SUMMARY

The Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997 includes two Divisions. Division A of the legislation amends, consolidates and improves existing programs established under the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), the Adult Education Act, and the Wagner-Peyser Act. Overall, H.R. 1385, the "Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997" consolidates over 60 existing employment, training, and literacy programs through the establishment of three block grants to States and localities, and through amendments to the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

Division A consists of ten separate titles as outlined below:

TITLE I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Title I includes significant reform of the current JTPA State and local delivery structure as well as its fiscal and performance accountability provisions, and provides greater authority to States and localities in the design and operation of their individual employment, training and literacy systems. Under the new provisions, Governors would establish a collaborative process including representatives of the State legislature, key State agency heads, and leaders from business, local officials, education and training experts, representatives of employees, and others, to develop a single State plan for the three block grants authorized under this Act and for programs authorized under the Wagner-Peyser Act, and a performance measurement system for the three block grants.

The collaborative process would also be used to carry out other duties including designation of local workforce development areas, development of criteria for appointment of local workforce development boards, and development of criteria for the Statewide full-service employment and training delivery system.

Title I also includes provisions for the establishment of Workforce Development Boards, replacing the current Private Industry Councils (PICs) under JTPA. Unlike PICs these business-led boards would generally not run programs but instead provide policy guidance and oversight over local systems and would be responsible for the establishment of local full service employment and training delivery systems-easily accessible single points of entry into the employment and training system. Locally elected officials would continue to play an important role in the development and implementation of the local system.

In addition, this title includes provisions for the selection of service providers eligible to provide training services under the Adult Employment and Training Block Grant and also includes numerous amendments to the general programmatic and fiscal provisions under title I of JTPA.

TITLE II—DISADVANTAGED YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES GRANT

Title II of the bill would amend JTPA by merging the existing summer youth employment and year-round training programs for Disadvantaged Youth into a single Disadvantaged Youth Employment and Training Opportunities block grant.

The bill maintains the current JTPA title II-C formula for the allotment of funds to the States. At the State level, the Governor may reserve up to 25 percent of the State allotment to carry out certain State level activities, including the provision of assistance to local areas with high concentrations of disadvantaged youth. From the amount reserved by the Governor, at least 10 percent of the State's allotment must be used to provide incentive grants to local communities for programs that serve school dropouts.

Under the bill, funds would be allocated to local areas based on a State-determined formula (developed through the collaborative process). Consistent with JTPA, the amended disadvantaged youth program would serve only economically disadvantaged youth age 16-21, except that as under current law, 10 percent of funds may be used to serve youth who are not economically disadvantaged, but who are determined to have substantial barriers to employment (and who fall in defined categories of "hard-to-serve" youth). The bill gives priority for services to individuals who, in addition to being economically disadvantaged, are determined to be hard to serve, including school dropouts.

Building on existing provisions within JTPA, the legislation outlines essential program elements for disadvantaged youth programs including: development of assessments and service strategies for participants; integration of academic, occupational, and work-based learning; provision of comprehensive guidance and counseling; provision of postsecondary education and training opportunities, where appropriate; involvement of employers and parents in the design and implementation of programs; and provision of adult mentoring. Authorized uses of funds include: direct training services; tutoring and study skills training; instruction leading to completion of high school or the equivalent; alternative high school services; paid and unpaid work experience, including summer employment opportunities, which are directly linked to academic, occupational, and work-based learning; mentoring; training-related supportive services; peer-centered activities encouraging responsibility and other positive social behaviors during non-school hours; and other training and transition services that assist disadvantaged youth make the transition to employment, as determined appropriate by the local area.

TITLE III—ADULT EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING GRANT

Title III of the bill amends JTPA by turning the current Dislocated Worker grant program and the Economically Disadvantaged Adult program (along with numerous other categorical training programs for adults) into a block grant for all adults. While a single employment and training system would be established through such consolidation, funding for dislocated workers would remain protected through a separate funding stream.

The federal-to-State formulas for allotment of funds to States would be based upon current law, with funds flowing to States based on the current title II-A (Disadvantaged Adults) and the title III (Dislocated Workers) formulas. Using up to 15 percent of funds allotted to the State from the adult funding stream, Governors may carry out incentive grant programs and other specified discretionary activities. Governors may use up to 30 percent of funds reserved under the dislocated worker funding allotment to provide rapid response, to provide additional assistance to local areas experiencing worker dislocation, and for other specified activities.

Funds under both the adult and dislocated worker funding streams, would be allocated to local workforce development areas based upon State-determined formulas developed through the collaborative process. Such funds would be available to local workforce development areas for the establishment of full-service employment and training delivery systems; and for the provision of core, intensive, and training services for adults and for dislocated workers, respectively.

Availability of training is based on a “work first” approach. Individuals who are unable to obtain initial employment, or employment that will lead to self-sufficiency, through the core services and who after an interview, evaluation, or assessment and counseling and have been determined to be in need of training services, may receive training. In addition, under the adult funding stream, priority for intensive and training services must be given to welfare recipients and other economically disadvantaged individuals with multiple barriers to employment.

Training services for adults must be provided through the use of skill grants distributed through the full-service employment and training delivery system. Exceptions to this requirement include: on-the-job training; situations where there is an insufficient number of qualified providers of training services in a local area; situations where there is an insufficient number of qualified providers of services for special participant populations in the local area; or where the local board decides to enter into a direct training contract with a community based organization. However, in all cases, training services under this title must be provided through service delivery methods that, to the extent practicable, maximize consumer choice in the selection of eligible providers of training services.

Title III also authorizes the Secretary of Labor to award national emergency grants to areas affected by major economic dislocations and disasters.

TITLE IV—AMENDMENTS TO FEDERALLY ADMINISTERED PROGRAMS

Title IV of the bill would amend current federal programs and national activities under JTPA—including: programs for Native Americans; programs for Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers; the Job Corps; national research, demonstration and evaluation authority; and labor market information. Under this title, certain programs are amended, while other unnecessary programs and statutory provisions are eliminated.

TITLE V—AMENDMENTS TO ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Title V consolidates several adult education and literacy programs into a single block grant to the States. Funds distributed to local adult education providers, through the States, are to be used to provide adult education and family literacy services to qualifying adults. The authorization for the National Institute for Literacy is contained under this Title. Title V also provides a framework to help ensure that adult education programs are closely aligned with federal job training programs.

TITLE VI—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Title VI includes repealers and conforming amendments.

TITLE VII—AMENDMENTS TO STATE HUMAN RESOURCE INVESTMENT COUNCIL

Title VII includes amendments to the State Human Resource Council, existing councils which States may choose to utilize in establishing a collaborative process.

TITLE VIII—AMENDMENTS TO WAGNER-PEYSER ACT

Title VIII includes amendments to the Wagner-Peyser Act, ensuring additional coordination with the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act.

TITLE IX—TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Title IX includes additional technical and conforming amendments.

TITLE X—EFFECTIVE DATE AND TRANSITION PROVISIONS

Title X includes an effective date of July 1, 1998, and transition provisions.

DIVISION B—VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION PROGRAMS

Division B amends the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, a major Federal law which provides rehabilitation and employment training to adults with disabilities. These amendments extend the Act's authorization for three years, repeal numerous unfunded programs, and make certain technical and other changes to the Act.

COMMITTEE VIEWS

For years, concerns have mounted regarding this nation's confusing array of job training and employment-assistance programs. In 1993, the U.S. General Accounting Office identified as many as 163 different Federal programs which offer some form of education, job training or employment assistance for youth and adults. In addition to the excessive number of Federal programs, the quality of U.S. training programs varies significantly. At a time when the skill requirements of the U.S. workforce are at an all-time high, this country can no longer tolerate such inefficiency.

After careful consideration of this issue, and comprehensive hearings over the past three years, the Committee has developed legislation to take an important step in addressing these concerns. H.R. 1385, the "Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997" consolidates over 60 existing employment, training, and literacy programs through the establishment of three block grants to States and localities, and through amendments to the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. However, in development of this legislation the Committee determined not to include K-12 school-based programs for consolidation or reform in this bill, which accounted for many of the programs identified by the GAO in its earlier reports.

The consolidation in H.R. 1385 eliminates unnecessary duplication and fragmentation within employment, training, and literacy programs, while providing States and localities with the necessary flexibility to design programs to meet the needs in their communities of disadvantaged youth, dislocated workers and other adults in need of employment and training assistance, and individuals with basic skills deficiencies. The bill is based upon three guiding principles for reform:

Individual choice:

Providing individuals with choice in the selection of employment options and training providers to meet their personal needs through vouchers (skill grants).

Quality training For the 21st century:

Establishing a level playing field, where the best providers of employment and training services, including private sector providers, are able to compete to provide services.

Providing up-to-date information on jobs that are available within local communities, the skills that are necessary for such jobs, and training opportunities within the community.

Involving employers in the design and implementation of employment and training programs to ensure they are relevant to the skill needs of business in the community.

Reforming the system by driving resources and authority to local communities:

Transferring responsibility for the design and implementation of programs to States and local communities.

Consolidating existing Federal job training programs—providing States and local communities easier access to funding for workforce development programs that best meet the needs of their individual States and localities.

Encouraging further program consolidation and integration at the State and local levels, by removing barriers in Federal statutes to such reforms.

Increasing ease of access to high quality employment, training, and adult education and literacy services.

These principles appear to be very consistent with those expressed by Utah's State Senator David Steele in testimony provided to the Committee at the February 11 hearing on reform of employment and training programs. At that hearing, Senator Steele, testifying on behalf of the National Conference of State Legislatures, described the features that are included in Utah's reform legislation and that he considered as essential in the reform of workforce programs—"These features include: a user friendly or customer driven design; regional workforce service councils; a provision for "one stop" services; a planning process that involved both the legislative and executive branches of State government; and a commitment to the continuous improvement of the system."

TITLE I—STATE AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Title I of the bill amends title I of the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) by replacing or significantly amending most of JTPA's delivery system provisions, such as its State planning and administrative authority, local service delivery system, performance accountability, and program and fiscal requirement provisions.

STATE PLAN AND COLLABORATIVE PROCESS PROVISIONS

The bill requires that Governors, through a collaborative process, bring representatives of the State legislature, all relevant State agencies that are responsible for employment, training and literacy programs, and representatives of business and industry, locally-elected officials (representing both cities and counties, where appropriate), local educational agencies (including adult education and literacy providers), postsecondary institutions (including community colleges), community based organizations, representatives of employees, parents, and others as appropriate, together to plan for development of the employment, training, and literacy systems in each State.

It is the intent of the Committee that the Governor and the State agency responsible for Adult Education and Literacy programs, along with the other individuals and entities involved in the collaborative process, develop a single State plan for all three block grants, and for programs authorized under the Wagner-Peyser Act, and a single performance measurement system for the three block grants. In addition, the Committee intends for the Governor, through the collaborative process, to set overall policy guidance and criteria for: the designation of workforce development areas; the selection of local workforce development boards; establishment of a statewide full service employment and training delivery system; development of substate formulas for driving program dollars to local communities under title II and title III of the bill; and the identification of eligible providers of training under the Adult Employment and Training program. This consolidation of administrative, planning, and reporting requirements, in addition to the consolidation of numerous Federal programs and funding streams, are expected to reduce significantly duplicative and costly planning, paperwork, and reporting requirements, resulting in a significant reduction in bureaucracy and in significant savings.

It is the intent of the Committee through title I of the legislation, to establish a necessary balance between States and local communities for the design and operation of employment, training, and literacy systems. Governors are given a great deal more flexibility and authority to provide policy guidance and to design integrated and innovative statewide efforts. Through an amendment offered by Mr. Schaffer and accepted during full committee consideration of the bill, State legislatures are required to appropriate all funds received by the State under titles II and III of this Act. Localities are provided with the flexibility and authority to design and to operate local programs that meet the employment, training, and literacy needs of their individual communities, consistent with the statewide policies set by the Governor through the collaborative process.

STATE PLAN

Title I of the bill requires a State that desires to receive a grant under titles II or III of this Act, under the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act, or under the Wagner-Peyser Act, to submit a single State plan for all such programs, to the Secretaries of Education and Labor, for consideration by the appropriate Secretary. Such State plan must include: a description of the collaborative process used in developing the plan; a statement of the long-term goals of the State employment, training, and literacy system, including the identification of performance benchmarks that the State will use to measure its progress in meeting such goals; identification of the local workforce development areas in the State, including a description of the process that was used in the designation of such areas; a description of the criteria to be used by local chief elected officials in the appointment of local workforce development boards; a description of the measures that will be taken by the State to ensure coordination and avoid duplication among programs receiving assistance under this Act, including a description of how the State will leverage funds received under this Act; a description of the process used by the State to provide an opportunity for public comment and input into the development of the plan; and, descriptions of how the State will carry out its responsibilities with respect to programs authorized under title II or title III, under the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act, and under the Wagner-Peyser Act, including the inclusion of certain other key information as required under the bill. It is the intent of the Committee that in development of the State plan, the Governor and the individuals and entities involved in the collaborative process provide the public with an opportunity for review and comment on the plan, which may include the holding of public hearings, prior to submission of the plan to the Secretaries.

COLLABORATIVE PROCESS

As a State's highest ranking elected official, the Governor is central to workforce preparation efforts in every State. As such, the Committee provides Governors with the lead role in pulling together the overall employment, training, and literacy planning effort within each State and submission of the plan to the Secretaries. However, Members of the Committee recognize that Governors alone cannot and should not be solely responsible for development and operation of these programs if we are to effect meaningful reform in this area. While the Governor is ultimately responsible for those portions of the State plan that pertain to employment and training programs authorized under titles II and III of the bill, the State agency responsible for adult education and literacy has final authority over those portions of the State plan that deal with adult education and literacy programs, as well as the authority to administer such programs. Further, the Committee bill places great emphasis on the establishment and utilization of the collaborative process, for purposes of establishing the State plan, as well as for making most major State-level decisions affecting these programs.

While the Committee purposely did not include prescriptive requirements as to what the collaborative process must entail, or how it should work in every State, the Committee intends that such process be open, active, participatory, and significant. The Committee feels very strongly that representatives of the State legislature must be fully involved in this process, in order to ensure that employment, training, and literacy programs are an integral part of each State's workforce preparation effort. Members also strongly agree that business and industry must be integrally and actively involved with the Governor, the legislature, and key State agency heads in the design of the State-wide programs. It is imperative that business and industry participate in the State-level collaborative process to ensure their concerns are understood and addressed in development of these programs. Only through enhanced employer involvement will these programs reflect the changing demands and skill needs of the workplace. The Committee recognizes that employers' involvement alone will not guarantee successful workforce development programs. Therefore, it is imperative that representatives of employees, education, local officials, and other stakeholders be involved in the collaborative process as well. For these programs to work effectively, the Committee believes that the collaborative process should seek to have all the stakeholders at the table.

In recognition of the fact that many States have already established State-level collaborative mechanisms for the purpose of establishing employment, training, and other human resource programs, the Committee bill allows the utilization of such pre-existing processes, that substantially meet the collaborative process requirements of the bill. Specifically, States may utilize existing councils (including State Human Resource Investment Councils), for carrying out the collaborative process described under this section. In fact, the bill maintains the authority originally established under title VII of JTPA for State Human Resource Investment Councils. The major change to such authority is the relaxation of its previously prescriptive membership composition requirements. While Committee Members did not want to require that Governors establish State level councils or boards, the Committee recognizes the leadership that these bodies have provided in States where such councils exist, and therefore encourage their establishment to fulfill the collaboration requirements provided under H.R. 1385.

ESTABLISHMENT OF LOCAL WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT AREAS

The bill requires that States desiring to receive a grant under this Act, designate local geographic areas, called workforce development areas for the purpose of distributing funds and the delivery of services in local employment and training programs. In the designation of such areas, the Governor must work through the collaborative process, consult with local chief elected officials, and consider comments received through the public participation process (described in the State plan). Such areas must be consistent with local labor market areas, and must be designated taking into consideration existing units of general local government, geographic areas served by local educational agencies and intermediate educational agencies, geographic areas served by postsecondary institutions and area vocational education schools, service delivery areas previously established under the Job Training Partnership Act, and the distance that individuals will need to travel to receive services.

ESTABLISHMENT OF LOCAL WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT BOARDS

The bill requires Governors, through the collaborative process, to establish workforce development boards within each local workforce development area and to establish criteria for use by local chief elected officials in the selection of members of such boards.

During the development of this bill, the Committee decided to assign responsibility for the actual design and operation of local employment and training programs to the local level. Further, there was a decision made to fully involve employers in the design of such local programs. For this reason, local workforce development boards, with a majority representation of business and industry, are required in each workforce development area for the receipt of funding and design of local workforce development systems. The establishment of local boards is consistent with the testimony received by the Committee on job training reform, including testimony provided at the March 4th hearing by Ms. Susan Kelley, Vice President of Valencia Community College in Orlando, Florida. In her remarks, Ms. Kelley explained that "results that are meaningful to local business and industry should drive the system. While broad benchmark categories should be included in the federal legislation, the only people who can truly tell us what improvements are desirable and attainable, and which areas of concentration will produce the greatest good in terms of local economic development, are in our local business community. We all know that is true, and there is no excuse not to place the system in their hands. Local boards must be required, and they must have a minimum of 51 percent private sector membership."

By amending the Job Training Partnership Act, replacing existing Private Industry Councils (PICs) with local workforce development boards, there is no longer the assumption that private industry councils (PICs) as established under JTPA will continue to exist, and as such, there is no presumptive designation of PICs as workforce development boards. However, local areas may reconstitute existing private industry councils to serve as local workforce development boards in areas where the PIC is exceptionally strong. The Committee encourages Governors, the individuals involved in the collaborative process, and local chief elected officials to consider carefully such redesignation to determine whether or not existing private industry councils are capable of fulfilling the added responsibilities assigned to workforce development boards under this Act. The Committee urges Governors, local elected officials, and other decision makers, to ensure that changes are made where change needs to occur, in order to have the strongest employment and training programs possible.

Workforce development boards must at a minimum, consist of a majority of members who are representatives of business and industry, including individuals who are owners of businesses, chief executives or chief operating officers of private business, and other business executives with optimum policy making authority in local businesses. These business representatives must be selected from among a list of nominees submitted by local business organizations and trade associations.

In addition, the local board must include: representatives of education, including representatives of local educational agencies, school boards, postsecondary institutions (including community colleges), and representatives of adult education and literacy providers, selected from among individuals nominated by regional or local educational agencies, institutions, or organizations representing such individuals or entities. The bill also requires that the following groups be appointed to serve on the local boards: representatives of community-based organizations (including as appropriate, organizations with experience in serving individuals with disabilities); representatives of employees (which may include labor); and representatives of the public who may include program participants, parents, individuals with disabilities, older workers, veterans, or organizations serving such individuals. Such members of local boards shall also be selected from nominations of regional or local agencies, institutions, or organizations representing such individuals or entities in the local area. Finally, representatives of local welfare and economic development agencies are required to serve on local boards as well.

While the bill contains no further language regarding the types of individuals who must be represented from the above-listed categories, the Committee urges the selection of individuals with decision-making capability. For example, individuals representing local educational agencies are encouraged to be chosen from nominees including superintendents of schools or local school board members. Similarly, we recommend that individuals representing postsecondary institutions be chosen from nominees including college presidents and college board members or trustees. These boards will only be as successful as the collective abilities of their membership.

Governors are provided the authority to certify biennially local workforce development boards in order to ensure compliance with the State's selection criteria and overall policies set for such boards. However, local boards are authorized to elect their own chairperson from among their members, and to establish bylaws and other operating procedures as consistent with the purposes of the Act and with the State plan.

Recognizing that some States, particularly very small and sparsely populated States, will be composed of only one workforce development area, the bill allows that the individuals comprising the Governor's collaborative process may be reconstituted to serve the functions of a local workforce development board for those States.

Under the Committee bill, the role of the local workforce development board is significantly expanded over the role currently provided for private industry councils under JTPA. The local board is ultimately responsible for development of a local strategic workforce development plan and identification of occupations in demand and the training needs of the local workforce development area. The board is responsible for: the selection of service providers (for both the full service employment and training delivery system, and for disadvantaged youth programs); budget and program oversight over disadvantaged youth programs established under title II, adult employment and training programs established under title III, and the local full service employment and training delivery systems.

Local boards are authorized to receive and disburse funds made available for carrying out the above-listed programs or may designate an administrative entity for the purpose of disbursement of funds to full service providers and other service providers, as designated by the local board. The board may employ its own staff, independent of local programs and service providers. However, due to the expanded responsibilities of the workforce board, as well as to attract higher level business representatives, boards may not directly provide services authorized under this legislation, unless they receive a waiver from the Governor to do so. While the Committee bill includes the waiver authority, Members of the Committee strongly urge Governors to provide such waivers only on rare occasions, where necessary either to improve program performance, or in order to provide a full array of services, as may be particularly necessary in rural areas where a competitive selection process has produced no other qualified service providers with demonstrated expertise. In other words, the local boards should be the service providers of last resort. This is a significant change from current law.

Local boards, in combination with local chief elected officials are also assigned the responsibility of negotiating with the Governor on local benchmarks for the workforce development area and on the role of local boards in the selection of service providers in the full service employment and training delivery system.

ROLE OF LOCAL ELECTED OFFICIALS

Local elected officials continue to play a key role in the design and implementation of local employment and training systems for adults and for disadvantaged youth. Local officials appoint members of the local workforce development board under the bill. The local board is required to consult with the chief elected official in development of the local plan and the local official may approve the plan or reject it and make recommendations to the board on how to improve the plan. If after a reasonable effort the local board is unable to obtain approval of the local chief elected official, the plan may be submitted to the Governor, but only with the recommendations of the chief elected official. In addition, consistent with current law, local boards are required to provide opportunity for review and comment on the local plan to community-based organizations, local education and other social service agencies, local business organizations, representatives of employees, and the general public, prior to submission of the plan to the Governor.

Local officials are authorized to approve local budgets and have joint oversight authority with the local board over programs authorized under titles II and III of this Act. Local governments may also be designated by the board as the administrative entity for local workforce development systems, and may compete to provide services through the full service employment and training delivery system. Finally, as previously mentioned, local officials, along with local boards, negotiate with the Governor on local benchmarks against which the performance of the local workforce development area will be measured and on the role of the local board in designating providers for participation in the full service employment and training delivery system.

This legislation intentionally elevates the role of local boards in local employment and training delivery systems, illustrating the Committee's recognition of the importance of employer buy-in and involvement in the design of the local system. However, the Committee also recognizes the important role of local elected officials to an effective employment and training system and is committed to the continuance of such a vital role.

With the increased responsibility bestowed upon local workforce development boards, the Committee felt it very important to provide strong conflict of interest language in the bill. Therefore the bill provides that no member of a workforce development board may cast a vote or participate in the consideration of the provision of services that in any way provides financial benefit to such member, an organization that such member represents, or to an immediate family member of such member. In addition, a Governor may enforce more rigorous conflict of interest standards, as determined appropriate.

ESTABLISHMENT OF LOCAL FULL SERVICE EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING DELIVERY SYSTEMS

In order to provide easy access to employment and training services, H.R. 1385 requires local workforce development areas to establish a full service employment and training delivery system that provides both individuals and employers access to services through a network of eligible providers—assuring participants that such services will be available regardless of where they initially enter the system. These provisions build on what many States and local communities are already doing.

The bill leaves the design of such full service systems up to the States and local communities, just asking that there be at least one physical location or center in each local workforce development area, where individuals can receive all of the core services described below, and through which they may access more intensive employment and training services. Full service sites may include community colleges, local employment service offices, local government agencies, private non-profit organizations, private for-profit providers, or other interested entities of demonstrated effectiveness.

Core services made available through the full service delivery system include: outreach, intake, and orientation for services; initial assessment of skill levels, abilities, and supportive service needs; job search and placement assistance, and, where appropriate career counseling; provision of information relating to job vacancies and occupations in demand; provision of information on the quality and availability of employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation programs, and referral to such programs; provision of information relating to Unemployment Insurance (U.I.), student financial aid, and other public training programs; soliciting and accepting job orders from employers; and, the availability of the list of eligible training providers and performance information regarding such providers. Full service systems may also provide customized screening and referrals for employers and customized employment-related services on a fee-for-service basis.

The Committee believes it is important that a workforce board have the flexibility to designate a variety of types of entities to serve as full service providers and that private sector entities be given the opportunity to participate fully. Therefore, there should be no presumptive deliverers of services through these systems.

IDENTIFICATION OF TRAINING PROVIDERS

H.R. 1385 establishes a process for identifying training providers who are qualified to provide training services under the Adult Employment and Training program authorized under title III of the bill. Because this legislation builds on the use of skill grants (vouchers) for the provision of training services, establishment of such an identification process is essential to identify qualified providers and to guard against "fly-by-night" providers that may take advantage of program participants.

Eligibility. The bill establishes two ways for training programs to become eligible to provide services under the title III program. First, training programs that lead to an associate, baccalaureate, professional, or graduate degree; that are at least two academic years in length and acceptable for academic credit toward a baccalaureate degree; or are at least one academic year in length, lead to a certificate, degree, or other recognized educational credential and prepare a participant for gainful employment in a recognized occupation; and that are offered by postsecondary institutions that are currently eligible under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 are automatically eligible to provide training services under the adult employment and training programs. Second, all other providers may become eligible to provide training if determined eligible by a local workforce development board, through an alternative eligibility procedure developed by the Governor for use by all local boards in the State. As part of each State's alternative eligibility procedure, Governors must establish minimum acceptable levels of performance for training programs which must be taken into account by local boards when determining eligibility.

Performance Reporting. All participating training providers under the title III program must submit performance-based information on participating programs to a State agency designated by the Governor that is responsible for compiling and disseminating such information. This State agency is also responsible for compiling the list of eligible providers of training throughout the State. This information is then sent to local boards, who in turn provide such information, through the full service employment and training delivery system to individuals in need of training assistance. This information gathering and dissemination process is essential so individuals are empowered to make informed choices in their selection of occupations and training providers.

Performance information that is required for submission includes: program completion rates for individuals in the applicable programs conducted by the provider; the percentage of individuals in the applicable programs who obtain employment, which may also specify the percentage of individuals who obtain employment in an occupation related to the program conducted; and, the earnings at placement of individuals who complete the program.

The Governor may also require that providers submit additional performance information, which may include information relating to: the retention in employment and the subsequent earnings of the individuals who complete the applicable program; where appropriate, the rates of licensure or certification of individuals who complete the program; the percentage of individuals who complete the program who attain industry-recognized occupational skills in the subject, occupation, or industry for which training is provided, where applicable; and the adequacy of space, staff, equipment, instructional materials, and student support services offered by the provider through a program conducted by the provider. However, if the additional information requested by the Governor imposes extraordinary costs on providers, the Governor must provide access to cost-effective methods for the collection of such information or provide additional resources to assist providers in the collection of such information from funds made available under the adult employment and training program.

Transition. For program years 1999 and 2000, the performance-based information that is required of training providers need only to pertain to participants who are actually served through the title III adult employment and training programs.

Enforcement Authority. In addition to other enforcement authority, the State is vested with authority to terminate the eligibility of training providers for consistent and substantial failure to meet performance criteria established by the State. The State is also authorized to terminate such eligibility if the State agency or a local board determines that an eligible provider substantially violates any requirement under this Act. The bill includes an appeal process for training providers that are either denied eligibility or whose eligibility is terminated.

Exceptions. Providers of on-the-job training and registered apprenticeship programs are not subject to the eligibility requirements under this section, but on-the-job training providers must provide performance information if required by the Governor.

The bill recognizes the importance of including the private sector as providers of training services under local employment and training programs. Since 1980, private professional firms have developed extensive programs to serve the growing training needs of our rapidly changing economy and workforce. Research indicates that the training market in the information technology training industry alone totaled $2 billion in 1994, most of this provided by commercial firms. This section of H.R. 1385 enables a wide variety of training and education providers to participate in adult job training programs. This expanded provider involvement allows participants to access training that will best enable them to enter or re-enter the workforce.

PERFORMANCE ACCOUNTABILITY

Throughout all of the hearings held on reform of our U.S. employment, training, and literacy programs over the past several years, witnesses have expressed the need for strong accountability provisions in any new legislative measure. In his testimony before the Committee at the February 11 hearing, Governor John Engler of Michigan stated that one of the main problems with the current federal job training system is that "there is virtually no accountability for results." The Governor went on to say while current law contains language setting performance standards and possible sanctions for failure to meet them, "the sanctions are simply too hard to get to, the performance standards are too weak" and "they are too easy to meet." In fact, at that February 11 hearing, nearly every witness from both the State and local levels, argued in favor of strong performance accountability provisions that measure the return on investment in employment and training programs.

Subsequently, Members of the Committee determined that this legislation should require States to establish their own challenging performance goals and benchmarks, recognizing the special characteristics and needs of their individual States. Similarly, we ask States to work with local boards and locally elected officials in each workforce development area to develop local benchmarks, against which the performance of local employment and training programs can be measured. Performance benchmarks set by the State must measure the continuous progress of the State toward meeting its long-term goals for employment, training, and literacy programs.

Specifically, each State would establish indicators of performance, or benchmarks, for measuring the progress of the State in meeting its long-term goals for each of the three block grants authorized under this Act, which include measures of the specific "core indicators" of performance described in the legislation. In order to have comparability in measuring performance across States, common definitions for such indicators, as well as model levels of performance, would be developed through a national collaborative process involving States, business leaders, representatives of employees, education and training leaders, literacy experts, and others with an interest in these programs.

Because Members of the Committee want to ensure an adequate return on the federal investment in employment, training, and literacy programs, the Secretary of Labor (for employment and training programs) and the Secretary of Education (for adult education and literacy programs) are authorized to negotiate with each State, the levels of performance expected to be achieved by the State based upon the benchmarks identified in their State plan, for the core indicators of performance described under the bill.

While we expect the Secretaries and the States to reach agreement on these adjusted State benchmarks, and that the States will adopt challenging goals and benchmarks that will result in high returns on the investment in these programs, this negotiation process does not empower the federal government to impose a unilateral, one-size-fits-all set of national standards upon States and localities. These benchmarks are intended to be developed through a "bottom-up" process and should take into account each State's individual circumstances and priorities. This bottom-up and participatory performance measurement process contrasts to current law, where since 1982 national standards have been established by the Secretary of Labor for federal JTPA programs.

Core Indicators for Adult Employment and Training Programs. Indicators identified in the bill that all States must use in measuring their performance under the adult employment and training programs include: placement of program participants in unsubsidized employment; retention in employment (at six months, and at one year after placement); increases in earnings or in earnings in combination with employer-assisted benefits; attainment of industry-recognized occupational skills; reduction in welfare dependency; attainment of a high school diploma or a general equivalency diploma; and, other such measures as States determine appropriate.

Core Indicators for Adult Education and Literacy. Indicators identified in the bill that all States must use in measuring their performance under the adult education and literacy programs include: achievement in the areas of reading, writing, English language acquisition, problem solving, numeracy and other literacy skills (for which there would be no model levels of performance, definitions, or negotiations with the Secretary); receipt of a high school diploma or a general equivalency diploma; entry into a post-secondary school, job retraining program, employment, or career advancement; attainment of the literacy skills and knowledge individuals need to be productive and responsible citizens and to become more actively involved in the education of their children; and, such other measures as States determine appropriate.

Core Indicators for Economically Disadvantaged Youth. Indicators identified in the bill that all States must use in measuring their performance under the disadvantaged youth employment and training program include: attainment of secondary school diplomas or general equivalency diplomas; attainment of industry-recognized work readiness and occupational skills; placement in, retention in, and completion of postsecondary education or advanced training; placement and retention in military service, employment, or qualified apprenticeships; attainment of challenging State academic proficiencies (for which there would be no model levels of performance, definitions, or negotiation with the Secretary); and, such other measures as States determine appropriate.

Population Indicators. To encourage services for the hardest to serve populations under programs authorized under this Act, the legislation asks that the success of certain hard-to-serve populations be measured for each of the performance indicators described above. For example, the success of economically disadvantaged individuals (including welfare recipients), older workers, and displaced homemakers would be measured under the Adult Training block grant; the success of individuals with limited literacy levels and economically disadvantaged individuals would be measured under the Adult Education and Literacy block grant; and, the success of hard to serve disadvantaged youth, including school dropouts or individuals with low educational attainment, would be measured under the Disadvantaged Youth block grant.

To provide incentives for high performance, both Secretaries would be authorized to provide grants to States that exceed expected levels of performance, demonstrate continuing progress in program performance, or demonstrate continuing progress in coordination and integration of programs as well as demonstrating high performance in such programs. Similarly, Governors would be authorized to provide incentive grants to local areas that reach or exceed their local benchmarks.

The Secretaries would also be authorized to sanction a State (by not more than five percent of their allotment for the given program) for failure to meet its expected levels of performance for two consecutive program years. Specifically the bill authorizes the Secretaries to provide technical assistance, upon request, to States failing to meet their expected benchmarks, and after two years, if failure continues, the Secretary may impose the five percent sanction. Similarly, Governors would be authorized to sanction local areas for failure, for two or more consecutive years, to meet local benchmarks (established pursuant to the negotiation carried out between a Governor, a local board, and the local chief elected official). Governors are also authorized to provide technical assistance to local areas. Finally, each State is required to annually submit to the Secretaries a report on its level of performance for the prior year.

FISCAL AND GENERAL PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

For programs authorized under titles II, III, and IV, the legislation includes significant changes with respect to general program requirements under JTPA. A number of provisions under this part of JTPA have been eliminated in order to provide States and localities with additional flexibility to more administer effectively programs. However, prohibitions on the uses of funds to encourage or induce relocation of businesses are retained as are prohibitions on the uses of funds for customized or skill training and related activities after relocation that results in job loss at the original site if it is within the United States.

It should be noted, that although current "conflict of interest" provisions are deleted under this part, the Committee has replaced these provisions with stronger requirements under title I of the new Act.

This legislation also includes modifications to current provisions under JTPA with respect to labor standards applicable to the job training programs authorized by the legislation. These provisions represent a consolidation and streamlining of the standards that are in current law and are largely directed at two goals. First, they ensure that currently employed workers are not displaced in any way by participants in the training programs funded under the bill. Second, they ensure that the training programs funded under the bill are operated under safe and healthy conditions and that individuals in on the job training or otherwise employed under the bill are treated the same as similarly situated trainees or employees with respect to wages and working conditions. In addition, the legislation also requires States to establish a grievance procedure for hearing complaints that the requirements of the bill have not been met. The States are given discretion to establish a grievance process they deem appropriate with a limited remedial scheme specified in the bill. The Secretary of Labor is given a limited review over the grievance process in the case of an appeal by either party, or if no decision is reached through the grievance process within 60 days.

The legislation maintains many of the necessary fiscal controls which currently exist under JTPA. However, several modifications have been made in order to reduce overly prescriptive requirements while ensuring that programs adhere to minimum fiscal accountability standards. Specific changes include: a less burdensome process under which Governors are required to prescribe and implement procurement standards to ensure fiscal accountability, a streamlined and timely process for Governors to take action upon local workforce development boards for not complying with fiscal accountability standards, and additional flexibility with respect to the terms of repayment of certain mis-expended funds (not to include mis-expenditures resulting from fraud, gross negligence, or other such forms of abuse). The legislation maintains certain reporting requirements under existing law. The bill also clarifies that services, facilities, and equipment funded under title II and title III programs, may be used on a fee for service basis, by employers in a local area to provide employment and training services to incumbent workers as long as such use does not have an adverse affect on the provision of services to eligible program participants under those titles, and the income derived from such fees is used to carry out programs authorized under title II or title III, as appropriate.

The legislation also includes modifications to current provisions under JTPA dealing with administrative adjudication and administrative provisions. With respect to administrative provisions, the Committee recognizes the need for the Secretary to issue regulations in order to oversee properly and to ensure a smooth transition of this legislation. However it is the Committee's intent that such regulations be limited only to the extent necessary to administer and ensure compliance with the specific requirements of this Act. One area in particular in which the Committee recognizes the need for the Secretary to develop regulations is with respect to the definition of "administrative costs" for programs authorized under titles II, III, and IV of this Act, which shall reflect generally accepted accounting principles.

The language of JTPA section 167 has been amended as part of a streamlining effort. Section 167 (a)(5), relating to the participation in JTPA of individuals authorized to work in the United States, is no longer necessary in light of similar requirements providing these protections in the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996. Language authorizing the Attorney General to bring a pattern or practice case under Section 167 on his or her own initiative has been eliminated as unnecessary. The amendment does not modify the enforcement authority of the Department of Labor.

TITLE II—DISADVANTAGED YOUTH EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES GRANTS

Title II of the bill consolidates and amends several programs established under the Job Training Partnership Act for disadvantaged youth, including the Summer Youth Employment Program (title II-B) and the “year-round” Youth Training Program (title II-C), into a single block grant to States and to local communities. While the bill strikes the title II-B summer employment provisions of JTPA, we did not intend to end summer youth employment activities as an allowable use of funds by local communities. It is our intent to combine the best parts of the summer and the year-round programs into a single, comprehensive block grant for disadvantaged youth employment and training. Therefore the Committee wishes to clarify that the “such sums” authorization level established for the title II program, assumes the combination of these two programs as well as funding for these two programs.

The main thrust of reform under this block grant is to increase the focus of these programs on longer-term academic and occupational learning opportunities for disadvantaged youth, rather than short-term, stand-alone employment fixes which have not proven to work for hard-to-serve, disadvantaged youth.

Under the bill, communities may continue to carry out programs such as summer youth employment, if linked to more comprehensive additional learning opportunities. The block grant attempts to improve academic and occupational opportunities for disadvantaged youth in the community, as well as result in the completion of high school, or its equivalent, and other positive results such as placement and retention in employment or continuation into postsecondary education or training.

Building on existing provisions within JTPA, the legislation outlines essential program elements for disadvantaged youth programs including: development of assessments and service strategies for participants; integration of academic, occupational, and work-based learning; provision of comprehensive guidance and counseling; provision of postsecondary education and training opportunities, where appropriate; involvement of employers and parents in the design and implementation of programs; and, provision of adult mentoring.

Experience and research over the years have found that one of the most effective program elements in determining the success of hard-to-serve disadvantaged youth, is a positive relationship with a caring, responsible adult. For this reason, this legislation includes as a required program element, adult mentoring. In addition, the bill removes the current one year limitation on follow-up and counseling services for program participants, recognizing the need for longer-term service delivery.

In addition to the required program elements, authorized uses of funds include: direct training services; tutoring and study skills training; instruction leading to completion of high school or the equivalent; alternative high school services, paid and unpaid work experience, including summer employment opportunities, which are directly linked to academic, occupational, and work-based learning; mentoring; training-related supportive services; peer-centered activities encouraging responsibility and other positive social behaviors, during non-school hours; and other training and transition services that assist disadvantaged youth make the transition to employment.

Important provisions in current law were retained, such as requiring that linkages with local educational agencies, local welfare agencies, and numerous other programs serving disadvantaged youth within the community be established and maintained, in order to avoid duplication of programs and to enhance service delivery. Members of the Committee recognize that many communities are working to pull fragmented funding sources together to establish comprehensive youth development strategies at the local level. To that end, this Committee encourages that funds from programs authorized under this title be used to leverage other resources in the community so that young people, especially those in high poverty areas, may take advantage of a comprehensive range of services.

Consistent with current law under JTPA, the amended disadvantaged youth program would serve only economically disadvantaged youth age 16–21. As under current law, ten percent of funds may however be spent on youth who are not economically disadvantaged, but are determined to have substantial barriers to employment and are identified as hard-to-serve. Provisions in JTPA allowing local areas to serve youth beginning at age 14 if described in the local plan (which is subject to the Governor's approval), were retained. The bill also allows a similar expansion of the age of eligibility to age 24 at local community discretion.

Under the legislation, priority is given to disadvantaged youth who are school dropouts and to other hard to serve disadvantaged youth who are: basic skills deficient; one or more grade levels below the grade level appropriate to the age of the individual; pregnant or parenting; individuals with disabilities, homeless or run-away; offenders; or are other disadvantaged youth who face serious barriers to employment as identified by the local workforce development area. Members of the Committee determined that such prioritization, as opposed to the imposition of percentage requirements was a more appropriate way of ensuring that school dropouts and others with multiple barriers to employment are served.

The Committee intends that a significant proportion of youth served under this program will be school dropouts. However, it is also the clear intent of the Members of this Committee that youth be encouraged to stay in school and, at a minimum, receive a high school diploma. For those who have already dropped out, the Committee intends that programs funded under this title encourage their return to school or to an alternative school setting for receipt of a high school diploma or its equivalent, as well as skills training and related work experience. To provide further incentives for serving school dropouts, during Committee consideration of H.R. 1385, an amendment offered by Mr. Payne was accepted that requires Governors to spend ten percent of their State's total allotment on incentive grants to local communities, with a 50 percent matching requirement, for programs serving out-of-school youth.

Another change from current law requires that from funds distributed to local workforce development areas under this title, local workforce development boards must award grants, on a competitive basis, to disadvantaged youth providers in the local area. As described in the local plan, local boards are expected to fully involve representatives of the local community, including community-based organizations with experience in serving disadvantaged youth, the local education community, parents, youth, local law enforcement agencies, and representatives of business and employees in the development and implementation of these programs, and in determining that the most effective and efficient providers of services are chosen to carry out disadvantaged youth programs and activities. The Committee encourages local boards to award grants to providers of demonstrated effectiveness, or to providers who will utilize methodologies that have proven effective in serving hard-to-serve disadvantaged youth.

Finally, the Committee-reported bill maintains the existing title II-C funding formula for sending title II funds to the States. The bill allows States, through the collaborative process, to establish within-State allocation formulas for the distribution of funds to local workforce development areas. Such formulas must distribute funds equitably throughout the State, must ensure against significant funding shifts from year to year for local workforce development areas, and must not weigh factors disproportionately. Members of the Committee again want to stress their strong intent that State formulas distribute funds equitably to rural, as well as to urban and suburban areas.

TITLE III—ADULT EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING CONSOLIDATION GRANTS

Title III of the bill would amend the current adult employment and training programs authorized under JTPA by establishing a single delivery system for all adults, that maximizes individual choice in the selection of occupations and training providers. The bill encourages an "employment first" approach to job training—providing training services to individuals who are unable to obtain initial employment, or employment that will lead to self-sufficiency, through core services and intensive job search assistance. With limited exceptions, training services for adults would be provided through the use of vouchers (referred to as skill grants in the bill), distributed through an easily accessible local full service employment and training delivery system. Members of the Committee feel that this legislation will significantly improve services for dislocated workers, for welfare recipients who must make the transition from welfare to work, and for other adults in need of such assistance.

While a single employment and training system is established through this block grant for all adults, funding for dislocated workers remains protected. Specifically, funds are authorized separately for adult employment and training activities, and for dislocated worker employment and training activities. The Federal-to-State formulas for allotment of funds to States would be based on the current title II-A (Disadvantaged Adults) formula and title III (Dislocated Workers) formula, protecting against major funding shifts among States. In addition, funds would be separately allocated to local workforce development areas, based upon State-determined formulas for both the adult and dislocated worker funding streams. The bulk of funding under the adult and dislocated worker funding streams would be sent to local workforce development areas (85 percent of each State's funds for adults, and 70 percent of each State's funds for dislocated workers). These funds would proportionately contribute to the establishment of local full service employment and training delivery systems, and for the provision of core or "up-front" services, intensive services, and training services for adults and for dislocated workers respectively.

It is the Committee's intent that Governors will use a majority of the funds reserved by States from the dislocated worker funding stream, to provide rapid response activities, and additional funding to local areas that experience major worker dislocation. The Committee feels that this is a very important role for States—recognizing that major dislocations, natural disasters, and other unanticipated events which result in large-scale unemployment require the substantial infusion of additional funds and assistance that cannot be covered or anticipated through locally-driven formula funds.

Of amounts reserved by the State from the adult employment and training funding allotment, and from up to 10 percent of funds reserved under the dislocated worker allotment, States have the ability to carry out other discretionary activities to ensure high quality and effective statewide employment and training efforts. These activities may include: staff development and technical assistance; incentive grants and performance awards, also available at the Governor's discretion to further leverage local program integration; funding of model programs, including innovative programs designed to meet the training and skills needs of incumbent workers; additional assistance for the development of the full service system; and innovative programs for displaced homemakers and programs encouraging training in nontraditional employment.

At the local level, local workforce development areas, under the guidance of local boards, are expected to use funds from the adult and dislocated worker funding streams to contribute proportionately to the local delivery system. Local communities must use funds to pay for the core or "up-front" services, through the full service system, and for intensive and training services for program participants. Funds for dislocated workers would be used to provide core, intensive, and training services to dislocated workers exclusively. Core services funded from the adult funding stream would be available on a universal basis with no eligibility requirements. However, local areas are to give priority in the provision of intensive and training services to welfare recipients and to other economically disadvantaged individuals with multiple barriers to employment with funds provided under the adult funding stream. Local workforce development areas are allowed however, to transfer up to 20 percent of the funds from amounts allocated to the local area for adults and for dislocated workers, between such allocations, if such transfer is approved by the Governor. This transfer authority is consistent with current appropriations authority, and it is important to allow localities to meet the economic and training needs of their individual communities.

All training services under this title must be provided through service delivery methods that maximize consumer choice in the selection of eligible providers of training services. The Committee intends that most training authorized under this title will be provided through the use of skill grants distributed through the full-service employment and training delivery system. Exceptions to this requirement include: on-the-job training, when there is an insufficient number of qualified providers of training services in a local area, when there is an insufficient number of qualified providers of services for special participant populations in the local area, or when the local board decides to enter into a direct training contract with a community based organization. However in each of these cases, individual choice should continue to be provided to individuals in the selection of training providers, to the maximum extent possible.

During the March 4 hearing, Mr. Jan Vogel, Executive Director of the South Bay Private Industry Council in Inglewood, California testified about the positive results that the use of vouchers has brought as part of the Aerospace Network program in southern California. "Prior to the Aerospace Network, training agencies entered into contracts with all 17 PICs in Southern California. Each of these contracts having different tuition prices, different payment points, different performance standards, and unfortunately different quality standards. The creation of a central point has finally standardized all aspects of our training provider system. We have developed a regional training vendor directory. This directory has been certified by the State of California. The directory is saving hundreds of thousands of dollars in tuition costs (as many agencies were previously overpaying for services) and has finally brought a "quality" standard to training which has been desperately needed in southern California." Mr. Vogel went on to say "We strongly believe that this vouchersing process will be critical to the success of welfare reform projects in our area."

The Committee strongly supports the use of skill grants under the adult training system. However, Members recognize that the success of the use of skill grants is contingent upon several important supporting elements, and that States and localities will need time to establish such supports. Specifically, States, in conjunction with local workforce development boards, must establish effective procedures for the identification of qualified providers of education and training that provide program participants with broad options, but at the same time guard against "fly-by-night" providers. Further, skill grants will only be successful if eligible individuals have a full range of accurate information on the quality of providers, including information on program costs, program completion rates, placement rates, and wages at placement. Where possible, information on the rates of licensure, receipt of employer recognized skills, information on job retention, and on customer satisfaction should also be provided to consumers. Any requirements for such additional information however must be accompanied with assistance to providers in accessing cost-effective methods of gathering such information, or with resources to defray the extraordinary costs of such information gathering.

This legislation allows for the provision of supportive services, such as transportation and child care assistance, to enable individuals to participate in core, intensive, and training services. The Committee recognizes that the provision of supportive services is essential in many cases to allow participants to fully participate in programs, and to move into employment. Members are concerned however, that funds from this program not be used to supplant existing resources that are specifically designed to provide such supportive services. Therefore, funds are allowed for supportive services under this program, but only for those individuals who are unable to receive such services through other programs specifically designed to provide supportive services. Assessment of each individual's need for supportive services should, however, be part of any comprehensive service strategy, and programs authorized under this title should at the very least assist individuals in accessing such services.

NATIONAL EMERGENCY GRANTS

While this Committee strongly supports moving funds to the State and local levels, Members recognize that there are certain functions which due to their nature, are most efficiently done at the Federal level. One example are programs assisted under Part B of title III. Under this bill, 20 percent of funds appropriated for dislocated workers under this title may be reserved by the Secretary of Labor to provide assistance to those areas suffering major economic and worker dislocations. Events such as military base closings, mass layoffs, plant closures, and major disasters, are prone to happen in any given State and at any given time, and cannot be planned for, making it sensible that the Secretary of Labor be allowed to provide direct emergency assistance to such areas.

TITLE IV—NATIONAL ACTIVITIES

NATIVE AMERICANS

The Committee has provided for a continuation of services to Indians, Alaska Natives and Native Hawaiians. Section 401 addresses the unique relationship between these populations and the Federal government. Services are to be implemented in a manner consistent with overall Federal policy toward these groups.

The committee is aware that these groups experience the highest unemployment rates of all other populations in the American work force. This is due, in large part, to a lack of educational and employment and training opportunities. As a result, the ability of Native Americans to locate and retain employment and to successfully compete in the work force is seriously impaired.

This section authorizes a wide range of services and support for a variety of types of Native American service providers. In general, the Committee intends that available funds be distributed in such a way that the various constituencies served by these programs continue to receive services proportional to those received in the past.

In order to ensure that these services are effective in addressing special Native American needs, the organizational unit in the Labor Department with responsibility for this section should have particular competence in the administration of programs for this service population and be staffed accordingly.

The Committee points out that Indian, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian service providers are also eligible, consistent with other provisions in the bill, to receive funds under the various block grants administered by the States.

MIGRANTS AND SEASONAL FARMWORKERS

The Congress recognizes that this program will be the main source of Federal assistance in meeting migrant and seasonal farmworkers' and their dependents' employment, training, education, and other supportive service needs. These investments assist farmworkers to obtain or retain stable employment, both within and outside of agriculture, to provide development and other educational assistance to enhance their employability, and to provide emergency assistance and other supportive services that will stabilize and improve their agricultural employment situation. In addition, the Committee recognizes that eligible activities under this part include single purpose grants for training and technical assistance for housing and related facilities for migrant and seasonal farmworkers.

The Committee is aware of the quality, innovation, and cost-effectiveness of services and assistance provided to farmworker grantees by the Association of Farmworker Opportunity Programs (AFOP) and encourages the Department to continue their activities, including technical assistance and training, development and implementation of a farmworker database and other information technologies and developments that can further improve the capabilities of grantees funded under this part. The Secretary must consult with farmworker organizations, such as AFOP and grantees prior to the promulgation of policies, rules, regulations, and performance standards or measures relating to migrant and seasonal farmworkers and farmworker programs.

Due to the changing nature of agricultural employment both within and outside of the United States that affects the U.S. domestic farmworker population, Congress urges the Department to be responsive to these changes and periodically review and make necessary adjustments to ensure a quality program for migrant and seasonal farmworkers.

LABOR MARKET INFORMATION (LMI)

In general, this legislation retains the current labor market information provisions under JTPA. However, provisions requiring the Secretary to prepare and submit a report on the development of a nationwide database containing information with respect to quarterly earnings reports, have been repealed.

TITLE V—ADULT EDUCATION AND FAMILY LITERACY ACT
ENSURING PROGRAM FLEXIBILITY TO MEET THE DIVERSE NEEDS OF PARTICIPANTS

The 1992 National Adult Literacy Survey, which measured the ability of individuals to read and understand words, to use documents effectively, and to perform tasks such as balancing a checkbook and totaling purchases, found that 20 percent of adults had minimal basic skills. In fact, of the five levels of literacy used in the survey, almost 50 percent of participants were found to be in the bottom two levels of literacy. Forty-three percent of those in the lowest literacy level live in poverty, 17 percent were receiving food stamps and 70 percent were unemployed or under-employed. More than two-thirds of unwed parents, adults in poverty, school dropouts and arrestees have below average literacy levels.

In developing the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act, the Committee took these needs into consideration. The Committee also recognized that the adult education and literacy delivery system is unlike the elementary, secondary, and post-secondary education systems in many important respects. This is a unique system characterized by a diverse group of providers, diverse students, and limited resources as demonstrated in the following examples.

For the most part, those served in adult education are young adults. 58% are between the ages of 16–31. Many of these young people have dropped out of school and are trying to get back on the road to self sufficiency and opportunity. A subgroup of this population is clearly the young mother on AFDC who, under the various welfare reform proposals, will be required to find a job relatively quickly.

Almost half the participants in this part of the American educational system are working. In other words, this is not a field that serves only the very poor and those unattached to the workforce. Many students are blue collar workers or dislocated workers who understand that to get ahead and provide for a family in 1995, it takes an education and the requisite skills.

Not everyone participates in these programs solely to improve their employment prospects. Many are looking to become citizens, to help their children succeed in school, and to fulfill a variety of other personal, economic, and social goals. Most of these goals have serious implications for our national well-being.

Providers of services in this system are many and varied. They include local education agencies, community colleges, community-based organizations, libraries, churches, and private businesses. The diversity of providers is both a strength and a challenge to building a high quality system. Service are located in the communities where they are most needed and easily accessible. But different programs often are not coordinated and lack shared information and resources to improve the quality of their services.

The staffing of adult education and literacy programs is significantly different from that of elementary, secondary, and post-secondary education. The vast majority of adult education staff are part time professionals, working in isolation from the rest of the educational system, with little training and virtually no benefits. Only 25 percent of the teaching force is full time. Almost 75 percent of all programs have volunteers, most serving as tutors.

Based on the diverse needs of adult students and the unique characteristics of the service delivery system, the Committee felt that the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act should provide the eligible agency within the state with the maximum flexibility to meet the needs of its constituency. The existing Adult Education law contained a number of set asides and caps. For example, current law sets forth the following caps and set-asides: (a) not less than 10 percent of funds received by States are to be used for corrections education and education for other institutionalized individuals; (b) not more than 20 percent of their allotment is to be used for high school equivalency programs, and (c) not less than 15 percent of funds they receive are to be used for experimental demonstrations and teacher training projects. H.R. 1385 eliminates these caps and set asides in the belief that the needs of those currently served through the set-asides and reserves can be better met with a highly flexible, consolidated State grant.

Section 313 of this legislation provides that States may retain 15 percent of their allotment for administrative expenses and State level activities related to adult education and literacy including technology assistance, professional development, State literacy resource centers, and support services such as transportation and child care for individuals who otherwise would be unable to participate in programs under this Act. Eligible agencies can use no more than 5 percentage points for State administration. Agencies which use less than five percentage points for administration can use remaining funds for other State level activities related to literacy.

Eligible providers at the local level can use funds for adult education and literacy services, including services provided on the work site; family literacy services; and English literacy programs. They may retain 5 percent of their grant for administrative purposes.

FOCUSING OUR EFFORTS TO CREATE A LITERATE SOCIETY

According to a 1992 report entitled "Study of Federal Funding Sources and Services for Adult Education," 84 programs in 11 agencies were identified as supporting adult education services between 1986 and 1988. Twenty-seven of these programs were categorized as primary programs in which adult education was explicitly stated as a priority objective in each program's authorizing legislation. Of these 27 programs, the dominant focus was basic skills and literacy.

In addition, the Adult Education Act and the National Literacy Act authorizes a variety of small literacy programs which provide services which can be provided through basic adult education programs operated in each State. The Committee believes that the populations served by these small programs can be more effectively served under the Adult Education Act, which is more far-reaching than smaller programs and has the ability to provide a wider range of services to a greater number of participants.

The Committee has, therefore, consolidated the adult education and literacy programs under its jurisdiction into a single block grant to the states. The block grant will be focused upon adult basic education programs, adult secondary education programs, programs providing English literacy instruction and family literacy programs. The consolidation increases the flexibility of States and local providers, to design and fund programs which best meet the needs of participants.

ELIGIBLE ENTITIES AND DIRECT AND EQUITABLE ACCESS

Section 313 outlines the entities eligible to receive funds under this Act and ensures that such entities will have direct and equitable access to funds available under this Act. Eligible local service providers include: local educational agencies, correctional agencies, community-based organizations of demonstrated effectiveness, volunteer literacy organizations, libraries, public or private nonprofit agencies, postsecondary educational institutions, public housing authorities, and other nonprofit institutions that have the ability to provide literacy services to adults and families. A consortia of such agencies, organizations, or institutions may also apply for funds under this Act.

Consistent with current law, eligible agencies are to provide direct and equitable access to all federal funds provided under this Act to such providers. The Committee is concerned that not all States are complying with the intent of the direct and equitable access provisions contained in current law, which ensure the funding of a variety of providers of adult education services. The Committee would like to stress that we believe it is very important for States to comply with this provision in order to assure that all communities are able to participate under this Act. As such, we have included a definition of "direct and equitable access" and have requested that each State, in its State plan, describe how it is complying with this requirement.

FAMILY LITERACY

Family literacy programs have proven effective in reaching some of the most difficult to serve populations, including individuals with low literacy skills and those receiving welfare payments. In describing family literacy, Sharon Darling, Executive Director, National Center for Family Literacy, in her testimony before the Committee stated,

Family literacy is an approach to addressing the literacy needs of the nation by simultaneously addressing the educational needs of at least two generations. Family literacy is the integration of the best practices of adult education, early childhood, and parent education—designed to restore the family as the focus in education.

Unfortunately, many children have parents who are under-educated, have low literacy skills and lack the self-esteem necessary to be their child's first teacher. As a result, these children lack a strong literacy experience, lack reading readiness, and enter school behind their peers. By working with the entire family, family literacy programs not only assist parents in building their literacy and education skills, but they also provide educational assistance to their children to ensure that they do not experience educational failure. Family literacy programs have demonstrated their effectiveness in bringing about change in the home. Parents begin to read to their children and support their child's education. Over the long term, children whose parents participate in the program are less likely to need special education or to be held back in school. Participation in family literacy programs not only helps adults become self-sufficient, it empowers parents and provides them with the skills they need to work with schools to ensure their child receives the best possible education.

Sharon Darling cited the results of a recent follow-up study of 200 representative families in four states, performed one to six years after attending a family literacy program and found that:

51 percent of the adults had received a high school equivalency certificate;

43 percent were employed, compared to 14 percent before enrolling;

13 percent have enrolled in higher education or training programs and another 11 percent are continuing in adult education programs working toward GED certification;

Dependence on public assistance was reduced by 50 percent; and,

The present primary teachers rate almost 80 percent of former family literacy children at or above the class average on such factors as attendance, classroom behavior, relations with other children, motivation to learn, family support for education, and probability of success in school.

For these reasons, we have added family literacy as one of the uses of funds for which these block grant dollars may be used under Section 314.

STRONG LINKS TO JOB TRAINING

One of the primary changes in this legislation is the new connection between job training and adult education systems. Too many individuals seeking job training find themselves unable to benefit from programs because they do not have the literacy skills necessary to benefit from training programs.

Increased employability is a priority outcome for adult basic education services—for both the individuals who need to strengthen their educational skills and for the communities in which they live and work. Testimony provided to the Committee by Mr. L. E. Bunch, Assistant Director, UAW-GM Center for Human Resources, which recognized the need to offer skill upgrading classes to employees and their spouses, pointed out the benefits of their adult education program:

As UAW-represented employees of General Motors, they have used these programs as building blocks to move on to more advanced job-related training. They now can successfully undertake team building activities, perform statistical process control functions, and engage in sophisticated problem-solving techniques. They can, as a result of their increasing skills, achieve the degree of performance necessary to function in the new high performance workplace.

The ability of communities to attract and maintain high performance, high wage businesses and industries and the ability of individuals to obtain and retain good jobs at these workplaces have a common denominator: a strong educational foundation upon which responsive, flexible and high quality products and services can be built.

The Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act eliminates current barriers to strong partnerships between education and job training programs and involves the education community in the development of a State's job training system. This acknowledgment will address some of the current problems facing individuals with low literacy skills who are seeking training and employment. It is the view of the Committee that the current adult education system be strengthened in order to meet the job training demands under this legislation, as well as under welfare reform.

MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT

The Adult Education Act contains one of the most restrictive maintenance of effort provisions in federal education programs, totally eliminating funds for states when the fiscal effort per student or the amount available for expenditure by such state for adult education is reduced by as little as $1. While the law contains a 25 percent match requirement, the percentage share of total expenditures of many States far exceed this amount. For example, Michigan and California match by more than 90 percent and Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Maine, Minnesota and Oregon match by more than 80 percent. While these states are to be commended for their extraordinary effort, the Committee is concerned their past effort could restrict their ability to move funds to fill other important needs should such a situation arise in the future. While we believe adult education programs to be a vital component of any state's education system, we do realize that emergency situations arise and states may be forced to divert funding from the system at one time or another. As such, the Committee has revised the current maintenance of effort provisions to: 1) allow states to reduce their effort comparable to any reduction in federal dollars; 2) reduce federal contributions by the same percentage reduction in state contributions rather than totally eliminate the availability of federal dollars for such state. In addition, current law has been modified to limit reductions in federal funds to those instances where a state reduces its effort by more than 10 percent. The Committee believes these changes will introduce an element of fairness into the maintenance of effort provisions. While the Committee would encourage states to continue their level of support for adult education programs, it does not want to penalize program participants by eliminating all federal funds in instances where this is not possible.

USING ADULT EDUCATION FUNDS FOR OTHER PURPOSES

While the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act ties adult education to the job training system, it acknowledges there are important uses of adult education other than assisting individuals who need to increase their literacy skills for purposes of employment. Marian Jackson, in her testimony before the Committee on February 25, 1997, explained that she had dropped out of school in the eleventh grade to care for a sick mother. While she has been in and out of adult education classes because of family responsibilities, she is still working toward her GED. She has also used her participation in adult education, among other things, as a way of encouraging her children to stay in school and graduate. According to Marian Jackson:

Every day I use the skills I have learned in my adult education classes. Because my math skills are better, I can now shop and plan so that I have money left over. My writing skills are better and I can write letters to friends. I have written several of my government representatives about problems in my community. I can read a lot better and understanding what I'm reading and, I'm not afraid to speak out anymore. I am now a full time care giver for my six year old grandson. My skills will help me be able to help him with his school work. In my job, I use the skills I learn to make me a better care giver to the elderly people I work for. In addition to books skills, my self esteem and self confidence have grown.

According to the most recent National Evaluation of Adult Education Programs (1995) (NEAEP), the number of participants enrolling in English as a Second Language (ESL) programs is on the increase. In the 1992-1993 program year, 40 percent of program participants were enrolled in ESL classes. In 1980, ESL learners constituted just under 20 percent of enrollees. This grew to 31 percent in 1992 and 1993 and, according to the NEAEP study, 46 percent of new enrollees entered ESL instruction.

These are but a few examples of the types of assistance provided to individuals which are not related to employment but which assist them in completing the types of everyday tasks which individuals with good literacy skills take for granted. The Committee felt, therefore, that it was important to allow the continued use of funds for purposes other than employment-related literacy programs.

MEASURING PROGRAM SUCCESS

In Section 154 of this Act, the Committee has set forth core indicators of performance for adult education and literacy programs, which States can use to monitor the success of adult education and literacy programs funded under this Act. While high school diplomas and GEDs are some of the more commonly used measures of program success, the Committee recognizes that there are other measures, particularly for individuals with low literacy levels. By setting broad parameters for measuring program success, the Committee has allotted to States the responsibility for establishing their own statewide goals and benchmarks for achieving those goals. At the same time, we will be able to monitor whether or not programs funded under this Act are effectively serving the diverse educational needs of individuals no longer in school. The Committee expects States to use information collected from local providers to improve programs and make decisions on the allocation of resources.

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR LITERACY AND STATE LITERACY
RESOURCE CENTERS

Section 321 of the Committee bill continues the authorization of the National Institute for Literacy. The National Institute for Literacy (NIFL) is a critical part of the national effort to improve the nation's system of adult education and literacy. The research, development, technical assistance, and information that the NIFL provides to State and local programs will be even more important as literacy providers work to meet the goals and performance standards required by this legislation. For example, the electronic information and communications network developed by the NIFL will provide the adult education and literacy field with up-to-date information both from national sources and other State and local programs. Since literacy and basic skills education for adults and families is vital to attaining many of the nation's economic and social goals, the NIFL must provide leadership in creating more effective and efficient literacy services.

The Committee intends for the NIFL to be a national resource for Federal agencies, States, and local employment and education programs as they implement the Employment, Training and Literacy Enhancement Act. The interagency nature of the NIFL is a perfect fit for the coordinated, consolidated human resource development system that is the goal of this legislation. The Committee expects the NIFL to continue in this role of working with the Departments of Labor, Education, and Health and Human Services and expects these Federal agencies to work closely with the NIFL to support its mission.

In order to speed the replacement of members of the National Institute for Literacy Advisory Board, the Committee has modified current law to allow the Interagency Group (the Departments of Education, Labor, and Health and Human Services) to appoint members to the board. This is no reflection on the important role played by the Institute. Rather a response to a concern about the length of the Presidential appointment process.

The Committee did not provide a separate line item for State Literacy Resource Centers. While the Committee believes the Centers serve a meaningful purpose, it is important at this time to focus as many dollars as possible on providing services at the local level. However, in view of the fact that these State centers provide an important link between States and local programs and the National Institute for Literacy and may not be continued without some type of Federal support, the Committee has included language in Section 314 allows individual States to fund these centers out of the funds they receive under this Act. Section 321 of the bill permits the National Institute for Literacy to fund a network of State or regional adult literacy resource centers to assist State and local public and private nonprofit efforts to improve literacy. The Institute is already funding a variety of activities through these centers and the Committee supports the continued funding of such activities.

TITLE VIII—AMENDMENTS TO THE WAGNER-PEYSER ACT

This Committee feels that because the Wagner-Peyser Act is financed almost exclusively by employers through the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA), there is an obligation to ensure that these funds are used for their intended purpose to maintain a national system of employment services. The amendments to the Wagner-Peyser Act ensure that its programs are fully coordinated with the full service employment and training delivery system proposed under this legislation.

The Committee wants to stress the importance of the connection between the Employment Service (ES) and the Unemployment Insurance (UI) System. This linkage has been proven to move UI recipients back to work more quickly, thereby keeping unemployment taxes as low as possible.

Amendments to the Wagner-Peyser Act reflect the need to have this statute be consistent with the changes and repeals of other job training programs under H.R. 1385. Specifically, conforming amendments have been changed throughout. In order to ensure coordination between the Employment Service Offices within the full service employment and training delivery system, the amendments clarify the role of the Secretary of Labor to oversee this process, as well as to establish accountability and performance measures for the Employment Service. The role of Governors is also enhanced under these amendments by providing them more authority over the funds provided under this Act, in accordance with State statute. In the past, some Governors have found it difficult to ensure that Employment Service funds in their State are coordinated with the overall employment and training strategy.

In order to reduce the burden upon States in submitting multiple plans, amendments to Subsection (f), in combination with the State plan provisions of this legislation, require that the State plan under Wagner-Peyser be submitted as part of the State employment, training, and literacy plan. It is the Committee's intention that this will ensure even greater coordination between these systems. The bill also eliminates the statutory authority of the Federal Advisory Council.

BACKGROUND

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 provides comprehensive Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) services to help individuals with physical and mental disabilities become employable and achieve independence and integration into society. The Rehabilitation Act was originally enacted in 1920 as a means of returning injured workers to their jobs. The program was expanded in 1943 to help meet the manpower shortage after the entry of the United States into World War II. Amendments in 1973 gave service priority to persons with severe disabilities if such persons had employment potential. The 1978 amendments expanded the Act by adding a major new service category, comprehensive services for independent living, for persons with severe disabilities without current employment potential. Amendments in 1986 strengthened services to the severely disabled by authorizing employment services for persons unable to maintain competitive employment without special assistance.

Amendments in 1992 reauthorized the Act for five years through FY 1997. Among other provisions, the law included amendments to establish a general presumption that persons with disabilities, including persons with severe disabilities, can benefit from VR services in terms of an employment outcome, unless the State VR agency can show evidence otherwise. This presumption allows some persons, who would not have otherwise been eligible, to enter the program. The amendments also required that eligibility for VR services be determined within 60 days of application; increased client choice of VR services; and increased requirements for consumer control of rehabilitation policy and service delivery.

THE NEED FOR A FUTURE COMPREHENSIVE REVIEW

The public rehabilitation system has evolved over a 75 year history and has developed a degree of expertise and success in serving those individuals with disabilities who have the greatest needs. The Committee believes that the 1992 amendments to the Act made important changes to improve the nation's State vocational rehabilitation systems. Based on the Committee's review of the Act and its implementation, and evidence of difficulties with the program that have come out over the last five years, the Committee believes that the Act, particularly the Title I Vocational Rehabilitation Services program, merits a comprehensive review. Strong evidence supports the need for such a review.

Testimony before this Committee has been mixed on the need for change and the scope of that change. During hearings this year, Judith Heumann, Assistant Secretary for the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services noted that, "State VR agencies have been successful in increasing the numbers of individuals achieving an employment outcome." Yet later in her statement, she conceded that, "we must increase employer involvement [and] continue our efforts to streamline the rehabilitation process."

At the same hearing, Paul Spooner, Executive Director of MetroWest Center for Independent Living in Framingham, Massachusetts presented a similarly mixed view of the current state of the vocational rehabilitation system. He said:

Many positive changes came out of the 1992 amendments, including the simplification of the eligibility process, consumer choice, and changes to the Centers for Independent Living Program. Overall, the changes have been very positive and have led to greater consumer control and involvement. * * * Many States have implemented the 1992 amendments * * * even though there are still no new regulations from the Rehabilitation Services Administration. The process of eligibility has been streamlined. Greater consumer choice has been provided. * * * Some States continue to ignore consumer choice, continue to practice lengthy and unnecessary eligibility processes, and do not place consumers in competitive employment situations. * * * In many cases, State agencies only give lip service to the concept of consumer control and consumer choice.

There has also been division in the view of the system among those who direct it—State vocational rehabilitation service directors. This year, Paul Charles LaRosa, Commissioner of the South Carolina Vocational Rehabilitation Department testified during Committee hearings:

Nationwide, as in South Carolina, competitive job placements have risen substantially every year since the passage of the 1992 Amendments. * * * It is of interest to note here that the level of effectiveness of the Public Vocational Rehabilitation Program with * * * Social Security recipients would be even further enhanced if the “disincentives to work” inherent in the Social Security Program were to be addressed.

Yet during hearings in 1995, Patrick W. McKenna, Director of the Maryland Rehabilitative Services, said:

The systems, procedures and required processes imposed on providers of rehabilitation services are an anachronism which somehow prevail despite the knowledge that they are, in many respects, obstacles which limit and compromise the effective and responsible delivery of services for consumers. The public program of vocational rehabilitation has created, over many decades, a burdensome reliance on “process” which has created an environment where value is placed on form over substance.

Public reports have been critical of the current system. In its 1993 study, the General Accounting Office pointed out emerging factors which are placing great strain on the centralized system:

Effective vocational rehabilitation programs are important for a number of reasons. First, a productive and humane society is enhanced by the useful employment of as many of its adult members as possible. Second, statistics suggest that the population of Americans with work disabilities may be increasing. Some scholars have argued that recent reductions in the risk of death from accidents and illnesses are associated with an increasing risk of disability. And third, technological developments such as the availability of assistive devices and new behavioral training techniques have made it possible for individuals who were previously regarded as unemployable to enter the workplace.

With these changes in the characteristics of the population needing services, additional strains are being placed on the system. From FY 1992 to FY 1993, the number of newly eligible persons increased by 24 percent, the highest intake level in 16 years. Requirements added in the 1992 amendments have recently affected VR caseload trends. These included the presumption of benefits, and that VR agencies make eligibility determinations within 60 days of a person's application.

In January 1997, the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill released a report entitled, "A Legacy of Failure: The Inability of the Federal-State Vocational Rehabilitation System to Serve People with Mental Illness." That report strongly criticized the State system, stating that, "the federal-state vocational rehabilitation system has achieved dismal outcomes in serving people with severe mental illness. It achieves a lower rate of closure into meaningful jobs as compared to others with physical disabilities and mental retardation." The report went on to conclude that, "Most state vocational rehabilitation agencies show little initiative to revise existing procedures or to adopt systems that would create real incentives for counselors to serve consumers with complex needs, including those with severe mental illness."

Given the calls to action, the heavy criticism of the vocational rehabilitation system, and the dissent from that criticism, the Committee strongly believes that the Rehabilitation Act needs significant and careful review. Unfortunately, the Committee believes that it is unable at this time to provide the kind of in-depth legislative oversight that this program merits. The primary problem has been the uneven implementation of the 1992 Amendments. As noted by Mr. Spooner during the Committee's hearings, some States have implemented the regulations and some have not.

The Department of Education bears significant responsibility for this problem. The Department failed to propose and finalize regulations implementing the 1992 State-Federal program changes until February, 1997. It failed to implement changes to the Title VI Projects With Industry regulations until 1997. And, as of this time, the Department has yet to release even draft versions of the Standards and Indicators implementing regulations a full four and a half years after the passage of the 1992 Amendments. Although the historic practice in reviewing and authorizing this law has been to review the implementation of the Act, based on its implementation over the previous five years, the Committee does not believe that the 1992 Amendments have been implemented sufficiently or uniformly enough to properly review their results.

LENGTH OF AUTHORIZATION, SCOPE OF REFORMS AND VIEWS

For the reasons outlined above in the Background section, the Committee has chosen a three-year authorization of the Rehabilitation Act and its programs. The Committee believes that the implementation of this Act and its 1992 Amendments is too important to defer beyond the 106th Congress. For similar reasons, other amendments in this authorization have been limited as well to those that are measured in scope and for which there is a consensus on the propriety for change.

EXPLANATION OF OTHER AMENDMENTS

One of the most significant amendments to the legislation has been the repeal of 22 authorized by unfunded programs. Many of these programs have been authorized for over twenty years and have never received appropriations. In these times of budgetary constraint and scarce resources, the Committee believes that the primary focus of resources should be on the Title I program.

Substantive changes and additions to the Rehabilitation Act include the definition of administrative costs. The Committee believes that previous accountings of program administration in the Title I program have been inadequate. The Committee complements the Secretary's recent definition of administrative costs as part of its February 1997 regulations, and has codified much of that definition for the Title I program.

The Committee reaffirms the distinct original purposes of the statewideness and private earmarked funds provisions of Title I. The statewideness provision is intended to ensure that, in general, State efforts are not purposely skewed to particular areas of a State, without permission from the Department of Education. The private earmarked funds provisions, which were created two years earlier, were intended to permit the private earmarking of funds for construction of rehabilitation facilities and later, for direct services by the same principle, when State tax dollars are insufficient to match Federal funds. Particularly in light of its construction project origins, the earmarking provision was clearly intended to permit earmarked funds to assist particular areas.

When the statewideness concept was added to the law a few years after the earmarking authority, statewideness was not intended to cover the private earmarking of funds. This was clearly demonstrated by the fact that the practice of private earmarking without a waiver of statewideness occurred on a regular basis in the 1970's. Contrary to recent Department interpretations of these statutory provisions, the bill clarifies that earmarking of private funds for service delivery in particular geographic areas of the State is permitted without a waiver of the State's statewideness obligations.

For the purposes of this Act, the Committee creates parity between the treatment of community rehabilitation programs that participate in the Javits-Wagner-O'Day program and those that participate in "state use" contracting programs. State use programs are those State government procurement set-aside programs authorized under various State laws.

For purposes of interpreting the meaning of the term "state use," the following statutes are listed as example of state use laws: California (West's California Codes Annotated Welfare and Institutions Code secs. 19403 and 19404); Connecticut (General Statutes of Connecticut secs. 10-100, 10-103, 10-103a, 10-294a, and 10-298 through 298d); Delaware (Delaware Code Annotated title 16, secs. 9601 through 9605); Florida (Florida Statutes secs. 413.031 through 413.037); Indiana (Indiana Statutes secs. 16-7-11.5-1 to 16-7-11.5-3); Maryland (Maryland State Finance and Procurement Code Annotated secs. 14-101 through 14-108); New Jersey (New Jersey Revised Statutes secs. 30:6-23 through 30:6-33); New York (New York State Finance Law secs. 175-a through 175-c); North Carolina (General Statutes of North Carolina sec. 143-48); Ohio (Ohio Revised Code Annotated secs. 4115.31 through 4115.35); Oregon (Oregon Revised Statutes secs. 279.835 through 279.855); Pennsylvania (71 Pennsylvania Consolidated Statutes sec. 639.1); Tennessee (Tennessee Code Annotated secs. 71-4-201 through 71-4-205, and 71-4-701 through 71-4-705); Texas (Texas Human Resources Code sec. 122.001 through 122.019); Washington (Revised Code of Washington secs. 43.19.520 through 43.19.530); West Virginia (West Virginia Code secs. 5A-3-10, and 5A-3A-1 through 5A-3A-6); and Wisconsin (Wisconsin Statutes sec. 15.105(22) and 16.752). This list should not be interpreted as excluding other similar laws, but is added for the convenience of identifying examples of such statutes.

The Committee also clarifies the original intent of Title I State plan provisions relating to students with disabilities who have Individualized Education Programs (IEPs). The Senate report for the 1992 Amendments stated that the intent of the transition services amendments was not “to shift the responsibility of service delivery from education to rehabilitation during the transition years. The role of the rehabilitation system is primarily one of planning for the student’s years after leaving school.” The Committee believes that its changes to this provision will effectuate that intent by permitting the delivery of transition services under an IEP without the development of an Individualized Written Rehabilitation Plan. This will reverse the current effect of discouraging vocational rehabilitation counselor participation by requiring an IWRP for every student with an IEP.

The bill also reduces the prescriptive Federal design of State counselor training programs. It instead permits States to determine what their own needs are by their own means, without abdicating their responsibility for providing training to their staff. The Committee also believes that Congress should not use the Title I program to push particular careers and has amended the Act’s scope of services provisions to effectuate that intent.

The Committee intends that Standards and Indicators, when at long last they are released by the Department of Education, will be reviewed every three years and revised after public comment. The Committee strongly intends, however, that this public comment not delay the timely review and revision of these long-overdue program performance evaluation tools. The Committee believes that scrutiny by an interested public is one of the strongest means of assuring program responsiveness, and to that end has required that findings and reports from annual reviews and periodic on-site monitoring visits shall be made available to State Rehabilitation Advisory Councils.

CONCLUSION

The scope of amendments in this bill is limited because the Committee believes that it needs time to review the implementation of the 1992 amendments to the Rehabilitation Act and its regulations. The Committee expects, however, that there will be major reforms of this program during its next authorization in the 106th Congress.

H.R. 1385—Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act of 1997

SUMMARY

H.R. 1385 would restructure federal programs that provide grants to state and local governments for the provision of employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation services. The bill addresses these issues in two divisions. Division A of the bill would simplify the process by which states could apply for aid by requiring a single state plan for grants to fund employment service operations, literary programs, and job training for youth, adults, and dislocated workers. This portion of the bill also would eliminate the authorizations for a number of job training programs that currently receive no federal appropriation. Division B would extend the current authorizations for programs under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (VRA) of 1973 and the Helen Keller National Center Act, but also would eliminate a number of the VRA programs that currently receive no federal appropriations. Because most of the programs under the VRA currently are classified as direct spending programs, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply.

Most of the authorizations provided in H.R. 1385 are for programs already authorized under current law and would have no net budgetary impact. The bill would, however, authorize appropriations for employment and training services for Native Americans, adult education programs, and vocational rehabilitation services above those provided under current law. Over the 1998–2002 period, these additional authorizations total $2.4 billion with adjustments for inflation and $2.3 billion without these adjustments.

H.R. 1385 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995 (UMRA).

BASIS OF ESTIMATE

H.R. 1385 would reorganize employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation programs. The bill has two divisions: Division A would authorize funding for employment and training programs for disadvantaged youth and adults, as well as adult education and literacy programs; Division B would authorize vocational rehabilitation programs.

Division A: Employment, training, and literacy programs

Division A of H.R. 1385 restructures employment, training, and literacy programs for adults and youth, but is estimated to provide higher authorized amounts only for services for Native Americans and for adult education programs. The increase in authorization levels for these two types of programs over the next five years (assuming inflation adjustments) is $50 million and $2.3 billion, respectively.

Division A would authorize grants to states to fund employment and training programs for youth and adults using the general framework of the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) and the Adult Education Act. H.R. 1385 would rename JTPA the "Employment, Training, and Literacy Enhancement Act" (ETLEA), and would replace the Adult Education Act with the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act (AEFLA). The bill would authorize "such sums as may be necessary" for fiscal years 1999–2003 for programs authorized under Titles II, III, IV, and for fiscal years 1998–2003 for programs authorized under Title V.

Under Title II of H.R. 1385, Title II of JTPA would be amended by striking the separate authorizations for adult and summer youth employment programs, leaving only programs for disadvantaged youth. Summer youth employment, however, would become an allowable activity under Title II of the ETLEA. For purposes of this estimate, CBO assumed that authorizations of appropriations for this title would be the same as the combined spending for youth programs under current law. The amounts adjusted for inflation would be just over $1 billion in fiscal year 1999, and about $4.3 billion over the fiscal years 1999–2002; without inflation adjustments, the 1999–2002 total would be $3.6 billion.

Adult employment and training programs would be authorized under Title III of this bill, along with a separate funding stream for services targeted toward dislocated workers. Title III of JTPA currently authorizes employment and training programs for dislocated workers only. CBO estimates that spending for adult workers would be the same as under the current JTPA program for adult training (JTPA Title II–A), or $0.9 billion in fiscal year 1999, and $3.9 billion over the fiscal years 1999–2002. Likewise, CBO assumes that authorized spending on training programs for dislocated workers would continue to be the same as for the current law program—$1.4 billion in fiscal year 1999, and nearly $5.6 billion over fiscal years 1999–2002, with adjustments for inflation. Without such adjustments, spending for these programs would be $1.3 billion in 1999 and $5.1 billion over the 1999–2002 period.

Title IV of H.R. 1385 would continue to follow the general framework of JTPA. It would authorize programs under the new ETLEA for services to Native Americans and migrants and seasonal farm workers in Part A, for the Job Corps (Part B), for veterans (Subtitle C), for national activities (Part D), and for labor market information (Part E). H.R. 1385 would authorize such sums as may be necessary for Parts B, C, D, and E, and not less than $70 million for each of the two programs authorized in Part A. CBO assumes that spending for these programs would be the same as under current law, with the exception of training programs for Native Americans, which would receive an increase of $15 million in fiscal year 1999, because this program currently is appropriated less than $70 million. (See Table 2.) Total funding for this title under H.R. 1385 is estimated at $1.4 billion for fiscal year 1999, and about $5.9 billion over fiscal years 1999–2002 assuming adjustments for inflation. Without inflation adjustments the spending during fiscal years 1999–2002 would total $5.4 billion.

Note.—Components may not sum to totals because of rounding.

Title IV also would repeal authorizations for some national programs, including the National Commission for Employment Policy, training to fulfill affirmative action obligations, Youth Fair Chance, microenterprise grants programs, and disaster relief employment assistance. These programs do not have a current appropriation, and no budgetary impact would result from their repeal.

Title V of H.R. 1385 would rewrite the adult education program law. The current Adult Education Act would be replaced with the Adult Education and Family Literacy Act (AEFLA). The new act would have a broader purpose, which would be to provide adults the basic educational skills necessary for employment and self-sufficiency, and to give parents educational skills needed “to be full partners in the educational development of their children.”

Title V would authorize such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of AEFLA for fiscal years 1998 through 2003. Part A of AEFLA would give the Secretary of Education authority to give grants to states for adult education and literacy, family literacy, and English literacy purposes. This part contains a hold-harmless clause that would ensure that a state's funding does not fall far below previous levels, as well as maintenance of effort requirements that states continue funding at historical levels.

Part B of AEFLA would rewrite current law governing activities of the National Institute for Literacy, but the institute would continue with essentially the same structure. The National Institute for Literacy is administered under an interagency agreement among the Departments of Labor, Education, and Health and Human Services, but is in a separate office. The duty of the institute is to provide leadership for the improvement and expansion of literacy programs.

Because H.R. 1385 would authorize such sums as necessary to carry out the purposes of AEFLA but does not list a specific amount as a starting point, it is difficult to ascertain Congressional intent for authorizations for this program. A wide variety of activities would be authorized under this title. CBO used current funding for adult education programs as a starting point and assumed that this title would authorize spending that would be 25 percent higher. This funding level is consistent with the caps on the two set-asides in this title for national leadership activities.

Programs under the Adult Education Act currently are authorized through 1997. CBO estimates that Title V would authorize appropriations of $443 million in 1998 and $2.3 billion over the 1998 through 2002 period, assuming adjustments for inflation. Authorizations of appropriations would total $2.2 billion over the same period without adjustments for inflation.

Title V would also repeal the National Literacy Act of 1991. Authorizations of appropriations for this act have expired, so repealing it would have no budgetary impact.

Division B: Vocational rehabilitation programs

Direct spending

H.R. 1385 would extend the "such sums" authorizations for existing programs under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (VRA). Most of these programs are funded in the Rehabilitation Services and Disability budget account. Under Budget Enforcement Act (BEA) rules, the programs included in this budget account currently are classified as direct spending.

H.R. 1385 would make no substantive changes to any VRA program, and the CBO estimate shows no direct spending impacts as a result of the bill's enactment. However, since 1993, any bill that amends or extends any of these otherwise discretionary spending programs has been treated as negating the BEA categorization. The House Budget Committee staff has indicated that, upon enactment of H.R. 1385, spending for all VRA programs except the basic state grant program would be reclassified as "spending subject to appropriation" or discretionary spending. Subsequent baseline projections would include the reclassified programs in a discretionary spending budget account. This cost estimate, however, does not reflect such budget reclassifications. In fiscal year 1999, the first year the change would be effective, $305 million would be reclassified from direct spending to discretionary spending.

Most of the grant programs under the VRA are authorized at “such sums as may be necessary” through 1998 under the General Education Provisions Act (GEPA). GEPA provides an automatic one-year extension of authorization for all programs in the Department of Education. There are, however, two exceptions: the authorization for the basic state grant program expires at the end of 1999 (assuming the GEPA extension), and the improvement and evaluation grants are permanently authorized.

Note.—Components may not sum to totals because of rounding.

The authorization for the basic state grant program is extended through 2002 including the GEPA extension. The estimated authorization level for basic grants is the previous year’s appropriation adjusted for inflation. The basic state grant program received a total of $2.18 billion in 1997.

For the client assistance grants under Title I and all the grants under Titles II through VII for which the authorization expires at the end of 1998, H.R. 1385 extends those “such sums” authorizations through 2001, including the GEPA extension. In 1997, these grant programs received appropriations totaling $286 million.

Spending subject to appropriations

Vocational Rehabilitation Act.—Title VIII of the VRA was added to the Act in the vocational Rehabilitation Amendments of 1992, and spending on the authorized activities were determined to be treated as discretionary rather than mandatory spending. Title VIII's "such sums" authorization for special demonstration projects expires at the end of fiscal year 1998, and H.R. 1385 extends these authorizations through 2001, including the GEPA extension. Although no Title VIII funds were appropriated in fiscal year 1997, the Secretary of Education used Title III direct spending funds for specific projects described in Title VIII. In 1997, about $5 million out of a total of $59 million for Title III demonstration projects were used for projects described in Title VIII. H.R. 1385 extends the authorization for appropriation only for those specific types of projects currently being funded out of Title III funds. The estimated authorization levels for Title VIII in this cost estimate reflect the levels currently funded in Title III both with and without adjustments for projected inflation. Estimated outlays reflect current program spending patterns.

The "such sums" authorization for the National Council on Disability expires at the end of fiscal year 1997. This bill extends the "such sums" authorization of the council through 2000. The council has been funded at about $2 million annually for the past several years, and this cost estimate reflects the 1997 appropriation level with and without adjustments for projected inflation. Estimated outlays reflect current program spending patterns.

The bill also would eliminate the authorization for appropriations for all unfunded VRA programs.

Helen Keller National Center Act.—The current authorization for the Helen Keller National Center Act expires at the end of 1998. H.R. 1385 would extend the "such sums" authorization for the center through 2001, including the GEPA extension.

The center is funded in the Rehabilitation Services and Disability Research budget account and, thus, currently is classified as direct spending. However, unlike the VRA grant programs, this program is not included in the current baseline spending projections after 1998 because the BEA stipulates that direct spending programs of less than $50 million shall not be included in the baseline forecast past their expiration dates. The center received funding of $7 million in 1997. The estimated authorization level for the center is the 1997 funding level both with and without projected inflation. Estimated outlays reflect current program spending patterns.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO CONSIDERATIONS

H.R. 1385 would not result in any change in direct spending or receipts in fiscal year 1998.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL IMPACT

H.R. 1385 contains no intergovernmental mandates as defined in UMRA. The bill would restructure federal programs that provide grants to state and local governments for employment, training, literacy, and vocational rehabilitation services. Because participation in these programs is voluntary, the new conditions and requirements imposed on state and local governments would not be considered mandates under UMRA. In fiscal year 1997, state, local, and tribal governments will receive approximately $6.0 billion in grants from the programs reauthorized in the bill. CBO estimates that under H.R. 1385, such grants would total $6.3 billion in fiscal year 1998 and $33.2 billion over fiscal years 1998–2002.

ESTIMATED IMPACT ON THE PRIVATE SECTOR

The bill would impose no new private sector mandates as defined in UMRA.

Estimate prepared by: Federal Cost: Deborah Kalcevic, Justin Latus, and Christina Hawley Sadoti; Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Marc Nicole; Impact on the Private Sector: Theresa Devine.

Estimate approved by: Robert A. Sunshine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

SEC. 2. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Act is to transform the current array of Federal employment, training, and adult education and literacy programs from a collection of fragmented and duplicative categorical programs into high quality, coherent, and accountable State and local systems that are designed—

(1) to provide high quality training for today and for the 21st century;

(2) to empower individuals to choose occupations and training programs, based on accurate and up-to-date information, that will develop more fully their academic, occupational, and literacy skills, leading to productive employment and economic self-sufficiency, and reduction in welfare dependency;

(3) to provide resources and authority to States and local communities and increase ease of access to high quality employment, training, and literacy programs;

(4) to provide adults with the adult education services they require to participate fully in society;

(5) to meet the needs of employers in the United States to be competitive; and

(6) to ensure an adequate return on the investment of funds in employment, training, and literacy programs through strong program accountability.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated the following amounts for the following purposes (in addition to amounts otherwise available for such purposes):

(2) AMOUNT.—The amount available for reallocation is equal to the amount by which the unobligated balance of the State allotment under title II or title III, respectively, at the end of the program year prior to the program year for which the determination under this paragraph is made exceeds 15 percent of such allotment for the prior program year.

(3) REALLOTMENT.—In making reallocations to eligible States of amounts available pursuant to paragraph (2) for a program year, the Secretary shall allot to each eligible State an amount based on the relative amount allotted to such State under title II or title III, respectively, for the prior program year as compared to the total amount allotted to all eligible States under title II or title III, respectively, for such prior program year.

[SEC. 401. (a) The Congress finds that (1) serious unemployment and economic disadvantages exist among members of Indian, Alaskan Native, and Hawaiian Native communities; (2) there is a compelling need for the establishment of comprehensive training and employment programs for members of those communities; and (3) such programs are essential to the reduction of economic disadvantages among individual members of those communities and to the advancement of economic and social development in the communities consistent with their goals and lifestyles.

[(b) The Congress therefore declares that, because of the special relationship between the Federal Government and most of the individuals to be served by the provisions of this section, (1) such programs shall be administered at the national level; (2) such programs shall be available to federally recognized Indian tribes, bands, and groups and to other groups and individuals of Native American descent; and (3) such programs shall be administered in such a manner as to maximize the Federal commitment to support growth and development as determined by representatives of the communities and groups served by this section.

[(c)(1)(A) In carrying out responsibilities under this section, the Secretary shall, wherever possible, utilize Indian tribes, bands, or groups on Federal or State reservations, Oklahoma Indians, and including for the purpose of this Act, Alaska Native villages or groups as defined in the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, having a governing body for the provision of employment and training services under this section. When the Secretary determines that such tribe, band, or group has demonstrated the capability to effectively administer a comprehensive employment and training program, the Secretary shall require such tribe, band, or group to submit a comprehensive plan meeting such requirements as the Secretary prescribes.

The Secretary shall take such additional actions as may be necessary to promote the recruitment and promotion of Indians, Alaskan Natives, and Hawaiian Natives to positions in such unit.

[(k)(1) There is hereby established a Native American Employment and Training Council (referred to in this subsection as the "Council"), which shall consist of not fewer than 17 Indians, Alaskan Natives, and Hawaiian Natives appointed by the Secretary from among individuals nominated by Indian tribes or Indian, Alaskan Native, or Hawaiian Native organizations. The membership of the Council shall represent all geographic areas of the United States with a substantial Indian, Alaskan Native, or Hawaiian Native population and shall include representatives of tribal governments and of nonreservation Native American organizations who are service providers under this Act. [(1) chronic seasonal unemployment and underemployment in the agricultural industry, aggravated by continual advancements in technology and mechanization resulting in displacement, constitute a substantial portion of the Nation's rural employment problem and substantially affect the entire national economy; and

[(2) because of the special nature of farmworker employment and training problems, such programs shall be centrally administered at the national level.

[(b) The Secretary is directed to take appropriate action to establish administrative procedures and machinery (including personnel having particular competence in this field) for the selection, administration, monitoring, and evaluation of migrant and seasonal employment and training programs authorized under this Act.

[PART G—TRAINING TO FULFILL AFFIRMATIVE ACTION OBLIGATIONS

[AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

[SEC. 481. (a) A contractor subject to the affirmative action obligations of Executive Order 11246, as amended, issued September 24, 1965, may establish or participate in training programs pursuant to this section for individuals meeting the eligibility criteria established in sections 203(a)(1), 401, and 402, which are designed to assist such contractors in meeting the affirmative action obligations of such Executive order. To qualify under this section, such a training program shall contain—

[(1) a description of the jobs in the contractor's work force or in the service delivery area, for which the contractor has determined there is a need for training;

[(2) a description of the recruiting, training, or other functions that the contractor, or the organization that will be engaged to perform the training, will perform and the steps that will be taken to insure that eligible individuals will—

[(A) be selected for participation in training,

[(B) be trained in necessary skills, and

[(C) be referred for job openings, in accordance with the objectives of such Executive order;

[(3) whenever an organization other than the contractor will perform the training, a description of the demonstrated effectiveness of the organization as a provider of employment and training services;

[(4) a description of how the contractor will monitor the program to keep an accurate accounting of all trainees, including (A) whether the trainees successfully complete the training program, and (B) whether the trainees are or are not placed; and

[(5) an estimation of the cost of the program and an assurance that the contractor will assume all costs of the program or the pro rata share of costs to the contractor of the program.

[(b)(1)(A) If the training proposal is designed to meet the needs of the community rather than, or in addition to, the employment needs of the contractor, and has not been approved by another Federal agency, the program shall be submitted to the private industry council established under section 102 for a determination that there is a need for such training in the community.

[(B) Individuals trained under any program satisfying the requirements of this section may be included by the private industry council in its performance accomplishments and the wage gains of such individuals shall be included in determining the compliance of the job training program of the private industry council with applicable standards.

[(2) The Director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, Department of Labor, shall promulgate regulations setting forth how the Office will determine, during a compliance review, the degree to which a training program will satisfy the contractor's affirmative action obligations. The training and placement of trainees with employers other than the contractor may be considered in evaluating such contractor's overall good faith efforts, but in no event may placement of trainees with employers other than the contractor be permitted to affect that contractor's affirmative action obligations respecting its work force. The content of the training program will not be subject to review or regulation by the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs. If during a compliance review the Director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs determines that a training program does not comply with its regulations, the Director shall—

[(A) notify the contractor of the disapproval,

[(B) set forth the reasons for the disapproval, and

[(C) provide a list of recommendations which, if accepted, will qualify the training program under this section.

[(3) A contractor who has a training program which contains the criteria set forth in subsection (a) and which is in accordance with regulations promulgated under paragraph (2) of this subsection shall continue to meet the affirmative action obligations of Executive Order 11246, as amended, but the contractors required to maintain a written affirmative action program need only maintain an abbreviated affirmative action program, the content and length of which shall be determined by the Director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, to satisfy the written affirmative action program portion of their obligations under Executive Order 11246, as amended. Successful performance or operation of a training program meeting the criteria set forth in subsection (a) shall create a presumption that the contractor has made a good faith effort to meet its affirmative action obligations to the degree specified by the Director under paragraph (2) of this subsection, but that presumption shall not be applicable to the satisfaction of other affirmative action obligations not directly related to the training and hiring requirements of this section, or other affirmative action obligations not affected by this section. For the purpose of the preceding sentence, "successful performance or operation" means training and placing in jobs a number of individuals which bears a reasonable relationship to the number of job openings in the contractor's facilities or in the relevant labor market area.

[(c) Nothing in this section may be interpreted—

[(1) to compel contractor involvement in such programs,

[(2) to establish the exclusive criteria by which a contractor can be found to have fulfilled its affirmative action obligations,

[(3) to provide authority for imposing any additional obligations on contractors not participating in such training activities,

[(4) to permit the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs to intervene or interfere with the authority and responsibilities of the private industry councils,

[(5) to restrict or limit the authority of the Secretary to investigate the employment practices of any Government contractor, to initiate such investigation by the Director, to determine whether any nondiscrimination contractual provisions have been violated, or to enforce Executive Order 11246, or

[SEC. 322. USE OF FUNDS; LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

[(a) USE OF FUNDS.—

[(1) Grants to States under this subpart shall be used in accordance with State plans (and amendments thereto) approved under sections 341 and 351, to pay the Federal share of the cost of the establishment or expansion of adult education programs to be carried out by local educational agencies, correctional education agencies, community-based organizations, public or private nonprofit agencies, postsecondary educational institutions, and other institutions that have the ability to provide literacy services to adults and families. Each State educational agency receiving financial assistance under this subpart shall provide assurance that local educational agencies, public or private nonprofit agencies, community-based organizations, correctional education agencies, postsecondary educational institutions, and institutions which serve educationally disadvantaged adults will be provided direct and equitable access to all Federal funds provided under this subpart. Failure to provide the assurance required by the preceding sentence shall disqualify a State from receiving its allotment under this title. In determining which programs shall receive assistance under this paragraph, the State shall consider—

[(A) the past effectiveness of applicants in providing services (especially with respect to recruitment and retention of educationally disadvantaged adults and the learning gains demonstrated by such adults);

[(B) the degree to which the applicant will coordinate and utilize other literacy and social services available in the community; and

[(C) the commitment of the applicant to serve individuals in the community that are most in need of literacy services.

[(2) Grants to States provided under this section may also be used to carry out programs by a consortium which includes a for-profit agency, organization, or institution if such agency, organization, or institution can make a significant contribution to attaining the objectives of this Act. Whenever the establishment or expansion of programs includes a for-profit agency, organization, or institution, as part of a consortium, a contract with such agency, organization, or institution, for the establishment or expansion of such programs shall be entered into by the public or private nonprofit agency, institution, or organization.

[(3)(A) Grants to States provided under this section shall also be used for competitive 2-year grants to public housing authorities for literacy programs and related activities. Any public housing authority that receives a grant under this subparagraph shall consult with local adult education providers in conducting programs and activities with assistance provided under the grant. Any grant provided under this subparagraph shall be referred to as a "Gateway Grant".

[(B) The Secretary shall, not less often than every 2 years, evaluate any grants made under this paragraph.

[(4) Such application shall contain such information as the State educational agency considers necessary, including a description of current programs, activities, and services receiving assistance from Federal, State, and local sources; the projected goals of the applicant with respect to participant recruitment, retention, and educational achievement and how the applicant will measure and report progress in meeting its goals; cooperative arrangements (including arrangements with business, industry, and volunteer literacy organizations as appropriate) that have been made to deliver services to adults as well as assurances that adult educational programs, services, or activities provided under this title are coordinated with and not duplicative of services, programs, or activities made available to adults under other Federal, State, and local programs, including the Job Training Partnership Act, the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, title IX of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, the Higher Education Act of 1965, and the Domestic Volunteer Service Act.

who do not have a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education or its equivalent.

[(b) LIMITATIONS ON USE OF FUNDS.—

[(1) Not less than 10 percent of the funds paid to a State under subsection (a) shall be used for corrections education and education for other institutionalized individuals in accordance with subpart 2.

[(2) Not more than 20 percent of a State's allotment shall be used for programs of equivalency for a certificate of graduation from a secondary school.

[SEC. 323. LOCAL ADMINISTRATIVE COST LIMITS.

[(a) Of the funds provided by the State agency to eligible recipients, at least 95 percent must be expended for provision of adult education instructional activities. The remainder shall be used for planning, administration, personnel development, and interagency coordination.

[(b) In cases where the administrative cost limits under subsection (a) would be insufficient for adequate planning, administration, evaluation, and coordination of programs supported under this Act, the State agency shall negotiate with the local grant recipient in order to determine an adequate level of funds to be used for non-instructional purposes.

[This Act may be cited as the “National Literacy Act of 1991”.]

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

[The Congress finds that—

[(4) the prevention of illiteracy is essential to stem further growth in national illiteracy rates;

[(5) literacy programs generally lack adequate funding, adequate coordination with other literacy programs, and an adequate investment in teacher training and technology;

[(6) access to better information about the best practices in the literacy field and more research in order to provide better diagnostic and instructional tools are essential for the improvement of literacy and employability in the United States;

[(7) as many as 50,000,000 workers may have to be trained or retrained before the year 2000;

[(8) the supply of unskilled workers is increasing while the demand for unskilled labor is decreasing;

[(9) programs under the Adult Education Act, which are the largest Federal source of direct literacy services in the United States, serve only 10 percent of eligible participants; and [(10) all public and private literacy programs serve only about 19 percent of those who need help.

[SEC. 303. (a) For the purpose of making grants and entering into contracts under this section, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

[(b)(1) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to States and public or nonprofit organizations and agencies to pay up to 90 per centum of the cost of projects for providing vocational rehabilitation services or employment support services to individuals with disabilities, especially those with the most severe disabilities, in public or nonprofit community rehabilitation programs.

[(2)(A) For purposes of this section, vocational rehabilitation services shall include—

[(i) training with a view toward career advancement;

[(ii) training (including on-the-job training) in occupational skills; and

[(iii) services, including rehabilitation technology services, personal assistance services, and supported employment services and extended services, that—

[(I) are related to training described in clause (i) or (ii); and

[(II) are required by the individual to engage in such training.

[(B) Pursuant to regulations, payment of weekly allowances may be made to individuals receiving vocational rehabilitation services and related services under this section. Such allowances may not be paid to any individual for any period in excess of two years. In determining the amount of such allowances for any individual, consideration shall be given to the individual's need for such an allowance, including any expenses reasonably attributable to receipt of vocational rehabilitation services, the extent to which such an allowance will help assure entry into and satisfactory completion of training, and such other factors, specified by the Commissioner, as will promote such individual's capacity to engage in competitive employment.

[(3) The Commissioner may make a grant for a project pursuant to this subsection only if the Commissioner determines that (A) the purpose of such project is to prepare individuals with disabilities, especially those with the most severe disabilities, for competitive employment, or to place or retain such individual in competitive employment, including supported employment; (B) the individuals to receive vocational rehabilitation services under such project will include only those who have been determined to be in need of such vocational rehabilitation services by the State agency or agencies designated as provided in section 101(a)(1) of the State in which the community rehabilitation program is located; (C) the full range of vocational rehabilitation services will be made available to each such individual, to the extent of that individual's need for such services; and (D) the project, including the participating community rehabilitation program and the vocational rehabilitation services provided, meets such other requirements as the Commissioner may prescribe in regulations for carrying out the purposes of this subsection.

[(d)(1) The Commissioner is authorized to make grants to public or nonprofit community rehabilitation programs, or to an organization or combination of such programs, to pay the Federal share of the cost of projects to analyze, improve, and increase their professional services to individuals with disabilities, their management effectiveness, or any other part of their operations affecting their capacity to provide employment and services for such individuals.

[(2) No part of any grant made pursuant to this subsection may be used to pay costs of acquiring, constructing, expanding, remodeling, or altering any building.

【LOAN GUARANTEES FOR COMMUNITY REHABILITATION PROGRAMS

【SEC. 304. (a) It is the purpose of this section to assist and encourage the provision of needed community rehabilitation programs for individuals with disabilities primarily served by State rehabilitation programs.

[(b) The Commissioner may, under special circumstances and in accordance with this section and subject to section 306, guarantee the payment of principal and interest on loans made to nonprofit private entities by non-Federal lenders and by the Federal Financing Bank for the construction of facilities for community rehabilitation programs, including equipment used in their operation.

[(c) In the case of a guarantee of any loan to a nonprofit private entity under this section, the Commissioner shall pay, to the holder of such loan and for and on behalf of the project for which the loan was made, amounts sufficient to reduce by 2 percent per annum the net effective interest rate otherwise payable on such loan. Each holder of a loan which is guaranteed under this section shall have a contractual right to receive from the United States interest payments required by the preceding sentence.

[(d) The cumulative total of the principal of the loans outstanding at any time with respect to which guarantees have been issued, or which have been directly made, may not exceed $100,000,000.

[(e)(1) The Commissioner may not approve a loan guarantee for a project under this section unless the Commissioner determines that (A) the terms, conditions, security (if any), and schedule and amount of repayments with respect to the loan are sufficient to protect the financial interests of the United States and are otherwise reasonable, including a determination that the rate of interest does not exceed such per centum per annum on the principal obligation outstanding as the Commissioner determines to be reasonable, taking into account the range of interest rates prevailing in the private market for similar loans and the risks assumed by the United States, and (B) the loan would not be available on reasonable terms and conditions without the guarantee under this section.

[(2)(A) The United States shall be entitled to recover from the applicant for a loan guarantee under this section the amount of any payment made pursuant to such guarantee, unless the Commissioner for good cause waives such right of recovery. Upon making any such payment, the United States shall be subrogated to all of the rights of the recipient of the payments with respect to which the guarantee was made.

[(B) To the extent permitted by subparagraph (C), any terms and conditions applicable to a loan guarantee under this section (including terms and conditions imposed under paragraph (1)) may be modified by the Commissioner to the extent considered consistent with the interests of the United States.

[(C) Any loan guarantee made by the Commissioner under this section shall be incontestable (i) in the hands of an applicant on whose behalf such guarantee is made unless the applicant engaged in fraud or misrepresentation in securing such guarantee, and (ii) as to any person (or a successor in interest) who makes or contracts to make a loan to such applicant in reliance thereon unless such person (or a successor in interest) engaged in fraud or misrepresentation in making or contracting to make such loan.

[(D) Guarantees of loans under this section shall be subject to such further terms and conditions as the Commissioner considers necessary to assure that the purposes of this section will be achieved.

[(f)(1) There is established in the Treasury a loan guarantee fund (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the "fund") which shall be available to the Commissioner without fiscal year limitation, in such amounts as may be specified from time to time in appropriation Acts—

[(A) to enable the Commissioner to discharge the responsibilities under loan guarantees issued under this section; and

[(B) for payment of interest under subsection (c) on loans guaranteed under this section.

There are authorized to be appropriated such amounts as may be necessary to provide the sums required for the fund. There shall also be deposited in the fund amounts received by the Commissioner in connection with loan guarantees under this section and other property or assets derived by the Commissioner from operations respecting such loan guarantees, including any money derived from the sale of assets.

[(2)(A) If at any time the sums in the fund are insufficient to enable the Commissioner—

[(i) to make payments of interest under subsection (c); or

[(ii) to otherwise comply with guarantees under this section of loans to nonprofit private entities;

the Commissioner is authorized to issue to the Secretary of the Treasury notes or other obligations in such forms and denominations, bearing such maturities, and subject to such terms and conditions, as may be prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

[(B) Such notes or other obligations shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities during the month preceding the issuance of the notes or other obligations.

[(C) The Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this paragraph, and for that purpose the Secretary may use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The purposes for which securities may be issued under that Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes and obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by the Secretary under this paragraph. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated as a public debt transaction of the United States.

[(D) Sums borrowed under this paragraph shall be deposited in the fund and redemption of such notes and obligations shall be made by the Commissioner from the fund.

[(b) No grant may be made under this section unless an application therefor has been submitted to and approved by the Commissioner. The Commissioner may not approve an application for a grant unless the application—

[(1) contains assurances that the designated State unit will use funds provided by such grant in accordance with subsections (c) and (d); and

[(2) contains such other information, and is submitted in such form and in accordance with such procedures, as the Commissioner may require.

[(c)(1) The designated State unit may—

[(A) in accordance with subsection (e) make grants to units of general purpose local government or to other public or non-profit private agencies or organizations and may make contracts with any agency or organization to pay not to exceed 80 percent of the cost of—

[(i) leasing facilities to serve as comprehensive rehabilitation centers;

[(ii) expanding, remodeling, or altering facilities to the extent necessary to adapt them to serve as comprehensive rehabilitation centers;

[(iii) operating such centers; or

[(iv) carrying out any combination of the activities specified in this subparagraph; and

[(B) directly carry out the activities described in subparagraph (A), except that not more than 80 percent of the costs of providing any comprehensive rehabilitation center may be provided from funds under this section.

[(2) Funds made available to any designated State unit under this section for the purpose of assisting in the operation of a comprehensive rehabilitation center may be used to compensate professional and technical personnel required to operate the center and to deliver services in the center, and to provide equipment for the center.

[(d)(1) The designated State unit may approve a grant or enter into a contract under subsection (c) only if the application for such grant or contract meets the requirements specified in paragraphs (1), (2), (4), and (5) of section 306(b) and if the application contains assurances that any center assisted by such grant or contract shall be in reasonably close proximity to the majority of individuals eligible to use the comprehensive rehabilitation center.

[(2) Any designated State unit which directly provides for comprehensive rehabilitation centers under subsection (c)(1)(B) shall use funds under this section in the same manner as any other grant recipient is required to use such funds.

[(e) If within 20 years after the completion of any construction project for which funds have been paid under this section—

[(1) the owner of the facility ceases to be a public or non-profit private agency or organization, or

[(2) the facility ceases to be used for the purposes for which it was leased or constructed (unless the Commissioner determines, in accordance with regulations, that there is good cause for releasing the applicant or other owner from the obligation to do so), the United States shall be entitled to recover from the grant recipient or other owner of the facility an amount which bears the same ratio to the value of the facility (or so much thereof as constituted an approved project or projects) at the time the United States seeks recovery as the amount of such Federal funds bore to the cost of renovating the facility under subsection (c)(1)(A)(ii). Such value shall be determined by agreement of the parties or by action brought in the United States district court for the district in which such facility is situated.

[(f) The requirements of section 306 shall not apply to funds allotted under this section, except that subsections (g) and (h) of such section shall be applicable with respect to such funds.

[(g) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1997.

SEC. 601. This title may be cited as the “Employment Opportunities for Individuals With Disabilities Act”.

[PART A—COMMUNITY SERVICE EMPLOYMENT PILOT PROGRAMS FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES

[ESTABLISHMENT OF PILOT PROGRAM

[SEC. 611. (a) In order to promote useful opportunities in community service activities for individuals with disabilities who have poor employment prospects, the Secretary of Labor (hereinafter in this part referred to as the “Secretary”) is authorized to establish a community service employment pilot program for individuals with disabilities. For purposes of this part, the term “eligible individuals” means persons who are individuals with disabilities (as defined in section 7(8)(A) of this Act) and who are referred to programs under this part by designated State units.

[(b)(1) The Secretary may enter into agreements with public or private nonprofit agencies or organizations, including national organizations, agencies of a State government or a political subdivision of a State (having elected or duly appointed governing officials), or a combination of such political subdivisions, or tribal organizations in order to carry out the pilot program referred to in subsection (a). Such agreements may include provisions consistent with subsection (c) for the payment of the costs of projects developed by such organizations and agencies in cooperation with the Secretary. No payment shall be made by the Secretary toward the cost of any such project unless the Secretary determines that:

[(A) Such project will provide employment only for eligible individuals, except that if eligible individuals are not available to serve as technical, administrative, or supervisory personnel for a project then such personnel may be recruited from among other individuals.

【(B) Such project will provide employment for eligible individuals in the community in which such individuals reside, or in nearby communities.

【(C) Such project will employ eligible individuals in services related to publicly owned and operated facilities and projects, or projects sponsored by organizations, other than political parties, exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, except for projects involving the construction, operation, or maintenance of any facility used or to be used as a place for sectarian religious instruction or worship.

【(D) Such project will contribute to the general welfare of the community in which eligible individuals are employed under such project.

【(E) Such project (i) will result in an increase in employment opportunities over those opportunities which would otherwise be available, (ii) will not result in any displacement of currently employed workers (including partial displacement, such as a reduction in the hours of nonovertime work or wages or employment benefits), and (iii) will not impair existing contracts or result in the substitution of Federal funds for other funds in connection with work that would otherwise be performed.

【(F) Such project will not employ any eligible individual to perform work which is the same or substantially the same as that performed by any other person who is on layoff from employment with the agency or organization sponsoring such project.

【(G) Such project will utilize methods of recruitment and selection (including the listing of job vacancies with the State agency units designated under section 101(a)(2)(A) to administer vocational rehabilitation services under this Act) which will assure that the maximum number of eligible individuals will have an opportunity to participate in the project.

【(H) Such project will provide for (i) such training as may be necessary to make the most effective use of the skills and talents of individuals who are participating in the project, and (ii) during the period of such training, a reasonable subsistence allowance for such individuals and the payment of any other reasonable expenses related to such training.

【(I) Such project will provide safe and healthy working conditions for any eligible individual employed under such project and will pay any such individual at a rate of pay not lower than the rate of pay described in paragraph (2).

【(J) Such project will be established or administered with the advice of (i) persons competent in the field of service in which employment is being provided, and (ii) persons who are knowledgeable with regard to the needs of individuals with disabilities.

【(K) Such project will pay any reasonable costs for work-related expenses, transportation, and personal assistance services incurred by eligible individuals employed under such project in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

[(L) Such project will provide appropriate placement services for employees under the project to assist them in locating unsubsidized employment when the Federal assistance for the project terminates.

[(2) The rate of pay referred to in subparagraph (I) of paragraph (1) is the highest of the following:

[(A) the prevailing rate of pay for persons employed in similar occupations by the same employer.

[(B) The minimum wage which would be applicable to the employee under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 if such employee were not exempt from such Act under section 13 thereof.

[(C) The State or local minimum wage for the most nearly comparable covered employment.

The Department of Labor shall not issue any certificate of exemption under section 14(c) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 with respect to any person employed in a project under this section.

[(c)(1) The Secretary may pay not to exceed 90 percent of the cost of any project which is the subject of an agreement entered into under subsection (b). Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the Secretary may pay all of the costs of any such project which is (A) an emergency or disaster project, or (B) a project located in an economically depressed area, as determined by the Secretary in consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Director of the Community Services Administration.

[(2) The non-Federal share of any project under this part may be in cash or in kind. In determining the amount of the non-Federal share, the Secretary may attribute fair market value to services and facilities contributed from non-Federal sources.

[(d) Payments under this part may be made in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments as the Secretary may determine.

【ADMINISTRATION】

【SEC. 612. (a) In order to effectively carry out the provisions of this part, the Secretary shall, through the Commissioner of the Rehabilitation Services Administration, consult with any designated State unit with regard to—

[(d) Within one hundred and eighty days after the effective date of this part, the Secretary shall issue and publish in the Federal Register such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this part.

[(e) The Secretary shall not delegate any function of the Secretary under this part to any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

[PARTICIPANTS NOT FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

[SEC. 613. (a) Eligible individuals who are employed in any project funded under this part shall not be considered to be Federal employees as a result of such employment and shall not be subject to the provisions of part III of title 5, United States Code.

[(b) No contract shall be entered into under this part with a contractor who is, or whose employees are, under State law, exempted from operation of any State workmen's compensation law generally applicable to employees, unless the contractor shall undertake to provide for persons to be employed under such contract, through insurance by a recognized carrier or by self-insurance authorized by State law, workmen's compensation coverage equal to that provided by law for covered employment.

[(c) No part of the wages, allowances, or reimbursement for transportation and personal assistance services costs made available to an eligible individual employed in any project funded under this part shall be treated as income or benefits for the purpose of any other program or provision of State or Federal law, unless the Secretary makes a case by case determination that disallowance of such income or benefits is inequitable or does not carry out the purposes of this title.

[INTERAGENCY COOPERATION

[SEC. 614. (a) The Secretary shall consult with, and obtain the written views of, the Commissioner of the Rehabilitation Services Administration before establishing rules or general policy in the administration of this part.

[(b) The Secretary shall consult and cooperate with the Director of the Community Services Administration, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the heads of other Federal agencies carrying out related programs, in order to achieve maximum coordination between such programs and the program established under this part. Each Federal agency shall cooperate with the Secretary in disseminating information relating to the availability of assistance under this part and in identifying individuals eligible for employment in projects assisted under this part.

[EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

[(2) The Secretary shall allot for projects within each State the sums appropriated for any fiscal year under section 617 so that each State will receive an amount which bears the same ratio to such sums as the population of the State bears to the population of all the States.

[(b) The amount allotted for projects within any State under subsection (a) for any fiscal year which the Secretary determines will not be required for such year shall be reallocated, from time to time and on such dates during such year as the Secretary may fix, to projects within other States in proportion to the original allotments to projects within such States under subsection (a) for such year, but with such proportionate amount for any of such other States being reduced to the extent it exceeds the sum the Secretary estimates that projects within such State need and will be able to use for such year. The total of such reductions shall be similarly reallocated among the States whose proportionate amounts were not so reduced. Any amount reallocated to a State under this subsection during a year shall be deemed part of its allotment under subsection (a) for such year.

[(c) The amount apportioned for projects within each State under subsection (a) shall be apportioned among areas within each such State in an equitable manner, taking into consideration (1) the proportion which eligible individuals in each such area bears to the total number of such individuals, respectively, in that State, and (2) the relative distribution of such individuals residing in rural and urban areas within the State (including individuals residing on Indian reservations).

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF MAJOR R. OWENS, MATTHEW
MARTINEZ, DONALD M. PAYNE, AND CAROLYN MCCARTHY

There is a consensus about the need for reform of the nation's Federal adult and youth job training system. This year's development of a comprehensive job training bill represents a marked improvement over the 104th Congress' very problematic "CAREERS Act" (H.R. 1617). In the spirit of bipartisanship, H.R. 1385, as reported out of committee, is definitely a move in the right direction. However, there are several outstanding concerns that would inhibit the true intent of our Depression-era commitment to ensure that the most vulnerable and disadvantaged citizens receive adequate training and employment-related services. It is encouraging that Rep. McKeon, Rep. Goodling and Rep. Kildee were able to fashion legislation that is acceptable to Members on both sides of the aisle who represent a cross-section of the American populace. Accordingly, we are hopeful that several of the following constructive modifications will be included in the Manager's Amendment.

SUMMER YOUTH EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM

In essence, there is no requirement under H.R. 1385 that the current Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) remain in existence. H.R. 1385 would consolidate SYEP into an overall block grant for Disadvantaged Youth Employment and Training; moreover, this bill would dramatically change the current method of allocating funds to local areas. According to current law, after States receive their SYEP funding, the State must allocate funding to local areas based on the following three-part formula: percentage of unemployed in the local area, percentage of excess unemployed in the local area, and percentage of economically disadvantaged. H.R. 1385 would allow the Governor and the State legislature to exercise discretion in the allocation of funding to local areas. While the current categories would still be "taken into account" by the Governor, there would be no assurances that SYEP funds exist at all, and that any funds would be allocated to the areas with the greatest need. At the very least, a separate funding stream for the Summer Youth Employment Program must be created and need-based targeting must be a part of the intrastate formula as stipulated in current law. (H.R. 1385 would ensure the viability of the Dislocated Workers Program by creating a separate category that protects its funding. Similar provisions should be made for SYEP.)

Of the four million income-eligible youth ages sixteen to twenty one, approximately 15% are able to participate in SYEP. Given this, it is reasonable to suggest that limited Federal resources should be directed to those areas which exhibit the greatest need. SYEP is a successful program that provides jobs for disadvantaged young people for several weeks during the summer months. Cities that are plagued by gross unemployment, abject poverty, and a pervasive feeling of hopelessness, welcome wholeheartedly the relief provided by SYEP. A summer job represents a glimmer of hope to the nearly 600,000 children who participate in the Program.

Unequivocally, the Program must be a required activity and the Federally driven within-State formula is crucial. Complete discretion by the State would be a mistake. An amendment will be offered on the floor to maintain current law regarding the intrastate formula and a requirement that the Program be specifically authorized. The effect would be to preserve the Program and to target funds to those areas that most need it. While fiscal constraints preclude 100% participation in SYEP, at least we ought to ensure that children in those areas that exhibit the greatest need are protected.

COMPREHENSIVE SYSTEM OF PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

H.R. 1385 would jeopardize the vocational rehabilitation program by weakening the comprehensive system for the professional development section of the State plan's requirements. H.R. 1385 is intended to improve services to vocational rehabilitation clients. We are deeply concerned, however, that changes made to certain provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 would negate these improvements.

Thoroughly trained vocational rehabilitation counselors are essential to the success of the vocational rehabilitation program. Current law requires that states document how they will coordinate efforts with institutions of higher education and professional associations to ensure an adequate supply of qualified vocational rehabilitation professionals, including personnel who are minorities and personnel who are individuals with disabilities. A 1993 Rehabilitation Services Administration report shows that this provision of the Act has been effective in ensuring that minorities and people with disabilities are represented in the vocational rehabilitation profession. Current estimates show the percentage of African American rehabilitation counselors is equal to African American representation in the general population. Twenty-three percent of current rehabilitation counselors are individuals with disabilities. This is nearly 10% above their representation in the general population. It is clear that this provision of current law is effective.

H.R. 1385 would remove this important provision from current law. An amendment may be offered to reinstate this requirement. This amendment should be included in H.R. 1385 if we are truly serious about improving the vocational rehabilitation program.

CLOSURE OF JOB CORPS CENTERS

Bill sponsors are to be further applauded by the decision to maintain the Federal Government's purview over the Job Corps Program which is run by only 111 centers nationwide. We are hopeful that Chairman Goodling, as well as the full House of Representatives, will adopt an amendment which would allow all Americans the opportunity to have their voices heard regarding the possible loss of any of these invaluable Job Corps Centers.

The Job Corps Program, despite its successes, is grossly underfunded. The 111 Job Corps centers currently serve a mere 9% of the more than 1.1 million youth who are eligible participants. All of these centers are at 100% capacity. The latest available data depict a far more troubling situation for most States. In New York State only 3.9% of the 74,762 eligible youth participated; in California 2.8% of the 151,053 eligible youth participated; in New Jersey 2.9% of the 27,077 eligible youth participated; in Pennsylvania 7.4% of the 42,002 eligible youth participated; and in Tennessee 3.3% of the 28,280 eligible youth participated.

These statistics confirm that there are too few centers in operation today. Thus, it is very important that if one of these scarce centers is slated for closure, the final decision must be closely scrutinized. Under current law, the Secretary of Labor may close a Job Corps Center at his/her discretion in conjunction with the center operator. Out of courtesy, the Secretary usually notifies Members of Congress about the decision to close a site. However, certain steps should be taken to ensure that the public and the individuals they elect to represent them in Washington are notified prior to the development of a final decision.

PROVISION OF TRANSPORTATION

Training in the use of public mass transportation systems should be part of the scope of services available to vocational rehabilitation clients. I welcome the support of my colleague from New York, Representative McCarthy, for an amendment to H.R. 1385 to include this cost-saving measure.

People being served by vocational rehabilitation programs should have access to travel training services as part of their individual rehabilitation plans. Familiarizing clients with public transportation would help clients enter or reenter the job market and reduce the degree to which they will rely on more expensive paratransit systems. According to the Federal Transit Administration, nationwide the average fare for fixed route trips on public transportation is approximately $2.60, while the average for paratransit services is $15. Moreover, the typical government subsidy for public transportation covers $1.60 of that fare, while the typical government subsidy for paratransit services is $13. Including this simple provision in H.R. 1385 would save millions of Federal, State, and local dollars and significantly improve the lives of many vocational rehabilitation clients.

MAKING H.R. 1385 WORK FOR THOSE IN NEED

The cyclical relationship between poverty and dependence on the Federal Government has been well documented. An under-resourced public school system and insufficient employment opportunities make both adults and youth susceptible to an inability to become full and productive, tax-paying citizens.

Congress cannot haphazardly relinquish Federal protections and leave children, women and men without the opportunities or the skills needed to attain a minimal standard of living. We must invest money, scrutiny, and compassion in programs that provide our nation's impoverished citizens with the tools necessary to end any unintended dependence on public assistance. With the above-referenced changes, we are confident that H.R. 1385 would represent a fair approach to address the needs of individuals with disabilities, low-income youth, and displaced and unemployed adults.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS

The Committee-reported bill reflects broad bipartisan agreement. The bill streamlines and integrates job training and employment programs; creates a single system for adults through full-service training and employment centers; provides for the maintenance of the federal investment in employment and training programs; and includes a separate funding stream for dislocated workers, not only protecting current resources, but maintaining the ability to request increased funding based the needs of this targeted population.

It puts training resources into the hands of adults so they can choose the training that best meets their needs. Through the creation of a consumer report system which would include annual information from all education and training providers, it promotes informed choice. It organizes Federal training programs for disadvantaged youth within school-to-work concepts. It ensures strong accountability to taxpayers by establishing high standards and linking incentives and sanctions to State and local performance. It ensures a strong local role in the design and oversight of workforce development systems and makes the private sector a full partner.

While we agree with these and other features of the Committee bill, we also have some concerns about specific provisions.

Summer Youth Jobs.—We are concerned that the Committee bill does not ensure that the summer jobs program is continued at a comparable funding level to the President's FY 1998 budget request under a reformed system. We are pleased that the summer program would be connected to what a young person learns during the school year, but this will be of little value to hundreds of thousands of economically disadvantaged youth if we do not ensure that summer job opportunities are made available.

The summer jobs program is particularly critical to minority youth. As estimated third of summer jobs held by African-American youth and a fourth of summer jobs held by Hispanic youth come from the summer jobs program.

For many youth, the summer jobs program is their first opportunity to work and their first critical step in learning the work ethic. Studies by Westat, Inc., and the Department of Labor's Office of the Inspector General both reported very positive findings, concluding that work sites are well-supervised and disciplined, that jobs are real, not make-work, that the education component teaches students new skills they can apply in school, and that students learn the value of work. We believe that the summer youth employment program meets performance expectations. This legislation needs to ensure that each local area has a summer jobs program for at-risk youth.

Disadvantaged Out-of-School Youth.—As reported by the Committee, the bill establishes an employment and training opportunities grant to help at-risk youth—both out-of-school and students on the verge of dropping out—acquire the skills and knowledge to begin productive careers, further their training, and become responsible citizens. It is critical to ensure that the youth program effectively target services to out-of-school youth. JTPA has been one of the few programs that serve this population. Many inner-city neighborhoods have rates of employment that are less than 50 percent, and school dropout rates in these areas can exceed 60 percent. We were pleased that the Committee accepted Mr. Payne's amendment that results in targeting 10 percent of the total funds allocated to a State under the disadvantaged youth grant to programs that serve out-of-school youth. This amendment will provide a strong incentive for states to serve this population. This is one of the only pieces of legislation that serves out-of-school youth and it is critical that we provide these young people with a chance for a successful future. By a conservative estimate, the average high school dropout costs taxpayers almost $70,000 in lost taxes and costs each school dropout about $230,000 in forgone income. We do not believe that the disadvantaged youth employment and training opportunities grant goes far enough in ensuring services for out-of-school youth.

We also appreciate the Committee's agreement to authorize under title IV the use of resources to target services to out-of-school youth living in empowerment zones and enterprise communities. The Administration's out-of-school youth opportunities areas proposal is intended to boost the employment rate of out-of-school youth in these areas to levels commensurate with that in non-poor communities. We are concerned that the lack of a specific resource commitment in this legislation weakens the potential for this program.

Local Board Composition.—We agree with the committee that local workforce development boards must have a strong role in planning and overseeing the performance of the full-service training and employment system. However, we are concerned that organized labor representation would no longer be assured on the boards that make decisions affecting the local and regional workforce.

Welfare-to-Work.—We believe that the Committee bill begins to address the need to ensure the successful implementation of the welfare reform legislation. Job training and employment programs must continue to play a vital role in this effort. It is important to keep in mind that emerging full-service training and employment systems need to integrate welfare recipients into the mainstream labor market—rather than segregating them and stigmatizing them and pitting them against others for resources. The bill would provide a priority for welfare recipients in adult training and intensive services. The strong connections in this new workforce development system between local boards with business majorities, local chief elected officials, Governors, and State legislatures should enhance the employment and training opportunities for welfare recipients. As Members of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, we intend to stress linkages with the local full-service training and employment delivery system in the coming months as welfare-to-work legislation is developed, with the objective of helping welfare recipients obtain and keep jobs.

DISSENTING VIEW

I. INTRODUCTION

Congress is once again attempting to repair the broken system of federal job training. The major federal role in job training dates back to 1962, with President Kennedy's Manpower Development and Training Act (MDA) and continuing through the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, passed as part of President Johnson's Great Society. Consistent with the Great Society philosophy that the federal government had the solution to all problems, these bills centralized job training authority in Washington.

Soon, however, concerns arose that federal job training programs were rife with waste and abuse. Congress, therefore, began trying to repair some of the inefficiencies in the job-training program. First, in 1973, Congress, with the support of the Nixon Administration, passed the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). CETA was designed to decentralize federal job training programs. Congress next addressed job training in 1982, with the passage of the Job Training and Partnership Act (JTPA), which promised to turn federal job-training into a public-private "partnership" that would operate more "efficiently" than the three major job-training bills that had previously passed the Congress and failed to accomplish their stated goals.

After thirty years of federal involvement and two major legislative overhauls, there are now over 160 federal programs dedicated to job training. The federal government spent approximately $4.5 billion on just JTPA in 1997. However, the US Congress cannot measure whether or not they are getting a good return on their investment though most federal agencies do not even know if their programs are helping people find jobs.

Therefore, Congress is once again attempting to repair the federal job training systems. However, despite the abundant evidence of the failure of the centralized welfare state model of job-training programs, this Congress is planning to continue dictating to all 50 states the composition, content, function and even the goals and benchmarks of job training programs. The Employment Training and Literacy Act of 1997 (H.R. 1385), tampers with the constitutional principle of federalism and devolving power to the states. However, HR 1385 redefines the very notion of federalism to mean that states, localities, and individual citizens are given limited flexibility and control over how they fulfill the federal government's mandates.

II. H.R. 1385 INTERFERES WITH STATE'S AUTONOMY AND FORCES TAXPAYERS TO SUBSIDIZE BENEFITS FOR SELECT BUSINESSES AND EMPLOYEES IN VIOLATION OF THE US CONSTITUTION

Unlike the "mandate federalism" embodied in H.R. 1385, the federalism embodied in the United States Constitution allows for no federal role in job training, or education generally. In fact, the tenth amendment, which reserves the authority for carrying out functions not explicitly granted to the federal government, to the states and the people, forbids federal education programs. Yet, as demonstrated below, H.R. 1385 continues the unconstitutional centralization of education program for the benefit of certain members of society at the expense of the mass of American taxpayers.

Under H.R. 1385 states must provide a three-year plan for Adult Job Training and Literacy programs in order to receive federal job-training funds. These plans must satisfy federally-specified content and must be approved by the Secretaries of both the Department of Education and the Department of Labor.

Additionally, states are required to establish "local workforce development boards" whose functions and composition are dictated by the federal law. Furthermore, the boards must meet benchmarks identified by the governor's in "negotiation" with the schools, the local boards do not even have the authority to determine how their performance should be measured. Rather progress under this bill measure by predetermined federal "core indicators."

Under H.R. 1385, the "local workforce development boards" would be dominated by representatives of the business community. Certainly the input of the business community is important for job training. However, a federal mandate that representatives of business dominate the job-training boards may provide a means for business to socialize or externalize their training costs. Those businesses which will achieve a direct benefit from a more highly-skilled workforce should be the ones to finance such programs. Individuals who will benefit from improving their skills could also choose to ultimately pay at least some of the cost of their training. In no instance should the individual taxpayers be forced to subsidize the job training of another person.

Not satisfied with wealth transfers to prepare those without employment for business, this bill provides training for "skills upgrading" for "incumbent workers" (those already employed). Despite a budget billions of dollars out of balance, this bill creates a new entitlement for already-employed workers and their employers to receive more training courtesy of the American taxpayer.

Businesses are not the only institutions showered with largess in this bill. Under the provisions of this bill, the Secretary of Labor is empowered to provide taxpayers dollars to labor unions to carry out "research and demonstration projects" as well as grants to "public interest groups." Credible accusations have been made that these groups have often used federal funds to advance their political agenda. At the very least, Congress should conduct a thorough investigation and take steps to prevent federal funds from being used to pay for political activity before handing out more grant monies.

III. H.R. 1385 INFRINGES ON FAMILY AND INDIVIDUAL AUTONOMY

In addition to continuing the practice of giving more federal monies to Washington, DC, this bill expands the state's reach into America's families by authorizing federal funding for "family literacy services." These "services" are to include training for parents on how to teach their children and interactive literacy activities between parents and their children.

The history of federal involvement in family literacy raises questions regarding the effectiveness of government programs to teach anything regarding child raising. From 1963 to 1993, federal spending on education increased from approximately $900,000 to over 10 billion dollars, while scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SATs) dropped by an average of almost 60 points! Given the poor track record, it is doubtful whether increasing federal involvement in family literacy is likely to do anything but ensure lower rates of family literacy.

Furthermore, federal involvement in child rearing violates the very principles upon which this country was founded. In a free society, such as that bequeathed to America by the drafters of the constitution, the family, not the government, is responsible for the raising of children. State control of child raising is, in fact, one of the hallmarks of totalitarianism. Those of us concerned with expanding and preserving freedom must oppose all measures, including the legislation currently under consideration, which erode the autonomy of the family under the theory that government social workers are better able to address the needs of children than parents.

Along similar lines, the language for disadvantaged youth programs mandates the integration of "academic, occupation, and work-based learning opportunities." This is also quite objectionable. This language seems to suggest those youth diagnosed as "disadvantaged" by the social workers and psychologists will be denied a traditional education; instead "disadvantaged" youth will be herded into a state-run job training programs. Such a federally-mandated plan is in no way consistent with the core American value of individualism.

IV. H.R. 1385 ESTABLISHES A SYSTEM INCAPABLE OF ACHIEVING ITS STATED PURPOSE

This bill reaches the height of hubris in its mandate that training services be linked to ". . . occupations for which there is a demand in the local workforce development area." This provision is objectionable for two reasons.

First, because business-dominated workforce development boards will determine which occupations are in demand, it is very likely that the businesses represented on the board will be the ones determined to be those "* * * for which there is a demand in the local workforce."

Second, and more importantly, the very idea that a government board can somehow determine what occupations will be in demand at any point in the future is an example of what Nobel Laureate F.A. Hayek called "The Fatal Conceit." No central board, even one dominated by local officials and businessmen, can predict which jobs will be in demand in five, ten, or even two years. It is doubtful that a "local workforce board" in Silicon Valley in 1978 would have tried to link job training services to the personal computer market. In fact, it's highly unlikely that Steve Jobs (founder of Apple computers), would be appointed to the workforce development board in Silicon Valley. The very fact that the boards are comprised of already established leaders for business practically assures that the entrepreneurs creating the jobs of the future will not be represented on this board. In this high-tech information age, where financial and, more importantly, intellectual capital, can travel around the world in a matter of seconds, the jobs in demand in any area can change faster than any geographical local workforce board could conceivably update the skills with which to link job-training.

V. CONCLUSION

The argument is often made that state-financed job training is necessitated by the failure of the educational system to properly prepare students for the job market. Each of us can understand the frustration of employers unable to find employees capable of adapting to new technologies.

As a physician, I have employed many people in critical positions. I certainly understand the importance of having a readily available pool of skilled labor. I would question, however, whether the pool was better prior to the federal government's intrusion into education.

The private actions of individual citizens, working together in a free-market, can best build a job-training system that meets the needs of its citizens. Private individuals, local communities, and state governments are also more capable than the federal government of providing adequate help to those unable to provide for training out of their own resources, if the federal government returns to constitutional size and reduces the tax burden on American citizens.

Federal job training programs, of any sort, further the destructive idea that the proper role of the federal government is to provide for all the needs of its citizens. The belief that Congress has a moral duty to minister to the health and welfare of the populace, both of America and the world, is directly responsible for the growth of the welfare-warfare state which threatens to destroy America's economic prosperity and, as important, liberty, wholesale. Job training should be provided, like all other goods and services, by the free-market.

Congress stops the artificial debate over whether to completely centralize control over programs such as job-training, or whether to give states, communities, businesses, and individuals a limited degree of autonomy as long as they follow federal mandates. Rather, Congress must begin considering whether the Constitution provides any authorization for the federal government to have any role in programs such as job training. America's experiment with the provider state has failed. This Congress must stop draining resources from the private job-training initiatives and disrupting the operations of the greatest job-creation process known to humankind: the free market. It is time to return to the federal job-training and creating program created by the drafters of the constitution: low taxes, sound money, and a limited, constitutional government.
