a Product Development Meeting concerning Complex Product development issues other than those described in Section III(D)(1)(a) above if, in FDA's judgment:

a. The prospective applicant submits a complete meeting package, including a data package and specific proposals,

b. A controlled correspondence response would not adequately address the prospective applicant's questions, and

c. A Product Development Meeting would significantly improve ANDA review efficiency.

3. FDA will grant or deny 90% of Product Development Meeting requests within the applicable goal.

a. In FYs 2018 and 2019, the goal is 30 days from receipt of the request.

b. In FYs 2020, 2021 and 2022, the goal is 14 days from receipt of the request.

4. FDA will conduct Product Development Meetings granted pursuant to the applicable goal.

a. In FY 2018, FDA will conduct 60 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

b. In FY2019, FDA will conduct 70 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

c. In FY2020, FDA will conduct 80 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

d. In FYs 2021 and 2022, FDA will conduct 90 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

5. FDA can meet the Product Development Meeting Goal by either conducting a meeting or providing a meaningful written response that will inform drug development and/or regulatory decision making to the prospective applicant, within the applicable goal date.

6. Unless FDA is providing a written response to satisfy the Product Development Meeting goal, FDA will provide preliminary written comments before each Product Development Meeting (and aspire to provide the written comments 5 calendar days before the meeting), and will provide meeting minutes within 30 calendar days following the meeting.

E. Pre-Submission Meetings

1. Prospective applicants may request and FDA will conduct pre-submission meetings, subject to Section III(A)(1). An applicant's decision not to request a pre-submission meeting will not prejudice the receipt or review of an ANDA.

2. FDA will grant or deny 90% of pre-submission meeting requests within the applicable goal.

a. In FYs 2018 and 2019, the goal is 30 days.

b. In FYs 2020, 2021, and 2022, the goal is 14 days.

3. If an applicant did not have a Product Development Meeting, FDA may grant a pre-submission meeting if in FDA's judgment the pre-submission meeting would improve review efficiency.

4. FDA will conduct pre-submission meetings granted pursuant to the applicable goal.

a. In FY 2018, FDA will conduct 60 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

b. In FY 2019, FDA will conduct 70 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

c. In FY 2020, FDA will conduct 80 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

d. In FYs 2021 and 2022, FDA will conduct 90 percent of such meetings within 120 days of granting them.

5. If appropriate to the purpose of the meeting, FDA will provide preliminary written comments 5 calendar days before each meeting, and meeting minutes within 30 calendar days of the meeting.

F. Mid-Review-Cycle Meetings for Complex Products

As set forth in guidance issued pursuant to Section III(A)(1), the Project Manager and other appropriate members of the FDA review team will call the applicant to provide the applicant with an update on the status of the review of their application. An agenda will be sent to the applicant prior to the mid-review-cycle meeting. The Project Manager will coordinate the specific date and time of the telephone call with the applicant.

G. Inactive Ingredient Database Enhancements

1. By October 1, 2020, FDA will complete enhancements to the Inactive Ingredient Database so users can perform electronic queries to obtain accurate Maximum Daily Intake and Maximum Daily Exposure information for each route of administration for which data is available.

2. FDA will update the Inactive Ingredient Database on an ongoing basis, and post quarterly notice of updates made. Such notices will include each change made and, for each change, the information replaced.

H. Regulatory Science Enhancements

FDA will conduct internal and external research to support fulfillment of submission review and pre-ANDA commitments set forth in Sections I and III, respectively.

1. Annually, FDA will conduct a public workshop to solicit input from industry and stakeholders for inclusion in an annual list of GDUFA II Regulatory Science initiatives. Interested parties may propose regulatory science initiatives via email to genericdrugs@fda.hhs.gov. After considering industry and stakeholder input, FDA will post the list on FDA's website.

2. If Industry forms a GDUFA II regulatory science working group, then upon request of the working group to the Director of the Office of Research and Standards in the Office of Generic Drugs, FDA will meet with the working group twice yearly to discuss current and emerging challenges and concerns. FDA will post minutes of these meetings on its website.

3. Annually, FDA will report on its website the extent to which GDUFA regulatory science-funded projects support the development of generic drug products, the generation of evidence needed to support efficient review and timely approval of ANDAs, and the evaluation of generic drug equivalence.

I. Safety Determination Letters

1. FDA will issue 90% of safety determination letters within 60 days of the date of submission of disclosure authorization.

J. Other Pre-ANDA Program Aspirations

1. FDA aspires to continually improve the effectiveness of its pre-ANDA activity.

2. The absence of a GDUFA II commitment for a specific program function does not imply that the program function is not important. For example, notwithstanding the absence of a GDUFA II commitment, FDA aspires to respond to Suitability Petitions in a more timely and predictable manner.

IV. DMF REVIEW PROGRAM ENHANCEMENTS

A. Communication of DMF Review Comments

1. FDA will ensure that DMF review comments submitted to the DMF holder are issued at least in parallel with the issuance of review comments relating to the DMF for the ANDA. This commitment applies to comments to the applicant issued in any ANDA CRL and comments issued in the first IR letter by the drug product review discipline.

B. Teleconferences to Clarify DMF First Cycle Review Deficiencies

1. FDA will grant and conduct teleconferences when requested to clarify deficiencies in first cycle DMF deficiency letters.

2. DMF holders must request such teleconferences in writing within 20 business days of issuance of the first cycle DMF deficiency letter, identifying specific issues to be addressed. FDA may initially provide a written response to the request for clarification, but if the DMF holder indicates that a teleconference is still desired, FDA will schedule the teleconference.

3. FDA will strive to grant such teleconferences within 30 days, giving priority to DMFs based on the priority of the referencing ANDA.

4. In lieu of a teleconference, the DMF holder may submit a request for an email exchange between FDA and the DMF holder. The request must identify specific issues to be addressed. After FDA responds to the request, the DMF holder may submit, and FDA will respond to, one follow up email to obtain additional clarification.

C. DMF First Adequate Letters

1. Once a DMF has undergone a full scientific review and has no open issues related to the review of the referencing ANDA, FDA will issue a First Adequate Letter.

D. DMF No Further Comment Letters

1. Once a DMF has undergone a complete review and the ANDA referencing the DMF has been approved or tentatively approved, FDA will issue a no further comment letter.

E. Guidance on Post-Approval Changes to Type II API DMFs

1. By October 1, 2018, FDA will issue a guidance regarding post-approval changes to a Type II API DMF and submission mechanisms for ANDA applicants who reference the Type II API DMF.

V. FACILITIES

A. Guidance on Risk-Based Site Selection Model—Issue a guidance explaining the Agency's risk-based site surveillance model for human pharmaceutical manufacturing establishments, including a discussion of the risk factors incorporated in the model and how the model is used to help determine which establishments are scheduled to receive a surveillance inspection each year.

B. Outreach to Foreign Regulators on Risk-Based Site Selection Model—Undertake outreach activities to better inform other pharmaceutical regulators of FDA's risk-based surveillance model.

C. Export Support and Education of Other Health Authorities—Support the export of safe and effective pharmaceutical products by the U.S.-based pharmaceutical industry, including but not limited to timely updates to FDA's Facility Compliance Status Database as described below, and educating other health authorities regarding FDA's surveillance inspection program and the meaning of inspection classifications.

D. Communications to Foreign Regulators—Upon receipt of a written or email request by an establishment physically located in the U.S. that has been included as part of a marketing application submitted to a foreign regulator, issue within 30 days of the date of receipt of the request a written communication to that foreign regulator conveying the current compliance status for the establishment.

E. Communication Regarding Inspections

1. By May 31, 2018, when FDA conducts an application-related inspection of a facility or site named in the ANDA, PAS, or associated Type II DMF and identifies outstanding issues that could prevent approval of an ANDA or PAS, the applicant will be notified that issues exist through an IR, DRL or CRL pursuant to Section II(B) above.

2. By October 1, 2018, FDA agrees to communicate to the facility owner final inspection classifications that do not negatively impact approvability of any pending application within 90 days of the end of the inspection. FDA agrees to ongoing periodic engagement with industry stakeholders to provide updates on agency activities and seek stakeholder feedback.

F. GDUFA II Facility Compliance Status Database—By January 1, 2019, FDA will update its existing, publicly available database that describes the compliance status of GDUFA self-ID facilities and sites. Compliance status is based on the most recent inspection or related FDA action for facilities involved in any manufacturing activities subject to Current Good Manufacturing Practices (CGMP) inspection and for sites involved in the conduct or analysis of bio-analytical or clinical bioequivalence/bio-availability studies conducted to support an ANDA. The database will be updated every 30 days and will reflect FDA's final assessment of the facility or site following an FDA inspection and review of the inspected entity's timely response to any documented observations. The public website containing the database will also include an explanation of terms used to describe the compliance status of facilities and sites.

VI. ENHANCED ACCOUNTABILITY AND REPORTING

FDA will build internal capacity to enable improved productivity and performance through regular assessment of progress towards GDUFA goals, consistent methodologies for and timely reporting of GDUFA metrics, and transparent and efficient administration; allocation and reporting of user fee resources.

A. Resource Management Planning and Modernized Time Reporting

FDA is committed to enhancing management of the GDUFA program in GDUFA II.

1. FDA will conduct activities to develop a resource management planning function and modernized time reporting approach in GDUFA II. FDA will staff a planning team responsible for these activities and for publishing a GDUFA program resource management planning and modernized time reporting implementation plan no later than fourth quarter FY 2018.

2. FDA will obtain through a contract with an independent third party an evaluation of options and recommendations for a new methodology to accurately assess changes in the resource needs of the human generic drug review program and how to monitor and report on those needs moving forward. The report will be published no later than the end of FY 2020 for public comment. Upon review of the report and comments, FDA will implement robust methodologies for assessing resource needs of the program and tracking resource utilization across the program elements.

B. Financial Transparency and Efficiency

FDA is committed to ensuring GDUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner. FDA will conduct activities to evaluate the financial administration of the GDUFA program to help identify areas to enhance operational and fiscal efficiency. FDA will also conduct activities to enhance transparency of how GDUFA program resources are used.

1. FDA will contract with an independent third party to evaluate and report on how the GDUFA program is resourced and how those resources are utilized, and recommend improvements to the process.

2. FDA will use the results of that evaluation to create an ongoing financial reporting mechanism to enhance the transparency of GDUFA program resource utilization.

3. FDA will publish a GDUFA 5-year financial plan no later than the 2nd quarter of FY 2018. FDA will publish updates to the 5-year plan no later than the 2nd quarter of each subsequent fiscal year.

4. FDA will convene a public meeting no later than the third quarter of each fiscal year starting in FY 2019 to discuss the GDUFA 5-year financial plan, along with the Agency's progress in implementing modernized time reporting and resource management planning.

VII. DEFINITIONS

A. Act on an application—means FDA will either issue a complete response letter, an approval, a tentative approval, or a refuse-to-accept action.

B. Ambiguity in the controlled correspondence response—means the controlled correspondence response or a critical portion of it, in FDA's judgment, merits further clarification.

C. Appropriate, with respect to a request for a post-CRL teleconference—means a complete and clear request for a teleconference where the applicant's goal is to gain an understanding of specific deficiencies and expectations for resolution.

D. Authorized Representative—means the authorized point of contact identified in applicant's letter of authorization or Form 356h. An Authorized Representative may designate an alternate to serve in the Authorized Representative's absence.

E. Change, with respect to facility information—means a change to information in the Pre-Submission Facilities Correspondence that causes FDA to re-evaluate its facility assessment (i.e., assess the impact of the change on its previous recommendation), such as a change in facility (as described by address, FDA Establishment Identification (FEI) number, or Data Universal Numbering System (DUNS) number), change in operation(s) performed by a facility, addition of a new facility, withdrawal of a facility used to generate data to meet application requirements or intended for commercial production, or a change in inspection readiness (i.e., a facility is no longer ready for inspection).

F. Complete response letter (CRL)—refers to a written communication to an applicant or DMF holder from FDA usually describing all of the deficiencies that the agency has identified in an abbreviated application (including pending amendments) or a DMF that must be satisfactorily addressed before the ANDA can be approved. Complete response letters will reflect a complete review which includes an application-related facilities assessment and will require a complete response from industry to restart the clock. Refer to 21 CFR 314.110 for additional details. When a citizen petition may impact the approvability of the ANDA, FDA will strive to address, where possible, valid issues raised in a relevant citizen petition in the complete response letter. If a citizen petition raises an issue that would delay only part of a complete response, a response that addresses all other issues will be considered a complete response.

G. Complete review—refers to a full division-level review from all relevant review disciplines, including inspections, and includes other matters relating to the ANDAs and associated DMFs as well as consults with other agency components.

H. Complex controlled correspondence—means:

1. Controlled correspondence involving evaluation of clinical content,
2. Bioequivalence protocols for Reference Listed Drugs with Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategies (REMS) Elements To Assure Safe Use (ETASU), or
3. Requested evaluations of alternative bioequivalence approaches within the same study type (e.g., pharmacokinetic, in vitro, clinical).

1. Products with complex active ingredients (e.g., peptides, polymeric compounds, complex mixtures of APIs, naturally sourced ingredients); complex formulations (e.g., liposomes, colloids); complex routes of delivery (e.g., locally acting drugs such as dermatological products and complex ophthalmological products and otic dosage forms that are formulated as suspensions, emulsions or gels) or complex dosage forms (e.g., transdermals, metered dose inhalers, extended release injectables)
2. Complex drug-device combination products (e.g., auto injectors, metered dose inhalers); and
3. Other products where complexity or uncertainty concerning the approval pathway or possible alternative approach would benefit from early scientific engagement.

J. Days—unless otherwise specified, means calendar days.

K. Discipline review letter (DRL)—means a letter used to convey preliminary thoughts on possible deficiencies found by a discipline reviewer and/or review team for its portion of the pending application at the conclusion of the discipline review.

L. Earliest lawful ANDA approval date—the first date on which no patent or exclusivity prevents full approval of an ANDA

M. First adequate letter—a communication from FDA to DMF holder indicating that the DMF has no open issues related to the review of the referencing ANDA. Issued only at the conclusion of the first DMF review cycle that determines the DMF does not have any open issues.

N. First generic—any received ANDA (1) that is a first-to-file ANDA eligible for 180-day exclusivity or for which there are no blocking patents or exclusivities and (2) for which there is no previously approved ANDA for the drug product.

O. Information Request (IR)—means a letter that is sent to an applicant during a review to request further information or clarification that is needed or would be helpful to allow completion of the discipline review.

P. Major amendment—means a major amendment as described in CDER's December 2001 Guidance for Industry: Major, Minor and Telephone Amendments to Abbreviated New Drug Applications.

Q. Mid-review-cycle meeting—after the last key discipline has issued its IR and/or DRL, for ANDAs that were the subject of prior Product Development Meetings or pre-submission meetings, CDER will schedule a teleconference meeting with the applicant to discuss current concerns with the application and next steps.

R. Minor amendment—means a minor amendment as described in CDER's December 2001 Guidance for Industry: Major, Minor and Telephone Amendments to Abbreviated New Drug Applications.

S. Complete and accurate Pre-Submission Facility Correspondence—lists all of the following:

1. All facilities involved in manufacturing processes and testing for the ANDA and corresponding Type II API DMF as required by 21 CFR 314.50(d)(1)(i) and (iii). For each manufacturing or testing facility, the correspondence includes facility name, operation(s) performed, facility contact name, address, FEI number (if a required registrant or one has been assigned), DUNS number, registration information (for required registrants), a confirmation that the facility is ready for inspection, a description of the manufacturing process, and a certification by the applicant that any Type II DMF has similarly complete and accurate facility information as required by 21 CFR 314.50(d)(1)(i), including complete facility information (i.e., facility name, operation, facility contact name, address, FEI number and DUNS number). Facility information that is included in a corresponding Type II DMF is not required to be duplicated in the Pre-Submission Facility Correspondence for the ANDA.

2. All sites or organizations involved in bioequivalence and clinical studies used to support the ANDA submission as described in 21 CFR 314.94(a)(7). This information is provided using a standardized electronic format and includes unique identifiers that are

W. Review Status Update—means a response from the RPM to the Authorized Representative to update the Authorized Representative concerning, at a minimum, the categorical status of relevant review disciplines with respect to the submission at that time. The RPM will advise the Authorized Representative that the update is preliminary only, based on the RPM's interpretation of the submission, and subject to change at any time.

X. Safety determination letter—a letter from FDA stating that a bioequivalence study protocol contains safety protections comparable to applicable REMS for the Reference Listed Drug.

Y. Standard—means submissions not affirmatively identified as eligible for expedited review pursuant to the CDER Prioritization MAPP.

Z. Standard controlled correspondence—means controlled correspondence

1. as described in CDER's September 2015 Guidance for Industry, Controlled Correspondence Related to Generic Drug Development, or

2. concerning post-approval submission requirements that are not covered by CDER post-approval changes guidance and are not specific to an ANDA.

AA. Target Action Date (TAD)—Under GDUFA I, FDA's aspirational deadline for action on a pre-GDUFA I Year 3 original ANDA and/or a complete response amendment or equivalent IR to an original ANDA. GDUFA I TADs become GDUFA II goal dates on enactment of GDUFA II.

BB. Teleconference—means a verbal communication by telephone, and not a written response, unless otherwise agreed to by the applicant.

CC. Unsolicited amendment—an amendment with information not requested by FDA except for those unsolicited amendments considered routine or administrative in nature that do not require scientific review (e.g., requests for final ANDA approval, patent amendments, and general correspondence).

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the commitment letter for the Medical Device User Fee Amendments of 2017.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MDUFA PERFORMANCE GOALS AND PROCEDURES, FISCAL YEARS 2018 THROUGH 2022

GENERAL

The performance goals and procedures agreed to by the Center for Devices and Radiological Health (CDRH) and the Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research (CBER) of the United States Food and Drug Administration ("FDA" or "the Agency") for the medical device user fee program in the Medical Device User Fee Amendments of 2017, are summarized below.

FDA and the industry are committed to protecting and promoting public health by providing timely access to safe and effective medical devices. Nothing in this letter precludes the Agency from protecting the public health by exercising its authority to provide a reasonable assurance of the safety and effectiveness of medical devices. Both FDA and the industry are committed to the spirit and intent of the goals described in this letter.

I. SHARED OUTCOME GOALS

The program and initiatives outlined in this document are predicated on significant interaction between the Agency and applicants. FDA and representatives of the industry agree that the process improvements outlined in this letter, when implemented by all parties as intended, should reduce the average Total Time to Decision for PMA applications and 510(k) submissions, provided that the total funding of the device review program adheres to the assumptions underlying this agreement. FDA and applicants share the responsibility for achieving this objective of reducing the average Total Time to Decision, while maintaining standards for safety and effectiveness. Success of this program will require the cooperation and dedicated efforts of FDA and applicants to reduce their respective portions of the total time to decision.

FDA will be reporting total time performance quarterly as described in Section VI. FDA and industry will participate in the independent assessment of progress toward this outcome, as described in Section V below. As appropriate, key findings and recommendations from this assessment will be implemented by FDA.

A. PMA

FDA will report on an annual basis the average Total Time to Decision as defined in Section VII.H for the three most recent closed receipt cohorts.

For Original PMA and Panel Track Supplement submissions received in Fiscal Years 2016 through 2018, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 320 calendar days.

For Original PMA and Panel Track Supplement submissions received in Fiscal Years 2017 through 2019, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 315 calendar days.

For Original PMA and Panel Track Supplement submissions received in Fiscal Years 2018 through 2020, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 310 calendar days.

For Original PMA and Panel Track Supplement submissions received in Fiscal Years 2019 through 2021, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 300 calendar days.

For Original PMA and Panel Track Supplement submissions received in Fiscal Years 2020 through 2022, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 290 calendar days.

B. 510(k)

FDA will report on an annual basis the average Total Time to Decision as defined in Section VII.H for the most recent closed receipt cohort.

For 510(k) submissions received beginning in Fiscal Year 2018, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 124 calendar days.

For 510(k) submissions received beginning in Fiscal Year 2019, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 120 calendar days.

For 510(k) submissions received beginning in Fiscal Year 2020, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 116 calendar days.

For 510(k) submissions received beginning in Fiscal Year 2021, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 112 calendar days.

For 510(k) submissions received beginning in Fiscal Year 2022, the average Total Time to Decision goal for FDA and industry is 108 calendar days.

II. REVIEW PERFORMANCE GOALS—FISCAL YEARS 2018 THROUGH 2022 AS APPLIED TO RECEIPT COHORTS

The overall objective of the review performance goals stated herein is to assure more timely access to safe and effective medical devices.

A. Pre-Submissions

FDA will continue the Pre-Submission program as described in the Guidance on "Requests for Feedback on Medical Device Submissions: The Pre-Submission Program and Meetings with FDA Staff" with process improvements and performance goals as noted in this section.

For all Pre-Submissions in which the applicant requests a meeting or teleconference, the applicant will provide a minimum of three proposed meeting dates in the initial submission.

Within 15 calendar days of receipt of a Pre-Submission, FDA will communicate with the applicant regarding whether the application has been accepted and, if applicable, regarding scheduling of the meeting or teleconference. Acceptance will be determined based on the definition of pre-submission in Section VII.F below and an acceptance checklist in published guidance. This communication consists of a fax, email, or other written communication that a) identifies the reviewer assigned to the submission, b) acknowledges acceptance/rejection of the submission, and c) if the submission included a request for a meeting or teleconference and is accepted, either confirms one of the applicant's requested meeting dates or provides two alternative dates prior to day 75 from receipt of accepted submission. A determination that the request does not qualify as a Pre-Submission will require the concurrence of the branch chief and the reason for this determination will be provided to the applicant in the above written communication. FDA intends to reach agreement with the applicant regarding a meeting date within 30 days from receipt of accepted submission. For all requests for meetings or teleconferences that do not have such a meeting or teleconference scheduled by 30 days from receipt of an accepted submission, an FDA manager will contact the applicant to resolve scheduling issues by the 40th day.

FDA will provide written feedback that addresses the issues raised in the pre-submission request within 70 calendar days of receipt date or five calendar days prior to a scheduled meeting, whichever comes sooner, for at least 1,530 Pre-Submissions received in FY 2018, at least 1,645 Pre-Submissions received in FY 2019, at least 1,765 Pre-Submissions received in FY 2020, at least 1,880 Pre-Submissions received in FY 2021, and at least 1,950 Pre-Submissions received in FY 2022. FDA will provide such timely written feedback for additional Pre-Submissions as resources permit, but not to the detriment of meeting the quantitative review timelines and statutory obligations. Written feedback will be provided to the applicant by email or fax and will include: written responses to the applicant's questions; FDA's suggestions for additional topics for the meeting or teleconference, if applicable; or, a combination of both. If all of the applicant's questions are addressed through written responses to the applicant's satisfaction, FDA and the applicant can agree that a meeting or teleconference is no longer necessary, and the written responses provided by email or fax will be considered the final written feedback to the Pre-Submission.

Meetings and teleconferences related to Pre-Submission will normally be limited to 1 hour unless the applicant justifies in writing the need for additional time. FDA may extend the time for such meetings and/or teleconferences.

Applicants will be responsible for developing draft minutes for a Pre-Submission meeting or teleconference, and provide the draft minutes to FDA within 15 calendar days of the meeting. At the beginning and end of each meeting, the applicant will affirmatively state that they will draft minutes and provide them to FDA within 15 calendar days. The minutes will summarize the meeting discussions and include agreements and any action items. FDA will provide any edits to the draft minutes to the applicant via email within a timely manner. These minutes will become final 15 calendar days after the applicant receives FDA's edits, unless the applicant indicates that there is a disagreement with how a significant issue or action item has been documented. In this case, within a timely manner, the applicant and FDA will conduct a teleconference to discuss that issue with FDA. At the conclusion of that teleconference, within 15 days FDA will finalize the minutes either to reflect the resolution of the issue or note that this issue remains a point of disagreement.

FDA intends that feedback the Agency provides in a Pre-Submission will not change, provided the information submitted in a future IDE or marketing application is consistent with that provided in the Pre-Submission and documented in the Pre-Submission, and that the data and other information in the future submission do not raise any important new issues materially affecting safety or effectiveness. The minutes described above will serve as the record of the Agency's Pre-Submission feedback. Modifications to FDA's feedback will be limited to situations in which FDA concludes that the feedback does not adequately address important new issues materially relevant to a determination of safety and/or effectiveness or substantial equivalence. Such a determination will be supported by the appropriate management concurrence consistent with applicable guidance and SOPs.

By October 1, 2018, the Agency will update the Guidance on "Requests for Feedback on Medical Device Submissions: The Pre-Submission Program and Meetings with FDA Staff" to include: additional information to assist applicants in determining the need for a Pre-Submission, an enhanced Pre-Submission acceptance checklist, examples of frequently asked Pre-Submission questions that lend themselves to productive Pre-Submission interactions, and edits to reflect the revised process outlined above. FDA will provide an opportunity for the public to comment on the updated guidance. No later than 12 months after the close of the public comment period, the Agency will issue a final guidance. FDA will implement this guidance once final.

B. Original Premarket Approval (PMA), Panel-Track Supplements, and Premarket Report Applications

The performance goals in this section apply to all Original Premarket Approval, Panel-Track Supplements, and Premarket Report Applications, including those that are accepted for priority review (previously referred to as expedited).

FDA will communicate with the applicant regarding whether the application has been accepted for filing review within 15 calendar days of receipt of the application. This communication consists of a fax, email, or other written communication that a) identifies the reviewer assigned to the submission, and b) acknowledges acceptance/rejection of the submission based upon the review of the submission against objective acceptance criteria outlined in a published guidance document and consistent with the statute and its implementing regulations.

If the application is not accepted for filing review, FDA will notify the applicant of those items necessary for the application to be considered accepted for filing review.

For those applications that are accepted for filing review, FDA will communicate the filing status within 45 calendar days of receipt of the application.

For those applications that are not filed, FDA will communicate to the applicant the specific reasons for rejection and the information necessary for filing.

If the application is filed, FDA will communicate with the applicant through a Substantive Interaction within 90 calendar days of the filing date of the application for 95% of submissions.

When FDA issues a major deficiency letter, that letter will be based upon a complete review of the application and will include all deficiencies. All deficiency letters will include a statement of the basis for the deficiencies (e.g., a specific reference to applicable section of a rule, final guidance, recognized standard unless the entire or most of document is applicable). In the instance when the deficiency cannot be traced in the manner above and relates to a scientific or regulatory issue pertinent to the determination, FDA will cite the specific scientific issue and the information to support its position. All deficiency letters will undergo supervisory review prior to issuance to ensure the deficiencies cited are relevant to a determination of safety and effectiveness. Any subsequent deficiencies will be limited to issues raised by the information provided by the applicant in its response, unless FDA concludes that the initial deficiencies identified do not adequately address important new issues materially relevant to a determination of safety or effectiveness. Such a determination will be supported by the appropriate management concurrence consistent with applicable guidance and SOPs. Issues related to post-approval studies, if applicable, and revisions to draft labeling will typically be addressed through interactive review once major deficiencies have been adequately addressed.

For submissions that do not require Advisory Committee input, FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 180 FDA Days for 90% of submissions.

For submissions that require Advisory Committee input, FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 320 FDA Days from receipt of the accepted submission for 90% of submissions. FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 60 days of the Advisory Committee recommendation, as resources permit, but not to the detriment of meeting the quantitative review timelines and statutory obligations. The Office Director shall review each request for Advisory Committee input for appropriateness and need for this input.

If in any one fiscal year, the number of submissions that require Advisory Committee input is less than 10, then it is acceptable to combine such submissions with the submissions for the following year(s) in order to form a cohort of 10 or more submissions, upon which the combined years' submissions will be subject to the performance goal. If the number of submissions that require Advisory Committee input is less than 10 for FY 2022, it is acceptable to combine such submissions in the prior year to form a cohort of 10 or more submissions; in such cases, FDA will be held to the FY2022 performance goal for the combined years' submissions.

To facilitate an efficient review prior to the Substantive Interaction, and to incentivize submission of a complete application, submission of an unsolicited major amendment prior to the Substantive Interaction extends the FDA Day review clock by the number of FDA Days that have elapsed. Submission of an unsolicited major amendment after the Substantive Interaction extends the FDA Day goal by the number of FDA Days equal to 75% of the difference between the filing date and the date of receipt of the amendment. Requests from FDA that a submission be made will not be considered unsolicited.

For all PMA submissions that do not reach a MDUFA decision by 20 days after the applicable FDA Day goal, FDA will provide written feedback to the applicant to be discussed in a meeting or teleconference, including all outstanding issues with the application preventing FDA from reaching a decision. The information provided will reflect appropriate management input and approval, and will include action items for FDA and/or the applicant, as appropriate, with an estimated date of completion for each party to complete their respective tasks. Issues should be resolved through interactive review. If all of the outstanding issues are adequately presented through written correspondence, FDA and the applicant can agree that a meeting or teleconference is not necessary.

For PMA submissions that receive a MDUFA decision of Approvable, FDA will issue a decision within 60 days of the sponsor's response to the Approvable letter, as resources permit, but not to the detriment of meeting the quantitative review timelines and statutory obligations.

In addition, information about submissions that miss the FDA Day goal will be provided as part of FDA's Performance Reports, as described in Section VI.

C. 180-Day PMA Supplements

FDA will communicate with the applicant through a Substantive Interaction within 90 calendar days of receipt of 95% of submissions.

FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 180 FDA Days for 95% of submissions.

D. Real-Time PMA Supplements

FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 90 FDA Days for 95% of submissions.

E. De Novo Submissions

FDA will issue draft and final guidance that includes a submission checklist to facilitate a more efficient and timely review process.

Deficiencies identified will be based upon a complete review of the submission and will include all deficiencies. All deficiency letters will include a statement of the basis for the deficiencies (e.g., a specific reference to applicable section of a rule, final guidance, recognized standard unless the entire or most of document is applicable). In the instance when the deficiency cannot be traced in the manner above and relates to a scientific or regulatory issue pertinent to the determination, FDA will cite the specific scientific issue and the information to support its position. All deficiency letters will undergo supervisory review prior to issuance to ensure the deficiencies cited are relevant to a classification determination. Any subsequent deficiencies will be limited to issues raised by the information provided by the applicant in its response, unless FDA concludes that the initial deficiencies identified do not adequately address important new issues materially relevant to a classification determination. Such a determination will be supported by the appropriate management concurrence consistent with applicable guidance and SOPs. Issues related to revisions to draft labeling will typically be addressed through interactive review once major deficiencies have been adequately addressed.

FDA will issue a MDUFA decision within 150 FDA days of receipt of the submission for: 50% of de novo requests received in FY 2018; 55% of de novo requests received in FY 2019; 60% of de novo requests received in FY 2020; 65% of de novo requests received in FY 2021 and 70% of de novo requests received in FY 2022. At Industry's request and as resources permit, but not to the detriment of meeting the quantitative review timelines, if a final decision has not been rendered within 180 FDA days, FDA will discuss with the applicant all outstanding issues with the submission preventing FDA from reaching a decision. This discussion will reflect appropriate management input and approval, and will include action items for FDA and/or the applicant, as appropriate, with an estimated date of completion for each party to complete their respective tasks.

F. 510(k) Submissions

FDA will communicate with the applicant regarding whether the submission has been accepted for review within 15 calendar days of receipt of the submission. For those submissions that are not accepted for review, FDA will notify the applicant of those items necessary for the submission to be considered accepted.

This communication includes a fax, email, or other written communication that a) identifies the reviewer assigned to the submission, and b) acknowledges acceptance/rejection of the submission based upon the review of the submission against objective acceptance criteria outlined in a published guidance document. This communication represents a preliminary review of the submission and is not indicative of deficiencies that may be identified later in the review cycle.

FDA will communicate with the applicant through a Substantive Interaction within 60 calendar days of receipt of the submission for 95% of submissions.

Deficiencies identified in a Substantive Interaction, such as a telephone/email hold or Additional Information Letter, will be based upon a complete review of the submission and will include all deficiencies. All deficiency letters will include a statement of the basis for the deficiencies (e.g., a specific reference to applicable section of a rule, final guidance, recognized standard unless the entire or most of document is applicable). In the instance when the deficiency cannot be traced in the manner above and relates to a scientific or regulatory issue pertinent to the determination, FDA will cite the specific scientific issue and the information to support its position. All deficiency letters will undergo supervisory review prior to issuance to ensure the deficiencies cited are relevant to a determination of substantial equivalence. Any subsequent deficiencies will be limited to issues raised by the information provided by the applicant in its response, unless FDA concludes that the initial deficiencies identified do not adequately address important new issues materially relevant to a determination of substantial equivalence. Such a determination will be supported by the appropriate management concurrence consistent with applicable guidance and SOPs.

FDA will issue a MDUFA decision for 95% of 510(k) submissions within 90 FDA Days. For all 510(k) submissions that do not reach a MDUFA decision within 100 FDA Days, FDA will provide written feedback to the applicant to be discussed in a meeting or teleconference, including all outstanding issues with the application preventing FDA from reaching a decision. The information provided will reflect appropriate management input and approval, and will include action items for FDA and/or the applicant, as appropriate, with an estimated date of completion for each party to complete their respective tasks. Issues should be resolved through interactive review. If all of the outstanding issues are adequately presented through written correspondence, FDA and the applicant can agree that a meeting or teleconference is not necessary.

In addition, information about submissions that miss the FDA Day goal will be provided as part of FDA's Performance Reports, as described in Section VI.

G. CLIA Waiver by Application

FDA will engage in a Substantive Interaction with the applicant within 90 days for 90% of the applications.

Industry will inform FDA that it plans to submit a dual submission (510(k) and CLIA Waiver application) during the Pre-Submission process. FDA will issue a decision for 90% of dual submission applications within 180 FDA days.

For "CLIA Waiver by application" submissions FDA will issue a MDUFA decision for 90% of the applications that do not require Advisory Committee input within 150 FDA days.

For "CLIA Waiver by application" submissions FDA will issue a MDUFA decision for 90% of the applications that require Advisory Committee input within 320 FDA days.

If in any one fiscal year, the number of submissions in any CLIA Waiver by Application category is less than 10, then it is acceptable to combine such submissions with the submissions for the following year(s) in order to form a cohort of 10 or more submissions, upon which the combined years' submissions will be subject to the performance goal.

For all CLIA waiver by application submissions and dual submissions that do not reach a decision by 20 days after the applicable FDA Day goal, FDA will provide written feedback to the applicant to be discussed in a meeting or teleconference, including all outstanding issues with the application preventing FDA from reaching a decision. The information provided will reflect appropriate management input and approval, and will include action items for FDA and/or the applicant, as appropriate, with an estimated date of completion for each party to complete their respective tasks. Issues should be resolved through interactive review. If all of the outstanding issues are adequately presented through written correspondence, FDA and the applicant can agree that a meeting or teleconference is not necessary.

In addition, information about submissions that miss the FDA Day goal will be provided as part of FDA's Performance Reports, as described in Section VI.

In addition, FDA will:

1. Hold CLIA Waiver Vendor Days, with the first to occur before the end of FY2018.
2. Permit discussion of both 510(k) and CLIA waiver process in Pre-Submissions.
3. Specifically permit discussion of appropriate reference/comparator for both 510(k) and CLIA waiver submissions in Pre-Submissions.
4. Provide a status report on completion and issuance of revisions to Section V of the Guidance on "Recommendations for CLIA Waiver Applications" to include appropriate use of comparable performance between a waived user and moderately complex laboratory user to demonstrate accuracy.

H. Original Biologics Licensing Applications (BLAs)

FDA will review and act on standard original BLA submissions within 10 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

FDA will review and act on priority original BLA submissions within 6 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

I. BLA Efficacy Supplements

FDA will review and act on standard BLA efficacy supplement submissions within 10 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

FDA will review and act on priority BLA efficacy supplement submissions within 6 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

J. Original BLA and BLA Efficacy Supplement Resubmissions

FDA will review and act on Class 1 original BLA and BLA efficacy supplement resubmissions within 2 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

FDA will review and act on Class 2 original BLA and BLA efficacy supplement resubmissions within 6 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

K. BLA Manufacturing Supplements Requiring Prior Approval

FDA will review and act on BLA manufacturing supplements requiring prior approval within 4 months of receipt for 90% of submissions.

III. INFRASTRUCTURE

A. Quality Management

The Agency will establish a dedicated Quality Management (QM) Unit that reports directly to the CDRH Director or Deputy Director and establish a quality management framework for the premarket submission process in CDRH. The Framework will include infrastructure, senior management responsibility, resource management, lifecycle management, and quality management system evaluation.

At least once per year, the Agency will discuss with industry the specific areas it intends to incorporate in its ongoing audit plan. FDA will identify, with industry input, areas to audit, which will include the effectiveness of CDRH's Corrective and Preventive Action (CAPA) process. FDA will expand the scope of its annual audits as it implements and builds up its auditing capability. As part of these ongoing audits, high-performing premarket review processes utilized in one division will be identified and shared accordingly with other divisions to improve efficiencies and effectiveness. At a minimum, FDA audits in the following areas will be completed by the end of FY 2020: Deficiency Letters and Pre-Submissions. Additional audits in the following areas will be completed by the end of FY 2022: Submission Issue Meetings, Interactive Review, Withdrawals and Special 510(k) conversions.

The effectiveness of the QM framework will be evaluated in Phase 2 of the Independent Assessment (see Section V).

B. Scientific and Regulatory Review Capacity

The Agency will apply user fee revenues to reduce the ratio of review staff to front line supervisors in the premarket review program to improve consistency. The Agency will also apply user fee revenues to enhance and supplement scientific review capacity by hiring device application reviewers as well as leveraging external experts needed to assist with the review of device applications.

To ensure such additional positions are filled by qualified experts, the Agency will apply user fee revenues to recruitment and hiring. The Agency will apply user fee revenues to retain high-performing supervisors in the premarket review program.

CDRH intends to enter into an Inter-Agency Agreement (IAA) with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to provide supplemental recruitment and staffing support throughout MDUFA IV to augment existing FDA Human Resources services.

C. IT Infrastructure for Submission Management

FDA will enhance IT infrastructure that will allow FDA to perform quality management audits and review consistency.

FDA will implement a new information management system that provides an industry dashboard that displays near real-time submission status.

FDA will develop electronic submission templates that will serve as guided submission preparation tools for industry to improve submission consistency and enhance efficiency in the review process. By FY 2020, the Agency will issue a draft guidance document on the use of the electronic submission templates. FDA will provide an opportunity for public comment on the guidance. No later than 12 months after the close of the public comment period, the Agency will issue a final guidance. FDA will implement the guidance once final. In addition, the Agency will update the Guidance “eCopy Program for Medical Device Submissions” to reflect the respective changes to the technical standards and specifications.

FDA will link pre-submissions with subsequent premarket submissions when identified by the applicant.

D. Training

FDA will continue to improve training for new and existing reviewers under this agreement. FDA will achieve Kirkpatrick Level 3 for curriculum-based premarket training through assessment of work performance behavior change and evaluate the effectiveness of the impact of curriculum-based premarket training activities on relevant premarket program metrics and goals (Kirkpatrick Level 4) by the end of FY 2020. FDA training efforts will also be closely coordinated with the Quality Management Unit described in item III.A above to provide more targeted and personalized training to staff.

E. Time Reporting

FDA will implement complete time reporting by the end of MDUFA IV such that data from time reporting can be used to conduct workload analysis and capacity planning.

F. Fee Setting, Fee Collections, and Workload

FDA will seek authority to eliminate the fifth-year offset provision and to maintain and use any and all fee collections, including collections over the statutory total revenue targets.

If the collections are in excess of the resources needed to meet performance goals given the workload, or in excess of inflation-adjusted statutory revenue targets, FDA and industry will work together to assess how best to utilize those resources to improve performance on submission types with performance goals and/or quality management programs, using, as input for the discussion: workload information, performance objectives and ongoing reported performance.

IV. PROCESS IMPROVEMENTS

A. Interactive Review

The Agency will continue to incorporate an interactive review process to provide for, and encourage, informal communication between FDA and applicants to facilitate timely completion of the review process based on accurate and complete information. Interactive review entails responsibilities for both FDA and applicants. As described in the guidance document, “Interactive Review for Medical Device Submissions: 510(k)s, Original PMAs, PMA Supplements, Original BLAs, and BLA Supplements,” both FDA and industry believe that an interactive review process for these types of premarket medical device submissions should help facilitate timely completion of the review based on accurate and complete information. Interactive review is intended to facilitate the efficient and timely review and evaluation by FDA of premarket submissions and is expected to support reductions in total time to decision. The interactive review process contemplates increased informal interaction between FDA and applicants, including the exchange of scientific and regulatory information.

B. Deficiency Letters

By October 1, 2017, the Agency will publish a level 2 update to the final guidance “Suggested Format for Developing and Responding to Deficiencies in Accordance with the Least Burdensome Provisions of FDAMA; Final Guidance for Industry and FDA Staff” to reflect the following:

All deficiency letters will include a statement of the basis for the deficiencies (e.g., a specific reference to applicable section of a rule, final guidance, recognized standard unless the entire or most of document is applicable). In the instance when the deficiency cannot be traced in the manner above and relates to a scientific or regulatory issue pertinent to the determination, FDA will cite the specific scientific issue and the information to support its position. All deficiency letters will undergo supervisory review prior to issuance to ensure the deficiencies cited are relevant to a marketing authorization decision (e.g., 510(k) clearance, PMA approval, and de novo classification). Any additional best practices identified by quality audits and/or the Independent Assessment will be incorporated in updates to the guidance, as appropriate.

FDA will train staff and managers on this process improvement and the updated guidance.

C. Device Accessories

FDA and Industry will explore additional mechanisms for a streamlined, resource minimal pathway to reclassify accessories previously classified as class III devices as a part of a PMA review if they meet the requirements of a low or moderate risk device.

D. Enhanced Use of Consensus Standards

FDA will establish an Accreditation Scheme for Conformity Assessment (ASCA) Program using FDA-recognized consensus standards. FDA will define the ‘scheme’ and oversee the Conformity Assessment (CA) model and ensure that there is appropriate interaction with parties that serve as Accrediting Bodies (ABs) to accredit test laboratories (TLs). When a device type using the ‘scheme’ is evaluated according to a specific recognized standard by an accredited TL, FDA intends to rely on the results from the accredited TL for the purpose of premarket review (i.e., generally accept a determination that a device conforms with the standard) without the need to address further questions related to standards conformance. Assuming that it meets established criteria as outlined in the ASCA program, a device company’s internal TL will be eligible to participate in the ASCA program. FDA will not review reports from accredited TLs except as part of a periodic quality audit or if FDA becomes aware of new information materially relevant to safety and/or effectiveness.

Specific actions that FDA will undertake include the following:

1. Conduct a Public Workshop by the end of FY 2018 to discuss objectives for the establishment of ABs and TLs. Discussion would include areas (specific FDA-recognized consensus standards) where the ASCA Program can be piloted to maximize initial impact of existing CA activities and potential new areas.

2. Hold educational sessions with stakeholders by the end of FY 2018 about the purpose of the ASCA Program

3. Develop and initiate the pilot of the ASCA program with stakeholder input by the end of FY 2020.

- a. FDA intends to pilot inclusion of recognized standards of public health significance where specific pass/fail criteria are part of the standard

4. Develop an internal IT system to track CA activities of the ASCA Program

5. Establish a process for accreditation of ABs and TLs. FDA will issue draft guidance by the end of FY 2019 and issue final guidance within 12 months post initiation of the pilot.

- a. In limited circumstances, the FDA may directly accredit third-party TLs. For example, FDA could directly accredit third party TLs, if FDA has not identified and recognized an AB within 2 years after establishing the tenets of the ASCA program.

6. Establish a process for reaccreditation and the suspension or withdrawal of accreditation of poor performing ABs and TLs. FDA will issue draft guidance by the end of FY 2019 and final guidance within 12 months post initiation of the pilot.

7. Establish a publicly-accessible website listing TLs accredited by ASCA and the FDA-recognized consensus standard(s) for which they are accredited

8. FDA, in consultation with stakeholders, will identify appropriate recognized consensus standards for consideration as part of the pilot as the specific focus for ASCA.

- a. By the end of FY 2022: FDA will have piloted, and provided a report on the viability of, an ASCA program which utilizes the schema identified in guidance to include utilization of 5 appropriate cross-cutting/horizontal and/or device-specific areas, at least one of which will be device-specific.

- b. Standards included as part of the ASCA Program will need to have well established endpoints/acceptance criteria built into the standard to allow effective tracking of TL competence.

FDA will provide an annual report on the progress of the ASCA program.

FDA will work with stakeholders for further input on programmatic improvements and/or consideration for expansion.

E. Third Party Review

The Agency will take the following actions to improve the Third Party Review program with a goal of eliminating routine re-review by FDA of Third Party reviews:

1. Strengthen the process for accreditation of Third Parties.

- a. Provide training for Third Parties seeking accreditation by FDA. This training shall include the opportunity for Third Parties to have access to redacted review memos and other information as appropriate.

- b. When FDA’s expectations for a particular device type change, FDA will have in place a process to convey this information to the Third Parties and to industry.

2. By the end of FY 2018, establish a plan for eliminating routine re-review by FDA of Third Party reviews and implement plan within 12 months.

3. Implement a program to audit reviews conducted by accredited Third Parties.

- a. Provide tailored re-training to accredited Third Parties based on the results of audits.

4. By the end of FY 2018, issue draft guidance outlining criteria for reaccreditation of 3rd Parties and the suspension or withdrawal of accreditation of a Third Party. FDA will issue final guidance within 12 months of the conclusion of the public comment period.

5. Publish performance of individual accredited Third Parties with at least five completed submissions on the web (e.g., rate of NSE, average number of holds, average time to SE).

6. Require the independent assessment of the Third Party Review Program to evaluate efficiency including the circumstances when FDA re-reviews were conducted; and to suggest process improvements.

The Agency will seek greater authority to tailor the program. Specifically, FDA intends to expand the scope of the program to some product codes that require clinical data and to remove product codes from eligibility when appropriate, such as if/when safety signals arise.

As resources permit, FDA will identify pilot device areas to be the specific focus of an effort where FDA would work with willing industry partners to ensure that information allowing for high quality Third Party reviews could be made available to provide a proof of concept in certain device areas and enable the development of a broader successful program.

F. Patient Engagement & the Science of Patient Input

The Agency will take the following actions to advance patient input and involvement in the regulatory process. Where appropriate, the Agency will leverage public private partnerships (PPPs) to advance these actions.

1. Develop clinical, statistical, and other scientific expertise and staff capacity to respond to submissions containing applicant-proposed use of publicly available and validated, voluntary patient preference information (PPI) or voluntary patient reported outcomes (PROs). These staff will provide submission review and early consultation/advice to industry during study planning.

2. By the end of FY 2020, hold one or more public meetings to discuss the topics below and publish the findings and next steps.

a. Discuss approaches for incorporating PPI and PRO as evidence in device submissions, as well as other ways of advancing patient engagement;

b. Discuss ways to use patient input to inform clinical study design and conduct, with a goal of reducing barriers to patient participation and facilitating recruitment and retention;

c. Public meetings should include specific examples and case histories for PPIs and PROs to ensure clarity and understanding by workshop attendees; and

d. Identify priority areas where decisions are preference-sensitive and PPI data can inform regulatory decision-making, in order to advance design and conduct of patient preference studies in high impact areas. Publish the priority areas in the Federal Register for public comment following the public meeting.

3. FDA will undertake several activities to improve the regulatory predictability and impact of PROs, including:

a. Clarify to device review divisions that use of PROs is voluntary and may be one potential way of demonstrating safety or effectiveness (or elements of either or both, such as in a composite endpoint). Consistent with least burdensome principles, applicants may use alternative approaches.

b. Modify the guidance to outline a flexible framework for PRO validation evidentiary thresholds. These thresholds may vary depending on the particular regulatory use of the PRO.

c. Work on developing a model for “bridging studies” to make efficient use of existing validated PROs which may be improved, or adapted to other subpopulations or other regulatory uses in a more streamlined and expeditious manner than creating novel PROs.

4. The existing dispute resolution process should be used in the event of disagreement between the applicant and the Agency on the need for PPI or PRO.

G. Emerging Diagnostics

FDA will work with industry to continue the pilot for emerging diagnostics started under MDUFA III.

H. Real World Evidence (RWE)

1. The Agency will use user fee revenue to support the National Evaluation System for health Technology (NEST) by providing funding for the NEST Coordinating Center and hiring FDA staff with expertise in the use of RWE. The NEST governing board will include no fewer than 4 representatives of the trade associations that participated in the MDUFA IV negotiations (AdvaMed, MDMA, MITA, and ACLA), with each association appointing an individual to serve. Industry representation on the NEST governing board will make up at least 25% of the governing board membership. The representative from each trade association may be part of the staff of the association or appointed from a member company. If any of the trade associations elects not to participate on the NEST governing board or for any additional seats allocated to Industry, the participating trade associations will determine how to fill any vacant Industry positions. The governing board also will include, but not be limited to, representation from patient organizations. By the end of FY2019, NEST will implement pilots for at least two product codes (and related product codes), one of which will cover devices approved through the PMA process and the other of which will cover devices cleared through the 510(k) process. The NEST Coordinating Center will seek ways in which to make NEST financially self-sustaining so as not to rely on MDUFA user fees in the long term unless FDA and Industry determine continued user fee support is warranted and provides a sufficient return on investment.

2. FDA will contract with an organization to serve as the NEST Coordinating Center to facilitate use of real world evidence to support premarket activities. The contract will specify actions the Coordinating Center will take to advance the use of RWE, including:

a. Establish a framework to fund pilot projects to determine the usability of RWE for:

i. Expanded indications for use

ii. New clearances/approvals

iii. Improved malfunction reporting

b. No later than October 1, 2020, the Coordinating Center will hold a public meeting to review and evaluate the progress and outcomes (as of the date of the public meeting) of the pilots described in (H)(1) above.

c. The pilots will take place over a period of three years, including data analysis and the Coordinating Center will issue a publicly available report of the results.

d. The pilots will include devices not currently subject to a registry.

e. At the conclusion of the pilots, an independent third-party will conduct an assessment to evaluate the strengths, limitations, and appropriate use of RWE for informing premarket decision-making for multiple device types.

f. If warranted based on the results of the pilot(s) described in (H)(1) above, FDA will revise its guidance on the use of RWE to reflect what has been learned from the pilots as to how RWE can be used to support:

i. Expanded indications for use; and

ii. New clearances/approvals.

If supported by the pilot(s) described in (H)(1) above, the guidance will include discussion of how devices not currently subject to a registry can benefit from RWE.

3. The Agency will establish criteria for streamlining MDR requirements.

a. For most, if not all, device procodes, FDA will permit manufacturers of such devices in those procodes to report malfunctions on a quarterly basis and in a summary MDR format. FDA will publish the list of eligible device procodes within 12 months of receiving a proposed list from Industry. The list will include, among other device procodes, Class II implantable and Class III devices, as appropriate, and will reflect FDA's consideration of Industry's proposed list.

b. FDA may determine that devices under a new procode in existence for less than 2 years are not eligible for reporting of malfunctions on a quarterly basis and in a summary format.

c. If a new type of malfunction occurs that the manufacturer has not previously reported to FDA, the manufacturer must submit an individual report. The manufacturer will notify FDA when the issue has been resolved, using current requirements per 21 C.F.R. 803, 806.

d. FDA will maintain on its website the list of eligible device procodes for which manufacturers are permitted to report malfunctions on a quarterly basis and in a summary MDR format.

e. FDA will establish a mechanism at the time it publishes the list of eligible devices under 3(a) that permits stakeholders to request device procodes be added to the list.

f. Nothing in this section precludes the Agency from requiring individual malfunction reports from a specific manufacturer and/or for a specific device if necessary to protect public health. In these situations, FDA will notify the manufacturer they are not eligible for quarterly summary MDR reporting and provide an explanation for that decision and the steps necessary to return to eligibility for quarterly summary MDR reporting.

4. FDA will not require postmarket surveillance studies (i.e., 522 Studies) for devices for which registries and/or other real world data (RWD) sources exist if FDA has access to the information/data in the RWD source and has determined that the information/data in the RWD source is sufficient to take the place of a postmarket surveillance study.

1. Digital Health

The Agency will build expertise and streamline and align FDA review processes with software lifecycles for Software as a Medical Device (SaMD) and software inside of medical devices (SiMD). Specifically, the Agency will:

1. Establish a central digital health unit within CDRH's Office of the Center Director to ensure proper coordination and consistency across the Agency. The Agency will not reorganize staff such that existing review staff would be reassigned to the central digital health unit, while retaining and not disrupting the existing digital health talent within the reviewing divisions who have established, long-term therapeutic and device expertise. The digital health unit will perform, at a minimum, the following tasks:

a. Develop software and digital health technical expertise (“Technical Experts”) to provide assistance for premarket submissions that include SaMD, SiMD, interoperable devices, or otherwise incorporate novel digital health technologies.

b. Utilize Technical Experts as appropriate or when requested by the manufacturer for submissions that include SaMD, SiMD, interoperable devices, or otherwise incorporate novel digital health technologies; and

c. Incorporate appropriate metrics for digital health improvements to monitor, track, analyze and report the results of digital health premarket review timelines.

2. Publish final guidance addressing when to submit a 510(k) for a software modification to an existing device within 18 months of the close of the comment period.

3. Explore opportunities to establish premarket approval/clearance pathways tailored to SaMD, SiMD, and novel digital health technologies that take into account real world evidence while incorporating principles established through international harmonization. To accomplish this task, the Agency will:

a. Engage with stakeholders, including industry, through roundtables, informal meetings, and teleconferences;

b. Hold a public workshop; and

c. Revise existing and/or publish new relevant guidance documents, including publishing a draft revised version of the "Guidance for the Content of Premarket Submissions for Software Contained in Medical Devices" (issued in 2005) by the end of FY2019, and within 12 months of the close of the comment period, publish the final revised version. The Agency will incorporate applicable concepts from its Guidance for "Off-The-Shelf Software Used in Medical Devices."

4. Participate in international harmonization efforts related to digital health, including work on developing SaMD and other digital health convergence efforts through the International Medical Device Regulators Forum (IMDRF).

J. Guidance Document Development

FDA will apply user fee revenues to ensure timely completion of Draft Guidance documents. The Agency will strive to finalize, withdraw, reopen the comment period, or issue a new draft guidance for 80% of draft guidance documents within 3 years of the close of the comment periods as resources permit. The Agency will strive to finalize, withdraw, reopen the comment period, or issue a new draft guidance for 100% of draft guidance documents within 5 years of the close of the comment periods as resources permit. The Agency will continue to develop guidance documents and improve the development process as resources permit, but not to the detriment of meeting quantitative review timelines and statutory obligations.

K. Total Product Life Cycle (TPLC)

The establishment of CDRH's Office of In Vitro Diagnostic Device Evaluation and Safety (now the Office of In Vitro Diagnostics and Radiological Health (OIR)) has led to improved consistency and predictability due to the enhanced integration of premarket, postmarket, and compliance-related activities and staff and improved information sharing among staff. In addition, the successful development and evaluation of medical devices depends on the integration of clinical with scientific and engineering disciplines. CDRH will explore transitioning to a similar TPLC model building in the other device areas based on the lessons learned from its experience with OIR and taking into account the Center's mission, vision, strategic priorities, and development of a patient-centric benefit-risk framework for regulatory and non-regulatory decision making across the TPLC. Because an essential element for the success of the Center's benefit-risk decision making framework and approach to device regulation (particularly emerging and innovative technologies) is the incorporation of the clinical context and the impact of a decision on patient health and quality of life, CDRH will take steps to increase and enhance the integration of its clinicians into its TPLC activities, amongst themselves, and with the Center's scientists and engineers. Building on the success of considering and incorporating additional expertise and viewpoints into our decision-making, such as through the use of the Network of Experts and the leveraging of patient perspectives, CDRH will also explore ways in which to better learn from and leverage the expertise of clinicians in other parts of the agency and outside of the agency to inform its decision making, enhance consistency, and assure a more holistic clinical perspective. Clinicians involved in device-related activities will have appropriate training on and make recommendations consistent with applicable device statutory provisions, regulations, guidances, and this Commitment Letter. In addition, CDRH will provide managerial oversight of clinician recommendations and device submission decisions, except for those devices subject to CBER oversight.

V. INDEPENDENT ASSESSMENT OF REVIEW PROCESS MANAGEMENT

FDA and the industry will participate in a comprehensive assessment of the process for the review of device applications. The assessment will include consultation with both FDA and industry. The assessment shall be conducted in two phases under contract to FDA by a private, independent consulting firm capable of performing the technical analysis, management assessment, and program evaluation tasks required to address the assessment scope described below within the budget provided under this user fee agreement.

PHASE 1

During the first phase, the contractor will complete an evaluation of FDA's implementation of the corrective action plan developed in response to recommendations from the MDUFA III independent assessment.

For Phase 1, FDA will award the contract by the end of CY2017. The contractor will evaluate the implementation of MDUFA III recommendations and publish a written assessment within 1 year of contract award.

PHASE 2

During the second phase, the contractor will:

1. Evaluate FDA's premarket review program to identify efficiencies that should be realized as a result of the process improvements and investments under MDUFA III and IV;

2. Evaluate premarket review program infrastructure and allocation of FTEs;

3. Assess the alignment of resource needs with the training and expertise of hires;

4. Identify and share best practices across branches in ODE and OIR;

5. Assess the effectiveness of programs targeted for improvement under this agreement, including the:

a. Quality Management program,

b. Proportion of deficiencies in which FDA references the basis for the deficiency determination, c. Pre-Submission program (assess whether (a) CDRH is providing guidance specific to the questions being asked; (b) CDRH is using Pre-Submissions appropriately; and (c) CDRH and Industry are adhering to the procedural aspects as set forth in this agreement),

d. Third Party Review program (assess efficiency of program and suggest process improvements),

e. Digital Health program,

f. Patient Engagement program, and

g. Real World Evidence program;

6. Analyze conversions of Special 510(k)s to Traditional 510(k)s; and

7. Assess other key areas identified by FDA and industry as resources permit.

For Phase 2 of the independent assessment, FDA will award the contract no later than 3/31/2020. However, the contractor would not begin the audit of deficiency letters and Pre-Submissions before 10/1/2020. The contractor will publish comprehensive findings and recommendations within 1 year. For all recommendations the contractor will provide an estimate of additional resources needed or efficiencies gained, as applicable.

FDA will incorporate findings and recommendations, as appropriate, into its management of the premarket review program. FDA will analyze the recommendations for improvement opportunities identified in the assessment and, as appropriate, develop and implement a corrective action plan, and assure its effectiveness.

VI. PERFORMANCE REPORTS

The Agency will report its progress toward meeting the goals described in this letter, as follows. 3.13. Report on implementation of deficiency performance improvements.

3.14. Report on quality management program

3.15. Summary of quality system audits

FDA will report annual and quarterly data on performance within goals for 510(k), de novo, and PMA MDUFA decisions for devices identified as LDTs by the submitter compared to all non-LDT IVD devices. The following elements will be reported:

Number and percentage of LDT 510(k)s and non-LDT IVD 510(k)s completed within 90 FDA days

Number and percentage of LDT de novos and non-LDT IVD de novos completed within 150 FDA days

Number and percentage of LDT PMAs and non-LDT IVD PMAs completed within 180 FDA days

FDA commits to treat LDTs no less favorably than other devices to which MDUFA performance goals apply.

On an annual basis, FDA and Industry will discuss the return on investment, which may include process improvements, improved performance, and other enhancements, under MDUFA IV.

VII. DEFINITIONS AND EXPLANATIONS OF TERMS

A. Applicant

Applicant means a person who makes any of the following submissions to FDA:

an application for premarket approval under section 515 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (FDCA);

a premarket notification under section 510(k) of the FDCA; an application for investigational device exemption under section 520(g) of the FDCA;

a Pre-Submission;

a de novo request (evaluation of automatic class III designation) under section 513(f)(2) of the FDCA;

a CLIA Waiver by application.

B. Electronic Copy (e-Copy)

An electronic copy is an exact duplicate of a submission, created and submitted on a CD, DVD, or in another electronic media format that FDA has agreed to accept, accompanied by a copy of the signed cover letter and the complete original paper submission. An electronic copy is not considered to be an electronic submission.

C. Electronic submission template

An electronic submission template, or eSubmission template, is a guided submission preparation tool for industry. Similar to an online form, the eSubmission template walks industry through the relevant contents and components for the respective premarket submission type and device in order to facilitate submission preparation and enhance consistency, quality, and efficiency in the premarket review process.

D. FDA Days

FDA Days are those calendar days when a submission is considered to be under review at the Agency for submissions that have been accepted (510(k) or de novo classification request), filed (PMA) or submitted (CLIA Waiver by application). FDA Days begin on the date of receipt of the submission or of the amendment to the submission that enables the submission to be accepted (510(k)) or filed (PMA).

E. MDUFA Decisions

Original PMAs: Decisions for Original PMAs are Approval, Approvable, Approvable Pending GMP Inspection, Not Approvable, withdrawal, and Denial.

180-Day PMA Supplements: Decisions for 180-Day PMA Supplements include Approval, Approvable, and Not Approvable.

Real-Time PMA Supplements: Decisions for Real-Time PMA supplements include Approval, Approvable, and not Approvable.

510(k)s: Decisions for 510(k)s are substantially equivalent (SE) or not substantially equivalent (NSE).

De Novo Requests: Decisions for De Novo requests are grant, withdrawal, and decline.

CLIA Waiver by Application Submissions: Decisions for CLIA Waiver by Application Submissions are Approval, Withdrawal, and Denial.

Submissions placed on Application Integrity Program Hold will be removed from the MDUFA cohort.

F. Pre-Submission

A Pre-Submission includes a formal written request from an applicant for feedback from FDA which is provided in the form of a formal written response or, if the manufacturer chooses, a meeting or teleconference in which the feedback is documented in meeting minutes. A Pre-Submission meeting is a meeting or teleconference in which FDA provides its substantive feedback on the Pre-Submission.

A Pre-Submission provides the opportunity for an applicant to obtain FDA feedback prior to intended submission of an investigational device exemption or marketing application. The request must include specific questions regarding review issues relevant to a planned IDE or marketing application (e.g., questions regarding pre-clinical testing protocols or data requirements; design and performance of clinical studies and acceptance criteria). A Pre-Submission is appropriate when FDA's feedback on specific questions is necessary to guide product development and/or application preparation.

The following forms of FDA feedback to applicants are not considered Pre-Submissions.

Interactions requested by either the applicant or FDA during the review of a marketing application (i.e., following submission of a marketing application, but prior to reaching an FDA Decision).

General information requests initiated through the Division of Industry and Consumer Education (DICE).

General questions regarding FDA policy or procedures.

Meetings or teleconferences that are intended to be informational only, including, but not limited to, those intended to educate the review team on new device(s) with significant differences in technology from currently available devices, or to update FDA about ongoing or future product development, without a request for FDA feedback on specific questions related to a planned submission.

Requests for clarification on technical guidance documents, especially where contact is recommended by FDA in the guidance document. However, the following requests will generally need to be submitted as a Pre-Submission in order to ensure appropriate input from multiple reviewers and management: recommendations for device types not specifically addressed in the guidance document; recommendations for nonclinical or clinical studies not addressed in the guidance document; requests to use an alternative means to address recommendations specified in a guidance document.

Phone calls or email messages to reviewers that can be readily answered based on a reviewer's experience and knowledge and do not require the involvement of a broader number of FDA staff beyond the routine involvement of the reviewer's supervisor and more experienced mentors.

G. Substantive Interaction

Substantive Interaction is an email, letter, teleconference, video conference, fax, or other form of communication such as a request for Additional Information or Major Deficiency letters by FDA notifying the applicant of substantive deficiencies identified in initial submission review, or a communication stating that FDA has not identified any deficiencies in the initial submission review and any further minor deficiencies will be communicated through interactive review. An approval or clearance letter issued prior to the Substantive Interaction goal date will qualify as a Substantive Interaction.

If substantive issues warranting issuance of an Additional Information or Major Deficiency letter are not identified, interactive review should be used to resolve any minor issues and facilitate an FDA decision. In addition, interactive review will be used, where, in FDA's estimation, it leads to a more efficient review process during the initial review cycle (i.e., prior to a Substantive Interaction) to resolve minor issues such as revisions to administrative items (e.g., 510(k) Summary/Statement, Indications for Use statement, environmental impact assessment, financial disclosure statements); a more detailed device description; omitted engineering drawings; revisions to labeling; or clarification regarding nonclinical or clinical study methods or data.

Minor issues may still be included in an Additional Information or Major Deficiency letter where related to the resolution of the substantive issues (e.g., modification of the proposed Indications for Use may lead to revisions in labeling and administrative items), or if they were still unresolved following interactive review attempts. Both interactive review and Substantive Interactions will occur on the review clock except upon the issuance of an Additional Information or Major Deficiency Letter which stops the review clock.

H. Total Time to Decision

Total Time to Decision is the number of calendar days from the date of receipt of an accepted or filed submission to a PDUFA decision.

The average Total Time to Decision for 510(k) submissions is calculated as the average of Total Times to Decision for 510(k) submissions within a closed cohort, excluding the highest 2% and the lowest 2% of values. A cohort is closed when 99% of the accepted submissions have reached a decision.

The average Total Time to Decision for PMA applications is calculated as the three-year rolling average of the annual Total Times to Decision for applications (for example, for FY2018, the average Total Time to Decision for PMA applications would be the average of FY2016 through FY2018) within a closed cohort, excluding the highest 5% and the lowest 5% of values. A cohort is closed when 95% of the applications have reached a decision.

I. Accreditation Scheme for Conformity Assessment

Conformity Assessment is the demonstration that specified requirements relating to a product, process, system, person or body are fulfilled.

Accreditation is the formal recognition by an independent body, generally known as an accreditation body, that an organization is competent to carry out specific conformity assessment activities. Accreditation is not obligatory but it adds another level of confidence, as 'accredited' means the organization has been independently checked to make sure it operates according to international standards.

A conformity assessment scheme is a system for assessing the conformity of specified objects (e.g., medical devices or management processes) to one or more consensus standards. The system specifies the applicable standards as well as the rules, procedures, and management requirements for carrying out the conformity assessment to meet a regulatory need. Informally, such a scheme may be referred to as an accreditation scheme.

Testing laboratory is an organization that possesses the necessary technical competence and capabilities to conduct testing to making a determination that one or more characteristics of an object are in conformance with a set of predefined requirements.

J. BLA-related Definitions

Review and act on—the issuance of a complete action letter after the complete review of a filed complete application. The action letter, if it is not an approval, will set forth in detail the specific deficiencies and, where appropriate, the actions necessary to place the application in condition for approval.

- (a) Final printed labeling
- (b) Draft labeling
- (c) Safety updates submitted in the same format, including tabulations, as the original safety submission with new data and changes highlighted (except when large amounts of new information including important new adverse experiences not previously reported with the product are presented in the resubmission)
- (d) Stability updates to support provisional or final dating periods
- (e) Commitments to perform Phase 4 studies, including proposals for such studies
- (f) Assay validation data
- (g) Final release testing on the last 1–2 lots used to support approval

- (i) Other minor clarifying information (determined by the Agency as fitting the Class 1 category)
- (j) Other specific items may be added later as the Agency gains experience with the scheme and will be communicated via guidance documents to industry

Class 2 resubmitted applications—resubmissions that include any other items, including any item that would require presentation to an advisory committee.

PDUFA REAUTHORIZATION PERFORMANCE GOALS AND PROCEDURES FISCAL YEARS 2018 THROUGH 2022

This document contains the performance goals and procedures for the Prescription Drug User Fee Act (PDUFA) reauthorization for fiscal years (FYs) 2018–2022, known as PDUFA VI. It is commonly referred to as the “goals letter” or “commitment letter.” The goals letter represents the product of FDA's discussions with the regulated industry and public stakeholders, as mandated by Congress. The performance and procedural goals and other commitments specified in this letter apply to aspects of the human drug review program that are important for facilitating timely access to safe, effective, and innovative new medicines for patients. While much of FDA's work is associated with formal tracked performance goals, the Agency and industry mutually agree that it is appropriate to manage some areas of the human drug review program with internally tracked timeframes. This provides FDA the flexibility needed to respond to a highly diverse workload, including unanticipated public health needs. FDA is committed to meeting the performance goals specified in this letter and to continuous improvement of its performance regarding other important areas specified in relevant published documents that relate to preapproval drug development and post-approval activities for marketed products. FDA and the regulated industry will periodically and regularly assess the progress of the human drug review program throughout PDUFA VI. This will allow FDA and the regulated industry to identify emerging challenges and develop strategies to address these challenges to ensure the efficiency and effectiveness of the human drug review program.

Unless otherwise stated, goals apply to cohorts of each fiscal year (FY).

I. ENSURING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE HUMAN DRUG REVIEW PROGRAM

A. Review Performance Goals

1. NDA/BLA Submissions and Resubmissions

a. Review and act on 90 percent of standard NME NDA and original BLA submissions within 10 months of the 60 day filing date.

b. Review and act on 90 percent of priority NME NDA and original BLA submissions within 6 months of the 60 day filing date.

c. Review and act on 90 percent of standard non-NME original NDA submissions within 10 months of receipt.

d. Review and act on 90 percent of priority non-NME original NDA submissions within 6 months of receipt.

e. Review and act on 90 percent of Class 1 resubmitted original applications within 2 months of receipt.

f. Review and act on 90 percent of Class 2 resubmitted original applications within 6 months of receipt.

2. Original Efficacy Supplements

a. Review and act on 90 percent of standard efficacy supplements within 10 months of receipt.

b. Review and act on 90 percent of priority efficacy supplement within 6 months of receipt.

3. Resubmitted Efficacy Supplements

a. Review and act on 90 percent of Class 1 resubmitted efficacy supplements within 2 months of receipt.

b. Review and act on 90 percent of Class 2 resubmitted efficacy supplements within 6 months of receipt.

4. Original Manufacturing Supplements

a. Review and act on 90 percent of manufacturing supplements requiring prior approval within 4 months of receipt.

b. Review and act on 90 percent of all other manufacturing supplements within 6 months of receipt.

5. Review Performance Goal Extensions

a. Major Amendments

i. A major amendment to an original application, efficacy supplement, or resubmission of any of these applications, submitted at any time during the review cycle, may extend the goal date by three months.

ii. A major amendment may include, for example, a major new clinical safety/efficacy study report; major re-analysis of previously submitted study(ies); submission of a Risk Evaluation and Mitigation Strategy (REMS) with Element to Assure Safe Use (ETASU) not included in the original application; or significant amendment to a previously submitted REMS with ETASU. Generally, changes to REMS that do not include ETASU and minor changes to REMS with ETASU will not be considered major amendments.

iii. A major amendment to a manufacturing supplement submitted at any time during the review cycle may extend the goal date by two months.

iv. Only one extension can be given per review cycle.

v. Consistent with the underlying principles articulated in the GRMP guidance, FDA's decision to extend the review clock should, except in rare circumstances, be limited to occasions where review of the new information could address outstanding deficiencies in the application and lead to approval in the current review cycle.

b. Inspection of Facilities Not Adequately Identified in an Original Application or Supplement

i. All original applications, including those in the "Program," (see Section I.B.2) and supplements are expected to include a comprehensive and readily located list of all manufacturing facilities included or referenced in the application or supplement. This list provides FDA with information needed to schedule inspections of manufacturing facilities that may be necessary before approval of the original application or supplement.

ii. If, during FDA's review of an original application or supplement, the Agency identifies a manufacturing facility that was not included in the comprehensive and readily located list, the goal date may be extended.

1) If FDA identifies the need to inspect a manufacturing facility that is not included as part of the comprehensive and readily located list in an original application or efficacy supplement, the goal date may be extended by three months.

2) If FDA identifies the need to inspect a manufacturing facility that is not included as part of the comprehensive and readily located list in a manufacturing supplement, the goal date may be extended by two months.

6. These review goals are summarized in the following tables:

TABLE 1.—ORIGINAL AND RESUBMITTED APPLICATIONS AND SUPPLEMENTS

Submission Cohort	Standard	Priority
NME NDAs and original BLAs	90% in 10 months of the 60 day filing date	90% in 6 months of the 60 day filing date

B. Program for Enhanced Review Transparency and Communication for NME NDAs and Original BLAs

To promote transparency and communication between the FDA review team and the applicant, FDA will apply the following model ("the Program") to the review of all New Molecular Entity New Drug Applications (NME NDAs) and original Biologics License Applications (BLAs), including applications that are resubmitted following a Refuse-to-File decision, received from October 1, 2017, through September 30, 2022. The goal of the Program is to promote the efficiency and effectiveness of the first cycle review process and minimize the number of review cycles necessary for approval, ensuring that patients have timely access to safe, effective, and high quality new drugs and biologics.

Approach to Application Review. The standard approach for the review of NME NDAs and original BLAs is described in this section. However, the FDA review team and the applicant may discuss and reach mutual agreement on an alternative approach to the timing and nature of interactions and information exchange between the applicant and FDA, i.e., a Formal Communication Plan for the review of the NME NDA or original BLA. The Formal Communication Plan may include elements of the standard approach (e.g., a mid-cycle communication or a late-cycle meeting) as well as other interactions that sometimes occur during the review process (e.g., a meeting during the filing period to discuss the application, i.e., an "application orientation meeting"). If appropriate, the Formal Communication Plan should specify those elements of the Program that FDA and the sponsor agree are unnecessary for the application under review. If the review team and the applicant anticipate developing a Formal Communication Plan, the elements of the plan should be discussed and agreed to at the pre-submission meeting (see Section I.B.1) and reflected in the meeting minutes. The Formal Communication Plan may be reviewed and amended at any time based on the progress of the review and the mutual agreement of the review team and the applicant. For example, the review team and the applicant may mutually agree at any time to cancel future specified interactions in the Program (e.g., the late-cycle meeting) that become unnecessary (e.g. because previous communications between the review team and the applicant are sufficient). Any amendments made to the Formal Communication Plan should be consistent with the goal of an efficient and timely first cycle review process and not impede the review team's ability to conduct its review.

Expedited Reviews. In certain cases, an application reviewed in the Program will be for a product that the FDA review team identifies as meeting an important public health need. If the FDA review team determines that a first-cycle approval is likely for such an application, the team intends to make every effort to conduct an expedited review and act early on the application. FDA conducts expedited reviews to promote timely access to critically needed therapies for patients without compromising FDA's high standards for demonstrating the safety, efficacy, and quality of new medicines. Expedited reviews are typically characterized by frequent contact between the applicant and the FDA review team throughout the review process. Any parameters of the Program that are intended to facilitate expedited reviews are noted throughout Section I.B.

If significant application deficiencies are identified by the review team at any time during an expedited review, FDA intends to revert, for the remainder of the review, to the standard approach to the review of priority NME NDAs and original BLAs (as described in this section), and will inform the applicant accordingly.

The remainder of Section I.B describes the parameters that will apply to FDA's review of applications in the Program.

1. Pre-submission meeting: The applicant is strongly encouraged to discuss the planned content of the application with the appropriate FDA review division at a pre-NDA/BLA meeting. This meeting will be attended by the FDA review team, including appropriate senior FDA staff.

a. The pre-NDA/BLA meeting should be held sufficiently in advance of the planned submission of the application to allow for meaningful response to FDA feedback and should generally occur not less than 2 months prior to the planned submission of the application.

b. In addition to FDA's preliminary responses to the applicant's questions, other potential discussion topics include preliminary discussions on the need for REMS or other risk management actions, and, where applicable, the development of a Formal Communication Plan and a timeline for review activities associated with a scheduling recommendation under the Controlled Substances Act for drugs with abuse potential. These discussions will be summarized at the conclusion of the meeting and reflected in the FDA meeting minutes.

c. The FDA and the applicant will agree on the content of a complete application for the proposed indication(s) at the pre-submission meeting. The FDA and the applicant may also reach agreement on submission of a limited number of application components not later than 30 calendar days after the submission of the original application. These submissions must be of a type that would not be expected to materially impact the ability of the review team to begin its review. These agreements will be summarized at the conclusion of the meeting and reflected in the FDA meeting minutes.

i. Examples of application components that may be appropriate for delayed submission include updated stability data (e.g., 15-month data to update 12-month data submitted with the original submission) or the final audited report of a preclinical study (e.g., carcinogenicity) where the final draft report is submitted with the original application.

ii. Major components of the application (e.g., the complete study report of a Phase 3 clinical trial or the full study report of required long-term safety data) are expected to be submitted with the original application and are not subject to agreement for late submission.

2. Original application submission: Applications are expected to be complete, as agreed between the FDA review team and the applicant at the pre-NDA/BLA meeting, at the time of original submission of the application. If the applicant does not have a pre-NDA/BLA meeting with FDA, and no agreement exists between FDA and the applicant on the contents of a complete application or delayed submission of certain components of the application, the applicant's submission is expected to be complete at the time of original submission.

a. All applications are expected to include a comprehensive and readily located list of all clinical sites and manufacturing facilities included or referenced in the application.

b. Any components of the application that FDA agreed at the pre-submission meeting could be submitted after the original application are expected to be received not later than 30 calendar days after receipt of the original application.

c. Incomplete applications, including applications with components that are not received within 30 calendar days after receipt of the original submission, will be subject to a Refuse-to-File decision.

d. The following parameters will apply to applications that are subject to a Refuse-to-File decision and are subsequently filed over protest:

i. The original submission of the application will be subject to the review performance goal as described in Section I.B.4.

ii. The application will not be eligible for the other parameters of the Program (e.g., mid-cycle communication, late-cycle meeting).

iii. FDA generally will not review amendments to the application during any review cycle. FDA also generally will not issue information requests to the applicant during the agency's review.

iv. The resubmission goals described in Section I.A.1.e and I.A.1.f will not apply to any resubmission of the application following an FDA complete response action. Any such resubmission will be reviewed as available resources permit.

e. Since applications are expected to be complete at the time of submission, unsolicited amendments are expected to be rare and not to contain major new information or analyses. Review of unsolicited amendments, including those submitted in response to an FDA communication of deficiencies, will be handled in accordance with the GRMP guidance. This guidance includes the underlying principle that FDA will consider the most efficient path toward completion of a comprehensive review that addresses application deficiencies and leads toward a first cycle approval when possible.

3. Day 74 Letter: FDA will follow existing procedures regarding identification and communication of filing review issues in the "Day 74 letter." For applications subject to the Program, the timeline for this communication will be within 74 calendar days from the date of FDA receipt of the original submission. The planned review timeline included in the Day 74 letter for applications in the Program will include the planned date for the internal mid-cycle review meeting. The letter will also include preliminary plans on whether to hold an Advisory Committee (AC) meeting to discuss the application. If applicable, the Day 74 letter will serve as notification to the applicant that the review division intends to conduct an expedited review.

4. Review performance goals: For NME NDA and original BLA submissions that are filed by FDA under the Program, the PDUFA review clock will begin at the conclusion of the 60 calendar day filing review period that begins on the date of FDA receipt of the original submission. The review performance goals for these applications are as follows:

a. Review and act on 90 percent of standard NME NDA and original BLA submissions within 10 months of the 60 day filing date.

b. Review and act on 90 percent of priority NME NDA and original BLA submissions within 6 months of the 60 day filing date.

5. Mid-Cycle Communication: The FDA Regulatory Project Manager (RPM), and other appropriate members of the FDA review team (e.g., Cross Discipline Team Leader (CDTL)), will call the applicant, generally within 2 weeks following the Agency's internal mid-cycle review meeting, to provide the applicant with an update on the status of the review of their application. An agenda will be sent to the applicant prior to the mid-cycle communication. Scheduling of the internal mid-cycle review meeting will be handled in accordance with the GRMP guidance. The RPM will coordinate the specific date and time of the telephone call with the applicant.

a. The update should include any significant issues identified by the review team to date, any information requests, information regarding major safety concerns and preliminary review team thinking regarding risk management, proposed date(s) for the late-cycle meeting, updates regarding plans for the AC meeting (if an AC meeting is anticipated), an update regarding FDA's review activities associated with a scheduling recommendation under the Controlled Substances Act (if applicable), and other projected milestone dates for the remainder of the review cycle.

b. In the case of an expedited review, FDA will communicate the timelines for the Late-Cycle Meeting and the Late-Cycle Meeting background package (see Section I.B.6) which may occur earlier with more condensed timeframes compared to a review that is not expedited.

6. Late-Cycle and Advisory Committee Meetings: A meeting will be held between the FDA review team and the applicant to discuss the status of the review of the application late in the review cycle. Late-cycle meetings will generally be face-to-face meetings; however, the meeting may be held by teleconference if FDA and the applicant agree. Since the application is expected to be complete at the time of submission, FDA intends to complete primary and secondary reviews of the application in advance of the planned late-cycle meeting.

a. FDA representatives at the late-cycle meeting are expected to include the signatory authority for the application, review team members from appropriate disciplines, and appropriate team leaders and/or supervisors from disciplines for which substantive issues have been identified in the review to date.

b. For applications that will be discussed at an AC meeting, the following parameters apply:

i. FDA intends to convene AC meetings no later than 2 months (standard review) or no later than 6 weeks (priority review) prior to the PDUFA goal date. The late-cycle meeting will occur not less than 12 calendar days before the date of the AC meeting.

ii. FDA intends to provide final questions for the AC to the sponsor and the AC not less than 2 calendar days before the AC meeting.

iii. Following an AC Meeting, FDA and the applicant may agree on the need to discuss feedback from the AC for the purpose of facilitating the remainder of the review. Such a meeting will generally be held by teleconference without a commitment for formal meeting minutes issued by the agency.

c. For applications that will not be discussed at an AC meeting, the late-cycle meeting will generally occur not later than 3 months (standard review) or two months (priority review) prior to the PDUFA goal date.

d. Late-Cycle Meeting Background Packages: The Agency background package for the late-cycle meeting will be sent to the applicant not less than 10 calendar days (or 2 calendar days for an expedited review) before the late-cycle meeting. The package will consist of a brief memorandum from the review team outlining substantive application issues (e.g., deficiencies identified by primary and secondary reviews), the Agency's background package for the AC meeting (incorporated by reference if previously sent to the applicant), potential questions and/or points for discussion for the AC meeting (if planned) and the current assessment of the need for REMS or other risk management actions. If the application is subject to an expedited review, the background package may be streamlined and brief using a bulleted list to identify issues to be discussed.

e. Late-Cycle Meeting Discussion Topics: Potential topics for discussion at the late-cycle meeting include major deficiencies identified to date; issues to be discussed at the AC meeting (if planned); current assessment of the need for REMS or other risk management actions; status update of FDA's review activities associated with a scheduling recommendation under the Controlled Substances Act, if applicable; information requests from the review team to the applicant; and additional data or analyses the applicant may wish to submit.

i. With regard to submission of additional data or analyses, the FDA review team and the applicant will discuss whether such data will be reviewed by the Agency in the current review cycle and, if so, whether the submission will be considered a major amendment and trigger an extension of the PDUFA goal date.

7. Inspections: FDA's goal is to complete all GCP, GLP, and GMP inspections for applications in the Program within 6 months of the date of original receipt for priority applications and within 10 months of the date of original receipt for standard applications. This will allow 2 months at the end of the review cycle to attempt to address any deficiencies identified by the inspections.

C. First Cycle Review Management

FDA and industry share a commitment to ensuring an efficient and effective first cycle review process for all applications subject to the PDUFA program. This commitment was first articulated in the GRMP guidance finalized in 2005. FDA will update this guidance in PDUFA VI to include review activities (e.g., the NME Program, REMS) that have been added to the human drug review program since the guidance was finalized, principles regarding notification to applicants regarding issues identified during FDA's initial review of the application, principles regarding FDA's notification to applicants regarding planned review timelines, and the importance of internal review timelines that govern aspects of the human drug review program that are not part of PDUFA performance goals. FDA will publish a revised draft guidance for public comment no later than the end of FY 2018.

D. Review of Proprietary Names to Reduce Medication Errors

To enhance patient safety, FDA is committed to various measures to reduce medication errors related to look-alike and sound-alike proprietary names and such factors as unclear label abbreviations, acronyms, dose designations, and error prone label and packaging design. The following performance goals apply to FDA's review of drug and biological product proprietary names during development (as early as end-of-phase 2) and during FDA's review of a marketing application:

1. Proprietary Name Review Performance Goals During Drug Development

a. Review 90% of proprietary name submissions filed within 180 days of receipt. Notify sponsor of tentative acceptance or non-acceptance.

b. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the sponsor can request reconsideration by submitting a written rebuttal with supporting data or request a meeting within 60 days to discuss the initial decision (meeting package required).

c. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the above review performance goals also would apply to the written request for reconsideration with supporting data or the submission of a new proprietary name.

d. A complete submission is required to begin the review clock.

2. Proprietary Name Review Performance Goals During Application Review

a. Review 90% of NDA/BLA proprietary name submissions filed within 90 days of receipt. Notify sponsor of tentative acceptance/non-acceptance.

b. A supplemental review will be done meeting the above review performance goals if the proprietary name has been submitted previously (IND phase after end-of-phase 2) and has received tentative acceptance.

c. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the sponsor can request reconsideration by submitting a written rebuttal with supporting data or request a meeting within 60 days to discuss the initial decision (meeting package required).

d. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the above review performance goals apply to the written request for reconsideration with supporting data or the submission of a new proprietary name.

e. A complete submission is required to begin the review clock.

E. Major Dispute Resolution

1. Procedure:

For procedural or scientific matters involving the review of human drug applications and supplements (as defined in PDUFA) that cannot be resolved at the signatory authority level (including a request for reconsideration by the signatory authority after reviewing any materials that are planned to be forwarded with an appeal to the next level), the response to appeals of decisions will occur within 30 calendar days of the Center's receipt of the written appeal.

2. Performance goal: 90% of such answers are provided within 30 calendar days of the Center's receipt of the written appeal.

3. Conditions:

a. Sponsors should first try to resolve the procedural or scientific issue at the signatory authority level. If it cannot be resolved at that level, it should be appealed to the next higher organizational level (with a copy to the signatory authority) and then, if necessary, to the next higher organizational level.

b. Responses should be either verbal (followed by a written confirmation within 14 calendar days of the verbal notification) or written and should ordinarily be to either grant or deny the appeal.

c. If the decision is to deny the appeal, the response should include reasons for the denial and any actions the sponsor might take to persuade the Agency to reverse its decision.

d. In some cases, further data or further input from others might be needed to reach a decision on the appeal. In these cases, the "response" should be the plan for obtaining that information (e.g., requesting further information from the sponsor, scheduling a meeting with the sponsor, scheduling the issue for discussion at the next scheduled available advisory committee (AC)).

e. In these cases, once the required information is received by the Agency (including any advice from an AC), the person to whom the appeal was made, again has 30 calendar days from the receipt of the required information in which to either grant or deny the appeal.

f. Again, if the decision is to deny the appeal, the response should include the reasons for the denial and any actions the sponsor might take to persuade the Agency to reverse its decision.

g. N.B. If the Agency decides to present the issue to an AC and there are not 30 days before the next scheduled AC, the issue will be presented at the following scheduled committee meeting to allow conformance with AC administrative procedures.

F. Clinical Holds

1. Procedure:

The Center should respond to a sponsor's complete response to a clinical hold within 30 days of the Agency's receipt of the submission of such sponsor response.

2. Performance goal:

90% of such responses are provided within 30 calendar days of the Agency's receipt of the sponsor's response.

G. Special Protocol Question Assessment and Agreement

1. Procedure:

Upon specific request by a sponsor (including specific questions that the sponsor desires to be answered), the Agency will evaluate certain protocols and issues to assess whether the design is adequate to meet scientific and regulatory requirements identified by the sponsor.

a. The sponsor should submit a limited number of specific questions about the protocol design and scientific and regulatory requirements for which the sponsor seeks agreement (e.g., is the dose range in the carcinogenicity study adequate, considering the intended clinical dosage; are the clinical endpoints adequate to support a specific efficacy claim).

b. Within 45 days of Agency receipt of the protocol and specific questions, the Agency will provide a written response to the sponsor that includes a succinct assessment of the protocol and answers to the questions posed by the sponsor. If the Agency does not agree that the protocol design, execution plans, and data analyses are adequate to achieve the goals of the sponsor, the reasons for the disagreement will be explained in the response.

c. Protocols that qualify for this program include: carcinogenicity protocols, stability protocols, and Phase 3 protocols for clinical trials that will form the primary basis of an efficacy claim. For such Phase 3 protocols to qualify for this comprehensive protocol assessment, the sponsor must have had an end-of-Phase 2/pre-Phase 3 meeting with the review division so that the division is aware of the developmental context in which the protocol is being reviewed and the questions being answered.

d. N.B. For products that will be using Subpart E or Subpart H development schemes, the Phase 3 protocols mentioned in this paragraph should be construed to mean those protocols for trials that will form the primary basis of an efficacy claim no matter what phase of drug development in which they happen to be conducted.

e. If a protocol is reviewed under the process outlined above and agreement with the Agency is reached on design, execution, and analyses and if the results of the trial conducted under the protocol substantiate the hypothesis of the protocol, the Agency agrees that the data from the protocol can be used as part of the primary basis for approval of the product. The fundamental agreement here is that having agreed to the design, execution, and analyses proposed in protocols reviewed under this process, the Agency will not later alter its perspective on the issues of design, execution, or analyses unless public health concerns unrecognized at the time of protocol assessment under this process are evident.

2. Performance goal:

90% of special protocol assessments and agreement requests completed and returned to sponsor within the timeframe.

3. Reporting:

The Agency will track and report the number of original special protocol assessments and resubmissions per original special protocol assessment.

H. Meeting Management Goals

Formal PDUFA meetings between sponsors and FDA consist of Type A, B, B(EOP), and C meetings. These meetings are further described below.

Type A meetings are those meetings that are necessary for an otherwise stalled drug development program to proceed (i.e., a “critical path” meeting) or to address an important safety issue. Post-action meetings requested within three months after an FDA regulatory action other than approval (i.e., issuance of a complete response letter) will also generally be considered Type A meetings.

Type B meetings include pre-IND meetings and pre-NDA/BLA meetings, while Type B (EOP) meetings are reserved for certain End-of-Phase 1 meetings (i.e. for 21 CFR Part 312 Subpart E or 21 CFR Part 314 Subpart H or similar products) and End-of-Phase 2/pre-Phase 3 meetings. Meetings regarding REMS or postmarketing requirements that occur outside the context of the review of a marketing application will also generally be considered Type B meetings.

A Type C meeting is any other type of meeting.

1. Responses to Meeting Requests

a. Procedure: FDA will notify the requester in writing of the date, time, and place for the meeting, as well as expected Center participants following receipt of a formal meeting request. Table 3 below indicates the timeframes for FDA’s response to a meeting request.

TABLE 3

Meeting Type	Response Time (calendar days)
A	14
B	21

i. For any type of meeting, the sponsor may request a written response to its questions rather than a face-to-face meeting, videoconference or teleconference. FDA will review the request and make a determination on whether a written response is appropriate or whether a face-to-face meeting, videoconference, or teleconference is necessary. If a written response is deemed appropriate, FDA will notify the requester of the date it intends to send the written response in the Agency’s response to the meeting request. This date will be consistent with the timeframes specified in Table 4 below for the specific meeting type.

ii. For pre-IND and Type C meetings, while the sponsor may request a face-to-face meeting, the Agency may determine that a written response to the sponsor’s questions would be the most appropriate means for providing feedback and advice to the sponsor. When it is determined that the meeting request can be appropriately addressed through a written response, FDA will notify the requester of the date it intends to send the written response in the Agency’s response to the meeting request. This date will be consistent with the timeframes specified in Table 4 below for the specific meeting type.

b. Performance Goal: FDA will respond to meeting requests and provide notification within the response times noted in Table 3 for 90% of each meeting type.

2. Scheduling Meetings

a. Procedure: FDA will schedule the meeting on the next available date at which all applicable Center personnel are available to attend, consistent with the component’s other business; however, the meeting should be scheduled consistent with the type of meeting requested. Table 4 below indicates the timeframes for the scheduled meeting date following receipt of a formal meeting request, or in the case of a written response, the timeframes for the Agency to send the written response. If the requested date for any meeting type is greater than the specified timeframe, the meeting date should be within 14 calendar days of the requested date.

TABLE 4

Meeting Type	Meeting Scheduling or Written Response Time
A	30 calendar days from receipt of meeting request
B	60 calendar days from receipt of meeting request
B(EOP)	70 calendar days from receipt of meeting request
C	75 calendar days from receipt of meeting request

b. Performance goal: 90% of meetings are held within the timeframe for each meeting type, and 90% of written responses are sent within the timeframe for each meeting type.

3. Meeting Background Packages

The timing of the Agency’s receipt of the sponsor background package for each meeting type (including those meetings for which a written response will be provided) is specified in Table 5 below.

TABLE 5

Meeting Type	Receipt of Background Package
A	At the time of the meeting request
B	30 calendar days before the date of the meeting or expected written response

Meeting Type	Receipt of Background Package
B(EOP)	50 calendar days before the date of the meeting or expected written response*
C	47 calendar days before the date of the meeting or expected written response*

* If the scheduled date of a Type B(EOP) or C meeting is earlier than the timeframes specified in Table 4, the meeting background package will be due no sooner than 6 calendar days and 7 calendar days following the response time for Type B(EOP) and C meetings specified in Table 3, respectively.

4. Preliminary Responses to Sponsor Questions

a. Procedure: The Agency will send preliminary responses to the sponsor’s questions contained in the background package no later than five calendar days before the meeting date for Type B(EOP) and C meetings.

b. Performance goal: 90% of preliminary responses to questions for Type B(EOP) meetings are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date.

5. Sponsor Notification to FDA

Not later than three calendar days following the sponsor’s receipt of FDA’s preliminary responses for a Type B(EOP) or C meeting, the sponsor will notify FDA of whether the meeting is still needed, and if it is, the anticipated agenda of the meeting given the sponsor’s review of the preliminary responses.

6. Meeting Minutes

a. Procedure: The Agency will prepare minutes that will be available to the sponsor 30 calendar days after the meeting. The minutes will clearly outline the important agreements, disagreements, issues for further discussion, and action items from the meeting in bulleted form and need not be in great detail. Meeting minutes are not required if the Agency transmits a written response for any meeting type.

b. Performance goal: 90% of minutes are issued within 30 calendar days of the date of the meeting.

7. Conditions

For a meeting to qualify for these performance goals:

a. A written request must be submitted to the review division.

b. The written request must provide:

i. A brief statement of the purpose of the meeting and the sponsor’s proposal for either a face-to-face meeting or a written response from the Agency;

ii. A listing of the specific objectives/outcomes the requester expects from the meeting;

iii. A proposed agenda, including estimated times needed for each agenda item;

iv. A listing of planned external attendees;

v. A listing of requested participants/disciplines representative(s) from the Center with an explanation for the request as appropriate; and

vi. The date that the meeting background package will be sent to the Center. Refer to Table 5 for timeframes for the Agency’s receipt of background packages.

c. The Agency concurs that the meeting will serve a useful purpose (i.e., it is not premature or clearly unnecessary). However, requests for a Type B or B(EOP) meeting will be honored except in the most unusual circumstances.

8. Guidance

FDA will publish revised draft guidance on formal meetings between FDA and sponsors no later than September 30, 2018.

I. Enhancing Regulatory Science and Expediting Drug Development

To ensure that new and innovative products are developed and available to patients in a timely manner, FDA will build on the success of the FDA's regulatory science program that included advancing the science of meta-analysis methodologies, advancing the use of biomarkers and pharmacogenomics, enhancing communications between FDA and sponsors during drug development, and advancing the development of drugs for rare diseases. The extension and continuation of this work will encompass further evaluation and enhancement of FDA-sponsor communications, ensuring the sustained success of the breakthrough therapy program, establishing early consultations between FDA and sponsors on the use of new surrogate endpoints as the primary basis for product approval, advancing rare disease drug development, advancing the development of combination products, and exploring the use of real world evidence for use in regulatory decision-making.

1. Promoting Innovation Through Enhanced Communication Between FDA and Sponsors During Drug Development

FDA's philosophy is that timely interactive communication with sponsors during drug development is a core Agency activity to help achieve the Agency's mission to facilitate the conduct of efficient and effective drug development programs, which can enhance public health by making new safe and effective drugs available to the American public in a timely manner. Accordingly, FDA will maintain dedicated drug development communication and training staffs in CDER and CBER, focused on enhancing communication between FDA and sponsors during drug development.

One function of the staff is to serve as a liaison that will facilitate general and, in some cases, specific interactions between sponsors and each Center. The liaison will serve as a point of contact for sponsors who have general questions about drug development or who need clarification on which review division to contact with their questions. The liaison will also serve as a secondary point of contact in each Center for sponsors who are encountering challenges in communication with the review team for their IND (e.g., in instances when they have not received a response from the review team to a simple or clarifying question or referral to the formal meeting process within 30 days of the sponsor's initial request). In such cases, the liaison will work with the review team and the sponsor to facilitate resolution of the issue.

The second function of the staff is to provide ongoing training to the review organizations on best practices in communication with sponsors. The content of training includes, but is not limited to, FDA's philosophy regarding timely interactive communication with sponsors during drug development as a core Agency activity, best practices for addressing sponsor requests for advice and timely communication of responses through appropriate mechanisms (e.g., teleconferences, secure email, or when questions are best addressed through the formal meetings process), and the role of the liaison staff in each Center in facilitating communication between the review staff and sponsor community, including the staff's role in facilitating resolution of individual communication requests. The staff will also collaborate with sponsor stakeholders (e.g., through participation in workshops, webinars, and other meetings) to communicate FDA's philosophy and best practices regarding communication with sponsors during drug development.

To continue to enhance timely interactive communication with sponsors during drug development in PDUFA VI, FDA will do the following:

a. Independent Assessment. FDA will contract with an independent third party to assess current practices of FDA and sponsors in communicating during drug development. The statement of work for this effort will be published for public comment prior to beginning the assessment. The third party will be expected to separately engage both FDA staff and individual sponsors through contractor-led interviews as part of the assessment. Due to the significant volume of FDA-sponsor interactions in a given year, the assessment will be based on a random subset of drug development programs identified by IND number. The third party will identify best practices and areas for improvement in communication by FDA review staff and sponsors. FDA will publish the final report of the assessment on FDA's website no later than the end of FY 2020.

b. Public Workshop. FDA will convene a public workshop by the end of March 2021 to discuss the findings of the independent assessment, including anonymized, aggregated feedback from sponsors and FDA review teams resulting from the contractor interviews.

c. Guidance. FDA will consider the third party's recommendations for best practices in communication and update the current draft or final guidance on "Best Practices for Communication Between IND Sponsors and FDA During Drug Development" if appropriate. If FDA determines that the guidance should be updated, based on the recommendations of the third party and the feedback received from the public workshop, FDA will update the guidance no later than one year following the public workshop.

2. Ensuring Sustained Success of Breakthrough Therapy Program

Breakthrough therapy designation is intended to expedite the development and review of drug and biological products, alone or in combination, for serious or life-threatening diseases or conditions when preliminary clinical evidence indicates that the drug may demonstrate substantial improvement over existing therapies. A breakthrough therapy designation includes the features of the fast track program, intensive FDA guidance on an efficient drug development program, and an organizational commitment by FDA involving senior managers. Additional resources will enable the Agency to continue to work closely with sponsors throughout the breakthrough therapy designation, development, and review processes. Both FDA and the regulated industry are committed to ensuring the expedited development and review of innovative therapies for serious or life-threatening diseases or conditions by investing additional resources into the breakthrough therapy program.

3. Early Consultation on the Use of New Surrogate Endpoints

FDA and industry believe that early consultation between review teams and sponsors is important for development programs where the sponsor intends to use a biomarker as a new surrogate endpoint that has never been previously used as the primary basis for product approval in the proposed context of use. Early consultation in the drug development program allows the review team to consult with FDA senior management to evaluate the sponsor's proposal before providing advice regarding the proposed biomarker as a new surrogate endpoint to support accelerated or traditional approval. Requests to engage with FDA on this topic will be considered a Type C meeting request.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the feasibility of the surrogate as a primary endpoint, and identify any gaps in knowledge and how they might be addressed. The outcome of this meeting may require further investigation by the sponsor and discussion and agreement with the agency before the surrogate endpoint could be used as the primary basis for product approval. To qualify for this consultation, these Type C meeting requests must be accompanied by the complete meeting background package at the time the request is made that includes preliminary human data indicating impact of the drug on the biomarker at a dose that appears to be generally tolerable. The remaining meeting procedures as described in Section I.H of this document will apply.

4. Advancing Development of Drugs for Rare Diseases

FDA will build on the success of the Rare Disease Program (RDP) in CDER and CBER by continuing to advance and facilitate the development and timely approval of drugs and biologics for rare diseases, including rare diseases in children. The Rare Disease Program staff in CDER will be integrated into review teams for rare disease development programs and application review to provide their unique expertise on flexible and feasible approaches to studying and reviewing such drugs to include, for example, innovative use of biomarkers, consideration of non-traditional clinical development programs, use of adaptive study designs, evaluation of novel endpoints, application of new approaches to statistical analysis, and appropriate use of FDA's expedited development and review programs (i.e., Fast Track, Breakthrough, Priority Review, and Accelerated Approval). CBER, through its Rare Disease Program Staff, will also ensure that its review offices consider such flexible and feasible approaches in review.

The RDP staff will also continue to provide training to all CDER and CBER review staff related to development, review, and approval of drugs for rare diseases as part of the reviewer training core curriculum.^μ The objective of the training will be to familiarize review staff with the challenges associated with rare disease applications and strategies to address these challenges; to promote best practices for review and regulation of rare disease applications; and to encourage flexibility and scientific judgment among reviewers in the review and regulation of rare disease drug development and application review. The training will also emphasize the important role of the RDP staff as members of the core review team to help ensure consistency of scientific and regulatory approaches across applications and review teams.

RDP staff will continue to engage in outreach to industry, patient groups, and other stakeholders to provide training on FDA's RDP. The staff will continue to foster collaborations in the development of tools (e.g., patient reported outcome measures) and data (e.g., natural history studies) to support development of drugs for rare diseases. In addition, the staff will also facilitate interactions between stakeholders and FDA review divisions to increase awareness of FDA regulatory programs and engagement of patients in FDA's regulatory decision-making.

FDA will include updates on the activities and success of the RDP in the PDUFA annual performance report to include, for example, the number of training courses offered and staff trained, the number of review programs where RDP staff participated as core team members, and metrics related to engagement with external stakeholders. FDA will also continue to include information on rare disease approvals in its annual reports on innovative drug approvals, including utilization of expedited programs and regulatory flexibility and appropriate comparative metrics to non-rare disease innovative approvals.

5. Advancing Development of Drug-Device and Biologic-Device Combination Products Regulated by CBER and CDER

a. FDA will develop staff capacity and capability across the medical product centers and the Office of Combination Products (OCP) to more efficiently, effectively, and consistently review and respond to submissions that include combination products. These staff will advance the development of combination products by providing combination product expertise as part of the core review team as applicable, and through promoting best practices for review of combination products. The additional capacity will include staff who will focus on review of cGMP, engineering aspects, human factors and bridging study protocols and study reports, and labeling, to include instructions-for-use materials.

b. FDA will streamline the process for combination product review and improve the Agency's ability to assess workload and allocate resources to the review of combination products.

i. By no later than December 31, 2017, FDA will complete a lean process mapping for combination product review in order to inform changes to review work flow to improve the inter-center consultation process.

ii. By no later than December 31, 2017, FDA will begin tracking workload and timelines for cross-center consultations to enable appropriate allocation of resources and regularly assess the progress of combination product review throughout PDUFA VI.

iii. By no later than September 30, 2018, for each component within FDA that is consulted to participate in review of combination products, FDA will outline in appropriate internal documents the Agency's process for resolving internally any scientific or regulatory issues that arise, as well as a commitment for the medical product centers and OCP to coordinate and complete reviews and related activities when consulted in timelines set forth by PDUFA and other published documents (e.g., the GRMP guidance and GRMP MAPP).

c. FDA will establish Manuals of Policies and Procedures (MAPPs) and Standard Operating Policy and Procedures (SOPPs) to promote efficient, effective, and consistent combination product development and review. The documents will describe processes and procedures for conducting review of combination products, including the expectations for consultation of internal experts outside the reviewing Center. FDA will describe the responsibilities of staff in each Center and Office, expectations for core review team members and for other consultant staff in activities and meetings related to the combination product development program and application review. FDA will define the key terms to be used by staff in review of combination products to foster clear communication within FDA and to regulated industry. The topic areas and expected completion dates of these documents are specified below:

i. Human Factors Assessments (March 31, 2019)

ii. Quality assessment of combination products, including coordination of facility inspections (September 30, 2019)

iii. Patient-oriented labeling, including instructions-for-use materials for those drug-device and biologic-device combination products regulated by CBER and CDER (September 30, 2019)

d. By no later than December 31, 2018, FDA will make available on FDA's website key points of contact in OCP and the medical product centers for combination product review. FDA agrees to maintain and update this information periodically.

e. FDA will establish submission procedures for Human Factors protocols no later than September 30, 2018. Beginning in FY 2019, FDA will establish timelines to review and provide comment on the protocols for Human Factors studies of combination drug-device and biologic-device products within 60 days.

1. Procedure for review of human factors protocols for combination products: Upon specific request by a sponsor (including specific questions that the sponsor desires to be answered) consistent with the steps below, the Agency will evaluate human factors protocols and issues to assess whether the design is adequate to meet scientific and regulatory requirements identified by the sponsor.

(1) The sponsor should submit a limited number of specific questions about the human factors protocol design and scientific and regulatory requirements for which the sponsor seeks agreement (e.g., are the study participant groups appropriate to represent intended users, is the study endpoint adequate, are the critical tasks that should be evaluated appropriately identified).

(2) Within 60 days of Agency receipt of the protocol and specific questions, the Agency will provide a written response to the sponsor that includes a succinct assessment of the protocol and answers to the questions posed by the sponsor. If the Agency does not agree that the protocol design, execution plans, and data analyses are adequate to achieve the goals of the sponsor, the reasons for the disagreement will be explained in the response.

(3) Performance goals for FDA will be phased in, starting in FY 2019 as follows:

a. By FY 2019, review 50% of human factors protocol submissions within 60 days and provide sponsor with written comments.

b. By FY 2020, review 70% of human factors protocol submissions within 60 days and provide sponsor with written comments.

c. By FY 2021, review 90% of human factors protocol submissions within 60 days and provide sponsor with written comments.

f. By no later than December 31, 2018, FDA will begin staff training related to development, review, and approval of drug-device and biologic-device combination products reviewed in CDER and CBER. The training will be provided to all CDER, CBER, Center for Devices and Radiological Health (CDRH), and Office of Combination Products (OCP) staff, and will be part of the reviewer training core curriculum. The key purposes of this training include familiarizing review staff with the regulatory requirements and challenges associated with combination product applications and strategies to address these challenges; promoting best practices for review and regulation of combination products regulated by CDER and CBER, and helping ensure coordination and consistent approaches within the Centers in the review and regulation of combination product applications. The training will also emphasize the role of various experts in the Centers as members of the review team and OCP's roles and responsibilities in order to help ensure consistency of scientific and regulatory approaches across applications and review teams.

g. FDA will contract with an independent third party to assess current practices for combination drug product review. This study will focus on areas where the needs for inter-center coordination and consistent approaches are greatest, including such areas as the Request-for-Designation, cGMPs/facilities topics, human factors and bridging studies, and labeling. The contractor will be expected to engage both FDA staff and individual sponsors as part of the assessment. The assessment will be based on a randomly selected subset of combination products in various phases of development. The assessment will identify best practices and areas for improvement by FDA review staff and sponsors in the submission and review of combination products for consideration by both FDA and sponsors. FDA will publish the final report of the assessment on FDA's website no later than the end of FY 2020. FDA will consider the assessment findings regarding best practices on the part of FDA review staff and sponsors in any updates to relevant documents such as MAPPs, SOPPs, and submission procedures for human factors protocols, and in the review and submission of Combination Product applications.

h. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will publish draft guidance or update previously published guidance issued by the medical product centers and OCP for review staff and industry describing considerations related to drug-device and biologic-device combination product on the topics noted below. The draft guidance(s) will be finalized by the end of FY 2022.

i. Bridging studies, including the bridging of data from combination products that employ different device components for the same drug or biologic and the same device component across different drugs and biologics.

ii. Patient-oriented labeling (e.g., instructions-for-use).

6. Enhancing Use of Real World Evidence for Use in Regulatory Decision-Making

As we participate in the current data revolution, it is important that FDA consider the possibilities of using so-called "real world" data as an important tool in evaluating not only the safety of medications but also their effectiveness. To accomplish this will require an understanding of what questions to ask, including how such data can be generated and used appropriately in product evaluation, what the challenges are to appropriate generation and use of these data, and how to address such challenges. Towards this end, FDA will do the following:

a. By no later than the end of FY 2018, FDA will complete one or more public workshop(s) with key stakeholders, including patients, biopharmaceutical companies, and academia, to gather input into issues related to Real World Evidence (RWE) use in regulatory decision-making. The workshop(s) should address, among other things, the following topics:

Benefits to patients, regulators, and biopharmaceutical companies of RWE in regulatory decision making;

RWE availability, quality, and access challenges, and approaches to mitigate these;

Methodological approaches for the collection, analysis, and communication of RWE; and Appropriate contexts of use of RWE in regulatory decision-making regarding effectiveness.

b. By no later than the end of FY 2019, FDA will initiate (or fund by contract), appropriate activities (e.g., pilot studies or methodology development projects) aimed at addressing key outstanding concerns and considerations in the use of RWE for regulatory decision making.

c. By no later than the end of FY 2021, considering available input, such as from activities noted above, FDA will publish draft guidance on how RWE can contribute to the assessment of safety and effectiveness in regulatory submissions, for example in the approval of new supplemental indications and for the fulfillment of postmarketing commitments and requirements. FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 18 months after the close of the public comment period.

J. Enhancing Regulatory Decision Tools to Support Drug Development and Review

1. Enhancing the Incorporation of the Patient's Voice in Drug Development and Decision-Making

To facilitate the advancement and use of systematic approaches to collect and utilize robust and meaningful patient and caregiver input that can more consistently inform drug development and, as appropriate, regulatory decision making, FDA will conduct the following activities during PDUFA VI:

a. FDA will strengthen the staff capacity to facilitate development and use of patient-focused methods to inform drug development and regulatory decisions. This staff, composed primarily of clinical, statistical, psychometric, and health outcomes research expertise, will be integrated into review teams as core members of the team during drug development and application review where the sponsor intends to use patient input or clinical outcome assessment (COAs) such as patient-reported outcomes (PROs) as part of the development program. A core responsibility of the staff will be to engage patient stakeholders and provide timely development-phase consultations to sponsors developing new tools to collect patient and caregiver input. This additional capacity is expected to advance the science of COA development and analysis, and the staff will also support the public qualification activities for COAs.

b. FDA will develop a series of guidance documents to focus on approaches and methods to bridge from initial patient-focused drug development meetings, like those piloted under PDUFA V, to fit-for-purpose tools to collect meaningful patient and caregiver input for ultimate use in regulatory decision making. Prior to the issuance of each guidance, as part of the development, FDA will conduct a public workshop to gather input from the wider community of patients, patient advocates, academic researchers, expert practitioners, industry, and other stakeholders.

i. By the end of FY 2018, FDA will publish a draft guidance describing approaches to collecting comprehensive and representative patient and caregiver input on burden of disease and current therapy. The guidance will address topics including: standardized nomenclature and terminologies, methods to collect meaningful patient input throughout the drug development process, and methodological considerations for data collection, reporting, management, and analysis.

ii. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will publish a draft guidance describing processes and methodological approaches to development of holistic sets of impacts that are most important to patients. The guidance will address topics including: methods for sponsors, patient organizations, academic researchers, and expert practitioners to develop and identify what are most important to patients in terms of burden of disease, burden of treatment, and other critical aspects. The guidance will address how patient input can inform drug development and review processes, and, as appropriate, regulatory decision making.

iii. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will publish a draft guidance describing approaches to identifying and developing measures for an identified set of impacts (e.g., burden of disease and treatment), which may facilitate collection of meaningful patient input in clinical trials. The guidance will address methods to measure impacts in a meaningful way, and identify an appropriate set of measure(s) that matter most to patients.

iv. By the end of FY 2021, FDA will publish a draft guidance on clinical outcome assessments, which, when final, will, as appropriate, revise or supplement the 2009 Guidance to Industry on Patient-Reported Outcome Measures. The draft guidance will also address technologies that may be used for the collection, capture, storage, and analysis of patient perspective information. The guidance will also address methods to better incorporate clinical outcome assessments into endpoints that are considered significantly robust for regulatory decision-making.

v. For each of the above, FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 18 months after the close of the public comment period on the draft guidance.

c. FDA will create and maintain a repository of publicly available tools on FDA's website as a resource for stakeholders. The repository will also include FDA's clinical outcome assessment compendium, patient-focused drug development meeting resources, and ongoing efforts on patient-focused drug development.

d. As appropriate, FDA will revise existing MAPPs and SOPPs to include suggested approaches for incorporating an increased patient focus in other on-going or planned FDA public meetings (e.g., FDA scientific workshops). In addition, as appropriate, FDA will develop and implement staff training related to processes, tools, and methodologies described in this section.

e. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will conduct a public workshop, through a qualified third party, with the primary purpose of gathering ideas and experiences of the patient and caregiver community and their recommendations on approaches and best practices that would enhance patient engagement in clinical trials. The meeting may also gather input from sponsors, academic researchers, and expert practitioners. The meeting will result in a published report on proceedings and recommendations from discussions at the meeting.

2. Enhancing Benefit-Risk Assessment in Regulatory Decision-Making

FDA will further the agency's implementation of structured benefit-risk assessment, including the incorporation of the patient's voice in drug development and decision-making, in the human drug review program through the following commitments to be accomplished during PDUFA VI:

a. By March 31, 2018, FDA will publish an update to the implementation plan titled "Structured Approach to Benefit-Risk Assessment in Drug Regulatory Decision-Making." The update will include a report on the progress made during PDUFA V and a plan for continued implementation during FYs 2018–2022.

b. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will convene and/or participate in, at least one meeting, conducted through a qualified third party, to gather industry, patient, researcher, and other stakeholder input on key topics. This would include applying the benefit-risk framework throughout the human drug lifecycle, including best approaches to communicating FDA's benefit-risk assessment.

c. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will publish a draft guidance on benefit-risk assessments for new drugs and biologics. This guidance will:

i. Articulate FDA's decision-making context and framework for benefit-risk assessment, illustrating the application of the benefit-risk framework throughout the human drug lifecycle, using a case study approach, if appropriate.

ii. Discuss appropriate interactions between a sponsor and FDA during drug development to understand the therapeutic context (i.e., the severity of disease that represents the targeted indication and the extent of unmet medical need in the target population) regarding regulatory decisions for the product at the various stages of drug development and evaluation.

iii. Discuss appropriate approaches to communicate to the public FDA's thinking on a product's benefit-risk assessment, such as through product-specific discussions using the benefit-risk framework at AC meetings.

d. Beginning in FY 2021, FDA will conduct an evaluation of the implementation of the benefit-risk framework in the human drug review program. This evaluation will assess how reviewers across the organization apply the benefit-risk framework and identify best practices in use of the benefit-risk framework. The evaluation of the benefit-risk framework implementation conducted in PDUFA V will serve as a baseline for this PDUFA VI assessment.

e. As appropriate, FDA will revise relevant MAPPs and SOPPs to include new approaches that incorporate FDA's benefit-risk framework into the human drug review program.

3. Advancing Model-Informed Drug Development

To facilitate the development and application of exposure-based, biological, and statistical models derived from preclinical and clinical data sources, herein referred to as "model-informed drug development" (MIDD) approaches, FDA will conduct the following activities during PDUFA VI:

a. FDA will develop its regulatory science and review expertise and capacity in MIDD approaches. This staff will support the highly-specialized evaluation of model-based strategies and development efforts.

b. FDA will convene a series of workshops to identify best practices for MIDD. Topics will include: (1) physiologically-based pharmacokinetic modeling; (2) design analysis and inferences from dose-exposure-response studies; (3) disease progression model development, including natural history and trial simulation; and (4) immunogenicity and correlates of protection for evaluating biological products, including vaccines and blood products. Each workshop will focus on current and emerging scientific approaches, including methodological limitations. FDA will produce a written summary of the topics discussed in each workshop.

c. Starting in FY 2018, FDA will conduct a pilot program for MIDD approaches. For sponsors participating in the pilot program, FDA will grant a pair of meetings specifically designed for this pilot program, consisting of an initial and a follow-up meeting on the same drug development issues, to occur within a span of approximately 120 days. These meetings will be led by the clinical pharmacology or biostatistical review components within CDER or CBER.

i. FDA will publish a Federal Register Notice announcing the pilot program and outlining the eligibility criteria and process for submitting to FDA requests to participate in the pilot program.

ii. FDA will select 2-4 proposals (e.g., 1-2 per Center) quarterly each year. FDA will convene an internal review group to review proposals on a quarterly basis and provide recommendations on prioritization and selection of proposals and share knowledge and experience. Program selection will take into account development programs where clinical data are limited such that integration across non-traditional sources may be needed, and for which MIDD can assess uncertainties about issues such as dosing, duration, and patient selection in a way that can inform regulatory decision-making.

iii. Sponsors who do not participate in the pilot will have an opportunity to interact with the Agency through traditional channels.

d. By end of FY 2019, FDA will publish draft guidance, or revise relevant existing guidance, on model-informed drug development.

e. By end of FY 2021, FDA will develop or revise, as appropriate, relevant MAPPs or SOPPs, and/or review templates and training, to incorporate guidelines for the evaluation of MIDD approaches.

4. Enhancing Capacity to Review Complex Innovative Designs

To facilitate the advancement and use of complex adaptive, Bayesian, and other novel clinical trial designs, FDA will conduct the following activities during PDUFA VI:

a. FDA will develop the staff capacity to enable processes to facilitate appropriate use of these types of methods. This staff will support the computationally intensive review work necessary to evaluate complex adaptive, Bayesian, and other novel clinical trial designs, with a particular focus on clinical trial designs for which simulations are necessary to evaluate the operating characteristics.

b. Starting in FY 2018, FDA will conduct a pilot program for highly innovative trial designs for which analytically derived properties (e.g., Type I error) may not be feasible, and simulations are necessary to determine trial operating characteristics. For INDs in the pilot program, FDA will grant a pair of meetings specifically designed for this pilot program, consisting of an initial and follow-up meeting on the same design, to occur within a span of approximately 120 days. These meetings will be led by the biostatistical review components within CDER or CBER. The opportunity for increased interaction with the agency will provide better understanding of the agency's requirements for trial simulations involved in the use of the pilot study design and allow for iteration of design modifications, if needed. In return, FDA's ability to publicly discuss example designs will provide better clarity on the acceptance of different types of trial designs that should facilitate their use in future development programs.

i. FDA will publish a Federal Register Notice announcing the pilot program, clarifying pilot program eligibility, and describing the proposal submission and selection process.

ii. FDA will select up to 2 proposals (e.g., 1 per Center) quarterly each year. FDA will convene an internal review group to review proposals on a quarterly basis and provide recommendations on prioritization and selection of proposals and share knowledge and experience. Program selection will be prioritized based on trial design features and therapeutic areas of high unmet need.

iii. To promote innovation in this area, trial designs developed through the pilot program may be presented by FDA (e.g., in a guidance or public workshop) as case studies, including while the drug studied in the trial has not yet been approved by FDA. Before FDA grants the initial meeting, FDA and the sponsor will agree on the information that FDA may share publicly in these case studies. Participation in the pilot program, including such agreement on information disclosure, will be voluntary and at the discretion of the sponsor.

iv. FDA may periodically review the progress of the pilot program and determine whether it is appropriate to adjust any aspects of the program.

v. Sponsors who do not participate in the pilot will have an opportunity to interact with the Agency through traditional channels. The pilot program will not affect FDA's existing procedures for providing advice on trial designs.

c. By end of 2nd Quarter FY 2018, FDA will convene a public workshop to discuss various complex adaptive, Bayesian, and other novel clinical trial designs, with a particular focus on clinical trial designs for which simulations are necessary to evaluate the operating characteristics, and the acceptability of those designs in regulatory decision-making.

d. By end of FY 2018, FDA will publish draft guidance on complex adaptive (including Bayesian adaptive) trial designs.

e. By end of FY 2020, FDA will develop or revise, as appropriate, relevant MAPPs, SOPPs and/or review templates and training to incorporate guidelines on evaluating complex clinical trial designs that rely on computer simulations to determine operating characteristics.

5. Enhancing Capacity to Support Analysis Data Standards for Product Development and Review

To support the enhancement of analysis data standards for product development and review in the human drug review program, FDA will conduct the following activities during PDUFA VI:

a. FDA will develop the staff capacity to efficiently review and provide feedback to sponsors on the readiness of submitted analysis data sets and programs for statistical review. This staff will support pre- and post-submission discussion of standardized datasets and programs, and maintain the knowledge of and engage in collaborations about standards models used in the design, analysis and review of clinical and non-clinical studies. Examples of these standards models could include the Standard for Exchange of Nonclinical Data (SEND), Clinical Data Acquisition Standards Harmonization (CDASH), Study Data Tabulation Model (SDTM), and Analysis Data Model (ADaM).

b. In parallel, FDA will improve staff capacity to assist with FDA development and updating of therapeutic area user guides (TAUGs) to include the appropriate content for the analysis data standards used in submission and review.

c. By end of FY 2019, FDA will convene a public workshop to advance the development and application of analysis data standards.

d. FDA will collaborate with external stakeholders and participate in public workshops held by third parties such as standards development organizations, on development of data standards, processes, documentation and continuous improvement of clinical trials and regulatory science.

e. By end of FY 2020, FDA will develop or revise, as appropriate, relevant guidance, MAPPs, SOPPs and training associated with submission and utilization of standardized analysis datasets and programs used in review, and on the processes, procedures, and responsibilities related to the receipt, handling, and documentation of submitted analysis data and programs.

6. Enhancing Drug Development Tools Qualification Pathway for Biomarkers

To facilitate the enhancement of the drug development tools qualification pathway for biomarkers, FDA will conduct the following activities during PDUFA VI:

a. FDA will develop the staff capacity to enhance biomarker qualification review by increasing base capacity. FDA will also pilot processes to engage external experts to support review of biomarker qualification submissions.

b. By the end of FY 2018, FDA will convene a public meeting to discuss 1) taxonomy for biomarkers used in drug development, and 2) a framework with appropriate standards and scientific approaches to support biomarkers under the taxonomy, including scientific criteria to determine acceptance of a biomarker qualification submission and essential elements of a formal biomarker qualification plan.

c. By the end of FY 2018, FDA will publish draft guidance on proposed taxonomy of biomarker usage and related contexts of use.

d. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will publish draft guidance on general evidentiary standards for biomarker qualification to be supplemented with focused guidance on specific biomarker uses and contexts.

e. FDA will develop or revise, as appropriate and necessary, relevant MAPPs and SOPPs on the biomarker qualification process.

f. FDA will list biomarker qualification submissions that are in the qualification process on a public website, to be updated quarterly. Inclusion of a submission on this list will be based on the consent of the submitter for FDA to publish information about the submission, including stage and current status of qualification and the proposed use of the biomarker. Following qualification of a biomarker FDA will post reviews and summary documents that outline the qualification program and data supporting a qualification decision.

g. Sponsors who do not use this qualification pathway will have an opportunity to interact with the Agency through traditional channels.

K. Enhancement and Modernization of the FDA Drug Safety System

FDA will continue to use user fees to enhance and modernize the current U.S. drug safety system, including adoption of new scientific approaches, improving the utility of existing tools for the detection, evaluation, prevention, and mitigation of adverse events, standardization and integration of REMS into the healthcare system, enhancing communication and coordination between post-marketing and pre-market review staff, and improving tracking, communication and oversight of postmarketing safety issues. Enhancements to the drug safety system will improve public health by increasing patient protection while continuing to enable access to needed medical products.

User fees will provide support for A) advancing postmarketing drug safety evaluation through expansion of the Sentinel System and integration into FDA pharmacovigilance activities, and B) timely and effective evaluation and communication of postmarketing safety findings related to human drugs.

1. Advancing Postmarketing Drug Safety Evaluation Through Expansion of the Sentinel System and Integration into FDA Pharmacovigilance Activities

FDA will use user fee funds to conduct a series of activities to systematically implement and integrate Sentinel in FDA pharmacovigilance practices. These activities will involve augmenting the quality and quantity of data available through the Sentinel System, improving methods for determining when and how that data is utilized, and comprehensive training of review staff on the use of Sentinel.

a. FDA will work toward expanding the Sentinel System's sources of data and enhancing the system's core capabilities.

b. FDA will enhance its communication with sponsors and the public regarding general methodologies for Sentinel queries, including what the Agency has learned regarding the most appropriate ways to query and use Sentinel data. This can be done through enhancement of existing mechanisms and/or greater frequency of such mechanisms.

c. FDA will evaluate additional ways to facilitate public and sponsor access to Sentinel's distributed data network to conduct safety surveillance.

d. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will hold or support a public meeting engaging stakeholders to discuss current and emerging Sentinel projects and seek stakeholder feedback and input regarding gaps in the current system to facilitate the further development of Sentinel and its system of Active Risk Identification and Analysis (ARIA).

e. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will establish policies and procedures (MAPPs and SOPPs) to facilitate informing sponsors about the planned use of Sentinel to evaluate a safety signal involving their respective products. These MAPPs and SOPPs will address what types of evaluations and what information about the evaluations will be shared with sponsors, and the timing of such communications.

f. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will facilitate integration of Sentinel into the human drug review program in a systematic, efficient, and consistent way through staff development and by updating existing SOPPs and MAPPs, as needed.

g. By the end of FY 2020, FDA will develop a comprehensive training program for review staff (e.g., epidemiologists, statisticians, medical officers, clinical analysts, project managers, and other review team members) to ensure that staff have a working knowledge of Sentinel, can identify when Sentinel can inform important regulatory questions, and are able to consistently participate in use of Sentinel to evaluate safety issues.

h. By the end of FY 2022, FDA will analyze, and report on the impact of the Sentinel expansion and integration on FDA's use of Sentinel for regulatory purposes, e.g., in the contexts of labeling changes, PMRs, or PMCs.

2. Timely and Effective Evaluation and Communication of Postmarketing Safety Findings Related to Human Drugs

FDA will use user fee funds to continue to support the review, oversight, tracking, and communication of postmarketing drug safety issues.

a. FDA will make improvements to its current processes that capture and track information, including enhancements to its information technology systems, as needed, in order to support the management and oversight of postmarketing drug safety issues.

b. By the end of FY 2019, FDA will update existing policies and procedures (MAPPs and SOPPs) concerning tracking postmarketing safety signals to include consistent and timely notification to a sponsor (1) when a serious safety signal involving a product is identified and (2) to the extent practicable, not less than 72 hours before public posting of a safety notice under section 921 of the Food and Drug Administration Amendments Act of 2007.

c. By the end of FY 2022, FDA will conduct, or fund by contract, an assessment of how its data systems and processes, as described in MAPPs and SOPPs, support review, oversight, and communication of postmarketing drug safety issues.

II. ENHANCING MANAGEMENT OF USER FEE RESOURCES

FDA will modernize the user fee structure to improve the predictability of FDA funding and sponsor invoices, improve efficiency by simplifying the administration of user fees, and enhance flexibility of financial mechanisms to improve management of PDUFA program funding. FDA is committed to enhancing management of PDUFA resources and ensuring PDUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner. FDA will conduct a series of resource capacity planning and financial transparency activities to enhance management of PDUFA resources in PDUFA VI.

A. Resource Capacity Planning and Modernized Time Reporting

FDA is committed to enhancing management of PDUFA resources in PDUFA VI. FDA will conduct activities to develop a resource capacity planning function and modernized time reporting approach in PDUFA VI.

1. FDA will publish a PDUFA program resource capacity planning and modernized time reporting implementation plan no later than the 2nd quarter of FY 2018. FDA will continue to utilize information and recommendations from a third party assessment of resource capacity planning, financial analytics, and modernized time reporting for PDUFA as part of the implementation plan.

2. FDA will staff a resource capacity planning team that will implement and manage a capacity planning system across the PDUFA program in PDUFA VI.

3. FDA will obtain through a contract with an independent accounting or consulting firm an evaluation of options and recommendations for a new methodology to accurately assess changes in the resource and capacity needs of the human drug review program. The report will be published no later than end of FY 2020 for public comment. Upon review of the report and comments, FDA will implement robust methodologies for assessing resource needs of the program. This will include the adoption of a new resource capacity adjustment methodology, in place of the current PDUFA workload adjuster, that accounts for sustained increases in PDUFA workload.

4. FDA recognizes that revenue generated by the workload adjuster and the resource capacity adjustment will be allocated to and used by organizational review components engaged in direct review work to enhance resources and expand staff capacity and capability. FDA will document in the annual financial report how the workload adjuster and resource capacity adjustment fee revenues are being utilized.

B. Financial Transparency and Efficiency

FDA is committed to ensuring PDUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner. FDA will conduct activities to evaluate the financial administration of the PDUFA program to help identify areas to enhance efficiency. FDA will also conduct activities to enhance transparency of PDUFA program resources.

1. FDA will contract with an independent third party to conduct an evaluation of PDUFA program resource management during FY 2018 to ensure that PDUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner in PDUFA VI. The study will include, but is not limited, to the following areas:

a. Evaluate all components of the PDUFA program resource planning, request, and allocation process from when FDA receives the user fee funds through when funds are spent. The contractor will recommend options to improve the process and data needed to enhance resource management decisions.

b. Assess how FDA administers PDUFA user fees organizationally, including, but not limited to, billing, user fee collection, and execution. The contractor will recommend options to enhance the efficiency of user fee administration.

c. Evaluate FDA's existing PDUFA program financial and administrative oversight and governance functions. Assess alternative governance models including roles and responsibilities, organizational location, and personnel skill sets required. The contractor will recommend options on the most effective governance model to support the human drug review program.

d. Assess FDA's technical capabilities to conduct effective financial management and planning in the context of generally accepted government resource management and planning practices. The contractor will recommend options for the technical capabilities needed by financial personnel involved in PDUFA resource management to enhance financial management and planning.

e. Evaluate how FDA estimates fee paying units for annual fee setting. The contractor will recommend options to enhance the accuracy of FDA's PDUFA user fee estimation methods.

2. FDA will publish a PDUFA 5-year financial plan no later than the 2nd quarter of FY 2018. FDA will publish updates to the 5-year plan no later than the 2nd quarter of each subsequent fiscal year.

3. FDA will convene a public meeting no later than the third quarter of each fiscal year starting in FY 2019 to discuss the PDUFA 5-year financial plan, along with the Agency's progress in implementing modernized time reporting, resource capacity planning, and the modernized user fee structure.

III. IMPROVING FDA HIRING AND RETENTION OF REVIEW STAFF

To speed and improve development of safe and effective new therapies for patients, enhancements to the human drug review program require that FDA hire and retain sufficient numbers and types of technical and scientific experts to efficiently conduct reviews of human drug applications. In order to strengthen this core function and increase the public health impact of new therapies, the FDA will commit to do the following:

A. Completion of Modernization of the Hiring System Infrastructure and Augmentation of System Capacity:

1. Complete implementation of FTE-based position management system capability.

a. FDA will complete development of Position Management baseline accounting of all current positions and FTE counts engaged in the human drug review program for each applicable Center and Office including filled and vacant positions, a governance structure for on-going position management that will be accountable to FDA senior management, and Position Management policy and guidance ratified by FDA senior management, outlining processes for adding new positions, deleting positions, and changing established positions.

b. FDA will complete implementation of the new Position-Based Management System.

2. Complete implementation of an online position classification system.

a. FDA will finalize the establishment of an online Position Description (PD) library. The library will include all current well-classified PDs and current standardized PDs. Once operational, any new PDs classified using the on-line classification tools, and any newly created standardized PDs, will be stored and accessible within FDA's PD library and available for FDA-wide use as appropriate.

3. Complete implementation of corporate recruiting.

a. For key scientific and technical disciplines commonly needed across offices engaged in the human drug review program, FDA will complete the transition from the use of individual vacancy announcements for individual offices to expanded use of a common vacancy announcement and certificate of eligible job applicants that can be used by multiple offices. As a part of this effort, FDA will complete the transition from use of individual announcements that are posted for a limited period to common vacancy announcements with open continuous posting to maximize the opportunity for qualified applicants to apply for these positions.

B. Augmentation of Hiring Staff Capacity and Capability

In recognition of the chronic and continuing difficulties of recruiting and retaining sufficient numbers of qualified Human Resources (HR) staff, FDA will engage a qualified contractor to provide continuous support throughout PDUFA VI to augment the existing FDA HR staff capacity and capabilities. The utilization of a qualified contractor will assist FDA in successfully accomplishing PDUFA goals for recruitment and retention of human drug review program staff.

C. Complete Establishment of a Dedicated Function to Ensure Needed Scientific Staffing for Human Drug Review Program

1. Rapid advances in the science and technology of human drug development and manufacturing require FDA's human drug review program staff to keep pace with science and learn innovative methods and techniques for review of new therapies. FDA will complete the establishment of a new dedicated unit within the Office of Medical Products and Tobacco charged with the continuous recruiting, staffing, and retention of scientific, technical and professional staff for the process for the review of human drug applications.

a. The unit will continuously develop and implement scientific staff hiring strategies and plans, working closely with the center review offices and the FDA HR office, to meet discipline-specific hiring commitments and other targeted staffing needs. It will function as a scientific-focused recruiter conducting ongoing proactive outreach to source qualified candidates, and conducting competitive recruiting to fill vacancies that require top scientific, technical and professional talent.

b. The unit will conduct analyses, no less than annually, of compensation and other factors affecting retention of key staff in targeted disciplines, providing leadership and support for agency compensation oversight boards that currently exist or may be established as needed to ensure retention of key scientific, technical and professional staff.

D. Set Clear Goals for Human Drug Review Program Hiring

1. FDA will establish priorities for management of the metric goals for targeted hires within the human drug review program staff for the years of PDUFA VI. These goals for targeted hires are summarized in Table 6 below:

CDER	43	57	45	17	9
CBER	16	8	7	1	0
Other FDA	12	9	6	0	0
Total FTE	71	74	58	18	9

2. FDA will confirm progress in the hiring of PDUFA V FTEs. FDA will report on progress against the hiring goals for FY 2018–2022 on a quarterly basis posting updates to the FDA website PDUFA Performance webpage.

E. Comprehensive and Continuous Assessment of Hiring and Retention

FDA hiring and retention of staff for the human drug review program will be evaluated by a qualified, independent contractor with expertise in assessing HR operations and transformation. This will include continuous assessments throughout the course of implementation of the performance initiatives identified in sections III.A–D, and metrics including, but not limited to, those related to recruiting and retention in the human drug review program including, but not limited to, specifically targeted scientific disciplines and levels of experience. The contractor will conduct a comprehensive review of current hiring processes and hiring staff capacity and capabilities that contribute to achievement of successes, potential problems, or delays in human drug review program staff hiring. This includes the entire hiring function and related capabilities. FDA and regulated industry leadership will periodically and regularly assess the progress of hiring and retention throughout PDUFA VI.

1. Initial Assessment: The assessment will include an initial baseline assessment to be conducted and completed no later than December 31, 2017. The initial baseline study will include an evaluation of the current state and provide recommended options to address any identified gaps or areas identified as priorities for improvement, and a study report to be published no later than December 31, 2017. FDA will hold a public meeting no later than December 31, 2017, to present and discuss report findings, and present its specific plans, including agency senior management oversight, and timeline for implementing recommended enhancements to be fully operational by no later than December 31, 2018.

2. Interim Assessment: An interim assessment will be published by March 31, 2020, for public comment. By June 30, 2020, FDA will hold a public meeting during which the public may present their views. FDA will discuss the findings of the interim assessment, including progress relative to program milestones and metrics, and other aggregated feedback from internal customers and participants in HR services that may be included in the continuous assessment. FDA will also address any issues identified to date including actions proposed to improve the likelihood of success of the program.

3. Final Assessment: A final assessment will be published by December 31, 2021, for public comment. FDA will hold a public meeting by no later than March 30, 2022, during which the public may present their views. FDA will discuss the findings of the final assessment, including progress relative to program milestones and metrics, and other aggregated feedback from internal customers and participants in HR services that may be included in the continuous assessment. FDA will also address any issues identified and plans for addressing these issues.

5. FDA will provide expert technical support for electronic submissions to FDA review staff for submission navigation and troubleshooting.

6. For those systems that sponsors interact with directly, FDA will invite industry to provide feedback and/or participate in user acceptance testing in advance of implementing significant changes that impact industry's interaction with the system.

7. By December 31, 2017, FDA will document and implement a process to provide ample advance notification of systems and process changes commensurate with the complexity of the change and the impact to sponsors for ESG scheduled unavailability and user interface changes.

C. Enhance Transparency and Accountability of FDA Electronic Submission and Data Standards Activities

1. FDA staff and industry will jointly plan and hold quarterly meetings and will share performance updates prior to each meeting. The meeting will address current challenges and emerging needs.

2. Beginning no later than September 30, 2018, FDA will hold annual public meetings to seek stakeholder input related to electronic submission system past performance, future targets, emerging industry needs and technology initiatives to inform the FDA IT Strategic Plan and published targets.

VII. DEFINITIONS AND EXPLANATION OF TERMS

1. "Human drug applications" refers to new drug applications submitted under section 505(b) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act and biologics license applications submitted under section 351(a) of the Public Health Service Act, as defined in the Prescription Drug User Fee Act.

2. "Human drug review program" refers to the activities to conduct "the process for the review of human drug applications," as defined in the Prescription Drug User Fee Act.

3. The term "review and act on" means the issuance of a complete action letter after the complete review of a filed complete application. The action letter, if it is not an approval, will set forth in detail the specific deficiencies and, where appropriate, the actions necessary to place the application in condition for approval.

4. A resubmitted original application is a complete response to an action letter addressing all identified deficiencies.

5. Class 1 resubmitted applications are applications resubmitted after a complete response letter (or a not approvable or approvable letter) that include the following items only (or combinations of these items):

a. Final printed labeling

b. Draft labeling

c. Safety updates submitted in the same format, including tabulations, as the original safety submission with new data and changes highlighted (except when large amounts of new information including important new adverse experiences not previously reported with the product are presented in the resubmission)

d. Stability updates to support provisional or final dating periods

e. Commitments to perform Phase 4 studies, including proposals for such studies

f. Assay validation data

g. Final release testing on the last 1-2 lots used to support approval

h. A minor reanalysis of data previously submitted to the application

i. Other minor clarifying information (determined by the Agency as fitting the Class 1 category)

j. Other specific items may be added later as the Agency gains experience with the scheme and will be communicated via guidance documents to industry

6. Class 2 resubmissions are resubmissions that include any other items, including any items that would require presentation to an advisory committee.

7. The performance goals and procedures also apply to original applications and supplements for human drugs initially marketed on an over-the-counter (OTC) basis through an NDA or switched from prescription to OTC status through an NDA or supplement.

8. As used in this commitment letter, "regulatory decision making" may include, for example, FDA's process for making a regulatory decision regarding a drug or biological product throughout the product lifecycle, such as during drug development, following FDA's review of a marketing application, including review of proposed labeling for the product, or in the post-approval period (e.g., FDA's decision regarding a supplement to an approved application).

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the commitment letter for the Biosimilar User Fee Act, BsUFA, reauthorization for fiscal years 2018 to 2022, known as BsUFA II.

BIOSIMILAR BIOLOGICAL PRODUCT AUTHORIZATION PERFORMANCE GOALS AND PROCEDURES FOR FISCAL YEARS 2018 THROUGH 2022

This document contains the performance goals and procedures for the Biosimilar User Fee Act (BsUFA) reauthorization for fiscal years (FYs) 2018–2022, known as BsUFA II. It is commonly referred to as the “goals letter” or “commitment letter.” The goals letter represents the product of FDA’s discussions with the regulated industry and public stakeholders, as mandated by Congress. The performance and procedural goals and other commitments specified in this letter apply to aspects of the biosimilar biological product review program that are important for facilitating timely access to safe and effective biosimilar medicines for patients. FDA is committed to meeting the performance goals specified in this letter, enhancing management of BsUFA resources, and ensuring BsUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner.

Under BsUFA II, FDA is committed to ensuring effective scientific coordination and review consistency, as well as efficient governance and operations across the biosimilar biological product review program. In addition, FDA is committed to the principles articulated in the Good Review Management Principles and Practices (GRMP) guidance, which FDA intends to update and apply to the review of biosimilar and interchangeable products.

FDA and the regulated industry will periodically and regularly assess the progress of the biosimilar biological product review program throughout BsUFA II. This will allow FDA and the regulated industry to identify emerging challenges and develop strategies to address these challenges to ensure the efficiency and effectiveness of the biosimilar biological product review program.

I. ENSURING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE BIOSIMILAR BIOLOGICAL PRODUCT REVIEW PROGRAM

5. Review Performance Goal Extensions

a. Major Amendments

i. A major amendment to an original application, supplement with clinical data, or resubmission of any of these applications, submitted at any time during the review cycle, may extend the goal date by three months.

ii. A major amendment may include, for example, a major new clinical study report; major re-analysis of previously submitted study(ies); submission of a risk evaluation and mitigation strategy (REMS) with elements to assure safe use (ETASU) not included in the original application; or significant amendment to a previously submitted REMS with ETASU. Generally, changes to REMS that do not include ETASU and minor changes to REMS with ETASU will not be considered major amendments.

iii. A major amendment to a manufacturing supplement submitted at any time during the review cycle may extend the goal date by two months.

iv. Only one extension can be given per review cycle.

v. Consistent with the underlying principles articulated in the GRMP guidance, FDA’s decision to extend the review clock should, except in rare circumstances, be limited to occasions where review of the new information could address outstanding deficiencies in the application and lead to approval in the current review cycle.

b. Inspection of Facilities Not Adequately Identified in an Original Application or Supplement

i. All original applications and supplements are expected to include a comprehensive and readily located list of all manufacturing facilities included or referenced in the application or supplement. This list provides FDA with information needed to schedule inspections of manufacturing facilities that may be necessary before approval of the original application or supplement.

ii. If, during FDA’s review of an original application or supplement, the Agency identifies a manufacturing facility that was not included in the comprehensive and readily located list, the goal date may be extended.

1. If FDA identifies the need to inspect a manufacturing facility that is not included as part of the comprehensive and readily located list in an original application or supplement with clinical data, the goal date may be extended by three months.

2. If FDA identifies the need to inspect a manufacturing facility that is not included as part of the comprehensive and readily located list in a manufacturing supplement, the goal date may be extended by two months.

B. Program for Enhanced Review Transparency and Communication for Original 351(k) BLAs

To promote transparency and communication between the FDA review team and the applicant, FDA will apply the following model (“the Program”) to the review of all original Biologics License Applications (BLAs) submitted under section 351(k) of the Public Health Service Act (“351(k) BLAs”), including applications that are resubmitted following a Refuse-to-File decision, received from October 1, 2017, through September 30, 2022. The goal of the Program is to promote the efficiency and effectiveness of the first cycle review process and minimize the number of review cycles necessary for approval, ensuring that patients have timely access to safe, effective, and high quality biosimilar and interchangeable biological products.

The standard approach for the review of original 351(k) BLAs is described in this section. However, the FDA review team and the applicant may discuss and reach mutual agreement on an alternative approach to the timing and nature of interactions and information exchange between the applicant and FDA, i.e., a Formal Communication Plan for the review of the original 351(k) BLA. The Formal Communication Plan may include elements of the standard approach (e.g., a mid-cycle communication or a late-cycle meeting) as well as other interactions that sometimes occur during the review process (e.g., a meeting during the filing period to discuss the application, i.e., an “application orientation meeting”). If appropriate, the Formal Communication Plan should specify those elements of the Program that FDA and the sponsor agree are unnecessary for the application under review. If the review team and the applicant anticipate developing a Formal Communication Plan, the elements of the plan should be discussed and agreed to at the pre-submission meeting (see Section I.B.1) and reflected in the meeting minutes. The Formal Communication Plan may be reviewed and amended at any time based on the progress of the review and the mutual agreement of the review team and the applicant. For example, the review team and the applicant may mutually agree at any time to cancel future specified interactions in the Program (e.g., the late-cycle meeting) that become unnecessary (e.g. because previous communications between the review team and the applicant are sufficient). Any amendments made to the Formal Communication Plan should be consistent with the goal of an efficient and timely first cycle review process and not impede the review team's ability to conduct its review.

The remainder of this Section I.B. describes the parameters that will apply to FDA's review of applications in the Program.

1. Pre-submission meeting: The applicant is strongly encouraged to discuss the planned content of the application with the appropriate FDA review division at a BPD Type 4 (pre-351(k) BLA) meeting. This meeting will be attended by the FDA review team, including appropriate senior FDA staff.

a. The BPD Type 4 (pre-351(k) BLA) meeting should be held sufficiently in advance of the planned submission of the application to allow for meaningful response to FDA feedback and should generally occur not less than 2 months prior to the planned submission of the application.

b. In addition to FDA's preliminary responses to the applicant's questions, other potential discussion topics include preliminary discussions regarding the approach to developing the content for REMS, where applicable, patient labeling (e.g., Medication Guide and Instructions For Use) and, where applicable, the development of a Formal Communication Plan. These discussions will be summarized at the conclusion of the meeting and reflected in the FDA meeting minutes.

The FDA and the applicant will agree on the content of a complete application for the proposed indication(s) at the pre-submission meeting. The FDA and the applicant may also reach agreement on submission of a limited number of application components not later than 30 calendar days after the submission of the original application. These submissions must be of a type that would not be expected to materially impact the ability of the review team to begin its review. These agreements will be summarized at the conclusion of the meeting and reflected in the FDA meeting minutes.

i. Examples of application components that may be appropriate for delayed submission include; stability updates, the final audited report of a preclinical study (e.g., toxicology) where the final draft report is submitted with the original application, or a limited amount of the data from an assessment of a single transition from the reference product to the proposed biosimilar biological product, where applicable.

ii. Major components of the application (e.g., the complete analytical similarity assessment, the complete study report of a comparative clinical study or the full study report of necessary immunogenicity data) are expected to be submitted with the original application and are not subject to agreement for late submission.

2. Original application submission: Applications are expected to be complete, as agreed between the FDA review team and the applicant at the BPD Type 4 (pre-351(k) BLA) meeting, at the time of original submission of the application. If the applicant does not have a BPD Type 4 (pre-351(k) BLA) meeting with FDA, and no agreement exists between FDA and the applicant on the contents of a complete application or delayed submission of certain components of the application, the applicant's submission is expected to be complete at the time of original submission.

a. All applications are expected to include a comprehensive and readily located list of all clinical sites and manufacturing facilities included or referenced in the application.

b. Any components of the application that FDA agreed at the pre-submission meeting could be submitted after the original application are expected to be received not later than 30 calendar days after receipt of the original application.

c. Incomplete applications, including applications with components that are not received within 30 calendar days after receipt of the original submission, will be subject to a Refuse-to-File decision.

d. The following parameters will apply to applications that are subject to a Refuse-to-File decision and are subsequently filed over protest:

i. The original submission of the application will be subject to the review performance goal as described in Section I.A.1.a.

ii. The application will not be eligible for the other parameters of the Program (e.g., mid-cycle communication, late-cycle meeting).

iii. FDA generally will not review amendments to the application during any review cycle. FDA also generally will not issue information requests to the applicant during the agency's review.

iv. The resubmission goal described in Section I.A.1.b will not apply to any resubmission of the application following an FDA complete response action. Any such resubmission will be reviewed as available resources permit.

e. Since applications are expected to be complete at the time of submission, unsolicited amendments are expected to be rare and not to contain major new information or analyses. Review of unsolicited amendments, including those submitted in response to an FDA communication of deficiencies, will be handled in accordance with the GRMP guidance. This guidance includes the underlying principle that FDA will consider the most efficient path toward completion of a comprehensive review that addresses application deficiencies and leads toward a first cycle approval when possible.

3. Day 74 Letter: FDA will follow existing procedures regarding identification and communication of substantive review issues identified during the initial filing review to the applicant in the "Day 74 letter." If no substantive review issues were identified during the filing review, FDA will so notify the applicant. FDA's filing review represents a preliminary review of the application and is not indicative of deficiencies that may be identified later in the review cycle.

For applications subject to the Program, the timeline for this communication will be within 74 calendar days from the date of FDA receipt of the original submission. The planned timeline for review of the application included in the Day 74 letter for applications in the Program will include:

a. the planned date for the internal mid-cycle review meeting,

b. preliminary plans on whether to hold an Advisory Committee (AC) meeting to discuss the application,

c. a target date for communication of feedback from the review division to the applicant regarding proposed labeling and any postmarket requirements or postmarket commitments the Agency will be requesting.

4. Review performance goals: For original 351(k) BLA submissions that are filed by FDA under the Program, the BsUFA review clock will begin at the conclusion of the 60 calendar day filing review period that begins on the date of FDA receipt of the original submission. The review performance goals for these applications are as follows:

a. Review and act on 90 percent of original 351(k) BLA submissions within 10 months of the 60 day filing date.

5. Mid-Cycle Communication: The FDA Regulatory Project Manager (RPM), and other appropriate members of the FDA review team (e.g., Cross Discipline Team Leader (CDTL)), will call the applicant, generally within 2 weeks following the Agency's internal mid-cycle review meeting, to provide the applicant with an update on the status of the review of their application. An agenda will be sent to the applicant prior to the mid-cycle communication. Scheduling of the internal mid-cycle review meeting will be handled in accordance with the GRMP guidance. The RPM will coordinate the specific date and time of the telephone call with the applicant.

The update should include any significant issues identified by the review team to date, any information requests, and information regarding major concerns with the following:

a. The analytical similarity data, including the potential relevance of any issues (e.g. data analysis issues or potential clinical impact of observed analytical differences), intended to support a demonstration that the proposed biosimilar biological product is highly similar to the reference product.

b. The data intended to support a demonstration of no clinically meaningful differences, including discussion of any immunogenicity issues.

c. The data intended to support a demonstration of interchangeability.

d. CMC issues.

In addition, the update should include preliminary review team thinking regarding the content of the proposed REMS, where applicable, proposed date(s) for the late-cycle meeting, updates regarding plans for the AC meeting (if an AC meeting is anticipated), and other projected milestone dates for the remainder of the review cycle.

6. Late-Cycle and Advisory Committee Meetings: A meeting will be held between the FDA review team and the applicant to discuss the status of the review of the application late in the review cycle. Late-cycle meetings will generally be face-to-face meetings; however, the meeting may be held by teleconference if FDA and the applicant agree. Since the application is expected to be complete at the time of submission, FDA intends to complete primary and secondary reviews of the application in advance of the planned late-cycle meeting.

a. FDA representatives at the late-cycle meeting are expected to include the signatory authority for the application, review team members from appropriate disciplines, and appropriate team leaders and/or supervisors from disciplines for which substantive issues have been identified in the review to date.

b. For applications that will be discussed at an Advisory Committee (AC) meeting, the following parameters apply:

i. FDA intends to convene AC meetings no later than 2 months prior to the BsUFA goal date. The late-cycle meeting will occur not less than 12 calendar days before the date of the AC meeting.

ii. FDA intends to provide final questions for the AC to the sponsor and the AC not less than 2 calendar days before the AC meeting.

iii. Following an AC meeting, FDA and the applicant may agree on the need to discuss feedback from the committee for the purpose of facilitating the remainder of the review. Such a meeting will generally be held by teleconference without a commitment for formal meeting minutes issued by the agency.

c. For applications that will not be discussed at an AC meeting, the late-cycle meeting will generally occur not later than 3 months prior to the BsUFA goal date.

d. Late-Cycle Meeting Background Packages: The Agency background package for the late-cycle meeting will be sent to the applicant not less than 10 calendar days before the late-cycle meeting. The package will consist of any discipline review (DR) letters issues to date, a brief memorandum from the review team outlining substantive application issues (e.g., deficiencies identified by primary and secondary reviews), the Agency's background package for the AC meeting (incorporated by reference if previously sent to the applicant), potential questions and/or points for discussion for the AC meeting (if planned) and the current assessment of the content of proposed REMS or other risk management actions, where applicable.

e. Late-Cycle Meeting Discussion Topics: Potential topics for discussion at the late-cycle meeting include:

- i. major deficiencies identified to date;
- ii. analytical similarity data, including the potential relevance of any issues (e.g. data analysis issues or potential clinical impact of observed analytical differences), intended to support a demonstration that the proposed biosimilar biological product is highly similar to the reference product;
- iii. data intended to support a demonstration of no clinically meaningful differences, including discussion of any immunogenicity issues;
- iv. data intended to support a demonstration of interchangeability;
- v. CMC issues;
- vi. inspectional findings identified to date;
- vii. issues to be discussed at the AC meeting (if planned);
- viii. current assessment of the content of proposed REMS or other risk management actions, where applicable;
- ix. information requests from the review team to the applicant; and additional data or analyses the applicant may wish to submit.

With regard to submission of additional data or analyses, the FDA review team and the applicant will discuss whether such data will be reviewed by the Agency in the current review cycle and, if so, whether the submission will be considered a major amendment and trigger an extension of the BsUFA goal date.

7. Inspections: FDA's goal is to complete all GCP, GLP, and GMP inspections for applications in the Program within 10 months of the date of original receipt of the application. This will allow 2 months at the end of the review cycle to attempt to address any deficiencies identified by the inspections.

8. Assessment of the Program: The Program described in this Section I.B shall be evaluated to determine its impact on the efficiency and effectiveness of the first review cycle for biosimilar biological products. The assessment shall be conducted by an independent contractor with expertise in assessing the quality and efficiency of biopharmaceutical development and regulatory review programs. The statement of work for this effort will be published for public comment prior to beginning the assessment. The assessments will occur continuously throughout the course of the Program.

Aspects and other measures of the Program that will be assessed by the independent contractor include, but are not limited to the following:

- adherence by the applicant and FDA to the current GRMP guidance or the GRMP guidance as updated in accordance with Section I.D, as applicable
- completeness and quality of the submitted application
- number of unsolicited amendments submitted by the applicant
- timing and adequacy of Day 74 letters
- conduct of the mid-cycle communication
- any DR letters issued
- late-cycle meeting background package
- conduct of the late-cycle meeting
- time to approval
- percentage of applications that are approved during the first review cycle
- percentage of application reviews that are extended due to a major amendment
- number of review cycles for applications that are ultimately approved
- time to resubmission for applications that receive a complete response in the first review cycle

This assessment will also include a de-identified analysis of the issues typically discussed during the mid-cycle communication and the late-cycle meeting and the ability of the additional FDA-applicant communications to (a) achieve resolution of these issues during the remainder of the review clock, or (b) allow the applicant to better prepare for a resubmission of the application. Following an FDA regulatory action, the independent contractor will conduct separate interviews of the applicant and the FDA review team to understand each party's perspectives on the review of the application, including whether issues were or should have been identified at the BPD meetings to facilitate application review.

An interim and final assessment of the Program will be published for public comment, with each report followed by a public meeting during which public stakeholders may present their views on the success of the Program to date, including the ability of the Program to help ensure that patients have timely access to safe, effective, and high quality biosimilar biological products. During each public meeting, FDA and the independent contractor will discuss the findings of the interim assessment, including anonymized aggregated feedback from sponsors and FDA review teams resulting from independent contractor interviews. FDA will discuss any issues identified to date including any proposed plans to improve the likelihood of the Program's success.

a. Interim Assessment: An interim assessment of the Program will be published by December 31, 2020, and FDA will hold a public meeting by March 31, 2021.

b. Final Assessment: A final assessment of the Program will be published by June 30, 2022, and FDA will hold a public meeting by September 30, 2022.

C. First Cycle Review Management for Supplements with Clinical Data

1. Notification of Issues Identified during the Filing Review

a. Performance Goal: For supplements with clinical data, FDA will report substantive review issues identified during the initial filing review to the applicant by letter.

b. The timeline for such communication will be within 74 calendar days from the date of FDA receipt of the supplement.

c. If no substantive review issues were identified during the filing review, FDA will so notify the applicant.

d. FDA's filing review represents a preliminary review of the application and is not indicative of deficiencies that may be identified later in the review cycle.

e. FDA will notify the applicant of substantive review issues prior to or on the goal date for 90% of applications.

2. Notification of Planned Review Timelines

a. Performance Goal: For supplements with clinical data, FDA will inform the applicant of the planned timeline for review of the application. The information conveyed will include a target date for communication of feedback from the review division to the applicant regarding proposed labeling, postmarketing requirements, and postmarketing commitments the Agency will be requesting.

b. The planned review timeline will be included with the notification of issues identified during the filing review, within 74 calendar days from the date of FDA receipt of the original supplement.

c. The planned review timelines will be consistent with the GRMP guidance.

d. The planned review timeline will be based on the supplement as submitted.

e. FDA will inform the applicant of the planned review timeline for 90% of all supplements with clinical data.

f. In the event FDA determines that significant deficiencies in the supplement preclude discussion of labeling, postmarketing requirements, or postmarketing commitments by the target date identified in the planned review timeline (e.g., significant safety concern(s), need for a new study(ies) or extensive re-analyses of existing data before approval), FDA will communicate this determination to the applicant in accordance with GRMPs and no later than the target date. In such cases the planned review timeline will be considered to have been met. Communication of FDA's determination may occur by letter, teleconference, facsimile, secure e-mail, or other expedient means.

g. To help expedite the development of biosimilar biological products, communication of the deficiencies identified in the supplement may occur through issuance of a DR letter(s) in advance of the planned target date for initiation of discussions regarding labeling, postmarketing requirements, and postmarketing commitments the Agency may request.

f. If the applicant submits a major amendment(s) (refer to Section I.A.5.a for additional information on major amendments) and the review division chooses to review such amendment(s) during that review cycle, the planned review timeline initially communicated (under Section I.C.2.a and b) will generally no longer be applicable. Review of unsolicited amendments, including those submitted in response to an FDA communication of deficiencies, will be handled in accordance with the GRMP guidance. This guidance includes the underlying principle that FDA will consider the most efficient path toward completion of a comprehensive review that addresses supplement deficiencies and leads toward a first cycle approval when possible.

D. Guidance

FDA and industry share a commitment to ensuring an efficient and effective first cycle review process for all applications subject to the BsUFA program. This commitment is consistent with the principles articulated in the GRMP guidance, which FDA applies to the review of biosimilar and interchangeable products. FDA will update the GRMP guidance during BsUFA II to ensure that it encompasses all review activities for biosimilar and interchangeable products, including principles regarding notification to applicants regarding issues identified during FDA's initial review of the application, principles regarding FDA's notification to applicants regarding planned review timelines, and the importance of internal review timelines that govern aspects of biosimilar and interchangeable product review that are not part of BsUFA performance goals. FDA will publish a revised draft guidance for public comment no later than the end of FY 2018. FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 18 months after the close of the public comment period.

E. Review of Proprietary Names to Reduce Medication Errors

To enhance patient safety, FDA is committed to various measures to reduce medication errors related to look-alike and sound-alike proprietary names and such factors as unclear label abbreviations, acronyms, dose designations, and error prone label and packaging design. The following performance goals apply to FDA's review of biosimilar biological product proprietary names during the biosimilar biological product development (BPD) phase and during FDA's review of a marketing application:

1. Proprietary Name Review Performance Goals During The BPD Phase

a. Review 90% of proprietary name submissions filed within 180 days of receipt. Notify sponsor of tentative acceptance or non-acceptance.

b. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the sponsor can request reconsideration by submitting a written rebuttal with supporting data or request a meeting within 60 days to discuss the initial decision (meeting package required).

c. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the above review performance goals also would apply to the written request for reconsideration with supporting data or the submission of a new proprietary name.

d. A complete submission is required to begin the review clock.

2. Proprietary Name Review Performance Goals During Application Review

a. Review 90% of biosimilar biological product proprietary name submissions filed within 90 days of receipt. Notify sponsor of tentative acceptance/non-acceptance.

b. A supplemental review will be done meeting the above review performance goals if the proprietary name has been submitted previously (during the BPD phase) and has received tentative acceptance.

c. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the sponsor can request reconsideration by submitting a written rebuttal with supporting data or request a meeting within 60 days to discuss the initial decision (meeting package required).

d. If the proprietary name is found to be unacceptable, the above review performance goals apply to the written request for reconsideration with supporting data or the submission of a new proprietary name.

e. A complete submission is required to begin the review clock.

F. Major Dispute Resolution

1. Procedure: For procedural or scientific matters involving the review of biosimilar biological product applications and supplements (as defined in BsUFA) that cannot be resolved at the signatory authority level (including a request for reconsideration by the signatory authority after reviewing any materials that are planned to be forwarded with an appeal to the next level), the response to appeals of decisions will occur within 30 calendar days of the Center's receipt of the written appeal.

2. Performance goal: 90% of such responses are provided within 30 calendar days of the Center's receipt of the written appeal.

3. Conditions:

a. Sponsors should first try to resolve the procedural or scientific issue at the signatory authority level. If it cannot be resolved at that level, it should be appealed to the next higher organizational level (with a copy to the signatory authority) and then, if necessary, to the next higher organizational level.

b. Responses should be either verbal (followed by a written confirmation within 14 calendar days of the verbal notification) or written and should ordinarily be to either grant or deny the appeal.

c. If the decision is to deny the appeal, the response should include reasons for the denial and any actions the sponsor might take to persuade the Agency to reverse its decision.

d. In some cases, further data or further input from others might be needed to reach a decision on the appeal. In these cases, the "response" should be the plan for obtaining that information (e.g., requesting further information from the sponsor, scheduling a meeting with the sponsor, scheduling the issue for discussion at the next scheduled available advisory committee).

e. In these cases, once the required information is received by the Agency (including any advice from an advisory committee), the person to whom the appeal was made, again has 30 calendar days from the receipt of the required information in which to either deny or grant the appeal.

f. Again, if the decision is to deny the appeal, the response should include the reasons for the denial and any actions the sponsor might take to persuade the Agency to reverse its decision.

g. Note: If the Agency decides to present the issue to an advisory committee and there are not 30 days before the next scheduled advisory committee, the issue will be presented at the following scheduled committee meeting to allow conformance with advisory committee administrative procedures.

G. Clinical Holds

1. Procedure: The Center should respond to a sponsor's complete response to a clinical hold within 30 days of the Agency's receipt of the submission of such sponsor response.

2. Performance goal: 90% of such responses are provided within 30 calendar days of the Agency's receipt of the sponsor's response.

H. Special Protocol Question Assessment and Agreement

1. Procedure: Upon specific request by a sponsor (including specific questions that the sponsor desires to be answered), the Agency will evaluate certain protocols and related issues to assess whether the design is adequate to meet scientific and regulatory requirements identified by the sponsor.

a. The sponsor should submit a limited number of specific questions about the protocol design and scientific and regulatory requirements for which the sponsor seeks agreement (e.g., are the clinical endpoints adequate to assess whether there are clinically meaningful differences between the proposed biosimilar biological product and the reference product).

b. Within 45 days of Agency receipt of the protocol and specific questions, the Agency will provide a written response to the sponsor that includes a succinct assessment of the protocol and answers to the questions posed by the sponsor. If the Agency does not agree that the protocol design, execution plans, and data analyses are adequate to achieve the goals of the sponsor, the reasons for the disagreement will be explained in the response.

c. Protocols that qualify for this program include any necessary clinical study or studies to prove biosimilarity and/or interchangeability (e.g., protocols for pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics studies, protocols for comparative clinical studies that will form the primary basis for demonstrating that there are no clinically meaningful differences between the proposed biosimilar biological product and the reference product, and protocols for clinical studies intended to support a demonstration of interchangeability). For such protocols to qualify for this comprehensive protocol assessment, the sponsor must have had a BPD Type 2 or 3 Meeting, as defined in section I.I, below, with the review division so that the division is aware of the developmental context in which the protocol is being reviewed and the questions being answered.

d. If a protocol is reviewed under the process outlined above, and agreement with the Agency is reached on design, execution, and analyses, and if the results of the trial conducted under the protocol substantiate the hypothesis of the protocol, the Agency agrees that the data from the protocol can be used as part of the primary basis for approval of the product. The fundamental agreement here is that having agreed to the design, execution, and analyses proposed in protocols reviewed under this process, the Agency will not later alter its perspective on the issues of design, execution, or analyses unless public health concerns unrecognized at the time of protocol assessment under this process are evident.

2. Performance goal: 90% of special protocols assessments and agreement requests completed and returned to sponsor within 45 days.

3. Reporting: The Agency will track and report the number of original special protocol assessments and resubmissions per original special protocol assessment.

I. Meeting Management Goals

Formal BsUFA meetings between sponsors and FDA consist of Biosimilar Initial Advisory and BPD Type 1-4 meetings. These meetings are further described below.

A Biosimilar Initial Advisory Meeting is an initial assessment limited to a general discussion regarding whether licensure under section 351(k) of the Public Health Service Act may be feasible for a particular product, and, if so, general advice on the expected content of the development program. Such term does not include any meeting that involves substantive review of summary data or full study reports.

A BPD Type 1 Meeting is a meeting which is necessary for an otherwise stalled drug development program to proceed (e.g. meeting to discuss clinical holds, dispute resolution meeting), a special protocol assessment meeting, or a meeting to address an important safety issue.

A BPD Type 2 Meeting is a meeting to discuss a specific issue (e.g., proposed study design or endpoints) or questions where FDA will provide targeted advice regarding an ongoing biosimilar biological product development program. Such term may include substantive review of summary data, but does not include review of full study reports.

A BPD Type 3 Meeting is an in depth data review and advice meeting regarding an ongoing biosimilar biological product development program. Such term includes substantive review of full study reports, FDA advice regarding the similarity between the proposed biosimilar biological product and the reference product, and FDA advice regarding additional studies, including design and analysis.

A BPD Type 4 Meeting is a pre-submission meeting to discuss the format and content of a complete application for an original biosimilar biological product application under the Program or supplement submitted under 351(k) of the PHS Act. The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the format and content of the planned submission and other items, including identification of those studies that the sponsor is relying on to support a demonstration of biosimilarity or interchangeability, discussion of any potential review issues identified based on the information provided, identification of the status of ongoing or needed studies to adequately to address the Pediatric Research Equity Act (PREA), acquainting FDA reviewers with the general information to be submitted in the marketing application (including technical information), and discussion of the best approach to the presentation and formatting of data in the marketing application.

1. Response to Meeting Requests

a. Procedure: FDA will notify the requester in writing of the date, time, and place for the meeting, as well as expected Center participants following receipt of a formal meeting request and background package. Table 1 below indicates the timeframes for FDA's response to a meeting request.

TABLE 1

Meeting type	Response time (calendar days)
Biosimilar Initial Advisory	21
BPD Type 1	14
BPD Type 2-4	21

For Biosimilar Initial Advisory and BPD Type 2 meetings, the sponsor may request a written response to its questions, rather than a face-to-face meeting, videoconference or teleconference. If a written response is deemed appropriate, FDA will notify the requester of the date it intends to send the written response. This date will be consistent with the timeframes specified in Table 2 below for the specific meeting type.

b. Performance Goal: FDA will respond to meeting requests and provide notification within the response times noted in Table 1 for 90 percent of each meeting type.

2. Scheduling Meetings

a. Procedure: FDA will schedule the meeting on the next available date at which all applicable Center personnel are available to attend, consistent with the component's other business; however, the meeting should be scheduled consistent with the type of meeting requested. Table 2 below indicates the timeframes for FDA to schedule the meeting following receipt of a formal meeting request and background package, or in the case of a written response for Biosimilar Initial Advisory and BPD Type 2 meetings, the timeframes for the Agency to send the written response. If the requested date for any meeting type is greater than the specified timeframe, the meeting date should be within 14 calendar days of the requested date.

Meeting type	Meeting scheduling or written response time
Biosimilar Initial Advisory	75 calendar days from receipt of meeting request and background package.
BPD 2	90 calendar days from receipt of meeting request and background package.
Meeting Scheduling Time
BPD 1	30 calendar days from receipt of meeting request and background package.
BPD 3	120 calendar days from receipt of meeting request and background package.
BPD 4	60 calendar days from receipt of meeting request and background package.

b. Performance goal:

TABLE 3

Meeting type	Goal
BPD Type 2	FY 2018–2019: 80% of meetings are held or written responses are sent within the timeframe. FY 2020–2022: 90% of meetings are held or written responses are sent within the timeframe.
Biosimilar Initial Advisory	90% of meetings are held or written responses are sent within the timeframe.
BPD Type 1, 3, and 4.	90% of meetings are held within the timeframe for each meeting type.

3. Preliminary Responses

a. Procedure: The Agency will send preliminary responses to the sponsor's questions contained in the background package no later than five calendar days before the face-to-face, videoconference or teleconference meeting date for BPD Type 2 and Type 3 meetings.

b. Performance goal:

Meeting type
BPD Type 2	- FY 2018: 70% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date. - FY 2019, 75% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date. - FY 2020, 80% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date. - FY 2021, 85% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date. - FY 2022, 90% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date.
BPD Type 3	90% of preliminary responses to questions are issued by FDA no later than five calendar days before the meeting date.

4. Meeting Minutes

a. Procedure: The Agency will prepare minutes which will be available to the sponsor 30 calendar days after the meeting. The minutes will clearly outline the important agreements, disagreements, issues for further discussion, and action items from the meeting in bulleted form and need not be in great detail. Meeting minutes are not necessary if the Agency transmits a written response for Biosimilar Initial Advisory and BPD Type 2 meetings.

b. Performance Goal: 90% of minutes are issued within 30 calendar days of the date of the meeting.

5. Conditions: For a meeting to qualify for these performance goals:

a. A written request and supporting documentation (i.e., the background package) must be submitted to the appropriate review division or office.

b. The request must provide:

i. A brief statement of the purpose of the meeting, the sponsor's proposal for the type of meeting, and the sponsor's proposal for a face-to-face meeting, teleconference, or for a written response (Biosimilar Initial Advisory and BPD Type 2 meetings only);

ii. A listing of the specific objectives/outcomes the requester expects from the meeting;

iii. A proposed agenda, including estimated times needed for each agenda item;

iv. A list of questions, grouped by discipline. For each question there should be a brief explanation of the context and purpose of the question.

v. A listing of planned external attendees; and

vi. A listing of requested participants/disciplines representative(s) from the Center with an explanation for the request as appropriate.

vii. Suggested dates and times (e.g., morning or afternoon) for the meeting that are within or beyond the appropriate time frame of the meeting type being requested.

c. The Agency concurs that the meeting will serve a useful purpose (i.e., it is not premature or clearly unnecessary). However, requests for BPD Type 2, 3, and 4 Meetings will be honored except in the most unusual circumstances.

The Center may determine that a different type of meeting (i.e., Biosimilar Initial Advisory, or BPD Type 1–4) is more appropriate and it may grant a meeting of a different type than requested, which may require the payment of a biosimilar biological product development fee as described in section 744H of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act before the meeting will be provided. If a biosimilar biological product development fee is required under section 744H, and the sponsor does not pay the fee within the time frame required under section 744H, the meeting will be cancelled. If the sponsor pays the biosimilar biological product development fee after the meeting has been cancelled due to non-payment, the time frame described in section I.I.1.a will be calculated from the date on which FDA received the payment, not the date on which the sponsor originally submitted the meeting request.

Sponsors are encouraged to consult available FDA guidance to obtain further information on recommended meeting procedures.

6. Guidance

a. FDA will publish revised draft guidance on Formal Meetings Between the FDA and Biosimilar Biological Product Sponsors or Applicants no later than September 30, 2018.

b. FDA will update the current draft or final guidance on Best Practices for Communication Between IND Sponsors and FDA During Drug Development, as appropriate, to apply to communications between IND sponsors and FDA during biosimilar biological product development. FDA will publish a revised draft or final guidance by December 31, 2018.

II. ADVANCING DEVELOPMENT OF BIOSIMILAR BIOLOGICAL PRODUCTS THROUGH FURTHER CLARIFICATION OF THE 351(K) REGULATORY PATHWAY

A. On or before December 31, 2017, FDA will publish draft guidance describing considerations in demonstrating interchangeability with a reference product. FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 24 months after the close of the public comment period.

B. On or before December 31, 2017, FDA will publish draft guidance describing statistical considerations for the analysis of analytic similarity data intended to support a demonstration of “highly similar” for biosimilar biological products. FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 18 months after the close of the public comment period.

C. On or before March 31, 2019, FDA will publish draft guidance describing processes and further considerations related to post-approval manufacturing changes for biosimilar biological products. FDA will work toward the goal of publishing a revised draft or final guidance within 18 months after the close of the public comment period.

D. FDA will work towards the goal of publishing revised draft guidance or final guidance documents on or before May 31, 2019 for draft guidances published between January 1, 2014 and September 30, 2017, other than those described in (II.A–C). These draft guidances will include:

1. Clinical Pharmacology Data to Support a Demonstration of Biosimilarity to a Reference Product (draft guidance published in May 2014)

2. Nonproprietary Naming of Biological Products (draft guidance published in August 2015)

3. Labeling for Biosimilar Biological Products (draft guidance published in March 2016)

III. ENHANCING CAPACITY FOR BIOSIMILAR REGULATIONS AND GUIDANCE DEVELOPMENT, REVIEWER TRAINING, AND TIMELY COMMUNICATION

A. FDA will strengthen the staff capacity to develop new regulations and guidance to clarify scientific criteria for biosimilar development and approval to provide certainty to industry and other stakeholders related to key regulatory issues including the scope of eligible biosimilar biological products.

B. FDA will strengthen staff capacity to develop or revise MaPPs, SOPPs, and review templates to facilitate rapid update and application of new policies and guidance by review staff, and to develop and deliver timely comprehensive training to all CDER and CBER review staff and special government employees involved in the review of 351(k) BLAs.

C. FDA will strengthen staff capacity to deliver timely information to the public to improve public understanding of biosimilarity and interchangeability.

D. FDA will strengthen staff capacity to deliver information concerning the date of first licensure and the reference product exclusivity expiry date, to be included in the Purple Book.

FDA will update the Purple Book to include the following information: the BLA number, product name, proprietary name, date of licensure, interchangeable or biosimilar determination, and whether the BLA has been withdrawn. FDA will update this information in the Purple Book within 30 days after approval or withdrawal. In addition, within 30 days after FDA determines the date of first licensure, the date of first licensure and the reference product exclusivity expiry date will be included in the Purple Book.

IV. ENHANCING MANAGEMENT OF USER FEE RESOURCES

FDA will establish an independent user fee structure and fee amounts to ensure stable and predictable user fee funding, improve the predictability of FDA funding and sponsor invoices, improve efficiency by simplifying the administration of user fees, and enhance flexibility of financial mechanisms to improve management of BsUFA program funding. FDA is committed to enhancing management of BsUFA resources and ensuring BsUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner. FDA will conduct a series of resource capacity planning and financial transparency activities to enhance management of BsUFA resources in BsUFA II.

A. Resource Capacity Planning and Modernized Time Reporting

FDA is committed to enhancing management of BsUFA resources in BsUFA II. FDA will conduct activities to develop a resource capacity planning function and modernized time reporting approach in BsUFA II.

1. FDA will publish a resource capacity planning and modernized time reporting implementation plan that includes BsUFA no later than the 2nd quarter of FY 2018. FDA will continue to utilize information and recommendations from a third party assessment of resource capacity planning, financial analytics, and modernized time reporting for BsUFA as part of the implementation plan.

2. FDA will staff a resource capacity planning team that will implement and manage a capacity planning system across the BsUFA program in BsUFA II.

3. FDA will obtain through a contract with an independent accounting or consulting firm an evaluation of options and recommendations for a new methodology to accurately assess changes in the resource and capacity needs of the biosimilar biological product review program. The BsUFA evaluation will be conducted under the same contract and by the same independent accounting or consulting firm that will evaluate options and recommendations for a new methodology to accurately assess changes in the resource and capacity needs of the human drug review program in PDUFA VI. The report will be published no later than end of FY 2020 for public comment. Upon review of the report and comments, FDA will implement robust methodologies for assessing resource needs of the program. This will include the adoption of a new resource capacity adjustment methodology that accounts for sustained increases in BsUFA workload.

4. FDA recognizes that revenue generated by the capacity adjustment will be allocated to and used by organizational review components engaged in direct review work to enhance resources and expand staff capacity and capability. FDA will document in the annual financial report how the capacity adjustment fee revenues are being utilized.

B. Financial Transparency and Efficiency

FDA is committed to ensuring BsUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner. FDA will conduct activities to evaluate the financial administration of the BsUFA program to help identify areas to enhance efficiency. FDA will also conduct activities to enhance transparency of BsUFA program resources.

1. FDA will contract with an independent third party to conduct an evaluation of BsUFA program resource management during FY 2018 to ensure that BsUFA user fee resources are administered, allocated, and reported in an efficient and transparent manner in BsUFA II. The BsUFA evaluation will be conducted under the same contract and by the same independent third party that will conduct an evaluation of the PDUFA program resource management. The study will include, but is not limited to, the following areas:

- a. Evaluate all components of the BsUFA program resource planning, request, and allocation process from when FDA receives the user fee funds through when funds are spent. The contractor will recommend options to improve the process and data needed to enhance resource management decisions.

- b. Assess how FDA administers BsUFA user fees organizationally, including, but not limited to, billing, user fee collection, and execution. The contractor will recommend options to enhance the efficiency of user fee administration.

- c. Evaluate FDA's existing BsUFA program financial and administrative oversight and governance functions. Assess alternative governance models including roles and responsibilities, organizational location, and personnel skill sets required. The contractor will recommend options on the most effective governance model to support the biosimilar biological product review program.

- d. Assess FDA's technical capabilities to conduct effective financial management and planning in the context of generally accepted government resource management and planning practices. The contractor will recommend options for the technical capabilities needed by financial personnel involved in BsUFA resource management to enhance financial management and planning.

2. FDA will publish a BsUFA five-year financial plan no later than the 2nd quarter of FY 2018. FDA will publish updates to the five-year plan no later than the 2nd quarter of each subsequent fiscal year.

3. FDA will convene a public meeting no later than the third quarter of each fiscal year starting in FY 2019 to discuss the BsUFA five-year financial plan, report on the contribution of the BsUFA spending trigger to the BsUFA program, along with the Agency's progress in implementing modernized time reporting, resource capacity planning, and the modernized user fee structure.

C. Management of Carryover Balance

FDA is committed to reducing the carryover balance to no greater than 21 weeks of the FY 2022 target revenue by the end of FY 2022. However, if FDA is unable to reduce the carryover balance to no greater than 21 weeks during the final year (e.g., over collections in FY 2022 that increase the carryover balance beyond 21 weeks), FDA will (1) outline its plan to reduce the carryover balance to no greater than 21 weeks in the FY 2022 BsUFA financial report and (2) update the BsUFA five-year financial plan.

V. IMPROVING FDA HIRING AND RETENTION OF REVIEW STAFF

To speed and improve development of safe and effective biosimilar biological products for patients, enhancements to the biosimilar biological review program require that FDA hire and retain sufficient numbers and types of technical and scientific experts to efficiently conduct reviews of 351(k) applications. In order to strengthen this core function and increase public access to biosimilar biological products, the FDA will commit to do the following:

A. Completion of Modernization of the Hiring System Infrastructure and Augmentation of System Capacity

1. Complete implementation of FTE-based position management system capability.

- a. FDA will complete development of position management baseline accounting of all current positions and FTE counts engaged in the biosimilar biological product review program for each applicable Center and Office including filled and vacant positions, a governance structure for on-going position management that will be accountable to FDA senior management, and position management policy and guidelines ratified by FDA senior management, outlining processes for adding new positions, deleting positions, and changing established positions.

b. FDA will complete implementation of the new position-based management system.

2. Complete implementation of an online position classification system

a. FDA will finalize the establishment of an online Position Description (PD) library. The library will include all current well-classified PDs and current standardized PDs. Once operational, any new PDs classified using the on-line classification tools, and any newly created standardized PDs, will be stored and accessible within FDA's PD library and available for FDA-wide use as appropriate.

3. Complete implementation of corporate recruiting

a. For key scientific and technical disciplines commonly needed across offices engaged in the biosimilar biological product review program, FDA will complete the transition from the use of individual vacancy announcements for individual offices to expanded use of a common vacancy announcement and certificate of eligible job applicants that can be used by multiple offices. As a part of this effort, FDA will complete the transition from use of individual announcements that are posted for a limited period to common vacancy announcements with open continuous posting to maximize the opportunity for qualified applicants to apply for these positions.

B. Augmentation of Hiring Staff Capacity and Capability

In recognition of the chronic and continuing difficulties of recruiting and retaining sufficient numbers of qualified Human Resources (HR) staff, FDA will engage a qualified contractor to provide continuous support throughout BsUFA II to augment the existing FDA HR staff capacity and capabilities. The utilization of a qualified contractor will assist FDA in successfully accomplishing BsUFA II goals for recruitment and retention of biosimilar biological product review program staff.

C. Complete Establishment of a Dedicated Function to Ensure Needed Scientific Staffing for Human Drug Review Including for Review of Biosimilar Biological Products

1. Rapid advances in the science and technology of biosimilar biological product development and manufacturing require FDA's biosimilar biological product review program staff to keep pace with science and learn innovative methods and techniques for review of new therapies. FDA will complete the establishment of a new dedicated unit within the Office of Medical Products and Tobacco charged with the continuous recruiting, staffing, and retention of scientific, technical, and professional staff for the PDUFA and BsUFA review programs.

a. The unit will continuously develop and implement scientific staff hiring strategies and plans, working closely with the center review offices and the FDA HR office, to meet discipline-specific hiring commitments and other targeted staffing needs. It will function as a scientific-focused recruiter conducting ongoing proactive outreach to source qualified candidates, and conducting competitive recruiting to fill vacancies that require top scientific, technical, and professional talent.

b. The unit will conduct analyses, no less than annually, of compensation and other factors affecting retention of key staff in targeted disciplines and provide leadership and support for agency compensation oversight boards that currently exist or may be established as needed to ensure retention of key scientific, technical, and professional staff.

D. Set Clear Goals for Biosimilar Biological Product Review Program Hiring

1. FDA will establish priorities for management of the metric goals for targeted hires within the biosimilar biological product review program staff for BsUFA II. In particular, FDA will target hiring 15 FTE in FY 2018, to enhance capacity for biosimilar guidance development, reviewer training, and timely communication.

2. FDA will confirm progress in the hiring of BsUFA I FTEs. FDA will report on progress against the hiring goal for BsUFA II on a quarterly basis posting updates to the FDA website BsUFA Performance webpage.

E. Comprehensive and Continuous Assessment of Hiring and Retention

FDA hiring and retention of staff for the biosimilar biological product review program will be evaluated by a qualified, independent contractor with expertise in assessing HR operations and transformation. The BsUFA II assessment will be conducted under the same contract and by the same independent contractor that will conduct the assessment related to hiring and retention of staff for the human drug review program in PDUFA VI. It will include continuous assessments throughout the course of implementation of the performance initiatives identified in Sections V.A–D, and metrics including, but not limited to, those related to recruiting and retention in the PDUFA and BsUFA review programs including, but not limited to, specifically targeted scientific disciplines and levels of experience. The contractor will conduct a comprehensive review of current hiring processes and hiring staff capacity and capabilities that contribute to achievement of successes, potential problems, or delays in PDUFA or BsUFA review program staff hiring. This includes the entire hiring function and related capabilities. FDA and regulated industry leadership will periodically and regularly assess the progress of hiring and retention throughout BsUFA II.

1. Initial Assessment: The assessment will include an initial baseline assessment to be conducted and completed no later than December 31, 2017. The initial baseline study will include an evaluation of the current state and provide recommended options to address any identified gaps or areas identified as priorities for improvement, and a study report to be published no later than December 31, 2017. FDA will hold a public meeting no later than December 31, 2017, to present and discuss report findings, and present its specific plans, including agency senior management oversight, and timeline for implementing recommended enhancements to be fully operational by no later than December 31, 2018.

2. Interim Assessment: An interim assessment will be published by March 31, 2020, for public comment. By June 30, 2020, FDA will hold a public meeting during which the public may present their views. FDA will discuss the findings of the interim assessment, including progress relative to program milestones and metrics, and other aggregated feedback from internal customers and participants in HR services that may be included in the continuous assessment. FDA will also address any issues identified to date including actions proposed to improve the likelihood of success of the program.

3. Final Assessment: A final assessment will be published by December 31, 2021, for public comment. FDA will hold a public meeting by no later than March 30, 2022, during which the public may present their views. FDA will discuss the findings of the final assessment, including progress relative to program milestones and metrics, and other aggregated feedback from internal customers and participants in HR services that may be included in the continuous assessment. FDA will also address any issues identified and plans for addressing these issues.

V. DEFINITIONS AND EXPLANATION OF TERMS

A. The term "review and act on" means the issuance of a complete action letter after the complete review of a filed complete application. The action letter, if it is not an approval, will set forth in detail the specific deficiencies and, where appropriate, the actions necessary to place the application in condition for approval.

B. A resubmitted original application is a complete response to an action letter addressing all identified deficiencies.

ARMS SALES NOTIFICATION

POLICY JUSTIFICATION

Australia—ALE-70 Radio Frequency Countermeasures (RFCM)

The Government of Australia has requested the possible sale of one thousand nine hundred fifty-two (1,952) ALE-70(V)/T-1687A Electronic Towed Decoy Countermeasures, publications and technical documentation, other technical assistance, U.S. Government and contractor engineering, technical and logistics support services, and other related elements of logistical and program support. The total estimated program cost is $108.7 million.

This sale will contribute to the foreign policy and national security of the United States by helping to improve the security of a major non-NATO ally and continues to be an important force for political stability, security, and economic development in the Western Pacific. It is vital to the U.S. national interest to assist our ally in developing and maintaining a strong and ready self-defense capability.

The proposed sale will improve Australia's F-35 survivability and will enhance its capability to deter global threats, strengthen its homeland defense, and cooperate in coalition defense initiatives. Australia will have no difficulty absorbing this equipment into its armed forces.

The proposed sale of this equipment and support will not alter the basic military balance in the region.

The principal contractor will be British Aerospace Enterprise (BAE), Nashua, NH. There are no offsets proposed in connection with this potential sale.

Implementation of this proposed sale will not require the assignment of any additional U.S. Government or contractor representatives to Australia.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this proposed sale.

TRANSMITTAL NO. 17-38

Notice of Proposed Issuance of Letter of Offer Pursuant to Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act

Annex Item No. vii

(vii) Sensitivity of Technology:

1. The ALE-70 is a towed radio frequency countermeasure designed for deployment from the F-35 aircraft and is comprised of electronic and mechanical sub-assemblies to accomplish the intended purpose. The ALE-70 consists of three major components: the reel/launcher assembly, the tow line, and the T-1687 countermeasure transmitter. Upon deployment from the aircraft, the countermeasure transmitter is reeled out to a prescribed distance, held in tow behind the jet by the tow line and emits waveforms in response to commands from the countermeasure controller located in the jet. The waveforms are utilized to confuse or decoy adversary radars or radar guided weapons. Designed and produced by BAE Systems of Nashua, New Hampshire, the ALE-70 employs amplifiers based on Gallium Nitride (GaN) technology to meet stringent output requirements.

2. The ALE-70 generates, amplifies, and transmits signals in response to commands from the countermeasures controller which remains aboard the jet. Neither the countermeasure transmitter nor the reel/launcher assembly contains stored information or software representing critical program information. As the ALE-70 contains no software or stored waveforms/techniques, Anti-Tampering security measures are not required. ALE-70 hardware is classified SECRET to protect specific data elements associated with the performance of the countermeasure.

3. If a technologically advanced adversary were to obtain knowledge of the specific hardware and software elements, the information could be used to develop countermeasures or equivalent system which might reduce system effectiveness or be used in the development of a system with similar or advanced capabilities.

4. A determination has been made that Australia can provide substantially the same degree of protection for the sensitive technology being released as the U.S. Government. This sale is necessary in furtherance of the U.S. foreign policy and national security objectives outlined in the Policy Justification.

5. All defense articles and services listed in this transmittal have been authorized for release and export to Australia.

POLICY JUSTIFICATION

Nigeria—A-29 Super Tucano Aircraft, Weapons and Associated Support

The Government of Nigeria requests twelve (12) A-29 Super Tucano aircraft and weapons, including all associated training, spare parts, aviation and ground support equipment, and hangar, facilities, and infrastructure required to support the program. The estimated total case value is $593 million.

These aircraft will support Nigerian military operations against terrorist organization Boko Haram and to counter illicit trafficking in Nigeria and the Gulf of Guinea. The Super Tucano is a sustainable platform for counterterrorism, counter insurgency, border surveillance, and illicit trade interdiction operations. The proposed sale will support U.S. foreign policy objectives by helping Nigeria to meet shared counterterrorism objectives for the region. This proposed sale will strengthen the U.S. security relationship with Africa's largest democracy. Nigeria will have no difficulty absorbing these aircraft into its armed forces.

The proposed sale of this equipment and support does not alter the basic military balance in the region.

The prime contractor is the Sierra Nevada Corporation, headquartered in Centennial, Colorado. There are no known offset agreements proposed in connection with this potential sale.

Implementation of this proposed sale will require the assignment of U.S. Government or contractor representatives to Nigeria for mobile training teams and contract logistic support.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this proposed sale.

TRANSMITTAL NO. 16-55

Notice of Proposed Issuance of Letter of Offer Pursuant to Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act

Annex Item No. vii

(vii) Sensitivity of Technology:

1. This sale involves the release of sensitive weapons software technology information to Nigeria. Software associated with the following weapons will be included in the aircraft operational flight program to support a future weapons capability.

2. Sensitive and/or classified (up to SECRET) elements of the proposed A-29 sale to Nigeria includes the hardware and associated software with: Advanced Precision Kill Weapon System (APKWS) laser guided rockets, Guided Bomb Unit (GBU)-12/58 Paveway II laser guided tail kits, and Mark (MK)-81/82 general purpose bombs.

3. The Hydra 70 Rocket System is a modernized version of the 2.75 inch (70 mm) unguided rocket body with the MK66 Rocket Motor.

4. The APKWS is a low cost semi-active laser guidance kit developed by BAE Systems which is added to current unguided 70 mm rocket motors and warheads similar to and including the Hydra 70 rocket. It is a low collateral damage weapon that can effectively strike both soft and lightly armored targets. APKWS turns a standard unguided 2.75 inch (70 mm) rocket into a precision laser-guided rocket, classification up to SECRET.

5. GBU-12/58 Paveway II (PW-II) Tailkits: 500-lb (GBU-12) and 250-lb (GBU-58) are laser-guided ballistic bombs (LGBs) developed by Raytheon and Lockheed Martin. The LGB is a maneuverable, free-fall weapon that guides to a spot of laser energy reflected off of the target. The LGB is delivered like a normal general purpose (GP) warhead and the semi-active guidance corrects for many of the normal errors inherent in any delivery system. Laser designation for the weapon can be provided by a variety of laser target markers or designators. The tailkit consists of a laser guidance kit, a computer control group (CCG) and a warhead specific Air Foil Group (AFG), that attach to the nose and tail of MK 81 and MK 82 General Purpose (GP) bomb bodies to create an LGB. This sale includes the tailkits to transform Nigeria's existing 500-lb and 250-lb GP bomb bodies into GBU-12s and GBU-58s respectively. Nigeria is also buying additional GBU-58s, 250-lb (MK-81) guided bombs. The overall weapon is CONFIDENTIAL.

6. AN/AAQ-22F Brite Star Electro-Optical/Infrared (EO/IR) Multi-Sensor Targeting System developed by FLIR. The system is a five field-of-view (FOV) large format thermal imager, three FOV color daylight camera with laser designator for terminal guidance of LGBs and IR-guided rockets. The system is classified as UNCLASSIFIED.

7. This sale is necessary in furtherance of U.S. foreign policy and national security objectives outlined in the Policy Justification. Moreover, the benefits to be derived from this sale, as outlined in the Policy Justification, outweigh the potential damage that could result if the sensitive technology were revealed to unauthorized persons.

8. All defense articles and services listed in this transmittal are authorized for release and export to the Government of Nigeria.

CONFIRMATION OF CHRISTOPHER WRAY

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. President, I wish to voice my support for Christopher Wray's confirmation to be the next Director of the FBI. After meeting with Mr. Wray and reviewing his record, I believe he possesses the independence and integrity necessary to lead the Bureau through this tumultuous period.

This vacancy arose because President Trump abruptly fired then-Director James Comey. The circumstances surrounding Mr. Comey's firing are alarming and suspicious. Mr. Comey testified under oath that the President not only demanded his personal loyalty on numerous occasions but also intimidated that Mr. Comey should stop investigating then-National Security Advisor Michael Flynn and Russian interference in the 2016 elections.

Mr. Wray will face numerous challenges as the new Director of the FBI. He will have to deal with a President who has shown a complete disregard for traditional protocols designed to ensure the agency's independence. During our meeting, Mr. Wray assured me that he would remain independent from the President and would reject any attempts by President Trump to inappropriately intervene in the work of the FBI.

During our meeting, I also impressed upon Mr. Wray the importance of consolidating the FBI's staff in one building. The FBI has long outgrown its current space and the building is deteriorating, which compromises the agency's mission. I look forward to working with him to give FBI personnel the facilities they deserve.

As Mr. Wray takes his position, he will need to work immediately to affirm the FBI's independence and restore the confidence of an agency shaken by the President's inappropriate conduct with respect to Mr. Comey and other matters. This Congress must conduct vigorous oversight to ensure that Mr. Wray maintains the high standard of integrity that he has promised and to respond to any attempts by the President or his political advisors to exert undue influence at the FBI. I pledge to do everything I can to support his important mission and the vital work of the FBI.

U.S.-CUBA TRADE ACT OF 2017

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I wish to propose a new day in U.S. relations with the country of Cuba. With his recent imposition of new restrictions, the President presented one vision of that relationship—one that looks backwards and reverts to a failed policy of isolation that has done nothing to improve the lives of the Cuban people and has harmed the American economy. I would like to present an alternative vision—one that looks to the future and at fostering the exchange of ideas and commerce between the two countries.

It is often noted that Cuba is less than 100 miles away, but decades behind the United States, in no small part because of the U.S. embargo. Decades of the same, tired, failing economic policies left the Cuban Government in place and only hurt the Cuban people and American farmers and manufacturers.

As Cuban-American relations thawed under Presidents Bush and Obama, the Cuban Government decided to try something different. Private entrepreneurs are operating an increasing number of restaurants, taxis, and other tourist-related businesses. Cubans are opening up their homes for visitors to stay in and selling products directly to visiting Americans. In addition, the government's grip on information and communication is necessarily weakening as technology and the Internet inevitably permeate the country.

The U.S. has come a long way since the 1990s and hardly resembles the world of the 1960s. Our policies toward Cuba should reflect that change. The U.S.-Cuba Trade Act of 2017 would completely remove the architecture of sanctions against Cuba and establish normal trade relations with that country.

I want to be clear that this is not a free pass for the Cuban Government. I continue to have grave concerns about its suppression of pro-democracy movements, but I reject the view that continuing to try and ostracize Cuba will bring positive change. The past five decades provide empirical evidence that it will not. I also reject the cynical argument that the U.S. must choose between engagement with Cuba and support for basic human rights and dignity. Indeed, if the past half century has shown us anything, it is that smart, principled engagement is the way to bring about greater economic and political freedom for the Cuban people.

Just as important as what the embargo means for the Cuban people is what it means for U.S. farmers and businesses. Even with the changes made by the Obama administration, it remains almost impossible to do business in Cuba. Cuba is a natural customer of the United States, but restrictions on credit and travel, among others, have severely hampered the ability of U.S. exporters to do business in the Cuban market. The question is: What are we getting by surrendering a market that should be ours to the EU, China, Brazil, and others? I am afraid that the answer is nothing.

That is why I introduced the U.S.-Cuba Trade Act of 2017, to finally put an end to the ineffective embargo against Cuba.

HONORING CORPSMAN FIRST CLASS RYAN LOHREY

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize and honor the extraordinary service and sacrifice of U.S. Navy Hospital Corpsman First Class Ryan Lohrey of Middletown, IN. Dedication to his country, loyalty to his fellow servicemembers, and a deep love for his family were the qualities that defined Ryan's life.

A native of Middletown, IN, Ryan graduated from Shenandoah High School in 2005. Two years after graduation, he joined the U.S. Navy, where he served our country as a special amphibious reconnaissance corpsman, providing medical care to his fellow servicemembers.

On Monday, July 10, 2017, Ryan and 15 other servicemembers died tragically when the KC-130 aircraft they were on crashed in Mississippi. The plane was carrying servicemembers from Marine Aerial Refueler Transport Squadron 452 and the 2d Marine Raider Battalion, a special operations unit. Hundreds gathered on July 27 as a military procession honored Ryan from Indianapolis International Airport to New Castle, IN. He received military honors during his funeral in Middletown on July 31, 2017.

Ryan is remembered for his selfless sacrifice, humility, patience, and infectious smile. He distinguished himself through his service in the U.S. Navy, where he deployed with the 2d Marine Reconnaissance Battalion and later with the 2d Marine Raider Battalion. He was a veteran of Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan and Operation Inherent Resolve in Iraq. Ryan had qualification as an enlisted fleet marine force warfare specialist, marine combatant diver, and Navy and Marine Corps parachutist. He rose to become a special amphibious reconnaissance corpsman. For his service, among the awards he earned were a Purple Heart, Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal, Combat Action Ribbon with Gold Star in lieu of second award, and Good Conduct Medal with two Bronze Stars in lieu of second and third award.

Ryan was a devoted patriot, son, husband, and father, who loved football and making others laugh. He is survived and will be deeply missed by his wife, Cassie; his two children, Gavin and Maelyn; his parents, Michael and Teresa Lohrey of Middletown; and his grandparents, Barbara Lohrey of Middletown, and George Lohrey, of Sulphur Springs; as well as friends, the U.S. Navy family, and Hoosiers across the State of Indiana.

As Ryan's grandmother said, "Ryan was my hero. He's everybody's hero." Ryan set an example for others and will be remembered for his strong character. Let us always remember and emulate the shining example this brave man set for us and honor his commitment to serving his fellow citizens. May God welcome Ryan home and give comfort to his family and friends.

HONORING LIEUTENANT AARON ALLAN

Mr. DONNELLY. Today I wish to recognize and honor the extraordinary service and sacrifice of Lt. Aaron Allan of the Southport Police Department. Dedication, loyalty, and compassion for those in need were the qualities that defined Lt. Allan's life.

Lt. Aaron Allan was a 6-year veteran with the Southport Police Department, who began his career in law enforcement in 2001. A kind and caring person, Lt. Allan was a family man who devoted his life to serving his community. Lt. Allan earned the nickname "Teddy Bear" because of his kind heart and willingness to help anyone in need.

Lt. Allan had dreamed of being a police officer since he was 5 years old. Before he joined the Southport Police Department in 2011 as a volunteer officer, he previously worked as an officer at the Indiana School for the Deaf and for Franklin Township Schools. In 2015, he was named Southport Police Department's "Officer of the Year," after saving two lives. Among his efforts, he performed CPR to save a man at the Indiana State Fairgrounds before backup officers arrived with a defibrillator. In recognition of his work, he became the only full-time paid officer in an all-volunteer force of reserve officers. He was a devout volunteer, leader, and role model in Southport, who believed in community policing and prided himself on stopping to talk with residents and getting to know them. Lt. Allan made a difference in the community and always put the safety and well-being of his fellow citizens first. When he encountered a family whose car would not start and the husband had been diagnosed with a brain tumor and the wife cared for her husband and young daughter, Allan went to an auto parts store and bought the family a new car battery with his own money. It went beyond that. He participated in "Shop with a Deputy," volunteering to take underprivileged children Christmas shopping. He also excelled responding to difficult calls, whether a citizen had overdosed and needed Narcan or he encountered a drunk driver. He enriched and touched so many lives through his service, and he made the ultimate sacrifice while responding to fellow citizens in need.

On Thursday, July 27, 2017, Lt. Allan was doing his job, responding to an incident involving an overturned vehicle in Southport, when he was shot. Hours before Lt. Allan was killed, he walked his 5-year-old son, Aaron, Jr., to the bus for his first day of kindergarten. He put his life on the line so that Hoosiers could have the chance to live in peace and safety, and we are eternally grateful. He died doing what he loved, and his legacy will live on.

Lt. Allan was a devoted citizen, son, husband, father, and friend, who loved his children and his fellow brothers and sisters in blue. He loved his job as a Southport Police Officer, and no amount of gratitude can repay Lt. Allan or his loved ones for his sacrifice.

Lt. Allan is survived and deeply missed by his wife, Stacy, their two sons, his fellow officers in Southport, and citizens across Indiana. Let us strive to remember and emulate the shining example Lt. Allan set for us, and honor his selfless commitment to serving his fellow citizens. May God welcome Lt. Allan home and give comfort to his family and friends.

VENEZUELA

Mr. RUBIO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a statement by Julio Andres Borges Junyent, President of the National Assembly of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY OF THE BOLIVARIAN REPUBLIC OF VENEZUELA—IN RESCUE OF THE CONSTITUTION, DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS: AGREEMENT IN DISREGARD OF THE FRAUDULENTS ELECTORAL RESULTS ON JULY 30TH, 2017 FOR WHICH WAS INTENDED TO IMPOSE AN ILLEGITIMATE NATIONAL CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY, AND IN CLAIM OF THE 1999 CONSTITUTION AS A DEMOCRATIC BASIS OF THE BOLIVARIAN REPUBLIC OF VENEZUELA

CONSIDERING

On July 30th, 2017 the regime of Nicolas Maduro, with the support of the majority of rectors of the National Electoral Council, judges of the Supreme Court of Justice and the high dome of the National Bolivarian Armed Forces, advanced on the fraudulent constituent process that initiated on May 1, 2017, realizing a supposed illegitimate "election" of such illegitimate constituent members;

CONSIDERING

The authorities of the National Bolivarian Armed Forces have assumed the prominence in the announcements concerning the electoral process, investing the constitutional principle of subjection of the military civilian authorities; which is a sample of the militarism they intend to impose, in contravention to the enshrined civic and republican values on the current Constitution of 1999;

CONSIDERING

That this National Assembly has pointed out in various agreements, and it was ratified by the Venezuelan people in the referendum of July 16th, 2017, the National Constituent Assembly is a fraudulent and illegitimate process that only seeks to repeal the Constitution of 1999 by other mechanisms than those provided, in order to establish in Venezuela a dictatorship of totalitarian Court, in reason of which all acts and processes arising from such constituent must be unknown to citizens and government employees, who have the duty to restore the validity of the 1999 Constitution, all this, in accordance with the articles 333 and 350;

CONSIDERING

The fraudulent election of July 30th sought to give legitimacy to the constitutional process, despite the fact that such procedure was initiated with the usurpation of the popular sovereignty, which was never consulted about the convocation of the constituent Assembly, as ordered by the constitutional article 347;

CONSIDERING

In addition, the fraudulent election of July 30th was held on the sidelines of international guarantees and constitutional minimum that must be presented in any democratic election, which shows the high despite abstention in the irregular voting stations admitted for this election, the President of the National Electoral Council announced a false call participation of eight million and eighty-nine thousand three hundred and twenty (8,089,320) electors, making the committed fraud even more evident;

CONSIDERING

The Venezuelan people, in exercise of their right to resistance, made various peaceful protests during the day of July 30th, 2017, with the deplorable balance of 16 people killed, hundreds injured and many arrested in an arbitrary manner, with the repression which the regime of Nicolas Maduro has attended for trying to impose its fraudulent and illegitimate National Constituent Assembly;

CONSIDERING

That the international community, like countries such as Argentina, Colombia, Spain, United States of America and Mexico, as well as international organizations such as the Organization of American States (OAS) and the European Parliament, expressed their rejection on the fraudulent constituent process of Nicolas Maduro's regime;

CONSIDERING

That the fraudulent election of the illegitimate National Constituent Assembly of July 30th, 2017, implies a major change in the political and constitutional Venezuelan scene, having to represent the definitive attempt of restoring the dictatorship of totalitarian court protected on the figure of the National Constituent Assembly, which demands the articulation of effective and immediate action orientated to deposing a despotic form of government, contributing to the effective reestablishment of the Constitution in Venezuela, in context of articles 333 and 350 of the Constitution, with the democratic legitimacy derived from the popular consultation on July 16th and the support of the international community committed on the universal defense of human rights and constitutional democracy.

ACCORDING

First: Confirm that all the acts related to the National Constituent Assembly including the supposed election effected on July 30th, 2017 must be unrecognized because it was a process based on usurpation of the popular sovereignty and of the original Constituent power that belongs exclusively to the people of Venezuela. Likewise, we ratify the right to the resistance of the people of Venezuela against the fraudulent and illegal National Constituent Assembly, as the officials and members of the armed forces must do. Armed forces must disobey all the acts related to the fraudulent Constituent Assembly, and actively contribute to re-establish the effective validity of the Constitution of 1999.

Second: Unrecognized the election effected on July 30th, 2017 of the members of the fraudulent and illegal National Constituent Assembly that was convened without a popular referendum, and against the peoples' will and in contrivance of article number 347 of the Constitution.

Third: Reject the massacre and aberrant crimes against the Venezuelans who in their legal right to freedom of expression, of protesting and resisting were demonstrating their rejection to the fraudulent Constituent Assembly, and who were expressing solidarity to the parliamentary body with the victims of repression, arrests, and family members of the deceased, and with all the Venezuelan people.

Fourth: Ratify the mandate of the people stated in the Popular Consultation on July 16th, 2017, by which, this National Assembly, as a legal and exclusive representative of the Venezuelan people will take all the measures and actions directed to depose the National Constituent Assembly as a power that is illegitimate and of fact to establish effectively the validity of the constitution of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela.

Fifth: Urge the citizen Luisa Ortega Diaz, in her responsibility of General Attorney of the Republic, to investigate at great length the criminal acts against the protesters, as well as the committed crimes that took place during the organization and in the electoral process on July 30th, 2017, and to exercise the relevant actions against the officers and people that ordered and executed such crimes, with the purpose to make effective the punitive, administrative, and disciplinary responsibilities of those who order and executed the repressive acts against the people and of those who participated in the constitutional fraud of the National Constituent Assembly.

Sixth: Urge to the Public Minister to undertake investigations and formalities directed to establish the penal responsibility of all public officers and people evolved in the fraudulent process of the National Constituent Assembly that aims to impose a change that violates the constitution and changes the republican foundation of the Nation.

Seventh: Grateful for the solidarity expressed by the International Community with regard to the people of Venezuela and in rejection of the fraudulent National Constituent Assembly, and for arranging necessary meetings to execute common actions of states committed to the universal defense of human rights and of the relevant International Entities, so that through the admitted mechanisms of Public International rights and thus contribute to depose the fraudulent and illegal National Constituent Assembly and to reestablish the effective validity of the Constitution of 1999.

Eighth: Support to the people of Venezuela in the exercise of the right to resist the despotism that the National Constituent Assembly aims to impose. We support both the organized and planned actions that contribute to depose such illegal Constituent Assembly, and the execution of necessary actions to reestablish the validity of the Constitution of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela that obeys the mandate of the Popular Consultation that took place on July 16th, 2017.

Ninth: Ratify the people of Venezuela, faithful to its republican tradition, to impugn all forms of despotic government that derived from the National Constituent Assembly, while the country is linked to the duty of obedience to such constituent and those who contribute to its installation operation. The recognized authorities will be the only ones arising from free and democratic elections.

Tenth: Forward a copy of this agreement to the Secretary-General and the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States (OAS), the Organization of United Nations (UN) to the Inter-American Commission on human rights (IACHR) and the members of the diplomatic corps, specially to the representatives of those States that have spoken out without knowing about the election of the National Constituent Assembly.

Tenth first: Give publicity to this agreement.

Given, signed and sealed in the Federal Legislative Palace, seat of the National Assembly of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, in Caracas, the first day of August of two thousand seventeen. Year 207 of independence and 158 of the Federation.

THE GREAT AMERICAN ECLIPSE

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the historic event of the Great American Eclipse that will cross the continental United States on August 21. That morning, the eclipse will first pass over my home State of Oregon, then sweep across the U.S., ending in South Carolina. Millions of people across Oregon and the country are planning on watching those few moments when the moon will cover the sun and everything will go dark.

It has been 99 years since a total solar eclipse has occurred across the entire country, and whether someone is 5 or 95, this may be the only time they will ever see a total eclipse. It is truly a once-in-a-lifetime event.

This solar eclipse is a rare occurrence where the wonders of science will come right to the front doors of millions of people. That fact hasn't been lost on schools and science organizations throughout Oregon. Educators from the coastal areas of the State to the mountains of eastern Oregon have been working hard to use this eclipse as an opportunity to engage students in the areas of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics, commonly called STEM.

One of the best science museums in the country, the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry, OMSI, has planned an amazing viewing party, with the hope of engaging folks of all ages in the science behind the eclipse. Oregon native Don Pettit, who is a NASA astronaut, will even be there to share his experience of viewing eclipses from the International Space Station. Over the years, OMSI has been a leader in getting students excited about STEM fields. I am so glad the museum is using this eclipse as yet another opportunity to get communities involved in science.

Universities throughout the State are also doing their part to ensure students and community members get the most out of the event. In Corvallis, Oregon State University is hosting a 3-day eclipse event, with astronomy exhibits and a series of science lectures. I also understand that Portland State University, with the help of NASA, will launch video cameras attached to high-altitude balloons, giving anyone the ability to tune in and watch a live stream of the eclipse. Programs like these are so important because they make scientific events more accessible to the younger generations.

I also want to take a few moments today to recognize the local leaders, first responders, and the National Guard who are working tirelessly to ensure that communities throughout the State enjoy the eclipse festivities safely. These public servants have been a shining light in making sure Oregonians and visitors alike have the best experience while viewing the solar eclipse.

As the eclipse arcs across the country and folks from the West Coast to the East Coast don their eclipse glasses to look up at the darkened sun, it is my sincere hope that it ignites a ray of passion in students throughout the country to explore STEM fields more deeply.

THE USS "WEST VIRGINIA"

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. President, I would like to recognize the service of the first ship named for our Nation's 35th State—our only State born of war—the armored cruiser USS West Virginia. She was commissioned on February 23, 1905, and served in both the Atlantic and Pacific fleets. On two occasions, she deployed to Mexico to enforce U.S. diplomacy. In 1916, she was renamed the USS Huntington, in order to permit the assignment of her old name to a new battleship.

That new battleship—the second USS West Virginia—was commissioned in December 1923 and affectionately nicknamed the "Wee Vee." In 1940, she moved to Hawaii and became part of the U.S. Pacific Fleet. She was the youngest of all the battleships at Pearl Harbor. During the attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, the USS West Virginia was moored outboard the USS Tennessee; as a result, the Tennessee was not hit by a single torpedo, while the West Virginia was hit by nine torpedoes.

Despite being mortally wounded by shrapnel, the ship's captain, Mervyn S. Bennion, remained on the bridge ordering counterflooding of starboard compartments to prevent capsizing; for his actions, Captain Bennion posthumously received the Congressional Medal of Honor. Captain Bennion's actions are regularly cited as the epitome of proper command under fire.

Displaying a resilience befitting the people of her namesake, the USS West Virginia refused to stay sunk. She was pumped out and refloated on May 17, 1942, and sailed to Puget Sound Navy Yard for repairs. After being fully modernized, she saw action in the invasion of the Philippines, the Battle of Iwo Jima, and the Battle of Okinawa, among others. She was present in Tokyo Bay on September 2, 1945, for the formal Japanese surrender.

The USS West Virginia was decommissioned on January 9, 1947; her awards included the American Defense Service Medal with "Fleet" clasp; the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with five battle stars; the World War II Victory Medal; and the Navy Occupation Medal with "Asia" clasp. An antiaircraft gun remains at City Park in Parkersburg, WV; the ship's wheel and binnacle are on display at the Hampton Roads Naval Museum. Her mast sits in front of Oglebay Hall at West Virginia University, and Interstate 470 in West Virginia is named the "USS West Virginia Memorial Highway."

The U.S. Navy resurrected the proud history of the 35th State's moniker with a 1983 contract to build a Ship, Submarine, Ballistic, Nuclear, SSBN, the 11th of an eventual 18 Ohio-class submarines, otherwise to be known as the USS West Virginia, SSBN 736. She was launched on October 14, 1989, sponsored by Mrs. Erma Byrd, wife—and high school sweetheart—of the now late U.S. Senator Robert C. Byrd, of West Virginia—the longest serving Senator and the longest serving Member in the history of the U.S. Congress—and commissioned on October 20, 1990.

The USS West Virginia, SSBN 736 conducts a sacred mission. It has often been said that, if the U.S. Navy could only send one platform to sea, it is the SSBN that executes the most important mission: the mission of strategic deterrence.

Always at the tip of the spear, the USS West Virginia conducts operations in order to exploit the advantages of undersea operation. It can be deployed up to 15 months at a time. As the submariner identity states: "We are elite, selective and high performing. We operate forward at the tip of the spear. This is the only survivable nuclear deterrent. Last bastion of master and commander."

West Virginia is proud of the honor, courage, and commitment of the brave sailors who crew and have crewed the USS West Virginia, and we are eternally grateful for the sacrifices that you and your families make in service to the United States of America.

"Montani Semper Liberi."

TRIBUTE TO ALAN BAKER AND EARL BRECHLIN

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, in 2001, Maine's legendary Ellsworth American newspaper celebrated its 150th year by launching a new enterprise, the Mount Desert Islander, dedicated to covering every aspect of life in a place of extraordinary beauty. It is a pleasure to congratulate the two outstanding journalists who have guided the Islander since its inception, publisher Alan Baker and editor Earl Brechlin, for being recognized with the 2017 Sunbeam Award from the Maine Seacoast Mission.

The recipient of numerous State and national awards for excellence, the Mount Desert Islander is a great example of the value provided by community newspapers. From Acadia National Park, local government, and businesses, to education, sports, and the arts, the Islander's dedicated staff writes the history of their communities as it occurs. They keep people informed and help them be more involved as citizens. They follow State and national issues, always with an eye on how they affect their neighbors.

This dedication starts with committed leadership. After achieving success in journalism and publishing in Philadelphia and New York City, Alan Baker returned home to Maine and, in 1986, joined the Ellsworth American's management team, eventually purchasing the newspaper. In this age of media consolidation, Mr. Baker strongly believes that newspapers should be owned by individuals who are in touch daily with the readers they serve. As a former member of the Maine State Legislature, he is an effective voice for accountability and transparency in all levels of government.

A former "Maine Journalist of the Year," Earl Brechlin has covered Mount Desert Island for more than 35 years, and he has been recognized with more than 100 awards for news, feature writing, and photography. His commitment to journalism is evident in his election as president of both the Maine and New England press associations. A Registered Maine Guide, Mr. Brechlin is the author of nine books that reflect his love for our State's natural beauty, history, and character.

The Maine Seacoast Mission is a non-denominational, nonprofit organization founded in 1905 to support island and coastal communities in Downeast Maine, and its boat, the Sunbeam V, helps to connect people in those communities with essential services and with each other. Through their dedication to the craft of journalism, Alan Baker and Earl Brechlin have strengthened that support and those community connections, and the Sunbeam Award is a fitting recognition of their many contributions.

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE JACOB LEINENKUGEL BREWING COMPANY

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, today I wish to honor a true original, the Jacob Leinenkugel Brewing Company, on 150 years of brewing great beer in Wisconsin's North Woods. The Leinenkugels were fairly typical Wisconsinites in the mid-1800s—German, immigrants, and lovers of beer. Jacob Leinenkugel started in the business in 1867 after he and three brothers learned the craft from their father, a brewer and distiller. Together, the Leinenkugel family started four breweries, including the Spring Brewery, which eventually became Jacob Leinenkugel Brewing.

While the Leinenkugel family was typical, the brewery they started became far from ordinary. For a century and a half, the Jacob Leinenkugel Brewing Company has put Chippewa Falls, WI, on the map and excellent beer in the hands of people throughout Wisconsin and the country.

Walk into most any bar in the State and there will be "Leinie's" on tap. Go to a backyard cookout or a Milwaukee Brewers tailgate on a hot summer's day and there will Summer Shandy in the cooler. Stop by a Wisconsin supper club for dinner and odds are you or someone at the table next to you will be enjoying their fish fry with a Honey Weiss.

Leinenkugel Brewing is the seventh oldest continuously operating brewery in the country. This lengthy heritage did endure trying moments. Leinenkugel's survived Prohibition by producing soda, ginger ale, and a non-alcoholic cereal beverage to stay in business. Afterward, the brewer eventually grew into the fourth largest craft brewer in the United States.

The original brewery is still operating, and its Leinie Lodge visitor center in Chippewa Falls welcomes 125,000 visitors annually, making it a top tourist destination in northern Wisconsin. Along with its original lager, Leinenkugel's now brews 24 other beers, with offerings for every taste and season, including a special German Marzen-style lager to celebrate the family's roots and the brewery's 150th anniversary.

Leinenkugel Brewing is more than beer. Leinenkugel's is a Wisconsin institution that touches the lives of people across the State—even those who have never lifted a pint. The brewery's Canoes for a Cause outreach program has provided education and resources to help improve and protect Wisconsin springs and waterways. Generations of the Leinenkugel family have served our country in the military and other civic capacities. That tradition continues today as former Marine Corps captain and Leinenkugel Brewing president Jake Leinenkugel serves as a senior White House adviser for the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Six generations have taken a family from the North Woods of Wisconsin to the refrigerators of beer lovers in all 50 States while maintaining its Wisconsin roots and cherishing its German heritage. I join my fellow Wisconsinites in raising a glass in appreciation for the last 150 years and hoping for many more to come.

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. President, today I rise to recognize the Jacob Leinenkugel Brewing Company on their 150th anniversary. I am so pleased to honor this great Wisconsin company.

Throughout its history, family has always been at the core of the Leinenkugel business. The family's brewing tradition began well before they came to America. Jacob's father, Mathais, was a brewer and brandymaker from Meckenheim, Germany, who settled with his family in Sauk City, WI. Mathais passed his craft on to his four sons who, in turn, opened their own breweries throughout Wisconsin. Their passion for brewing quality beer remains at the heart of the Leinenkugel family 150 years later.

While it is now the fourth-largest craft brewer in the United States, the nascent company had only two employees: Jacob Leinenkugel and his partner, John Miller. Jacob brewed the beer, and John delivered it. Their German brewing methods, combined with excellent grains grown in rich Wisconsin soil and the State's pure water, made Leinenkugel's small brewery an instant success. The hard-working lumberjacks in the logging town of Chippewa Falls were Jacob's first loyal customers. Word of Leinenkugel's beer spread quickly, and its popularity expanded rapidly throughout Northern Wisconsin.

When Jacob passed away in 1899, running the company fell to his son-in-law, Henry Casper, and then to his eldest son, Matt, in 1907. Working alongside his sisters and brothers-in-law, the second generation of Leinenkugel's leadership quickly took the company to new heights.

The brewery experienced its first major test with the passage of Prohibition in 1919. While many American breweries cut their losses and closed shop during this period, Leinenkugel's adapted to the new American reality and began brewing Leino, a non-alcoholic version of their popular beer. Unfortunately, Leino was no match for the real thing and was soon discontinued. Thanks to quick thinking, they pivoted once again and began bottling soda water. By the end of Prohibition, Leinenkugel's was the largest bottler of soda water in the area.

After the repeal of Prohibition, Matt Leinkugel's wife, Katherine, and his sister, Rose, mortgaged their homes to finance updates to the brewery's equipment to save the company. Thanks to the resourcefulness of these women, the Leinenkugel family was able to restore the brewery to its pre-Prohibition glory. Leinenkugel's expanded yet again in the mid-20th century to the greater Midwest area and developed new varieties of beer that would meet the diverse needs of its newest customers.

In 1988, the Miller Brewing Company purchased Leinenkugel's, allowing the brewery to distribute products across the country. Today the brewery is an industry leader that produces 25 different styles of beer. For every 10 shandy-style beers consumed in the United States, nine are produced by Leinenkugel's.

Despite their national success, the Leinenkugels have never forgotten their Wisconsin roots or their commitment to their hometown of Chippewa Falls, WI. Jake Leinenkugel, who led the company until his retirement in 2015, said he and his wife, Peg, will always live in Chippewa Falls. The couple was named "Chippewa Valley Philanthropists of the Year" in 2007 for their ongoing contributions of time and money to local causes.

The Leinenkugel family has also maintained a strong commitment to the conservation of natural resources, particularly the freshwater that is a key component in Leinenkugel's products. The family created Canoes for a Cause, a stewardship program aimed at preserving waterways by removing trash, debris, and invasive plant species. They have held Canoes for a Cause events in Milwaukee, Madison, Chicago, Denver, Minneapolis, and Cleveland, often collecting more than 1,000 pounds of trash in a single day.

Today, C.J., Ellie, Matt, and Kirk Leinenkugel carry on the Leinenkugel's legacy. They are the sixth generation of Leinenkugels to continue Jacob's tradition of excellence, taking a small, local brewery and turning it into one of the most successful breweries in the Nation. No matter how many employees or distributors join the team, Leinenkugel's will always remain a family company that, to its core, defines what it means to be kind, hard-working Wisconsinites and genuine Americans.

130TH ANNIVERSARY OF BAR HARBOR BANK & TRUST

Mr. KING. Mr. President, today I wish to commemorate the 130th anniversary of Bar Harbor Bank & Trust. Based in Bar Harbor, ME, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust now has 14 branches in Maine and 35 branches in New Hampshire and Vermont. Known for supporting and understanding the unique people, organizations, and culture of northern New England, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust has not only achieved a strong reputation for providing quality service, but it has also cultivated employees who are dedicated to bettering their communities.

Since its founding in 1887, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust has fostered the personal and professional growth of its employees while serving its customers with the highest level of care and concern. Over the years, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust has expanded to New Hampshire-based subsidiaries: McCrillis & Elredge Insurance, Inc., and Charter Trust Company. It recently acquired Lake Sunapee Bank to make it one of the largest community banks in New England. It been recognized as a leading bank nationwide and ranked among the best places to work in ME.

Bar Harbor Bank & Trust has demonstrated a commitment to supporting the communities it serves. Each year, its employees volunteer thousands of hours to local community organizations. This commitment is sustained by their volunteer pay program that allows employees to get paid time off for volunteering each month to local causes they are passionate about. Furthermore, it allows them to contribute money from their paychecks to the Bank's Community Commitment program each month, and with every donation matched by the bank, the program donates over thousands of dollars annually to local nonprofit organizations, including Maine Veteran's Project, Girls and Boys State, Knox County Homeless Coalition, and dozens more.

In addition to volunteerism, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust employees actively participate in many community fundraisers, such as the Annual Hancock Relay for Life for the American Cancer Society. The bank also hosts an annual charity golf tournament that raises money for a local organization. This year, the tournament raised money that was donated to the Acadia Family Center to sponsor a year's worth of treatment for two individuals battling substance abuse. Additionally, Bar Harbor Bank & Trust employees teach local children lessons about saving money through the ABA's Teach Children to Save Day and explain how to use credit wisely to teenagers in the community. In 2016 alone, this bank provided over 450 children with lessons in savings education.

I wish to join the communities all around Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont in congratulating Bar Harbor Bank & Trust for this remarkable achievement on its 130th anniversary. I look forward to following its continued growth and service, and I applaud the bank for its dedication to its employees, customers, and local communities.

70TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MAINE LOBSTER FESTIVAL

Mr. KING. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the Maine Lobster Festival on its 70th anniversary. On this date, the people of Maine celebrate our rich history in the valuable lobster trade, as well as the continuing commitment by our coastal communities to support and perpetuate our great maritime heritage.

Since 1947, The Maine Lobster Festival has provided the people of Maine and tourists with exciting events, entertainment, and Maine seafood. The festival emerged out of a community-based effort at reviving summer activities that Camden, ME, established prior to World War II. A small group of citizens and summer visitors came together to revel in their coastal marine community. Their small gathering, which lost money in its first year, moved to Rockland the following year and immediately became an annual staple of the coastal area's summer schedule, creating the Maine Lobster Festival to operate as a nonprofit corporation that is responsible for the festival to this day.

This nearly weeklong engagement in August is attended by both internationally recognized as well as local musicians and entertainers, who fill the concert stage with enthralling performances. A midway provides excitement for children of all ages. King Neptune and his court attend the event every year and a highlight is the crowning of the Maine Sea Goddess. The festival also boasts a wide range of Maine artistry, from craftsmen to painters, as well as one of the region's largest and most popular parades. In addition, there is often a U.S. Navy ship that offers unique tour opportunities to festival-goers. As the highlight, there are fresh lobster dinners prepared in the world's largest lobster cooker for the thousands of hungry attendees. While you may no longer be able to get "all the lobster you can eat for $1," the festival promises to have more than enough lobster to go around.

Year-in and year-out, the combined effort of more than a thousand volunteers generously donate their time makes the festival possible. Volunteers are committed to improving and showcasing midcoast Maine communities to the thousands of festival-goers that come from different parts of Maine, from across the country and around the world. Not only do they donate their time and effort, but they also donate all profits of the festival to Maine communities to provide needed support to local institutions such as food pantries, community service groups, emergency services, and college scholarships.

The Maine Lobster Festival is recognized nationwide as one of the best events in the country, and this distinction could not be bestowed on a more deserving enterprise. I wish to join the greater Rockland community, as well as the State of Maine, in congratulating the Maine Lobster Festival on its 70th year of being an historic and cherished Maine institution.

TRIBUTE TO MARION CURRY

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, the Senate Budget Committee wishes to honor and recognize Marion Curry on her retirement from the Congressional Budget Office. Marion has worked in the budget analysis division of the Congressional Budget Office in various capacities for more than 38 years and has been a full-time employee at CBO since 1987. During that time, she served as the administrative assistant for the projections unit, and over the past several years, she expanded her responsibilities to also encompass the health systems and Medicare unit, as well as the low-income health programs and prescription drugs unit.

During her long tenure at CBO, Marion has skillfully carried out a variety of tasks—carefully checking cost estimates as she produced drafts, ensuring that timesheets were done correctly, directing callers to the appropriate person, and in general assuring that administrative matters were taken care of without a hitch. Such duties have undergone many changes over the years—from using telephones as the primary method of contact, typing tables by hand, and sending paper copies of documents, to the current approach of using email as the primary method of contact, transferring spreadsheets to the editorial staff for producing tables, and sending PDFs of documents with supplemental data posted on the web. Through all of those changes, Marion readily adapted to new technology and procedures and carried out her responsibilities with good humor, professionalism, a giving spirit, and a dedication to serving the Congress and the public.

Marion contributed to CBO's work in ways that went well beyond her administrative responsibilities. She routinely took the lead to make sure that key life events of staff—such as birthdays, weddings, and births—were celebrated, and she was often the first person others in the organization consulted when they needed assistance with planning and organizing events. In addition, her contributions to the charitable works of the agency were well-known and appreciated. Marion is extremely warm, generous, and giving—she was always there to provide support, encouragement, and someone to talk to. Her contribution to the working environment at CBO was beyond measure, and she will be greatly missed.

TRIBUTE TO JEFFREY HOLLAND

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, the Senate Budget Committee wishes to honor and recognize Jeffrey Holland on his retirement after 26 years of distinguished service to the Congress with the Congressional Budget Office. Jeff is highly regarded by Republicans and Democrats on both sides of the Capitol for his deep knowledge of the budget process and his commitment to the non-partisan role that CBO plays in the budget process.

Jeff arrived at CBO in 1991 soon after graduation from Carnegie Mellon University's Heinz School of Public Policy with a master's degree in public policy and management. He joined the projections unit in the budget analysis division, which is responsible for preparing projections of Federal spending, deficit, debt, and other data related to the Federal budget, as well as providing ongoing support to Congress.

In 1999, Jeff became chief of the projections unit, and for the past 18 years, he has successfully overseen the production of multiple reports on the Budget and Economic Outlook, annual analyses of the President's budget request, and also several reports on sequestration, the debt ceiling, national income, and product accounts, and the Troubled Asset Relief Program. Through all of these tasks, he has been the steady hand of the projections unit, generous with his time and knowledge, and highly responsive to questions and requests for data or information from the staff of the Budget Committee. His persistence, attention to detail, and reliably clear thinking have been vital to the smooth functioning of the budget analysis division. Senate staff and CBO colleagues have come to depend on him for his sage advice and deep understanding of the budget laws.

In addition, Jeff has often lent his expertise to legislative branches of other countries as they seek to develop their own capacity for nonpartisan budget analysis. He is a sought-after explainer of the Federal budget process to students visiting our Nation's Capital. In short, Jeff's expertise, knowledge, and generosity of time and spirit will be sorely missed. We wish him well as he moves on after years of outstanding service to the Congress. We are grateful for that service, and we wish him the best in the years to come.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING BELLE LIKOVER

• Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, this week, the city I call home lost a great Ohioan, and Connie and I lost a friend, Belle Likover of Shaker Heights. Belle passed away at age 97, and over her extraordinary life, she saw the creation of our country's greatest social insurance programs: Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid—and fought to protect those lifelines for American seniors.

Ms. Likover was born the same year as my mother and grew up in Beaver Falls, PA. She remembered her childhood as a happy one, with one big exception: the Great Depression. In an interview several years ago, she talked about the lasting effects those memories had on her, saying, "We saw everybody else suffer. I remember the shantytowns. I remember people living in what used to be packing crates. There was a constant stream of people who came to our backdoor for food. My mother never turned anybody away."

Those experiences would shape her activism throughout her life. In high school and later in college, at the Ohio State University, she said she was "never bashful about speaking out." She joined the high school varsity debate team as a sophomore, as the only girl on the team, and learned how to marshal an argument. She told an interviewer that, "Every position of leadership I've had, I owe to that debate coach."

In college, she put that training to use, first getting involved in political causes in 1937, when she and a friend helped organize an antifascist group at Ohio State. They saw what was happening in Germany and across Europe and how dangerous that was for the world.

Growing up in that time of turmoil and as a woman at a time when her abilities would be constantly questioned, Belle faced setbacks. As a child, she asked for chemistry sets instead of dolls, but in college, a chemistry professor told her, "If you want a Ph.D., you better marry one." Her first husband laid down his life for our country during World War II, leaving Ms. Likover with a newborn daughter to raise.

She published papers without the Ph.D. that her male peers had and worked at the Cleveland Jewish Community Center's senior department, where she saw what a difference Social Security made in the lives of the elderly—and later how Medicaid and Medicare would change their lives. She went to grad school on a JCC scholarship.

Throughout the years, she never ceased in her activism. She joined me at events many times to talk about the importance of Medicare. I interviewed Belle in the summer of 2015, marking the 50th anniversary of the passage of Medicare and Medicaid. She told me she was thrilled when it passed because she remember how poor older people were when she was growing up—"They didn't have Medicare, they ended up in poorhouses," she told me. And she added, "Do you know how many people can't wait until they're 65 to get covered by Medicare?"

Just last fall, she joined us on a call with Ohio reporters to talk about how devastating it would be to raise the retirement age. That was Belle Likover—an activist and advocate, full of compassion but never bashful, all the way through age 97. Our family's thoughts and prayers are with Belle's loved ones. We will miss her, and we will strive to carry on her advocacy for Ohio seniors.●

TRIBUTE TO ERNEST "ERNIE" GRECCO

• Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, today I would like to congratulate a dear friend of mine, Mr. Ernest "Ernie" Grecco, for 55 years of dedicated service to the labor movement and to working men and women and their families in the Baltimore-Washington metropolitan area and across the Nation. Ernie recently retired after serving for 20 years as president of the Metropolitan Baltimore AFL-CIO Council, which covers Baltimore City and Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Cecil, Harford, and Howard Counties. For the last 15 years, he also served as secretary on the board of directors of the United Way of Central Maryland. Ernie's vocation and his avocation have been to make life better for other people. There is an old saying, "You make a living by what you get; you make a life by what you give." Ernie has given so much to so many for so long. It is why I feel privileged and proud to call him my friend.

Ernie became involved in the labor movement in 1962 while he was working at Calvert Distilleries. He was a member of Distillery Workers Union Local 34 and was elected shop steward. He served as shop steward until 1970, when he was elected secretary-treasurer of Local 34-D. He also served as trustee of the Distillery Workers International Union.

In 1973, then-President Nick Fornaro of the Baltimore Central Labor Council hired Ernie as a job placement officer for the Institutional Training Project. In this capacity, Ernie was responsible for helping find jobs for hundreds of men and women housed at the Jessup and Hagerstown Penal Institutions who were qualified for work-release status. In 1976, he became the director of the Metropolitan Baltimore AFL-CIO Council's Committee on Political Education, COPE. He served in this position until 1983 when he became the COP director for the Maryland State and District of Columbia AFL-CIO. He was elected to serve as president of the Metropolitan Baltimore AFL-CIO Council in 1987, and he also served as first vice president of the Maryland State and DC AFL-CIO.

Ernie has held many other leadership positions over the course of his illustrious career. For instance, he chaired the Young Trade Unionists, which was created to bring younger people into the labor movement, and he served as president of the Union Label & Service Trades Council, which promoted the purchase of union services and products. Ernie has also served on the Baltimore Workforce Investment Board, the Maryland Transportation Commission, the Maryland Workers Compensation Commission, and the Maryland Racing Commission.

As president of the Metropolitan Baltimore Council, Ernie established monthly meetings with the mayor of Baltimore City to encourage better communications and collaboration between the city and the unions. The committee consists of all city unions and a representative from the building trades. Ernie also championed the council's community services division. The community services division provides assistance to working people through information and referral advocacy to help them solve personal and family crises. The services include education and training for union peer counselors; Baltimore Works, a job placement program for dislocated workers; and Project LEAP, an adult education literacy program.

It should come as no surprise that Ernie has received numerous awards for his indefatigable service to people. He has the distinction of receiving not one, but two, national awards for community service, the Samuel Gompers Award from the American Red Cross in 1991 and the Joseph A. Beirne Award from United Way of America in 1999. Last year, United Way of Central Maryland gave Ernie its Philip H. Van Gelder Award for Community Services. In 1995, the Baltimore City Fire Fighters Local 734 and Baltimore City Fire Officers Local 964 created the Grecco Labor Award to be given to a firefighter who "best exemplifies the continuing and complex efforts of the local union membership to build the relationship between labor and management."

During Ernie's career, he has been much loved and respected not just in Baltimore, but in Annapolis and across the State of Maryland for his steadfast commitment to the labor movement and working people. He is, understandably, an avid Orioles, Ravens, and horse-racing fan. His retirement is bittersweet because his beloved wife Dorothy—"Dot"—recently passed away, but I know Ernie will spend much of his time with his daughter, Nina Grecco Dukes, and his son, Gary, and Gary's wife, Kelly, and his grandchildren, Ashley, Adam, Katy, and Ben.

I have relied on Ernie's sage counsel on labor matters and other issues over the years, and I treasure our friendship. I have been a better and more effective legislator because of Ernie's friendship and advice for which I am truly grateful. On behalf of the entire U.S. Senate, I congratulate Ernie on his accomplishments and his well-deserved retirement, but knowing Ernie as I do, he will find new ways to be of service to others; it is simply at the core of who he is. ●

TRIBUTE TO BETTY JENEL OLSEN CARR

● Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, today I wish to mark a wonderful occasion, a birthday that many do not live to celebrate. Today we honor the 95th birthday and wonderful life of Betty Jenel Olsen Carr, born in Kimberly, ID, on August 2, 1922. Her early life was very much what you would expect from rural Idaho in the 1920s, and in many ways, rural life there now still has some of these echoes of a strong work ethic and family values.

Betty grew up with seven siblings in a family that learned self-sufficiency and self-reliance on an 80-acre farm. Edith, Andy, Lamoin, Melba, Phil, Vera, Nina, and Betty lived cozily together with their parents, Hannah Marie Sandberg and Neils Albert Olsen, in a small, white wooden farmhouse that had no electricity or running water when Betty was a child. However, the home did have a black pot-belly cast iron stove that kept everyone warm and fed.

Education figured prominently in Betty's goals, as she graduated at the top of her Kimberly High School class, even though she skipped her final year of high school to start college. She fostered her love of reading through editing the school newspaper. She also played flute in the marching band and, improbably, at just 5 feet, 4 inches tall, played forward on the girls basketball team. She headed off to college at what was then called the Southern Branch of the University of Idaho—now Idaho State University—and studied journalism, but most importantly, she followed through on something she said in high school. She had been looking through her older sister's college yearbook and spotted the photo of a handsome young man. She declared, "When I get to college, I am going to go out with that guy." She did indeed—she met and married Taylor Henry Carr a couple of years into college. Taylor served 3 years in World War II, and a family treasure is the love letters the two sent to each other during that difficult time that they were separated by his wartime service.

When Taylor returned home, he completed his education at the medical school at the University of Utah with the help of the GI bill and became a surgeon. Betty and he raised their seven children in Idaho Falls, ID. Each of those children has become remarkable in their own right, contributing to their communities, States, and country—Katherine Ann, Taylor Douglas, Philip Olsen, Jan Elizabeth, Kenneth Wright, Steven Edward, and Gregory Curtis. Their home was filled with love, education, and adventure.

From a personal perspective, there has never been a better child psychologist or wiser parent and aunt. Betty is my mother Melba's youngest sister—my beloved Aunt Betty, who was a second mother to me. She understood teenagers in a unique manner and knew just when to encourage me at those times when young people need to hear advice from someone who loves them and is not a parent. Growing up,

I always knew I would find welcoming arms and a warm shoulder just a few blocks from my home. Aunt Betty understood that, ultimately, love and the relationship with our loved ones was more important than anything else, and she epitomized that with her acceptance and encouragement of even the craziest ideas. A few years ago, I was delighted to show her around the U.S. Capitol when she made the long trip from Idaho to Washington, DC. A treasured item on display in my personal office is a photo with her from that trip.

Today Betty, the lifelong lover of reading, is as sharp as ever. At 95, she remains active, interested, and involved. She races through the crossword puzzle, tends her garden and great-grandkids, and never misses exercise class or bridge club. She recently went underwater in a diving bell in Florida. I am privileged to claim her as part of my family and honored to recognize her longevity as an Idahoan. Happy, happy birthday. ●

REMEMBERING DAN FAUSKE

● Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, Alaskans will gather on August 9 to celebrate the life of Dan Fauske, a public servant extraordinaire, who lost his battle with cancer in April. Upon learning of Dan's passing, Representative Mike Chennault, four-term Speaker of the Alaska House of Representatives described Dan as "Superman." In Mike's words, "Dan Fauske leaped tall buildings in a single bound. Like Superman, there was not a challenge he couldn't take on."

Dan was a dear friend of mine, and his family is part of our extended family in the Murkowski office. Dan's son, D.J., who now serves as director of government and external affairs for the North Slope Borough, helped open my Washington office in 2003 as a staff assistant. D.J. subsequently married Gretchen Wieman, a legislative correspondent in my office during that period.

I counted on Dan for advice and counsel on important public policy issues affecting Alaska, as did many others in the State. His integrity and wisdom were unsurpassed, but Dan's greatest attribute was perhaps his humility. He was known as a straight shooter; one who was about getting the job done and doing it right. Although he waded into many a difficult political problem, he resisted the urge to become a politician. If there was an ounce of self-promotion in Dan Fauske, I never saw it. Dan was one of the most grounded people I have ever met, and that was the key to his influence and effectiveness.

Dan Fauske, like so many builders of Alaska in the half century after Statehood, adopted our State as his home. Dan was born in Fargo on December 13, 1950. He relocated to Alaska in 1974 after serving in the Army—not to the big city, but to Barrow, now called Utqiagvik, the northernmost American city. A place where the first language was then and remains today Inupiaq. His older brother, Dave, was a teacher in the village. Dan worked construction and delivered fresh water, and he made himself part of the community. Elise Patkotak remembers him as one who approached the world as if everyone were a potential friend. Dan built a dog ramp to help Elise get her handicapped dog into the house. This is just one example of the many random acts of kindness for which Dan was known. Bridging the cross-cultural divide, his kindness was reciprocated in the community.

Dan left Alaska to study for an MBA at Gonzaga University in Spokane, WA, but it was a temporary absence. Utqiagvik was Dan's home, and upon graduation, Dan went to work for the North Slope Borough. He was chief financial officer and chief administrative officer. During his tenure, he pursued a vigorous capital construction program which brought water and sewer to many of the North Slope villages.

In 1995, Dan moved his family to Anchorage. He was named chief executive officer of the Alaska Housing Finance Corporation, AHFC. John Bitney, then a legislative staffer, remembers the day that he and the legislative auditor presented a bill in committee to liquidate AHFC. Just when the committee was about to move the bill, a man ventures forward from the audience, announces that he is the CEO of AHFC, and it is his second day on the job. He asked the committee to allow him to pursue a turnaround of the agency—and, boy, were we lucky that the committee agreed.

Over the next 18 years, Dan would not only rescue AHFC from its financial difficulties, but mold it into one of the most respected State housing agencies in the Nation. During his tenure, AHFC pioneered its weatherization and energy rebate program, which helped Alaskan families survive the challenge of high energy costs in the frozen North. He issued more than $7.5 billion in bonds, led AFHC to avoid the subprime mortgage collapse and returned more than $1.9 billion back to the State of Alaska through cash transfers, capital projects, and debt service payments. The AHFC building has been renamed the “Daniel R. Fauske Building” by the Alaska Legislature in honor of his many accomplishments.

Dan was so successful at AHFC, the Alaska Legislature asked him to take on a second duty, that of exploring the feasibility of constructing a small diameter pipeline to bring natural gas from the North Slope to serve Alaskans. In 2013, he left his job at AHFC to pursue this “second job” full time as executive director of the Alaska Gasline Development Corporation, AGDC. He served in that role until November 2015.

At AGDC, Dan brought the same focus to the position he had to every other one he had held in his distinguished career: serving Alaskans. For Dan, AGDC's mission wasn't so much about commercializing Alaska's gas as it was delivering energy to Alaskans. His focus on delivering energy relief and security drove the State's efforts and resulted in AGDC joining the integrated effort to build Alaska LNG as the entity focused on delivering gas to Alaskans.

Whether it was building water systems on the North Slope, developing housing across the State, or delivering energy, Dan did it for Alaskans first. That was what we loved about him, he saw policy not at the 50,000-foot level but in the face, life, and experience of every person he worked with and served.

Dependable, trusted, respected—the consummate “go to” guy—all of these phrases are used to describe Dan Fauske. He believed in Alaska. He believed in Alaskans. Like all great Alaskans, he believed anything could be done, but what earned him our unwavering respect is that he followed through and got it done.

Dan Fauske will long be remembered as a true leader who walked with the people and a key figure in Alaska history of the post-Statehood era.●

RECOGNIZING HILLCREST AIRCRAFT COMPANY

● Mr. RISCH. Mr. President, today I would like to recognize an outstanding small business located in my home State of Idaho. As many of my colleagues in the Western Caucus can tell you, catastrophic wildfires are a cause for major concern and costs for large swathes of the West, particularly in the summer months. This month's small business has found their specialty in helping to control these large wildfires in a safe and efficient manner. As chairman of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I am pleased to honor Hillcrest Aircraft Company as the U.S. Senate Small Business of the Month for August 2017.

Hillcrest Aircraft Company is based out of Lewiston, ID, and is a utility helicopter company with a broad spectrum of work. Hillcrest Aircraft Company was founded by local pilots in 1946. Jerry Wilson partnered with the company in 1959, eventually becoming the sole owner in 1972. Jerry's son, Gale Wilson, is the current president of the company, and his son, Keith White, serves as vice president. The Wilson's legacy of promoting a strong work ethic coupled with strict safety requirements has built the company into a premier helicopter business. In 1968, Hillcrest became the first certified Bell customer service facility in Idaho, and 1 year later, in 1969, they became an approved FAA repair station. Their main focus, however, is aerial firefighting. Whether they are transporting firefighters to remote areas or dropping hundreds of gallons of water on a raging fire, Hillcrest prides itself on protecting communities from dangerous wildfires. In fact, they have fought fires in all of the lower 48 States during their 60-plus years of experience. On top of aerial firefighting, Hillcrest flies for power and timber companies, photographers, videographers, and even fish planters. Their comprehensive background in a variety of industries, dedication to operational safety, and commitment to strict ethical standards continue to keep this family-owned business busy around the clock.

Hillcrest has always put safety first, and in 2015 and 2016, they were rewarded for their efforts. Hillcrest achieved the necessary requirements for the International Standard for Business Aircraft Operations, IS-BAO, Stage I registration by implementing a safety management system, SMS, in 2015 and Stage II registration in 2016. This safety standard acknowledges the company's efforts to improve their safety risk profile and operating efficiency. Hillcrest was one of the first rotary-wing-only operators to achieve the IS-BAO Stage II.

The future is bright for Hillcrest Aircraft Company as they continue to expand their business. Just a couple of months ago in June, Hillcrest opened their very own fixed base operation, FBO, at the Lewiston-Nez Perce County Airport. I would like to congratulate Gale Wilson and his family, along with all of the employees at Hillcrest, for the hard work they do in trying conditions while still keeping their commitment to safety. I wish the best for Hillcrest Aircraft Company, and I am confident that they will continue to keep Idahoans and Americans safe.●

REMEMBERING HERBERT NEEDLEMAN

● Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I recently received the sad news that Dr. Herbert L. Needleman has passed away. With Herbert's passing, we lost a great man—and the scientific community lost one of its best.

In the 1970s, Herb undertook groundbreaking studies that revealed the dangers of lead exposure in children. According to the Pittsburgh Gazette, Herb “had been thinking about the impact lead had on children's cognitive abilities for nearly two decades before he finally came up with a way to test historic lead levels.” He made powerful adversaries in the lead industry, but true to his research, Dr.

Needleman found new and inventive ways to prove the toxic effects of lead exposure.

As a researcher at Temple University, he developed the “Tooth Fairy” approach: a method to test children’s baby teeth for lead exposure levels. This method led to pioneering research that found that Black children living in cities had lead levels five times higher than suburban, White children. In the words of Herb’s son, “He just couldn’t tolerate injustice and could not stop seeking the truth.” The results of Herb’s hard work and his dedication to seeking the truth today reach from the halls of science to the apartments of inner cities.

I got to see his determination first hand, working alongside him in fighting the lead paint industry in Rhode Island. When I was confronting the lead industry, over 35,000 Rhode Island children under the age of 6 had elevated levels of lead in their systems. His research was instrumental in the fight for the health of Rhode Island’s children. I am deeply grateful for Herbert’s help in my home State, and I know Rhode Island families are grateful as well.

America has lost a beloved pediatrician, psychiatrist, and brilliant scientist. I offer my condolences to the Needleman family and to the many people he taught and mentored through the years. He lives on as a lasting lesson in the power of science to help others.●

HOUSE RESOLUTION No. 25

Whereas, according to The Federalist No. 52 by James Madison, the framers of the Constitution of the United States intended that the Congress of the United States should be “dependent on the people alone”; and

Whereas, the “dependency on the people alone” has evolved into a dependency on powerful special interests that act through campaigns or third-party groups, thereby creating a fundamental imbalance in our representative democracy; and

Whereas, Americans across the political spectrum agree that elections in the United States should be free from the disproportional influence of special interests and fair enough that any citizen can be elected into office; and

Whereas, Article V of the United States Constitution requires Congress to convene a convention for proposing amendments to the federal Constitution on the application of two-thirds of the legislatures of the several states; and

Whereas, the Twenty-ninth Legislature of the State of Hawaii desires to restore balance and integrity to our elections by proposing a federal constitutional amendment to permanently protect free and fair elections in the United States by addressing issues raised by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, 558 U.S. 310 (2010), and related cases and events; and

Whereas, the Twenty-ninth Legislature desires that Hawaii have an equal number of delegates to the Convention as any other state; provided that former or current federal office holders, whether elected or appointed, are not eligible to serve as delegates to the Convention; and

Whereas, the Twenty-ninth Legislature shall retain the ability to restrict or expand the authority of its delegates within the limits expressed herein; and

Whereas, the Twenty-ninth Legislature intends that this continuing application shall be considered with the applications that have been adopted by the 2013–2014 Vermont Legislature, the 2013–2014 California Legislature, the Ninety-eighth Illinois General Assembly, the 2014–2015 New Jersey Legislature, and the 2015–2016 Rhode Island Legislature, as well as all applications that are subsequently adopted until two-thirds of the several states have applied for, and Congress has convened, a convention for proposing amendments to restore free and fair elections: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the House of Representatives of the Twenty-ninth Legislature of the State of Hawaii, Regular Session of 2017, the Senate concurring, that the people of the State of Hawaii speaking through its Legislature, hereby submit an application to the United States Congress to restore free and fair elections as described herein; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this Concurrent Resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States; Vice President of the United States, as presiding officer of the United States Senate; President Pro Tempore of the United States Senate; the Minority Leader of the United States Senate; the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives; the Minority Leader of the United States House of Representatives; and Hawaii's Congressional delegation.

A resolution adopted by the City Commission of the City of Sunrise, Florida urging the United States Congress to oppose the proposed elimination of the Community Development Block Grant and Home Investment Partnerships Programs and supporting full funding in the Fiscal Year 2018 budget for the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. WYDEN (for himself and Mr. RUBIO):

S. 1717. A bill to amend title 31, United States Code, to ensure that persons who form corporations or limited liability companies in the United States disclose the beneficial owners of those corporations or limited liability companies, in order to prevent wrongdoers from exploiting United States corporations and limited liability companies for criminal gain, to assist law enforcement in detecting, preventing, and punishing terrorism, money laundering, and other misconduct involving United States corporations and limited liability companies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I am, along with Senator RUBIO, introducing the Corporate Transparency Act of 2017. This bill will help us end the abuse of anonymous shell companies by criminals who use these entities to launder money, finance terrorism, promote sex trafficking, and evade taxes.

Each year criminals use anonymous shell companies to carry out their illicit schemes. Viktor Bout, the so-called “merchant of death,” utilized a vast network of shell corporations, several of which were in the United States, including one suspected of having provided weapons to the Taliban. Another anonymous U.S. company owned a large share of a Manhattan skyscraper and used its anonymity to facilitate $4.5 million in payments to an Iranian bank that was designated by OFAC as a key financier to Iran’s nuclear and ballistic missiles program. Anonymous shell companies have been used to rip off taxpayers as well. In 2010, Michel Huarte was sentenced to 22 years in prison after using a network of 29 shell companies in several States to defraud Medicare, using the entities to submit claims of more than $50 million.

Last year, the release of documents known as the Panama Papers leaked from the Panamanian law firm Mossack Fonseca highlighted the use of American shell companies to carry out potential crimes. Shell company abuse is not just in occurring in offshore tax havens, but right here in the United States, and this bill seeks to put a stop to that.

In the United States, company registrations take place at the State-level. The Corporate Transparency Act of 2017 directs the Treasury Department to issue regulations requiring entities formed in the United States to declare their beneficial owners—the real, natural persons who control each company and benefit from it financially. The bill would do this by setting minimum disclosure standards for States to follow. If individual States choose to collect this information on behalf of businesses formed there, then that’s all that a new business would need to do to comply. Participation by the States is completely voluntary. If companies are formed in States that do not collect this information consistent with the new minimum standards, they will need to disclose their beneficial owners directly to the U.S. Treasury Department’s Financial Crimes Enforcement Network.

Collecting beneficial ownership information at the time a company is formed will offer the transparency law enforcement needs to investigate these kinds of financial crimes. Under the bill, the new beneficial ownership information would not be available to the public, but available only to appropriate state and federal authorities. Finally, the bill provides civil and criminal penalties for improper disclosure.

The bill is constructed to exempt many legitimate businesses, and the information requested is already provided by most companies in the normal course of business. Collecting beneficial ownership information at the time of incorporation relieves later compliance burdens for legitimate businesses, while at the same time prevents illegitimate businesses from operating in secrecy.

The House companion to this bill, H.R. 3089, was introduced with bipartisan support and efforts to identify the true owners of shell companies have the support of business groups like the Clearing House Association and the B-Team, law enforcement groups like the Fraternal Order of Police, and anti-corruption advocacy groups like the Financial Accountability and Corporate Transparency (FACT) Coalition and Global Witness.

The Corporate Transparency Act of 2017 is a much needed step in stopping financial crimes and the abuse of anonymous shell companies. I thank Senator RUBIO for joining me in introducing this bill, and I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting this bipartisan bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1717

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Corporate Transparency Act of 2017”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

- (1) Nearly 2,000,000 corporations and limited liability companies are being formed under the laws of the States each year.
- (2) Very few States obtain meaningful information about the beneficial owners of the corporations and limited liability companies formed under their laws.
- (3) A person forming a corporation or limited liability company within the United States typically provides less information to the State of incorporation than is needed to obtain a bank account or driver’s license and typically does not name a single beneficial owner.

(4) Criminals have exploited the weaknesses in State formation procedures to conceal their identities when forming corporations or limited liability companies in the United States, and have then used the newly created entities to commit crimes affecting interstate and international commerce such as terrorism, drug trafficking, money laundering, tax evasion, securities fraud, financial fraud, and acts of foreign corruption.

(5) Law enforcement efforts to investigate corporations and limited liability companies suspected of committing crimes have been impeded by the lack of available beneficial ownership information, as documented in reports and testimony by officials from the Department of Justice, the Department of Homeland Security, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network of the Department of the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Service, and the Government Accountability Office, and others.

(6) In July 2006, a leading international anti-money laundering organization, the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (in this section referred to as the “FATF”), of which the United States is a member, issued a report that criticizes the United States for failing to comply with a FATF standard on the need to collect beneficial ownership information and urged the United States to correct this deficiency by July 2008. In December 2016, FATF issued another evaluation of the U.S., which found that little progress has been made over the last ten years to address this problem. It identified the “lack of timely access to adequate, accurate and current beneficial ownership information” as a fundamental gap in U.S. efforts to combat money laundering and terrorist finance.

(7) In response to the 2006 FATF report, the United States has repeatedly urged the States to strengthen their incorporation practices by obtaining beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under the laws of such States.

(8) Many States have established automated procedures that allow a person to form a new corporation or limited liability company within the State within 24 hours of filing an online application, without any prior review of the application by a State official. In exchange for a substantial fee, 2 States will form a corporation within 1 hour of a request.

(9) Dozens of Internet Web sites highlight the anonymity of beneficial owners allowed under the incorporation practices of some States, point to those practices as a reason to incorporate in those States, and list those States together with offshore jurisdictions as preferred locations for the formation of new corporations, essentially providing an open invitation to criminals and other wrongdoers to form entities within the United States.

(10) In contrast to practices in the United States, all 28 countries in the European Union are required to have formation agents identify the beneficial owners of the corporations formed under the laws of the country.

(11) To reduce the vulnerability of the United States to wrongdoing by United States corporations and limited liability companies with hidden owners, to protect interstate and international commerce from criminals misusing United States corporations and limited liability companies, to strengthen law enforcement investigations of suspect corporations and limited liability companies, to set minimum standards for and level the playing field among State incorporation practices, and to bring the United States into compliance with its international anti-money laundering standards, Federal legislation is needed to require the collection of beneficial ownership information for the corporations and limited liability companies formed under the laws of such States.

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. COONS, Mr. MORAN, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mr. ENZI, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. MURPHY):

S. 1730. A bill to implement policies to end preventable maternal, newborn, and child deaths globally; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, today I am pleased to be joined by my friend and colleague from Delaware, Senator CHRIS COONS, in introducing the Reach Every Mother and Child Act of 2017. Our legislation would make it the policy of the United States to lead an effort to end preventable deaths of mothers, newborns, and young children in the developing world by 2030.

Due in part to American leadership and generosity, many lives have already been saved. Since 1990, the annual number of deaths of children under the age of five has been cut in half. Nevertheless, far too many mothers, newborns, and young children under the age of five still succumb to disease and malnutrition that could easily be prevented, if only we could reach the mothers and children with simple, proven, cost-effective interventions that we know will help them survive.

Every day approximately 800 women will die from preventable causes related to pregnancy and childbirth. In addition, more than 16,000 children under the age of five will die each day of treatable conditions such as prematurity, pneumonia, and diarrhea—with malnutrition being the underlying cause in nearly half those deaths.

According to USAID, a concentrated effort could end preventable maternal and child deaths worldwide by the year 2030; however, U.S. leadership and support of the international community are critical to success.

To achieve this ambitious goal, our bill would require the implementation of a strategy to scale up the most effective interventions to save as many lives as possible. This idea is central to our bill. We do not have to guess at what interventions will work—the reality is that more than 16,000 children under 5 years old die each day of conditions we know today how to treat.

These life-saving interventions include clean birthing practices, vaccines, nutritional supplements, hand-washing with soap, and other basic needs that remain elusive for far too many women and children in developing countries. This must change.

In addition, our bill would establish a Maternal and Child Survival Coordinator at USAID who would focus on implementing the ten-year strategy and verifying that the most effective interventions are being scaled up in target countries.

The bill would also establish an interagency working group to assist the Coordinator in promoting greater collaboration among all the federal agencies involved in this effort.

To promote transparency and greater accountability, our bill requires that detailed reporting be published on the Foreign Assistance Dashboard, where it can be assessed by the public, Congress, and non-governmental organizations to track the implementation of the strategy and the progress being made.

Finally, our bill would encourage USAID to pay for successful programs run by non-governmental entities. The message we want to send to all our partners in the private sector, the non-profit sector, the faith community, and in local and international civil society groups is this: if you can figure out a way to increase the likelihood that mothers and their children will survive childbirth and the first five years of life, we want to reward you for your contribution.

Improving the health and well-being of mothers and children around the world has far-reaching social and economic benefits as well. An independent group of economists and global health experts from around the world, known as the Lancet Commission, found that for every $1 invested in health initiatives in the developing world, there is a return of $9 to $20 in growing the gross domestic product of the country receiving the investment.

Other bipartisan initiatives, such as the successful President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, or PEPFAR, which was started by President George W. Bush, demonstrate that results-driven interventions can turn the tide for global health challenges. Applying lessons learned from past initiatives, our bill would provide the focus and the tools necessary to accelerate progress toward ending preventable maternal and child deaths.

I urge my colleagues to join Senator COONS and me in supporting this bill to save the lives of mothers and children around the world.

SENATE RESOLUTION 243—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT JOSEPH LEON GEORGE SHOULD BE HONORED FOR HEROISM AT PEARL HARBOR, HAWAII, ON DECEMBER 7, 1941

Mr. FLAKE (for himself, Mr. GARDNER, Mr. LEE, Mr. COTTON, Mrs. MCCASKILL, and Mr. BENNET) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services:

S. RES. 243

Whereas, on December 7, 1941, Boatswain's Mate Second Class Joseph Leon George was 26 years old;

Whereas Boatswain's Mate Second Class George was a crewmember aboard the U.S.S. Vestal (AR-4), a repair ship, on that day;

Whereas the U.S.S. Vestal was moored next to the U.S.S. Arizona (BB-39);

Whereas the Japanese began the attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, at 7:48 a.m.;

Whereas 6 sailors on the U.S.S. Arizona, Seaman First Class Harold Kuhn, Seaman First Class Russell Lott, Gunner's Mate Third Class Earl Riner, Boatswain's Mate Second Class Alvin Dvork, Seaman First Class Donald Stratton, and Fire Controlman Third Class Lauren Bruner, were trapped in the control tower main mast after a massive explosion on the ship;

Whereas those 6 sailors suffered severe burns;

Whereas those wounded sailors searched for a way to escape the ship;

Whereas Boatswain's Mate Second Class George saw the 6 wounded sailors on the U.S.S. Arizona from the U.S.S. Vestal and threw a heaving line and a heavy line;

Whereas all 6 sailors climbed, nearly 40 feet in the air, hand over hand across the heavy line 70 feet to safety onboard the U.S.S. Vestal;

Whereas 2 sailors died shortly after from their injuries, but the remaining 4 survived;

Whereas Boatswain's Mate Second Class George was commended for his actions, but he was never given a medal for his role in the rescue of the 6 sailors;

Whereas the 2 surviving sailors rescued from the U.S.S. Arizona, Donald Stratton and Lauren Bruner, seek to honor Boatswain's Mate Second Class George;

Whereas U.S.S. Arizona survivor Donald Stratton stated, "Joe George was never awarded anything for his bravery. He is no longer with us, but I believe in his memory, should be awarded the Navy Cross."; and

Whereas U.S.S. Arizona survivor Lauren Bruner stated, "The six of us would not have survived except for his courage, in spite of being at high risk himself. He fully deserves high commendations for his actions. I feel he should be recognized for this courage and presented the Navy Cross." Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) honors the heroism of Boatswain's Mate Second Class Joseph Leon George in saving the lives of 6 sailors on December 7, 1941; and

(2) believes the United States Navy, in light of new information, should consider revisiting decorating and honoring the heroism of Boatswain's Mate Second Class Joseph Leon George in saving the lives of 6 sailors on December 7, 1941.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. President, recently, I was fortunate enough to have the opportunity to host several veterans who survived the sinking of the USS Arizona in the attack on Pearl Harbor.

I would like to briefly share an incredible story they told me about a true American hero named Joe George.

On December 7, 1941, Joe was a 26-year-old Boatswain's Mate Second Class aboard the repair ship USS Vestal in Pearl Harbor, HI, moored alongside the USS Arizona.

At 7:48 a.m., many sailors, including Joe, had finished their breakfast when the Imperial Japanese Navy Air Service attacked Pearl Harbor. As we know, the Arizona suffered a direct hit by a Japanese bomb that detonated in the ship's powder magazine. The resulting explosion sank the ship and claimed the lives of 1,177 servicemembers.

During the unimaginable chaos and carnage, Joe George displayed stunning composure and courage. Joe spotted six sailors trapped in the control tower of the sinking Arizona. These men were severely burned, and they were searching for a way to safety. The six wounded sailors were Seaman First Class Harold Kuhn, Seaman First Class Russell Lott, Gunner's Mate Third Class Earl Riner, Boatswain's Mate Second Class Alvin Dvorak, Seaman First Class Donald Stratton, and Fire Controlman Third Class Lauren Bruner.

Upon seeing the men, Joe threw a heaving line between the Vestal and the Arizona to rescue the wounded sailors from the sinking ship. Suspended 40 feet in the air, the six sailors climbed 70 feet hand over hand across the rope to safety onboard the Vestal. These sailors did all this while enduring injuries so severe that two would succumb to their wounds in the weeks following the attack.

As they struggled across the heavy line, Joe George remained close by, all the while encouraging the men to push on.

The four sailors who survived their injuries each returned to serve with honor during World War II and then went on to live long lives.

I spoke with two of them, and hearing about the injuries they had and that they still were able to return to service in the Second World War was amazing.

Joe George's legacy of heroism will remain alive forever in the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of the four sailors who survived the infamous day, thanks to Joe George.

Joe George was never awarded a medal for his role in the rescue of the six sailors, although his commanding officer commended his courageous actions. When I met with one of the Arizona survivors who was rescued by Joe, he told me, "Joe George was never awarded anything for his bravery. He is no longer with us, but I believe in his memory he should be awarded the Navy Cross."

Lauren Bruner was another survivor whom Joe saved. He said to me:

The six of us would not have survived except for his courage, in spite of being at high risk himself. He fully deserves high commendations for his actions. I feel he should be recognized for this courage and presented the Navy Cross.

In his own words, during an interview in 1978, Joe said: "I'll tell you, the only thing I could tell you about that day . . . my conscience was my guide."

Well, his conscience was that of a hero. We need more people like Joe George in this world. That is why I am committed to honoring Joe and why I rise today with the honor and privilege to submit a resolution honoring Joseph Leon George.

Joe passed away in 1996, and it is long overdue that the Senate, the U.S. Navy, and a grateful nation honor the heroism of Boatswain's Mate Second Class Joseph Leon George.

God bless Joe George, whose immense and astounding composure serves as an example of the men and women in uniform who follow in his wake. Let us never forget his heroism and sacrifice.

I would like to also thank my colleagues Senators GARDNER, LEE, COTTON, McCASKILL, and BENNET for joining me on this resolution. I look forward to working with them on its swift adoption.

Lord, strengthen our lawmakers for the challenges of these times. Keep them in the shadow of Your wings, protecting them from seen and unseen dangers. Use Your powerful arm to guide, protect, and sustain our Nation. Hasten the day when people everywhere will seek and find You.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

WORK BEFORE THE SENATE

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, earlier this week, I set out a number of items for the Senate to get done during this work period, both in terms of nominees and legislation.

First on nominees, we had to confirm an FBI Director, and we have done that. We needed to make progress on a number of other nominations that have been held up for entirely too long. Slowly but surely, we are. We confirmed a well-qualified judicial nominee. We confirmed several officials who will be critical to advancing administration policy in the Defense Department. Yesterday afternoon, we confirmed a nominee to the National Labor Relations Board who will help to return it—after 8 years of habitually siding with union bosses over workers—to its intended role as an impartial judge that calls balls and strikes in labor disputes.

All of this is progress, but we still have nominees to confirm for positions across many agencies in both security and nonsecurity roles. Many Cabinet members still await the No. 2 officials for their departments. So we have more to do.

The same is true of legislation. We had to pass the Veterans Choice legislation. We have. In fact, we passed some additional veterans legislation, as well.

Under the last administration, we learned of a shocking scandal that spread through Veterans Affairs facilities across the Nation. We all agreed that our veterans deserved far better than that. Ever since, Congress has continued to work on a number of initiatives designed to bring more justice to veterans and more reform to the VA. Senator ISAKSON, the chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, has been a tireless advocate for our Nation's veterans and a driving force on seeing these bills through committee and through the Senate. We passed a number of good reforms into law already. We continue to build on that progress today.

Just a couple of months ago, we passed important VA reform legislation that is now law. The Department of Veterans Affairs Accountability and Whistleblower Protection Act is helping to shore up accountability measures, improve transparency, and enhance the VA's ability to remove unsatisfactory employees, while also protecting those who speak up about wrongdoing within the VA.

Just this week we passed through more veterans bills. One heads back to the House for final passage. The Veterans Appeals Improvement and Modernization Act will help address the delays that many veterans have experienced by modernizing the VA's antiquated claims appeals process. The other two bills now await the President's signature. The VA Choice and Quality Employment Act we passed earlier this week will provide additional resources to shore up the critical Veterans Choice Program so that veterans who face long wait and travel times at VA facilities will have the option of accessing private care instead. The Harry W. Colmery Veterans Education Assistance Act we passed yesterday will expand access for veterans to GI bill benefits as they transition back to civilian life.

I want to thank the President and his administration for working with Congress to improve healthcare for our Nation's veterans. I also want to thank again Senator ISAKSON for his unwavering leadership on veterans issues and VA reforms. He has never stopped working to strengthen the VA system for those who rely on it and to overcome the systemic problems that have left many veterans frustrated and hurting. These veterans bills can make a real impact in the lives of the people we represent.

That is also true of the FDA legislation we need to pass during this work period as well. I am hopeful we will have the opportunity to do so today. This legislation, which was passed by the HELP Committee on a 21-to-2 bipartisan vote, is more important than ever in light of lifesaving developments in immunotherapy. It has never been more relevant, given that personalized medicine is just over the horizon. Passing this legislation will help speed up the drug approval process for patients in need. It will help address the time and cost of bringing lifesaving drugs to market. It will allow the important work of ensuring our drugs and devices are safe and effective to move forward.

I want to recognize the chairman of the HELP Committee, Senator ALEXANDER, for helping to make this critical legislation a top priority and for working with colleagues to move it in a timely manner.

We are making progress this week for the future of lifesaving medicine for our veterans and for the leadership of our country's most critical agencies. We know we still have more to do in all of these areas, but we are passing critical legislation. We are confirming nominees to important positions, and we are taking steps in the right direction.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

FDA REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2017—MOTION TO PROCEED

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the motion to proceed to H.R. 2430, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Motion to proceed to Calendar No. 174, H.R. 2430, a bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to revise and extend the user-fee programs for prescription drugs, medical devices, generic drugs, and bio-similar biological products, and for other purposes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the time until 11 a.m. will be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees.

The Senator from Illinois.

FOR-PROFIT COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I want to start this morning's presentation on the floor of the Senate with a question. What is the most heavily subsidized private business in America—the for-profit business that receives more Federal subsidies than any other? Is it a defense contractor? No. Is it some farming operation? No.

The most heavily subsidized for-profit, private business in America today is for-profit colleges and universities. Why? Because the revenue they receive from the Federal Government accounts for 85, 90, 95 percent or more of all of the revenue they take in. How can that possibly be? How could you run a private for-profit business and have a Federal subsidy of 98 percent? How is that possible?

Here is how it works. A student graduates from high school. The student applies to a for-profit college or university. The for-profit college or university accepts the student on the condition that the student sign over Pell grants—Federal money—and the student's Federal Government loan. The student signs over the Pell grant, signs over the loan, and is enrolled in the school.

This for-profit school now is home free. They admitted the student. They received all the money from the student, and the student is headed for classes. It works only if the student, at the end of the day, ends up with some value in their education—some experience that helps them go on to get a job to pay off their student loans.

It turns out that, in too many instances, for-profit colleges and universities entice these young people into signing up for classes that are worthless. They end up not preparing them for any job. Now they are in a terrible fix. If they finish the course, they have a heavy, large student debt and they end up in a position where they can't get a job and pay it off.

How often does this happen? Think of three numbers. So 9 percent of students graduating from high school today in America go to for-profit colleges and universities. What am I talking about—for-profit? There is the University of Phoenix, DeVry, Rasmussen, and the list goes on and on. So 9 percent of high school students go to these schools, and 20 percent or more of Federal aid to education goes to these schools. Why? Because the tuition they charge is so high. But here is the kicker: 35 percent, one out of three students in America who defaults on their student loans has attended these for-profit colleges and universities.

We decided under the previous administration, the Obama administration, to start asking some hard questions. How are these for-profit colleges and universities enticing these students in? What are they saying to them to bring them in to sign up for classes and for their student loans?

Secondly, if the students finish their degrees at these for-profit colleges and universities, how likely are they to end up with a job that is worth something—a job that allows them to pay back their student loan? Those are legitimate questions; aren't they? If you were the parent of a child who said: Dad, I just heard about the University of Phoenix, and I want to go to school there, you would obviously say: Well, what are you interested in taking? Is it a good course? How much does it cost? What will be your debt when you are finished? What is your likelihood of finding a job? Those are obvious questions. We put all those questions into something called the gainful employment rule. At the end of graduating from for-profit colleges and universities, will you be gainfully employed as a graduated student into a job that gives you a chance to pay off your student loan and really keeps the promise that the for-profit school made to you?

Just weeks ago, the new Secretary of Education, Betsy DeVos, announced that our U.S. Department of Education was going to rewrite the gainful employment rule. The rule, as I said, was written by the Obama administration after years of contentious debate with the industry. It was designed to ensure that career training programs that receive Federal student aid are meeting their statutory obligation to prepare the students for a job—for gainful employment.

Don't forget that a lot of young people applying for college are in families that have limited college experience. Mom and Dad may have never gone to college. So when you say DeVry or University of Phoenix, Mom and Dad may say: Is it any good, Son? Is it any good, Daughter? The son or daughter can say: Dad, the Federal Government will loan me the money to go there. It must be a good school. They wouldn't loan me the money to go to a place that is bad. That is a natural reaction. We are, in fact, condoning, endorsing this industry by saying: If you go to these schools, you get taxpayer-funded student loans.

I don't think it is too much to ask the programs promising to train students for specific jobs that actually lead to students being able to get those jobs and, in the process, repay their loans.

The gainful employment rule cuts off Federal student aid if programs where graduates' ratio of student debt to earnings is too high during any 2 years of a 3-year period. We look at the jobs of the graduate of the for-profit schools, we look at the income of the students, and then ask: What is the likelihood that student can make their student loan repayment based on their employment? Is it, in fact, gainful employment?

So prior to leaving office, the Obama Department of Education released gainful employment data for the year 2016. It showed that graduates of public undergraduate certificate programs—now that is those who go to community colleges, different colleges altogether—earn $9,000 more than those who went to for-profit colleges and universities. Do you know what the difference is?

If you decide to go to a community college in my home State of Illinois, in my hometown of Springfield, and go to Lincoln Land Community College—a great community college like most of those in our State—you are going to get an education, a good one, and it will not cost you much. Let me give you the kicker. All of your hours can be transferred to upper level colleges and universities, but if you make a bad decision and go to a for-profit college, different things happen. You end up with a real debt for that first year out of high school and guess what. Virtually none of the credit hours you take at that for-profit school can be transferred to any other college or university. That is the reality of what students face.

Of the programs that saddled students with too much debt compared to the income students receive after the program—listen to this—when we looked at all of the student debt and all of the jobs of all of the graduates across the United States, it turns out, 98 percent of the students who couldn't pay off their student loans after graduating went to for-profit colleges and universities. That was the 2016 analysis. That is what led to the gainful employment rule.

This is cruel to take a young person who is doing just what they were told to do—go to college, get a degree, don't quit with high school—saddle them with debt, make an empty promise about what is going to happen after they graduate, and then they find themselves in a job they can't pay off their student loan. Let me give you a specific example so you can really understand what we have run into.

The digital photography program at the Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg, IL—now, let me quickly add, the folks who put this together were pretty smart. We have an outstanding college in Chicago called the Art Institute of Illinois. My daughter graduated from there. However, this bunch, the for-profit group, decided to call their operation the Illinois Institute of Art, instead of the Art Institute of Chicago.

They are owned by a for-profit giant, the Education Management Corporation. They failed the gainful employment rule in the year 2016. Listen to what it wrote on their website for students who wanted to enroll:

There's a market for people who constantly find innovative ways to fill the world with their ideas, impressions, and insights. And Digital Photography can help you make a positive impression when you're ready to match your talents against the competition. From the very start, we'll guide your development, both creatively and technically . . . it's a step-by-step process that's all about preparing you for a future when you can do what you love.

That is what is on the website for the high school student who likes the idea of majoring in digital photography at the Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg. Boy, doesn't that sound good?

So let's contrast that with what the gainful employment rule found about that particular program. Get ready. Do you know what the total cost of the digital photography course was at the Illinois Institute of Art, the for-profit school—total cost of tuition, fees, books, and supplies to prepare you to be a digital photographer? It is $88,000—$88,000. It gets better. That is if you live off campus.

Do you want to live on campus? The company helps you find an apartment nearby. Over the 4 years, it is an additional $56,000.

Let's do the quick math here. That is $144,000 in debt, finishing 4 years, majoring in digital photography at the Illinois Institute of Art. How many students have to borrow money to do that? Eighty four percent of the students who went to that school and took digital photography had to borrow the money—84 percent.

Guess what the typical graduate of the Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg, IL, in the digital photography course earns after leaving the program. Do you remember that promise on their website? How much do they earn? On average, it is $20,493—$20,493.

Here is a quick calculation. What if I am being paid the minimum wage in America? In Illinois, it is $9.25 an hour. Well, I would be making right around $18,500 a year in a minimum-wage job. I have gone to the Illinois Institute of Art in Schaumburg to take the digital photography course and instead of making $18,500 a year, I am making $20,493. That is almost $2,000 more a year. Oh, I forget. I forgot $144,000 in debt that I also have. Let's do the math. How many years of an additional $2,000 to pay off $144,000? It is only 72 years, and you would be able to pay off your student debt. What a rip-off. These people ought to be ashamed of themselves, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves that we are supporting this kind of fraudulent activity at the expense of students who were just trying to get a better education.

That is why we wrote this gainful employment rule, to say to the Illinois Institute of Art and those just like them: Stop it. Stop fleecing these kids, stop burying them in debt. Incidentally, many times parents and even grandparents sign on for that debt too.

You know something else you ought to remember? Of all the debts you could incur in life, there are only a handful of them that can never be discharged in bankruptcy. Student loans would happen to be in that category. Do you know what that means? No matter how bad it gets—and it could get to the point where you have no income whatsoever—no matter how bad it gets, you can't go to the courts and say: Please, turn me free. Discharge this debt in bankruptcy. Give me a chance to start all over again.

You can do it with your home mortgage. You can do it with an auto loan. You can do it if you have a loan for a boat but not with student loans. It is with you for a lifetime.

We have had cases where Grandma decided to help her granddaughter by cosigning the note at one of these miserable schools. The granddaughter couldn't pay back the student loan, and they went after Grandma's Social Security payments. That is what this is all about. That is how serious this can become.

There is no way students leaving that digital photography program at this for-profit college in Schaumburg will ever repay their loans making that money. Under the gainful employment rule, if the Illinois Institute of Art doesn't change its program or lower its price or help its students get better jobs, we would stop providing student loans to the students who are engaged in that program. We are not going to be complicit—we shouldn't be—in this fraud. The rule requires schools to post their gainful employment data online using a new, easy-to-read disclosure so students can read what happened to students who took the digital photography course. Did they get jobs? How much did they earn?

That is also one of the requirements of the gainful employment rule. It requires schools to provide warnings to students in advertising and marketing materials about failing programs so they know before they sign up—they know before they go in debt.

Think about what these disclosures and warnings might have meant to Ami Schneider from Hoffman Estates, IL. Ami went to this notorious art institute—the Illinois Institute of Art—the Schaumburg digital photography program from 2007 to 2010. She wrote me a letter and told me her story.

Ami said she moved out of her parents' house at age 19, and after a few years, realized she couldn't have the life she wanted with the job she was working. She was getting 50-cent-an-hour raises every year. She said: I wanted to pursue a career, and I really was serious. I was passionate about it. She visited this Illinois Institute of Art campus in Schaumburg. "I went into [the school]," she wrote me, "and they fed me all these success stories. They told me they had [an] excellent placement" program.

What do you think would have happened if they would have told Ami that at the end of the day, she would have been making slightly more than minimum wage after taking all these courses and incurring all this debt? What if they had been required to tell Ami that employers wouldn't accept her degree and she would never pay off her student loan?

Well, Ami and tens of thousands of students like her across the country would have been spared from a hardship that can change their lives. Ami says her time at the Illinois Institute of Art "ended up ruining my life." In her twenties, she made a decision to go to college, got so deeply in debt, and can't pay it back.

The program culminated in a portfolio show where the students displayed their best work. Do you know how many employers—after Ami finished the course and did her display—do you know how many employers showed up for Ami's class portfolio show at the Illinois Institute of Art? None. Not one.

Ami and her family who took out the loans to help her now hold more than $100,000 in student loan debt from her time at the Illinois Institute of Art. She is stuck with a degree which, as she said, she "considered a joke."

Using the questionable legal authority, which she claims she has, the new Secretary of Education, Betsy DeVos, has decided to delay for a year the requirement that schools warn students like Ami about these failing programs—delayed it for a year. That is another year that for-profit education companies will be able to hide the truth about their miserable results. It means students are going to be defrauded because Education Secretary

Betsy DeVos has decided to let it happen.

It means more students like Ami and more Federal dollars in the pockets of these greedy, for-profit college executives. You wouldn't believe what these people pay themselves who head up these for-profit colleges and universities. Take the most successful basketball coach in the United States of America at the college level, take the most successful football coach in a State like Alabama, take a look at what they get paid—and I am sure in Alabama they would pay them even more if they could—and then compare it to what these CEOs pay themselves off these poor students. It is disgraceful. For the sake of the students and taxpayers who immediately would benefit from real warnings, it is time for us in Congress to speak up.

We also know Secretary DeVos intends to eventually rewrite the gainful employment rule, what she called a "regulatory reset." What does that mean?

We hear a lot of speeches on the floor about too much government regulation. If you were Ami Schneider or her parents, would you consider a disclosure to students about the real results of their education, a disclosure to students about the debt they are going to incur and the income they are likely to earn overregulation by the Federal Government?

We are putting a lot of money on the line to give $100,000, at least, of the Federal taxpayers' dollars to Ami to go to school, but she has to promise to pay it back. If she defaults, that money isn't paid back into the Treasury. For the good of the taxpayers as well as for her family, we should have some basic regulations, some basic accountability.

While Secretary DeVos says the rule is unfair and arbitrary, the Department of Education Inspector General agreed with the assertion that it was a good rule in terms of protecting kids and protecting taxpayers. I am proud to say the rule is supported by many State Attorneys General, including Lisa Madigan in my home State of Illinois, veterans groups, and student advocates.

Secretary DeVos said the gainful employment rule has been "repeatedly . . . overturned by the courts" Wrong. In effect, since it went into effect in 2015, every Federal court it has been in front of has upheld the underlying rule. The Secretary is just plain wrong.

It is time for Secretary DeVos and the Trump administration to stop aiding and abetting for-profit colleges that defraud students and bilk taxpayers.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Democratic leader is recognized.

NOMINATIONS

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, as the Senate wraps up its work this week, I have been in multiple discussions with my friend the majority leader about clearing nominations with bipartisan support, and we have made significant progress. Now that we have moved past the terrible process used on healthcare, I hope we can get back to our normal way of legislating and clearing non-controversial nominees. The two are tied together. They can't avoid regular order when they want to and say that Democrats should use regular order whenever they want us to.

Now that healthcare is done, I think we can tie the two together—the normal way of legislating, clearing non-controversial nominees as we move forward in September. Of course, controversial nominees will still require the proper vetting, but I am committed to help move noncontroversial, bipartisan nominees forward.

I hope the fever is breaking. There is a real desire in this body to move past the acrimony of the healthcare debate and get to a place where we can work together to advance legislation that helps the American people. I am hopeful that the discussions between the Republican leader and me will produce a package of nominees we can confirm today.

TAX REFORM

Mr. President, the Republican leader has said that the next big issue this body will take up is taxes. Democrats were excluded from even participating in healthcare discussions from the very first day of Congress, a process that ultimately ended in failure. So we have made the first overture this time to show our Republican friends we are serious about a bipartisan process on tax reform. We sent them a letter outlining three very basic principles. This is a guideline for our Republican colleagues to come work with us. These are very simple principles that I think the vast majority of Americans would support. Let me say what they are.

First, the Republican leader has said that he would pursue reconciliation again, a process that purposefully excludes Democrats almost again on the first day we begin to talk about tax reform. The majority leader brought down the curtain on bipartisan tax reform before a discussion between our two parties could even begin. He says that Democrats don't want to have a bipartisan discussion. Of course we do. We have said this over and over again until we are blue in the face, but I guess the majority leader somehow didn't like the three principles we laid out, and I would like him to specifically answer what it was.

We know he probably agrees, so which of these three principles does the majority leader disagree with? Tell us. Which of the three? We know he probably agrees with the third. Surely he can't think that a blunt budget tool that excludes 48 Members of the Senate is a good way to write legislation. He has said so many times himself. I quoted him yesterday.

He warned the Senate about becoming "an assembly line for one party's partisan legislative agenda." Those are Senator MCCONNELL's words. The Senate should not become "an assembly line for one party's partisan legislative agenda." That is what he did on healthcare. Is he doing it again on tax reform? I hope not.

Well, we know he probably agrees with the second principle: no increase to the debt and deficit. We know he agrees because he has said so before. The Republican leader and Members of his party have spent decades assailing the debt and deficit. As recently as May 16, the Republican leader told Bloomberg TV that tax reform will have to be revenue-neutral, so that one doesn't seem to be it. Again, I would like to hear what he has to say explicitly so that we can work together.

It leaves us with the first principle: no tax cuts for the top 1 percent. Here again, I understand why the majority leader and my Republican friends don't want to come out and say that this is the reason they have decided to pursue a tax bill on their own, but it almost certainly is.

Tax cuts for the wealthy are extremely unpopular with the American people—and for good reason. The top 1 percent of this country takes 20 percent of our income, a great percentage of its wealth. The wealthy are doing well. God bless them. Their incomes are going up at a faster rate than those of anybody else, but when we are talking about our Tax Code and rewriting it, we shouldn't be focused on giving the 1 percent another tax break while millions of working families struggle to afford the cost of college, prescription drugs, food, and healthcare.

I am afraid the majority is in the same boat as they were with healthcare. They don't want to say that their real reason for changing healthcare is wanting to slash Medicaid. A good number of courageous Members on the other side said: We won't do that. But that was the core of the Senate bill. They knew it was unpopular with the American people, so they didn't talk about it. They entered into a process that hid it from the American people.

I think, unfortunately, history is repeating itself. They know how unpopular cutting taxes on the top 1 percent is, but for the special interest, Koch brother wing of their party, that is their No. 1 goal. All they talk about is cutting taxes on the wealthy. So they are stuck. When will my colleagues have the courage to break free from the Koch brothers and special interests?

Don't give breaks to the top 1 percent. Everyone knows they don't need it. It is an old, discredited idea that has lost its steam except among the hard-right, Koch brother wing of the Republican Party. Most Americans—Democrats, Republicans, and Independents—don't go for it. So break free.

If our Republican colleagues' whole basis for doing tax reform is cutting taxes on the top 1 percent, we are going to send that message from one end of America to the other, and their ideas will certainly fail, as they did with healthcare.

In a related point, I saw this morning that President Trump has been bragging about the success of the stock market, which, by the way, was already going up. It went up more points under President Obama than under President Trump. It started going up years ago. It is just continuing. Most economists would give President Obama at least as much credit as President Trump. But that is not the point I wish to make.

The stock market is mainly owned by the wealthy. As of 2013, the top 20 percent own 92 percent of all stock shares. So when the stock market is going up, it is helping the 1 percent.

Average Americans are not looking for stocks to go up, not looking for corporate profits to hit record levels, as much as they are looking at how are their paychecks, how are their expenses. That is why we have a better deal for them. We want paychecks for average Americans to go up. We want expenses for average Americans to go down. We want them to have better tools, so they and their kids can make a better living in the 21st century.

The focus of the stock market is on people at the highest end. Many will dispute whether President Trump deserves credit for it, but whether you think so or you don't—I don't, by and large—it is not what the American people are looking for, and it is not a basis for bragging about the economy.

Well, going back to taxes—the American people will rebel against a tax cut for the wealthy, so the Republicans clearly will not talk about it in their plan. They will give a crumb to the middle class and try to hide a massive giveaway to the already fortunate. I can see no other reason why they object to these three very reasonable, very popular principles other than that, and we hope they will not try to sneak it through in the same partisan process.

IMMIGRATION

Finally, Mr. President, a word on immigration: Yesterday, I heard the President railing against migrant workers and wrapping his arms around the Cotton-Perdue bill. The bill goes after hard-working people who want to play by the rules, contribute to our economy, and earn citizenship, while doing nothing to address the unscrupulous practices of employers who abuse our visa programs to outsource jobs and displace American workers.

Here is what I would like to focus on. The President has this nice announcement that he is cutting back on immigration, but a month ago he actually increased the number of H-2B visas—a program the President knows well. Why? A lot of those with H-2B visas work in hotels. I don't know how many, but I bet a good number are in Trump Hotels. So when the President actually looks at immigration in his own businesses, he says: We need more immigrants. When asked before, he has said: Well, we couldn't get American workers. But when he comes up with his big immigration plan—I think not appealing to the higher instincts of Americans—he says: Slash it. Those two are complete contradictions. To hold both of those views is to hold hypocritical views.

The President wants to talk about immigration because he thinks the politics are to his advantage, but, in truth, his immigration policy has a stunning hypocrisy at the core of it. The President criticizes and seeks to limit almost every immigration program except the one that benefits his own business.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you, Mr. President.

I rise in support of the Food and Drug Administration Reauthorization Act that we are now considering. Let me begin by commending Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY of the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee for their leadership in bringing this important legislation to the Senate floor. This bill is the product of bipartisan, bicameral work and is proof that we can make progress when we work together on the areas where we can find agreement.

FDA user fees, which are reauthorized under this bill, are critical to moving the most advanced research from a promise to a cure and ensuring that new treatments reach patients in need. User fees, where companies fund a portion of the premarket review of their products, account for more than one-quarter of all FDA funding. Yet the FDA's authority to collect these fees will expire at the end of next month unless Congress acts, thus the urgency of getting this bill across the finish line.

That is why it is imperative that we advance this bill now and ensure that work on these promising new pharmaceuticals continues uninterrupted.

In May, the HELP Committee, on which I am pleased to serve, overwhelmingly approved bipartisan legislation to extend and reauthorize the FDA fees in order to support the public health of our Nation. The bill before us also incorporates many provisions that were advanced by individual Committee Members. It is a great example of how a committee process should work. It was collaborative. We each brought ideas to the table, and during our markup, those ideas were offered as amendments and in many cases incorporated into the legislation.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member for including in this important legislation provisions that I authored with Senator CLAIRE MCCASKILL. Those provisions seek to accelerate the review process for prescription drugs in cases where there is limited or no competition. Our purpose is to lower or at least moderate the escalating prescription drug prices that are one of the key cost drivers in our healthcare system today.

During the last Congress, our Senate Aging Committee, which I chair—and at that time Senator MCCASKILL was the ranking member—had a bipartisan investigation into the causes, impacts, and potential solutions to the egregious price spikes for certain off-patent drugs for which there were no generic competitors.

Now, let me explain this situation a little more.

What we found was happening is that in cases in which the patent on the original brand name pharmaceutical had expired, there were these companies that were not traditional pharmaceutical companies—they were not firms that had invested hundreds of millions in R&D in order to develop a new prescription drug. That is not what we are talking about. We are talking about these pharma companies—I call them hedge fund pharmas—that wait until the patent has expired, then buy the pharmaceutical drug and virtually overnight impose egregious price increases. One of the executives of these companies, when asked why he did so, answered simply "because I can."

Obviously, that has a very detrimental impact on patients, on healthcare providers, on insurers, and on Federal programs such as Medicaid and Medicare.

So building on our investigation, Senator MCCASKILL and I sponsored legislation, called the Making Pharmaceutical Markets More Competitive Act, to foster a more competitive generic marketplace and to improve access for affordable medicines. That is key. If we can have more competition in the prescription drug marketplace, that is what drives down costs, and that is what drives down prices. We know that from our experience when generic drugs come on the market.

The bill that we are considering today that is based on our legislation includes key provisions which were adopted unanimously as an amendment that I sponsored during the committee markup.

First, our provisions would require the FDA to prioritize the review of certain generic applications. It would set a clear timeframe of no more than 8 months for the FDA to act on such applications where there is inadequate generic competition. This would help to resolve situations in which there are drug shortages, as well as circumstances in which there are not more than three approved competitors on the market.

The Aging Committee's investigation into sudden price spikes found that older drugs with only one manufacturer and no generic competitor are particularly vulnerable to dramatic and sudden price increases.

One company that we investigated, Turing Pharmaceuticals, increased the price of a drug called Daraprim, which is a lifesaving drug for serious parasitic infections, from $13.50 a pill to $750 a pill—an increase of more than 5,000 percent—and they did so literally overnight. Now, keep in mind that this company, Turing Pharmaceuticals, had nothing to do with the costly research and development that brought about this lifesaving drug, known as Daraprim, but after they bought the drug—after the patent had expired and they saw that there was no generic competitor—they increased the price overnight by 5,000 percent. This price hike for a drug that has remained unchanged since 1953 is unacceptable and underscores the urgent need for legislation to prevent bad actors from taking advantage of a noncompetitive marketplace.

Second, the bill would improve communications between the FDA and the eligible sponsors prior to the submission of an application for the approval of a generic drug. That would improve the quality of applications from the beginning, increasing the chances of successful approval by the FDA.

Third, new reporting requirements would provide increased transparency into the backlog of applications for drug approvals and pending generic and priority review applications.

Fourth, this bill would provide the public with accurate information about drugs with limited competition. Drug manufacturers would be required to notify and provide rationale when removing a drug from the market, and the FDA would publish a list of off-patent brand name drugs that lack generic competitors, so that if you were a generic drug company, you would know that this would be an opportunity to develop a competitor drug.

I give the new FDA Commissioner a great deal of credit for his incorporating some of our provisions. He cares deeply about this issue.

Finally, this bill would streamline the regulatory process to address incidents in which the delayed re-inspection of manufacturing facilities becomes a barrier to generics entering the marketplace.

By taking these steps, we will enhance regulatory certainty for generic drug companies, help to prevent shortages, increase competition to lower prices and prevent monopolies, and deter practices that can lead to unjustifiable, exorbitant price hikes.

I am pleased that the legislation also includes another bill that resulted from our Aging Committee's investigation. This provision will help to prevent bad actors from receiving unwarranted vouchers under the Tropical Disease Voucher Program.

This program was intended to incentivize the development of medicines for neglected diseases, yet was exploited by the notorious Martin Shkreli, the founder of Turing. After spiking the price of Daraprim, he purchased another decades-old drug—one, once again, without a competitor—that is used to treat a life-threatening infection that is rare in the United States. Mr. Shkreli sought to use the Tropical Disease Voucher Program to gain exclusivity and hike the price for a drug that is not, in fact, a new drug.

Our legislation revises the program to better ensure that it achieves its intent, which is to spur the development of therapies that are truly new in order to treat and cure neglected diseases.

Drug companies should not be able to increase their prices dramatically by thousands of a percent overnight without any justification—without the development of modifications in the drug that improve its effectiveness, for example.

Our legislation will help to foster a much healthier and more competitive generic marketplace as the best defense against such exploitation. I am pleased that our bipartisan plan will increase generic competition, which is so important for American families and our seniors, particularly, who take a disproportionate number of the prescription drugs that are prescribed in this country.

Before closing, let me briefly mention another important provision in the bill before us, the Over-the-Counter Hearing Aid Act of 2017. Approximately 30 million Americans experience age-related hearing loss. Yet only about 14 percent of those with hearing loss use assistive hearing technology, often because they simply cannot afford the price of costly hearing aids.

We know from a hearing that we recently held in the Aging Committee that social isolation among our seniors can be exacerbated by hearing loss that is left untreated. That, in turn, increases that social isolation and increases the risk of serious mental and physical health outcomes. By making some types of hearing aids available over the counter, just as people buy readers to see with, which are over-the-counter eyeglasses, this legislation will help increase access to and lower the cost of the products for the consumers who need them.

The legislation we are considering today will help to bring lifesaving drugs to the marketplace and will ensure that the FDA continues to operate smoothly and, most importantly, that promising therapies make it to the American people.

Again, I commend Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY for their leadership, and I encourage all of our colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.

Thank you.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I wish to express concern with section 709 of H.R. 2430, concerning over-the-counter, OTC, hearing aids.

I have a daughter who has worn hearing aids since she was a toddler. I have firsthand experience with the kind of expertise needed by providers to ensure that those who require a hearing aid have their specific and unique medical needs met.

I believe that everyone on all sides of this issue desire the same thing, and I appreciate Chairman ALEXANDER working with me to get a study relating to this matter. I believe that we are all working, in sincerity, towards a goal of providing those who would benefit from hearing aids with access to safe and effective products that will help them live the kinds of lives which they choose and desire. That being said, I am concerned about a policy which will create a division between a healthcare provider and a patient who needs that provider's expertise.

Thank you.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I yield back all time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. All time is yielded back.

TRICKETT WENDLER RIGHT TO TRY ACT OF 2017

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, in about 5 minutes, I am going to be asking for consent to pass the Trickett Wendler, Frank Mongiello, Jordan McLinn, and Matthew Belina Right to Try Act of 2017.

I wish to take a few moments, though, to tell the story of how that right-to-try bill, which has been passed by 37 States, obtained that name. I believe it was probably March of 2014 that I met Trickett Wendler, a young mom with three children, who came to Washington, DC, with a group of other individuals advocating for those patients and their families with people suffering from ALS, or Lou Gehrig’s disease—an incurable and devastating disease.

A week before meeting Trickett, I met with the Goldwater Institute, which was talking about its right-to-try legislation. They were beginning to pass through State legislatures. Just mentioning the fact that I supported the right to try brought tears streaming down Trickett Wendler’s face. Unfortunately, Trickett Wendler lost her battle to ALS on March 18, 2015. She has inspired something that I think is going to give so many thousands—maybe tens of thousands, maybe millions—of Americans hope when they face a similar type of disease, where there is no hope, where there are no further options, other than potentially an experimental drug that has been proven safe, according to the FDA.

In our press conference announcing the introduction of this bill, we had met Matthew Belina, a naval aviator and lieutenant commander—one of the finest among us—also stricken with ALS. We had little Jordan McLinn, a little boy with Duchenne muscular dystrophy, and his mother Laura was speaking at that press conference. Remarkably, a man also stricken with ALS, Frank Mongiello, his wife Marilyn, and their children asked to speak. He made such an impression on our gathering, which encapsulated that press conference, particularly his speech in a video that I showed to my colleagues, which resulted in so many cosponsorships of this bill.

These are real people facing their mortality with no hope. This right-to-try piece of legislation will give those individuals and their families hope.

I want to truly thank my lead cosponsor from across the aisle, Senator JOE DONNELLY, who is in the Chamber here today, and also Senator KING and Senator MANCHIN, who decided not to play any politics whatsoever and also were willing to cosponsor a bill offered by somebody who was in a tough re-election fight. I want to thank my 43 Republican cosponsors, particularly Senator McCONNELL. As leader, he was one of the first cosponsors who helped me to get those other 42 cosponsors. I want to particularly thank Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY, who have worked so cooperatively with me and my staff to make this moment possible. I would like to thank Vice President PENCE, who also met Frank Mongiello and became a real advocate for this, and President Trump, who after meeting these types of victims—these individuals—also supported this piece of legislation.

I wish to thank the Goldwater Institute and Darcy Olson for their tireless efforts at promoting the right to try and the 37 States and the 97.7 percent of the legislators who, when given a chance to vote to give people the right to try and the right to hope, voted yes.

I would also like to thank a very special person, Dr. Delpassand, who really demonstrated why this is such an important piece of legislation. Dr. Delpassand is an oncologist from Houston, TX. He was engaged in an FDA trial on an aggressive form of endocrine cancer with 150 patients. It was working. The drug was working. He petitioned the FDA to allow another 78 patients to participate in the trial. The FDA said no, but Dr. Delpassand said yes, putting his career at risk.

It is that kind of courage that we want to reward today by passing this right-to-try bill.

In conclusion, I want to thank the thousands of patients and their families who have taken their wheelchairs and gone to their State capitals and have come here to Washington, DC, to advocate for their personal freedom, their personal liberty, for their right to try, for their right to hope, and for the right to hope of millions of other Americans faced with these incurable diseases.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions be discharged from further consideration of S. 204 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 204) to authorize the use of unapproved medical products by patients diagnosed with a terminal illness in accordance with State law, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Johnson-Donnelly amendment at the desk be considered and agreed to, and the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 753) in the nature of a substitute was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: In the nature of a substitute)

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Trickett Wendler, Frank Mongiello, Jordan McLinn, and Matthew Bellina Right to Try Act of 2017”.

SEC. 3. SENSE OF THE SENATE.

It is the sense of the Senate that section 561B of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, as added by section 2—

(1) does not establish a new entitlement or modify an existing entitlement, or otherwise establish a positive right to any party or individual;

(2) does not establish any new mandates, directives, or additional regulations;

(3) only expands the scope of individual liberty and agency among patients, in limited circumstances;

(4) is consistent with, and will act as an alternative pathway alongside, existing expanded access policies of the Food and Drug Administration;

(5) will not, and cannot, create a cure or effective therapy where none exists;

(6) recognizes that the eligible terminally ill patient population often consists of those patients with the highest risk of mortality, and use of experimental treatments under the criteria and procedure described in such section 561A involves an informed assumption of risk; and

(7) establishes national standards and rules by which investigational drugs may be provided to terminally ill patients.

The bill (S. 204), as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. President, I want to talk about what a great moment this is. I want to thank Chairman ALEXANDER for all his help, Ranking Member PATTY MURRAY for all of her help, and to my colleague the Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. JOHNSON, for all he has done to spearhead this effort.

This gives folks a shot. It doesn't provide any guarantees, but it allows folks to be able to take their care into their own hands, to make judgments, and to decide: I want to take a shot at this.

For me, it was a wonderful family from Indiana who, by the way, this morning they are at Legoland down in Florida because their young boy is in good health, is getting along, but time is ticking. Young Jordan McLinn has Duchenne muscular dystrophy. His mom Laura and Jordan met with me and said: All we want is a shot. We don't want a guarantee. We want a chance to try to make Jordan better. That is what this Right to Try Act does. That is why I am so proud of all our colleagues coming together to support this, and to all the families Senator JOHNSON mentioned, we are so proud of you. We are so grateful to you for your advocacy because it was your words, your examples that have helped to get this done.

I want to say to everyone in Indiana and everyone in America how grateful we are that this Right to Try Act has passed, and to Chairman ALEXANDER and Ranking Member MURRAY, thank you for working together to make this happen.

I yield back.

The Senator from Washington.

FDA REAUTHORIZATION BILL

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I want to say I am really pleased we are moving forward on the FDA Reauthorization Act today. This is really a great example about how Congress can actually work together on health issues and compromise and solve challenges by putting patients and families first.

As my colleagues well know, these so-called user fee agreements are essential to supporting FDA's operation and mission. They allow FDA to meet the complex challenges of the 21st century technology and the movement toward precision medicine, and they help ensure that FDA upholds the gold standard of approval while evaluating new drugs and devices efficiently. Put simply, passing the FDA Reauthorization Act is absolutely necessary if Congress wants to advance safe, effective and innovative medical products for patients and families across the country.

I would add, when we pass this reauthorization today, more than 5,000 employees at FDA will be able to continue their critical work without worry of interruption, employees that worked every day to protect the health and families and advance medical innovations to patients.

So I am really pleased to have worked alongside the chairman of our HELP Committee, the Senior Senator from Tennessee, and all of our colleagues on and off the committee to bring to the floor these finalized agreements.

They truly reflect years of negotiations between FDA and the industry, incorporate input from patient and consumer groups, and support some of our most urgent priorities: restructuring the generic drug user fees, building up the Biosimilars Program, making sure patients' perspectives are considered in drug and device development, and advancing many of the policies we passed as part of the 21st Century Cures Act.

In addition to those agreements, the FDA Reauthorization Act includes priorities and provisions from Members across the political spectrum, so I again want to thank Chairman ALEXANDER and all my colleagues, in particular, Senators CASEY, FRANKEN, and WARREN, on their work to improve medical device safety; Senators HASSAN and YOUNG on their provision to get better information to providers about opioids; Senators MCCASKILL, FRANKEN, and COLLINS for their commitment to improving the generic drug market; and Senators BENNET, VAN HOLLEN, and RUBIO for their drive to get new medicine for kids with cancer.

I really want to thank my staff and Chairman ALEXANDER's staff who worked so well together over months of hard work to get this done.

Mr. President, this bill advances several significant bipartisan priorities I am proud to support. As many know, the HELP Committee has a strong tradition of bipartisan success in these user fee agreements, and I am very proud to say we have kept it this way. I think this bill not only improves FDA, but it also shows that when we work together with a common goal, we can get things done and make progress.

I thank the chair and my partner, Senator ALEXANDER.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I see Senators ISAKSON and TESTER are here. I think they want to make remarks before the vote.

Let me say a few words following up on Senator MURRAY, and then I will place the rest of my comments in the RECORD.

This is very important legislation. Last year, we passed the 21st Century Cures Act to move these modern medical miracles into medicine cabinets and doctors' offices more rapidly. This is funding that pays for one-quarter of the Food and Drug Administration, which has a critical role in approving the safety and effectiveness of drugs, treatments, and devices. As with most things in the Senate that actually are important and work well and get a result, a lot of hard work has gone into this.

It started 2 years ago with Republicans and Democrats; Senator MURRAY and I and our staffs working together with the House of Representatives at the same time, working with manufacturers, the FDA, many others, working out many differences of opinion. So now we are going to get to a result within a few minutes. We are probably going to adopt this by voice vote almost unanimously. Everyone will say that must have been easy. It wasn't that easy, but it is how work gets done in the U.S. Senate when we do it well.

I want to comment on our colleagues and the staff and the House of Representatives on what they have done. We will continue to focus our attention on the 21st Century Cures Act. A piece of legislation is not worth the paper it is printed on unless it is implemented properly, but this funding today, done in a timely way, says to the men and women who work at the Food and Drug Administration and to their leader, Dr. Gottlieb: We value what you do.

In the 21st Century Cures Act, we gave the Commissioner more authority to hire and pay talented people to work at FDA and approve these medical miracles that are coming. We are reauthorizing the user fees in a timely way so the FDA's work will not be interrupted.

I thank Senator MURRAY for the way she worked on this. This is typical of our committee when we work well, which we most always do.

I will make remarks in the RECORD concerning the staff. They are almost too numerous to mention. Senator MURRAY's staff, my staff, Chairman WALDEN's staff, Ranking Member PALLONE's staff, Food and Drug Administration staff, Congressional Budget Office legislative counsel, and Senator MCCONNELL's staff—they have all been critical to the success we are about to have today.

I would like to thank the staff who have been devoted to reauthorizing these important programs. Some of them have been working on this bill for over 2 years. I am deeply grateful to them. I have deep appreciation for their hard work, their ingenuity, and their skill in helping us come to this result. Without their hard work and tireless effort, we wouldn't have been able to pass this before the deadline, ensuring the FDA can continue its important mission.

On Senator MURRAY's exceptional staff, I would like to thank Evan Schatz, John Richter, Nick Bath, Andi Fristedt, and Remy Brim.

On my hard-working and dedicated staff, I would like to thank David Cleary, Lindsey Seidman, Allison Martin, Mary-Sumpter Lapinski, Grace Stuntz, Margaret Coulter, Curtis Vann, Lowell Schiller, Bobby McMillin, Liz Wolgemuth, Margaret Atkinson, Taylor Haulsee, Elizabeth Gibson, and Anthony Birch.

On Chairman WALDEN's staff, I would like to thank Ray Baum, Paul Edattel, and John Stone.

On Ranking Member PALLONE's staff, I would like to thank Jeff Carroll, Tiffany Guarascio, and Kimberlee Trzeciak. I would also like to thank much of the hard-working staff from the Food and Drug Administration who provided great help in getting this bill completed and working out the user fee agreements in a timely manner. From legislative counsel from the House and Senate, I would like to thank Warren Burke, Michelle Vanek, Kim Tamber, and Katie Bonander.

From the Congressional Budget Office, I would like to thank Darren Young, Andrea Noda, Chad Chirico, Holly Harvey, Ellen Werble, and Rebecca Yip.

On Senator MCCONNELL's staff, I would like to thank Scott Raab.

On Speaker RYAN's staff, I would like to thank Matt Hoffman.

Finally, I would like to thank all the patients, doctors, researchers, innovators, thought leaders, and experts who dedicated time and expertise to helping improve the legislation and supporting its approval.

To reiterate, today the Senate will take up and I expect it will pass the Food and Drug Administration Reauthorization Act of 2017 to speed cures and treatments into patients' medicine cabinets.

Last year, 94 Senators voted to pass 21st Century Cures and send $4.8-billion to spur medical research at the National Institutes of Health.

Leader MCCONNELL called it the "most important piece of legislation" that year.

Today's passage of the FDA user fees will help ensure advancements in research supported by 21st Century Cures actually make it to patients who are waiting.

The Food and Drug Administration is the agency responsible for making sure promising research supported by 21st Century Cures can turn into lifesaving treatments and cures.

This legislation we will vote on today includes four FDA user fee agreements—which are set to expire on September 30—and will speed the agency's ability to review new prescription drugs, generic drugs, biosimilar drugs, and medical devices and bring those treatments and cures to patients more quickly.

This legislation will reauthorize the authority for the FDA to accept user fees—paid by manufacturers of drugs and medical devices—that account for $8 to $9 billion over 5 years and is over a quarter of all FDA funding.

The reauthorizations are based on recommendations from industry and FDA after a thorough public process.

FDA posted meeting minutes after every negotiation and held public meetings before discussion began and to hear feedback on the draft recommendations last fall.

We began almost 2 years ago working in a bipartisan way to reauthorize and update the user fee agreements. We held 15 bipartisan Senate health committee briefings, including several with the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

In the Senate HELP Committee, we held two bipartisan hearings on these agreements—one in March and one in April of this year.

We heard from the FDA, witnesses representing the manufacturers of drugs and medical devices, and witnesses representing the patients who rely on the products they make.

Throughout this process, we have worked closely with the House. In April, the leaders of the Senate and House health committees released a discussion draft of bipartisan legislation to reauthorize and update the user-fee agreements and which reflected the recommendations sent to Congress by the FDA in January.

In May, the Senate HELP Committee overwhelmingly approved this legislation reauthorizing the user fees by a vote of 21 to 2. This also included over 20 provisions that were adopted in committee and were priorities for HELP members.

The bill includes provisions from Senators ISAKSON and BENNET to improve the medical device inspection process; Senators HASSAN and YOUNG to improve communication about abuse-deterrent opioid products; Senators ENZI and FRANKEN to encourage medical device development for children and make sure FDA has appropriate expertise to review devices for children; Senators ROBERTS, DONNELLY, and BURR to allow more appropriate classification of accessories used with medical devices; Senators COLLINS, FRANKEN, MCCASKILL, and COTTON to improve generic drug development and help lower prescription drug costs; Senators HATCH, BENNET, BURR, and CASEY to improve access to clinical trials for all patients; and Senators BENNET, RUBIO, VAN HOLLEN, and GARDNER to increase the development of new drugs to treat pediatric cancers and other diseases.

The House passed this user fee legislation on July 12 by voice vote.

Now it is our turn to pass this bipartisan legislation that is integral to helping patients and families who rely on the lifesaving medical innovation that FDA is responsible for reviewing.

The goal of getting this to the President's desk is an important one. If we do not pass this legislation before the end of September, FDA will begin sending layoff notices to more than 5,000 employees to notify them that they may lose their job in 60 days.

If we do not pass this bill, a FDA reviewer who gets started reviewing a cancer drug submitted to the agency in April could be laid off before the reviewer is able to finish his or her work.

A delay in reauthorizing the user fees would not only harm patients and families who rely on medical innovation, but it would threaten biomedical industry jobs and jeopardize America's global leadership in biomedical innovation.

I am glad the Senate is taking the step of voting on this legislation today. I look forward to supporting this important bipartisan bill and sending it to the President's desk. I urge my colleagues to support it as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

VETERANS LEGISLATION

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, I rise for a moment to reflect on what was a great night for the U.S. Senate, the U.S. Government, for the population of our country but most importantly for those who served as veterans in the military.

Last night, the Senate agreed to significant legislation on three fronts to make the VA better and more responsive to our veterans.

Ranking Member TESTER and I have spent the entire year working toward making sure we dealt with the needs the VA has so all these stories we see on the front page of papers, stories about there being unsafe conditions, stories about people being mistreated, stories of people having to wait so long for their appointments—we want to put an end to all this, and we have given the Secretary the tools to do exactly that.

I was telling the ranking member this is called “no excuses day.” Secretary Shulkin will have no excuses for any mistakes to be made. Every tool he needs in his toolbox to see that the Veterans’ Administration is responsible to the veterans of the United States of America passed in this Senate, passed in the House. There were six major bills the first 7 months of this year, a remarkable achievement, a testimony to teamwork, to staff, and to the leadership of the Republican and the Democratic Parties. The majority and minority leaders of this Senate made it possible for that to happen last night. I am eternally grateful to both of them for their support and help.

I am not going to read all the names of the staff now because we are in limited time.

I ask unanimous consent that the names of every staff member who worked with the VA Committee to make it the best year ever be printed in the RECORD.

Credit is given to captains, Presidents, and people with titles. Senator TESTER and I have the titles, when it comes to the VA Committee, but the reason the VA Committee was successful in accomplishing every single goal, was because of every ranking file member, Republican or Democratic. We took our labels off, we put our armor on, and we plowed ahead. We didn't say no to problems that looked like they were too hard. We said yes to solutions that looked like they made sense.

Veterans of the United States of America have better healthcare, better educational benefits, and a modern VA to deal with in the years ahead. I am proud to have been a part of it. I want to commend Senator TESTER for his contribution.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Staff on the Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs:

Tom Bowman, staff director, soon-to-be Deputy Secretary of VA; Amanda Meredith, deputy staff director, soon-to-be judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims; Leslie Campbell; Gretchen Blum; Maureen O'Neill; Adam Reece; David Shearman; Jillian Workman; Kristen Hines; Thomas Coleman; John Ashley; Mitchell Sylvest; Joan Kirchner; Trey Kilpatrick; Jay Sulzmann; Ryan Evans; Salvador Ortega; and Amanda Maddox.

Mr. ISAKSON. I yield to Senator TESTER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. TESTER. Thank you, Mr. President.

I want to thank Chairman ISAKSON for his work on the VA Committee. We have gotten a lot of work done the first part of this Congress because we communicated. We haven't put up artificial barriers. We sat down and all realized taking care of our veterans is the cost of war. We need to do it and live up to the promises of these folks when they signed up. We have done pretty good work.

It is not only JOHNNY. It is not only myself. It is also the people who have served on that committee, many in the Chamber right now. I want to thank them for their commitment to making sure we live up to the promises we made our veterans, but it is about working together. It is about talking to folks. It is about compromise. It is about not digging in but moving together. This is a great country, and it was built by people working together.

The VA Committee is a prime example of people working together. We set aside our differences. We listened to the veterans service organizations. We let them drive the bus, to an extent. We worked with Secretary Shulkin and other leaders within the VA. We have been transparent. We have been honest when we disagreed. We haven't embarrassed one another. Quite frankly, this is the way it can work in this body when we start from a point of agreement rather than disagreement.

We have two bills already signed into law: an accountability bill, which holds VA employees accountable to the veterans, fires bad employees, protects whistleblowers; and the Veterans Choice Improvement Act, which makes VA the prime payer and reduces out-of-pocket expenses for veterans. Then, the bills passed last night to take care of the disability appeals, some 470,000—we are going to expedite that process and bring it down from 3 years to 1 year. The VA will do that. We will give them the tools to do that. It will simplify it and cut the redtape.

Veterans Choice funding is a fix to allow the private sector to fill in the gaps where the VA can't provide healthcare. It will help recruit and retain more doctors and nurses, critically important, and it expands the capacity in the VA, which is critically important.

Then there is the "Forever" GI bill which eliminates the 15-year limit. It breaks down educational barriers and helps veterans transition into civilian life.

We have done some good work. We have done some good work for this body. We have done some good work, more importantly, for the veterans, and we need to continue on that line as we continue to address healthcare and we continue to address important issues like tax reform. It is about working together. It is about finding common ground. It is about taking everybody's opinion into context and then drafting up bills.

Chairman ISAKSON and I have done that, and we are going to continue to do that. We have some more tough issues to deal with over the next year and a half, but we are going to work together to make sure we do it and we do it right. With help from the committee and help from the Senate, we could have more successes.

I thank the chairman of the committee and thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, we are considering the nomination of Dan Brouillette to be the Deputy Secretary for the Department of Energy. Mr. Brouillette has a long history of distinguished service to our Nation. He is a veteran. He has served in the Department of Energy. He has been the staff director for the House Energy and Commerce Committee. More recently, he has held high-level posts in the private sector—first, as vice president at Ford, currently as senior vice president at USAA.

He has strong experience and thorough knowledge of the Department he has chosen to return to. He understands the work that its thousands of scientists undertake and the importance of maximizing their research efforts, especially in a time of constrained Federal budgets.

He recognizes the importance of our 17 National Labs and the Department's responsibility for environmental management, including the cleanup of Cold War-era legacy sites. As second in command to Secretary Perry, Mr. Brouillette will oversee programs critical to our Nation's cyber security, energy innovation, and scientific discovery.

Based on his hearings before the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, I am confident he is up for the challenge and ready for this role. I would urge all of my colleagues to support the nomination of Dan Brouillette to be the Deputy Secretary of the Department of Energy.

Mr. President, I yield all time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the Brouillette nomination?

Mr. RUBIO. I ask for the yeas and nays.

RACE FOR CHILDREN ACT

Mr. BENNET. Mr. President, I feel sorry for the Presiding Officer. This is the second time in a week he has had to listen to me talk on the floor.

I thank the Senator from Nebraska for her graciousness in letting me go first.

America, the Senate has passed the bill. We passed the bill. Today, the Senate passed the RACE for Children Act as part of the FDA user fee bill.

The RACE Act represents a breakthrough for kids fighting cancer. Each year, over 15,000 children will be diagnosed with the disease; 2,000 will lose their lives.

Across America, pediatric cancer is the leading cause of death for our children. Previously, companies with new treatments for adults studied their potential benefits for kids. Companies exploring medication for adult diabetes, for example, also researched its potential for use in children. This research is vital because it provides critical information to doctors for treating sick children. Specifically, it helps them ensure that the treatments and dosages they prescribe are safe for young bodies. But there was a gap in the law as it existed before we passed this law.

Drug companies with new, precision medicine for adult cancers did not have to study possible value for pediatric cancers. That meant our kids continued to receive older treatments—some from the 1960s—which often had harmful side effects and consequences that can last a lifetime.

At the same time, breakthrough treatments have become available for adults, with better results and fewer harmful effects. While these treatments have great promise for kids, we were not doing enough to explore that potential.

Over the last 20 years, the Food and Drug Administration has approved 190 new cancer treatments for adults but just 3 new treatments for children. The FDA saw that gap, and they asked us to close it. That is precisely what the RACE for Children Act will do. For the first time in the country's history, it would require drug companies to study the potential of promising adult cancer treatments for children, closing this gap in the law and opening the door to promising new treatments for children in need.

Before this bill, thousands of kids in America lacked access to cutting-edge treatments and precision medicine that could have made the difference in their struggle against cancer.

During my time in the Senate, I have seen the anguish of too many parents who learned not only that their child has cancer but that they have little or no options for treatment. This bill will give them more options. It will give them more hope.

For Delaney from Grand Junction, CO, this bill could have been lifesaving. She battled cancer for over 5 years but passed away a year ago when she was out of treatment options. I wish to dedicate our work on this bill to her and to all kids who are bravely battling cancer day in and day out around the world.

We also should dedicate it to everyone who called and wrote and shared their family stories over the past months. This bill would never have passed without their voices. For people interested in keeping the system the same way, it was the voices of these families—in many instances, people who faced horrible tragedies in their lives—who made this possible. Because they engaged in this process, we passed a bill that will give thousands of kids a better chance to beat cancer and reclaim their lives.

America leads the world when it comes to treating cancer. We pioneer the latest and safest treatments. Every American should have access to them, especially our kids, whose bright lives have just begun.

I want to recognize and acknowledge all of the pediatric cancer groups that came together to advance this bill, including pediatric advocates, cancer advocates, and hospitals in Colorado and around the country.

I also want to acknowledge, as always, the great leadership provided by Chairman ALEXANDER, Ranking Member MURRAY, and their staff for their work on this and the FDA user fee bill.

Finally, I wish to thank my partner in this work, Senator RUBIO, from Florida, for his leadership and passionate advocacy on behalf of our kids.

This bill is a reminder that, when we drop the political fights, we can focus on fights that truly matter, such as the fight against cancer, the fight for better healthcare in this country, and the fight for our kids and their future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

NORTH KOREA

Mrs. FISCHER. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to discuss the growing threat from North Korea. Last month, the North Koreans conducted two intercontinental ballistic missile, or ICBM, tests. The first came as our Nation celebrated its Independence Day. The second test was conducted last week.

According to a number of reports, the second test demonstrated sufficient range to reach much of the United States. This increasing threat is a concern that I often hear about from Nebraskans.

For years, the United States has assessed North Korea to have an ICBM capability, but it was largely unproven. In his 5½ years in power, Kim Jong Un has conducted more missile tests than his father did during his 17-year reign. Under an aggressive testing program, North Korea has turned a theoretical ICBM capability into an undeniable reality.

Adding to the threat, they have made progress beyond ICBM technology. Over the past year, North Korea has conducted several tests of a submarine-launched ballistic missile. In February, the regime demonstrated a new solid-fueled, road-mobile ballistic missile.

Altogether, these developments reveal a dedicated, sophisticated development program that is relentlessly pursuing weapons designed for no other purpose than to threaten the United States and our allies. The rapid pace of development also indicates an increasingly capable scientific industrial base within North Korea.

Questions still remain about the regime's ability to miniaturize a nuclear warhead, deliver it accurately, and shield it from the stress associated with launch and then reentry. We should expect Kim Jong Un to overcome these obstacles if the status quo remains unchanged.

Admiral Harris, the commander of the U.S. Pacific Command, said in his testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee earlier this year: "It is clearly a matter of when."

This sense confirms that a drastic change in our approach is required. Our current multilateral efforts have not yielded the results needed to keep the world safe.

The failure of the United Nations Security Council to issue a statement condemning North Korea's July 3 ICBM test was a step backward in the international effort to isolate and to punish the regime for its illegal behavior. With Russia and China preventing any substantive action at the United Nations, I believe we must aggressively implement unilateral sanctions to punish the companies and the countries underwriting Pyongyang's belligerence.

One thing is certain. The principal economic enablers of the Kim regime are China and Russia.

Beijing provides direct food and energy assistance to North Korea and is by far the largest market for North Korean exports, such as minerals. North Korean hackers reportedly conduct cyber crime operations from northern China, and almost all of North Korea's internet access is provided via a fiber-optic cable running between those two nations. North Korea has also used Chinese banks to conduct transactions associated with its illicit proliferation activities and its criminal operations.

Russia's economic ties are more limited, but the Russians have been known to import North Korean labor and provide energy supplies, including jet fuel, to Pyongyang.

These ties provide China and Russia with influence over North Korea. How have they used that influence? Instead of helping to restrain the regime, they appear to be rewarding its bad behavior. Reports indicate both nations are increasing their bilateral trade, with several claiming trade between Russia and North Korea increased by 85 percent in comparison to last year.

Some argue China is unwilling to impose harsh restrictions on trade with Pyongyang because it would risk the regime's collapse and send a wave of North Korean refugees across their border. This argument might explain providing minimal assistance, but it does not justify billions of dollars in cross-border trade, nor does it explain why North Korean ballistic missiles are photographed being hauled by Chinese-made trucks.

China and Russia must believe the Kim regime serves their strategic interests.

For our purposes, these economic relationships are avenues through which we can impose costs on facilitating North Korea's belligerent behavior. Congress gave President Trump broad authority to take action against the nations supporting the North Korean regime's illegal activities, particularly those fostering the regime's hostile cyber activities, weapons programs, abuse of human rights, and their criminal networks. It is time for the President to use his authority to show China and Russia that continued support of the North Koreans will harm their own interests.

The administration has already begun to implement such measures. In June, the United States announced sanctions against a Chinese bank, two Chinese individuals, and a Chinese entity for supporting the North Korean regime. It appears, though, that this warning shot has fallen on deaf ears, because there has been no change in their behavior.

Chinese officials are sticking to their talking points, and they are objecting to any measures so they don't have to bear the costs of their own behavior. Take China's reaction to South Korea's decision to deploy the THAAD system. South Korea deployed a THAAD battery to improve the defenses against North Korean missiles. This is a defensive system that poses no threat to China.

Yet how did China respond? They shut down South Korean-owned department stores. The South Korean conglomerate who owns the stores also owns the property where the THAAD system was deployed. Moreover, the conglomerate's websites were hit by cyber attacks, and unofficial restrictions appear to have been imposed on imports of South Korean cosmetics and South Korean tourism.

It is clear that the Chinese view North Korea through a narrow lens of immediate strategic interest. That is how we must target our actions. By rigorously applying sanctions, we can make clear to China and any other nation doing business with the North Korean regime that continued support for the DPRK will harm their interests.

Of course, sanctions are not a panacea, and aggressively applying them does carry risk. Indeed, if we could be totally confident that the secondary sanctions would solve this problem, I suspect that they would have been implemented long ago. Time is not on our side and 8 years of strategic patience has narrowed our options. If we want different results, we must change our strategy, and we must make these changes now.

While firmly applying additional sanctions, the United States must also increase its defenses. Of course, our nuclear deterrent remains our country's ultimate protection against nuclear attack. Wednesday's successful test of a Minuteman III ICBM by our military provides continued assurance that our deterrent remains reliable and ready. We cannot rely on deterrence alone, and we must ensure that our missile defense efforts stay ahead of North Korea's accelerating developments.

I am a longtime member, and now the chairman, of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Strategic Forces, which oversees our missile defense programs. Through this role, I have had the benefit of working closely with the Directors of the Missile Defense Agency and the commanders of STRATCOM to improve our missile defenses.

Over the years, the Senate Armed Services Committee has authorized additional funding for the construction of a new missile defense radar, known as the Long Range Discrimination Radar, or the LRDR, to track potential threats from North Korea. The committee is also focused on improving the robustness of our homeland missile defense system, known as the Ground-based Midcourse Defense, or GMD, system as well.

This year in the fiscal year 2018 National Defense Authorization Act, our committee authorized over $200 million to meet unfunded requirements for that system.

The GMD System is our only defense against North Korea's ICBMs. It consists of silo-based interceptors, which are located in Alaska and California, supported by space-based and terrestrial-based sensors and a vast command and control network.

It provides an effective capability against North Korea's ICBMs, as was demonstrated in a successful intercept test on May 30 of this year. During that test, a single interceptor successfully destroyed an ICBM class target. It was the longest range test, and it was conducted at a greater altitude and closing speed than the system had ever faced before.

This successful test was an important milestone that visibly demonstrated the impressive capabilities of our GMD System. However, shortly after, then-Director of the Missile Defense Agency, Admiral Jim Syring, testified before the House Subcommittee on Strategic Forces that our defenses were not "comfortably ahead of the threat."

These comments came before North Korea's July ICBM tests. I strongly believe the rate of North Korea's technical progress demands a response. There are options before us. For example, additional ground-based radars and space-based sensors would improve our ability to track incoming threats, discriminate warheads from debris and decoys, and conduct kill assessments to confirm that the threats have been destroyed. The Redesigned Kill Vehicle Program, which will modernize the portion of the interceptor that impacts and destroys hostile warheads in space, promises to increase the capabilities of our current system. Deploying more interceptors, whether at the existing facility in Fort Greely, AK, or at a new installation, would add capacity and enable our defenses to better handle ICBM threats.

There are also advanced technology programs, such as the development of lasers mounted on unmanned systems, which hold significant promise for future missile defense. The Missile Defense Agency is pursuing these options, but the question remains: Are our current efforts enough? To help answer this question, the administration is conducting a review of ballistic missile threats and our missile defense posture—the first of its kind since 2010. There is no doubt that the threat environment of today is far more sophisticated and challenging than it was during the last review.

Our missile defense posture has remained largely unchanged since 2013. When responding to North Korean missile developments, then-Secretary of Defense Chuck Hagel announced the Obama administration's decision to increase the number of deployed interceptors from 30 to 44. The final deployment of these interceptors is expected by the end of this year, which demonstrates another point that we must bear in mind when we consider our missile defenses: Decisions take years to implement.

The fact that we are ahead of the threat today is not good enough. We should be asking ourselves whether the steps we are taking today are adequate to defeat the threats we know are coming in the future. I expect the administration's review to confirm the growing threat and articulate a clear response. The review is expected to conclude in the fall, and I plan to hold hearings to examine whether it is a proposed way forward.

In closing, I would note that the phrase "no good options" is frequently repeated when it comes to confronting the threat that is posed by North Korea. This may be true, but the gravity of the situation demands action. Kim Jong Un has repeatedly threatened to attack U.S. cities with nuclear weapons. His capacity to carry this threat grows with every passing day. We must change our strategy to protect the American people. Strong secondary sanctions and enhanced missile defense should form the basis of that new approach.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

TRIBUTE TO MARK BRAUDIS

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, every week, I have been coming to the floor to talk about the wonderful people in my State. A lot of people have visited Alaska. If you haven't and you are watching on TV, we really, really want to welcome you to come. It will be the trip of a lifetime; I guarantee it.

What we like to do when we talk about our Alaskan of the Week is talk about someone who has made a real impact, someone who doesn't get a lot of attention, someone who has made an impact on his community or country, and let people know we are thinking about them, let people know we are proud of them. Before recess, I want to do that for a couple of Alaskans today, and I would like to start by talking about a gentleman who has gotten a little press lately in Alaska, but I want the country to hear about it. It is really a remarkable story—Mr. Mark Braudis.

Let me tell you a little bit about Mark. Mark came to my attention through a recent column by Charles Wohlforth in the Alaska Dispatch News.

Mark is originally from Pennsylvania. When he was just 17 years old, he joined the Navy, like a lot of Alaskans. We have more vets per capita than any State in the country. He was deployed in 1972.

Mark said:

When I was in high school, everyone had long hair and were anti-government. That's not the way I was. I was for God and country. If my brothers were over there in Vietnam, I wanted to stand with them.

So he went. When a lot of people were avoiding service, he went.

When Mark got out, he couldn't find a job, so he began to hitchhike across the country into Canada and other places, and he wound up in the magical place we call Alaska. Mark arrived in 1976. After leaving once and coming back, he got a job as a taxi driver—a good job. He met and fell in love with one of his passengers, a beautiful woman named Helen. They went on to have seven children—Stephen, David, Kelly, Jared, Michael, and Jenny. Helen was a great mother.

Then, unfortunately, as sometimes happens in families in certain circumstances, tragedy struck their family. In 2007, Helen was walking down a busy road and was hit and unfortunately killed by a car passing by.

Faced with unspeakable grief, Mark knew he couldn't fall apart. He had seven kids between the ages of 6 and 16, and he had to take care of them. One of them was in third grade at the time and couldn't stop crying over the loss of his mom. The school called often, and Mark—still a taxi driver—left work to pick him up. The hours of tending to his kids began to rack up. He couldn't pay the rent. His kids and he had to eventually live in a homeless shelter.

A social worker wanted to put the kids up for adoption, but Mark refused. They had lost their mother, they had lost their home, and they weren't going to lose their dad. The family needed him, and they were a team.

Eventually—and this is so great; it happens all across Alaska, all across America—with the help of the community, in this case, their local Catholic church, Saint Anthony's Parish, Mark was able to afford rent for a three-bedroom apartment with one bathroom where they still live today and to buy his own taxi license.

In the face of adversity, he raised his kids to be strong, proud, caring, responsible, and to do the right thing. They stuck together. They ran together, sometimes as many as 6 miles a day—the Navy veteran out with his children. They studied together. They were good kids. They didn't miss school or the bus. They never got in trouble. They were a team.

This is what is remarkable about this family: Six out of the seven Braudis children, whom I have been speaking about, have joined the Marines Corps. They have taken after their dad, serving their country—six out of seven. How many families in America can say that? The seventh couldn't because of a medical issue, and he is nearly finished with a degree in electrical engineering from the University of Alaska in Anchorage and tutors students in math at the university.

The youngest one, Jenny, a senior in high school, has already been sworn in to the Marines. She wants to drive tanks. The middle child, Jared, is the only one who joined the infantry. When they all get together, he kids them, telling them he is the tough one, but I am sure they are all tough. Jared said:

When we were growing up, my dad just made things right. He still does.

What did Mark learn from these challenges? He said:

When you're married, you become one. And when my wife passed away, she brought me to God with her. And then I brought my children to God. I didn't understand it then, but I do now. It's been one miracle after another.

Also, what I learned? I'm a dad above everything else.

Well, Mark, thank you. Thanks to you, your children, and your family for this amazing example and for doing such a great job of raising your kids. You are a model for all of us. Thank you for being our Alaskan of the Week.

TRIBUTE TO KATHY HEINDL

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, as I mentioned earlier, I come to the floor every week to talk about my great State and to talk about the people of my great State—the people who make it a better place for all of us. We call these people the Alaskan of the Week. It is one of the most fulfilling parts of my job to come here and talk about people who make a difference, people who don't get a lot of press, people who don't get a lot of attention, but people who are doing the right thing for their country and for their community.

Right now in Alaska, we have tourists, people coming from all over, and one of the things happening in Alaska is salmon season. The biggest runs in the world—the bounty of our great State—are happening right now, and the fish are running. If you or anyone listening has ever had the opportunity to catch or eat wild Alaskan salmon, of course, it is the memory of a lifetime. There is nothing better; there is no better fish in the world.

There is great salmon fishing all across Alaska, but one of the most heavily fished areas in Alaska and the world is on Alaska's Kenai Peninsula, about 45 minutes from Anchorage. Millions of salmon run up the rivers of the Kenai, drawing tens of thousands of Alaska sports, personal use, and commercial fishermen, as well as visitors from all over the country, all over the world to fish the amazing Kenai River.

The area can continue to support a lot of traffic, but when you have that many people on the Kenai, sometimes it does cause congestion. So let me talk about someone who works on these issues for Alaska—Kathy Heindl.

Kathy is an engineer with Homer Electric Association on the Kenai. Ten years ago, she visited Alaska as a tourist. She saw the Northern Lights dancing in the winter, the snow-covered mountains, and she knew she was home. She loves the Kenai. There is a sense of freedom there and all across Alaska. It is a place where there is room to pave your own path but support others and the community around you, and, of course, there are the salmon.

Since Kathy moved to Alaska, she has been working to give back to the community that she loves so much. She is an active member and past president of her local Rotary Club. She is a member of the Kenai Peninsula Borough Community Emergency Response Team. She is also a member of a group that operates ham radios in order to help if there is a disaster and shuts down cell service or other communication devices.

During the summer, right now, she spends much of her free time as a Kenai Peninsula Stream Watch volunteer with the Kenai Watershed Forum, helping to make sure that she will have a sustainable fishery—that we will have a sustainable fishery in the Kenai and throughout the State for generations to come. A few times a week, for as many as 6 hours at a time, she roams the fishing spots, picking up trash, helping others, speaking with anglers. She talks to them about how to protect themselves. She carries around safety goggles—you never want a hook in the eye. She talks about what happens when you run into a bear, which happens a lot in our great State, and the best way to avoid them, and importantly, she educates anglers on how to protect the vegetated banks on this great river to maintain the health of the river and the amazing salmon in it.

The vast majority of the people in Alaska and from out of State who fish the Kenai are responsible and want to help in any way they can, and they love Kathy's help, but, still, all the activity in the area has created erosion problems, which has the potential to hurt the fish.

The Kachemak Heritage Land Trust, a land stewardship and conservation trust based in Homer, recently recognized Kathy's efforts and presented her with the King Maker Award. "It is your selfless actions that help protect the vital habitat needed for salmon to live and thrive," the land trust wrote to her. "Great role models such as yourself can inspire others in our communities to take action by following your lead" and your example.

Mr. President, I want to congratulate Kathy for all the work she is doing, especially in this busy summer in Alaska, and for being our Alaskan of the Week.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

NOMINATIONS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, the Senate has confirmed more executive branch nominees this week than all of the executive branch nominees confirmed this year—combined. This was an important step toward filling critical roles throughout the administration, including the Deputies of multiple Cabinet offices that had been lacking these key positions.

Moving forward, I hope this agreement represents the way forward on confirming nominees so our government can be fully staffed and working for the American people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

SENATE ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND THE BUILDING AMERICA'S TRUST ACT

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I congratulate the majority leader for securing these important confirmations of nominees who have been waiting, for no good reason, simply to get an up-or-down vote and get confirmed. This is a big day, with roughly 65 nominations confirmed just here in the last few minutes—things that should have been handled but for the obstruction and foot-dragging of our colleagues across the aisle.

I want to focus for just a minute on things we have been able to do, notwithstanding the lack of cooperation of our colleagues across the aisle since this new administration came into office.

I know the focus of the press—and, frankly, some of our own focus—has been on the unfinished business, like healthcare reform. I can assure my colleagues that issue is not going away and gets more difficult to address as each day goes by.

Perhaps one of the most significant things we have done in the last few months is confirm Neil Gorsuch as a Justice on the Supreme Court. It is undeniable that Judge Gorsuch is a qualified, high-caliber nominee, and he is already serving our Nation well on our highest Court.

We have also worked together with the President to deliver legislation that is a priority for our veterans and police departments around the Nation. The American Law Enforcement Heroes Act, which I was proud to sponsor, will help our returning veterans continue to serve their country by creating incentives for police departments to hire them once they take off their military uniform and put on a new uniform as a member of local police departments. This legislation will help keep our communities safe while supporting those who have served our country. I am proud we were able to work together on a bipartisan basis to make it the law of the land.

On this side of the aisle, we are absolutely committed to helping businesses and job creators do what they do best—innovate, create more jobs, and employ more people—and not waste time dealing with onerous rules and regulations. With a friend in the White House—somebody sympathetic to the needs to grow the economy, create more opportunities, and let people pursue the American dream—we have been able to finally deliver some relief to the American people.

One of the ways we have done that is through one of the more obscure laws, perhaps—but one we have brought to life—the so-called Congressional Review Act. Until just this year, I think the Congressional Review Act had been used only one time to repeal the ergonomics rule years ago.

The Congressional Review Act was created to give Congress an opportunity to do away with or repeal regulations which were put in place as the Obama administration was headed out the door. Using these Congressional Review Acts, and with an ally in the White House, we undid some of the thousands of burdensome rules and regulations created by the Obama administration—rules and regulations which added up to a hefty pricetag for our country and which have strangled our economic recovery since 2008 and the great recession.

That is not all. We have also passed important bipartisan legislation imposing tough sanctions on Iran, Russia, and North Korea.

In the case of Iran, the overwhelming vote was a strong message that the United States will not tolerate Iran's complicity in terror and is a clear indicator of just how important this legislation is. Now, most people listening to me would be surprised we did this because, frankly, there wasn't a whole lot of coverage about it because it was done with such broad and overwhelming bipartisan support, but it is important, and it is an important signal to our adversaries in other countries that we will not sit idly by and leave our Nation undefended and their acts undeterred.

This week, we continue to build on these additional accomplishments for our veterans. I commend, in particular, the Senator from Georgia, Mr. ISAKSON, for his great work in getting these bills passed.

Over the last several years, we have heard about VA facilities across the State of Texas and across the country which have been plagued by inefficiency, unaccountability, and quality of care issues. The VA has been hindered by unnecessary bureaucratic hurdles which have been incredibly frustrating and costly for our veterans. The Veterans Choice Program was created to fix that by ensuring veterans can receive timely appointments close to home. The VA Choice and Quality Employment Act, which we passed earlier this week, continues that program and guarantees veterans that they will continue to have access to care without interruption.

Of course, we still have additional work to do before leaving for the August work period. There are still vacancies in the executive branch that need to be filled. In order for President Trump to do the job he was elected to do on November 8, he needs his team in place. While I am glad that today, just a few moments ago, roughly 65 of his Cabinet nominees and sub-Cabinet nominees were confirmed, I hope our colleagues across the aisle will stop their stall tactics so we can confirm the rest of the nominees of this administration.

I congratulate the Senator from Tennessee, the chairman of the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee, for the work he did to see passage of the Food and Drug Administration User Fee Program. This is an incredibly important, although somewhat obscure, law that helps establish partnerships between the private and public sector which ensure patients have access to safe and effective drugs and medical devices, while also maintaining the position of the United States as a global leader in medical innovation.

It is simple. Faster approvals mean treatments and cures reach patients sooner, and increased competition leads to lower cost, and that, in turn, leads to more lives saved.

I also congratulate Senator JOHNSON from Wisconsin. He has been trying to get this bill called the Right to Try Act, which passed unanimously earlier today. This is designed to give dying individuals one last chance to try perhaps sometimes experimental medications to see if that will help them extend their quality of life and their longevity. I know he feels passionately about it, and I congratulate him for his leadership and perseverance.

With these remaining items, it is clear we have been able to accomplish a lot in a short time for the American people. Again, we focus on our unfinished work—like the healthcare bill. I assure my colleagues, once again, that remains broken, people remain hurting, and we should not rest or give up until we are able to give them some relief, and we are determined to do that.

Mr. President, I want to mention one other piece of legislation that was introduced today which we have been working on for a long time—years, literally, but since the Trump administration came into office, and particularly with Secretary of Homeland Security General Kelly, who has now become the Chief of Staff for the White House.

We have introduced something called the Building America's Trust Act, which is border security legislation that increases resources at our borders while boosting trade through ports of entry and strengthens enforcement of existing laws.

Earlier this year, several of my colleagues and I went to my home State to tour our southern border, including the Rio Grande Valley, Laredo, and Del Rio, TX. The reason I was so glad to welcome my colleagues to visit Texas with me and see the borders is because it is a unique part, not only of our State but a unique part of our Nation.

Each mile along the border presents its own challenge in terms of what is needed to protect it. On this trip, we spoke most notably with Manny Padilla, chief of the Rio Grande Patrol Sector and commander of the Joint Task Force of the West and South Texas Corridor. Chief Padilla presides over the busiest Border Patrol sector in the United States. He said something then which stuck with me. He pointed out that any border security plan must include a combination of three things, and the way those three things come together may well vary, and will vary, depending on the particular location:

The first is physical infrastructure.

Here is an example of some of the fencing that exists along the border where the Border Patrol believes it is necessary in order to control the flow of people across the border in a way they can be allowed to do their job.

The second is technology—things like this aerostat, with its radar capability. It is literally eyes in the sky, which can allow the Border Patrol to do their job better.

Here is another example of some of the ground-based radar which is available. You can imagine, with a 1,200-mile border between Texas and Mexico alone, it is a huge job and a very complex environment.

Of course, the third thing, in addition to physical infrastructure and technology, is things like personnel. Literally, we need to make sure we have an adequate number of Border Patrol available to deal with people who are coming across the border in violation of our immigration laws.

I believe, until we secure the border and enforce the law, we will never be able to regain the public's confidence, which allows us to do other things we need to do to fix our broken immigration system.

That is why we call this bill the Building America's Trust Act. It does these things—secures our borders with expanded resources, enhances ports of entry to increase trade—because it is important to separate the criminal activity from legitimate trade and commerce, which creates 5 million jobs in the United States alone. That is just by our national trade with Mexico. Of course, it strengthens enforcement of our immigration laws. That is why we have gotten support from the National Border Patrol Council, the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the Southwestern Border Sheriff's Coalition, and the Texas Border Sheriff's Coalition as well, and we have had supportive statements by the Fraternal Order of Police and others.

I firmly believe that until we accomplish this goal—until we regain the public's confidence that we are actually serious about it and we have a plan to do it—we will not be permitted by our constituents to do the other things we know we need to do to fix our broken immigration system.

I know the Presiding Officer was at the White House yesterday with the President, talking about his plan to try to make our legal immigration system more merit-based. This is something we have been trying to do for years now, and I congratulate the Presiding Officer for helping restart that discussion because we need to focus not only on border security and enforcing our laws, we need to think about and talk about what a 21st century immigration system for our country should look like. Should it be based strictly on family relationships or should it be based on some of the attributes of the immigrant which would benefit the United States—people with advanced degrees and capability, people who can come here and help make our country better, not just come here to become dependent on our country.

The Building America's Trust Act is a chance for our Democratic colleagues who have said they actually believe in border security to demonstrate their support. In fact, we supported one of the toughest border security packages there is. I believe that is what this represents.

It is clear the President has made obvious from the beginning that border security would be a top priority for him. I think it is one of the reasons he was elected on November 8 of last year—because the American people sensed, even if maybe they didn't know the details, that things had gotten out of control, our borders were in chaos, and thousands of people were coming across the border who had no legal right to be here in disregard of our laws. They sensed, in their core, that something was fundamentally wrong—that, yes, we are a nation of immigrants, but we are also a nation of laws—and we have lost that. This is about regaining trust in government and keeping our commitment to the American people.

Over these last few months, I have been working with colleagues, not only in the Senate and the House but with General Kelly in the Department of Homeland Security—now Chief of Staff of the White House—to come up with a strategic plan which addresses various facets of border security and interior enforcement as well. We know about 40 percent of illegal immigration is people who enter the country legally but who overstay their visa and simply melt into the great American landscape.

For too long, those on the frontlines have not had the tools they need to get the job done. These are public servants, like our Border Patrol, who risk their lives to keep us safe, and we simply haven't lived up to our commitment to give them the tools and the political will necessary to support them.

We know the borders are also cause for our local, State, and Federal officials to have to work together, and it makes sense for us to do more to help them do their job at the State and local level as well.

Our bill authorizes additional resources for Border Patrol agents, Customs and Border Protection officers, for agricultural inspectors, and Immigration and Customs Enforcement, or ICE officers. We also provide for additional immigration judges and Federal prosecutors for State and local law enforcement to aggressively fight drug trafficking, smuggling, and other crimes that, unfortunately, occur along our borders because the organizations—these transnational criminal organizations—really don't care about human life.

We saw that recently when a number of immigrants died in the back of a tractor trailer in a parking lot at Walmart in San Antonio, TX. They are a commodity, a way to make money in the eyes of these cartels who care nothing about human life. Drugs, weapons, and other threats to our country are also part of what they move across the border, and that is why border security is so important.

Our bill also focuses on criminals, gangs, and repeat offenders who return to the United States in defiance of our laws. We have zero tolerance for those criminals in this bill. We end catch-and-release, and we include Kate's Law, a bill recently passed by the House that increases penalties for those who repeatedly cross our borders illegally. The bill is named after Kate Steinle, who was so tragically murdered in San Francisco.

We hold sanctuary cities accountable because no city should be able to defy cooperation with Federal law enforcement officials. We are not asking them to do the Federal Government's job, but they do have an obligation, as we all do as American citizens, to cooperate and work with our law enforcement officials.

We impose tough penalties on Federal funds for jurisdictions that fail to comply with lawful Federal immigration enforcement requests. To curb the abuse of visas, our bill utilizes a biometric entry-exit system at ports of entry to identify visa overstays and cut off immigration benefits to those who exploit the system.

We also make sure to invest in our ports of entry. These are the ways that people come into our country legally and engage in commerce and trade, which is mutually beneficial. We can't neglect our trading partnerships with our neighbors to the south because we depend on that trade to create and sustain 5 million jobs in the United States alone.

The Building America's Trust Act will also help boost the flow of commerce through our ports so that legitimate trade can continue to flourish. This bill also includes a large investment of resources to improve our ports of entry, to help target and isolate illegal immigration and drug trafficking at ports while facilitating increased, legitimate trade and travel.

Perhaps most importantly, this bill also requires that the Department of Homeland Security and law enforcement officials consult with local officials every step of the way. The people who live in our border communities know best how to help control illegal traffic and illegal activity, but it is the Federal Government's responsibility to step up and help them. They understand the benefits of legitimate travel and trade and traffic, all of which are important parts of a successful border security effort.

Border security really is not a one-size-fits-all plan. As Chief Padilla said, it is always a combination of technology, personnel, and tactical infrastructure—wall systems, fences, and the like. We need an approach that will work for each unique area with input and stakeholder consultation at every step to ensure that the right solution is achieved for all involved.

As I have said, I am happy to have support for this legislation from several law enforcement organizations. I look forward to working with all of my colleagues in both Chambers, as well as the administration, toward our goal of protecting our Nation and securing our borders.

I firmly believe that border security, ultimately, is a matter of political will. This President has the political will, and this Congress should have the political will to get the job done. This was the commitment that he made and that we need to make to the American people and that, I think, informed their vote on November 8, 2016.

With this legislation as a guide, we aren't just securing our borders for tomorrow. We are looking ahead and locking in a framework that will exist long after President Trump leaves office.

With the Building America's Trust Act, I hope we can do just that and, again, finally regain the public's confidence by earning that confidence and restoring order and lawfulness to our broken immigration system.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

MR. HATCH. Mr. President, I agree with the distinguished Senator from Texas. I thought his remarks were very much on point and very good.

MODERN ANTITRUST LAW

MR. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on a policy matter that has been generating substantial attention recently, and that is modern antitrust law. This issue is critical. In the perennial debate over the proper role of government in economic affairs, it will grow all the more critical in the years to come.

New technologies, creating markets not even imaginable only a decade ago, are spurring fundamental shifts in the economic landscape. In the national news, mergers between corporate giants or new fines imposed by foreign regulators are becoming an acceptable thing almost every day. In the Senate, we increasingly see antitrust law dragged into larger economic arguments that are heavier in inflammatory rhetoric than in careful deliberation. Allow me, then, to offer a few thoughts on the matter, and to directly address the rising controversy.

America has always been—and, I haven't a doubt, will remain—the economic and technological marvel of the world. Cradled in the best traditions of the West and animated by a culture equal parts industrious, creative, and restless, our system has produced the most prosperous people in human history. It has shown its shortcomings, to be sure. But on the whole, the American economy is unrivaled by any other. Indeed, at times its blessings are so bountiful, its provisions for the creation of wealth so effective, that we tend to take it for granted in this country. We tend, at times, to forget what got us here.

A big part of what got us here is American antitrust law. You see, all throughout history, societies and governments have tended toward the central planning of economic activity.

America, however, chose a different path. We refused to yield to the false comforts of collectivism. We opted, instead, for an economy that was vibrant, tumultuous, competitive, and free. It is fortunate that we did, for we have found that in the impossible complexity and unsettling chaos of the market—wherein millions of consumers and producers make millions of individual and uncoordinated decisions each and every day—a spontaneous order arises that serves all of us far better than any central authority ever could. Of course, our markets work toward those ends only when they are genuinely free, fair, and competitive. That is where antitrust comes in.

In a very real sense, antitrust is the capitalist's answer to the siren song of the central planner. When antitrust doctrine is referred to as the Magna Carta of the free enterprise system, I suspect this is what we mean.

Let me be clear: Antitrust doctrine in this country has not always gotten it right. As we all know, early antitrust policy tended to confuse protection of market participants for protection of the market itself; it was quick to micromanage particular industries, to choose ad hoc intervention over predictable systems of incentives, and to cast suspicion on any market too concentrated or business too big.

Fortunately, antitrust doctrine grows and adapts. It develops in the same wonderful tradition and manner as the common law. Just as the common law historically gave us property, contract, and commercial rights, so too upon their basis does antitrust seek, year by year, to give us markets that are competitive and free. Thus, the modern era of antitrust has produced a fundamental improvement in our competitive doctrine.

We have steadily adopted the consumer welfare standard, which judges the conduct of firms and the arrangement of markets by what will maximize efficiency and therein serve consumers most completely.

There will always be market failures to account for and noneconomic concerns to keep in mind. But when it comes to the core, basic functioning of the market—how to deliver the most goods to the most people at the highest quality and lowest cost—consumer welfare still works best.

In most industries, most of the time, we ought to think a little less about how best to regulate the market and a little more about how best to set the market upon regulating itself. The disciplining effects of competition and the limitless store of American ingenuity do far more for consumers than the well-intentioned intervention of government authorities.

The consumer welfare standard has, consistently over the years, proved an absolute boon to our economy and our society. Of course, a legal standard means little unless handled with care.

We have chosen the right standard; now we must keep choosing the right officials to implement it. You see, under the consumer welfare standard, good antitrust enforcement is a lot like good sports officiating. It harnesses, rather than stems, the flow of the action. It lays out limited, predictable, and reliably enforced rules. It gets the most out of the players and the competition itself, regardless of which team is in the lead. Most importantly, as any sports fan could tell you, when officiating is done right, we hardly notice the refs at all.

With the right antitrust officials cognizant of their role, we can expect a spirited contest in which American entrepreneurs keep putting points on the board and American consumers keep reaping the reward.

Federal judges, naturally, are critical. In disputes of consequence, they provide the ultimate backstop.

Also critical are our executive officials. Makan Delrahim, for instance, has been nominated to lead the Antitrust Division at the Department of Justice. He is eminently qualified, enjoys broad, bipartisan support, and is at the ready to start as soon as he receives our consent. I will urge my colleagues in the Senate, once again, to take up his nomination and confirm him to this important post. He has both Democrat and Republican support. He is well known. He ran the Judiciary Committee under my jurisdiction.

On the other side of the enforcement equation, we are still waiting on nominations to the Federal Trade Commission. The FTC is an important agency that will play a central role in the years ahead. Whoever is put in charge will face the monumental task of setting the agency on the right track. I have supreme confidence that the President will make the right choice on this one, and I look forward to supporting his nominees.

As these vacancies linger, however, uncertainty lingers as well. Critical merger and acquisition activity remains sidelined as innovation is chilled and expansions are put on hold. All of this comes at an unnecessary cost to our businesses and consumers.

I want this whole body to hear me clearly: There is no need for the same old partisan food fight over our antitrust officials. Let's get Makan Delrahim to work. FTC nominations will likely include two Republicans and a Democrat. There is no reason they can't be swiftly confirmed as a package. If delay on these important confirmations persists, I will be back on the floor to make sure everyone—from consumers to industry—knows it.

As I mentioned earlier, antitrust has been increasingly drawn into the broader public debate on economic and innovation policy, and not for the better. With each passing day, it seems the consumer welfare standard finds itself besieged from the left. Their rhetoric may not yet have made its way into traditional precedent, but it certainly has made itself known.

Some in academia insist that recent market concentration and technological progress compel a return to bold, persistent experimentation. Many in the media call for antitrust to pursue everything from industrial democracy to campaign finance reform to material leveling. Above all else, we hear again the old, lazy mantras that big is bad, disruption is suspect, and public utility designation is welcome.

Professor and former FTC Commissioner Joshua Wright has referred to this particular set of proposals as “hipster antitrust.” Well, as you might imagine, nobody would mistake me for a hipster. So for my part, and for ease, I will go ahead and call it the progressive standard. Truth be told, as a proposed replacement for the consumer welfare standard, the progressive standard leaves me deeply impressed. From what I can tell, it amounts to little more than pseudoeconomic demagoguery and anti-corporate paranoia.

Nevertheless, it must not be dismissed out of hand.

Over the last 8 years, policymakers laid the groundwork for it by routinely disregarding some of the most basic elements of the consumer welfare standard. Now we see the same stirrings of this radical approach in many speeches on the other side of the aisle, as well as in the recently released platform curiously titled “A Better Deal.”

As such, I believe a response is in order. In defense of the consumer welfare standard, we could, of course, run through the more technical deficiencies of the progressive standard. We can mention that as doctrine, it lacks manageable standards, dispensing with intellectual rigor and inviting political mischief. We can mention that as theory, it accounts for neither tradeoffs nor scarcity. We can mention that as aspiration, it subordinates the productive incentives of the entrepreneur to the fanciful designs of the bureaucrat.

Truth be told, the real trouble for the progressive standard is, it fails to grasp the bigger picture of our history, economy, and national character. It fails to appreciate that our time is not so distinct from times past and that our momentary insights are not so superior to the lessons learned over generations prior.

Of course, anyone can see that changes are afoot. As chairman of the Senate Republican High-Tech Task Force, I have seen it firsthand. The new technological age, having dawned in the late 20th century, continues to ripen into the 21st.

New innovation is relentlessly spurring transformation across the economy, and many markets are concentrating as a result. Yet supporters of the progressive standard seem to think this presents historically unique problems. They rely, as academics are wont to do, on sleek, new jargon to argue that today's antitrust challenges are not only tangibly but conceptually distinct of those of the past. They argue, in other words, that things really are different this time around. At the end of the day, terms like “platform economics” and “network effects”—commonly used to attack the consumer welfare standard—do less to define new economic concepts than to explain how old economic concepts are manifesting themselves in modern markets.

Through history, we have seen this time and time again. As the saying goes, the more things change, the more they stay the same. Markets concentrate and then disperse; dominant firms rise and then fall; with innovation comes creation in one sector and destruction in another. Anxiety over this evolution is very real, and the strident calls we hear to do something about it—whatever that may be—are on some level understandable, but this lurch toward the progressive standard is not.

Change, sometimes furious change, is a constant in our system. For all its rancor, for all its chaos and uncertainty, it is, alas, what propels us forward. We hope, not fear, that each age looks better than the last.

Now, in anticipation of an objection from my friends across the aisle, nobody is suggesting that no enforcement is necessary. Genuinely anti-competitive conduct must be stopped, and mergers prone to abet such conduct must be heavily scrutinized. That is all a part of keeping markets fair and free in the best tradition of American capitalism.

Again, as I mentioned earlier, we should aim to regulate markets such that in their basic core functioning they regulate themselves. Market discipline imposed by competition and driven by innovation should be our aim. To that end, nobody doubts that new developments in the market will require a fresh look at doctrine. Nobody questions that the consumer welfare standard will have to adapt. For example, categories of anti-competitive conduct may need to be tweaked, refastened or even expanded in light of technical advancement and market evolution. Merger review, never an exact science, will seize upon new economic tools for measuring ancient economic concepts like quality, preference, and efficiency. The rule of reason, I am sure, will continue to bedevil judges, practitioners, and law students alike, but that is just fine.

Antitrust, as I keep saying, is ultimately a common law exercise. I am here to argue merely that the consumer welfare standard, when handled prudently, is a far better steward of our economy than the progressive standard, which is deeply misguided and potentially quite destructive.

Take, for instance, the proposed Amazon-Whole Foods merger, which has generated so much interest lately. It would, of course, be inappropriate for me on the floor of the Senate to pass judgment. I would caution my colleagues the same. There is an established process for review, but the question should be asked: Upon what basis should antitrust authorities evaluate a proposed merger like this? What we need is the consumer welfare standard. It carefully examines the basic and critical question of whether a deal helps consumers or whether it hurts consumers. It relies on a coherent doctrine to strike a balance. It is a balance between the merger's pro-competitive effects, such as integrative efficiencies and innovation, and the antitrust competitive potential, such as market domination by one firm or facilitated price coordination by the few that remain. What we absolutely do not need, on the other hand, is the progressive standard.

Under no doctrinal limitations to cabin discretion, antitrust officials would gladly follow vague institutions in shifting intuitions. With a broad mandate to pursue aims far grander than mere market efficiency, officials would be free to engage in ad hoc theorizing about whether corporate consolidation, writ large, can be squared with universal justice, common fairness, and community values, or of whatever else their creativity recommends. To take another example, across the Atlantic, our friends in the European Union have leveled a massive fine against Google for anti-competitive conduct. Again, it is not for me to say on the floor whether those fines are justified. I don't think they are, but it is not for me to say.

Once more, what we need is the framework provided by the consumer welfare standard. We must weigh the pro-competitive aspects of Google's conduct with its anti-competitive potential. The ultimate inquiry should be whether consumers are better off as a result of Google's actions. Under the progressive standard, however, instead of asking what lowers prices and increases quality—instead of considering actual proof of harm to consumers—we would be asking what best serves the social goals in vogue at the moment. The result would be an open invitation to market intervention that is more politically motivated than economically sound.

In conclusion, for all the past rhetoric, for all the claims that a new age requires a new doctrine, the ideas behind the progressive standard are not new. They are terribly old. They may be adorned with original terminology or aimed at novel markets, but it is the same old collectivist impulse it has always been. In that sense, these ideas are not unique to Americans. Every day we receive concerning reports from around the world that foreign governments are increasingly turning to antitrust for industrial policy. Whether domestically or abroad, the stakes are simply too high, the consequences too grievous for the consumer welfare standard to be swept away in an instant, merely because a new breed of central planners—falsely conceiving themselves different from their predecessors—imagine they know best.

In America, we have always opted for the invisible hand of the free market over the heavy hand of government intervention. Let's keep it that way.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask unanimous consent that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I rise also to talk about my dear friend and mentor, Bob Dole. Senator Dole just celebrated his 94th birthday, and I think it is obviously right and proper to honor his contributions to our Nation.

Let me tell you a little bit about Bob Dole. He comes from Russell, KS. You can't get any more Kansas than Russell. Growing up during the Great Depression, Bob Dole learned the values of hard work and discipline, which is the mark of a Kansas upbringing and the heart of what I call Kansas values.

In 1941, Bob Dole enrolled at the University of Kansas as a premed student. During his time at KU, he played for the basketball, football, and track teams. Being a K-State alum, I don't always hold that against him, but his collegiate studies were interrupted by World War II. And when he answered the call to duty, he joined the U.S. Army. During a military offensive in Italy, he was very seriously wounded while trying to save a fellow soldier. Despite his grave injuries, Bob recovered and was awarded two Purple Hearts and a Bronze Star with an Oak Leaf Cluster for his service. He is indeed a warrior and a hero.

After the war, Bob returned to Kansas, studied the law, and was elected to the Kansas House of Representatives. He soon moved to the U.S. House of Representatives and served two Kansas districts from 1961 to 1969, including my old district, if I can refer to it in that way, "The Big First."

In 1969, Bob Dole was elected to the U.S. Senate and served until 1996. Now, over the course of this period, he served as chairman of the Republican National Committee, chairman of the Finance Committee, Senate minority leader, and then Senate majority leader.

During his time in Washington, Senator Dole was known for his ability to work across the aisle and embrace practical bipartisanship on the issues, such as tax reform, Social Security, and many other pressing issues. I would call this the Kansas approach to legislating. He has been a lifelong advocate for the disabled and was a key figure in the passing of the Americans with Disabilities Act back in 1990.

After his appointment as majority leader, Bob Dole set the record as the Nation's longest serving Republican leader in the Senate of the United States. Several Presidents of the United States have especially honored Bob for his hard work and leadership in the public sector. For example, President Reagan awarded Bob Dole the Presidential Citizens Medal in 1989.

President Reagan stated:

Whether on the battlefield or Capitol Hill, Senator Dole has served America heroically. Serving as Senate Majority Leader during one of the most productive Congresses of recent time, he has also been a friend to veterans, farmers, and Americans from every walk of life. Bob Dole has stood for integrity, straight talk and achievement throughout his years of distinguished public service.

So said our former President, Ronald Reagan.

As I said, they are Kansas values.

Likewise, in 1997, President Clinton awarded Senator Dole with the Presidential Medal of Freedom saying:

Son of the soil, citizen, soldier and legislator, Bob Dole understands the American people, their struggles, their triumphs and their dreams. . . . In times of conflict and crisis, he has worked to keep America united and strong. . . . Our country is better for his courage, his determination, and his willingness to go the long course to lead America.

So said our former President, Bill Clinton.

Senator Dole remains active today, serving as the national chairman of the World War II Memorial Campaign, a memorial that simply would not be in existence today had it not been for his perseverance, leadership, and cochair of the Families of Freedom Scholarship Fund.

In 2007 President George W. Bush appointed Bob to cochair the President's Commission on Care for America's Returning Wounded Warriors, which inspected and reformed the system of medical care received by U.S. soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

He remains the strongest advocate for veterans, having volunteered on a weekly basis for more than a decade on behalf of the national Honor Flight Network.

As a person who has gone to the World War II Memorial, along with Bob Dole, I know I greet the veterans at the bus. They immediately get off the bus. Whether they are from Kansas or any other State, they are very proud to come to see their memorial. The first question they ask is this: Where is Bob? Is Bob here? Then, they flock to him like a mother hen. Maybe, that is not the best example, but it certainly shows the pride and the desire of our veterans to meet the man who did so much for their memorial.

I am also proud that he serves today as the finance chairman of the campaign for the national Dwight D. Eisenhower Memorial, leading the private fundraising effort to memorialize President Dwight David Eisenhower, our favorite son in Kansas, here in Washington, something near and dear to both of us. I am privileged to be the chairman of the Eisenhower Memorial Commission.

It is abundantly clear that throughout his long service to our country, Bob Dole has embodied the American spirit of leadership and determination, and he serves as one of the most prolific role models both in and outside of politics.

I am reminded of the time when I was stationed at Quantico as a young marine and my dad, Wes Roberts, who was a friend and adviser to Bob, said: I want to take you up to the Hill to meet Congressman Bob Dole. I consider him to have the highest potential to be whatever he wants with regard to public service.

So I went up to the Hill, and I met this handsome young man. He didn't sit on his hands very long in terms of what he wanted to accomplish. I first met him then, and, then, as a staffer for my predecessor, the Honorable Keith Sebelius, a congressman from "The Big First" and, then, as a Member of the House for 16 years.

I tell the story that most people in the House thought that whatever I proposed or whatever I was for, Bob Dole was for me. Well, about 50 percent of that was true, but I never told them about the other 50 percent. So I was really able to get a lot done.

Bob, thank you for that.

I am so proud—so proud—to call him friend. I am proud to serve his State. I am equally proud today that each Senator—each and every Senator and colleagues on both sides of the aisle—have joined me in honoring Senator Bob Dole with a Congressional Gold Medal—all 100. It didn't take very long.

I yield the floor

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PERDUE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVATE CORRADO PICCOLI PURPLE HEART PRESERVATION ACT

Mr. PERDUE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of S. 765 and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 765) to amend title 18, United States Code, to provide for penalties for the sale of any Purple Heart awarded to a member of the Armed Forces.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. PERDUE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Perdue substitute amendment be considered and agreed to, the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time and passed, and the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 767) in the nature of a substitute was agreed to, as follows:

(Purpose: In the nature of a substitute)

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Private Corrado Piccoli Purple Heart Preservation Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) The Purple Heart medal solemnly recognizes the great and sometimes ultimate sacrifice of American servicemembers like Private Corrado Piccoli.

(2) The Purple Heart medal holds a place of honor as the national symbol of this sacrifice and deserves special protections.

SEC. 3. PENALTY FOR SALE OF PURPLE HEARTS AWARDED TO MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

Section 704 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking “Whoever” and inserting “Except as provided in subsection (e), whoever”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(e) PURPLE HEART.—

“(1) PENALTY.—Whoever willfully purchases, attempts to purchase, solicits for purchase, mails, ships, imports, exports, produces blank certificates of receipt for, manufactures, sells, attempts to sell, advertises for sale, trades, barters, or exchanges for anything of value any Purple Heart awarded to a member of the armed forces or former member of the armed forces by the Secretary of the military department concerned, except when authorized under regulations made pursuant to law, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 6 months, or both.

“(2) LIMITATION ON REGULATIONS.—Regulations described in paragraph (1) may not authorize the sale of any Purple Heart awarded to a member of the armed forces or former member of the armed forces by the Secretary of the military department concerned, unless the sale is conducted by the member or former member to whom the Purple Heart was awarded.

“(3) DEFINITION.—In this subsection, the term ‘willfully’ means the voluntary, intentional violation of a known legal duty.”.

The bill (S. 765), as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PERDUE. Mr. President, this legislation is important because it will offer the Purple Heart the same types of legal protections currently in place for the Medal of Honor and help put an end to profiteering off of the sacrifice of our great American heroes.

I would like to thank those Senators who have cosponsored this bill, as well, and the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee for persisting to get this bill on the floor.

There is no higher honor that we have in the Senate than to honor our veterans and the people who put their lives on the line every day for their country.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.J. RES. 76

Mr. PERDUE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if the Senate receives H.J. Res. 76 from the House, and if the text of H.J. Res. 76 is identical to the text at the desk, that the joint resolution be considered passed, the preamble be considered agreed to, and the motions to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

HEALTHCARE

Mr. CARPER. Good afternoon, Mr. President. It is good to see the Presiding Officer and to hear my colleague Senator PERDUE, as he prepares to probably head for home for the next several weeks.

A number of our Senators are heading for their home States this afternoon and tomorrow to begin what is traditionally called the August recess. I am fortunate to live in Delaware, and I can go home every night. Some people see it as a blessing, others as a curse. I see it as a blessing to go home and stay a while. I am looking forward to that.

We have three Senate office buildings here on Capitol Hill that Senators share and where they have their office space. The oldest is Russell. The next oldest is Dirksen. The newest is a building they call the Hart Senate Office Building. For 16 or 17 years, my staff and I have been in the Hart Building—and by choice. Every 2 years we can change offices, but we always want to stay in the same office, which is sort of unusual when you have been here for 16 or 17 years.

Sometimes a lot of people say the names Russell or Dirksen or Hart. Russell and Dirksen are pretty famous folks, even now. Hart is less well known. I will not take a lot of time to give a deep history of who Philip Hart was, but he was a Senator from Michigan and he was a Democrat. His time here preceded my time.

I was elected State treasurer for Delaware in 1976, a Congressman in 1982, and Governor in 1992. Then, I came to the Senate in 2001. But for Philip Hart and me, as far as I know, our service never crossed. If we did, I am not aware.

I don't know a lot of the things he was famous for. There are some of his famous quotes, but one of my all-time favorite quotations are the words I believe he said when he left this place. He left the Senate and retired. Some say he left too soon, but when he retired, he said these words: “I leave as I arrived, understanding clearly the complexity of the world into which we were born and optimistic that if we give it our best shot, we will come close to achieving the goals set for us 200 years ago.”

That is what he said. Aren't those wonderful words? At a time when we could actually use a little bit of encouragement, I hope that, maybe, his words provide at least a small measure. For me, they always provided a large measure.

If you go back to the beginning of this Congress, January 3, and the inauguration of the President on January 20 of this year, there were high hopes on both sides to immediately get to work on comprehensive tax reform; on transportation and infrastructure policy for roads, highways, bridges, rails, ports, broadband, and maybe our electric grid. There was the idea of doing something for our Republican friends to repeal the Affordable Care Act.

As it turns out, we have in some cases disappointed, and in other cases we probably have pleased the folks who elected us to serve them, in developing and creating some of the policy for our country.

I spent a fair amount of time on healthcare. I know the Presiding Officer, the Senator from Wisconsin, has as well. I spent a fair amount of time thinking and working on healthcare before, as a Governor and even as a Congressman. I am not a doctor. I have never pretended to be and have never wanted to be, but I think one of the credos for the folks in the medical field and physicians is “do no harm.” I hope that, at least on the healthcare front, in these 7 months here of this legislative session, we have not done a great deal of harm. I don't think we have.

We had a robust debate on whether the Affordable Care Act should be repealed, with a special focus on the section called ObamaCare, and not much of a debate on how we get better healthcare results for less money, although it is a goal we all share, as Democrats and Republicans, in the executive branch and in the legislative branch. I think that we all share the goal of trying to figure out how to provide better healthcare for less money to everybody so everybody has coverage. I think that is a shared goal.

LAMAR ALEXANDER, my Senate colleague from Tennessee, likes to say: A pilot wouldn't take off in an airplane without knowing what his or her destination is. Think about that. With respect to our destination on healthcare, I think we know what the destination is; that is, as I said earlier, to make sure we provide better coverage for less money and cover everybody. That is the destination.

Just as a guy who spent a lot of time as a naval flight officer in airplanes for about 23 years, I know there are different ways to get to places. Sometimes it is a straight line; sometimes it is not. Sometimes you have to go around turbulence, around storms, or under them. You may run short on fuel, and there may be mechanical malfunctions. It is not always a straight line to get to where we want to go in an airplane. It turns out that it is not a straight line—that destination that we want to get to with respect to healthcare, for better results, less money, and covering everyone.

One of the efforts to reach that destination has its roots in 1993. In fact, here in Washington there were two ideas for reaching that destination in terms of healthcare. Our shared goals go back to 1993, where you had here in Washington two different ideas that were put on the table.

One idea was from our First Lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton. She worked with really smart people to come up with a healthcare plan called HillaryCare, to essentially try to achieve those three goals I mentioned. Our friends in the Republican Party were not always kind in characterizing her proposal. I think, when they called it "HillaryCare," it was not meant to be a compliment. Even now, in television commercials, I remember seeing them kind of denigrating her efforts.

One of the responses from the folks who supported it—at least, something that First Lady Hillary Clinton proposed—or one of the things that the Democratic side said to the Republicans was this: What is your idea? At least we have an idea.

Then, some really smart people over at the Heritage Foundation went to work and they came up with what turns out to be a good idea—several very good ideas—to draw on market forces in order to try to meet those three goals I stated earlier on healthcare.

The first great idea of the five ideas was to create exchanges in every State for people who don't have coverage under Medicaid or Medicare or they don't work for an employer that provides healthcare for them. These are large purchasing pools in every State where people can get healthcare coverage and be part of a large group plan and realize the benefits of being a part of that large group plan.

The second aspect or pillar of their five ideas was the idea of a sliding-scale tax credit for people whose income was low. They would get a tax credit to lower the cost of a premium in the exchange in their State. As that person came up and up, at least to a certain level, the tax credit would go away. It is a sliding-scale tax credit. That was a Heritage Foundation idea.

Their third idea was something called an individual mandate, which said that, if you don't have coverage, you have to get it. Particularly, you have to sign up for it in the exchange. If you don't want to sign up, you are going to be fined. You can't actually make people sign up and get coverage, but the idea behind Heritage was that we would incentivize people to get coverage, because, eventually, people who don't have coverage will have to get care. Unfortunately, it is really expensive if they go to the emergency room. A lot of times they are so sick that they end up getting admitted. That costs a bundle, and the rest of us end up paying for it. So the third pillar was the individual mandate.

The fourth pillar was the employer mandate, because we want employers to cover their employees. That may not be absolute full coverage or Cadillac coverage. You don't have to necessarily cover their family, but we want you to offer coverage to your employees—hopefully, decent coverage.

The last part dealt with preexisting conditions. The Heritage folks said that there should be a prohibition against insurance companies being able to say to people who are sick or have some kind of preexisting conditions: We are not going to insure you because you have a preexisting condition. Heritage said that should be verboten. You shouldn't get away with that if you are an insurance company.

Those were the five ideas. Our friends here on the Republican side of the aisle said: We want to take those ideas.

They did. The lead sponsor was John Chafee. I think he had 22 Republican sponsors in 1993, including Senator HATCH, who was the senior Republican on the Finance Committee and chaired the Finance Committee, and CHUCK GRASSLEY, a senior Republican on Finance who was also the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. They were some of the 22 cosponsors of the Republican bill, which really reflected the Heritage Foundation's ideas. Neither HillaryCare nor the Chafee legislation went forward and was adopted.

But about 13 years later, in 2006, a fellow Governor of Massachusetts was thinking about what were some things he could do to really differentiate himself in the field for running for President in 2008. His advisers came up with this idea: Why don't we try to cover everybody in Massachusetts and be the first State with everyone having healthcare coverage? They dusted off the Heritage Foundation's five ideas and introduced the legislation in Massachusetts. They amended it and changed it a little bit, but, in the end, they passed the legislation. They implemented legislation in 2006, I believe, that reflected Heritage's ideas from 1993 and reflected the legislation that was written in this Chamber by John Chafee in 1993. It worked. It worked in Massachusetts.

They fairly quickly were able to cover a lot of extra people in their State who hadn't been covered before. One of the things they wrestled with early on was portability. As it turns out, the folks who are young and invincible, like our pages here with us—I think this may be the last day or two before they head back for home.

The Presiding Officer may not know this, but the pages are here on overtime. Most of the pages returned to their home States across the country, but there are a half dozen or so volunteers that are still sticking with us to the bitter end. Hopefully, it is not too bitter an end. We hope that someday you will come back here as interns or maybe staff Members, and, who knows, maybe even as Presiding Officers or just mortals—mere mortals like me. Thank you again for your service.

Anyway, the Romney folks found out that they had this fine setup. So if people didn't get coverage in Massachusetts, they would have to pay a fine. It went up over time. It was later that they decided that if they had to do this over again, they would have had the fine start higher and escalate faster in order to send a clear message to the young invincibles and others who didn't have coverage that you have to get serious about getting coverage. They wanted a mix of people in their exchanges so that insurance companies would be able to insure them and not lose their shirts—to make money off of it.

Anyway, when we were working on the Affordable Care Act in 2009, my first year on the Finance Committee, we were trying to figure out what to do. We proposed a lot of ideas to sort of keep our eye on the ACA. The Affordable Care Act was a way to just sort of pivot away from sick care, where we just spend money on people when they are sick, and do more to invest on how we help people stay healthy through prevention and wellness, by doing screenings for colorectal cancer, breast cancer, and prostate cancer, in ways that, if you take away the copays for people and they can go ahead and get the screenings, they save themselves a lot of money and a lot of pain and maybe from dying, which otherwise wouldn't be the case.

There are a lot of aspects of the Affordable Care Act. We raised the eligibility for folks for Medicaid.

When I came back from Southeast Asia in 1993, I went to business school in Delaware and got an MBA. The next year, I became State treasurer. I was 29. At that time, I thought of Medicaid as healthcare coverage for poor women with children. At the time, that was pretty much what it was, but not today.

Almost two-thirds of the money we spend on Medicaid is for people who are in nursing homes—our parents, our grandparents, our aunts, our uncles. A lot of them are veterans. I think 2 million are veterans. We spend a lot of money on Medicaid today to treat addiction for heroin and opioids, and we spend money on poor families, including women and children, but the nature of the coverage has changed a whole lot.

For many years, it has been a 50-50 yield. Largely, States pay 50 percent, and the Federal Government pays 50 percent. We changed that in the Affordable Care Act because we wanted the States to cover more than just the people up to 100 percent of poverty. The Federal Government stepped in and said to the States: If you would go along with this, we would like to cover people from 100 percent to 135 percent of poverty. The Federal Government, at least for a while, would pay for that marginal increase in coverage up to 135 percent of poverty. It is a pretty good deal for the States, and about 31 States have signed up to do that. So a lot of people have coverage today who did not have it before through Medicaid.

The other thing we did in writing the Affordable Care Act was to take the idea that they have sort of glommed onto in Massachusetts with RomneyCare—which has its roots back to the 1993 proposal from Heritage and that was proposed here in the Senate by Senator Chafee—and put that into the Affordable Care Act. I know that there are some people who wanted to have a single-payer system in that their idea of healthcare reform was to cover everyone under Medicare who did not have coverage. We were just not ready to go there, so we said: Let's try something that has been put in place in one of our States, maybe with the idea that Massachusetts could be the laboratory of democracy—to find out what works and do more of that—and that was what we did.

We passed legislation that created exchanges in all 50 States, and we had an individual mandate to encourage people to get coverage and incentivize them but fine them if they did not. A lot of people say that we started too slowly, as Massachusetts did not implement it fast enough to get people signed up in the exchanges, but we learned, maybe, from our mistakes. We had the employer mandate, and we had the sliding sales tax credit in the Affordable Care Act.

Then we had the prohibitions against insurance companies that refused to cover people because they had some kind of preexisting condition. That was the part of the Affordable Care Act that had its roots, really, in Heritage and Republican Senators—really good ones. Some of them are still here. Somehow, this has turned out to be that part of the Affordable Care Act with the exchanges and so forth. It ended up being called ObamaCare, which is really ironic because he did not have anything to do with creating it. It was not his idea, but, somehow, it has been deemed to be ObamaCare. It is the part of the Affordable Care Act that has been most attacked by our Republican friends. It was their creation, their suggestion, and now they want to get rid of it.

We have had some tough debate here in recent weeks, and the Senate has decided not to repeal that part of the Affordable Care Act. I think that we are smart not to repeal it, but the idea is to help make it work. One of the best ways is to sort of calm down the exchanges—quit disrupting and destabilizing the exchanges. When the President says that we do not know if we are going to enforce the individual mandate or the subsidies that we provide for low-income people, who get their coverage in the exchanges, to help cover their co-pays or deductibles—they do not know if they are going to keep doing that. They are basically saying of the ObamaCare exchanges to just put them in a death spiral. Let them just die. Then, maybe, the Democrats will come to the table.

I think all of that would be a huge mistake. Most of the people would suffer. As a matter of fact, a lot of the folks who voted for them are in rural States, and a lot of them are in red States around the country. I think it is cruel, and I do not think it is very smart.

Last Friday morning at 2 a.m., three Republicans—LISA MURKOWSKI, of Alaska; SUSAN COLLINS, of Maine; and JOHN MCCAIN, of Arizona—joined 48 Democrats in saying: Let's hit the pause button on degrading, further bringing down, the Affordable Care Act. Let's hit the pause button. It is not because the Affordable Care Act is perfect, because we know there are things in it that need to be fixed, but there are portions that need to be preserved as well.

We said: Let's see if we can't hit the pause button—kind of pivot—and stabilize the exchanges, first of all, then do the fix, and do the repair that needs done in the ACA. We would keep the stuff that is really good and that everyone says is good and move on. Let's not just do it as Republicans by themselves or Democrats by themselves. We have tried that. Let's try working together.

Now we have a chance to do that, and people, like the Presiding Officer, who have very good ideas will have a chance to present those ideas in hearings that will be held by Senators LAMAR ALEXANDER and PATTY MURRAY right after we come back here, just after the Labor Day holiday.

I learned in our Finance Committee today that Chairman ORRIN HATCH and Senator RON WYDEN, who is the senior Democrat on the committee, will also be holding a hearing or hearings on how do we stabilize the exchanges and how do we, maybe, find some ways to improve on what we have done in the Affordable Care Act. I can think of any number. I am sure that the Presiding Officer can as well.

I do not leave here discouraged. This is a country about which people say: You must be miserable serving in the U.S. Senate.

I say: Oh, no, not at all. I am sort of energized by what has been going on, not discouraged.

A long time ago, we fought the Civil War. One hundred fifty years ago, we fought the Civil War. My friend here from Mississippi remembers that. I grew up in the last capital of the Confederacy—Danville, VA. I remember that. One hundred fifty years ago, hundreds of thousands of people were killed, maimed, or wounded. When it was over, our President was assassinated, and his successor was impeached.

Somehow, we got through that and made it to the 20th century and fought, not one, but two World Wars. We won them both and led them both. We fought the Cold War—won it, led it. We led the world out of the Great Depression and into the 21st century.

The 21st century emerged, and the Sun came up that January day in 2001. America had the strongest economy on Earth and the most productive workforce on Earth. We are a nation of peace. We had four balanced budgets in a row. We had not balanced a budget since 1968. Then we figured out how to do that four times in a row during the last 4 years of the Clinton administration. In 2001, we were the most admired Nation on Earth and the most admired force for justice on Earth.

I like to remind people that if we can get through the 150 years after the Civil War and end up where we were on January 1, 2001, we will get through this as well.

The last thing I would say is this: When we come back, there is plenty to do. One of the things we have to do is deal with our financial plan, our budget, and figure out what to do with respect to the debt ceiling. We will be coming back and holding the hearings that I described on the Affordable Care Act and trying to stabilize the exchanges. We will begin to figure out what we ought to do beyond stabilizing the exchanges and do it as Democrats and Republicans working together.

When we passed Social Security, Medicare, the Civil Rights Act, and the GI bill, those were not all Democratic ideas or all Republican ideas. Some of the best work we do is when we work together.

We will also have the opportunity to tackle our Tax Code. We have a tax code that, in some cases, discourages companies, especially larger companies, from staying in the United States and continuing to do business here and employing people here. In some cases, we encourage them to look for other places around the world in which to locate their businesses. We need to make sure we have a tax code that encourages innovation and that encourages companies to expand and grow here. My hope is that we can, especially on the Finance Committee, really focus on that and work with our colleagues, work with the House, and work with the administration.

I am a really optimistic person about most things, but the last time we did comprehensive tax reform in this country was in 1986. At that time, we had Republican President Reagan, who was for it. He had a great Treasury Secretary, Jim Baker, who was for it. Dan Rostenkowski, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the House, was for it. Tip O'Neill, the Democratic Speaker of the House, was for it. We had Bob Packwood and Bill Bradley, a Democrat and a Republican—brilliant people on the Finance Committee. They were for it, and it still took 5 years to do it—really hard stuff.

We need to get serious about it, and we need to get going. My hope is that we will end up being revenue-neutral. We could use some revenues, but I hope it will be revenue-neutral. At the end of the day, I hope that what we do will answer these four questions: Is it fair? Does it foster economic growth? Does it make the Tax Code less complex or more complex? Finally, how does it affect our fiscal situation—our budget situation? My hope is that we can keep those questions in our minds as we formulate tax reform and answer them in an appropriate way.

I see my colleague here with whom I serve on the Finance Committee and on the Environment and Public Works Committee. He is waiting his turn, and I have talked long enough.

I will close where I started, with the words of the late Senator Philip Hart, of Michigan, who was admired by a lot of people here in this body before we came here. He said these words:

I leave as I arrived, understanding clearly the complexity of the world into which we were born and optimistic that if we give it our best shot, we will come close to achieving the goals set for us 200 years ago.

Boy, those words ring true today, don't they?

As we are about to leave, unlike our friend Philip Hart, who left the Senate, those who serve today in the Senate are going to come back in 4 weeks. My hope is that when we come back, we will come back determined to work together. That is what people want us to do. They want us to work together because, if we do, we will get a lot more things done.

My wife and I went to Africa and actually met up there with one of our sons and a friend of his two summers ago in August—2 years ago this August. I learned more about Africa in, actually, a week to 10 days than I had learned in all of my life. One of the things I learned was an African proverb that some of you already know. It goes something like this: If you want to go fast, travel alone. If you want to go far, travel together.

Think about that: If you want to go fast, travel alone. If you want to go far, travel together.

We have tried going it alone, and we have not gotten that far. My hope is that when we come back, we will travel together, and we will go a long, long way and make everyone proud of us.

I say again to my colleagues and the pages and our staffs, thank you for the good work that you have done. It is a pleasure serving with all of you.

I bid you adieu. Thank you.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

BENEFIT ACT

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, my esteemed colleague from Delaware says that we have plenty to do when we get back, and he is, certainly, correct. I would join many of my colleagues today, though, in pointing out that in the last 3 days, we have actually gotten substantial work done. Perhaps we have crammed into 3 days what using the regular order and the filibuster and the motions to proceed might have taken 3 weeks otherwise. So the leadership on both sides of the aisle are to be commended for this burst of progress we have made, and I hope we can continue that when we get back.

Earlier today, this Congress passed a significant piece of legislation offered by the Senator who occupies the Chair, my good friend, Senator JOHNSON of Wisconsin. It is the Right to Try Act, which seeks to streamline the way people who are willing to take a bit of a chance on a drug in order to save their lives—streamline the way they can have access to perhaps life-enhancing and lifesaving drugs. It is a real achievement. I congratulate my colleague from Wisconsin and congratulate the leadership facilitating this breakthrough.

Moments later, the Senate passed a companion bill authored by Senator KLOBUCHAR and me known as the Better Empowerment Now to Enhance Framework and Improve Treatments Act or the BENEFIT Act. This is another win for patients—patients who deserve to have a voice in the drug approval process. This bill, which is a companion bill to the very important Right to Try Act, will do that.

The BENEFIT Act calls for a simple amendment to the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act—one that could make a big difference to patients whose lives may depend on a new therapy or drug. Specifically, the Wicker-Klobuchar bill would require the use of patient experience and patient-focused drug development and related data in assessing the risk versus the benefit of these particular therapies.

The bill also includes information from patient advocacy groups and academic institutions. This is a small but important step forward.

If signed into law—and I certainly hope the House passes it and I hope the President will sign it into law—this bill would greatly enhance the data and information available to FDA when reviewing drugs, when reviewing medical products, and when reviewing therapies. It would also add to the progress Congress has made in recent years, reaffirming the importance of patients' perspectives in drug decisions—decisions that can have a profound and lasting impact on the lives of these patients. Ask any American who suffers from a disease or who is watching a loved one suffer, and they will tell us that all information should be on the table when a breakthrough or a cure is at stake.

Last year, Senator KLOBUCHAR and I joined together to make the FDA's use of patient perspectives more transparent with what we call the Patient-Focused Impact Assessment Act. This was passed and was signed into law as part of the 21st Century Cures Act.

The BENEFIT Act, passed by the Senate today, would keep that momentum going, building on the progress we have made.

Now, what progress have we made? Let me tell my colleagues this. For years, I have sought to find a cure for the devastating, fatal disease known as Duchenne muscular dystrophy. I have worked on this issue since my early years in the House of Representatives. Young boys—almost all males—is whom this affects. These young boys face this fatal disease, and they know better than anyone what a drug can do to improve the quality of their lives.

Since the Congress passed and the President signed the MD-CARE Act dealing with Duchenne muscular dystrophy more than 15 years ago, research has led to innovative therapies that have added a decade to the lives of these young boys. What an achievement by scientists in America. What an achievement for the government to have unleashed cures and research in this area.

We need their voices heard, we need their stories heard, and we need the voices of patients with other diseases heard.

I thank my colleagues in the Senate for joining with us on a unanimous consent request to pass this legislation. I thank the leadership on this side of the aisle and our Democratic counterparts on the other side.

Particular appreciation goes to Senator ALEXANDER, the chairman of the HELP Committee, and to Senator MURRAY, the ranking Democrat on the HELP Committee, for their valuable help. Appreciation goes to perhaps a new attitude for the rest of the year in the Senate to join together with unanimous consent and move bills and nominations forward that have widespread support and consensus around the country.

I congratulate the Presiding Officer, the Senator from Wisconsin, on an outstanding achievement, and I congratulate the Senate for joining with Senator KLOBUCHAR and me to help out in another way.

Thank you.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

S. 123

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, “SEC. 721. DEFAULT CONFIGURATION OF MULTI-LINE TELEPHONE SYSTEMS FOR DIRECT DIALING OF 9-1-1.

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

“(1) the term ‘multi-line telephone system’ has the meaning given the term in section 6502 of the Middle Class Tax Relief and Job Creation Act of 2012 (47 U.S.C. 1471); and

“(b) MULTI-LINE TELEPHONE SYSTEM FUNCTIONALITY.—A person engaged in the business of manufacturing, importing, selling, or leasing multi-line telephone systems may not manufacture or import for use in the United States or sell or lease or offer to sell or lease in the United States a multi-line telephone system unless the technology of the system has the capabilities described in subsections (c) and (e).

“(c) MULTI-LINE TELEPHONE SYSTEM INSTALLATION.—A person engaged in the business of installing multi-line telephone systems serving locations in the United States may not install such a system in the United States unless, upon installation, the system allows a call that is initiated when a user dials 9-1-1 from any station equipped with dialing facilities to be transmitted to the appropriate public safety answering point—

“(1) without requiring the user to dial any additional digit, code, prefix, or post-fix, including any trunk-access code (such as the digit 9); and

“(e) ON-SITE NOTIFICATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A person engaged in the business of installing multi-line telephone systems serving locations in the United States, in installing a system described in paragraph (2) in the United States, shall configure the system so that when a person at the facility where the system is installed initiates a call to 9-1-1 using the system, the system provides a notification to—

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to a multi-line telephone system that is manufactured, imported, offered for first sale or lease, first sold or leased, or installed after the date that is 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

DEVELOPING INNOVATION AND GROWING THE INTERNET OF THINGS ACT

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 113, S. 88.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 88) to ensure appropriate spectrum planning and interagency coordination to support the Internet of Things.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Fischer substitute amendment at the desk be considered and agreed to, and the bill, as amended, be considered read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 769) in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under “Text of Amendments.”)

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I know of no further debate on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the bill?

Hearing none, the bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (S. 88), as amended, was passed.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLUNT). The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. YOUNG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to executive session for the en bloc consideration of the following nominations: Executive Calendar Nos. 101 and 102.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the nominations en bloc.

The legislative clerk read the nominations of Neil Chatterjee, of Kentucky, to be a Member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for the term expiring June 30, 2021; and Robert F. Powelson, of Pennsylvania, to be a Member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for the term expiring June 30, 2020.

Thereupon, the Senate proceeded to consider the nominations en bloc.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on the nominations en bloc with no intervening action or debate; that if confirmed, the motions to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table en bloc; that the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action; that no further motions be in order; that any statements relating to the nominations be printed in the RECORD; and that the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the Chatterjee and Powelson nominations en bloc?

The nominations were confirmed en bloc.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I want to take just a moment and thank those who have worked so hard to make sure that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will have a functioning quorum—and more than just having a functioning quorum, the quality of individuals we are sending to the FERC as Commissioners is truly impressive to see.

Neil Chatterjee, whom, without doubt, almost all of us on this floor know, has been working here in the Senate, working in the leader's office for years, and has been an invaluable asset to me and my staff on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee. He is extremely knowledgeable, extremely committed and dedicated, and it has been a real pleasure to work with him.

I don't know Mr. Powelson as well, but having had an opportunity to advance his name before the Energy and Natural Resources Committee for confirmation, too, I know that the expertise and the credentials he will bring to the Commission are greatly appreciated.

I think we recognize that there is much we are anxious to see happen throughout the country in a new administration where we are talking a lot about infrastructure—when we are talking about our energy assets and what we can do to help facilitate the build-out of an aging infrastructure and the add-on of new infrastructure. But in order to proceed with much of this, you have to have the FERC actually operating, working to review the permits, working through the rate-making cases. It is substantive work, it is challenging work, and it is work that has now been stacked up for months and months. So knowing that the FERC will be able to commence its operations again with a quorum is really good news today.

I think it is also important to note that the White House sent just this week two additional names—those of Mr. Glick and Mr. McIntyre. The Energy and Natural Resources Committee will be considering those in early September when we return so that, hopefully, we can get a full complement to this very important Commission.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, Richard Glick and Kevin McIntyre have been nominated by the President for positions on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. I understand they will be heard and marked up in tandem in September and I have told the Democratic leader that they will move as a pair across the floor.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume legislative session.

MORNING BUSINESS

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate be in a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FDA REAUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I wish to speak on the importance of maintaining a strong Food and Drug Administration. Today we approved the user fee reauthorizations for the FDA. We have done the important work of passing these essential user fee agreements out of the committee and have now debated and passed them on the Senate floor.

The HELP Committee is filled with strong personalities. These personalities reflect the passion and diversity of opinion of millions across our nation today. While we may disagree on certain policies, most of us can agree that funding the drug, device, and biologic centers of the FDA is essential.

Our future scientific endeavors require a strong FDA that communicates openly with the industry that it regulates, and this agreement sets up protocols to achieve that goal. A strong FDA also requires clear steps for product review, and only through such deliberative actions can we bring more competition and clarity to our drugs, devices, and biologic products.

I have championed multiple provisions in this bill, but there are two I would like to highlight today. First, there is the counterfeit and diverted drug language. This language makes importation neither harder nor easier. In fact, it doesn't change importation laws at all. Rather, it protects and strengthens the drug supply chain by simply increasing penalties for criminals that choose to divert drugs into the United States or sell counterfeit drugs.

Current penalties for illegally diverting drugs in the United States change arbitrarily based on the location where the drugs are manufactured. Our bill addresses this disparity by enforcing the same penalties for diverting drugs made outside the United States as for those made inside the United States. To ensure public health and to enhance consumer confidence, it is critical that Congress eliminate these differing penalties for certain types of diversion and counterfeiting.

The second provision I wish to call attention to is a bipartisan proposal from Senators BENNET, BURR, and CASEY. These fine Senators have joined together to address how clinical trials are designed early on in their development. By offering guidance on how to include the intended patient population, especially those with rare diseases, drug sponsors can craft trials that generate useful data for health professionals and patients to review.

This bill builds upon the success of other expanded access provisions that put the patient at the heart of the healthcare system. FDA does consummate work when reviewing products for market, but including a wider patient mix, when appropriate, will enable phase I, II, and III trials to be more complex. I strongly believe that accurately portraying the intended patient population in a clinical trial is key to ensuring that drugs are both safe and effective.

I support this bill, but I also feel compelled to speak for a moment on the OPEN ACT. While not included in the package being debated today, the provisions of the Orphan Product Extension Now Accelerating Cures and Treatments Act—a bill I introduced this Congress with Senator MENENDEZ and last Congress with Senator KLOBUCHAR—would promote new therapies for rare diseases.

New therapies are essential to help the nearly 30 million Americans suffering from a rare disease or condition. Because complex rare diseases with small patient populations have limited market potential, there are few economic incentives to develop new drugs targeting those diseases. While there are 7,000 rare diseases that impact millions of Americans, 95 percent of these diseases have no treatment. All too often, misconceptions about the dangers of exclusivities keep bipartisan measures from being introduced. We must remain focused, however, and remember that, each day we delay in getting treatments to the rare disease community, patients and their families suffer.

Drug companies possess considerable scientific knowledge on drugs that have already been approved for common diseases. Some of these drugs could be repurposed for the treatment of rare diseases. Repurposing drugs is faster, less expensive, and generally less risky than traditional drug development.

The OPEN ACT would encourage such repurposing by providing an additional 6 months of market exclusivity to drugs that are repurposed and approved by FDA for a rare disease or condition.

Finding legislative ways help medical innovators treat rare diseases has been among my top priorities for over 30 years, since I first championed the bipartisan, bicameral Orphan rug Act in 1983. The OPEN ACT is a natural next step in expanding that effort to close the gap for rare diseases for which we have yet to develop treatments. In addition to increasing the number of rare disease therapies, this legislation will boost innovation and provide safer options for rare disease patients using drugs off-label. My bill enjoys enormous support with the backing of over 225 rare disease organizations and patient advocacy groups, not to mention overwhelming support from academic medical and research centers.

Although this provision is not in the bill before us, I have had assurances from Chairman Alexander that he will continue working with me and the cosponsors of this bill to see it become law. I have spoken to Ranking Member MURRAY in the past about it, and I remain optimistic that my colleagues share my concern for the rare disease community and are willing to advance this legislation in the future. I would like to thank the chairman and ranking member for their dedication to children and families in need.

I wish to conclude by reminding my colleagues that many of the debates that have led to the bill before us today are the culmination of years of experience. When I led the effort to pass what became Hatch-Waxman, the true impact of that law dwarfed even our loftiest hopes. Hatch-Waxman was a resounding success because Senators and Congressmen worked together to improve our country's situation and reduce barriers to market entry. This bill is vital to continuing that goal, and I am pleased to see where the negotiations have landed.

TAX REFORM

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, last week, I joined the Senate majority leader, the Speaker of the House, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, the Treasury Secretary, and the Director of the National Economic Council in issuing a joint statement on tax reform.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the joint statement be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Since the statement's release, critics and naysayers have said quite a bit, some even going so far as to declare their opposition to the statement. That is a little odd, given that the statement is not a bill or a tax plan; it is simply a statement of agreed upon principles for tax reform.

That is not to say it was insignificant. Quite the opposite, in fact. The joint statement is an important development in the overall tax reform effort for several reasons.

For example, over the past several months, the favored tax reform narrative among some in the pundit class has been that Republicans are deeply divided. According to this narrative, Republicans in the Senate, the House, and the administration all have such fundamentally different views on tax reform that it will be impossible for us all to get on the same page.

Some of that was, to use an outdated description, pure poppycock.

When the administration puts out a framework that calls for a 15 percent corporate tax rate while the House blueprint has a 20 percent rate target, that is not really a disagreement. Both sides want to lower the corporate rate significantly, and the general idea in both cases is to reduce the rate as much as is reasonably possible.

Admittedly, there were some key differences of opinion. At the outset of this Congress, with a newly elected Republican President, it was fair to say that the House, Senate, and White House were on different pages when it came to some aspects of tax reform.

However, with last week's release of the joint statement, the leaders in this effort—in both congressional chambers and in the executive branch—have declared that, as of now, we are singing off the same song sheet. There are, of course, details that will need to be worked out, but all parties are in agreement on the key principles and have enough confidence that the process can move forward in Congress without the fear that the House, Senate, or administration will take drastically different approaches in crafting a tax reform package.

That is very significant. I have been working on tax reform for more than 6 years now, and this is the first time that we have had anything approaching this level of unity across the various Chambers and branches of government.

Another significant marker in the joint statement is the agreement that the tax-writing committees will do the lion's share of the work in producing the actual tax reform legislation and that the leaders are committed to moving through regular order, by which I mean committee markup processes prior to floor consideration.

This is key because one of the criticisms I have heard about Republicans' tax reform efforts is that the bill is being drafted behind closed doors I have even been scolded, sometimes pointedly, over why I have not held a Finance Committee hearing on "the bill," even though there is no complete bill in place at this time.

Outside groups, some overtly aligned with the Democrats, have already put forward budget scores for the House blueprint and the President's tax framework, even though there are not enough specifics in place to score anything yet. Those scores, generated by whatever is in the imagination of the outside groups, and not based on any facts, tell tall tales. They say there will be tax cuts for the rich, big businesses and a parade of horrors. Democrats here in the Senate, as well, have spoken of the horrors of the Republican "tax plan," even though there is not a detailed plan in place. Again, the horrors represent pure fiction.

It is simply not the case that a bill is being drafted behind closed doors. It was never going to be the case. I have stated several times in recent months that I intended to have a robust and transparent process for tax reform in the Senate. The joint statement confirms that both chambers of Congress will take that kind of approach.

The Finance Committee is already hard at work. We have been talking about specific reform proposals for months now, and every member on the majority side of the committee is ready to do the work. More broadly, the committee has been at work in a bipartisan way on tax reform for many years now.

We have a number of great members on the Finance Committee, all of whom—at least on the Republican side—are committed to working toward this effort. I will continue to gather their input with an eye toward crafting a tax reform bill and moving it through the committee this fall. Once again, the committee process is going to be robust; I intend to hold multiple hearings and full markup.

The joint statement also noted that Republican leaders hoped that our Democratic colleagues would be willing to participate in this effort.

That should be no surprise. I have been calling on my Democrat friends to work with us on tax reform for months, even years.

For months now, I have been come to the floor on multiple occasions to ask my Democratic friends to come to the table.

I held a bipartisan hearing on tax reform in the Finance Committee just a few weeks ago, where we heard from experts on both sides of the aisle.

Earlier this week, the committee had another bipartisan hearing, this one on affordable housing. Of course, most of the Federal affordable housing incentives are found in the Tax Code, meaning that issue will undoubtedly be part of the larger discussion.

These hearings are just the latest in very long line of bipartisan, tax-related hearings in the Finance Committee.

So there really shouldn't be any doubt that, when I sign onto a statement that includes a call for bipartisanship, the call is both serious and sincere.

In addition, there is quite a bit of bipartisan agreement over the policy principles noted in joint statement.

As I said here on the floor just a few weeks ago, a number of Democrats—including a number of our Senate colleagues and the two most recent Democratic Presidents—have expressed support for lowering the U.S. corporate tax rate, which is the highest in the industrialized world.

Prominent Democrats, including the distinguished minority leader, have publicly supported reforms to our international tax system in order to make American businesses more competitive and prevent erosion of our tax base.

Both of these concepts are prominently mentioned in our joint statement.

The statement also talks about tax relief for middle-class families and reduced burdens on small businesses. Democrats, last time I checked, were largely in favor of this as well.

So long story short, there is nothing in the statement, either in terms of process or policy, that should discourage a number of Democrats from getting on board with this effort.

Yet, earlier this week, every member of the Senate Democratic Caucus—except three—signed onto a letter they purported to be a call for compromise and bipartisanship. However, if you read the details of the letter, it was really a set of up-front demands peppered in between political attacks.

First and foremost, my colleagues demanded in their letter that Republicans not use budget reconciliation to move a tax reform bill.

That has been a precondition for Democratic involvement in this effort for months now, among other demands unrelated to tax reform, and, as I have said many times, it is preposterous. The demand that Republicans agree up-front to a particular process is really unprecedented and, not to put too fine a point on it, a little nonsensical.

If Democrats are willing to engage in good faith on tax reform, why would they first demand that we ensure their ability to block it from ever even coming to the floor before they would be willing to engage on the substance? The logic is a little dizzying, to say the least.

On top of that, if reconciliation remains on the table, why would that stop Democrats from agreeing on the substance?

Obviously, budget reconciliation gives the majority the tools it needs to move legislation—under specified rules and conditions—without the threat of a filibuster, but nothing in the rules requires reconciliation to be partisan. In fact, historically speaking, tax bills moved through reconciliation tend to get bipartisan support. For example, the so-called Bush Tax Cuts of 2001 and 2003 were passed through reconciliation; yet there were both Republicans and Democrats voting in favor of the package.

Recent history shows that working together on the substance of policy is not precluded by the existence of a reconciliation instruction.

In 2009, with a reconciliation instruction in place, Senate Republicans in the Finance Committee participated in the healthcare reform process, with hearings, roundtables, and bipartisan discussion groups, before we were shut out of the final ObamaCare bill. Republicans did not operate as though there was a prerequisite of no reconciliation before discussion could occur.

In 2013, with a $1 trillion tax-hike reconciliation instruction in place, Senate Republicans in the Finance Committee participated in discussions that produced 10 bipartisan tax option papers; we participated in what was called a blank slate approach to tax reform; and we participated in discussion draft conversations. Republicans did not operate as though there was a prerequisite of no reconciliation before discussion could occur.

Now, our friends on the other side are critical of us when we follow the path they, themselves, took. They are insisting that we do what they would not do when similarly situated. They are not participating on the same constructive basis we did when we were in their place. From their leader on down, they act as if the past does not exist or that we are ignorant of it. Before applying too clever a rhetorical lash to those on this side, my friends on the other side should heed the advice of Lord Byron: "Keep thy smooth words and juggling homilies for those who know thee not."

If Democrats will work with us to reach agreement on the substance of tax reform, the process by which it moves through the Senate shouldn't really be a concern. Any implication that the process will necessarily dictate the substance is misleading.

Ideally, the tax reform process would be bipartisan, particularly here in the Senate. That would be the best-case scenario for the effort.

In a perfect world, reconciliation would not be necessary.

For that to happen, the Democrats would have to be willing to engage in a reasonable manner. In my view, opening the discussion with a demand that Republicans unilaterally disarm and commit to not using the tools we have under the rules of the Senate—the very tools that have been used by both sides in the past—smacks of disingenuousness. If they are truly willing to engage constructively on these efforts—and I hope they are—we should begin by talking about the substance, not dealing with process demands.

I hope that what we are seeing is positing. I hope that my Democratic colleagues will recognize the significance of the unity expressed in last week's joint statement and get on board for what will hopefully be a historic effort.

If they do not, Republicans should be willing to use the tools at our disposal to move tax reform without Democratic support. That would include reconciliation.

The majority leader has indicated that he is willing to go that way. I am willing to go that way as well.

However, to get us to the point, a number of things have to happen, not the least of which is the passage of budget resolution. For now, I am focusing on the substantive policies and proposals, and I will keep working with my colleagues on the Finance Committee to deliver on the tasks we were charged in the joint statement.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[July 27, 2017]

JOINT STATEMENT ON TAX REFORM

WASHINGTON.—Today, House Speaker Paul Ryan (R-WI), Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY), Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, National Economic Council Director Gary Cohn, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-UT), and House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady (R-TX) issued the following joint statement on tax reform:

"For the first time in many years, the American people have elected a President and Congress that are fully committed to ensuring that ordinary Americans keep more of their hard-earned money and that our tax policies encourage employers to invest, hire, and grow. And under the leadership of President Trump, the White House and Treasury have met with over 200 members of the House and Senate and hundreds of grassroots and business groups to talk and listen to ideas about tax reform.

"We are all united in the belief that the single most important action we can take to grow our economy and help the middle class get ahead is to fix our broken tax code for families, small business, and American job creators competing at home and around the globe. Our shared commitment to fixing America's broken tax code represents a once-in-a-generation opportunity, and so for three months we have been meeting regularly to develop a shared template for tax reform.

"Over many years, the members of the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee have examined various options for tax reform. During our meetings, the Chairmen of those committees have brought to the table the views and priorities of their committee members. Building on this work, as well as on the efforts of the Administration and input from other stakeholders, we are confident that a shared vision for tax reform exists, and are prepared for the two committees to take the lead and begin producing legislation for the President to sign.

"Above all, the mission of the committees is to protect American jobs and make taxes simpler, fairer, and lower for hard-working American families. We have always been in agreement that tax relief for American families should be at the heart of our plan. We also believe there should be a lower tax rate for small businesses so they can compete with larger ones, and lower rates for all American businesses so they can compete with foreign ones. The goal is a plan that reduces tax rates as much as possible, allows unprecedented capital expensing, places a priority on permanence, and creates a system that encourages American companies to bring back jobs and profits trapped overseas. And we are now confident that, without transitioning to a new domestic consumption-based tax system, there is a viable approach for ensuring a level playing field between American and foreign companies and workers, while protecting American jobs and the U.S. tax base. While we have debated the pro-growth benefits of border adjustability, we appreciate that there are many unknowns associated with it and have decided to set this policy aside in order to advance tax reform.

"Given our shared sense of purpose, the time has arrived for the two tax-writing committees to develop and draft legislation that will result in the first comprehensive tax reform in a generation. It will be the responsibility of the members of those committees to produce legislation that achieves the goals shared broadly within Congress, the Administration, and by citizens who have been burdened for too long by an outdated tax system. Our expectation is for this legislation to move through the committees this fall, under regular order, followed by consideration on the House and Senate floors. As the committees work toward this end, our hope is that our friends on the other side of the aisle will participate in this effort. The President fully supports these principles and is committed to this approach. American families are counting on us to deliver historic tax reform. And we will."

FDA REAUTHORIZATION BILL

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today, the Senate passed the Food and Drug Administration Reauthorization Act of 2017, FDARA, to reauthorize user fees and other programs at the FDA to ensure that new, safe, and effective treatments get to patients in need as quickly as possible to save lives and greatly increase quality of life. While I have long preferred that Congress appropriate funding to the FDA for this purpose to avoid any conflicts of interest, I have supported user fee bills and will do so again today, as it represents a bipartisan pathway for timely drug approvals. I am pleased that this legislation increases the amount of funding that drug and device companies will contribute to the approval process. However, I am disappointed that this legislation does not address drug pricing in a comprehensive way, as I have long advocated. I will continue to work with my colleagues to press for Senate action on this critical issue.

FDARA includes a number of key provisions I worked on to improve the pipeline for new pediatric drugs and devices. In particular, this legislation will reauthorize funding for critical pediatric programs such as pediatric clinical trials at the National Institutes of Health and the Pediatric Device Consortia grants under the FDA. In addition, this legislation will spur more pediatric drug development because of critical reforms to require drug companies to begin consideration of pediatric studies earlier in the drug development process. FDARA also takes important steps to spur drug development for and better consideration of the needs of neonates, recognizing that treatments for infants must be considered differently than for teenagers.

Having worked for many years to improve access to care for children with cancer and childhood cancer survivors, I am also pleased to support the bill's new requirements for more pediatric studies on treatments for cancer. These provisions are designed to spur new and better treatments for children suffering from cancer. However, I believe that we should be making these changes to support new treatments for all diseases impacting children, not just those with cancer. While we were unable to go that far in this bill, we were able to add a study of this issue.

I look forward to seeing the results and working with my colleagues to expand these requirements in subsequent legislation. I am also concerned that this legislation does nothing to limit the ability of drug companies to benefit from exemptions from current pediatric study requirements. I filed an amendment to FDARA to close the most egregious of these loopholes in which a drug company can technically be exempted from pediatric study requirements because the treatment would only be used for a rare pediatric condition. I would hope that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle could agree that this loophole must be closed.

FDARA is an important step forward and an example of strong bipartisan health legislation in this Congress. I hope that we can continue this work, and not return to the partisan efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act that occupied this body for much of the year.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I am pleased the Senate advanced H.R. 2430, the FDA Reauthorization Act. This bipartisan, bicameral legislation ensures Americans will continue to have access to safe medications and the FDA has the tools they need to continue our Nation's approval process remains the gold standard. I am also pleased to see tropical disease priority review voucher state that a sponsor qualifies for a neglected tropical disease priority review voucher under existing law until September 30, 2017, so long as they submit at least one portion of a human drug application by that date.

I would like to ask Senator ISAKSON if it is our intention to allow for sponsors who have been working in good faith with the Food and Drug Administration on a human drug application for a product that addresses a neglected tropical disease to qualify for a priority review voucher, as long as they begin a rolling submission to the agency by September 30, 2017?

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. President, as my colleague Senator MENENDEZ indicated, the intent of the language in the FDA Reauthorization Act is this: so long as the submission process for a given product is begun by the sponsor on or before September 30, 2017, the product would qualify for a priority review voucher under the neglected tropical disease priority review voucher program.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I thank my colleague, Senator ISAKSON, for clarifying the language. It is important to provide this clarity to ensure products, for which at least one portion of the application is submitted in accordance with Section 506(d) of the Food, Drug & Cosmetic Act by September 30, 2017, qualify for the vouchers under current law.

CONFIRMATION OF MARVIN KAPLAN

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. President, I voted in opposition to the nomination of Marvin Kaplan to the National Labor Relations Board, NLRB. The NLRB has an important responsibility to resolve labor disputes, protect worker rights, and ensure fair access to collective bargaining. Mr. Kaplan does not have experience arguing the law before the NLRB; rather, he has a history of working to erode its authority to protect the workforce.

As a staffer on the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, Mr. Kaplan has worked on legislation to overturn key NLRB decisions and delay and distort the union election process. He has provided no assurance that he would recuse himself from issues pertaining to his prior work that might lead to bias. Throughout his career, he has pursued policies that would undermine worker protections. He should not be appointed to a board that is charged with safeguarding them.

President Trump has repeatedly promised to put the American worker first. The NLRB has a key role to ensure a fair deal for workers. It is unfortunate that the President's nominees for the Board have not demonstrated a commitment to that mission.

227TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE UNITED STATES COAST GUARD

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, on August 4, the U.S. Coast Guard will celebrate its 227th anniversary. On this special occasion, I want to commend the men and women of the Coast Guard for their valiant service on, under, and over our Nation's high seas and waters.

They have a proud history.

Most Americans know the Coast Guard for its orange and white helicopters, fast small boats, cutters, and rescue swimmers, but they probably don't know that the Coast Guard is one of our country's oldest institutions of the U.S. Government.

On August 4, 1790, President George Washington signed the Tariff Act, authorizing construction of the first 10 cutters of what would eventually become the Coast Guard. They were known as the revenue cutters, and their original mission was to enforce tariffs and trade laws and to prevent smuggling. For more than a hundred years, the cutters and their crew operated under the names Revenue Marine Service and the Revenue Cutter Service. Not until 1915, when Congress merged the Revenue Cutter Service and the U.S. Life-Saving Service, did the Coast Guard get its name.

Over time, the Coast Guard has become synonymous with saving those in peril on the sea. Their wide red bar and narrow blue bar, canted at 64 degrees, will always be a sign of assistance to mariners in danger.

Today, in times of peace, the Coast Guard operates as a part of the Department of Homeland Security, performing its 11 critical, statutory missions.

Right now, there are courageous young men and women aboard buoy tenders and icebreakers, ensuring our waterways remain open for commerce. Fast response cutters patrol the seas, enforcing the law and conducting search-and-rescue missions. Small boat stations enforce our laws while educating the public on safe-boating practices. As a ready and capable partner to a multitude of Federal, State, and local agencies, the Coast Guard does so much more, from responding to oil spills to combating drug trafficking.

In times of war or at the direction of the President, the Coast Guard valiantly serves as part of the Navy Department.

As you can see, the Coast Guard is a small but mighty organization. As ranking member of the Commerce Committee, I have had the privilege to meet many of the men and women of our Coast Guard and see their valuable work firsthand.

Through all the passing decades, some things about the Coast Guard have always been the same: the service's proud tradition and the skill and professionalism of its men and women whose sacrifices contribute to protecting our national security. The Coast Guard's core values of honor, respect, and devotion to duty are evident in everything it does. As the Coast Guard motto says, Semper Paratus, it is always ready for the call.

I want to congratulate and express our sincere gratitude to the men and women of the Coast Guard on 227 outstanding years of exemplary service to our Nation.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE 88TH REGIONAL SUPPORT COMMAND

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the 100th anniversary of the 88th Regional Support Command. I am humbled to recognize the men and women who are bravely fighting for our country's freedom.

The 88th Regional Support Command, RSC, began as the 88th Infantry Division, ID. Organized in August 1917 at Camp Dodge, IA, the members of the "Cloverleaf Division" fought among the Allied Forces in the Alsace Campaign. They returned home following the war, and the Army demobilized the unit in June 1919.

Three years later, the 88th reformed within the Organized Reserve, with headquarters in Minneapolis and subordinate units elsewhere in Minnesota, Iowa, and North Dakota. The 88th ID mobilized in 1942 to serve the United States in World War II. It was one of the first units comprised solely of drafted soldiers. Despite a lack of experience, the 88th quickly gained a reputation as an effective unit of well-trained soldiers, which the Germans referred to as the "Blue Devils."

The 88th ID fought on the front lines during the 1944 Italian campaign. Its arrival provided much-needed relief to the allied soldiers fighting on the Italian front. Led by Major General John E. Sloan, the 88th was the first division to enter the newly liberated Rome. After 100 straight days of activation, the Blue Devils were finally scheduled to receive a much-needed respite from the war. However, MG Sloan quickly instituted a training regimen that kept his soldiers in fighting condition, and they were ordered to head north to combat the Germans and provide support for American soldiers in Northern Italy.

For 344 days, the 88th Infantry fought to protect our American values during World War II. At the beginning of the war, MG Sloan promised, "the glory of the colors will never be sullied, as long as one man of the 88th still lives." Although many lives were lost, the 88th Infantry Division was deactivated in October 1947, having fulfilled MG Sloan's promise.

In April 1996, the 88th ID was redesignated as the 88th RSC. Headquartered in Fort McCoy, WI, the 88th RSC provides logistical and administrative support for Army Reserve soldiers. Whether they are providing training logistics, equipment maintenance or medical support, the members of the 88th RSC are making a difference for servicemen and servicewomen from Wisconsin all the way to the Pacific Coast.

Today the 88th ID lives on through the 88th Regional Support Command. Having fought in the Vietnam war, Operation Desert Shield/Storm, Bosnia, Kosovo, Operation Enduring Freedom, and Operation Iraqi Freedom, the soldiers of the 88th RSC continue to support the more than 55,000 U.S. Army Reserve soldiers, families, and civilians across the United States. I am proud to recognize 100 years of their remarkable service and accomplishments.

REMEMBERING RICHARD DUDMAN

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, Richard Dudman, one of our Nation's most esteemed journalists, passed away at his Maine home last night. I rise today in tribute to a great American reporter and engaged citizen.

After serving in the Merchant Marine and U.S. Navy Reserve during World War II, Mr. Dudman began his journalism career at the Denver Post in 1945 and joined the St. Louis Post-Dispatch 4 years later. In his more than three decades at the Post-Dispatch, he covered Fidel Castro's Cuban revolution, the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the Bay of Pigs invasion, the Watergate and Iran-Contra scandals, as well as armed conflicts from the Middle East and Asia to Central and South America.

In 1970, while covering the Vietnam war, Mr. Dudman was captured by the Viet Cong and held prisoner in Cambodia, a harrowing experience he wrote about in his acclaimed book, "Forty Days With the Enemy." In 1981, on his last day as Washington bureau chief for the Post-Dispatch, he ran up Connecticut Avenue to cover the attempted assassination of President Ronald Reagan. For some of the most momentous events of the second half of the 20th Century, Richard Dudman wrote the first draft of history.

After retiring and moving to Ellsworth and Little Cranberry Island in Maine, Mr. Dudman continued to contribute to the Post-Dispatch and wrote more than 1,000 editorials for the Bangor Daily News. Among his many accolades are the prestigious George Polk Career Award in Journalism and induction into the Maine Press Association Hall of Fame.

Mr. Dudman combined his journalistic professionalism with a spirit of serving others. In 2014, he and his wife, Helen, were presented with the Golden Eagle Award from the Boy Scouts of America for their commitment to community service, a quality that ran through their remarkable 69 years of marriage.

In this time of sorrow, I offer my deep condolences to Helen and their family. I hope they will find comfort in Richard's inspiring legacy and in a life well-lived. It has been said that we all have a birth date and a death date, with a dash in between. It is what we do with our dash that counts. Richard Dudman's dash was extraordinarily long, and he made it count. He filled it with passion, professionalism, and dedication. May his memory inspire us all to do the same.

TRIBUTE TO CHIEF MASTER SERGEANT ROBERT "TREY" WALKER

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize and congratulate a tremendous airman, CMSgt Robert "Trey" Walker, on his recent promotion to the highest enlisted rank within the U.S. Air Force, effective August 1, 2017. Selection for chief master sergeant is extremely competitive, as only 1 percent of the Air Force's entire enlisted population may hold the pay grade of E-9 at any time. Chief Walker clearly epitomizes the finest qualities of a military leader, as evidenced by his distinguished career and elevation to the highest enlisted level of leadership within the Air Force.

Chief Master Sergeant Walker entered the U.S. Air Force on September 11, 1996, as a voice network systems specialist and was later selected for retraining into the field of imagery intelligence. Chief Walker's honorable service has spanned numerous overseas and stateside assignments including four European countries, two States, and the Nation's Capital. He has also completed several deployments in support of Operations Desert Fox, Northern Watch, and Enduring Freedom. Chief Walker currently serves as the deputy chief of strategic basing and force structure in the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force's legislative liaison directorate.

Chief Master Sergeant Walker has chosen to repeatedly lead his airmen by example. Despite years of challenging work schedules and countless military obligations, Chief Walker elected to make his education a priority. Since 2005, he has earned two associate degrees, a bachelor's degree, two master's degrees, and a graduate-level certificate. Furthermore, Chief Walker's outstanding performance has garnered numerous accolades, including the 548th ISR Group's Lance P. Sijan Leadership Award, the Non-commissioned Officer Academy's Distinguished Graduate Award, the Senior Noncommissioned Officer Academy's Distinguished Graduate Award and Academic Achievement Award.

As a true testament to Chief Master Sergeant Walker's exceptional career, he was selected to represent the U.S. Air Force on Capitol Hill as its sole enlisted legislative fellow in 2016. I was fortunate to have Chief Walker spend the year in my office as an integral part of Team BOOZMAN and was pleased with his professionalism, character, and devotion to duty. His tireless efforts were critical to the passage and implementation of Public Law 144-292, the Combat-Injured Veterans Tax Fairness Act of 2016. Moreover, Chief Walker led a bipartisan effort to protect the Defense Department's basic allowance for housing by educating 18 Senators on the impact for military members. Finally, he played a key role in the successful execution of the Senate Air Force Caucus agenda by increasing service engagement opportunities with Members of Congress.

Chief Walker, congratulations on your well-deserved promotion and successful career thus far. I am so proud of your many accomplishments and wish the very best for you and your family in the future.

REMEMBERING RICHARD "DICK" GORDON, JR.

● Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the life and legacy of Arkansas World War II veteran and civic activist Richard "Dick" Gordon, Jr., who recently passed away.

Dick dedicated his life to regional conservation and civic issues. He encouraged involvement in local government and leaves behind a legacy as a respected community leader.

His father, Colonel Richard Gordon, Sr., a decorated WWI and WWII veteran, set an example that his son followed. During World War II, the younger Gordon served as second lieutenant in the Army's 13th Field artillery unit, 24th Infantry Division, and earned recognition for his service to our country.

As a community leader in the Fort Smith area, Dick made a big impact on numerous agencies and projects. He championed veterans' issues and helped address public school issues with the help of the parent teacher association. He formed the public awareness committee in Fort Smith, which allowed residents to interact more with government officials.

Dick helped develop a bird sanctuary in conjunction with the Audubon Society earning him the nickname "The Bird Man."

Additionally, Dick was active in the Fort Smith Parks and Recreation Department and the U.S. Forest Service. He used these platforms to help bring environmental consciousness to Arkansas.

His civic involvement and willingness to help the community made Dick a well-respected community leader, even though he never held elected office. Then-Fort Smith Mayor Bill Vines made Dick an honorary city director.

My thoughts and prayers are with his family and friends as they mourn his loss, but I know that they are also incredibly proud of the legacy that Dick leaves behind.●

TRIBUTE TO SPENCER M. HOULDIN

● Mr. MURPHY. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize Spencer M. Houldin of Roxbury, CT, as he nears the end of his term as the 112th chairman of the Independent Insurance Agents & Brokers of America, also known as the Big I. Spencer was installed as chairman of the Big I in September 2016, becoming the youngest person to serve as chairman in the association's 120-year history. Throughout his term, even when he and I disagreed, Spencer was always a thoughtful and dedicated advocate for independent insurance agents.

Prior to becoming the chairman, Spencer often served as a leader in the independent agency system. He chaired the Big I national Government Affairs Committee in 2009 and served as the president of the Connecticut Big I association in 2004. In these leadership positions, Spencer consistently promoted an environment where independent agents, in both Connecticut and across the country, could both thrive in their business and represent their customers with the highest quality of care.

Spencer has consistently served his community in Connecticut. He resides in Roxbury, CT, with his wife, Carol, and two sons, Chandler and Carter. Spencer is president of Ericson Insurance Services in Washington Depot, CT, where he has 25 years of experience as a personal insurance advisor, working alongside his brother Peter. He currently sits on the board of the Western Connecticut Health Network, which is comprised of Danbury Hospital, Norwalk Hospital, and New Milford Hospital. He has been involved with the health network in various capacities over the past 20 years. He recently co-chaired a $72 million capital campaign for Danbury and New Milford Hospitals. In July 2017, Litchfield Magazine named Spencer one of Litchfield County, Connecticut's 25 most influential people.

Today, I am pleased to join Spencer's colleagues from across Connecticut and the Nation in congratulating him as he finishes his term as chairman of the Big I.●

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MINNESOTA-DAKOTAS KIWANIS DISTRICT CONVENTION

● Mr. ROUNDS. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize the 100th anniversary of the Minnesota-Dakotas Kiwanis District Convention.

Founded in 1915, Kiwanis International is a global organization of volunteers dedicated to serving the children of the world. With a motto of "One Child and one Community at a time," Kiwanis members dedicate more than 18 million volunteer hours and invest more than $107 million in projects that strengthen communities and serve children. These projects include helping shelter the homeless, feeding the hungry, mentoring the disadvantaged, caring for the sick, developing the youth as leaders, building playgrounds, raising funds for pediatric research, and much more.

Today the Minnesota-Dakotas District of Kiwanis has over 4,000 members. With a club slogan of "Serving the children of the World," the chapter supports a range of programs, including Kiwanis Kids—elementary students—Builder's Club—middle school students—Key Club—high school students—and Circle K—college students. In addition, the chapter supports Aktion clubs for adults with disabilities. These programs allow our youth and adults to build character, leadership skills and learn more about themselves and their communities.

I congratulate the Kiwanis International Minnesota-Dakotas District of Kiwanis International on their 100th convention and thank them for their leadership and dedication to children and to their communities. May they continue to thrive for the 100 years to come.●

REMEMBERING ELIJAH "YOCKIE" DELEE

● Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, today I would like to take a moment to recognize and honor the life of a great South Carolinian and American veteran, Mr. Elijah "Yockie" DeLee, who departed this life on July 20, 2017.

Elijah was a lifelong resident of Dorchester County, SC, where he worked tirelessly as a beloved deacon at Surprise Baptist Church. He was drafted into the Vietnam war shortly after graduating high school and showed perseverance until he was honorably discharged. He possessed an entrepreneurial spirit and followed his passion for drag racing to help open South Carolina's first minority-owned dragway: Dorchester Dragway. He continued his business endeavors with the opening of DeLee One Trucking Company, still a staple in Dorchester today. In success, Elijah always exemplified respect, humility, and generosity.

For many in Dorchester, he will be remembered for his relentless spirit, tenacity for life, and heart for people. He never met a stranger and was always eager to lend a helping hand. Yockie loved and adored his family, and next to God and his faith, they were always his top priority in life. He was a true provider, mediator, demonstrator, and imitator of Godly character. He will surely be missed among family, friends, and the community of Dorchester as a great American and South Carolinian.●

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF NEW LIGHT BEULAH BAPTIST CHURCH

● Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate and honor New Light Beulah Baptist Church in Hopkins, SC, for their 150th anniversary, which will be celebrated on August 11 to 13, 2017.

New Light Beulah Baptist Church was established in 1867 when 665 African-American members of Beulah Baptist Church chose to separate from the White members and began independent rule. Despite the sanctuary burning to the ground in 1916, the church thrived and expanded. Since then, several other churches have been formed out of New Light Beulah Baptist. In 2015, the members accepted Dr. Malcolm Taylor as their pastor, and over 360 members call New Light Beulah their place of worship today.

In August 2017, New Light Beulah Baptist Church will be the first African-American church in the lower Richland community to be registered in the National Register of Historic Places. The church has remained committed to its mission, and I encourage all South Carolinians to recognize the rich history of the church and its contribution to the Palmetto State. I acknowledge and celebrate the church's 150 years of independence as a congregation faithfully serving their community.●

REMEMBERING HORACE MERRILL

• Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the life of Horace Sellers Merrill of Micaville, AL, who passed away on February 17, 2017. He will be remembered as a dedicated public servant who worked faithfully for the citizens of Alabama. He was committed to bettering his community and State through his public service and involvement in the community.

Mr. Merrill began a career with the Dixie Mines Mica Mining Company in the late 1950s before entering Alabama politics. In 1964, he was elected circuit clerk of Cleburne County, a position he held for 12 years. Following his term as circuit clerk, Mr. Merrill was elected probate judge and chairman of the Cleburne County Commission, where he served for 6 years.

Mr. Merrill will be remembered for his leadership in completing the Alabama welcome center and rest area on Interstate 20, as well as his efforts to utilize the Dyne Creek watershed to service the citizens of Cleburne County with a countywide water system.

Outside of his professional career, Mr. Merrill was a very active member of his community. He served as president of the Lions Club, the Jaycees, and the local Athletics Boosters Club. In his earlier years, Mr. Merrill was an accomplished athlete. He lettered in both baseball and football and then attended Southern Union Junior College on an athletic scholarship. He later served as the announcer for Little League and junior high football games in Cleburne County and helped organize the first youth baseball program in Heflin.

Additionally, Mr. Merrill was a longtime member in the Cleburne Baptist Association, serving as an officer and pastor of several churches. A member of Heflin Baptist Church for more than 50 years, Mr. Merrill served as a deacon, a Sunday school teacher, Sunday school superintendent, church training director, and sanctuary choir member.

Horace's many accomplishments and contributions to the State of Alabama will long be remembered. He touched the lives of many over the years, and he will be greatly missed.

I offer my deepest condolences to Horace's wife, Mary, and to all of their loved ones as they celebrate his life and mourn this great loss.●

RECOGNIZING THE NORTHWEST MONTANA CHAPTER OF VIETNAM VETERANS OF AMERICA

• Mr. TESTER. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the Vietnam Veterans of America and the work Mr. John Burgess and the local Flathead Valley chapter has done on behalf of his fellow veterans of the Vietnam war.

During that war, more than 2.5 million Americans fought bravely in service to their country. While more than 58,000 of those men and women gave the ultimate sacrifice, many more endured and are still here with us today. However, it has not been an easy road for these veterans. For far too long, veterans of the Vietnam war have received neither the recognition nor the benefits that they truly deserved.

As ranking member of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, it has been my honor to fight for legislation that rectifies this oversight like the Blue Water Navy Vietnam Veterans Act that would allow veterans who served in the waters offshore during the Vietnam war to also be eligible for service-connected disability benefits as a result of agent orange exposure. I have also proudly sponsored the Toxic Exposure Research Act which increases research into the health conditions of descendants of veterans who were exposed to toxins during their military service, particularly those exposed to the herbicide agent orange during the Vietnam war.

Honoring these veterans takes more than just legislation; it takes dedicated people who are committed to telling their stories and honoring those who have served. The local northwest Montana chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America in the Flathead Valley, which now has more than 100 members, has been an important partner working to ensure veterans who fought in the Vietnam war are receiving the care, honor, and distinction they have earned.

The Vietnam Veterans of America has become an invaluable part of the community, hosting bingo events at the Montana veterans home, providing residents and staff with an annual picnic, helping with many ceremonies, and working with the Flathead Valley Community College Veterans with a scholarship for veteran students.

John Burgess and the northwest Montana chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America are carrying on this legacy of service September 7 to 10 with the arrival of the traveling Vietnam veterans memorial wall in Kalispell. Through "Bringing the Wall that Heals," countless Vietnam veterans and their families will be presented with an opportunity to find peace and closure while honoring those we have lost in service. This special event helps mark the 35th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

On Veterans Day of 1996, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund unveiled a half-scale replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, DC, designed to travel to communities throughout the United States. Since its dedication, the "Wall That Heals" has visited more than 400 cities and towns throughout the Nation, spreading the memorial's healing legacy to millions.

To John, the northwest Montana chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America and all those who dedicated their lives to this country in service, on behalf of myself, Montana, and our Nation, I extend my greatest thanks for your enduring bravery, service, and self-sacrifice.●

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE S. HAERLE

• Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize, with the highest respect, the service and life of George Shepard Haerle for his dedication to serving Indiana and the Nora Community Council, NCC. Over the course of NCC's 50-year history, George has volunteered 47 years of his own to leave an indelible mark on the Nora community. The great State of Indiana is proud of and ever thankful for George's distinguished commitment and exemplary service.

Since its founding, the Nora Community Council has covered 12 square miles with 25,000 to 28,000 Hoosier residents, including 60 local neighborhoods under the civic umbrella. As a chairman of the NCC, George commits hundreds of hours each year to promote growth, development, and the general welfare of the Nora community.

George Haerle's renowned service was rightfully recognized on July 29, 2017, when Governor Eric Holcomb bestowed upon him Indiana's most prestigious designation, a Sagamore of the Wabash. George follows in the footsteps of his father, Rudolf K. Haerle, who was also recognized as a Sagamore of the Wabash for his contributions to the State as the first president of the Civil War Round Table and a former longtime member of the Library Board of the Indiana Historical Society.

George has not only been a role model for the NCC, but he has also been an outstanding advocate for the community of Nora-Northside. His remarkable service is exceeded only by his devotion to his amazing family, including 7 daughters, 1 son, and 18 grandchildren. On behalf of myself and all Hoosiers, for his selfless and lifelong commitment, George is worthy of the highest praise. I feel truly privileged to have him as a fellow and lifelong Hoosier.●

90TH ANNIVERSARY OF BOY SCOUT TROOP NO. 533

• Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, it is my great pleasure to pause and recognize the accomplishments of Boy Scout Troop No. 533 from my home State of Indiana. For the past 90 years, Boy Scout Troop No. 533 in Munster, IN, has been instilling the values of respect, honesty, and leadership in young Hoosiers that have had a lasting impact on our State. I am very proud of troop No. 533 for all of their service over the past 90 years and applaud their dedication to bettering their community.

Boy Scout Troop No. 533 was formed in 1927 by Munster native Mr. Muary

Kraay when he was in eighth grade. Since its founding, troop No. 533 has been active in their community. During World War II, the Boy Scouts organized parades and rallies for war bonds, planted community gardens, practiced blackout drills, and participated in wartime recycling programs. On June 14, 1947, when President Coolidge dedicated Wicker Park in Highland, IN, troop No. 533 was there to welcome him. The Boy Scouts also had a crucial role during the September 2008 flooding of the Little Calumet River. In anticipation of the flood, troop No. 533 assisted in filling sandbags, and after the flood, they assisted in yard cleanup and regravelling driveways. Over the past 90 years, Boy Scout Troop No. 533 has produced over 100 Eagle Scouts, one of the highest levels of honor a Boy Scout can achieve.

I would like to thank Boy Scout Troop No. 533 for their 90 years of outstanding public service. On behalf of all Hoosiers, congratulations on your 90th anniversary. ●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. TESTER, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. MANCHIN, Mr. DAINES, Ms. HARRIS, and Mr. BOOZMAN):

S. 1754. A bill to reauthorize section 340H of the Public Health Service Act to continue to encourage the expansion, maintenance, and establishment of approved graduate medical residency programs at qualified teaching health centers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, I rise today to introduce legislation with my colleague from Montana, Senator TESTER, that would extend an important program to fund Teaching Health Centers, which support the health and well-being of families in rural and medically underserved communities. I am pleased that Senators COCHRAN, MANCHIN, DAINES, HARRIS, and BOOZMAN, have joined us as cosponsors.

In the background of the health care debate, there is another crisis that looms. We are facing a severe shortage of doctors. By 2025, we will need more than 100,000 new primary care doctors to meet the growing demand for health care services across the Country. The shortage is especially critical in rural and underserved communities, which are often those that have been hit hardest by the opioid epidemic. The most significant shortages are in family medicine, general internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, psychiatry, and dentistry.

These shortages have reached crisis levels in many places. In clinics and health centers in Aroostook County, Maine's northernmost county where I grew up, I hear stories about vacancies forcing Mainers to travel many miles simply to see a primary care doctor or dentist.

For the past six years, one program, the Teaching Health Centers Graduate Medical Education Program, has worked to fill these gaps. This program helps to train medical residents in community-based settings, including low-income, underserved rural and urban neighborhoods. For example, since 2011, the Penobscot Community Health Care Center has trained 31 residents and served more than 15,000 dental patients in Bangor, Maine.

We need to meet people in the communities in which they live and work. This program is training the next generation of physicians, and has produced real results. When compared with traditional Medicare graduate medical education residents, those who train at teaching health centers are significantly more likely to practice primary care and remain in underserved or rural communities. The numbers speak for themselves: 82 percent of Teaching Health Center, or THC, residents choose to practice primary care, compared to 23 percent of traditional Medicare Graduate Medical Education residents; and 55 percent of THC residents choose to remain in underserved communities, compared to 26 percent of traditional Medicare GME residents.

Teaching health centers are serving Americans from coast to coast. A total of 742 THC residents are serving in 27 states and the District of Columbia. The program is competitive, and trains the best of the best. For each residency position, THC programs receive more than 100 applications. In 2017, THC residents and faculty will provide more than one million primary care medical visits to underserved communities.

Teaching Health Centers have demonstrated a record of success, and it is imperative that we support them. Our legislation would reauthorize the Teaching Health Centers Graduate Medical Education Program for three years. It would also allow new programs to expand within existing centers and the creation of entirely new teaching health centers.

This bill is widely supported by leading community health and physician organizations, including the American Association of Teaching Health Centers, National Association of Community Health Centers, American Academy of Family Physicians, American Association of Colleges of Osteopathic Medicine, American Osteopathic Association, American Council of OB/GYNs, Society of Teachers of Family Medicine, and Council of Academic Family Medicine. We have also received letters of support from teaching health centers in Maine, Montana, Tennessee, Iowa, Oklahoma, North Carolina, California, Mississippi, Pennsylvania, Washington, Texas, Connecticut, New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Idaho.

In the face of nationwide physician shortages, our legislation would provide a solution for communities today and a path forward to train the physicians of tomorrow. I urge all of my colleagues to join in support of this important legislation, the Training the Next Generation of Primary Care Doctors Act of 2017.

Ms. COLLINS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the letters be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PENOBSCOT COMMUNITY HEALTH CARE,
August 2, 2017.

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR COLLINS: On behalf of Penobscot Community Health Care's General Practice Dental Residency program, a Teaching Health Center training 3-6 residents a year (with over 28 residents trained since 2011) and serving 15,000 dental patients in Bangor, Maine, I want to express our appreciation for your relentless efforts to develop legislation to continue funding and expand the Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) program. We know that you and your staff have worked long and hard with multiple stakeholder organizations, including the American Association of Teaching Health Centers, to create the best possible legislation that will fund adequately this vital program for at least another three years and provide for expansion to additional medically underserved areas of our country.

THCs currently train more than 742 residents nationally and are providing more than a million patient visits in underserved rural and urban communities. The continuation of this program is vital in all of the communities they are located, and preserving this program is critical to the health of hundreds of thousands around the country. This investment of federal funding in the THCGME program, coupled with private, nonfederal resources, guarantees that every dollar is used exclusively for primary care training, all in community-based settings. Residents trained in community-based settings are three times more likely than traditionally trained residents to practice primary care in a community based setting ensuring that doctors trained in these settings remain in communities where they are needed most.

Penobscot Community Health Care appreciates your leadership on this important issue and is pleased to support your legislation, which is helping to address the doctor and dentist shortage that plagues so many communities, both urban and rural. You have always championed Community Health Centers, and concurrently Teaching Health Centers, recognizing the need for accessible, affordable health care for all no matter if you live in Caribou, Maine or New York City.

Thank you for your tireless efforts and leadership in the United States Senate as you strive to preserve and improve health care for all Americans.

Sincerely,
KENNETH SCHMIDT, MPA,
President and CEO.

RESURRECTION FAMILY MEDICINE,
Memphis, TN, August 1, 2017.
Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR COLLINS: On behalf of Resurrection Health Family Medicine Residency, a Teaching Health Center training 25 residents and providing 15,000 patient visits per year in Memphis, TN, I write to express our appreciation for your relentless efforts to develop legislation to continue funding and expand the Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) program. We know that you and your staff have worked long and hard with multiple stakeholder organizations, including the American Association of Teaching Health Centers, to create the best possible legislation that will fund adequately this vital program for at least another three years and provide for expansion to additional medically underserved areas of our country.

THCs currently train more than 742 residents nationally and are providing more than a million patient visits in underserved rural and urban communities. The continuation of this program is vital in all of the communities they are located and preserving this program is critical to the health of hundreds of thousands around the country. This investment of federal funding in the THCGME program, coupled with private, nonfederal resources, guarantees that every dollar is used exclusively for primary care training, all in community-based settings. Residents trained in community-based settings are three times more likely than traditionally trained residents to practice primary care in a community based setting ensuring that doctors trained in these settings remain in communities, where they are needed most.

Resurrection Health Family Medicine Residency appreciates your leadership on this important issue and is pleased to support your legislation, which is helping to address the doctor shortage that plagues so many communities, both urban and rural.

THE AMERICAN CONGRESS OF OBSTETRICIANS AND GYNECOLOGISTS,
Washington, DC, August 3, 2017.

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

Hon. JON TESTER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS COLLINS AND TESTER: The American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG), with more than 58,000 physicians and partners dedicated to advancing women's health, is pleased to endorse the Training the Next Generation of Primary Care Doctors Act of 2017. Your bill would help improve access for women in rural and underserved areas to timely, high quality health care by training primary care physicians, including obstetrician-gynecologists.

Today, women living in half of all US counties are in areas without an ob-gyn, including one of Maine's 16 counties, and 35 of Montana's 56 counties. Furthermore, the ob-gyn workforce is aging and a large number of ob-gyns are retiring at a time when the female population is expected to increase 36% by 2050. ACOG projects an ob-gyn shortage of 18% by 2030.

Your bill will help alleviate these workforce challenges by ensuring the Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) program can continue to train ob-gyns and other primary care physicians in an efficient and effective manner. Community-based THCGME medical training programs are critical to filling workforce shortages, as physicians trained through this program are more likely to practice in underserved communities. According to the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), primary care residents trained in community-based settings are three times more likely to practice in an underserved community-based setting. An investment in THCGME to improve access to care in rural and underserved communities has a long-term impact positive impact.

Thank you for introducing this legislation to improve access to high quality care for women. Should you have any questions or if we can be of assistance in any way, please contact Mallory Schwarz, ACOG Federal Affairs Manager.

Sincerely,

HAYWOOD L. BROWN, MD, FACOG,
President.

AMERICAN OSTEOPATHIC ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, August 3, 2017.

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

Hon. JON TESTER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS COLLINS AND TESTER: On behalf of the American Osteopathic Association (AOA) and the nearly 130,000 osteopathic physicians and osteopathic medical students we represent, thank you for introducing the "Training the Next Generation of Primary Care Doctors Act of 2017." This important bipartisan legislation renews the commitment to the continued development of the Teaching Health Centers Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) program to help ensure a robust primary care workforce in our nation's rural and underserved communities. We are grateful for your leadership on this critical issue.

The THCGME program is a vital source of training for primary care residents to help expand access to care in rural and underserved communities throughout the country. These programs, located in 59 teaching health centers in 27 states, currently train 742 residents in much-needed primary care fields including family medicine, internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, psychiatry, geriatrics, and dentistry. The majority of these programs are accredited by the AOA or are dually accredited (DO/MD) programs, supporting nearly 800 osteopathic resident physicians through their training since the program began. And true to the intent of the THCGME program, residents who train in these programs are far more likely to practice primary care and remain in the communities in which they have trained.

As osteopathic physicians, we are trained in a patient-centered, hands-on approach to care that focuses on the whole person, including the physical, mental, and psychosocial aspects of health. Our training and philosophy includes a strong emphasis on primary care—in fact, approximately half of all osteopathic physicians practice in primary care specialties. Given this strong presence in primary care, osteopathic medicine aligns naturally with the mission and goals of the THCGME program that has proven successful in helping address the existing gaps in our nation's primary care workforce.

Your legislation provides much-needed stability through continued funding for the THCGME program, and also creates a pathway for the expansion of existing centers as well as the creation of entirely new teaching health centers. We deeply appreciate your commitment to training the future of the primary care workforce and thank you for introducing this important legislation. The AOA and our members stand ready to assist you in securing its enactment into law.

Sincerely,

MARK A. BAKER, DO,
President.

COUNCIL OF ACADEMIC
FAMILY MEDICINE,
Washington, DC, August 3, 2017.

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

Hon. JON TESTER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS COLLINS AND TESTER: On behalf of the Council of Academic Family Medicine (CAFM), including the Society of Teachers of Family Medicine, Association of Departments of Family Medicine, Association of Family Medicine Residency Directors, the North American Primary Care Research Group, we thank you for introducing the Training the Next Generation of Primary Care Doctors Act of 2017. This legislation is an important step to providing sustainable funding and growth for a critical program that helps address the primary care physician shortage in our country. We appreciate your leadership on this issue and give you our whole-hearted support for the legislation.

To help sustain this important program the proposed legislation provides suitable funding for current Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) programs to help address the crisis-level shortage of primary care physicians. The funding level included in the bill will allow for a per resident amount to be paid for training that is on par with the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) funded study identifying a median cost of approximately $157 thousand per trainee. Evidence shows that the THC program graduates are more likely to practice in rural and medically underserved communities. We are pleased that the proposed legislation supports ten new THC programs, with a priority for those serving rural and medically underserved populations and areas, recognizing the importance of growing this successful program.

The Council on Graduate Medical Education (COGME), an advisory body empaneled by Congress, has urged Congress to continue of the THCGME program stating that "THCGME programs deliver excellent value in physician training," and that the program encourages training in "delivery systems that emphasize team-based care in Patient Centered Medical Homes that maximize quality at a moderate cost"; Additionally, the Institute of Medicine (IOM), [now National Academy of Medicine] in a 2014 report identified the THCGME program as helping meet the need for primary care physicians, especially those who provide care to underserved populations and worthy of a permanent funding source.

The current authorization for this vital program expires at the end of this fiscal year. Without legislative action, the expiration of this program would mean an exacerbation of the primary care physician shortage, and a lessening of support for training in underserved and rural areas. We are grateful to you both for your exceptional leadership in supporting and sustaining this vital program by introducing this bill and helping to shepherd it toward enactment.

The CAFM organizations and our members are pleased to work with you to secure this legislation's enactment.

Sincerely,

STEPHEN A WILSON, MD,
President, Society of Teachers of Family Medicine.

VALERIE GILCHRIST, MD, of Departments of Family Medicine.

KAREN B MITCHELL, MD,

RIVERSTONE HEALTH,
Billings, MT, August 2, 2017.

Hon. SUSAN COLLINS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR COLLINS: On behalf of the Montana Family Medicine Residency and RiverStone Health Clinic, one of the nation's original eleven teaching health centers training 24 family medicine residents and serving over 15,000 residents or Yellowstone and Carbon County, NIT, I want to express our appreciation for your relentless efforts to develop legislation to continue funding and expand the Teaching Health Center Graduate Medical Education (THCGME) program. We know that you and your staff have worked long and hard with multiple stakeholder organizations, including the American Association of Teaching Health Centers and the National Association of Community Health Centers, to create the best possible legislation that will fund adequately this vital program for at least another three years and provide for expansion to additional medically underserved areas of our country.

THCs currently train more than 742 residents nationally and are providing more than a million patient visits in underserved rural and urban communities. The continuation of this program is vital in all of the communities they are located and preserving this program is critical to the health of hundreds of thousands around the country, particularly those who lack access to healthcare absent their local community health center and its providers. This investment of federal funding in the THCGME program, coupled with private, nonfederal resources, guarantees that every dollar is used exclusively for primary care training, all in community-based settings.

Residents trained in community-based settings are three times more likely than traditionally trained residents to practice primary care in a community based setting ensuring that doctors trained in these settings remain in communities where they are needed most. Some 70% of our residency's over 100 graduates practice in MT, a state with widespread provider shortage areas and multiple counties with no medical care provider at all.

RiverStone Health and Montana Family Medicine Residency appreciate your leadership on this important issue and are pleased to support your legislation, which is helping to address the doctor shortage that plagues so many communities, both urban and rural.

Sincerely,

JOHN FELTON, MPH, MBA, FACHE, President & CEO / Health Officer.
