SEC. 2054. PROLIFERATION OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States, Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Al Qaeda has tried to acquire or make weapons of mass destruction since 1994 or earlier.

(2) The United States doubtless would be a prime target for use of any such weapon by al Qaeda.

(3) Although the United States Government has redoubled its international commitments to supporting the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction and other nonproliferation assistance programs, nonproliferation experts continue to express deep concern about the United States Government’s commitment and approach to securing the weapons of mass destruction and related highly dangerous materials that are still scattered among Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union.

(4) The cost of increased investment in the prevention of proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and related dangerous materials is greatly outweighed by the potentially catastrophic cost to the United States of use of weapons of mass destruction or related dangerous materials by the terrorists who are so eager to acquire them.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) maximum effort to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, wherever such proliferation may occur, is warranted; and

(2) the programs of the United States Government to prevent or counter the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, including the Proliferation Security Initiative, the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other nonproliferation assistance programs, should be expanded, improved, and better funded to address the global dimensions of the proliferation threat.

(c) REQUIREMENT FOR STRATEGY.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress—

(1) a strategy for expanding and strengthening the Proliferation Security Initiative, the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other nonproliferation assistance programs; and

(2) an estimate of the funding necessary to execute that strategy.

(d) REPORT ON REFORMING THE COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM AND OTHER NON-PROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report evaluating whether the United States could more effectively address the global threat of nuclear proliferation by—

(1) establishing a central coordinator for the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction;

(2) eliminating the requirement that the President spend no more than $50,000,000 annually on programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction and other non-proliferation assistance programs carried out outside the former Soviet Union; or

(3) repealing the provisions of the Soviet Nuclear Threat Reduction Act of 1991 (22 U.S.C. 2551 note) that place conditions on assistance to the former Soviet Union unrelated to bilateral cooperation on weapons dismantlement.

SEC. 2055. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING INTERNATIONAL COUNTERPROLIFERATION EFFORTS.

It is the sense of Congress that the United States should work with the international community to develop laws and an international legal regime with universal jurisdiction to enable the interdiction of nuclear material and technology, and the capture, interdiction, and prosecution of individuals or entities involved in the smuggling or transfer of nuclear material or technology to any state in the world where they do not fully disclose the nature of their nuclear program.

SEC. 2056. REMOVAL OF POTENTIAL NUCLEAR WEAPONS MATERIALS FROM VULNERABLE SITES WORLDWIDE.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that removing potential nuclear weapons materials from vulnerable sites around the world would reduce the possibility that such materials could fall into the hands of al Qaeda or other groups and states hostile to the United States, and should be a top priority for achieving the national security of the United States. Several actions may be taken to reduce the risk that nuclear weapons materials may end up in terrorist hands, including—

- (1) transporting such materials from such sites to secure facilities;
- (2) providing interim security upgrades for such materials pending their removal from their current sites;
- (3) managing such materials after their arrival at secure facilities;
- (4) purchasing such materials;
- (5) converting such sites to the use of low-enriched uranium fuels;
- (6) assisting in the closure and decommissioning of such sites;
- (7) providing incentives to facilitate the removal of such materials from vulnerable facilities;

(8) arranging for the shipment of potential nuclear weapons materials to the United States, or to other countries willing to accept such materials and able to provide high levels of security for such materials, and dispose of such materials, in order to ensure that United States national security objectives are accomplished as quickly and effectively as possible; and

(9) providing funds to upgrade security and accounting at sites where potential nuclear weapons materials will remain for an extended period in order to ensure that such materials are secure against plausible potential threats, and will remain so in the future.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) Not later than 30 days after the submittal to Congress of the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006 pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, the administration shall submit to Congress a report that includes the following:

(A) A list of the sites determined to be of the highest priorities for removal of potential nuclear weapons materials, based on the quantity and attractiveness of such materials at such sites and the risk of theft or diversion of such materials for weapons purposes.

(B) An inventory of all sites worldwide where highly-enriched uranium or separated plutonium is located, including, to the extent practicable, a prioritized assessment of the terrorism and proliferation risk posed by such materials at each such site, based on the quantity of such materials, the attractiveness of such materials for use in nuclear weapons, the current level of security and accounting for such materials, and the level of threat (including the effects of terrorist or criminal activity and the pay and morale of personnel and guards) in the country or region where such sites are located.

(C) A strategic plan, including measurable milestones and metrics.

(D) An estimate of the funds required to secure these materials.

(E) The recommendations of the Administration on whether any further legislative actions or international agreements are necessary to facilitate the accomplishment of the objective.

(2) The report shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(c) POTENTIAL NUCLEAR WEAPONS MATERIAL DEFINED.—In this section, the term “potential nuclear weapons material” means plutonium, highly-enriched uranium, or other material capable of sustaining an explosive nuclear chain reaction, including irradiated materials if the radiation field from such materials is not sufficient to prevent the theft and use of such materials for an explosive nuclear chain reaction.

SEC. 3088. INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS TO TRACK AND CURTAIL TERRORIST TRAVEL THROUGH THE USE OF FRAUDULENTLY OBTAINED DOCUMENTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) International terrorists travel across international borders to raise funds, recruit members, train for operations, escape capture, communicate, and plan and carry out attacks.

(2) The international terrorists who planned and carried out the attack on the World Trade Center on February 26, 1993, the attack on the embassies of the United States in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998, the attack on the USS Cole on October 12, 2000, and the attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on September 11, 2001, traveled across international borders to plan and carry out these attacks.

(3) The international terrorists who planned other attacks on the United States, including the plot to bomb New York City landmarks in 1993, the plot to bomb the New York City subway in 1997, and the millennium plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999, traveled across international borders to plan and carry out these attacks.

(5) Throughout the 1990s, international terrorists, including those involved in the attack on the World Trade Center on February 26, 1993, the plot to bomb New York City landmarks in 1993, and the millennium plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999, traveled on fraudulent passports and often had more than one passport.

(6) Two of the September 11, 2001, hijackers were carrying passports that had been manipulated in a fraudulent manner and several other hijackers whose passports did not survive the attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon were likely to have carried passports that were similarly manipulated.

(7) The National Commission on Terrorist Attacks upon the United States, (commonly referred to as the 9/11 Commission), stated that “Targeting travel is at least as powerful a weapon against terrorists as targeting their money.”

(b) INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS TO TRACK AND CURTAIL TERRORIST TRAVEL.—

(1) INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT ON LOST, STOLEN, OR FALSIFIED DOCUMENTS.—The President shall lead efforts to track and curtail the travel of terrorists by supporting the drafting, adoption, and implementation of international agreements, and by supporting the expansion of existing international agreements, to track and stop international travel by terrorists and other criminals through the use of lost, stolen, or falsified documents to augment existing United Nations and other international anti-terrorism efforts.

(2) CONTENTS OF INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT.—The President shall seek, in the appropriate fora, the drafting, adoption, and implementation of an effective international agreement requiring—

(A) the establishment of a system to share information on lost, stolen, and fraudulent passports and other travel documents for the purposes of preventing the undetected travel of persons using such passports and other travel documents that were obtained improperly;

(B) the establishment and implementation of a real-time verification system of passports and other travel documents with issuing authorities;

(ii) to impose significant penalties so as to appropriately punish violations and effectively deter these crimes; and

(iii) to limit the issuance of citizenship papers, passports, identification documents, and the like to persons whose identity is proven to the issuing authority, who have a bona fide entitlement to or need for such documents, and who are not issued such documents principally on account of a disproportional payment made by them or on their behalf to the issuing authority;

(E) the provision of technical assistance to State Parties to help them meet their obligations under the convention;

(F) the establishment and implementation of a system of self-assessments and peer reviews to examine the degree of compliance with the convention; and

(G) an agreement that would permit immigration and border officials to confiscate a lost, stolen, or falsified passport at ports of entry and permit the traveler to return to the sending country without being in possession of the lost, stolen, or falsified passport, and for the detention and investigation of such traveler upon the return of the traveler to the sending country.

SEC. 3089. INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS FOR TRANSLATION OF NAMES INTO THE ROMAN ALPHABET FOR INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL DOCUMENTS AND NAME-BASED WATCHLIST SYSTEMS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the current lack of a single convention for translating Arabic names enabled some of the 19 hijackers of aircraft used in the terrorist attacks against the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, to vary the spelling of their names to defeat name-based terrorist watchlist systems and to make more difficult any potential efforts to locate them; and

(2) although the development and utilization of terrorist watchlist systems using biometric identifiers will be helpful, the full development and utilization of such systems will take several years, and name-based terrorist watchlist systems will always be useful.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the President should seek to enter into an international agreement to modernize and improve standards for the translation of names into the Roman alphabet in order to ensure one common spelling for such names for international travel documents and name-based watchlist systems.

SEC. 3090. BIOMETRIC ENTRY AND EXIT DATA SYSTEM.

SEC. 4042. ENHANCING FREE AND INDEPENDENT MEDIA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are fundamental human rights.

(2) The United States has a national interest in promoting these freedoms by supporting free media abroad, which is essential to the development of free and democratic societies consistent with our own.

(3) Free media is undermined, endangered, or nonexistent in many repressive and transitional societies around the world, including in Eurasia, Africa, and the Middle East.

(4) Individuals lacking access to a plurality of free media are vulnerable to misinformation and propaganda and are potentially more likely to adopt anti-American views.

(5) Foreign governments have a responsibility to actively and publicly discourage and rebut unprofessional and unethical media while respecting journalistic integrity and editorial independence.

(b) STATEMENTS OF POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States, acting through the Secretary of State, to—

(1) ensure that the promotion of press freedoms and free media worldwide is a priority of United States foreign policy and an integral component of United States public diplomacy;

(2) respect the journalistic integrity and editorial independence of free media worldwide; and

(3) ensure that widely accepted standards for professional and ethical journalistic and editorial practices are employed when assessing international media.

(c) GRANTS TO PRIVATE SECTOR GROUP TO ESTABLISH MEDIA NETWORK.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Grants made available to the National Endowment for Democracy (NED) pursuant to paragraph (3) shall be used by NED to provide funding to a private sector group to establish and manage a free and independent media network in accordance with paragraph (2).

(2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the network shall be to provide an effective forum to convene a broad range of individuals, organizations, and governmental participants involved in journalistic activities and the development of free and independent media to—

(A) fund a clearinghouse to collect and share information concerning international media development and training;

(B) improve research in the field of media assistance and program evaluation to better inform decisions regarding funding and program design for government and private donors;

(C) explore the most appropriate use of existing means to more effectively encourage the involvement of the private sector in the field of media assistance; and

(D) identify effective methods for the development of a free and independent media in societies in transition.

(3) FUNDING.—For grants made by the Department of State to NED as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act (Pub. SEC. 4043. COMBATING BIASED OR FALSE FOREIGN MEDIA COVERAGE OF THE UNITED STATES.

(1) Biased or false media coverage of the United States and its allies is a significant factor encouraging terrorist acts against the people of the United States.

(3) Where freedom of the press exists in foreign countries the United States can combat biased or false media coverage by responding in the foreign media or by communicating directly to foreign publics in such countries.

(4) Foreign governments which encourage biased or false media coverage of the United States bear a significant degree of responsibility for creating a climate within which terrorism can flourish. Such governments are responsible for encouraging biased or false media coverage if they—

(A) issue direct or indirect instructions to the media to publish biased or false information regarding the United States;

(A) instruct their state-owned or influenced media to include content that is anti-American or prejudicial to the foreign and security policies of the United States; or

(B) make deliberately false charges regarding the United States or permit false or biased charges against the United States to be made while constraining normal political discourse.

(2) SEEKING MEDIA ACCESS; RESPONDING TO FALSE CHARGES.—It shall be the policy of the United States to—

(A) seek access to the media in foreign countries on terms no less favorable than those afforded any other foreign entity or on terms available to the foreign country in the United States; and

(B) combat biased or false media coverage in foreign countries of the United States and its allies by responding in the foreign media or by communicating directly to foreign publics.

(c) RESPONSIBILITIES REGARDING BIASED OR FALSE MEDIA COVERAGE.—

(1) SECRETARY OF STATE.—The Secretary of State shall instruct chiefs of mission to report on and combat biased or false media coverage originating in or received in foreign countries to which such chiefs are posted. Based on such reports and other information available to the Secretary, the Secretary shall prioritize efforts to combat such media coverage, giving special attention to audiences where fostering popular opposition to terrorism is most important and such media coverage is most prevalent.

(3) An assessment of potential incentives for, and costs associated with, encouraging United States broadcasters to dub or subtitle into Arabic and other relevant languages their news and public affairs programs broadcast in Muslim countries in order to present those programs to a much broader Muslim audience than is currently reached.

(2) should, as part of that effort, secure support to require countries seeking membership in the Community of Democracies to be in full compliance with the Community's criteria for participation, as established by the Community's Convening Group, should work to ensure that the criteria are part of a legally binding document, and should urge other donor countries to use compliance with the criteria as a basis for determining diplomatic and economic relations (including assistance programs) with such participating countries; and

TITLE V—GOVERNMENT RESTRUCTURING

Subtitle A—Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders

SEC. 5001. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders Act of 2004”.

SEC. 5002. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) In order to achieve its objective of minimizing the damage, and assisting in the recovery, from terrorist attacks, the Department of Homeland Security must play a leading role in assisting communities to reach the level of preparedness they need to respond to a terrorist attack.

(2) First responder funding is not reaching the men and women of our Nation’s first response teams quickly enough, and sometimes not at all.

(3) To reform the current bureaucratic process so that homeland security dollars reach the first responders who need it most, it is necessary to clarify and consolidate the authority and procedures of the Department of Homeland Security that support first responders.

(4) Ensuring adequate resources for the new national mission of homeland security, without degrading the ability to address effectively other types of major disasters and emergencies, requires a discrete and separate grant making process for homeland security funds for first response to terrorist acts, on the one hand, and for first responder programs designed to meet pre-September 11 priorities, on the other.

(5) While a discrete homeland security grant making process is necessary to ensure proper focus on the unique aspects of terrorism prevention, preparedness, and response, it is essential that State and local strategies for utilizing such grants be integrated, to the greatest extent practicable, with existing State and local emergency management plans.

(6) Homeland security grants to first responders must be based on the best intelligence concerning the capabilities and intentions of our terrorist enemies, and that intelligence must be used to target resources to the Nation’s greatest threats, vulnerabilities, and consequences.

(7) The Nation’s first response capabilities will be improved by sharing resources, training, planning, personnel, and equipment among neighboring jurisdictions through mutual aid agreements and regional cooperation. Such regional cooperation should be supported, where appropriate, through direct grants from the Department of Homeland Security.

(8) An essential prerequisite to achieving the Nation’s homeland security objectives for first responders is the establishment of well-defined national goals for terrorism preparedness. These goals should delineate the essential capabilities that every jurisdiction in the United States should possess or to which it should have access.

(9) A national determination of essential capabilities is needed to identify levels of State and local government terrorism preparedness, to determine the nature and extent of State and local first responder needs, to identify the human and financial resources required to fulfill them, and to direct funding to meet those needs and to measure preparedness levels on a national scale.

(10) To facilitate progress in achieving, maintaining, and enhancing essential capabilities for State and local first responders, the Department of Homeland Security should seek to allocate homeland security funding for first responders to meet nationwide needs.

(11) Private sector resources and citizen volunteers can perform critical functions in assisting in preventing and responding to terrorist attacks, and should be integrated into State and local planning efforts to ensure that their capabilities and roles are understood, so as to provide enhanced State and local operational capability and surge capacity.

(12) Public-private partnerships, such as the partnerships between the Business Executives for National Security and the States of New Jersey and Georgia, can be useful to identify and coordinate private sector support for State and local first responders. Such models should be expanded to cover all States and territories.

(13) An important aspect of essential capabilities is measurability, so that it is possible to determine how prepared a State or local government is now, and what additional steps it needs to take, in order to respond to acts of terrorism.

(14) The Department of Homeland Security should establish, publish, and regularly update national voluntary consensus standards for both equipment and training, in cooperation with both public and private sector standard setting organizations, to assist State and local governments in obtaining the equipment and training to attain the essential capabilities for first response to acts of terrorism, and to ensure that first responder funds are spent wisely.

If the current value of any other item required to be reported under subsection (a)(3) is not ascertainable without an appraisal, such individual may list the book value of a corporation whose stock is not publicly traded, the net worth of a business partnership, the equity value of an individually owned business, or with respect to other holdings, any recognized indication of value, but such individual shall include in his report a full and complete description of the method used in determining such value. In lieu of any value referred to in the preceding sentence, an individual may list the assessed value of the item for tax purposes, adjusted to reflect the market value of the item used for the assessment if the assessed value is computed at less than 100 percent of such market value, but a full and complete description of the method used in determining such assessed value shall be included in the report.

It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should regularly assess the adequacy of United States Northern Command's plans and strategies with a view to ensuring that the United States Northern Command is prepared to respond effectively to all military and paramilitary threats within the United States.

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 took the lives of more than 3,000 Americans and represented the most catastrophic terrorist attack on the United States in its history. The terrorists exploited deficiencies in America's law enforcement, immigration, and intelligence agencies which limited the dissemination of information that might have protected the nation against the attack. In the wake of the attacks, the Committee has conducted 39 hearings and markups to examine proposals to remedy legislative, procedural, and structural vulnerabilities to terrorism in our nation's immigration system. The Committee has also conducted 46 hearings and markups to strengthen federal law enforcement and antiterrorism efforts, and it has taken firm steps to ensure that security efforts do not transgress cherished civil liberties. Furthermore, the Committee has conducted rigorous oversight of antiterrorism reform efforts at the Department of Justice, and acted with bipartisan dispatch to enact antiterrorism legislation including the USA PATRIOT Act and the Homeland Security Act.

On November 27, 2002, President Bush signed legislation creating the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States ("9/11 Commission" or "Commission"). The Commission's principal responsibility was to examine and report on the facts and causes relating to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, and to suggest measures to better secure the nation. On July 22, 2004, the Commission delivered its unanimous recommendations to Congress. During August and September, 2004, a variety of congressional committees held hearings on the recommendations. On September 29, 2004, Speaker Hastert introduced H.R. 10, the "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act," to provide legislative substance to the Commission's recommendations.

The legislation consists of five titles entitled: Reform of the Intelligence Community; Terrorism Prevention and Prosecution; Border Security and Terrorist Travel; International Cooperation and Coordination; and Government Restructuring. Several provisions within the legislation fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The creation of a National Intelligence Director and the establishment of a National Counterterrorism Center in Title I of H.R.

10 are key reforms that will help ensure that the wall of separation dividing intelligence and law enforcement is never again exploited to revisit terrorist attacks upon the United States. Section 1112 codifies ongoing efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to assess and prevent terrorists attacks before they occur.

In Title II, §§ 2001, 2021–2024, 2041–2044, and 2051–2053 contain important provisions that enhance penalties for terrorism hoaxes, increase penalties for supporting, financing, or cooperating with terrorist organizations, and expand the scope of laws that prohibit the shipment or use of weapons of mass destruction. Sections 2101 and 2102 provide additional funding to combat terrorist financing, and §§ 2171–2173 enhance the use of biometric technology to reduce terrorist threats against air travel.

Title III of the legislation contains important provisions to enhance border security and reduce opportunities for terrorists to enter and stay in the United States. Section 3001 implements a Commission recommendation requiring Americans returning from travel in the Western Hemisphere to possess passports. Section 3002 requires Canadians seeking entry into the United States to present a passport or other secure identification. Section 3003 authorizes 2,000 new Border Patrol agents for each of the next five years. Section 3004 authorizes 800 additional ICE investigators for each of the next five years. Section 3005 reduces the risk of identify and document fraud, and §§ 3006–3009 and 3031–33 provide for the expedited removal of illegal aliens, limit asylum abuse by terrorists, and streamline the removal of terrorists and other criminal aliens. Nearly every one of these provisions reflect Commission recommendations. Many of them arise from legislation proposed by the Judiciary Committee.

The legislation contains key provisions that safeguard the civil liberties of all Americans. Specifically, § 1022 establishes a civil liberties protection officer to ensure that civil liberties and privacy protections are incorporated in the policies implemented by the National Intelligence Director. Modeled on legislation originally introduced by Constitution Subcommittee Chairman Chabot, § 5091 requires federal agencies to prepare a privacy impact analysis for proposed and final rules during the rulemaking process. Finally, § 5092 directs the head of each Federal agency with law enforcement or antiterrorism functions to appoint a chief privacy officer to protect against privacy abuses.

In short, H.R. 10 reflects a careful, thoughtful, and principled response to the 9/11 Commission's bipartisan Report and staff report, and it provides additional tools and resources needed to fight and win the war on terror.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

THE EVENTS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001 AND THE CONGRESSIONAL RESPONSE

Summary of Key Legislation Enacted Into Law Following the Attacks of September 11, 2001

The terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon took more than 3,000 lives, caused approximately $100 billion in economic losses, triggered U.S. military intervention in Afghanistan to topple the Taliban regime, and led to passage of a historic overhaul of federal law enforcement policies and priorities culminating in the enactment of the USA PATRIOT Act.¹ These events also led to House passage of legislation to tighten security at America's airports,² reform the airport security screening process,³ abolish the Immigration and Naturalization Service,⁴ improve wireless 911 emergency response services,⁵ improve oil and gas pipeline safety research,⁶ enhance border security,⁷ and establish the Department of Homeland Security.⁸ Other antiterrorism legislation Congress enacted in the wake of these attacks includes: the Enhanced Border Security and Visa Reform Act,⁹ the Antiterrorism Explosives Act,¹⁰ the Terrorist Bombing Convention Implementation Act,¹¹ the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act,¹² and the Homeland Security Information Act.¹³

Principal Hearings Before the Committee on the Judiciary Responding to the Terrorist Attacks of September 11, 2001

In addition to these legislative initiatives, the House Committee on the Judiciary has conducted nearly 100 hearings to better protect the American people against terrorist attacks since September 11, 2001. Many of these hearings examined legislative initiatives contained in H.R. 10.

Strengthening Border Security to Reduce the Risk of Terrorist Attacks

The Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims has focused special attention on the legislative, procedural, and technological vulnerabilities in our nation's immigration system to identify and remedy them. Since the attacks, the Subcommittee has conducted thirty-nine hearings on immigration matters. Among the most critical of these are hearings entitled: "Pushing the Border Out on Alien Smuggling: New Tools and Intelligence Initiatives"; "US-VISIT: A Down Payment on Homeland Security"; "Funding for Immigration in the President's 2005 Budget"; "War on Terrorism: Immigration Enforcement Since September 11, 2001"; "Department of Homeland Security Transition: Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement"; "Immigrant Student Tracking: Implementation and Proposed Modification"; "The Immigration and Naturalization Service's Interactions with Hesham Mohamed Ali Hedayet"; "The Role of Immigration in the Department of Home-

Restructuring Federal Law Enforcement and Enhancing Criminal Penalties to Reduce the Risk of Terrorist Attacks

Since 9/11, the Subcommittee on Crime, Terrorism, and Homeland Security has held thirty-four hearings on law enforcement matters. Among the most important of these are hearings entitled: “Law Enforcement Efforts Within the Department of Homeland Security;” “Homeland Security—the Balance Between Crisis and Consequence Management through Training and Assistance (Review of Legislative Proposals);” “Terrorism and War-Time Hoaxes;” “The Proposal to Create a Department of Homeland Security;” “The Risk to Homeland Security From Identity Fraud and Identity Theft;” the “Antiterrorism Explosives Act of 2002”; the “Homeland Security Information Sharing Act”; the “Cyber Security Enhancement Act”; “Implementation Legislation for the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings and the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism”; and the “Anti-Hoax Terrorism Act of 2001.” The Subcommittee on Courts, the Internet, and Intellectual Property also conducted a hearing to examine links between organized crime, terrorism, and intellectual property theft.

In addition to these hearings, the Crime Subcommittee, in the spirit of cooperation, has held a joint hearing with the Select Committee on Homeland Security on the Terrorism Threat Integration Center (“TTIC”); jointly sent letters with post-hearing questions to the relevant agencies on the implementation of TTIC, and conducted a joint hearing on the integration of terrorism watchlists at the Terrorism Screening Center.

The Committee on the Judiciary has also conducted oversight through other means. It has sent two major oversight letters to the Attorney General on the implementation of the USA PATRIOT Act. These letters were aimed at ensuring that the Department of Justice maintains a proper balance between security and civil liberties in implementing the Act. The Committee has also closely monitored the activities of the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) recently sending letters to the Directors of Immigration Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) and the Federal Protective Service regarding their law enforcement missions at the Department of Homeland Security.

In addition, the Committee has requested several General Accounting Office (“GAO”) reports in this area including: “Combating Terrorism: Funding Data Reported to Congress Should be Improved”; “Social Security Administration: Disclosure Policy for Law Enforcement Allows Information Sharing, But SSA Needs to Ensure Consistent Application”; and “Firearms Control: Federal Agencies Have Firearms Controls, But Could Strengthen Controls in Key Areas”.

In the law enforcement and law enforcement training area, the Crime Subcommittee held a joint hearing with a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Homeland Security on consolidating terrorist watch lists. The Subcommittee held a hearing and markup on H.R. 2934, a bill to expand the death penalty to additional acts of terrorism. The full committee reported that bill on June 23, 2004. The Subcommittee held a hearing on H.R. 3179, a bill to enhance law enforcement powers in stopping terrorism. The Subcommittee has been working closely with the Select Committee on Homeland Security on H.R. 3266, a bill to improve grants to first responders, which the full committee reported On June 16, 2004. Finally, the Committee is working closely with the Select Committee on yet to be introduced legislation to reauthorize the Department of Homeland Security.

Privacy, Civil Liberties, and the Conduct of the War on Terrorism

The Committee on the Judiciary has conducted a number of hearings to ensure that civil liberties are preserved in the nation’s war against terrorism. The USA Patriot Act contained several sunset provisions, many of which are set to expire next year. In addition, the full committee has conducted rigorous oversight of DOJ’s efforts against terrorism and its implementation of the USA Patriot Act. The Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law and the Subcommittee on the Constitution conducted a hearing entitled “Civil Liberties in the Hands of the Government Post-September 11, 2001: Recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and the U.S. Department of Defense Technology and Privacy Advisory Committee.” A similar joint hearing examined “‘The Defense of Privacy Act’ and Privacy in the Hands of the Government.” In addition, the Subcommittee on the Constitution held a hearing entitled “Anti-Terrorism Investigations and the Fourth Amendment After September 11: Where and When Can the Government Go to Prevent Terrorist Attacks?” Finally, the Commercial and Administrative Law held a hearing entitled: “Administrative Law, Adjudicatory Issues, and Privacy Ramifications of Creating a Department of Homeland Security.”

National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States

Mission and Members of the Commission

On November 27, 2002, President George W. Bush signed legislation creating the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States.¹⁴ The Commission’s principal responsibility was to “examine and report upon the facts and causes relating to the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001,” with respect to intelligence and law enforcement agencies, diplomacy, immigration and border control, the flow of assets to terrorist organizations, commercial aviation, and the role of congressional oversight and resource allocation, among other matters, and to suggest “corrective measures that can be taken to prevent acts of terrorism.”¹⁵

Members of the Commission included: Thomas Kean (Chair), Republican, former Governor of New Jersey; Lee H. Hamilton (Vice Chair), Democrat, former U.S. Representative from the 9th District of Indiana; Richard Ben-Veniste, Democrat, attorney, former chief of the Watergate Task Force of the Watergate Special Prosecutor’s Office; Fred F. Fielding, Republican, attorney, former Counsel to President Reagan; Jamie Gorelick, Democrat, former Deputy Attorney General in the Clinton Administration; Slade Gorton, Republican, former Senator from Washington; Bob Kerrey, Democrat, former Senator from Nebraska; John F. Lehman, Republican, former Secretary of the Navy in the Reagan Administration; Timothy J. Roemer, Democrat, former U.S. Representative from the 3rd District of Indiana; James R. Thompson, Republican, former Governor of Illinois.

Over the course of its approximately 20-month existence, the Commission reviewed more than 2.5 million pages of documents and interviewed more than 1,200 individuals in ten countries. It held 19 days of hearings and received public testimony from 160 witnesses.¹⁶ Present and former government officials testified before the Commission, including: Colin Powell, United States Secretary of State; Richard Armitage, Deputy Secretary of State; Madeleine Albright, former Secretary of State; Donald H. Rumsfeld, Secretary of Defense; Paul Wolfowitz, Deputy Secretary of Defense; William Cohen, former Secretary of Defense; Condoleezza Rice, National Security Advisor to the President; Sandy Berger, former National Security Advisor; Richard Clarke, former counterterrorism official for Presidents George H.W. Bush, Bill Clinton, and George W. Bush; Vice President Dick Cheney; former President Bill Clinton, and former Vice President Al Gore.

Report of the Commission

Pursuant to its statutory mandate, the Commission submitted its final report and unanimous recommendations to Congress and the President on July 22, 2004.¹⁷ The 567-page report provides a detailed chronicle of the events leading up to the September 11th attacks. The paperback version of the report has since become a “national bestseller, a first for such a commission report.”¹⁸ As part of its analysis of these events, the Commission identified “fault lines within our government—between foreign and domestic intelligence, and between and within agencies.”¹⁹ The Commission also cited “pervasive problems of managing and sharing information across a large and unwieldy government that had been built in a different era to confront different dangers.”²⁰

H.R. 10, THE "9/11 RECOMMENDATIONS IMPLEMENTATION ACT"

On September 29, 2004, Speaker Hastert introduced H.R. 10, the "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act" which reflects the bipartisan recommendations of the Commission. The legislation consists of five titles: Reform of the Intelligence Community; Terrorism Prevention and Prosecution; Border Security and Terrorist Travel; International Cooperation and Coordination; and Government Restructuring.

Summary of Principal Provisions of H.R. 10 Within the Jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary²¹

TITLE I—REFORM OF THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY

Section 1011. Reorganization and improvement of management of intelligence community

Section 1011 replaces sections 102 through 104 of Title I of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 402 et. seq.) with new sections 102, 102A, 103, 103A, 104 and 104A. New section 102 replaces the Director of Central Intelligence ("DCI") with a National Intelligence Director ("NID") as recommended by the Commission. The NID will be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and will serve as the head of the intelligence community. The NID may not simultaneously serve as the DCI or as the head of any other element of the intelligence community. This section also establishes a clear chain of command to ensure that while the NID will manage and oversee the Intelligence Community, the NID will do this through the heads of the Departments containing the elements of the intelligence community. The Committee supports the language requiring the NID to work through the heads of the Departments to ensure accountability and responsibility through a clear chain of command.

New § 102A sets out the responsibilities and authorities of the NID. This section provides that the NID shall have access to all national intelligence and intelligence related to the national security, except as otherwise provided by law or guidelines agreed upon by the Attorney General and the NID. The NID will develop and present the annual budget for the National Intelligence Program ("NIP"). The NID must report to the Committees on Judiciary, Intelligence, and Armed Services on any transfer of personnel relative to the Committees' jurisdiction. Additionally, this section requires the NID to ensure that the Intelligence Community through the Host Departments that contain the elements of the Intelligence Community comply with the Constitution and the laws of the United States. At the Committee's recommendation, H.R. 10 contains a provision clarifying that nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting the role of the Department of Justice or the Attorney General with respect to applications under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978.

New § 103 establishes the Office of the NID to assist the Director in the performance of his or her duties. This section establishes specific responsibilities for a number of Deputies and Associates to assist the NID. The Associate National Intelligence Director for Domestic Security is to ensure that the intelligence needs of the Department of Justice and other relevant executive branch agencies are met. At the same time, the language restricts this position from disseminating domestic or homeland security information to State and local government officials and the private sector.

New § 104 establishes that the DCI shall assist the NID. These responsibilities include: (1) collecting intelligence through human sources and by other appropriate means, except that the DCI shall have no police, subpoena, or law enforcement powers or internal security functions; and (2) providing overall direction for the collection of national intelligence overseas or outside of the United States through human sources by elements of the intelligence community authorized to undertake such collection and, in coordination with other agencies of the Government which are authorized to undertake such collection, ensuring that the most effective use is made of resources and that the risks to the United States and those involved in such collection are minimized. The Manager's Amendment reported by the Committee inserted the qualifying phrase "overseas or outside the United States" to clarify that the CIA's collection authority is not domestic. The Committee also supported the continued limitation that the CIA shall not have police, subpoena, or other law enforcement powers.

This section defines "national intelligence" and "intelligence related to national security" to refer to all intelligence, regardless of source, and to include information collected both domestically and overseas, that involves threats to the United States, its people, property or interests; the development or use of weapons of mass destruction; or any other matter bearing on the national or homeland security of the United States.

Section 1014. Role of the National Intelligence Director in appointment of certain officials responsible for intelligence-related activities

This section amends § 106 of the National Security Act to authorize the NID to recommend to the President individuals for appointment as the Deputy NID and the DCI. The section also allows the NID to concur with the Secretary of Defense in the selection of the head of the National Security Agency, National Reconnaissance Office, and the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency. The NID shall consult, under this section on the selection for the positions of the Defense Intelligence Agency, Assistant Secretary of State for Intelligence and Research, Director of the Office of Intelligence of the Department of Energy, Director of the Office of Counterintelligence of the Department of Energy, Assistant Secretary for Intelligence and Analysis of the Department of Treasury, Executive Assistant Director for the Intelligence of the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") or successor, Undersecretary of Homeland Security for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection, and the Deputy Assistant Commandant of the Coast Guard for Intelligence. Due to an ongoing restructuring at the FBI, the Committee added the phrase "or that officer's successor" to cover any new intelligence office at the FBI.

The bill also establishes the new National Counterterrorism Center and provides authority to establish other national intelligence centers (“NICs”). The NID shall also have authority to select appointees for some intelligence positions and consult with Congress in the selection of others. (§§ 1001–1016).

Section 1021. National Counterterrorism Center

The Commission’s Report “recommend[ed] the establishment of a National Counterterrorism Center, built on the foundation of the existing Terrorist Threat Integration Center (“TTIC”). Breaking the older mold of national government organization, this NCTC should be a center for joint operational planning and joint intelligence, staffed by personnel from the various agencies. The head of the NCTC should have authority to evaluate the performance of the people assigned to the Center.” Commission Report at 403. Section 1021 establishes the National Counterterrorism Center (“NCTC”), which will be the primary organization for analyzing and integrating all intelligence possessed or acquired by the U.S.—except for intelligence pertaining exclusively to domestic counterterrorism. The NCTC will also support the Department of Justice, Department of Homeland Security, and other agencies in fulfillment of their responsibilities to disseminate terrorism information consistent with the law and guidelines agreed to by the Attorney General and the NID. The Committee added the reference to the AG guidelines in the Manager’s Amendment.

Section 1022. Civil Liberties Protection Officer

Section 1022 requires the NID to appoint a Civil Liberties Protection Officer (“CLPO”) who would be responsible for ensuring that civil liberties and privacy protections are appropriately incorporated in the policies and procedures developed and implemented by the Office of the NID (“ONID”). In addition, the CLPO must: (1) oversee compliance by the ONID and the NID with the Constitution and all laws, regulations, executive orders and implementing guidelines relating to civil liberties and privacy; (2) review and assess complaints and other information indicating possible civil liberties or privacy abuses; (3) ensure that the utilization of technologies sustain privacy protections regarding the use, collection, and disclosure of personal information; (4) ensure that personal information contained in a system of records (as defined in the Privacy Act) is handled in full compliance with the Act’s fair information practices; (5) conduct privacy impact assessments when appropriate or required by law; and (6) perform such other duties as prescribed by the NID or required by law. Section 1022 authorizes the CLPO to refer complaints of civil liberties or privacy abuse to the appropriate Office of Inspector General responsible for the intelligence community department or agency to investigate. This provision reflects the following Commission recommendation: “At this time of increased and consolidated government authority, there should be a board within the executive branch to oversee adherence to the guidelines we recommend and the commitment the government makes to defend our civil liberties.” (Commission Report at 395).

Section 1031. Joint Intelligence Community Council

This section establishes the Joint Intelligence Community Council which will provide advice to the NID from the various heads of the Departments that contain elements of the Intelligence Community, including the Attorney General.

TITLE II—TERRORISM PREVENTION AND PROSECUTION

Section 2001. Individual Terrorists as Agents of Foreign Powers

The Commission suggests on page 54 of its Report that terrorism can be conducted by those who are acting alone and not depending on al Qaeda or other terrorist organizations as a source of funding but as a source of inspiration. The Report found that the premise behind the government's efforts here—that terrorist operations need a financial support network—may itself be outdated. The effort to find, track, and stop terrorist money presumes that it is being sent from a central source or group of identifiable sources. Some terrorist operations do not rely on outside sources of money, and cells may now be self-funding, either through legitimate employment or through low-level criminal activity. Terrorist groups only remotely affiliated with al Qaeda pose a significant threat of mass casualty attacks. Our terrorist-financing efforts can do little to stop them, as there is no “central command” from which the money flowed, as in the 9/11 attacks.

Section 2001 of the bill as introduced addresses the lone terrorist acting on inspiration rather than affiliation. When the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (“FISA”) was enacted in the 1970s, terrorists usually were members of distinct, hierarchical terror groups. Today, the “lone wolfs” often are not formal members of any group. Instead, they are part of a loosely organized movement, such as Jihad Against America, and act alone. FISA authority should be updated to reflect this new threat. This section amends 50 U.S.C. § 1801(b)(1) by adding new subparagraph C. Section 1801(b)(1) defines “Agent of a foreign power” for any person other than a United States person, who:

(A) acts in the United States as an officer or employee of a foreign power, or as a member of a foreign power as defined in subsection (a)(4) of this section;

(B) acts for or on behalf of a foreign power which engages in clandestine intelligence activities in the United States contrary to the interests of the United States, when the circumstances of such person's presence in the United States indicate that such person may engage in such activities in the United States, or when such person knowingly aids or abets any person in the conduct of such activities or knowingly conspires with any person to engage in such activities;

The definition is used to determine the target of a surveillance under FISA. Section 4 adds new subparagraph C to the definition, which states “engages in international terrorism or activities in preparation therefor.” This new definition reaches unaffiliated individuals who engage in international terrorism, i.e. “lone wolf” terrorists. Specifically, the language expands the FISA definition of “agent of a foreign power” to include a presumption that all non-U.S. persons who engage in international terrorism meet the definition of an agent of a foreign power.

This section as introduced does not change the requirement for a judicial finding of probable cause that the target is an agent of a foreign power. (See § 1805(a)(3) and (b)) The new definition requires that for a non-U.S. person to be found to be an agent of a foreign power that person must be engaged in international terrorism. Thus, under the probable cause requirement currently in law and the new definition in this section—before a judge can issue a FISA order for surveillance—there must be a showing of probable cause that the person is engaged or preparing to engage in international terrorism.

At markup, the Committee adopted by voice vote a Berman amendment that substantially changed this section. The Berman amendment adds a new section to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978. It allows the court to assume that a non-U.S. person who is engaged in terrorism is an agent of a foreign power under the Act.

Sections 2021–2024. Stop Terrorist and Military Hoaxes Act of 2004

The Commission Report found that “hard choices must be made in allocating limited resources,” and that “terrorists should perceive that potential targets are defended” (See Commission Report at 391). Further, the Commission found that “throughout the government, nothing has been harder for officials * * * than to set priorities, making hard choices in allocating limited resources” (See Commission Report at 395). In furtherance of this finding, this subtitle creates criminal and civil penalties for whoever engages in any conduct, with intent to convey false or misleading information, that concerns an activity which would constitute such crimes as those relating to: Explosives; firearms; destruction of vessels; terrorism; sabotage of nuclear facilities; aircraft piracy; a dangerous weapon to assault flight crew members and attendants; explosives on an aircraft; homicide or attempted homicide or damaging or destroying facilities. The subtitle also prohibits making a false statement with intent to convey false or misleading information about the death, injury, capture, or disappearance of a member of the U.S. armed forces during a war or armed conflict in which the United States is engaged. Additionally, the bill increases penalties from not more than 5 years to not more than 10 years for making false statements, and obstructing justice, if the subject matter relates to international or domestic terrorism.

Sections 2041–2044. Material Support to Terrorism Prohibition Enhancement Act of 2004

The Commission Report noted on page 68 that as early as December 1993, a team of al Qaeda operatives had begun casing targets in Nairobi for future attacks. It was led by Ali Mohamed, a former Egyptian army officer who had moved to the United States in the mid-1980s, enlisted in the U.S. Army, and became an instructor at Fort Bragg. He had provided guidance and training to extremists at the Farouq mosque in Brooklyn, including some who were subsequently convicted in the February 1993 attack on the World Trade Center. Additionally, as the report states on page 365, terrorism financing is a part of providing material support to terrorists. Material support may also consist of training.

Section 2042 establishes a new crime of material support for terrorism for knowingly receiving military training from a foreign terrorist organization. The section requires that any person charged under this section must have knowledge that the organization is a terrorist organization. It also defines the term “military-type training.” The section provides for extraterritorial federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section.

Section 2043. Providing Material Support to Terrorism

The 9/11 Commission Report noted on pages 365–66 that “a complex international terrorist operation aimed at launching a catastrophic attack cannot be mounted by just anyone in any place. Such operations appear to require (among others):

1. Time, space, and ability to perform competent planning and staff work;
2. Opportunity and space to recruit, train, and select operatives with the needed skills and dedication, providing the time and structure required to socialize them into the terrorist cause, judge their trustworthiness, and hone their skills;
3. A logistics network able to securely manage the travel of operatives, move money, and transport resources (like explosives) where they need to go; and
4. Access, in the case of certain weapons, to the special materials needed for a nuclear, chemical, radiological, or biological attack.

The Commission on page 215 noted that it was “unlikely” that two of the 9/11 hijackers, “Hazmi and Mihdhar—neither of whom, in contrast to the Hamburg group, had any prior exposure to life in the West—would have come to the United States without arranging to receive assistance from one or more individuals informed in advance of their arrival.” It further noted, that “our inability to ascertain the activities of Hazmi and Mihdhar during their first two weeks in the United States may reflect al Qaeda tradecraft designed to protect the identity of anyone who may have assisted them during that period.” Without this material support structure in place, the two hijackers would have unlikely been able to sustain an existence without raising suspicions or feeling lost in an unfamiliar environment.

Section 2043 expands the crime of material support to terrorists to include any act of international or domestic terrorism and require that any person charged under this section must have knowledge that the organization is a terrorist organization. It also more clearly defines the term material support.

Section 2044. Financing of Terrorism

This section amends 18 USC §2339C so that those who raise funds for terrorism can be prosecuted prior to the funds being transmitted to terrorist organizations.

Sections 2051–2053. Weapons of Mass Destruction Prohibition Improvement Act of 2004

The Commission Report states “that al Qaeda has tried to acquire or make weapons of mass destruction for at least ten years. There is no doubt the United States would be a prime target. Preventing the proliferation of these weapons warrants a maximum effort—by strengthening counter proliferation efforts, * * *” (See Commission Report at 381) Section 2052 amends 18 U.S.C. § 2332a(a)(2), which makes it a crime for a person to use a weapon of mass destruction (other than a chemical weapon) against any person within the U.S., and the result of such use affects interstate and foreign commerce. This legislation would expand the coverage of the target to include property. The bill would also expand Federal jurisdiction by covering the use of mail or any facility of interstate or foreign commerce for the attack, by the property being used for interstate or foreign commerce, and when the perpetrator travels or causes another to travel in interstate or foreign commerce in furtherance of the offense. This section would also expand coverage to include the use of a chemical weapon.

Section 2101–2102. Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing

The Commission Report found that: “vigorous efforts to track terrorist financing must remain front and center in U.S. counterterrorism efforts. The government has recognized that information about terrorist money helps us to understand their networks, search them out, and disrupt their operations. These efforts have worked. The death or capture of several important facilitators has decreased the amount of money available to al Qaeda and has increased its costs and difficulty in raising and moving that money. Captures have additionally provided a windfall of intelligence.” (See Commission Report at 382)

This section authorizes funding for the Department of Treasury’s Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (“FinCEN”). It provides funding for the following: (1) key technological improvements in FinCEN systems providing authorized law enforcement agencies with Web-based access to FinCEN data; (2) expedited filing of suspicious activity reports with the ability to immediately alert financial institutions about suspicious activities; (3) provision of information sharing technologies to improve the Government’s ability to exploit the information in the FinCEN databases; and (4) provision of training in the use of technologies available to detect and prevent financial crimes and terrorism.

Sections 2141–2146. Criminal History Background Checks

The Commission Report states that “secure identification should begin in the United States * * * at many entry points to vulnerable facilities * * * sources of identification are the last opportunity to ensure that people are who they say they are and to check whether they are terrorists.” (See Commission Report at 390) The Report also states that “the private sector controls 85 percent of the critical infrastructure in the nation * * * the ‘first’ first responders will almost certainly be civilians” (See Commission Report at 398) In furtherance of these findings, this subtitle addresses the issue of criminal history records as they relate to background investigations.

This subtitle requires the Attorney General to initiate, establish, and maintain a system for providing employers with criminal history information if the information is requested as part of an employee background check that is authorized by the State where the employee works or where the employer has its principal place of business. This subtitle also gives the Attorney General flexibility, based on real time terror concerns, to mandate criminal history record checks for certain types of employment that involve positions vital to the nation's infrastructure or key resources. This subtitle also establishes a mechanism for private security officer employers to request criminal history records as part of a background investigation and establishes a task force to examine the creation of a clearinghouse to facilitate criminal record request exchanges involving applicants for security officer employment.

This section would allow a standardized approach to the numerous requests from groups that want or need access to these records. A piecemeal approach has evolved as the various bills that authorize these go to different committees for consideration and, when passed, end up in different sections of the code. Some of the groups that have legislation enacted for their individual industries include: banking, parimutuel wagering, securities, aviation, hazardous materials transportation, nuclear energy, Indian gambling, nursing and home health care, and public housing.

There are several other industries and groups that are seeking authority to request a check of these records as part of their applicant screening process. This section sets up a standard process with uniform procedures, definitions, fee structures where practical, and reasonable safeguards to protect privacy and employee rights. A reporting requirement under this section seeks to identify all statutory requirements that already require the Department of Justice to perform some type of record check, the type of information requested, and any variances that exist in terms, definitions, and fees charged. The amendment offered by Mrs. Blackburn, which was adopted, makes this a pilot study and establishes specific criteria to be addressed in the report that is required, including the effectiveness of using commercially available data bases as part of criminal history information checks. The Committee intends that this study last for 180 days.

Section 2143 amends Public Law 108-21 extending from 18 months to 30 months, the duration of existing pilot programs for volunteer groups to obtain national and state criminal history background checks.

Section 2144 was added by the Blackburn amendment. It is the text of S.1743, the "Private Security Officer Employment Authorization Act," which passed the Senate by unanimous consent at the end of 2003, and was the topic of a legislative hearing on March 30th, 2004, before the Subcommittee on Crime, Terrorism, and Homeland Security. This section makes findings as to the important role that private security officers play and stresses the importance of thoroughly screening and training officers. This section establishes a mechanism for authorized employers of security guards to request criminal history background checks using existing State identification bureaus. The criteria for disqualification mirror existing state criteria and where a state has no criteria for such employment, this section provides general disqualifiers. A state may decline to participate in the program established by this section.

Section 2145, created by the Blackburn amendment, establishes a task force to examine the establishment of a national clearinghouse to process criminal history record requests from employers providing private security guard services. The Committee intends that the clearinghouse described in §2145 shall only process criminal history record requests pertaining to employees or prospective employees of the private security guard service making the request pursuant to that section.

Section 2191. Grand jury information sharing

The Commission recommended on page 417 of its report that “Information procedures should provide incentives for sharing, to restore a better balance between security and shared knowledge. On page 355, the report listed several examples of failures of information sharing before the September 11th attacks. In January 2001: the CIA did not inform the FBI that a source had identified Khallad, or Tawfiq bin Attash, a major figure in the October 2000 bombing of the USS Cole, as having attended the meeting in Kuala Lumpur with Khalid al Mihdhar. In May 2001: a CIA official did not notify the FBI about Mihdhar’s U.S. visa, Hazmi’s U.S. travel, or Khallad’s having attended the Kuala Lumpur meeting. In June 2001: FBI and CIA officials did not ensure that all relevant information regarding the Kuala Lumpur meeting was shared with the Cole investigators at the June 11 meeting. In August 2001: the FBI did not recognize the significance of the information regarding Mihdhar and Hazmi’s possible arrival in the United States and thus did not take adequate action to share information, assign resources, and give sufficient priority to the search. Also in August 2001: FBI headquarters did not recognize the significance of the information regarding Moussaoui’s training and beliefs and thus did not take adequate action to share information.

Along with the 9/11 attacks, the growth of transnational threats against the United States has increased the need for intelligence and law enforcement agencies to cooperate and share intelligence and law enforcement information. Executive Order 12333 (1981) states: “Timely and accurate information about the activities, capabilities, plans, and intentions of foreign powers, organizations, and persons and their agents, is essential to the national security of the United States. All reasonable and lawful means must be used to ensure that the United States will receive the best intelligence available.”

Section 895 of the USA PATRIOT Act was an effort to allow sharing of grand jury information in limited circumstances. It was subsequently affected by a rule change by the Supreme Court. According to the Historical Notes of the Federal Criminal Code and Rules on page 51, “Section 895 of Pub. L. No. 107–296, which purported to amend subdivision (e) of this rule, failed to take into account the amendment of this rule by Order of the Supreme Court of the United States dated April 29, 2002, effective December 1, 2002, and was therefore incapable of execution.” This section makes the technical changes to address the rule change and ensure that the intent of Congress is carried through to improve information sharing.

Section 2192. Interoperable Law Enforcement and Intelligence Data System

The Commission Report described both the immensity of government information, but also how the U.S. government has a weak system for processing and using what it has. In no place is there greater resistance to information sharing and to any kind of interconnectivity among data systems than within the Intelligence Community. For example, the Report states that “undistributed NSA information * * * would have helped identify Nawaf al Hazmi in January 2000.” (See Commission Report at 417) The problem is that, three years later, the intelligence agencies stubbornly maintain the set of parallel information system smokestacks that have existed for decades.

The Commission also proposed that “information be shared horizontally, across new networks that transcend individual agencies, “and explained that the “current system is structured on an old mainframe, or hub-and-spoke, concept. In this older approach, each agency has its own database. Agency users send information to the database and then can retrieve it from the database.” (See Commission Report at 418) It proposed instead a “decentralized network model,” the concept behind much of the information revolution also shares data horizontally. Agencies would still have their own databases, but those databases would be searchable across agency lines. In this system, secrets are protected through the design of the network and an ‘information rights management’ approach that controls access to the data, not access to the whole network”. (See Commission Report at 418) The Commission recommended that “The president should lead the government-wide effort to bring the major national security institutions into the information revolution * * * [he] should coordinate the resolution of the legal, policy, and technical issues across agencies to create a “trusted information network.” (See Commission Report at 418)

Section 2192 provides a clear direction to the NID to end that approach and clear deadlines for accomplishing a horizontal system. It takes a system that Congress already authorized for the successors to the INS in the Enhanced Border Security Act of 2001—which has not been implemented—and moves it to the National Intelligence Center. Specifically, this provision establishes requirements for the NID to establish an interim system for horizontal information exchange within the intelligence community to become operational immediately. This is to be followed by a fully functional interoperable system to “truly” establish interoperable data and information exchange within a trusted information network by 2007. Due to the complexity of this endeavor, as well as the urgency for completion of both the interim system and the full system, a special authority is granted to hire people capable of establishing both systems. Requirements for the systems align with the Commission’s recommended “need to share” intelligence with intelligence officers, law enforcement and operational counterterror personnel, consular officers, and DHS border security officers.

Section 2193. The Improvement of Intelligence Capabilities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation

This section codifies the recommendations of the Commission as they relate to the FBI’s intelligence capabilities. These recommendations are largely reforms that have already been implemented, or are about to be implemented, at the FBI. In its Report, the Commission recommends that the FBI’s shift to preventing terrorism must survive the tenure of the current Director. This section avoids past shortcomings by the Bureau in its efforts to transform itself to address transnational security concern.

TITLE III—BORDER SECURITY AND TERRORIST TRAVEL

Subtitle A. Immigration Reform in the National Interest

Section 3001. Verification of Returning Citizens

Regulations implementing the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) allow U.S. citizens to reenter the U.S. from countries in the Western Hemisphere (other than Cuba) without passports.²² The risks of this so-called “Western Hemisphere exception” have become all too obvious. A May 2003 hearing by the Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims examined D.C. sniper John Muhammad’s smuggling activities between the Caribbean and the United States and revealed significant weaknesses in the admission process resulting from the exception. Muhammad was able to make his living by providing false American identification documents such as driver’s licenses and birth certificates to aliens seeking to impersonate U.S. citizens and get through U.S. ports-of-entry. The GAO performed two investigations of this process, one for the Senate Finance Committee in January 2003, and another for the Immigration Subcommittee in May 2003.²³ In January, GAO agents crossed into the U.S. by presenting counterfeit state identification documents with false names (or no documents at all) from Canada, Mexico, and Jamaica. After briefing DHS on what it had done, and using the same documents, inspectors re-entered from Barbados unimpeded in May.

It is no wonder that the Commission found that “Americans should not be exempt from carrying biometric passports or otherwise enabling their identities to be securely verified when they enter the United States * * *.”²⁴ Section 3001 would require that by October 2006, all U.S. citizens returning from Western Hemisphere countries other than Canada and Mexico must present U.S. passports. In the interim, U.S. citizens would have to present a document designated by the Secretary of DHS. For U.S. citizens returning from Canada and Mexico, the Secretary of DHS would have to designate documents that are sufficiently secure.

Section 3002. Documents Required by Aliens from Contiguous Countries

Foreign visitors usually need passports or U.S. visas or border crossing cards to enter the U.S. However, the INA allows the Administration to waive this requirement for nationals of contiguous countries—which it has done for Canadians.²⁵ Therefore, U.S. inspectors at northern ports-of-entry can allow persons identifying themselves as Canadians and not looking “suspicious” to enter the U.S. without having to show any documents whatsoever. Non-Canadians entering the U.S. without any documents by claiming to be Canadian and Canadians on terrorist watchlists not being identified at the border because they do not have to provide documents are obvious security concerns.

²² See §215(b) of the INA.

²³ See John Allen Muhammad, Document Fraud, and the Western Hemisphere Passport Exception: Hearing Before the Subcomm. On Immigration, Border Security and Claims of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 108th Cong., at 31 (testimony of Robert Cramer, Managing Director, Office of Special Investigations, U.S. General Accounting Office) (2003).

²⁴ Commission Report at 388.

²⁵ See INA § 212(d)(4)(B).

There have been a disturbing number of cases of terrorists trying to enter the U.S. from Canada. Most notoriously, on December 14, 1999, the U.S. Customs Service arrested Algerian Ahmed Ressaym at Port Angeles, Washington. Ressaym was on his way to carry out the "Millennium Plot" and detonate a bomb at Los Angeles's international airport. He was found with nitroglycerin and other bomb-making equipment in his car. A former counter-terrorism chief for the CIA stated that his interception was "pure luck."

The National Post of Canada reported in June 2002 that:

New allegations that a man behind the deadly bombing of a Tunisian synagogue belonged to a Montreal-based al-Qaeda cell show that Canada must do more to combat violent extremists, critics charged. * * * Nizar Ben Muhammed Nasr Nawar, 24, was under surveillance by Canadian intelligence agents for weeks but managed to slip away to his native country and set off a bomb that killed 19 people, including 12 German tourists. There is no word on whether Nawar, who told his family he was going to study at a Montreal school for travel agents, was part of a wave of 1,300 young Tunisian men who came to Canada in 1999 and 2000 on a student exchange. More than 100 of them have since disappeared without a trace.²⁶

Unfortunately, it has been clear for some time that Canadian immigration policy poses a risk to U.S. national security. The Boston Globe reported in February 2002 that:

[Canada] has emerged as an important fund-raising and staging ground for Al Qaeda soldiers. * * * For Al Qaeda, the Canadian center of choice is Montreal * * * although terrorist plotters and long-term "sleepers" have also made nests in Toronto and Vancouver, the country's two other major urban areas, according to terrorist specialists and investigators. "Montreal is a world-class hub of Islamist terrorist activity," said David Harris, former chief of strategic planning at the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service, the nation's spy service. * * * Noting the city's proximity to the United States and its large Muslim population, into which an Islamic militant bent on concealment can easily blend, Harris * * * said: "For a group that thinks of the US as the Great Satan, what better staging city for reconnaissance and operations?" * * * [I]ntelligence officials, anti-terrorist agents, federal police, and diplomats confirmed in recent interviews and background briefings that Al Qaeda and other terrorist groups have a significant presence in Canada. * * * Of most concern is the strong possibility that undetected Al Qaeda sleeper cells exist in Canada, awaiting the signal to attack American targets. * * * [S]cores of suspected Al Qaeda loyalists * * * have exploited Canada's liberal immigration standards and notoriously lax refugee rules to establish safe havens in the country that * * * still offers the easiest international access to the United States. * * *

²⁶Tom Blackwell, Bombing Link Brings Call for Crackdown: Synagogue Killer Slipped through Net While in Canada, National Post, June 10, 2002, at A4.

[C]ritics say the Chretien government is ignoring the most basic reason why Canada has become a sanctuary for international terrorists—immigration policies that bring more than 250,000 new people a year into the country with very little screening and loose rules that allow even suspected terrorists to reside for years in the country (collecting welfare, national health benefits, and housing allowances) simply by claiming to be refugees.²⁷

The 9/11 Commission found that “Americans should not be exempt from carrying biometric passports or otherwise enabling their identities to be securely verified when they enter the United States, nor should Canadians or Mexicans. * * *²⁸ The bill would require that by the beginning of 2007, aliens claiming to be Canadian who seek to enter the U.S. must present a passport or other secure identification.

The 9/11 Commission found that “[i]t is elemental to border security to know who is coming into the country. * * * We must * * * be able to monitor and respond to entrances between our ports of entry. * * * The challenge for national security in an age of terrorism is to prevent the * * * people who may pose overwhelming risks from entering * * * the U.S. undetected.”²⁹ The Commission’s staff report on “9/11 and Terrorist Travel” found that “[t]here is also evidence that terrorists used human smugglers to sneak across borders.”³⁰

The Commission and its staff were right. Because it is easy for aliens to illegally cross our borders, it is also relatively easy for terrorists to enter. Periodic reports of large numbers of Middle Eastern nationals crossing the southern border were verified by the recent release of Border Patrol data showing that from last October through this June, 44,614 non-Mexican aliens were caught trying to cross the northern or southern borders—including eight from Afghanistan, six from Algeria, 13 from Egypt, 20 from Indonesia, 10 from Iran, 55 from Israel, 122 from Pakistan, six from Saudi Arabia, six from Syria, 22 from Turkey, and two from Yemen. A South African woman alleged to be on a terrorist watch list recently indicated that she had crossed the border illegally from Mexico.

By the mid 1990s, our southwest border was in a state of crisis. The transit routes most heavily used for illegal aliens were in the San Diego corridor. It had become a sieve where illegal aliens from Mexico entered en masse and unhindered. The Border Patrol in El Paso, Texas, then developed “Operation Hold the Line” and placed agents directly on the border. This deterrent dramatically reduced illegal crossings, cutting crime in border communities and winning the praise of the public. The INS adopted the Hold-the-Line strategy in San Diego under the moniker of “Operation Gatekeeper”, and it came to believe that Gatekeeper was one of its most successful border control initiatives ever, bringing law and order to the San Diego border.

Despite the successes of Hold-the-Line and Gatekeeper, overall illegal entries across our borders have not decreased because there are not enough agents to duplicate the strategy across the southwest border. Illegal aliens now resort to difficult but lightly patrolled routes across rugged terrain in California and Arizona. Professor Frank Bean of the University of Texas found that approximately 16,000 Border Patrol agents would be required to duplicate the Hold-the-Line strategy across the entire southwestern border. This is the number of agents America needs to control our southwestern border. Given the need to also bolster resources along the northern border, Border Patrol strength should optimally be at least doubled from its current level of about 11,000. The bill therefore authorizes an increase in the Border Patrol of 2,000 agents a year for each of the next five years.

Section 3004. Increase in Immigration Enforcement Investigators

The Commission's staff found repeatedly that the lack of enforcement of our immigration laws in the interior of the U.S. facilitated terrorism. The staff reported that "abuse of the immigration system and a lack of interior immigration enforcement were unwittingly working together to support terrorist activity."³¹ Further, "[t]he first problem encountered by those concerned about terrorists was an almost complete lack of enforcement resources. [No one] ever provided the support needed for INS enforcement agents to find, detain, and remove illegal aliens, including those with terrorist associations."³²

Even if we were to completely seal our borders, that would not be enough to control illegal immigration. Between one-third and one-half of the resident illegal alien population came to the U.S. legally on temporary visas and simply never left. Interior enforcement is a crucial component of immigration law enforcement. In addition to tracking down illegal aliens (including those who do make it past the border), interior investigators also play a crucial role in the location and deportation of criminal aliens and aliens who skip out on deportation orders. But the Commission's staff found that "[t]he budget for interior enforcement remained static in the face of an overwhelming number of immigrants outside the legal framework" and that "[t]he INS's difficulty in locating absconders is consistent with the difficulty generally faced [in locating] aliens inside our country."³³

ICE only has about 2,000 investigators nationwide, a number that all agree is woefully inadequate to protect the borders against terrorist infiltration. Enforcement of employer sanctions has all but been abandoned. Arrests on job sites have declined from over 8,000 in 1992 to 451 in 2002, and final orders levying fines on employers for immigration law violations fell from over 1,000 in 1992 to 13 in 2002. Until we eliminate the "job magnet" we will never successfully control illegal immigration.

There are some 400,000 alien "absconders," aliens who have been ordered removed from the U.S. and who have ignored those orders and remained in the country. Of those, 80,000 have criminal records. Although ICE has deployed 18 Fugitive Operations teams to arrest those aliens, the teams cannot accomplish the task on their own. A recent report stated that the San Diego team “with more than 550 apprehensions ranks near the top of the 22 cities where Homeland Security agents have caught fugitives since October 2003.” If each team were to arrest 600 aliens per year, it would take more than 37 years to apprehend the outstanding absconders, even if no other aliens were to evade removal. It would take more than seven years for these teams to arrest just the criminal absconders.

³³Id. at 143 and 156.

The bill would increase the number of ICE investigators enforcing our immigration laws by 800 a year for each of the next five years. One half of the new investigators would be dedicated to enforcing employer sanctions and removing illegal aliens from the workplace. Section 3005. Prevention of Improper Use of Foreign Identification Documents.

The Commission noted that “[i]n their travels, terrorists use * * * identity fraud.”³⁴ It wrote that “[a] fundamental problem * * * is the lack of standardized information in ‘feeder’ documents used in identifying individuals [and that] fraud in identification documents is no longer just a problem of theft. At many entry points to vulnerable facilities, including gates for boarding aircraft, sources of identification are the last opportunity to ensure that people are who they say they are and to check whether they are terrorists.”³⁵ The Commission went on to say that “[o]nce inside the country, [aliens] may seek another form of identification and try to enter a government or private facility.”³⁶ It found that “today, a terrorist can defeat the link to electronic records by tossing away an old passport and slightly altering the name in the new one.”³⁷ The staff of the Commission found that “[terrorists] relied on a wide variety of fraudulent documents * * *.”³⁸

Since early 2002, the Mexican government has been promoting its consular identification card, called the “matricula consular,” for acceptance in the United States. Acceptance of the cards encourages illegal immigration to the United States. The only aliens in the U.S. who need additional identification documents, other than passports and U.S.-government issued documents, are those illegally here.

Also, as the then-Assistant Director of the FBI’s Office of Intelligence, Steve McCraw, told the Immigration Subcommittee in June 2003, the matricula consular is vulnerable to fraud because the issuance standards are low, the Mexican government does not monitor the cards’ issuance, and it is also vulnerable to forgery.³⁹ Mr. McCraw concluded that domestic acceptance of matricula cards in the United States poses a law enforcement and national security risk.⁴⁰ He stated that the criminal threat stems from the fact that matriculas “can be a perfect breeder document for establishing a false identity,” which can facilitate a wide range of crimes, including money laundering.⁴¹ He told of individuals who were arrested with multiple matriculas, each with the same photo but different names, some of whom had matching driver’s licenses.⁴² He concluded that the terrorist threat posed by these cards that is the “most worrisome” to the FBI: “[t]he ability of foreign nationals to use [consular cards] to create a well-documented, but fictitious, identity in the United States provides an opportunity for terrorists to move freely within the United States without triggering name-based watch lists that are disseminated to local police officers.”⁴³ Nor is the danger posed by those documents only as “breeder documents” for other documentation—notwithstanding their vulnerability to fraud and abuse, consular ID cards can be presented to board an airliner.

The bill would bar all federal employees from accepting identification cards presented by aliens other than a document issued by the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security under the authority of the immigration laws, or an unexpired foreign passport. Section 3006. Expedited Removal for Illegal Aliens.

By the mid-1990s, tens of thousands of aliens were arriving at U.S. airports each year without valid documents and making meritless asylum claims, knowing that they would be released into the community pending asylum hearings because of a lack of detention space. Few were ever heard from again. In response, the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (“IIRIRA”) created the mechanism of “expedited removal.”⁴⁴ Under expedited removal, a DHS officer at a port-of-entry can immediately return an alien lacking proper documents to the country of origin unless the alien asks for asylum and can establish a “credible fear” of persecution. By fiscal year 2003, the INS was making over 43,000 expedited removals per year and our airports were no longer being deluged.

IIRIRA provided the Administration with the authority to use expedited removal in the case of any alien who had entered the U.S. illegally and had not been present here for two years.⁴⁵ Until recently, the INS and DHS never made use of this power, a fact that amazed the staff of the 9/11 Commission. The staff stated that:

Despite th[e success of expedited removal at our airports], the INS never expanded expedited removal to include persons attempting to enter illegally across the expansive physical borders between ports of entry. As a result, it was not used against Gazi Ibrahim Abu Mezer, who was able to stay in the United States despite being apprehended three times for illegal entries along the Canadian border. He later became known as the “Brooklyn Bomber” for his plan to blow up the Atlantic Avenue subway in Brooklyn.⁴⁶

Recently, the Administration has taken a tentative step towards using expedited removal along the southern border because of the large numbers of non-Mexican aliens who have been caught by the Border Patrol and then released into the United States because of a lack of detention space.

Aliens who have crossed the border illegally should be subject to expedited exclusion. These aliens, if they have been in the U.S. less than ten years, have no right to seek cancellation of removal. Unless they are making a claim of asylum and can show a credible fear of persecution, there is no reason not to subject them to expedited removal. Otherwise, the present “revolving door” will continue to spin. We will catch illegal aliens and promptly release them, hoping they will appear for their immigration court hearing months hence. DOJ’s Inspector General found that the INS was only able to remove 13% of nondetained aliens with final orders of removal, and only 6% of nondetained aliens from state sponsors of terrorism who had final removal orders.⁴⁷

The bill would require DHS to use expedited removal in the case of all aliens who have entered the U.S. illegally and have not been present here for five years. Given changes to the INA that Congress made in 1996 that amended the entry doctrine and ended the distinctions between exclusion and deportation hearings, it is questionable whether aliens who entered illegally would have any due process rights beyond the minimal rights of an arriving alien seeking admission to the U.S. Assuming that those aliens do, however, the procedures specified in section 3006 would satisfy due process. That these procedures do not require immigration court consideration does not violate due process, nor do they necessarily make the risk of an erroneous deprivation of removal any more likely than would immigration court procedures.

In evaluating whether procedures in any case satisfy due process, the court must consider the interest at stake for the alien, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of the interest through the procedures used as well as the probable value of additional or different procedural safeguards, and the interest of the government in using the current procedures rather than additional or different procedures.⁴⁸ The aliens affected by this section have an interest in not being removed. Those aliens’ interests are limited, however, by the paucity of their ties to the United States. In particular, the only aliens who would be impacted by this provision are those who have so few ties (and have been here less than five years) that they are entitled to no immigration benefits.

No precedent suggests that to satisfy due process, an alien must be placed into removal proceedings before an immigration judge under § 240 of the INA, as opposed to having the opportunity to explain to an immigration officer within DHS that he or she is not inadmissible under one of the grounds for expedited removal. As the Supreme Court held in one of the seminal cases in immigration law:

This court has never held, nor must we now be understood as holding, that administrative officers, when executing the provisions of a statute involving the liberty of persons, may disregard the fundamental principles that in-

here in “due process of law” as understood at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. One of these principles is that no person shall be deprived of his liberty without opportunity, at some time, to be heard, before such officers, in respect of the matters upon which that liberty depends—not necessarily an opportunity upon a regular, set occasion, and according to the forms of judicial procedure, but one that will secure the prompt, vigorous action contemplated by Congress, and at the same time be appropriate to the nature of the case upon which such officers are required to act.⁴⁹

In fact, until the (regulatory) creation of the Executive Office for Immigration Review in 1983, immigration judges were a part of the former INS, the agency charged with the alien’s removal. In implementing the expedited removal provisions in IIRIRA, INS recognized the interests of aliens facing removal, and drafted its procedures to protect those interests.⁵⁰ Those procedures effectively ensure that aliens are not erroneously removed thereunder: “All officers should be especially careful to exercise objectivity and professionalism when refusing admission to aliens under this [expedited removal] provision. Because of the sensitivity of the program and the potential consequences of a summary removal, you must take special care to ensure that the basic rights of all aliens are preserved * * *. Since a removal order under this process is subject to very limited review, you must be absolutely certain that all required procedures have been adhered to and that the alien has understood the proceedings against him or her. * * * All officers should be aware of precedent decisions and policies relating to the relevant grounds of inadmissibility. * * * [I]t is important that * * * any expedited removal be justifiable and non-arbitrary.⁵¹ The Committee believes that the procedures adopted under this provision will have similar protections.⁵²

The government’s interest in the efficient enforcement of the immigration laws, on the other hand, is weighty, particularly given the findings of the Commission and its report. As the Commission found: “had the immigration system set a higher bar for determining whether individuals are who or what they claim to be—and ensuring routine consequences for violations—it could potentially have excluded, removed, or come into further contact with several hijackers who did not appear to meet the terms for admitting short-term visitors.”⁵³ Further, as the Supreme Court has found, “it must weigh heavily in the balance that control over matters of immigration is a sovereign prerogative, largely within the control of the executive and the legislature.”⁵⁴ Given these facts, the procedures described in the bill satisfy the due process for aliens who entered the U.S. illegally (such aliens having extremely limited due process rights). Terrorists are not supposed to receive asylum,⁵⁵ but many have tried. The Commission's staff report on "9/11 and Terrorist Travel" found that "a number of terrorists * * * abused the asylum system"⁵⁶ and that "[o]nce terrorists had entered the U.S., their next challenges was to find a way to remain here. Their primary method was immigration fraud * * * [concoct]ing bogus political asylum stories when they arrived * * *"⁵⁷

Unfortunately, examples abound. In 1993, Mir Aimal Kansi murdered two CIA employees at CIA headquarters and Ramzi Yousef masterminded the first World Trade Center attack while free after applying for asylum. In the same year, Sheik Umar Abd ar-Rahman plotted to bomb New York City landmarks after he applied for asylum. Just weeks ago, Shahawar Matin Siraj was arrested in New York City for plotting to bomb a subway station. Siraj was free after applying for asylum.

Asylum fraud is endemic. The staff of the 9/11 Commission found that "the asylum system did not detect or deter fraudulent applicants."⁵⁸ "Snakeheads" and other alien smugglers have succeeded in providing the aliens they are smuggling into the U.S. with extensive coaching and "cheat sheets" on what claims to make to get asylum. Successful ploys are quickly duplicated. The Commission staff found that "the asylum system did not detect or deter fraudulent applicants."⁵⁹

As a result, the number of aliens—mostly illegal aliens seeking any way to avoid deportation—who have applied for and have been granted asylum has skyrocketed in recent years. From 1990 to 2003, the number of aliens granted asylum by asylum officers has increased by 173% and the number of aliens granted asylum by immigration judges increased by 377%. The percentage of cases approved by asylum officers has increased by 93%, and the percentage approved by immigration judges has increased by 61%. When both asylum officers and immigration judges are taken into account, well over half of all asylum applications are now being approved. The total number of aliens granted asylum hit almost 37,000 in 2002 and almost 29,000 in 2003, a 240 percent increase from 1990 to 2003.

Ninth Circuit precedent makes it difficult for immigration judges to deny fraudulent asylum applications by terrorists or simply by scam artists. In recent decisions, the Ninth Circuit has failed to give deference to the adverse credibility determinations of immigration judges in asylum cases. It is well accepted that the initial trier of fact is in the best position to assess the credibility of a witness who appears before him. The Supreme Court has held that "[t]o reverse the BIA finding, [the reviewing court] must find that the evidence not only supports the conclusion, but compels it."⁶⁰ Despite these rules, however, the Ninth Circuit has adopted a body of circuit law that relieves the applicant of his burden of proof in asylum cases and allows the court to substitute its own views about contested record evidence for reasonable determinations of immigration judges or the BIA: "the majority resolves every ambiguity in favor of [the asylum applicant], whereas [the correct] standard of review requires us to resolve every ambiguity in favor of the decision-maker below.”⁶¹

The court essentially prevents immigration judges from making adverse credibility determinations by limiting to the point of a nullity the factors (such as inconsistencies and demeanor observations) that the immigration judge can consider in finding an alien incredible.⁶² For example, it has held that an immigration judge could not take into account, when determining whether an alien’s allegations of police beatings were credible, the alien’s inconsistent testimony about when and where he was beaten.⁶³ It has ruled that the BIA could not draw inferences from the “disjointed[ness] and incoherence” of the applicant’s testimony, speculating that those features of the testimony “were possibly the result of mistranslation or miscommunication.”⁶⁴ It ignores the rule that “[i]f a witness lies on any point, now matter how irrelevant it may at first appear * * * the witness’s credibility is tenuous at best, and the entire testimony can be discredited.”⁶⁵ It ruled that an applicant’s failure to mention family-planning issues in his 1995 asylum application, and his statement in 1995 that he was unmarried, failed to cast doubt upon respondent’s testimony in the second asylum proceeding that he was married and his wife was pregnant when he fled China in 1995, and that he fled because he was being pursued by family-planning officials.⁶⁶ It treats each inconsistency or gap in an applicant’s evidence as an isolated defect, rather than considering them cumulatively.⁶⁷

Other Courts of Appeals adhere to more reasonable rules, for example that an asylum applicant has to provide “convincing reasons” for inconsistency in his evidence,⁶⁸ that the court should review the collective significance of inconsistencies,⁶⁹ and that an asylum applicant’s not remembering the details of his father’s kidnapping was “the very stuff of legitimate impeachment.”⁷⁰ Given that government attorneys are barred from asking the foreign government about the facts regarding the asylum claimants,⁷¹ about the only evidence available to the government on which to deny an asylum application is the perceived credibility of the applicant. If a criminal jury can sentence a criminal defendant to life imprisonment or execution based on adverse credibility determinations, certainly an immigration judge can deny an alien asylum on this basis.

In 1988, the Ninth Circuit created a disturbing precedent that has made it easier for suspected terrorists to apply for and receive asylum. It held that punishment inflicted on account of perceived membership in an armed group may constitute persecution on account of the political opinion of that armed group, a doctrine known as “imputed political opinion.”⁷² Thus, aliens who have been arrested in the United States for suspicion of affiliation with terrorist organizations argue that the foreign government believes that they are members of a terrorist organization. Some have received asylum because of a fear of persecution if returned because of an affiliation with these groups.⁷³ Of course, the court has to rule that the foreign government “mistakenly” believes the asylum applicant is a terrorist because terrorists are barred from receiving asylum. As a member of the Board of Immigration Appeals has found:

It would appear that the Ninth Circuit holds the entirely novel view that the violent overthrow of a democratically elected government is a “political opinion” like any other and that no government may object to its expression. If a guerilla organization arose in this country aimed at the violent overthrow of the Federal Government through a program of murder of government and law enforcement officials and federal judges, it would appear that governmental suppression of this organization would be an act of persecution in the Ninth Circuit. After all, if that court could find that [a government] “persecuted [the asylum applicant] because it believed him to be a guerrilla,” then it is clear that “being” a guerrilla is somehow a form of “political opinion,” regardless of the actual objectives of the guerrillas and their methods. If this is so, then that court could not logically object to the murder of federal judges by “guerrillas” who are only acting out their “political opinion,” whether it be a form of Marxism or “Aryan supremacy” * * * [I]f * * * “being” a guerrilla is the acting out of a political opinions that policemen should be killed * * * then so is the view that Jews should be killed because they are believed to control the world, or that federal judges should be murdered because they are considered an instrument of repression of Caucasian Christians. * * * “Being” a guerrilla is not a form of political opinion. “Being” a guerilla means being engaged in acts of violence and illegality. I know of no legal principle or form of logic that states that “being” engaged in such acts automatically transforms the “political opinions” that drive those acts into a form of political opinions protected by United States law. * * * One faces the remarkable possibility under [the Ninth Circuit doctrine] that the more egregious the act and the greater the outrage, the higher the probability of being granted asylum, on the ground that claimed police mistreatment will be on “account of political opinion,” not human failings, vengeance, or anger provoked by the extremist’s acts.⁷⁴

This section would overturn this precedent of the Ninth Circuit. It would reassert that the burden of proof in an asylum case is on the applicant and that the testimony of the applicant may be sufficient to sustain such burden without corroboration, but only if it is credible, is persuasive, and refers to specific facts that demonstrate that the applicant is a refugee. Where it is reasonable that an applicant would present corroborating evidence, such evidence must be provided unless a reasonable explanation is given as to why such information is not provided. No court shall reverse a determination made by an immigration judge or BIA with respect to the availability of corroborating evidence unless the court finds that a reasonable adjudicator is compelled to conclude that such corroborating evidence is unavailable.

This section also provides a non-exhaustive list of factors that an immigration judge can consider in assessing credibility, such as the demeanor, candor, or responsiveness of the applicant or witness, the consistency between the applicant's or witness's written and oral statements, whether or not under oath, made at any time to any officer, agent, or employee of the United States, the internal consistency of each such statement, the consistency of such statements with the country conditions in the country from which the applicant claims asylum, as presented by the Department of State, and any inaccuracies or falsehoods in such statements. Finally, aliens who allege they will be persecuted because of terrorist ties will not longer be presumed to fear persecution on account of political opinion. Rather, the section requires such that such applicant establish that race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion was or will be the central motive for their claimed persecution.

The INA allows the State Department to revoke visas after they have been issued.⁷⁵ Revocation is problematic, however, when the alien has entered the U.S. by the time the visa has been revoked because there is no provision that allows DHS to remove an alien whose visa has been revoked. If DHS has information that establishes that the alien is otherwise removable (such as for a crime, or illness), it will place the alien in removal proceedings on those grounds. However, DHS bears the burden of proof in deportation proceedings, and if the agency cannot prove that the alien is deportable, it must allow the alien to remain until the alien's period of authorized admission ends.

This policy is a particular problem in terrorism cases because information linking an alien to terrorism is often classified, and classified information cannot be used to prove deportability. In October 2002, GAO reported that the State Department had revoked 105 visas that had been erroneously issued to aliens about whom there were questions about possible terror ties before their background checks had been completed. The GAO found that immigration agents did not attempt to track down those aliens whose visas had been revoked because of the difficulty in removing those aliens from the United States.⁷⁶ The bill would respond to this problem by allowing the government to deport a nonimmigrant alien whose visa has been revoked. The section will prevent an alien whose visa has been revoked to challenge the underlying revocation in court, where the government might again be placed in a position of either exposing its sources or permitting a potentially dangerous alien to remain in the U.S.

⁷⁵ See INA § 221(i).

The bill also addresses a similar loophole that would prevent DHS from revoking a nonimmigrant visa petition that has been granted for an alien in the U.S., even before that alien has received the visa. Currently, DHS cannot revoke a petition even if it appears that the alien may not be eligible for the visa, even if the petition was fraudulent and submitted by an alien terrorist. The bill would delete archaic language that was added to the INA decades ago, when travel to the U.S. was long and laborious, and when adjustment of status, a legal fiction by which aliens in the U.S. are treated as if they had reentered in a new legal status, was rare.

Section 3009. Streamlined Removal Process

The staff of the 9/11mission wrote that:

In many cases, the act of filing for an immigration benefit sufficed to permit the alien to remain in the country until the petition was adjudicated. Terrorists were free to conduct surveillance, coordinate operations, obtain and receive funding, go to school and learn English, make contacts in the U.S., acquire necessary materials, and execute an attack [and that] immigration cases against suspected terrorists were often mired for years in bureaucratic struggles over alien rights and the adequacy of evidence.⁷⁷

In 1996, Congress attempted to streamline the judicial review of immigration orders entered against aliens who have committed serious crimes in the U.S. IIRIRA sought to eliminate judicial review of immigration orders for most criminals, recognizing that criminal aliens had received a full measure of due process in their criminal cases and immigration proceedings, and that additional review typically only delayed their inevitable removal as criminals were statutorily barred from most forms of immigration relief.⁷⁸ IIRIRA also limited the judicial review of discretionary relief issues for all aliens, on the basis that the law committed such matters to the judgment of the Attorney General.

Because the 1996 reforms lacked express language precluding district court review, however, the Supreme Court has read the provision to give aliens judicial review possibilities other than, or in addition to, the review⁷⁹ specified in the immigration laws. As Justice Scalia stated in dissent:

The Court has therefore succeeded in perverting a statutory scheme designed to expedite the removal of criminal aliens into one that now affords them more opportunities for (and layers of) judicial review (and hence more opportunities for delay) than are afforded non-criminal aliens—and more than were afforded criminal aliens prior to the enactment of IIRIRA. This outcome speaks for itself; no Congress ever imagined it.⁸⁰

The result of this judicial activism has been a dramatic increase in the volume of immigration cases filed in the federal courts and continued delay and inefficiency in securing final judgment in immigration matters.

Consistent with the settled principle that petitions for review should be the “sole and exclusive” means of judicial review for aliens challenging their removal, the bill streamlines immigration review while protecting an alien’s right to review by an independent judiciary. For criminal aliens and aliens who are not permanent residents, review would be only in the circuit court and the scope of review would be limited to: (1) whether the individual is an alien; (2) whether he is deportable under the INA; (3) whether he was ordered removed under the INA; and (4) whether he meets the criteria for withholding of removal or Torture Convention protection. For non-criminal lawful permanent resident aliens, review would be only in the circuit court and would be available for all non-discretionary determinations. This assures that every alien may obtain review of his or her final order of removal in the courts of appeals. Under this provision, criminal aliens would have the opportunity for circuit court review of constitutional claims and pure questions of law. These provisions are fully consistent with both the Supreme Court’s decision in St. Cyr and settled jurisprudence regarding the availability of habeas corpus. These reforms will ensure that aliens will have a day in court, but that criminals will not be able to delay their lawful removal from the United States.

Sections 3031–32. No Bar to Removal for Terrorists and Criminal Aliens

Legislation implementing the Convention Against Torture was enacted in 1998.⁸¹ The Convention ensures that human rights violators and others engaged in torture are brought to justice and details the process for extradition, detention, criminal prosecution, and victim compensation. The Convention also prohibits the return of an alien to a country where there are substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be in danger of being tortured. When the Senate passed the implementing legislation, it stated that “to the maximum extent consistent with the obligations of the United States under the Convention * * * the [INS] regulations * * * shall exclude from the protection of such regulations aliens described in section 241(b)(3)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.” What kinds of aliens are so described? Aliens who have engaged in Nazi persecution or genocide, aliens who have engaged in terrorist activity, aliens who have been convicted of particularly serious crimes and are thus a danger to the community of the U.S., aliens who committed serious crimes outside the U.S., and aliens who there are reasonable grounds to believe are a danger to the security of the U.S. This makes perfect sense. After all, the same aliens are barred under the INA from receiving asylum.⁸² The Justice Department, however, clearly disobeyed Congress’s instructions in writing the regulations creating relief from deportation under the Convention.⁸³ The regulations did not exclude such dangerous individuals from relief from deportation.

The Immigration Subcommittee conducted a hearing in July 2003 on the effect of the INS regulations.⁸⁴ From March 1999 through August 2002, immigration judges granted hundreds of criminal aliens relief from deportation under the Convention.⁸⁵ This included two murderers that we know of, one who killed a spectator at a Gambian soccer game and one who was implicated in a mob-related quintuple homicide in Uzbekistan.

The danger posed by the requirement that these aliens be allowed to remain in the U.S. was increased exponentially by the 2001 Supreme Court decision of Zadvydas v. Davis,⁸⁶ in which the Court made clear that it would strike down as unconstitutional the indefinite detention by DHS of aliens with removal orders whose countries will not take them back, except in the most narrow of circumstances.⁸⁷ Based on this decision, DOJ decided that it had no choice but to release back onto the streets those criminal aliens who had received protection under the Convention. By the time of the hearing in July of 2003, approximately 500 criminal aliens who had received relief under the Convention had been released into American communities⁸⁸—including the murderer from Uzbekistan. The Gambian murderer might also have been released, but he decided to return home to Gambia voluntarily.

The Committee discovered at the hearing that even a Nazi war criminal had sought to avoid deportation through the Convention.⁸⁹ Terrorists have received relief from removal under the Convention Against Torture, including an alien involved in the assassination of Anwar Sadat.⁹⁰ Days ago, a suspected al Qaeda operative made claim under the Convention to forestall deportation.⁹¹ Osama Bin Laden himself could probably frustrate deportation by making a Convention claim—since the more heinous a person's actions, the more likely that he might be subject to torture in his home country.

The bill would make the Convention regulations adhere to the intent of Congress. Aliens who have engaged in Nazi persecution or genocide, terrorist aliens, aliens who have been convicted of particularly serious crimes and are thus a danger to the community of the U.S., aliens who committed serious crimes outside the U.S., and aliens for whom there are reasonable grounds to believe are a danger to the security of the U.S. would not be allowed to frustrate their deportations and be released onto the streets of our communities.

Section 3033. Removal of Aliens

At the present time, an arriving alien turned back at the border is removed to the country from which he came to the U.S., or to his country of citizenship or nationality.⁹² Aliens deported after admission are allowed to designate a country of removal, but the Attorney General can disregard the designation if that country refuses to accept the alien or if removal would be prejudicial to the U.S.

The current removal provisions have been used by certain aliens to block DHS from removing them to countries that have no governments to formally accept them. In particular, DHS is prevented by court order from sending aliens back to Somalia.⁹³ Under the court's ruling, DHS may not remove any criminal alien back to Somalia, regardless of the severity of the offense or the danger that the alien poses. More importantly, however, DHS cannot remove any terrorist aliens to that country. In December 2001, Secretary of State Colin Powell stated that "some bin Laden followers are holed up [in Somalia], taking advantage of the absence of a functioning government," and Joint Chiefs Chairman Richard Myers also stated that month that the U.S. has "strong indications Somalia is linked to Osama Bin Laden."⁹⁴ A further indication of the terror threat posed by Somalia is that Al-Ittihad, which President Bush named in his September 23, 2001, executive order blocking property of, and prohibiting transactions with, terrorist groups, operates in the country.⁹⁵ Moreover, a rule that aliens cannot be returned to countries that have no government to accept them will encourage illegal immigration from those countries, and will encourage other aliens to fraudulently say that they are nationals of one of those countries, to avoid removal.

The section would move the authority for designating a country of removal to the Secretary of DHS, and give the Secretary more power to remove an alien to a specific country. It would also allow the Secretary to remove an alien to a country of which the alien is a citizen or national unless the country prevents the alien from entering. This would give the Secretary the flexibility not to return an alien to a place where the alien would be free to engage in terrorist activities.

Section 3041. Bringing in and Harboring Certain Aliens

The Commission staff reported "[t]here is also evidence that terrorists used human smugglers to sneak across borders."⁹⁶ The bill would increase criminal penalties for alien smuggling and require the Secretary of DHS to develop and implement an outreach program to educate the public in the U.S. and abroad about the penalties for illegally bringing in and harboring aliens.

Section 3081. Studies on Worldwide Machine-Readable Passports and Worldwide Travel History Database

The Commission recommended that “[t]he Department of Homeland Security, properly supported by the Congress, should complete, as quickly as possible a biometric entry-exit screening system, including a single system for speeding qualified travelers.”⁹⁷

This section requires the Department of State’s Office of Visa and Passport Control and the GAO each to conduct a study on the feasibility, cost, and benefits of: (1) requiring all passports to be machine-readable, tamper-resistant and with biometric identifiers; and (2) the creation of a database containing a record of all entry and exit information so that border and consular officials may ascertain the travel history of the visitor or a prospective entrant. This requirement would allow consular officers and immigration inspectors to ascertain the travel history of any U.S. citizen or foreign visitor seeking to enter the U.S., even if that entrant has a new passport.

Section 3082. Expanded Pre-inspection at Foreign Airports

In addition to recommending that DHS complete a biometric entry-exit screening system, the Commission stated that:

The U.S. government cannot meet its own obligations to the American people to prevent the entry of terrorists without a major effort to collaborate with other governments. We should do more to exchange terrorist information with trusted allies, and raise U.S. and global border security standards for travel and border crossing over the medium and long term through extensive international cooperation.⁹⁸

Currently, DHS inspects passengers who are traveling to the U.S. at 14 foreign airports instead of inspecting them at ports of entry in the U.S. The bill would expand this program to include up to an additional 25 airports. In addition, the current selection criteria for pre-inspection locations are based on reducing the number of aliens who arrive to the U.S. who are inadmissible. Section 3082 states that the selection criteria should also include the objective of preventing the entry of potential terrorists. The additional locations should be operational by January 1, 2008.

Section 3083. Immigration Security Initiative

The Immigration Security Initiative is a DHS operated program that assists airline personnel at foreign airports in identifying fraudulent travel documents. The program’s objective is to identify passengers, including potential terrorists, who seek to enter the U.S. using fraudulent documents, prior to these passengers being allowed to board flights for the U.S. Currently, the program is in place in only two foreign airports. This section expands the program to at least 50 foreign airports by December 31, 2006.

Section 3084. Responsibilities and Functions of Consular Officers

This section improves the operation of U.S. consular offices in preventing the entry of terrorists. First, it increases the number of consular officers by 150 per year for fiscal years 2006 through 2009. Second, it places limitations on the use of foreign nationals to screen nonimmigrant visa applicants by stating that all applications shall be reviewed and adjudicated by a U.S. consular officer. Third, it requires that the training program for consular officers include training in detecting fraudulent documents and working directly with DHS immigration inspectors at ports of entry. This requirement is needed because consular officers currently do not train directly with immigration inspectors to learn all of the elements of our screening system as part of their training regimen. Lastly, this section requires the Secretary of State to place anti-fraud specialists in the one hundred posts that have the greatest frequency of presentation of fraudulent documents.

Section 3085. Increase in Penalties for Fraud and Related Activity

This section amends 18 U.S.C. § 1028 to increase penalties for the possession and transfer of fraudulent government identification documents, including fraudulent U.S., state, and foreign government documents. The Commission recommended: “The Department of Homeland Security, properly supported by the Congress, should complete, as quickly as possible a biometric entry-exit screening system, including a single system for speeding qualified travelers.” Commission Report at 389. “The U.S. government cannot meet its own obligations to the American people to prevent the entry of terrorists without a major effort to collaborate with other governments. We should do more to exchange terrorist information with trusted allies, and raise U.S. and global border security standards for travel and border crossing over the medium and long term through extensive international cooperation” Id. at 390.

Section 3086. Criminal Penalty for False Claim to Citizenship

This section would make it a violation of law to make a false claim of citizenship in order to enter or remain in the United States. This also follows the Commission’s recommendation regarding a biometric entry-exit screening system.

Section 3090. Biometric Entry and Exit Data System

As noted above, the Commission recommended a biometric entry-exit screening system.”⁹⁹ This section calls on the Secretary of DHS to develop a plan to accelerate the full implementation of the requirement of an automated entry and exit data system at U.S. ports of entry. The section also calls for the Secretary of DHS to implement a plan to expedite the processing of registered travelers at ports of entry.

Sections 5001–5010. Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders

This section implements the Commission’s recommendations regarding first responder funding. Specifically, §§ 5001–10 fully incorporate H.R. 3266, the “Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders Act,” which follows the Commission’s recommendations concerning the delivery of Federal homeland security assistance to state and local governments. The Commission recommended that: “Homeland Security assistance should be based strictly on an assessment of risks and vulnerabilities.”

This section recognizes the need to address our greatest risks and vulnerabilities first, and then work down from there. This section does so in several important respects. First, it requires DHS to allocate homeland security assistance funds to states or regions based upon the degree to which such an allocation would lessen the threat to, vulnerability of, and consequences for persons and critical infrastructure. Second, it reduces the current state minimum and restructures the allocation process. Under the current system, none of the funds available under the State Homeland Security Grant Program are allocated on the basis of risk. Instead, each state first receives a base amount equal to 0.75 percent of the total, and then an additional amount based solely on population. Under this section, in contrast, DHS must first allocate all funds based on risk, and then provide, if necessary, additional funds to those States, territories, or certain Indian tribes that have not met a significantly reduced minimum threshold of funding. Under this scheme, 99% of the money will be allocated strictly on the basis of risk.

In 2001, the Committee on the Judiciary, through the enactment of the U.S.A. PATRIOT Act, authorized the Office for Domestic Preparedness in DOJ to provide State grants that enhance the capability of State and local jurisdictions to prepare for and respond to terrorist acts. The Committee on the Judiciary changed the name of this office to the Office of Domestic Preparedness in Public Law 107–273, the “21st Century Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act,” and further authorized the ODP. The ODP was transferred from the Department of Justice to the Department of Homeland Security in H.R. 5005, the “Homeland Security Act,” which became Public Law 107–296 on November 25, 2002.

Section 5051–5054. Federal Bureau of Investigation Revitalization

The Commission found that the FBI has made significant progress in improving its intelligence capabilities but recognized that the FBI Director himself recognizes that there is much to do. The Commission made a specific recommendation that embodies the vision of FBI Director Mueller regarding the needs to broaden recruitment efforts, retain experience, and to facilitate a trend towards specialization rather than the Bureau’s historical model of generalization. “A specialized and integrated national security workforce should be established at the FBI consisting of agents, analysts, linguists, and surveillance specialists who are recruited, trained, rewarded, and retained to ensure the development of a culture imbued with a deep expertise in intelligence and national security” 9/11 Commission Report at 425–426. This section implements by giving the Director a variety of tools to retain employees with special skills.

Section 5091. Requirement that Agency Rulemaking Take Into Consideration Impacts on Individual Privacy

This section requires the President to consider the privacy impact of federal regulations. It reflects the following Commission recommendation: “As the President determines the guidelines for information sharing among government agencies and by those agencies with the private sector, he should safeguard the privacy of individuals about whom information is shared.” Commission Report at 394. Section 5091 requires a federal agency to prepare a privacy impact analysis for proposed and final rules and to include this analysis in the notice for public comment issued in conjunction with the publication of such rules. This requirement is similar to other analyses that agencies currently conduct, such as those required by the Regulatory Flexibility Act and the E-Government Act of 2002. While § 5091 makes no substantive demands on federal agencies with respect to privacy, it is intended to ensure that federal agencies safeguard personally identifiable information by requiring these agencies to consider the privacy implications presented by the collection, use, dissemination, and protection of such information. Section 5091 consists of the text of H.R. 338, the “Federal Agency Protection of Privacy Act,” a noncontroversial, bipartisan bill that passed by voice vote in the last Congress.

Section 5092. Chief Privacy Officers for Agencies with Law Enforcement or Anti-terrorism Functions

Section 5092 directs the head of each Federal agency with law enforcement or anti-terrorism functions to appoint a chief privacy officer with primary responsibility within that agency for privacy policy. The provision requires the chief privacy officer to ensure that personally identifiable information is protected and to file annual reports with Congress on the agency’s activities that affect privacy, including complaints of privacy violations. Section 5092 is largely premised on legislation establishing the first statutorily mandated privacy officer, which was included in the Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107–296, § 222, 116 Stat. 2135, 2155 (2002), and pending bipartisan legislation reauthorizing DOJ, H.R. 3036, 108th Cong. § 305 (2004). Section 5092 reflects the Commission’s recommendation on privacy noted above.

Sections 5101–5105, Mutual Aid and Litigation Management Authorization Act of 2004

The Commission Report included the recommendation that “Congress should pass legislation to remedy the long-standing indemnification and liability impediments to the provision of public safety mutual aid * * * where applicable throughout the nation” Commission Report at 397. Sections 5101–5105 reflect this recommendation.

These mutual aid provisions allow states, if they so choose, to enter into mutual aid agreements to provide mutual aid in response to emergencies. They allow party states’ first responders to carry with them into other states the liability regime of their home states. The mutual aid provisions also provide that the workers' compensation and death benefits of first responders who answer calls in other party states, and the home state rules that govern them, also follow them into other states. These sections also provide that whenever any person holds a certificate issued by a responding party that evidences the meeting of professional standards, such person shall be deemed so certified by the requesting party to provide assistance under the mutual agreement. The litigation management provisions allows states to enter into "litigation management agreements" in which they could agree that, in the event first responders from several states respond to a terrorist attack in another state, they could exercise certain options and agree on the liability regime that would apply in that circumstance to claims brought against first responders and arising out of terrorist attacks, including putting any such claims in federal court, a ban on punitive damages, and a collateral source offset rule.

The Commission recommendations include the recommendation to "minimize as much as possible the disruption of national security policymaking during the change of administrations by accelerating the process for national security appointments" Commission Report at 422. This section responds to this recommendation in three ways. First, §5041 would reduce the number of national security positions that are subject to Senate confirmation. National Security Positions are defined as positions "concerned with the protection of the Nation from foreign aggression, terrorism, or espionage * * * that require regular use of, or access to, classified information." This will include some positions at DOJ and the FBI.

Those National Security Positions that are classified at Executive Levels IV and V (5 USC 5315 or 5316) would be appointed by the President directly, without Senate confirmation. This would include, among others, the assistant attorneys general at DOJ. Those National Security Positions that are classified at Executive Levels II and III (5 USC 5313 or 5314) are still appointed by the President and subject to Senate confirmation. However, if the Senate does not vote on confirmation within 30 days after the president submits the nomination, the appointment shall be made by the president alone. Positions covered by this provision include, among others, the deputy attorney general, the solicitor general, and the director of the FBI. In addition to these national security appointments, agencies are required under §5044 to submit a plan for reducing the number of presidential appointments that require Senate confirmation.

Second, §5042 extends the length of time that a newly inaugurated President can appoint an acting officer to fulfill the duties of a job performed by someone whose confirmation is required by the Senate. It also removes certain qualifications in current law relating to those acting officers, provided that the office they are filling is one of 20 "specified national security positions."

Finally, §5043 streamlines the financial reporting process for intelligence personnel. It substantially reduces the amount of detail that appointees must provide regarding their sources of income, assets and liability. For example, this section reduces the number of income reporting categories from eleven to five. It also streamlines income reporting for spouses and dependants. It is believed that these reductions still provide the level of detail necessary for the Office of Government Ethics to determine whether conflicts of interest exist.

AMENDMENTS ADOPTED IN COMMITTEE

The Committee adopted several amendments to H.R. 10 that are included within its overall amendment in the nature of a substitute.

A manager's amendment offered by Chairman Sensenbrenner and adopted by voice vote makes various technical and other changes to the legislation. As introduced, H.R. 10 provided the CIA with overall direction for the collection of national intelligence through human sources. The amendment preserves and reiterates the congressional prohibition on domestic human intelligence activities undertaken by the CIA. CIA direction and coordination of FBI human intelligence within the U.S. is inconsistent with the long-standing 1947 National Security Act ban on CIA law enforcement powers and internal security functions. The amendment also requires the Secretary of DHS to consult with the Attorney General regarding various new security procedures for airports and aviation contained in the bill and requires that reports on the use of these procedures be provided to the Judiciary Committee.

The Sensenbrenner amendment further requires the Assistant Secretary for ICE and the Director of Federal Air Marshal Service of DHS, in coordination with the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security, ensure that Transportation Security Administration screeners and Federal Air Marshals receive training in identifying fraudulent identification documents, including fraudulent or expired visas and passports, and allows such training to be made available to other federal law enforcement agencies and local law enforcement agencies located in border states. The Committee reported by voice vote a second degree amendment to the Sensenbrenner amendment offered by Mr. Scott to strike sense of Congress language relating to the Transportation Security Administration examining passenger records for violent criminals and outstanding warrants.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Schiff that seeks to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction by expanding, improving and increasing funding for current non-proliferation programs including the Proliferation Security Initiative, programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other non proliferation programs. The President is directed to submit to Congress no later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act a non-proliferation strategy.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Nadler to require the Secretary of DHS, in consultation with the Attorney General and appropriate federal, state, and local government agencies, as well as security experts and other interested persons, to issue regulations concerning the shipment of extremely hazardous materials not later than 180 days after the enactment of the legislation.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment by Mr. Schiff that provides that whoever develops, possesses, or attempts or conspires to develop or possess radiological weapons be imprisoned for any term or for life. The amendment specifies that if persons or property of the U.S. or a national of the U.S. are threatened with these weapons in the U.S. or abroad they are also subject to a prison term for any term of years or for life; if death is a result of this violation, then the punishment may be death.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Delahunt that requires the head of each department or agency of the federal government that is engaged in any activity to use or develop data mining technology to submit a public report to Congress on all such activities of the department or agency under the jurisdiction of that official. This amendment establishes criteria for the content of the report and requires that it be submitted within 90 days after enactment of this legislation and requires that it be updated each year.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment by Mr. Schiff that provides that the U.S. work with the international community to develop an international legal regime to enable the interdiction of nuclear material and technology.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment by Mr. Weiner that reauthorizes the COPS program as a single grant program with several purposes including to hire officers to perform intelligence, antiterrorism, or homeland security duties exclusively. This language is similar to language that the Committee adopted and the House passed as part of H.R. 3036, the DOJ reauthorization bill.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Ms. Lofgren to establish an Integrated Biometric Entry-Exit Screening System with respect to the biometric entry/exit data system. It ensures that this biometric database is accessible to all persons processing immigration benefits, including visa applications with the Department of State, immigration-related filings with the Department of Labor, cases pending before the Executive Office for Immigration Review, and matters pending or under investigation before DHS.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Schiff expressing the sense of Congress that removing potential nuclear weapons materials from vulnerable sites around the world reduces the risk of terrorist attack and delineating several actions to reduce the threat of terrorist acquisition of nuclear materials. The amendment further requires, no later than 30 days after the submission of the President's FY 2006 budget, a report to Congress that lists where highly-enriched uranium or separated plutonium is located worldwide, a strategic plan to reduce the threat of this material falling into terrorist hands, an estimate of the funds required to secure these materials, and recommendations concerning the need for further legislation or international agreements to secure these nuclear sites.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Nadler to authorize the Secretary of DHS to provide $100 million in security assistance to 501(c)(3) organizations that demonstrate they are at high risk of a terrorist attack based upon: Specific threats of international terrorist organizations; prior attacks against similarly situated organizations by international terrorists; the vulnerability of the specific site; the symbolic value of the site as a highly recognized American institution; or the role of the institution in responding to terrorist attacks. After the funds have been expended for the highest risk institutions, federal loan guarantees would be available to make loans available on favorable terms. Funds would be administered by a new office in the Department dedicated to working with high-risk non-profits.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Weiner that would permit an applicant to use first responder grants to pay for personnel engaged in counterterrorism and intelligence activities, regardless of the date such persons were hired. This allows reimbursement for personnel costs to be retroactive. The Committee also adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Weiner to provide reimbursement for overtime and other fixed costs incurred for homeland security purposes after September 11, 2001.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Ms. Blackburn that establishes a pilot study to examine specific topics to be addressed in a report from the Attorney General, to identify current procedures already in place, and to make recommendations for consolidation and standardization of employee criminal background checks. The amendment requires the study to consider the utilization of commercial databases, state databases, any feasibility studies, and privacy rights and other employee protections. The amendment also adds to the bill the text of S.1743, the "Private Security Officer Employment Authorization Act" which passed the Senate by unanimous consent at the end of 2003.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment by Mr. Berman that adds a new section to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978. It allows the court to assume that a non-U.S. person who is engaged in terrorism is an agent of a foreign power under the Act.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Schiff that amends the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act by adding crimes having to do with weapons of mass destruction to the list of specified unlawful activities that serve as predicates for the money laundering statute.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment by Ms. Jackson Lee to increase criminal penalties for alien smuggling, provide visas to smuggled aliens who cooperate with law enforcement officials, provide rewards to such aliens, and require the Secretary of DHS to develop an outreach program to educate the public about the penalties for alien smuggling. The Committee adopted by voice vote a second degree amendment offered by Mr. Hostettler to limit the provisions to the increase in criminal penalties and the establishment of the outreach program.

An amendment offered by Chairman Sensenbrenner to establish a Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board to provide advice and counsel on policy development and implementation as it pertains to privacy and civil liberties implications of executive branch actions, proposed legislation, regulations, and policies related to efforts to protect the nation from terrorism passed the Committee by a recorded vote of 19-15. The Chairman's amendment was a complete substitute for an amendment offered by Mr. Watt that would have provided for a similar Board with broad administrative subpoena power and provided nearly unlimited authority to analyze all aspects of the nation's war on terrorism.

The Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Weiner that eliminates defenses in the current fake badge law.

COMMITTEE OVERSIGHT FINDINGS

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee reports that the findings and recommendations of the Committee, based on oversight activities under clause 2(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, are incorporated in the descriptive portions of this report.

NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND TAX EXPENDITURES

Clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives is inapplicable because this legislation does not provide new budgetary authority or increased tax expenditures.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE OF COST ESTIMATE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(3) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee sets forth, with respect to the bill, H.R. 10, the following estimate and comparison prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974:

OCTOBER 5, 2004.

Hon. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr.,
Chairman Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washinton, DC

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 10, the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Mark Grabowicz.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS HOLTZ-EAKIN,
Director.

Enclosure.

H.R. 10—9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act

Summary. H.R. 10 would affect the intelligence community, terrorism prevention and prosecution, and border security, as well as international cooperation and coordination. Title I would establish an Office of the National Intelligence Director (NID) to manage and oversee intelligence activities of the U.S. government, including foreign intelligence and counterintelligence activities. The legislation would transfer some existing intelligence organizations to that office and would establish a National Counterterrorism Center and one or more national intelligence centers within the Office of the NID. Title II would authorize funding for law enforcement, counterterrorism activities, and programs related to aviation safety. Title III would increase the number of agents performing border security and immigration functions, improve the security of identity documents such as driver's licenses, and increase the number of consular officers within the Department of State. Title IV would authorize funds for a number of international cooperation programs. Finally, title V would reauthorize and restructure several homeland security programs.

CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 10 would cost about $800 million in 2005 and $17.5 billion over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the specified and estimated amounts. That total does not include possible additional costs associated with implementing provisions dealing with the creation of an interoperable data system for exchanging law enforcement and intelligence data or the establishment of a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) reserve service because CBO does not have sufficient information to estimate those costs at this time. With regard to the FBI reserve service, CBO cannot predict when a national emergency would occur, but expects that costs for the proposed reserve service would likely be insignificant in most years.

The bill also contains provisions that would decrease direct spending. In particular, it would establish a fund within the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to enhance efforts to detect explosives at security checkpoints in airports; authorize the collection and spending of $30 million a year of fees from airline passengers in 2005 and 2006 for that purpose; allow the Director of the FBI to waive the mandatory retirement requirement for agents until age 65; and extend indefinitely the authority of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to offer incentive payments to employees who voluntarily retire or resign. CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would decrease direct spending by about $25 million in 2005, $4 million over the 2005–2009 period, and $2 million over the 2005–2014 period. The estimate of direct spending does not include the effects of extending the authority of the CIA to offer incentive payments to employees who voluntarily retire or resign because the data needed to prepare such an estimate are classified. Enacting H.R. 10 would not affect receipts.

H.R. 10 contains several intergovernmental mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA). CBO estimates that those mandates, in aggregate, would impose costs on state, local, and tribal governments totaling more than $600 million over fiscal years 2005 through 2009. CBO estimates that the costs in at least one of those years would exceed the threshold established in UMRA ($60 million in 2004, adjusted annually for inflation). The bill would authorize appropriations for grants to states to cover such costs.

H.R. 10 would impose private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA on shippers of hazardous materials and licensees of nuclear facilities. Because the impact of two of the mandates would depend on future actions of the Department of Homeland Security and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) for which information currently is not available, CBO cannot determine whether the costs to the private sector would exceed the annual threshold for private-sector mandates ($120 million in 2004, adjusted annually for inflation).

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 10 is summarized in Table 1. The costs of this legislation fall within budget functions 050 (national defense), 400 (transportation), 450 (community and regional development), 550 (health), 750 (administration of justice), and 800 (general government).

Basis of Estimate: Most of H.R. 10's effects on the federal budget would be subject to appropriation of amounts necessary to implement the bill. For this estimate, CBO assumes that the bill will be enacted by the end of the calendar year, that all such amounts will be appropriated near the start of each fiscal year, and that outlays will follow historical patterns for similar activities.

Any such costs would be insignificant in most years, and CBO has no basis for predicting when a national emergency would occur.

Spending Subject to Appropriation

H.R. 10 contains provisions that would affect the intelligence community, terrorism prevention and prosecution, and border security, as well as international cooperation and coordination. Table 2 presents CBO's estimates of the cost of those provisions. In total, we estimate that implementing H.R. 10 would cost $17.5 billion over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the specified and estimated amounts. That total does not include the possible additional costs associated with implementing provisions dealing with the creation of an interoperable data system for exchanging law enforcement and intelligence data or the establishment of an FBI reserve service because CBO does not have sufficient information to estimate those costs at this time. With regard to the FBI reserve service, CBO cannot predict when a national emergency would occur, but expects that costs for the proposed reserve service would likely be insignificant in most years.

Note: FBI = Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Reform the Intelligence Community. Title I would reform the intelligence community by establishing the position of National Intelligence Director and an Office of the National Intelligence Director to manage and oversee intelligence activities of the U.S. government, including foreign intelligence and counterintelligence activities. The legislation also would transfer some existing organizations, specifically the Office of the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence for Community Management and the Terrorist Threat Integration Center (TTIC), to that office and would establish a National Counterterrorism Center and one or more national intelligence centers within the Office of the NID. The bill would expand language training within the intelligence community and authorize additional scholarships for new recruits. Finally, the legislation would establish a civilian linguist reserve corps.

CBO estimates that implementing title I and other provisions relating to the intelligence community would cost about $490 million over the 2005–2009 period (see Table 3). These costs are in addition to those that would be incurred under current law by the Office of the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence for Community Management and the Terrorist Threat Integration Center. The estimated costs include expenses to establish, house, and administer the new Office of the National Intelligence Director and implement other specified programs, such as improving training programs and establishing a scholarship program.

Create the Office of the National Intelligence Director. CBO estimates that establishing, housing, and administering the Office of the NID would cost about $390 million over the 2005–2009 period.

The bill would transfer the Office of the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence for Community Management (identified as the Intelligence Community Management Account within the budget) and the TTIC to the Office of the NID.

The Intelligence Community Management Account (ICMA) was established by Congressional direction to provide resources that directly support the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency and the intelligence community as a whole in coordinating cross-program activities. Because part of its budget is classified, CBO does not know the overall size of this organization. Unclassified budgets for the ICMA indicate that the office has a staff of about 300 people who develop the National Foreign Intelligence Program budget, oversee research and development activities, and develop intelligence plans and requirements, but the Congress also authorizes and appropriates funds for additional staff in the classified portion of the intelligence budget.

Similarly, CBO has no budget information on the TTIC, but public information released by the White House indicates that the center opened in May 2003 with a staff of about 60 people working alongside the counterterrorism offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the CIA. That same information indicates that the Administration expects to eventually staff the TTIC with between 200 and 300 people to serve as the hub for all intelligence regarding terrorist threats.

CBO expects that the NID would require staff to perform its authorized functions in addition to the staff transferred from the ICMA and the planned staff for the TTIC. Because much of the detailed information regarding the organization, staffing levels, and budgets of the intelligence community are classified at a level above clearances held by CBO employees, CBO has used information about staff requirements from similar organizations within the Department of Defense (DoD), the Department of Homeland Security, and other federal agencies to attempt to estimate the number of additional staff that might be needed by the NID. Based on that analysis, CBO estimates that the NID might need to hire around 300 new staff, including appointees such as principal and deputy directors, key managers such as a general counsel, a civil liberties protection officer, personnel to perform administrative functions such as policy development and budget and finance activities, and personnel for the National Counterterrorism Center and one or more national intelligence centers. CBO expects that many of these new hires would be staff transferred from other organizations within the intelligence community but that those other organizations would eventually fill many of the vacated positions within their organizations over about a four year period following enactment of this legislation.

Based on information about the staffing levels and costs for the administrative offices of the Department of Defense, the Department of Homeland Security, and other agencies, CBO estimates that the personnel and related expenses to provide centralized leadership, coordination, and support and analytical services for the Office of the National Intelligence Director would eventually cost around $45 million annually, but that costs would be much lower in the first few years as positions are filled. CBO estimates that such costs would be minimal in the first year and total about $130 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Section 1094 would express the sense of the Congress that the permanent location of the NID headquarters be at a location other than the George Bush Center for Intelligence in Langley, Virginia. For this estimate, CBO assumes that the Director's office and associated staff would occupy the space currently used by the Intelligence Community Management staff until fiscal year 2007. Starting in 2007, CBO assumes that the office would move to new office space in a building owned by the General Services Administration (GSA) until a new building can be built for its use. CBO estimates that initially GSA would need to renovate and furnish office space for the NID staff. (After 2009, CBO expects that these positions would be relocated to the new permanent NID headquarters.) CBO estimates that the GSA rental payments would reach about $20 million a year and total about $40 million over the 2007–2009 period. Additional costs to purchase computers, network equipment, and supplies in the first few years following the relocation into the GSA-owned building also would be significant. CBO estimates that those costs would total $30 million over the 2007–2009 period.

CBO assumes that GSA would construct a new building on land already owned by the federal government to serve as the headquarters for the Office of the NID. Based on information provided by GSA about recent federal office building projects, CBO estimates that planning and design of the new headquarters would cost $15 million over the 2005–2006 period, and that constructing the facility to house NID employees would cost about $175 million over the 2006–2009 period. (An additional $20 million in spending would occur in 2010 to complete construction of the new building.) CBO assumes that the headquarters would be located on property already owned by the federal government in the Washington, D.C. area. If GSA had to buy land for the building site, costs would be higher. CBO assumes that construction of the new facility would not start until sometime in late 2006 and would be completed after 2009. Therefore, CBO estimates that no costs associated with furnishing, equipping, and maintaining the new space would be incurred during the 2005–2009 period nor would there be costs to relocate NID staff from the interim offices to the new headquarters over that period.

Other Program Authorizations. Title I also would authorize the President and the NID to initiate or enhance several programs within the intelligence community. Based on information from the Administration and on the costs of other similar efforts, CBO estimates that those efforts would cost about $20 million in 2005 and total around $90 million over the 2005–2009 period, subject to appropriation of the specified and estimated amounts.

- Section 1052 would authorize the appropriation of an additional $2 million a year to carry out the grant program for the National Flagship Language Initiative, which was established to improve higher education in foreign languages that the Secretary of Defense has identified as critical to the interests of the national security of the United States. CBO estimates that implementing this section would cost $10 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the specified amounts.

- Section 1053 would establish a new scholarship program within the National Security Education Trust Fund. The scholarships would be available to students who are U.S. citizens and are native speakers of a foreign language that is identified as critical to the national security interests of the United States. The scholarships would enable those students to pursue English language studies at an institution of higher education in the United States to attain proficiency in those skills. The bill would authorize the appropriation of $4 million a year starting in 2005 for these scholarships. CBO estimates that the costs for the scholarship program would total about $20 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the specified amounts.

- Section 1055 would establish a program operated jointly by the NID and the Department of Defense to advance foreign language skills in languages that are critical to the capability of the intelligence community to carry out national security activities. Under this provision, personnel from the intelligence community could be reimbursed for the total cost of tuition and training in foreign language studies undertaken at educational institutions that have entered into educational partnerships with the U.S. government. In addition, federal agencies would be allowed to provide financial assistance to those educational institutions, including the loan of equipment and instructional materials. CBO has no specific information about how this joint NID/DoD program would be implemented. Assuming that participation levels would be similar to those for another foreign language program offered within the National Security Education Trust Fund, CBO estimates that the new program would cost about $1 million a year.

- Section 1056 would allow the NID to establish a civilian linguist reserve corps consisting of U.S. citizens with advanced levels of proficiency in foreign languages. CBO assumes that members of the reserve corps would receive pay, transportation, and per diem when performing work for the federal government as requested by the President. The pilot project would be conducted for a three-year period, starting in 2005. Based on information provided by the staff of the National Security Education Program, CBO expects that the reserve corps would consist of about 150 people at any given time and cost about $50 million over the 2005–2007 period.

- Section 1062 would establish an Emerging Technologies Panel within the National Security Agency to advise the NID on the research, development, and application of existing and emerging science and technology advances, advances in encryption, and other topics. Based on the budgets of other advisory panels, CBO estimates that the costs to operate this panel would be about $1 million in 2005 and would total $10 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Combating Financial Crimes. Sections 2101 and 2102 would authorize the appropriation of $51 million for fiscal year 2005 for the Financial Crimes Enforcement Center to improve its computer systems and to assist states and localities in combating financial crimes. CBO estimates that this provision would result in outlays of $36 million in 2005 and $15 million in 2006, assuming appropriation of the specified amount.

Aviation Security. Title II would authorize the appropriation of the funds necessary to continue aviation security programs in 2006 and to deploy explosive-detection equipment at airport check points. Based on information from DHS and current funding levels, CBO estimates that title II would authorize the appropriation of about $5.2 billion over the 2005–2007 period for aviation security programs administered by DHS. We estimate that most of that amount—roughly $4 billion—would be authorized to be appropriated in fiscal year 2006 for ongoing programs administered by the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) and for the federal air marshals. (That estimate is net of almost $2 billion in offsetting collections from passenger and air-carrier fees that we assume will continue to be collected by DHS in 2006 to partly offset the cost of aviation security programs in that year.) This estimate also includes almost $1 billion over the 2005–2007 period for installing explosive-detection equipment at airport screening checkpoints and $70 million in 2005 for programs to better control access to airports, improve passenger screening, and train federal law enforcement officials in certain counterterrorism measures. In addition, title II would specifically authorize the appropriation of $95 million in 2005 for security projects at airports and $2 million for a pilot program to test technology to reduce the threat of explosions of baggage and cargo on commercial flights. Assuming appropriation of the specified and estimated amounts, CBO estimates that implementing all of these provisions would cost $238 million in 2005 and $5.2 billion over the 2005–2009 period.

Improve the Intelligence Capabilities of the FBI. Section 2193 would direct the FBI to continue to improve the intelligence capabilities of the bureau and to develop and maintain a national intelligence workforce within the FBI. Today, the FBI spends about $30 million on counterterrorism training. Since 2002, more than 1,500 agents have been added to the bureau's staff to meet its counterterrorism mission, an increase of about 20 percent. In addition, since the events of September 11, 2001, the FBI has partnered with other intelligence agencies to provide training in counterterrorism and counterintelligence to its staff, and it plans to increase that training in the future. CBO assumes that implementation of this bill would require the agency to conduct more extensive training than is currently planned. Based on information from the bureau, we estimate that this additional training would cost $3 million in 2005 and almost $30 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts.

Interoperable Law Enforcement and Intelligence Data System. Under the Enhanced Border Security and Visa Entry Reform Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–173), the Administration is required to integrate all law enforcement data into an interoperable electronic data system known as the Chimera system. However, the act did not establish a firm date by which the Administration must deploy a fully operational Chimera system. Section 2192 would transfer the responsibility for this activity to the NID. The provision would direct the NID to design a state-of-the-art Chimera system with both biometric identification and linguistic capabilities satisfying the best technology standards, and to deliver a fully operational system by September 11, 2007, for use by the intelligence community, federal law enforcement agencies, and counterterrorism personnel to collect and share information. Although CBO believes that establishing a firm deadline for the operational system would likely result in increased discretionary spending in the near term, CBO does not have sufficient information to estimate that increase at this time. Absent information as to whether this transfer would result in changes to the system, CBO also cannot estimate whether any long-term costs would result from this transfer.

Security for Nuclear Facilities. Section 2194 of the bill would require the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) to study several types of threats to the nation's nuclear facilities, update the rules regarding the types of threats nuclear facilities should be able to deflect, and undertake force-on-force exercises regularly to maintain nuclear facilities' readiness to defend against attacks. Although the bill would authorize $3 million for such purposes, based on information from the NRC, CBO estimates that the provision would have a gross cost of $7 million in 2005 and $22 million over the 2005–2009 period. However, the NRC has the authority to offset a substantial portion of its annual appropriation with fees charged to the facilities it regulates. Accounting for such collections, CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would result in a net cost of $9 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Community-Oriented Policing Services (COPS). Section 2195 would authorize the appropriation of just over $1 billion for each of fiscal years 2005 through 2007 for the Community-Oriented Policing Services (COPS) program. Assuming appropriation of the specified amounts, CBO estimates this provision would cost about $2.5 billion over the 2005–2009 period.

Increase the Number of Border Patrol and Immigration Agents. Sections 3003 and 3004 would direct DHS to increase the number of border patrol agents by 2,000 per year and the number of investigators of immigration violations by 800 each year over the 2006–2010 period. Implementing this provision would increase the number of federal agents by 14,000 by 2010. Assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that this provision would cost $165 million in fiscal year 2006 and $3.1 billion over the 2006–2009 period.

Grants to Improve the Security of Driver's Licenses. Section 3055 would authorize the appropriation of such sums as necessary for fiscal years 2005 through 2009 for DHS to make grants to states to cover the costs of improving the security of driver's licenses as required by the bill. Based on information from states and from the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA), CBO estimates that implementing this provision would cost $80 million in 2005 and $160 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts.

New Standards for Issuance of Birth and Death Certificates. Sections 3062 and 3063 would require new federal standards governing the issuance and management of birth certificates recognized by the federal government. Section 3064 would require the establishment of a uniform electronic birth and death registration system, and section 3065 would extend that system to allow electronic verification of vital records.

Maintaining birth and death records has long been a function of state governments. The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), currently works with states to compile birth and death data for epidemiological studies. H.R. 10 would authorize the Secretary to expand that cooperation to the formal linking of birth and death records for purposes of preventing fraud and other government uses. The bill also would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary for these activities, including grants to states to comply with these new requirements.

Based on information from the CDC and the National Association for Public Health Statistics and Information Systems, CBO estimates that implementing the new security standards and building the electronic system of vital records would cost $460 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts. That cost would be for grants to states to meet the new federal requirements. Of these amounts, $70 million in 2005 and $330 million over the 2005–2009 period would cover start-up costs, including digitalizing old birth and death certificates, building electronic systems for reporting deaths in some states, upgrading security arrangements, and acquiring computer infrastructure. CBO estimates that operating the new system for vital records over the 2006–2009 period would cost $130 million. We expect that the system would be fully operational in 2009, at which point annual operating costs would total $50 million.

Expand Immigration Services at Foreign Airports. Sections 3082 and 3083 would authorize the appropriation of $49 million for 2005, $88 million for 2006, and $137 million for 2007 for DHS to expand preinspection services and immigration security at foreign airports. CBO estimates that implementing this provision would cost $274 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the specified amounts.

Increase the Number of Consular Officers. Section 3084 would authorize the Secretary of State to increase the number of consular officers by 150 each year over the number allotted in the previous year during the 2006–2009 period. It also would authorize the Secretary to provide additional training to consular officers in the detection of fraudulent documents presented by applicants for admission into the United States. Based on the average cost of training and stationing consular officers overseas, CBO estimates that implementing the provision would cost $27 million in 2006 and $280 million over the 2006–2009 period.

Reform International Cooperation and Coordination. Title IV would require the President to produce numerous reports, express the sense of the Congress on many issues, and urge the President to seek agreements with other countries to improve cooperation in the global fight against terrorist organizations. The title also would authorize some additional spending. Subtitle D, the Afghanistan Freedom Support Act Amendments of 2004, would authorize additional rule-of-law, disarmament, and counternarcotics activities in Afghanistan by the U.S. Department of State, but would not increase the overall authorization of appropriations above the $425 million authorized for each of fiscal years 2005 and 2006 in current law.

Title IV contains three indefinite authorizations of appropriations and other provisions that CBO estimates would cost $7 million in 2005 and $63 million over the 2005–2009 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts. In the cases where the same provision has been included in other bills at specified authorization levels, CBO used that authorization level for this estimate. CBO assumes that spending for these programs will follow the historical pattern of similar programs.

- Section 4041 would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary in 2005, 2006, and 2007 to provide grants to American-sponsored schools in predominately Muslim countries to provide scholarships to students from lower- and middle-income families of those countries. H.R. 4303, the American Education Promotion Act, as ordered reported by the House Committee on International Relations on June 24, 2004, would authorize the appropriation of $5 million each year for such grants. That amount is included in this estimate.

- Section 4042 would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary in 2005, 2006, and 2007 for grants by the National Endowment for Democracy to enhance free and independent media worldwide. H.R. 1950, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2004 and 2005, as reported by the House Committee on International Relations on May 16, 2003, would have authorized $15 million for such grants. CBO assumes the amount would be provided in three equal installments over the three-year period.

- Section 4103 would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary for programs to reduce the number of shoulder-fired missiles. For the purpose of the estimate, CBO assumed the appropriation of $5 million each year, an amount similar to the cost of other programs for reducing the availability of small arms.

- Section 4035 would establish within the Department of State an Office on Multilateral Negotiations. In our estimate for H.R. 4053, the United States International Leadership Act of 2004, as ordered reported by the House Committee on International Relations on March 31, 2004, CBO estimated that establishing and operating an Office on Multilateral Negotiations would cost $2 million a year.

- Sections 4011 and 4012 would require the Secretary of State to fill vacancies on the Arms Control and Nonproliferation Advisory Board and to provide resources to procure the services of experts and consultants. Based on the cost of other advisory boards, CBO estimates that implementing these sections would cost less than $200,000 a year.

First-Responder Grants. Subtitle A of title V would authorize funding for grants to state and local governments for staff and equipment to respond to acts of terrorism and natural disasters. It would authorize the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security to change the criteria used to distribute funding for four existing first-responder grant programs—the State Homeland Security, the Urban Area Security Initiative, the Law Enforcement Terrorism Prevention, and the Citizen Corps grant programs. Assuming appropriation of the necessary funds, CBO estimates that implementing this subtitle would cost $3.8 billion over the 2008–2009 period.

Almost $10 billion has been appropriated for first-responder grants since fiscal year 2003, including about $3 billion in fiscal year 2004. The Office of Domestic Preparedness (within DHS) derives its primary authority to distribute grants to states and localities to prepare and respond to terrorism from the USA Patriot Act (Public Law 107–56). That law authorized the appropriation of such sums as necessary for first-responder grants through fiscal year 2007. This subtitle would supersede this authority for first-responder grants in the Patriot Act and continue the authorization to appropriate such sums as necessary after 2007.

For this estimate, CBO assumes that the amount in CBO's baseline—$3.3 billion—would be appropriated for first-responder grants in 2008 and that 2009 funding levels for first-responder grants would continue at that level, adjusted for anticipated inflation.

Security for Nonprofit Organizations. Section 5022 would authorize the appropriation of $100 million for 2005 and such sums as are necessary in 2006 and 2007 for DHS to contract with appropriate companies to improve security at those 501(c)3 nonprofit organizations that are determined to be most vulnerable to potential terrorist attacks. In addition, the bill would establish a new loan guarantee program for all nonprofit organizations that might need additional security enhancements to protect them from terrorist attacks. CBO estimates that this program would cost about $40 million over the 2005–2009 period. H.R. 10 also would authorize the appropriation of $50 million for 2005 and such sums as are necessary for 2006 and 2007 for grants to local law enforcement agencies to offset costs associated with increased security in areas with a high concentration of nonprofit organizations. Finally, the bill would authorize the appropriation of $5 million in 2005 and such sums as necessary in 2006 and 2007 for a new Office of Community Relations and Civic Affairs to administer the new security program for nonprofit organizations among other duties. Assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $504 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Counternarcotics Office. Section 5021 would authorize the appropriation of $6 million in fiscal year 2005 to strengthen the authority of the Counternarcotics Officer at DHS. Under the bill, the Office of Counternarcotics Enforcement would be responsible for coordinating policies and federal operations aimed at preventing the entry of illegal drugs into the United States. DHS currently has a Counternarcotics Officer within the Chief of Staff's office. According to that office, the Counternarcotics Office is working with limited authority to coordinate the agency's anti-drug effort. Assuming the appropriation of the necessary amounts to continue this effort over the next five years, CBO estimates that implementing this provision would cost $28 million over the 2005–2009 period.

FBI Reserve Service. Section 5053 would allow the FBI to establish a reserve service consisting of former employees of the FBI who would be eligible for temporary reemployment during a period of national emergency. Under the bill, the total number of personnel in this reserve service could not exceed 500 individuals. Members of the reserve service would receive reimbursement for transportation and per diem expenses when participating in any training, and members who are retired federal employees would be allowed to collect both pay and retirement benefits during their period of reemployment. CBO cannot predict when a national emergency might occur, so no costs are included in this estimate for activating the proposed FBI Reserve Service. In most years, CBO expects that the cost associated with the reserve service would be insignificant—mostly covering limited training time, per diem, and transportation expenses. In an emergency, if all members of the reserve corps were reemployed for six months, the costs would total about $25 million.

Security Clearance Modernization. Beginning five years after enactment of this bill, section 5076 would require the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to achieve a 60-day turnaround period for all security clearances requested by federal agencies. Currently, OPM anticipates that by the fall of 2005 the typical turnaround period for security clearances will be approximately 120 days. Based on information from OPM, CBO expects that approximately 1,700 new investigators would have to be hired over the next three years to meet the 60-day standard. With an average annual cost of about $80,000 per investigator, and assuming the appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that this provision would cost $483 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Interoperability of Public Safety Communications. Section 5131 would establish a program within DHS to provide assistance and training to enhance the interoperability of public safety communication among federal, state, and local governments in high-risk jurisdictions. DHS currently conducts activities to enhance communications; however, according to that office, it is working with limited funds and legal authority. Based on information from DHS, CBO estimates that implementing this section would cost $29 million over the 2005–2009 period.

Direct Spending

The bill contains provisions that would decrease direct spending (see Table 4). CBO estimates that enacting those provisions would decrease direct spending by about $25 million in 2005, $4 million over the 2005–2009 period, and $2 million over the 2005–2014 period. The estimate of direct spending does not include spending associated with extending the authority of the CIA to offer incentive payments to employees who voluntarily retire or resign because the data needed to prepare such an estimate are classified.

Authority to Offer Incentive Payments to Employees of the CIA Who Voluntarily Resign or Retire. Section 1061 would extend indefinitely the authority of the CIA to offer incentive payments to employees who voluntarily retire or resign. Under current law, this authority would expire on September 30, 2005. This section also would eliminate the requirement that the CIA make a deposit to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund equal to 15 percent of final pay for each employee who accepts an incentive payment. Extending authority to offer incentive payments to these employees could increase outlays from the Civil Service Retirement System in the near term, although those amounts would be offset by reduced retirement payments in later years. CBO cannot provide an estimate of the direct spending effects because the data needed for such an estimate are classified.

Aviation Security. Section 2177 would establish a fund within DHS to enhance efforts to detect explosives at security checkpoints in airports. The bill would authorize the collection and spending of $30 million a year of fees from airline passengers in 2005 and 2006.

The cost of the new program would be offset by fee collections authorized under the bill. TSA already collects a $2.50 fee from airline passengers each time they board an aircraft (with a maximum of $5.00 per one-way trip). Under current law, such fees may be collected only to the extent provided for in advance in appropriations acts, and income from those fees is recorded as an offset to appropriated spending. H.R. 10 would require TSA to collect up to $30 million a year from passengers without appropriation action. Under H.R. 10, we estimate that the agency would collect that amount each year. Because H.R. 10 would cause such fees to be used to finance the activities related to explosives detection at airport checkpoints, such fees would not be available to reduce the costs of other TSA spending. In other words, the collections under H.R. 10 would lead to a reduction in the amount of fees recorded as offsets to appropriated spending—essentially changing some discretionary offsetting collections into mandatory offsetting receipts.

Based on historical spending patterns for similar activities, CBO estimates that fees collected under this provision would exceed the amounts actually spent for explosives detection for the next few years. Hence, we estimate that enacting section 2177 would reduce net direct spending by $37 million in 2005 and 2006, but would increase net direct spending in later years and have no net impact on the budget over the 2005–2014 period.

Increased Fines for New Federal Crimes. Several sections in title II would establish new federal crimes for offenses relating to the commission of terrorist acts. Because those prosecuted and convicted under the bill could be subject to fines, the federal government might collect additional fines if the legislation is enacted. Criminal fines are deposited as receipts in the Crime Victims Fund and later spent. CBO expects any additional revenues and direct spending under the bill would be negligible because of the small number of cases involved.

Authority to Waive Separation Age Requirement for FBI Agents. Section 5051 would provide the FBI with the ability to allow agents to remain at the agency beyond the age of 60. Under current law, FBI agents are required to retire at age 57, although the agency's director may waive that requirement until the agent turns 60. This section would allow the director to waive the mandatory retirement requirement until age 65. This authority would last through the end of 2009, at which time the waiver authority would revert to current law. Information provided by the FBI indicates that the agency issues waivers to between 25 and 75 employees annually. By expanding the current waiver authority, CBO expects the bill would cause some FBI employees to retire later than they otherwise would have. We anticipate this would cause retirement annuities to fall in the near term, and to increase after the expanded waiver authority expires in 2009. CBO estimates this section would reduce direct spending for retirement benefits by less than $500,000 in 2005 and by a total of $2 million over the 2005–2014 period.

Estimated impact on state, local, and tribal governments: H.R. 10 contains several intergovernmental mandates as defined in UMRA. The major mandates would require state, local, and tribal governments to significantly change the way they process and issue driver's licenses, identification cards, and birth and death certificates. The costs to state, local, and tribal governments would depend on federal regulations that are yet to be developed. However, based on information from state agencies, CBO estimates that, in aggregate, the intergovernmental mandates in the bill would impose costs on state, local, and tribal governments totaling more than $600 million over fiscal years 2005 through 2009. CBO estimates that the costs in at least one of those years would exceed the threshold established in UMRA ($60 million in 2004, adjusted annually for inflation). The bill would authorize appropriations for grants to states to cover such costs.

Intergovernmental Mandates with Significant Costs

Driver's Licenses. H.R. 10 would effectively require state agencies that issue driver's licenses to comply with new standards for producing, verifying, and ensuring the security of driver's licenses and identification cards. Those provisions would be effective three years after the bill's enactment. CBO considers these standards to be mandates because any driver's licenses issued after that time would be invalid for federal identification purposes unless they met those requirements.

Based on information from AAMVA and other groups representing state and local governments, CBO expects that states would face significant additional costs to administer the new system. Specifically, state licensing agencies would be required to verify, with the issuing agency, each document presented as proof of identification and residency. Agencies such as the Social Security Administration currently charge a fee for each verification, and assuming that other agencies would charge similar fees, states would incur ongoing costs as well as one-time costs to upgrade computer systems to meet those requirements. States also would face significant costs to upgrade computer systems to digitize and store electronic copies of all source documents and to create and maintain the Driver's License Agreement, an interstate database to share driver information. Finally, certain states that do not currently require background checks for certain employees would face additional costs to complete those checks.

CBO assumes that states would begin to establish procedures for complying with those standards in 2005, the year following the bill's enactment; we estimate that they would incur additional costs totaling $80 million during that first year and another $80 million over fiscal years 2006 through 2009.

Issuance and Verification of Vital Statistics Information. H.R. 10 would impose several intergovernmental mandates with significant costs on state, local, and tribal agencies that issue birth and death certificates. Those agencies would effectively be required to print birth certificates on safety paper to establish a central database of vital information and to ensure that certain employees have security clearances. Those provisions also would be effective three years after the bill's enactment. Certificates issued after that would be invalid for certain purposes unless they met those requirements. We estimate that state, local, and tribal governments would face additional costs to comply with those requirements totaling more than $70 million in 2005 and almost $400 million over fiscal years 2006 through 2009. Most of those costs would be for upgrading computer software and hardware and for staff time to convert existing paper records into electronic records. Those are mostly one-time costs that would be incurred over the five-year period.

Security Assistance to Certain Nonprofit Organizations. This bill also would require state agencies responsible for homeland security to coordinate a program to provide security assistance to certain nonprofit organizations. The bill would authorize to be appropriated $100 million in fiscal years 2005 through 2007 to fund those grants, but no funds would be authorized to cover the costs states would incur for administering the program. According to representatives from state government, the administrative costs for similar assistance programs tend to equal about 3 percent to 5 percent of the monetary value of the assistance provided. Based on that information, CBO estimates that the cost for state governments to coordinate this program would total no more than $5 million annually.

Mandates with No Significant Costs

The bill also contains several other intergovernmental mandates, but CBO expects that they would probably not impose significant additional costs on state, local, or tribal governments. Specifically, the bill would:

- Require state identification bureaus to coordinate background checks on current and potential security officers for private companies and the FBI. States that find the workload or the associated costs too burdensome could, through legislation, opt out of the program.
- Require certain nuclear facilities to take steps to protect against specific threats. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission would be required to promulgate regulations and until they are finalized, CBO cannot estimate the total costs of complying with those new requirements. Because few of the affected facilities are publicly owned, however, the total costs for those facilities would likely be small.
- Require state licensing agencies to include minimum features on all driver's license and identification cards, including full legal name, date of birth, gender, driver's license or identification number, photo, legal address, physical security features, and machine-readable technology. According to AAMVA, all states currently include those minimum features on licenses.
- Require state agencies to meet minimum standards before issuing driver's licenses, including documenting the individual's name, date of birth, address, and proof of Social Security number. While states currently set their own standards for such information, all states currently require at least this minimum documentation.
- Require states to maintain a database of driver information; require states to implement training classes for employees to identify fraudulent documents; and require documents and supplies to be securely stored. According to state officials, all states currently comply with those requirements.
- Require offices that maintain vital information to comply with requirements for securing their buildings. Based on information from representatives of state offices of vital statistics, CBO believes that most offices already would be in compliance, assuming that the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security would establish minimum security requirements in any event.

- Require that state and local governments limit access to birth and death certificates. Fourteen states currently allow public access to those records, but CBO estimates that they would incur no additional costs to limit access.

- Prohibit states from accepting any foreign document, other than an official passport, for identification purposes for the issuance of driver's licenses. Currently, at least 10 states accept identification cards issued by foreign governments, such as the "matricula consular" issued by Mexico. This prohibition would preempt state authority.

- Require states to resolve any discrepancies that arise from verifying Social Security numbers, though the language is unclear as to what specific actions would be required. Currently, at least two states prohibit their employees from enforcing immigration laws, and many of those discrepancies may be related to immigration. This requirement might preempt those state laws.

- Prohibit states from displaying Social Security numbers on driver's licenses or from including Social Security numbers (SSNs) in bar codes, magnetic strips, or similar devices. CBO has found few instances where states used SSNs as identifiers on licenses or coded SSNs in some other manner on the license.

- Require all law enforcement officers who are armed, including state and local personnel, to have a standardized credential when traveling on aircraft. CBO assumes TSA would establish and issue such credentials.

Estimated Impact on the Private Sector: H.R. 10 would impose private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA on shippers of hazardous materials and licensees of nuclear facilities. Because the impact of two of the mandates would depend on future actions of the Department of Homeland Security and the NRC for which information currently is not available, CBO cannot determine whether the costs to the private sector would exceed the annual threshold for private-sector mandates ($120 million in 2004, adjusted annually for inflation).

The bill would require the Secretary of Homeland Security to issue regulations to increase the security of the shipment of extremely hazardous materials as defined in the bill. The bill would also require the NRC to issue regulations to ensure that its licensees address security threats to be identified by the NRC. At this time, there is no basis for predicting the scope of those future regulations. Therefore, CBO cannot estimate the cost of those mandates.

In addition, the bill would prohibit shippers of extremely hazardous materials from discharging or discriminating against any employee who provides information or assists in an investigation regarding a violation of any law related to the security of shipments of extremely hazardous materials. Such a prohibition would constitute a private-sector mandate under UMRA. Under current law, employees are protected if they report any safety issues. Because compliance with these broader whistle-blower protections would involve only a small adjustment in administrative procedures, CBO estimates that those shippers would incur only minimal additional costs.

Previous CBO estimates: On October 4, 2004, CBO transmitted cost estimates for H.R. 10 as ordered reported by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence on September 29, 2004, and as ordered reported by the House Committee on Armed Services on September 29, 2004. On October 5, 2005, CBO also transmitted cost estimates for H.R. 10 as reported by the House Committee on Financial Services on October 5, 2004, and as ordered reported by the House Committee on Government Reform on September 29, 2004. The legislation approved by the House Committee on the Judiciary authorizes funding for the security of nuclear facilities, and nonprofit organizations, and for the COPS program. Differences in the estimated costs reflect differences among the three bills.

On September 24, 2004, CBO transmitted a cost estimate for S. 2840, the National Intelligence Reform Act of 2004, as reported by the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs. Both bills would create a new Office of the National Intelligence Director and reform certain aspects of the intelligence community. H.R. 10 also would reform terrorism prevention and prosecution, border security, and international cooperation and coordination activities—areas not addressed by S. 2840. Differences in the estimated costs reflect differences between the two bills.

PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

The Committee states that pursuant to clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, H.R. 10 reduces the risk of terrorist attack against the United States by implementing many of the bipartisan recommendations of the National Commission to Investigate Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Pursuant to clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee finds the authority for this legislation in article I, § 8 of the Constitution.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

The following discussion describes the portions of the bill as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary that fall within its jurisdiction.¹⁰⁰ The Committee understands that a section by section analysis of the entire bill will be included in the report of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

TITLE I—REFORM OF THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY

Section 1001. Short title

This section names this title the “National Intelligence Improvement Act of 2004.”

Section 1011. Reorganization and improvement of management of the intelligence community

This section Act replaces §§ 102–04 of Title I of the National Security Act with the following new §§ 102, 102A, 103, 103A, 104 and 104A. New § 102 replaces the DCI with a National Intelligence Director (“NID”). The NID will be Presidentially appointed and Senate confirmed and serve as the head of the intelligence community. It prohibits the NID from simultaneously serving as the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency or as the head of any other element of the intelligence community.

New § 102A sets out the responsibilities and authorities of the NID. This section provides that the NID shall have access to all national intelligence and intelligence related to the national security, except as otherwise provided by law or guidelines agreed upon by the Attorney General and the NID. The NID will develop and present the annual budget for the National Intelligence Program (NIP). The NID must report to the Committees on Judiciary, Intelligence, and Armed Services a report of any transfer of personnel relative to the Committees’ jurisdiction.

New § 103 establishes the Office of the NID to assist the Director in the performance of his or her duties. This section establishes specific responsibilities for a number of Deputies and Associates to assist the NID.

New § 104 establishes that the DCI shall assist the NID. His responsibilities include to: (1) collect intelligence through human sources and by other appropriate means, except that the DCI shall have no police, subpoena, or law enforcement powers or internal security functions; and (2) provide overall direction for the collection of national intelligence overseas or outside of the United States through human sources by elements of the intelligence community authorized to undertake such collection and, in coordination with other agencies of the Government which are authorized to undertake such collection, ensure that the most effective use is made of resources and that the risks to the United States and those involved in such collection are minimized. The manager’s amendment reported by the Committee inserted the qualifying phrase “overseas or outside the United States” to clarify that the CIA’s collection authority is not domestic. The Committee also supported the continued limitation that the CIA shall not have police, subpoena or other law enforcement powers.

This section defines national intelligence and intelligence related to national security to refer to all intelligence, regardless of source and including information collected both domestically and overseas that involves threats to the U.S., its people, property or interest;

the development or use of weapons of mass destruction; or any other matter bearing on the U.S. national or homeland security.

Section 1014. Role of the National Intelligence Director in appointment of certain officials responsible for intelligence-related activities

This section amends § 106 of the National Security Act to authorize the NID to recommend to the President individuals for appointment as the Deputy NID and the Director of the CIA. The section also allows the NID to concur with the Secretary of Defense in the selection of the head of the National Security Agency, National Reconnaissance Office, and the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency. The NID shall consult, under this section on the selection for the positions of the Defense Intelligence Agency, Assistant Secretary of State for Intelligence and Research, Director of the Office of Intelligence of the Department of Energy, Director of the Office of Counterintelligence of the Department of Energy, Assistant Secretary for Intelligence and Analysis of the Department of Treasury, Executive Assistant Director for the Intelligence of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) or successor, Undersecretary of Homeland Security for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection, and the Deputy Assistant Commandant of the Coast Guard for Intelligence.

Section 1021. National Counterterrorism Center

Section 1021 establishes the National Counterterrorism Center, which will be the primary organization for analyzing and integrating all intelligence possessed or acquired by the U.S.—except for intelligence pertaining exclusively to domestic counterterrorism. The NCTC will also support DOJ, DHS, and other agencies in fulfillment of their responsibilities to disseminate terrorism information consistent with the law and guidelines agreed to by the AG and the NID. The Committee added the reference AG guidelines in the manager's amendment.

Section 1022. Civil Liberties Protection Officer

Section 1022 requires the NID to appoint a Civil Liberties Protection Officer ("CLPO") who would be responsible for ensuring that civil liberties and privacy protections are appropriately incorporated in the policies and procedures developed and implemented by the Office of the NID. In addition, the CLPO must: (1) Oversee compliance by the ONID and the NID with the Constitution and all laws, regulations, executive orders and implementing guidelines relating to civil liberties and privacy; (2) review and assess complaints and other information indicating possible civil liberties or privacy abuses; (3) ensure that the utilization of technologies sustain privacy protections regarding the use, collection, and disclosure of personal information; (4) ensure that personal information contained in a system of records (as defined in the Privacy Act) is handled in full compliance with the Act's fair information practices; (5) conduct privacy impact assessments when appropriate or required by law; and (6) perform such other duties as prescribed by the NID or required by law. Section 1022 authorizes the CLPO to refer complaints of civil liberties or privacy abuse to the appro-appropriate Office of Inspector General responsible for the intelligence community department or agency to investigate.

Section 1031. Joint Intelligence Community Council

This section establishes the Joint Intelligence Community Council which will provide advice to the NID from the various heads of the Departments that contain elements of the Intelligence Community, including the Attorney General.

TITLE II—TERRORISM PREVENTION AND PROSECUTION

Section 2001. Individual Terrorists as Agents of Foreign Powers

This section now embodies the Berman amendment adopted at Committee which adds a new section to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978. It allows the court to assume that a non-U.S. person who is engaged in terrorism is an agent of a foreign power under the Act.

Sections 2021–2024, Stop Terrorist and Military Hoaxes Act of 2004.

These sections incorporate the Stop Terrorist and Military Hoaxes Act of 2004. These sections create criminal and civil penalties for whoever engages in any conduct, with intent to convey false or misleading information, that concerns an activity which would constitute such crimes as those relating to explosives; firearms; destruction of vessels; terrorism; sabotage of nuclear facilities; aircraft piracy; a dangerous weapon to assault flight crew members and attendants; explosives on an aircraft; homicide or attempted homicide or damaging or destroying facilities. They also prohibit making a false statement with intent to convey false or misleading information about the death, injury, capture, or disappearance of a member of the U.S. armed forces during a war or armed conflict in which the United States is engaged. Additionally, the bill increases penalties from not more than 5 years to not more than 10 years for making false statements, and obstructing justice, if the subject matter relates to international or domestic terrorism.

Section 2042 adds a new crime of material support for terrorism for knowingly receiving military training from a foreign terrorist organization. The section requires that any person charged under this section must have knowledge that the organization is a terrorist organization. It also defines the term military-type training. The section provides for extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section.

Section 2043 expands the crime of material support to terrorists to include any act of international or domestic terrorism and require that any person charged under this section must have knowledge that the organization is a terrorist organization. It also more clearly defines the term material support.

Section 2044 Financing of terrorism

This section amends 18 USC §2339C so that those who raise funds for terrorism can be prosecuted prior to the funds being transmitted to terrorist organizations.

Sections 2051–2053. Weapons of Mass Destruction Prohibition Improvement Act of 2004

These sections would amend 18 U.S.C. §2332a(a)(2) which makes it a crime for a person to use a weapon of mass destruction (other than a chemical weapon) against any person within the U.S. and the result of such use affects interstate and foreign commerce. They would expand the coverage of the target to include property. They would also expand when Federal jurisdiction is affected by covering the use of mail or any facility of interstate or foreign commerce for the attack, by the property being used for interstate or foreign commerce, and when the perpetrator travels or causes another to travel in interstate or foreign commerce in furtherance of the offense. This section would also expand coverage to include the use of a chemical weapon.

Sections 2101–2102. Money laundering and terrorist financing

These sections authorize funding for the Department of Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN). The section provides funding for the following: (1) Key technological improvements in FinCEN systems providing authorized law enforcement agencies with Web-based access to FinCEN data; (2) Expedited filing of suspicious activity reports with the ability to immediately alert financial institutions about suspicious activities; (3) Provision of information sharing technologies to improve the Government's ability to exploit the information in the FinCEN databases; and (4) Provision of training in the use of technologies available to detect and prevent financial crimes and terrorism.

Section 2122 Conduct in aid of counterfeiting

This section equates the possession of anti-counterfeiting technology or components, with the intent that it be used in a counterfeiting scheme with the actual act of counterfeiting.

Sections 2141–2142. Criminal history background checks

These sections address the issue of criminal history records as they relate to background investigations. Section 2142 authorizes the Attorney General to establish and maintain a system for providing employers with criminal history information if the information is requested as part of an employee background check that is authorized by the State where the employee works or where the employer has their principal place of business. These sections also give the Attorney General flexibility, based on real-time terror concerns, to mandate criminal history record checks for certain types of employment that involve positions vital to the nation's infrastructure or key resources. This section would allow for a standardized approach to the numerous requests from groups that want or need access to these records. A piecemeal approach has evolved as the various bills that authorize criminal history record checks these go to different committees for consideration and if passed, end up in different sections of the code.

The purpose of this section is to set up a standard process with uniform procedures, definitions, fee structures where practical, and reasonable safeguards to protect privacy and employee rights. A reporting requirement under this section seeks to identify all statutory requirements that already require the Department of Justice to perform some type of record check, the type of information requested, and any variances that exist in terms, definitions, and fees charged. The amendment offered by Mrs. Blackburn, which was adopted, makes this a pilot study and establishes specific criteria to be addressed in the report that is required, including the effectiveness of using commercially available data bases as part of criminal history information checks. It is the intention of the Committee that this study last for 180 days.

Section 2143. Protect Act

This section amends Public Law No. 108–21, by extending the duration of pilot programs for volunteer groups to obtain national and State criminal history background checks from 18 months to 30 months.

Section 2144. Reviews of criminal records of applicants for private security officer employment

This section was added by the Blackburn amendment. It is the text of S.1743, the “Private Security Officer Employment Authorization Act” which passed the Senate by unanimous consent at the end of 2003. This section makes findings as to the important role that private security officers play and stresses the importance of thoroughly screening and training officers. This section establishes a mechanism for authorized employers of security guards to request criminal history background checks using existing State identification bureaus. Criteria for disqualification mirrors that of existing state criteria and where a state has no criteria for such employment, this section provides general disqualifiers. A State may decline to participate in the program established by this section.

Section 2145. Task force on clearinghouse for IAFIS criminal history records

This section, created by the Blackburn amendment, establishes a task force to examine the establishment of a national clearinghouse to process criminal history record requests from employers providing private security guard services. It is the Committee’s intent that the clearinghouse described in section 2145 shall only process criminal history record requests pertaining to employees or prospective employees of the private security guard service making the request pursuant to that section.

Section 2181. Federal law enforcement in-flight counterterrorism training

This section directs ICE and the Federal Air Marshal Service (in coordination with the Transportation Security Administration) to make available appropriate in-flight counterterrorism procedures and tactics training to Federal law enforcement officers who fly while on duty.

Section 2182 Federal Flight Deck Officer Weapon Carriage Pilot Program

This section creates a Federal Flight Deck Officer (“FFDO”) Weapon Carriage Pilot Program that will allow pilots participating in the FFDO program to transport their firearms on their persons. After one year, the section requires the TSA to evaluate the safety record of the pilot program. It also directs that only if the safety level obtained under the pilot program is comparable to the safety level determined under existing methods of pilots carrying firearms on aircraft, should the TSA allow all pilots participating in the FFDO Program the option of carrying their firearm on their person (subject to such TSA requirements determined appropriate).

Section 2183. Registered Traveler Program

This section directs TSA to expedite implementation of the registered traveler program.

Section 2191. Grand jury information sharing

Section 895 of Public L. No. 107–296, enacted on October 26, 2001, was subsequently affected by a rule change by the Supreme Court. According to the Historical Notes of the Federal Criminal Code and Rules on page 51, “Section 895 of Pub. L. No. 107–296, which purported to amend subdivision (e) of this rule, failed to take into account the amendment of this rule by Order of the Supreme Court of the United States dated April 29, 2002, effective December 1, 2002, and was therefore incapable of execution.” This section makes the technical changes to address this rule change and ensures that the intent of Congress to improve information sharing is carried through.

Section 2192. Interoperable Law Enforcement and Intelligence Data System

Section 2192 enhances interoperability among law enforcement and intelligence agencies and provides clear direction to the NID to facilitate the implementation of a horizontal system to enhance information sharing.

Section 2193. The improvement of intelligence capabilities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation

This section codifies the recommendations of the Commission as they relate to FBI intelligence capabilities. These recommendations form the basis of reforms that have already been implemented or are about to be implemented at the FBI.

TITLE III—BORDER SECURITY AND TERRORIST TRAVEL

Section 3001. Verification of returning citizens

The section would require that by October 2006 all U.S. citizens returning from the Western Hemisphere other than Canada and Mexico must present U.S. passports. In the interim, U.S. citizens would have to present a document designated by the Secretary of Homeland Security. For U.S. citizens returning from Canada and Mexico, the Secretary of Homeland Security would have to designate documents that are sufficiently secure.

Section 3002. Documents required by aliens from contiguous countries

The section would require that by the beginning of 2007, aliens claiming to be Canadian who seek to enter the U.S. must present a passport or other secure identification.

Section 3003. Strengthening the Border Patrol

The section would authorize an increase of 2,000 agents in the Border Control agents a year for each of the next five years.

Section 3004. More immigration investigators

The section would increase the number of ICE investigators enforcing the immigration laws by 800 per year for each of the next five years. One half of the new investigators would be dedicated to enforcing employer sanctions and removing illegal aliens from the workplace. At least three of these new investigators each year must be assigned to each state.

Section 3005. Prevention of improper use of foreign identification

The section would bar all federal employees from accepting identification cards presented by aliens other than documents issued by the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security under the authority of the immigration laws, or unexpired foreign passports.

Section 3006. Expedited removal for illegal aliens

The section would require DHS to use expedited removal in the case of all aliens who have entered the U.S. illegally and have not been present here for five years.

Section 3007. Limit asylum abuse by terrorists

The section would clarify that the burden of proof is on the applicant in an asylum case. The testimony of the applicant may be sufficient to sustain such burden without corroboration, but only if it is credible, persuasive, and refers to specific facts that demonstrate that the applicant is a refugee. Where it is reasonable that an applicant would present corroborating evidence, such evidence must be provided unless a reasonable explanation is given as to why such information is not provided. No court shall reverse a determination made by an immigration judge or BIA with respect to the availability of corroborating evidence unless the court finds that a reasonable adjudicator is compelled to conclude that such corroborating evidence is unavailable.

The section would provide a nonexhaustive list of factors that an immigration judge can consider in assessing credibility, such as the demeanor, candor, or responsiveness of the applicant or witness, the consistency between the applicant's or witness's written and oral statements, whether or not under oath, made at any time to any officer, agent, or employee of the United States, the internal consistency of each such statement, the consistency of such statements with the country conditions in the country from which the applicant claims asylum, as presented by the Department of State, and any inaccuracies or falsehoods in such statements.

Finally, the section would overturn the doctrine of imputed political opinions by requiring that an asylum applicant must establish that race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion was or will be the central motive for persecuting the applicant.

Section 3008. Revocation of visas

The section would allow the government to deport a non-immigrant alien whose visa has been revoked. It would also allow DHS to revoke a nonimmigrant visa petition that has been granted for an alien in the U.S.

Section 3009. Streamlined removal process

The section would modify the judicial review of removal orders available to aliens as follows: for criminal aliens and aliens who are not permanent residents, review would be only in the circuit court and the scope of review would be limited to (1) whether the individual is an alien, (2) whether he is deportable under the Immigration Naturalization Act (“INA”), (3) whether he was ordered to be removed under the INA, and (4) whether he meets the criteria for withholding of removal or Torture Convention protection. For non-criminal lawful permanent resident aliens, review would only be in the circuit court and would be available for all non-discretionary determinations.

Sections 3031–3032. No bar to removal for terrorists and criminal aliens

These sections would modify the regulations implementing the Convention Against Torture by providing that aliens who have engaged in Nazi persecution or genocide, terrorist aliens, aliens who have been convicted of particularly serious crimes and are thus a danger to the community of the U.S., aliens who committed serious crimes outside the U.S., and aliens there are reasonable grounds to believe are a danger to the security of the U.S., would not be eligible for relief from removal.

Section 3033. Removal of aliens

This section would move the authority for designating a country of removal to the Secretary of DHS, and give the Secretary more power to remove an alien to a specific country. It would also allow the Secretary to remove an alien to a country of which the alien is a citizen or national unless the country prevents the alien from entering.

Section 3041. Bringing in and harboring certain aliens

This section would increase criminal penalties for alien smuggling and have the Secretary of DHS develop and implement an outreach program to educate the public in the U.S. and abroad about the penalties for illegally bringing in and harboring aliens.

Section 3052. Minimum document requirements and issuance standards for Federal recognition

This section requires that, for a state driver’s license or identification card to be acceptable for federal purposes, States must certify to the Secretary of DHS, within 3 years, that they have met specified standards for data elements, source documents, and security. This section prohibits States from providing a driver’s license to an applicant holding a driver's license issued by another State without confirmation from the other State that the individual is terminating or has terminated the driver's license

Section 3054. Trafficking in authentication features for use in false identification documents

This section amends Title 18 to make it a federal crime to traffic in or use security features designed to prevent tampering, counterfeiting, or duplication of identity documents.

Section 3081. Studies on worldwide machine-readable passports and worldwide travel history database

The section would require the Department of State's Office of Visa and Passport Control and the GAO to each conduct a study on the feasibility, cost and benefits (in terms of tracking terrorist travel and apprehending potential terrorists) of: (1) requiring all passports to be machine-readable, tamper-resistant and with biometric identifiers; and (2) the creation of a database containing a record of all entry and exit information so that border and consular officials may ascertain the travel history of the visitor or a prospective entrant. This requirement would allow consular officers and immigration inspectors to ascertain the travel history of any U.S. citizen or foreign visitor seeking to enter the United States, even if that entrant has a new passport.

Section 3082. Expanded pre-inspection at foreign airports

Currently, DHS inspects passengers who are traveling to the U.S. at 14 foreign airports instead of inspecting them at ports of entry in the U.S. The section would expand this program to include up to an additional 25 airports. In addition, the current selection criteria for pre-inspection locations are based on reducing the number of aliens who arrive to the United States who are inadmissible. The section would provide that the selection criteria should also include the objective of preventing the entry of potential terrorists. The additional locations should be operational by January 1, 2008.

Section 3083. Immigration security initiative

The Immigration Security Initiative is a DHS-operated program that assists airline personnel at foreign airports in identifying fraudulent travel documents. Currently, the program is in place in only two foreign airports. The section expands the program to at least 50 foreign airports by December 31, 2006.

Section 3084. Responsibilities and functions of consular officers

This section would increase the number of consular officers by 150 per year for fiscal years 2006 to 2009, place limitations on the use of foreign nationals to screen nonimmigrant visa applicants by stating that all applications shall be reviewed and adjudicated by a U.S. consular officer, require that the training program for consular officers include training in detecting fraudulent documents and working directly with DHS immigration inspectors at ports of entry, and require the Secretary of State to place anti-fraud specialists in the one hundred posts that have the greatest frequency of presentation of fraudulent documents.

Section 3085. Increase in penalties for fraud and related activity

This section amends 28 U.S.C. §1028 to increase penalties for the possession and transfer of fraudulent government identification documents, including fraudulent U.S., state, and foreign government documents.

Section 3086. Criminal penalty for false claim to citizenship

This section would make it a violation of law to make a false claim of citizenship in order to enter or remain in the United States.

Section 3088. International agreements to track and curtail terrorist travel through the use of fraudulently obtained documents

This section requires the President to lead efforts to reach international agreements to track and stop international travel by terrorists through the use of lost, stolen or falsified documents. The international agreements should include the establishment of a system to share information on lost, stolen and fraudulent passports and the sharing of this information by governments with officials at ports of entry. In addition, this section calls on the U.S. to continue to support efforts at the International Civil Aviation Association to strengthen the security features of passports and other travel documents.

Section 3090. Biometric entry and exit data system

This section requires the Secretary of DHS to develop a plan to accelerate the full implementation of the requirement of an automated entry and exit data system at U.S. ports of entry and to implement a plan to expedite the processing of registered travelers at ports of entry.

Section 3091. Enhanced responsibilities of the Coordinator for Counterterrorism

This section states that it shall be the policy of the U.S. to make combating terrorist travel and those who assist them a top priority for U.S. counter-terrorism policy. It also adds additional responsibilities to the Coordinator for Counter-terrorism at the State Department (S/CT) so that the issues of terrorist travel and facilitation are added to the portfolio of responsibilities under S/CT.

Section 3092. Establishment of Office of Visa and Passport Security in the Department of State

This section would establish an Office of Visa and Passport Security within the Department of State. It would require the development of a strategic plan in coordination with DHS to target and disrupt individuals and organizations involved in document fraud, raising the profile of these types of crimes and their links to terrorism.

Section 3104. Technology acquisition and dissemination plan

This provision requires DHS to ensure the sharing of terrorist travel intelligence and other information within the many DHS elements and between DHS and other elements of the IC; it also requires DHS to establish a program focused on terrorist travel analysis, training, and technology deployment for front-line border and consular personnel.

Sections 5001–5010. Faster and smarter funding for first responders

This section requires DHS to allocate homeland security assistance funds to States or regions based upon the degree to which they would lessen the threat to, vulnerability of, and consequences for persons and critical infrastructure. Second, it reduces the current State minimum and restructures the allocation process. Under the current system, none of the funds available under the State Homeland Security Grant Program are allocated on the basis of risk. Instead, each State first receives a base amount equal to 0.75 percent of the total, and then an additional amount based solely on population. Under these sections, in contrast, DHS must first allocate all funds based on risk, and then provide, if necessary, additional funds to those States, territories, or certain Indian tribes that have not met a significantly reduced minimum threshold of funding. Under this scheme, 99% of the money will be allocated strictly on the basis of risk.

Section 5021. Government reorganization authority

The Committee added Section 5021, which is based on H.R. 4108, the “High Risk Nonprofit Security Enhancement Act of 2004.” This section would authorize the Secretary of Homeland Security to provide $100 million in security assistance to 501(c)(3) organizations that demonstrate they are at a high risk of a terrorist attack based upon specific threats of international terrorist organizations; prior attacks against similarly situated organizations by international terrorists; the vulnerability of the specific site; the symbolic value of the site as a highly recognized American institution; or the role of the institution in responding to terrorist attacks. After the funds have been expended for the highest risk institutions, federal loan guarantees would be available to make loans available on favorable terms. Funds would be administered by a new office in the Department dedicated to working with high-risk non-profits.

Sections 5041–5045. Appointments process reform

This section seeks to improve the Presidential appointment process and allow a newly elected President to submit nominations to the Senate for Presidential appointments to National Security-related positions as expeditiously as possible. The Presidential appointments process is unnecessarily long, burdensome and complex.

Sections 5051–5054. Federal Bureau of Investigation revitalization

The Commission recommended that the FBI needed to develop a specialized workforce with deep expertise in intelligence and national security. Section 5051 adds 5 years to the mandatory retirement age for certain employees. Section 5052 allows for retention and relocation bonuses to be paid to employees with unique skills or qualifications that would leave the service but for such bonus. Section 5053 creates a “reserve service” that would call upon retired employees with specializations that would create a “surge capacity” during times of emergency. Section 5054 would give the FBI flexibility with pay issues in staffing critical positions the new Intelligence Directorate.

Section 5091. Requirement that agency rulemaking take into consideration impacts on individual privacy

Section 5091 requires a federal agency to prepare a privacy impact analysis for proposed and final rules and to include this analysis in the notice for public comment issued in conjunction with the publication of such rules.

Section 5092. Chief privacy officers for agencies with law enforcement or anti-terrorism functions

Section 5092 directs the head of each Federal agency with law enforcement or anti-terrorism functions to appoint a chief privacy officer with primary responsibility within that agency for privacy policy. The provision requires the chief privacy officer to ensure that personally identifiable information is protected and to file annual reports with Congress on the agency's activities that affect privacy, including complaints of privacy violations.

Section 5093. Data mining

This section requires the head of each department or agency of the federal government that is engaged in any activity to use or develop data mining technology to submit a public report to Congress on all such activities of the department or agency under the jurisdiction of that official. This amendment establishes criteria for the content of the report and requires that it be submitted within 90 days after enactment of this legislation and requires that it be updated each year.

Section 5094. Privacy and civil liberties oversight board

Section 5094 establishes an Independent Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board in the Executive Branch of the Federal Government. The purpose of the Board is to: (1) analyze and review actions the Executive Branch takes to protect the Nation from terrorism as such actions pertain to privacy or civil liberties; and (2) ensure that privacy and civil liberties concerns are appropriately considered in the development and implementation of laws, regulations, and policies related to efforts to protect the Nation against terrorism. Specifically, the Board must review the privacy and civil liberties implications of legislation, regulations, and related matters and advise the Executive Branch regarding the need to ensure that privacy and civil liberties are appropriately considered in their development and implementation. With respect to providing advice on proposals to retain or enhance a particular governmental power, the Board must consider whether the executive department or agency has explained how the power actually materially enhances security and if there is adequate supervision of the Executive Branch's use of the power to ensure protection of privacy and civil liberties. The provision specifies the Board's oversight responsibilities with respect to information sharing activities of Federal agencies.

The Board is comprised of a chairman and four members, all of whom are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Not more than three members of the Board may be of the same political party. Board members are to be selected solely on the basis of their professional qualifications, achievements, public stature, and relevant experience, without regard to political affiliation, and have extensive experience in the areas of privacy and civil rights and liberties. A Board member may not, while serving on the Board, be an elected official, an officer, or an employee of the Federal Government, other than in the capacity as a member of the Board. Although initially appointed on a staggered basis, Board member is appointed for a six-year term.

Section 5094 specifies that the Board must periodically submit, not less than semiannually, reports to Congress and the President that describe its major activities and information on the Board's findings, conclusions, and recommendations resulting from its advisory and oversight functions. Section 5094 authorizes Board Members to testify before Congress. With respect to the public, section 5094 requires the Board to hold public hearings, release public reports, and otherwise inform the public of its activities, as appropriate and in a manner consistent with the protection of classified information, applicable law, and national security. Subject to an exception for national security, the provision requires a Federal department or agency to supply information upon request of the Board. Section 5094 specifies that the Board is an agency and not an advisory committee. In addition, the Board is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

Section 5101. Short title

This section provides that this chapter may be cited as the "Mutual Aid and Litigation Management Authorization Act of 2004."

Section 5102. Mutual aid authorized

The mutual aid provisions enable states to enter into mutual aid agreements to provide mutual aid in response to emergencies and to allow their first responders to carry with them into other states the liability regime of their home states. The mutual aid provisions also provide that, for parties to a mutual aid agreement, the worker's compensation and death benefits of first responders who answer calls in other party states, and the home state rules that govern them, also follow them into other states. The mutual aid provisions also provide that, for parties to a mutual aid agreement, whenever any person holds a certificate issued by a responding party that evidences the meeting of professional standards, such person shall be deemed so certified by the requesting party to provide assistance under the mutual aid agreement.

Section 5103. Litigation management agreements

This section includes provisions that allow states to enter into "litigation management agreements" in which they could agree that, in the event first responders from several states respond to a terrorist attack in another state, they could decide on the liability regime that would apply in that circumstance to claims brought against their first responders, including putting any such claims in federal court, a ban on punitive damages, and a collateral source offset rule (that would prevent double recoveries for the same injury).

Section 5104. Additional provisions

This section provides that nothing in this chapter abrogates any immunities from liability that any party may have under any other state or federal law. This section exempts law enforcement security operations at special events of national significance under 18 U.S.C. § 3056(e) or other law enforcement functions of the U.S. Secret Service. This section also provides that the Secret Service shall be maintained as a distinct entity within the Department of Homeland Security and shall not be merged with any other department function.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

Because of the short time the Committee had to prepare this report and the length of the bill, the Office of the Legislative Counsel was not able to provide the Committee materials to comply with clause 3(e) of Rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

MARKUP TRANSCRIPT

BUSINESS MEETINGWEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 2004

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 10:00 a.m., in Room 2141, Rayburn House Office Building, Hon. F. James Sensenbrenner, Jr. [Chairman of the Committee] presiding.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Committee will be in order. A working quorum is present.

Pursuant to notice I now call up the bill H.R. 10, the "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act" for purposes of markup and move its favorable recommendation to the House.

Without objection, the bill will be considered as read and open for amendment at any point.

[The text of H.R. 10, the "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act," can be found at: <http://www.congress.gov>.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes to explain the bill.

The tragic events of September 11, 2001 forever altered our sense of invulnerability to terrorist attacks on American soil. The protection of the American people from foreign and domestic threats is the most important responsibility of Government and a central priority of the Judiciary Committee.

In the last 3 years this Committee and Congress have taken action to strengthen the ability of law enforcement and the intelligence community to better protect the American people against future terrorist attacks, while enhancing the readiness and capability of our Nation's first responders. Since the attacks the Judiciary Committee has conducted 42 hearings and markups to examine and remedy legislative, procedural and structural vulnerabilities to terrorism in our Nation's immigration system. The Committee has also conducted 46 hearings and markups to strengthen Federal law enforcement and antiterrorism efforts. The Committee has also taken firm steps to ensure that efforts to preserve the security of Americans do not transgress on other civil liberties Americans cherish.

In November 2002 President Bush signed legislation creating the bipartisan National Commission of Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States. The Commission's mandate was as broad as it was ambitious, to, quote, "Examine and report upon the facts and causes relating to the terrorist attacks of September 11 and to suggest corrective measures that can be taken to prevent future acts of terrorism."

I supported the creation of this independent commission, and while its proceedings were not perfect, I am elated that the forcefulness and clarity of its recommendations were not diminished by the partisan division amongst the 9/11 Commissioners.

The purpose of today's markup is to consider H.R. 10, the "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act," of which I am an original cosponsor. This bill reflects the findings of the 9/11 Commission and provides the legislative substance necessary to give legislative force to the Commission's report. Although the bill was introduced last week, several provisions within the Committee's jurisdiction will be very familiar to members as it incorporates several bills that have been previously considered by this Committee, and in some cases the full House.

The legislation consists of five titles: Reform of the Intelligence Community, Terrorist Prevention and Prosecution, Border Security and Terrorist Travel, International Cooperation and Coordination, then Government Restructuring. Since an exhaustive recitation of all of H.R. 10's provisions within the Committee's jurisdiction would be too time consuming, a summary of its principle provisions must suffice.

The creation of a National Intelligence Director and the establishment of a National Counterterrorism Center in Title I are key reforms that will help ensure that the wall of separation dividing the intelligence and law enforcement is never again exploited to inflict terrorist attacks upon the United States. Section 1112 codifies the FBI efforts to assess and prevent terrorist attacks before they occur. Sections 2001, 2021 through 24, and 2041 through 44, and 2051 through 53, contain important provisions that enhance penalties for terrorism hoaxes, increase penalties for supporting, financing or cooperating with terrorist organizations, and expand the scope of laws that prohibit the shipment or use of weapons of mass destruction. Sections 2101 and 2102 provide additional funding to combat terrorism financing, while Sections 2171 through 2173 enhance the use of biometric technology to reduce terrorist threats against air travel.

Title III of the legislation contains important provisions to enhance border security and reduce opportunities for terrorists to enter and stay in the United States. Section 3001 implements a Commission recommendation requiring that Americans returning from travel in the western hemisphere to possess passports. Section 3002 requires Canadians seeking entry into the United States to present a passport or other secure identification. Section 3003 authorizes 2,000 new border patrol agents for each of the next 5 years. Section 3004 authorizes 800 additional immigration and customs enforcement investigators for each of the next 5 years. 3005 reduces the risk of identity and document fraud, while Sections 3006 through 9 and 3031 through 33 provide for the expedited removal of illegal aliens, limit asylum abuse by terrorists, streamline the removal of terrorists and other criminal aliens.

Nearly every one of these provisions reflect Commission recommendations in legislation introduced and formerly considered by the Committee.

Finally, I am particularly pleased that this legislation contains key provisions that safeguard the privacy and civil liberties of all Americans. Specifically, Sections 1021 and 22 establishes a privacy officer to ensure that civil liberties and privacy protections are incorporated in the policies implemented by the National Intelligence Director. Modeled on legislation originally introduced by Constitutional Subcommittee Chairman Chabot, Section 5091 requires Federal agencies to prepare a privacy impact analysis for proposed and final rules during the rulemaking process. Finally, Section 5092 directs the head of each Federal agency with law enforcement or antiterrorism functions to appoint a chief privacy officer to protect against privacy abuses.

The bill protects the security of the American people by better defending the United States against terrorist attacks. The legislation reflects careful, thoughtful and principled examination of the 9/11 Commission's bipartisan report in its staff report, and provides additional tools and resources to fight and win the war on terror.

I now recognize the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Conyers.

Mr. CONYERS. Thank you, Chairman Sensenbrenner and members of the Committee. 9/11 was one of the most tragic events in our history, but it was also an event that brought us together. Members of Congress stood shoulder to shoulder on the steps of the Capitol singing "God Bless America." Democrats in Congress united behind the President's efforts in the war on terror. This Committee of the Judiciary worked together to craft a version of the PATRIOT Act that passed unanimously.

So from the outset, I want to thank the chairman for holding the markup because very few Committees in the House are doing what we're doing here today. We're following the regular order by allowing Committees to work their will on the bill, and I think it's a tribute to the chairman's faith in the legislative process that we're here today.

But the process used to assemble the bill is different from the chairman's example. The 9/11 Commission reached across the partisan divide and came up with unanimous recommendations. 10 members, 5 Democrats, 5 Republicans, held countless hearings and issued a well-written report with pretty reasonable recommendations. The Senate almost evenly split by Republicans and Democrats, have taken up a bill, bipartisan, authored by Senators McCain, Lieberman and Collins.

Hoping the House would follow the example set by the Commission and by the Senate, the Democratic House leader asked the Speaker to work on a bill together, but instead we have before us a bill sponsored only by Republican Members of the Congress and drafted only with Republican input, and it's unfortunate that we've seen this same go-it-alone attitude that has been demonstrated time and time again in the House of Representatives.

What we are doing here, whenever the majority has the choice of coming together, especially on the issue of national security, or bringing the Congress and the country together, they always choose to score political points. We saw it on the PATRIOT Act. We saw it on the Homeland Security Bill and now we see it again on the measure that is presently before us.

We've heard over and over on the campaign trail this year that terrorism is not a law enforcement matter. Yet throughout this bill there are provisions that create additional criminal offenses for terrorism that are virtually identical to the existing Federal criminal code. Rather than providing more resources for Homeland Security, including safeguarding nuclear materials, this bill simply increases the penalties for threats involving weapons of mass destruction.

I would like to throw more than just the book at al Qaeda, but after we have already been attacked by them, will adding penalties to existing legislation make us any safer? The measure before us increases the maximum penalty for a false statement in a terrorism case from 5 to 10 years. Is there a member on the Committee that thinks another 5 years in prison will act as a deterrent to a member of al Qaeda? This bill is a brew of extraneous anti-liberty proposals, long sought by the Attorney General John Ashcroft, and also these measures were long discredited by the Congress.

Three examples. Section 3009 would decimate the due process rights of immigrants, forbidding the Federal courts from habeas corpus review of orders of removal. Section 3032 would place a keep-out sign on our borders for victims of torture, forcing the victims into the impossible position of proving they would be tortured in the future if they went back, and closing the courthouse door to any review of decisions that send them back to repressive regimes. The final example is that we follow an open door to a national identification card system, the instrument of most despotic regimes that have been known on the planet.

So, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, we have a number of amendments, and I hope that the spirit that prevailed on this Committee when we crafted the PATRIOT Act together will guide us on the decisions before us today.

I thank the chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, all members' opening statements will be included in the record at this point.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Lofgren follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE ZOE LOFGREN, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. Chairman, today we are marking up a bill entitled, "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act." Yet, upon closer examination of many of the provisions we have jurisdiction over, there are several provisions that implement absolutely no recommendations by the bipartisan, independent 9/11 Commission.

If today we are supposed to be implementing the 9/11 Commission recommendations, why are we considering a bill with provisions to change our political asylum laws to make it more difficult for victims of human rights abuses to find safe refuge in the United States? Why are we expanding expedited removal to make it more difficult for people seeking protection from life threatening situations through political asylum in the U.S.? Why are we reviewing provisions to strip courts from reviewing orders of removal? Why does this bill contain provisions on tort reform?

What do any of these provisions have to do with recommendations made by the 9/11 Commission?

In those areas where this bill does attempt to implement the 9/11 Commission recommendations, there are obvious weaknesses. More can be done to make the entry-exit program work through stronger provisions that implement biometric requirements and standards for all immigration purposes. More can be done to provide real-time access to all immigration files and information on individuals seeking entry into the U.S.

It seems to me that this legislation before us today is another rendition of partisan politics and an attempt to disguise policies and legislation that normally would not be enacted because there just isn't enough support to get them through Congress. Once again, the leadership in this House is attempting to enact legislation under guise of the noble cloak of protecting the homeland and preventing terror, knowing full well that several provisions have nothing to do with it.

The bipartisan, independent 9/11 Commission should not be used to enact the majority party's agenda, especially when the 9/11 Commission has not endorsed the bill. It is time for the Republican leadership in this House to take the 9/11 Commission seriously. Instead of this bill, we should be marking up a bill that truly implements the 9/11 Commission recommendations, such as the bill introduced by Leader Pelosi or the Collins/Lieberman bill. Unlike the bill before us today, the Collins/Lieberman bill was worked out in a bipartisan fashion and has the support of the 9/11 Commission.

It is time for the Republican leadership in this House to stop playing politics with our nation's security.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE SHEILA JACKSON LEE, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS, AND RANKING MEMBER, SUBCOMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION, BORDER SECURITY, AND CLAIMS

Chairman Sensenbrenner and Ranking Member Conyers, the legislation that we have the privilege of marking up today will have to serve as the blueprint for this nation's ability to fight terrorism. Therefore, it is our duty to perform a comprehensive and earnest markup that leaves partisan politics and pre-election motives behind. Since this proposal was crafted without giving Democrats an adequate opportunity to provide input, it is clear that, while the September 11 Commission's (9/11 Commission) report recommendations are a bi-partisan product, H.R. 10 is not. Hence, this bill is the symbol of leadership that is guided by partisanship when it should be guided by the needs of the American people. This bill is the symbol of misplaced priorities.

I serve on the House Select Committee on Homeland Security, and it troubles me that while that body received a referral for markup, the leadership has chosen not to schedule such a hearing. The very committee that would presumably hold the most jurisdiction over this matter has deferred its opportunity to make this legislation better. That does not sit well with my colleagues on this side of the aisle and it will not sit well with the families of the victims of 9/11—it will not sit well with the American people.

Furthermore, while the September 11 Commission has set forth its bi-partisan suggestion for rebuilding and improvement, we cannot even move legislation that authorizes homeland security spending through a markup by the main committee of jurisdiction. These issues are indicative of a body that has its priorities misplaced.

Now, we receive a 542-page proposal that makes a weak attempt at implementing the comprehensive recommendations made by the 9/11 Commission. Again, it appears that this body's leadership has its priorities misplaced. The "9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act" fails to do what its name purports in several ways.

The Commission, families of the victims, and Senate Members on both sides of the aisle agree that the bi-partisan Collins-Lieberman legislation currently under consideration by that body best reflects the Commission's recommendations. However, our Republican colleagues refuse to consider that bill and continually ignore the urgency that was conveyed by the Commission and the families of the victims.

As Co-Chair of the Pakistan Caucus, I must commend the drafters for their inclusion of Section 4082, the Sense of Congress provision relating to the commitment to maintain and build upon our relationship with Pakistan to eradicate extremist groups and make positive efforts to fight global terrorism.

Some of the areas of misplaced priorities include the following:

Assistance to Afghanistan—The bill reaffirms provisions of the U.S.—Afghan Freedom Support Act that calls for the development of a long-term bi-lateral strategy to address that region's economic and security needs. However, H.R. 10 urges the United States to expand its assistance instead of making an authorization as does the Collins-Lieberman proposal and the substitute that we will offer.

Education in the Arab Nations—H.R. 10 only authorizes additional grants for existing U.S.-sponsored schools in the Arab nations and does not create new programs for public education in the Middle East. The Collins-Lieberman alternative as well as the substitute that we will offer, consistent with the 9/11 Commission's recommendations, authorizes monies for an International Youth Opportunity Fund that would support educational projects in Muslim countries that invest in public education.

Protecting the Human Rights of Captured Terrorists—While this legislation, as drafted, provides a very weak “Sense of Congress” provision that calls for the development of an approach toward detention and humane treatment of captured terrorists; the Collins-Lieberman alternative contains hortatory language that directs the government to treat captured terrorist in the same manner that the U.S. would demand that its troops be treated if similarly captured. Moreover, the alternative bill and our substitute amendment prohibit treatment of any prisoner in a manner inconsistent with the U.S. Constitution or other laws and treaties of the United States—respecting international law principles.

Protecting Individual Privacy in Information Sharing Systems—Contrary to the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission, H.R. 10, in creating “chief privacy officers,” fails to provide entities within the federal government to ensure that agencies working together are protecting individual rights or privacy. The Collins-Lieberman bill and the substitute amendment that we will offer, however, does include strong provisions to this effect.

Civil Liberties Board—The Republican bill that we have before us completely fails to create a Civil Liberties Board or any type of Executive-level entity to ensure that civil liberties are protected. I will support the amendment offered by my colleagues to correct this omission.

Making the Homeland Security Permanent—While the legislation before us simply contains a “Sense of Congress” provision that the Rules Committee should take up the recommendations of the Select Committee on Homeland Security as to how best to consolidate jurisdiction over homeland security matters, the Collins-Lieberman bill—as well as the substitute amendment that I will join the distinguished Ranking Member in offering today take the next step and provides that the 108th Congress shall not adjourn until each House of Congress has adopted changes in its rules to consolidate jurisdiction over homeland security matters in one committee.

In addition to the gaps enumerated above, the tort reform provisions found in Section 5103 of this legislation amount to very bad public policy. This section allows states and localities, in the course of responding to an “act of terrorism,” to enter into litigation management agreements that would cover all claims arising out of, relating to, or resulting from an act of terrorism.

The elimination of punitive damages within this scheme will allow negligent actors to escape liability for intentional misconduct—under the blanket of terrorism. Similarly, the elimination of the “collateral source rule” within this section will allow wrongdoers to escape liability for a victim’s injuries if there is a subrogee (insurance provider or employer who would pay). Under this bill, Section 5103 would apply to non-governmental entities such as hospitals, doctors, and nurses. This extension is unnecessary and overreaching. It is when we face the worst emergencies that we need the highest standards of care maintained the most!

These provisions will not improve the responsiveness of providers and government actors. I oppose this provision, and I oppose the base bill. Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to stand against this proposal and continue to support the Collins-Lieberman legislation.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Before going to amendments, let me advise the members, kind of a game plan for the Committee consideration of this legislation.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, we can’t hear you down here.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay. The Committee will be in order so everybody can hear.

It is the intention of the leadership to bring this bill up on the floor next week, and that means that we will have to complete our Committee consideration this week on it. If we do not complete Committee consideration, we will simply be discharged and the bill will come up on the floor, which is a result that I don’t think any member of the Committee desires.

There are also a number of other Committees that are meeting on this legislation, and I realize that members who have multiple Committee assignments are conflicted on where they should be, so as a result, the chair will exercise, pursuant to Committee Rule 2(h)1, the authority to postpone votes on amendments, and the votes on the amendments will take place at 2:30 this afternoon or 30 minutes after the series of rollcalls that will occur somewhere in the 1:00 to 1:30 timeframe, whichever is later. So we will come back this afternoon a half an hour after the last rollcall is completed or at 2:30, whichever is later. The votes that will be ruled from this morning will be taken.

I also realize that there are a number of members that will wish to debate the Marriage Amendment tomorrow which is being brought to the floor, so the chair hopes that we will be able to accommodate those members, but it is going to require, in my opinion, some time in Committee tomorrow to finish up.

The final nugget of information I'd like to share with the Committee is that there is a 50/50 chance that there will be no rollcall votes in the House floor on Friday, and thus I believe that gives all of us an incentive to finish this legislation and to send it to the floor tomorrow. So members should be advised accordingly that after we have the votes this afternoon, we will play it by ear, and the chair will give us much notice as possible on when the next series of roll votes will take place.

Now, are there any amendments? And the chair has a manager's amendment which the clerk will report.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The amendment makes various technical changes to the legislation and ensures that the expertise of members of this Committee and the Department of Justice, with regard to providing security for our country and balancing the needs of law enforcement with the needs to protect civil liberties will not be diminished. Specifically, in addition to the technical changes, my amendment makes the following changes.

As the bill is currently written the CIA has overall direction for the collection of national intelligence through human sources. The CIA should not have the authority for domestic human intelligence collection activities conducted by the FBI. The amendment clarifies that the CIA should not be involved in the domestic arena. Under the bill is introduced the CIA can direct and coordinate FBI human intelligence activities within the United States. That is inconsistent with the longstanding 1947 National Security Act ban on CIA law enforcement powers in internal security functions.

In addition, the amendment would require that the Department of Homeland Security consult with the Attorney General regarding various new security procedures for airports and aviation as contained in the bill, and require that reports on the use of these procedures be provided to the Judiciary Committee. The amendment also requires the Assistant Secretary for Immigration and Customs Enforcement and the Director of the Federal Air Marshal Service of the Department of Homeland Security, in coordination with the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security, to ensure that TSA screeners and Federal air marshals receive training in identifying fraudulent identification documents. This training would include fraudulent or expired visas and passports. Such training may also be made available to other Federal law enforcement agencies and local law enforcement agencies located in border States.

Finally, the legislation adds sense of Congress language that the TSA should continue to examine airline passenger records for violent criminals and people with outstanding warrants.

I believe that these amendments are an improvement to the legislation and will help the Committee to continue to provide expertise in fighting the war on terror, as well as to preserve its jurisdiction in these vital areas.

The question—

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I have a second degree amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the second degree amendment.

Mr. SCOTT. It's AM3001.

The CLERK. Amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Sensenbrenner, offered by Mr. Scott to H.R. 10. Page 3, strike the amendment to Subtitle G of Title II.

 TO THE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10
 OFFERED BY MR. SENSENBRENNER

II.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, this language states that a sense of Congress that the Transportation Security Administration, TSA, shall continue to examine airline passenger records for violent criminals and people with outstanding warrants.

Mr. Chairman, one of the things we heard from our hearing was that the list is already over inclusive. Senator Kennedy was denied boarding. Representative Lewis from Georgia has had trouble getting on the planes. It just—it is already over inclusive, and people with names similar to people who have had violent felonies anywhere in the country or outstanding warrants anywhere in the country will spend all their time explaining to TSA officials who they are, who they are not, and TSA officials would be diverted from terrorists who may in fact be a danger.

I would hope that we would focus our resources on terrorists and not anybody with a criminal record or those with similar—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair, in the interest of bipartisanship reluctantly agrees to the second degree amendment, and I would point out that the amendment strikes a sense of Congress provision that doesn't have the force of law. I would say that if anybody comes upon a person that has an outstanding warrant, whether it's a TSA screener at the airport or elsewhere, law enforcement is supposed to arrest that person pursuant to the warrant, and they would never get on the plane anyhow. Having Congress say that law enforcement's supposed to do their job on this, I think is redundant and we might as well get rid of a redundant expression of Congress because the law is the law anyhow.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The question is on the second degree amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The second degree amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WATT. I'm seeing if I can get another bipartisan agreement from the chair, and maybe an explanation—or maybe an explanation. On page 3 of the manager's amendment, the chair's amendment, there's a reference to page 175, line 21. Insert "in concurrence with the Attorney General" before the word "shall." All of the other references throughout the chairman's amendment say "in consultation with the Attorney General." It seems to me that there is a fairly substantial difference between in consultation with the Attorney General and in concurrence with the Attorney General.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATT. Yes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The reason that that's in the manager's amendment is deliberate because the manager's amendment deals with allowing pilots to carry guns on planes, and it is an amendment to the Federal firearms regulation, which have stayed in the Department of Justice rather than being placed in the Department of Homeland Security. So if the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security who is in charge of the TSA decides to make a change relative to firearms policy, it seems to me that the Justice Department ought to be able to sign off on it and have the statutory authority to be able to change whatever the Department of Homeland Security decided to do. That's why the word "concurrence" is in there.

Mr. WATT. So it is the chairman's intent to make—to give the Attorney General a veto in effect, not—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman will further yield, that is correct, because we're dealing with Federal firearms regulations.

Mr. WATT. All right. I yield back. I appreciate the explanation.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the manager's amendment as amended by the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the manager's amendment, as amended, is agreed to. Are there further amendments?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 authored by Mr. Nadler. Page 393, strike line 3 and all that follows through page 395, line 17, and make appropriate conforming changes—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection the amendment is considered as read and the gentleman from New York is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Nadler follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10
OFFERED BY MR. NADLER

Page 393, strike line 3 and all that follows through page 395, line 17 (and make appropriate conforming changes to page 392, line 11 through page 393, line 2, and to the cross reference at page 415, line 21).

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This bill incorporate some provisions of H.R. 3266, the Faster and Smarter Funding for First Responders Act, which would improve how homeland security grants are distributed to States and localities. When H.R. 3266 was considered by the Judiciary Committee last June, it included a provision guaranteeing a minimum funding level for each State of .45 percent of total funds available. I wanted to offer an amendment at that time to strike the State minimum completely, but agreed to lower the minimum to .25 in order to move the bill forward and achieve some improvements in how these grants are distributed.

Despite our good faith efforts, H.R. 3266 remains stuck as different Committee chair people continue to try to raise the minimum for certain States arbitrarily without regard to the actual threat of terrorism. More importantly, since H.R. 3266 was considered by the Judiciary Committee, the 9/11 Commission came out with its final report and recommended, and I quote, "that homeland security assistance should be based strictly on an assessment of risks and vulnerabilities. Every State and city needs to have some minimum infrastructure for emergency response, but Federal Homeland Security assistance should not remain a program for general revenue sharing. It should supplement State and local resources based on the risks or vulnerabilities that merit additional support. Congress should not use this money as a pork barrel," close quote.

Unfortunately, the bill before us contains a two-tiered State minimum system of .25 percent for all States with border States, that is, the 18 or 19 States on the international border, getting .45 percent. It is time to make the legislation before us today consistent with the recommendations of the report of the 9/11 Commission. There are very real and known terrorist threats against specific targets in the United States, and these Homeland Security grant programs were created specifically to address those threats. Distributing terrorism response funding without regard to risk is not wise, it is not cost effective, it is not in the best interest of our homeland security.

These resources should go where they are needed, where there is the greatest threat and risk of terrorism. They should not go—they should not be distributed based on a funding formula that does not take the risk of terrorism into account. These grants must be treated differently from other Federal formula grants. We cannot just spread the wealth equally across the Nation because not all areas of the country face the same risk.

Therefore I am offering this amendment to strike, to eliminate the State minimums and to distribute these grants in a manner that addresses the highest priority threats and vulnerabilities of the Nation. This amendment carried forward the recommendation of the 9/11 Commission. It would offer the money based on a threat based analysis by the Secretary of Homeland Security by eliminating the State minimums. The fact is all our States have needs, but they do not have equal security needs. The money should go where the threat is highest, and we'll leave that judgment to the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security.

I think in the interest of the national security we should pass this amendment and make this bill consistent with the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. I urge my colleagues to adopt the amendment. I thank the chairman, and I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

The gentleman from New York is correct that we debated the issue of State minimum allocations during our sequential referral on H.R. 3266 which was the First Responder bill that was originally considered by the Select Committee on Homeland Security. The current State minimum is 0.75 percent, and when the Judiciary Committee reported out H.R. 3266, everybody, including my friend from New York who is offering this amendment, knew that this issue would be subject to further negotiation in order to be able to get something passed through both Houses and signed into law.

The two-tier system, which the Nadler amendment proposes to strike out, basically undoes the result of this negotiation, and makes this bill much more difficult to pass, particularly in the other body where each State has the same number of Senators.

I would point out that this issue was debated in the other body, and one of the issues before the other body was to reduce the current 0.75 percent State minimum, and even the junior Senator from New York realized that a State minimum was necessary in order to get the political support to get the legislation passed.

I think the compromise that was worked out following this Committee's report with the two-tier system, where States that do have international borders have a 0.45 percent minimum, is an acceptable splitting of the difference, and helps improve the current formula. And I would point out that if no legislation passes, then what will happen is that the current law of 0.75 percent is maintained. This moves in a significant direction to improving how the formula is disbursed, and it is something that is practical and passable and I would urge the retention of that language in the bill and the rejection of the gentleman from New York's amendment.

The gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. The chair makes a fairly compelling political case that this language is improvement over existing law, that the realities of the political composition of the Senate mean that we will never fully correspond the grants to the nature of the terrorist threat and come out with a law, and that for the sake of pocketing the improvement in the distribution of funds, we should take in mind the political realities of the situation and not—make the best, the enemy of something that's better and attainable.

I'm wondering how he applies that logic to the inclusion in this legislation of a variety of changes that we have never discussed in a Committee with respect to specific provisions involving substantive law enforcement powers and immigration removal provisions that have never been heard or never been discussed, never the subject of separate bills, and for which the Senate has quite clearly communicated that insistence on this kind of substantive change in the context of a desire to implement the 9/11 Commission with provisions that the 9/11 Commission never considered, never recommended, and has since that time, as the chair and vice chair have indicated, will be more likely to kill any legislation during this congressional session.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. I'm wondering how he reconciles those two positions. I would be happy to yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Committee has had 42 hearings and markups since 9/11 on immigration proposals and 46 hearings and markups on law enforcement proposals since 9/11, and I think that the whole gamut of proposals have been heard and have been debated by members of the Committee. The fact of the matter remains is that if all the 9/11 Commission recommendations that are enacted have to do with the restructuring on how intelligence is collected and disseminated, and we don't deal with law enforcement and immigration issues, we basically can peel off the back part of the 9/11 Commission recommendations and say that things are fine and we can do business as usual.

Time Magazine just the last couple of weeks talked about our porous borders, and unless we figure out a way to plug our porous borders, you know, we're not going to be able to have a complete dealing with the 9/11 Commission report. I certainly can justify including immigration and law enforcement provisions in this, which we have debated almost ad nauseam. The time has come to do the right thing, and I think that most of the provisions of the bill do the right thing.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

First of all, I would suggest some of the immigration, some of the other provisions make sense. Some of them I'm not so sure of, and we should consider them, but we should consider them in a bill separately from this because this bill should be to implement the 9/11 Commission report, and it shouldn't get hung up on some of these other things, some of which may make sense and some of which may not. We should consider that separately.

But secondly, the chairman's objection to my amendment, namely the political reality of getting it through the Senate, the Senate is the other body. We will have to go to conference with them. We will pass a bill that is not word for word identical with the bill they pass, obviously, we'll go to conference. If they don't like the fact that we don't have State minimums and they insist on it, we can conference that, but we will certainly come out with something closer to our position, closer to the position of the 9/11 Commission of distributing the money based on threat, not based on geography. If we start out with a no State minimum position, if we start out with a threat-based distribution instead of a geography based pork barrel distribution, as the 9/11 Commission recommended, we'll be in better position at the conference than if we yield before we even start negotiating with them.

So the chairman may be correct that we have to compromise with the Senate eventually, but we should start with a strong position by passing my amendment, and not start by yielding the heart of it before we even negotiate with the Senate, and that's normally the way we operate.

I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I yield back to him.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank the gentleman's comments, and I have only added—the chairman simply isn't accurate when he indicates that we have had bills and hearings on each of the very many subjects in the law enforcement and immigration spheres of these bills that are presented by this bill that we're asked to act on in 2 days without witnesses, without a chance to even talk with the Justice Department and ask questions to them, without getting a description of the implications of these changes. It just isn't so. We haven't had a hearing on the question of eliminating the rights of torture victims to assert their claims prior to deportation. That has not been before this Committee. All of a sudden it appears in the context of this legislation.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired. The question is on the—

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WATT. I'm going to support Mr. Nadler's amendment. It does seem to me as a political matter to bring votes to the bill you have to have the votes to pass the bill, but if the substance that everybody agrees is contrary to the politics, it seems to me that we ought be trying to do the right substantive thing, and if this bill were all about passing the bill and the politics of it, I agree with my friend from California that there are a number of issues in this bill that the politics suggest are there in an effort to prevent the bill from being passed.

We had a long hearing in the Commercial and Administrative Law Subcommittee, at which virtually uniform opposition arose, bipartisan opposition arose to a national database or a national ID system which this bill now moves us heavily toward with a national database on driver's licenses. I think you're going to find that there is substantial opposition to that, so if this bill is about trying to find a political balance that will bring people to the bill, then I think there are a number of things here that are going to drive people away from the bill in addition to the absence of a State minimum.

So I guess what I'm saying is we can either do politics or we can do substance, and if we're going to do one, let's do it. If we're going to do the other one, let's do it, but at least let's be consistent in what we're trying to do here. If this bill is all about politics, which I really do now believe that it is because it has very little to do with what the 9/11 Commission has recommended and much, much more to do with an agenda which expands the PATRIOT Act, which limits judicial and administrative review of revoked visas, that provides exceptions to the UN Convention Against Torture, that creates a national database on driver's licenses, that fails to set up at this point at least the civil liberties board that the 9/11 Commission was directly recommending, then I don't know where all of these things are coming from. They certainly are not coming out of the 9/11 Commission report.

And at the end of the day everybody's going to be waving the flag saying we did what the 9/11 Commission suggested that we do, when in fact everybody will have played out their own separate agenda to get whatever they want in this bill, and if it goes down, then everybody will be blaming everybody else, and I guess our chairman will be saying, well, we made a great deal to bring votes to this bill because we put this provision that gave a minimum level of funding for grants, so we're buying people off in States that don't even have a security or a terrorism risk to try to bring people to the bill.

So I think I'm going to opt in favor of substance rather than politics. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time is expired.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, thank you very much. I too rise in support of Mr. Nadler's initiative, and I think that we should be clear in this Committee not to mix apples and oranges, and that is to amass a massive opposition to the suggestion that the vulnerability test of terrorist attack is a more valid test than any other. I think that we should make it clear that this legislation does not undermine safety in cities that do not fall under that standard or cities or rural areas or counties that may not fall under that standard, because in passing Mr. Nadler's amendment, it does not eliminate the responsibility of the Federal Government to generally provide security. It doesn't eliminate the responsibility of the Federal Government to support an ongoing program that has been in jeopardy here in this Congress, the Cops on the Beat program. It doesn't eliminate the responsibility of the Federal Government to continue to infuse Justice Department dollars, security dollars into these local areas.

And I think when we debate this and begin to think of Homeland Security dollars as general security monies going into local jurisdictions, we begin to think we're making one part of the country more unsafe than the other.

This amendment speaks clearly to the idea that we understand vulnerability and we understand cities that have the highest propensity for terrorist attacks. Why would you jeopardize the whole of the United States by not allowing those cities to have the fullest of resources to be able to protect not only those parameters, but the Nation's parameters? When you protect those vulnerable cities, you protect the United States of America. Those cities fall throughout the States. They fall in the East Coast. They fall in the Midwest. They fall in places like Texas in particular. They fall in California. They fall all over because they have a particular vulnerability that draws the visibility that sometimes terrorists need.

I can't imagine that we would not support this amendment. I also have a concern that has not yet been expressed, and I plan to provide an amendment on that subsequently as we move to the floor, and that is, the question of layers and layers and layers of bureaucracy before the monies can even get to the State. I recall the debate on 9/11nd the need for getting monies to New York, and I recall the long, delayed, protracted debate on that. In addition, I still raise the question whether New York ever got its full amount on the tragedy of 9/11.

The same thing bears for translating dollars to the source. We use the State formula, and when you use the State formula, if you can believe it, in my State of Texas, you're sitting around months and months and months filling out application forms to the State government while they sit around months and months and months later trying to make decisions on who gets the money. The system is broken. We're not really facing the horrific challenge that we have, and let me just clearly say, since that was a pariah statement, no, America is not more safe in the backdrop of the capture of Saddam Hussein. We're glad he's captured, but it doesn't mean anything much to the United States of America and its safety of its people.

And the 9/11 Commission made it very clear we need to do the work that really ensures America being safe. We're not doing that. Platitudes, sound bites, grandstanding, and of course, I welcome this legislative initiative, but it's clear that it's—chairman's mark doesn't have any input to relevance to the 9/11 Commission's report, none whatsoever. But the point is we're giving the impression to the American people that we're answering the questions, and we're not. We're not answering the questions or why TSA allowed a number of weapons to get through our airports. We're not answering the question of why the FBI is 120,000 hours behind in reviewing intelligence reports. We're not doing any of that. And we're certainly not making our cities safer that are vulnerable by giving the impression by not supporting Mr. Nadler's amendment that we're making America less secure. No, we're not. We still have the responsibility of making sure that crime doesn't proliferate on our cities, and we have the responsibility of securing America.

This amendment deals with threats of terrorist acts, the vulnerabilities that go to the very core of survival in this Nation. I ask my colleagues to support this amendment, and I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. I'm going to ask for a recorded vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. rollcall will be ordered pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)1, further proceedings will be postponed.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from Tennessee Mrs. Blackburn.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

AN ACT

To permit reviews of criminal records of applicants for private security officer employment.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the 'Private Security Officer Employment Authorization Act of 2003'.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that--

- (1) employment of private security officers in the United States is growing rapidly;
- (2) private security officers function as an adjunct to, but not a replacement for, public law enforcement by helping to reduce and prevent crime;
- (3) such private security officers protect individuals, property, and proprietary information, and provide protection to such diverse operations as banks, hospitals, research and development centers, manufacturing facilities, defense and aerospace contractors, high technology businesses, nuclear power plants, chemical companies, oil and gas refineries, airports, communication facilities and operations, office complexes, schools, residential properties, apartment complexes, gated communities, and others;
- (4) sworn law enforcement officers provide significant services to the citizens of the United States in its public areas, and are supplemented by private security officers;
- (5) the threat of additional terrorist attacks requires cooperation between public and private sectors and demands professional, reliable, and responsible security officers for the protection of people, facilities, and institutions;
- (6) the trend in the Nation toward growth in such security services has accelerated rapidly;
- (7) such growth makes available more public sector law enforcement officers to combat serious and violent crimes, including terrorism;
- (8) the American public deserves the employment of qualified, well-trained private security personnel as an adjunct to sworn law enforcement officers; and

(9) private security officers and applicants for private security officer positions should be thoroughly screened and trained.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) EMPLOYEE- The term 'employee' includes both a current employee and an applicant for employment as a private security officer.

(2) AUTHORIZED EMPLOYER- The term 'authorized employer' means any person that--

(A) employs private security officers; and

(3) PRIVATE SECURITY OFFICER- The term 'private security officer'--

(A) means an individual other than an employee of a Federal, State, or local government, whose primary duty is to perform security services, full- or part-time, for consideration, whether armed or unarmed and in uniform or plain clothes (except for services excluded from coverage under this Act if the Attorney General determines by regulation that such exclusion would serve the public interest); but

(B) does not include--

(i) employees whose duties are primarily internal audit or credit functions;

(ii) employees of electronic security system companies acting as technicians or monitors; or

(iii) employees whose duties primarily involve the secure movement of prisoners.

(4) SECURITY SERVICES- The term 'security services' means acts to protect people or property as defined by regulations promulgated by the Attorney General.

(a) IN GENERAL-

then insert a new section:

Task Force on Clearinghouse for IAFIS Criminal History Records. --

Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall establish a task force to examine the establishment of a national clearinghouse to process IAFIS criminal history record requests received directly from employers providing private security guard services with respect to critical infrastructure (as defined in section 1016(e) of Public Law 107-56 (42 U.S.C. 5195c(e)) and other private security guard services. Members of this task force shall include representatives of the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in consultation with representatives of the security guard industry. Not later than 90 days after the establishment of the task force, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report outlining how the national clearinghouse shall be established, and specifying a date certain (within one year of the enactment of this act) by which the national clearinghouse will begin operations.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I want to thank you and Chairman Coble for your help in drafting this compromise.

The amendment is twofold. First it directs that the Attorney General establish a task force to examine the issues surrounding the establishment of a national clearinghouse to process criminal history requests for the private security industry. Second, the amendment acknowledges that there is an immediate need for the private security industry to have access to criminal background information. And this amendment incorporates language from S. 1743, which passed the Senate by unanimous consent last year.

This approach relies on the existing State identification bureau system because this industry is regulated at the State level in 40 States. It respects State laws where they exist, and only imposes a Federal standard for disqualifying criminal records when the State has no law on the subject. It also respects the right of a State to opt out of the system, although we would hope that no State would choose to do so. This approach has received the approval of State based organizations including the National Association of Attorneys General, and the International Association of Security and Investigative Regulators. Private security companies and their employees protect the vast majority of our Nation's critical infrastructure including our power plants, water treatment facilities and our telecommunications facilities. Knowing whether these individuals have a disqualifying background is critical to our national security and to our homeland security.

The bill also respects the rights of the employees in the private security industry. It requires the consent of an employee or employment applicant, before the criminal history information check can be made. It restricts the determination that an employer receives to a finding of employability or not. It does not provide raw FBI criminal history information to employers. It requires an employer to provide the criminal history response it receives to the employee, and it contains criminal penalties for the misuse of any criminal history information.

The bill has the approval of the two private security industry associations and was drafted to address the principal issues raised by the employee rights organizations.

Mr. Chairman, I thank you for your help in this matter. I yield back and encourage adoption of the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Tennessee, Mrs. Blackburn. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it and the amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments? Gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, I'm—

Mr. NADLER. I don't know if it's a point of order, but could I be recognized for a moment?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from New York seek recognition?

Mr. NADLER. To make the comment, you know, we just postponed the vote pursuant to the chairman's announcement before. It seems to me the Committee's all here. We seem to be all here—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Some members of the Committee are not here, and the chair doesn't like telling all the members that there's going to be one game plan on how to vote and some of the members may have gone off to other Committee meetings or elsewhere, and then saying that we're going to have immediate votes after they have left.

So the chair doesn't want to have an audible if they're relying on this.

Are there further amendments? The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk. It's the Watt/Nadler/Schiff amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the designated amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Mr. Watt, Mr. Nadler and Mr. Schiff. At the appropriate place—

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Messrs. Watt, Nadler and Schiff follows:]

Amendment to H.R. 10

(n) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS- There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

Mr. WATT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The 9/11 Commission recommended, quote, "that there should be a board within the Executive Branch to oversee adherence to the guidelines recommended by the Commission and the commitment that the Government makes to defend our civil liberties." The 9/11 Commission also recommended that in the course of determining guidelines for information sharing among Government agencies within the private sector, the President, quote, "should safeguard the privacy of individuals about whom information is shared."

Finally, the Commission indicated that, quote: The burden of proof for retaining a particular government power should be on the executive to explain: (a) that the powers actually materially enhances security, and (b) that there is adequate supervision of the Executive's powers to ensure protection of civil liberties. Close quote.

When considered as a whole, these recommendations call for a board to oversee adherence to presidential guidelines on information sharing that safeguard individual privacy and civil liberties, and adherence to guidelines on the continued use of powers in the name of security.

This amendment establishes such an independent board within the Executive Branch. Last month, by Executive Order, President Bush created something similar by creating within the Department of Justice something called the President's Board on Safeguarding American Civil Liberties. That was under Executive Order 13353. This board is essentially an advisory board charged with advising the President on matters of civil liberties policy and possible violation of such policies by Federal officers. Therefore I believe that other proposals attempting to implement the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission that have called for the creation of a board within the Executive Office of the President may overlap with or duplicate certain functions of the board established by this Executive Order, but it needs to be something that has more teeth to it and more independence.

My amendment establishes the type of independent watchdog envisioned by the 9/11 Commission to oversee all Executive Branch policies taken in the name of security to ensure that civil liberties and privacy interests of American citizens are protected. The key features of this board would be that it would be bipartisan, it would have staggered membership of 5 members, it would ensure balance of political affiliation, ensure that partisanship not influence the important work of the board, and I am delighted that Mr. Schiff and Mr. Nadler have joined in this amendment, and I hope that—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman from North Carolina yield?

Mr. WATT. Happy to yield to the chair.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. This is the first time we have seen this amendment, and I know I speak for most of the members of the majority that we are not opposed to this amendment in principle, but there may have to be some perfecting modifications to be made to it before we can agree to it. If I can make the suggestion that the gentleman from North Carolina withdraw this amendment without prejudice so that perhaps we can work over the next hour or so to see if we can reach some kind of an agreement on it, we may get something out of it.

Mr. WATT. Reclaiming my time, I'm happy to do that, but I offered to do that before I offered the amendment, and I thought the agreement was that I was going to offer the amendment, you were going to support it, and we were going to try to make the perfecting amendments between now and the time the bill got to the floor.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, I don't know—

Mr. WATT. If the chairman prefers to do it the other way, I mean I want to be—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I think it would be a much cleaner way of doing it. By setting this amendment aside without prejudice, trying to work something out, then perhaps bringing up a revised amendment that everybody can—

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to do that. I'd rather do it on a bipartisan basis. I thought it was doing what I had been authorized to do, and empowered to do.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The amendment is withdrawn. Are there further amendments? The gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Berman. Amend Section 2001, page 117, lines 5 through 11, to read as follows and to conform the table of contents accordingly. Section 2001—

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered, and the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

7 (a) PRESUMPTION.—(1) The Foreign Intelligence
8 Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801 et seq.) is 9 amended by inserting after section 101 the following new
10 section:

11 “PRESUMPTION OF TREATMENT OF CERTAIN NON-
12 UNITED STATES PERSONS ENGAGED IN INTER-
13 NATIONAL TERRORISM AS AGENTS OF FOREIGN POW-
14 ERS

15 “SEC. 101A. Upon application by the Federal official
16 applying for an order under this Act, the court may pre-
17 sume that a non-United States person who is knowingly
18 engaged in sabotage or international terrorism, or activi-

1 ties that are in preparation therefor, is an agent of a for-
2 eign power under section 101(b)(2)(C).”.

3 (2) The table of contents for that Act is amended
4 by inserting after the item relating to section 101 the fol-
5 lowing new item:

“Sec. 101A. Presumption of treatment of certain non-United States persons engaged in international terrorism as agents of foreign powers.”.

6 (b) SUNSET.—The amendments made by subsection
7 (a) shall be subject to the sunset provision in section 224
8 of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001 (Public Law 107–56;
9 115 Stat. 295), including the exception provided in sub-
10 section (b) of such section 224.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment in the hopes that between now and the time from—as a result of the discussion of the amendment and the time between now and the rollcall on the amendment, the majority will come to see that this amendment is consistent and complementary and strengthens what the majority is trying to do.

In Title II, Section 2001, the majority is seeking to allow FISA warrants against lone-wolf terrorists, and there are certainly—a non-citizen “Unabomber” for example, that situation. And it seems to me there is a legitimate concern here that we should be interested in fixing. This amendment would take a somewhat different approach for reasons that I think make it more likely that our effort will be upheld constitutionally and I’d like to explain why.

Section 2001 of H.R. 10 would authorize FISA surveillance against non-U.S. persons with no showing that they are acting on behalf of a foreign terrorist organization or government, in other words, not an agent of a foreign power. The lower standard for surveillance in FISA is only consistent with the Fourth Amendment because it is limited to use against foreign powers and their agents.

What this amendment would do is apply the PATRIOT Act sunset provision to the changes it makes in FISA. I agree with the goal, but I’m concerned that it will not be upheld by the courts. Federal law enforcement needs to have tools necessary to pursue so-called lone wolf terrorists. But we have to do it in a way that will not undermine potential criminal prosecutions that result from surveillance under FISA. We went to great lengths in the PATRIOT Act, and I supported that portion of the PATRIOT Act that broke down the laws that allowed information gathered under FISA surveillance to be shared with law enforcement. As written, Section 2001 requires only a showing or probable cause that the person is engaged in—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. Yes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I am prepared to support this amendment because this is permissive and alternative, because it said, “Upon application by a Federal official for a FISA order a court may presume that a non-United States person is knowingly engaged in sabotage or international terrorism.” It doesn’t have to presume it. It doesn’t have to presume the opposite, but I think it would make it easier to get FISA warrants rather than a criminal warrant which requires a showing of probable cause. So I think this amendment is a helpful addition to the bill.

Mr. BERMAN. I thank you, and I accept your acceptance, and urge its adoption, and will stop talking.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, if everybody else will stop talking, the question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Berman. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it and the amendment is agreed to.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Chairman, chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Are there further amendments?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment numbered 152 at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Schiff. At the end of Section 2052 in Subtitle D of Title II, add the following new subsection, E, Enhancing Prosecution—

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, request the amendment be deemed as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered, and the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Schiff follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY MR. SCHIFF

At the end of Section 2052 in subtitle D of title II, add the following new subsection:

(e) Enhancing Prosecution of Weapons of Mass Destruction Offenses.

(1) Section 1961(1)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“sections 175-178 (relating to biological weapons), sections 229-229F (relating to chemical weapons), section 831 (relating to nuclear materials),”

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, this is a simple amendment that would attempt to use the power of the RICO statute to attack the problem of weapons of mass destruction offenses. RICO has proved an invaluable tool for investigators and prosecutors to deal with a wide range of organized criminal activity from racketeering to drug crimes to a whole host of other offenses. Regrettably, we now need to be concerned about criminal enterprises dovetailing with efforts to develop weapons of mass destruction. If we can utilize the power of RICO to attack this problem to the length and breadth of jurisdiction of the United States in dealing with any kind of a criminal enterprise like—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, I would be glad to yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I'm prepared to accept this amendment as well because it does provide enhanced penalties for this type of activity.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I thank you, and on that basis will yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The amendment is agreed to.

Further amendments?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. 275XML. I think it begins on page 220.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be accepted as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Not accepted, but if it's considered as read——

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I'd love it to be accepted as read. I thought you wouldn't hear it.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Nice try. The gentlewoman's recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H. R. 10
OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE OF TEXAS

Page 220, strike lines 9 through 20 and insert the following:

1 (2) VERIFICATION OF DOCUMENTS.—To meet
 2 the requirements of this section, before issuing a
 3 driver’s license or identification card to a person, a
 4 State shall verify, with the issuing agency, the 5 issuance, validity, and completeness of each docu-
 6 ment required to be presented by the person under 7 paragraph (1).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The subsection of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act would prohibit the States from accepting any foreign document other than an official passport to meet the documentary identification requirements for a State issued identification card or a driver’s license.

Recent estimates indicate that we have between 8 and 14 million undocumented aliens in the United States. Subsection 3052 would prevent many of them from getting driver’s licenses. While I understand the arguments that undocumented aliens are here unlawfully, should not be accorded the privilege of having a driver’s license, the analysis of the problem should not stop with that observation. The reality is that the undocumented aliens will drive even if they cannot get a driver’s license, and they do not equal terrorists. As we well know, the 9/11 terrorists came in with passports and visas and other documented information. For most people it is virtually impossible to survive in our society without a car. It is unrealistic to expect the undocumented aliens to give up and leave the country when they find out they cannot get a driver's license.

In addition, this matter can be handled by the States as it has already been done. A driver's license is not just a privilege for the driver's benefit, it also serves State purposes. By licensing drivers the State can ensure that the drivers who receive licenses have acceptable driving skills, know traffic laws, and the liability insurance. In addition it is a form of documentation. In addition, registering and photographing all drivers helps the State to monitor the driving records along with many others.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death for persons age 6 to 33 with more than 40,000 traffic fatalities each year. According to a study conducted by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, unlicensed drivers are five times more likely to be in fatal crashes than drivers with valid license.

I would also indicate that documentation in our new system of data collection allows us to be more safe because it provides another line of communication in terms of looking at individuals for any activities that may be jeopardizing the safety of the American people. Denying driver's licenses will not prevent terrorism. Proponents of restrictions on immigrants have linked driver's licenses to security concerns by pointing out that many of the 9/11 hijackers were able to obtain licensing. Requiring passports to obtain driver's licenses would not have prevented the hijackers from getting driver's licenses. They all had passports.

This is not a means of safety. It is a means of creating more unsafe conditions. Documentation allows tracking and the driver's license exclusion does not assist in any manner. I would urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE SHEILA JACKSON LEE, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS, AND RANKING MEMBER, SUBCOMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION, BORDER SECURITY, AND CLAIMS

Subsection 3052(c)(2)(B) of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act would prohibit the states from accepting any foreign document, other than an official passport, to meet the documentary identification requirements for a state issued identification card or a driver's license.

Recent estimates indicate that we have between 8 and 14 million undocumented aliens in the United States. Subsection 3052(c)(2)(B) would prevent many of them from getting driver's licenses. While I understand the argument that undocumented aliens are here unlawfully and should not be accorded the privilege of having driver's license, the analysis of the problem should not stop with that observation. The reality is that the undocumented aliens will drive even if they cannot get driver's licenses. For most people, it is virtually impossible to survive in our society without a car, and it is unrealistic to expect the undocumented aliens to give up and leave the country when they find out they cannot get driver's licenses.

A driver's license is not just a privilege for the driver's benefit. It also serves state purposes. By licensing drivers, the state can ensure that the drivers who receive licenses have acceptable driving skills, know traffic laws, and have liability insurance. In addition, registering and photographing all drivers helps the state to monitor driving records.

Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death for persons aged six to 33, with more than 40 thousand traffic fatalities each year. According to a study conducted by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, unlicensed drivers are five times more likely to be in fatal crashes than drivers with valid licenses.

Denying driver's licenses will not prevent terrorism. Proponents of restrictions on immigrants have linked driver's licenses to security concerns by pointing out that many of the 9/11 hijackers were able to obtain licenses. Requiring passports to obtain a driver's license would not have prevented the hijackers from getting driver's licenses. They all had passports.

I urge you to vote for this amendment to remove subsection 3052(c)(2)(B) from the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act. Thank you.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

What this amendment does is it strikes the provision on page 220 of the bill that says that States shall not accept any foreign document other than an official passport to satisfy the requirement of paragraph 1, which relates to the verification of documents.

One of the things that this Congress has attempted to do is to provide for more secure passports and visas, not only United States passports and visas issued to citizens of foreign countries coming here, but also to request biometric identifiers in passports that are issued by foreign countries for presentation to immigration inspectors of people who are entering into this country. Now, those are the most secure documents that are available and they are becoming much more secure as a result of the biometric identifier requirement kicking in now at the end of 2005.

What the amendment of the gentlewoman from Texas seeks to do is to state that a State, when it issues a driver's license to an applicant who is not a United States citizen, or a permanent resident who has got a green card that has been validly issued, can use any kind of real or alleged foreign identification other than a passport. I think that in order to make this process as secure as possible, given all of the other things that were done, is that the foreign citizens should be required to show a passport when getting a driver's license. That is much less likely to be forged than a document that perhaps many driver's license clerks are not familiar with when someone comes in and applies for a driver's license.

I would urge the defeat of this amendment to allow the continuation of utilizing passports for foreigners who are applying for a driver's license, and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. And I yield to the gentlelady from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the distinguished gentleman.

We are in a Judiciary Committee hearing and so the normal response would be dealing with the security question, and I believe that is important. In my earlier remarks previously, I indicated that we do not cease the responsibility of protecting our communities just because the protection issue deals on the general protection of our communities versus terrorist threats to our communities.

This response of the chairman does not respond to my issue of dealing with the rights of States to conduct and govern the ability to monitor traffic and provide licensing for those who utilize their particular communities' highways and byways. I don't believe that this amendment in any way will undermine security and protecting communities from terrorist threats. It allows a State to make an independent and unique decision. We already know that some States have already made their decisions, to the opposition to some of their constituents—but at least they have made it—governing and controlling their ability of those on the highways and byways.

Does anyone think that these individuals will not drive anyway? Does anyone even have the slightest belief that that will occur? So now we're creating enhanced havoc by not providing the States the opportunity on this minimal documentation of individuals, which is to provide the driver's license scenario and to be able to use that document.

So I would ask my colleagues to look at this on the other half of it. It provides more safety and security, particularly in the responsibilities of the State that manages their own administrative matters, particularly the idea of traffic and the ingress and egress and the utilization of the highways and byways within that.

I would ask my colleagues to support this amendment. I yield back.

Mr. SCOTT. And I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the Jackson Lee amendment.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I ask for a rollcall vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. rollcall is ordered. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement under Committee Rule 2(h)1, further proceedings on this amendment will be postponed.

Are there further amendments?

The gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment numbered 150 at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Schiff.

At the appropriate place in subtitle D of title II, insert the following new section.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I request that the amendment be deemed as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Schiff follows:]

SCHIFF.150

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY MR. SCHIFF

At the appropriate place in subtitle D of title II, insert the following new section:

SEC. ____ . PROLIFERATION OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(a) FINDINGS— Consistent with the report of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States, Congress makes the following findings:

- (1) Al Qaeda has tried to acquire or make weapons of mass destruction since 1994 or earlier.
- (2) The United States doubtless would be a prime target for use of any such weapon by al Qaeda.
- (3) Although the United States Government has redoubled its international commitments to supporting the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction and other nonproliferation assistance programs, nonproliferation experts continue to express deep concern about the United States Government's commitment and approach to securing the weapons of mass destruction and related highly dangerous materials that are still scattered among Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union.
- (4) The cost of increased investment in the prevention of proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and related dangerous materials is greatly outweighed by the potentially catastrophic cost to the United States of use of weapons of mass destruction or related dangerous materials by the terrorists who are so eager to acquire them.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS— It is the sense of Congress that—

- (1) maximum effort to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, wherever such proliferation may occur, is warranted; and
- (2) the programs of the United States Government to prevent or counter the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, including the Proliferation Security Initiative, the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other nonproliferation assistance programs, should be expanded, improved, and better funded to address the global dimensions of the proliferation threat.

(c) REQUIREMENT FOR STRATEGY— Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress—

SCHIFF.150

(1) a strategy for expanding and strengthening the Proliferation Security Initiative, the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other nonproliferation assistance programs; and

(2) an estimate of the funding necessary to execute that strategy.

(d) REPORT ON REFORMING THE COOPERATIVE THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM AND OTHER NON-PROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS- Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report evaluating whether the United States could more effectively address the global threat of nuclear proliferation by--

(1) establishing a central coordinator for the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction;

(2) eliminating the requirement that the President spend no more than $50,000,000 annually on programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction and other non-proliferation assistance programs carried out outside the former Soviet Union; or

(3) repealing the provisions of the Soviet Nuclear Threat Reduction Act of 1991 (22 U.S.C. 2551 note) that place conditions on assistance to the former Soviet Union unrelated to bilateral cooperation on weapons dismantlement.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, Members, this is an amendment that addresses, I think, one of the most important points raised by the 9/11 Commission, and that is the necessity of trying to stem the spread of weapons of mass destruction, and in particular adopts some of the language from the McCain-Lieberman bill in the Senate that expresses the sense of Congress that a maximum effort must be made to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, that our programs must be geared to addressing this threat, that we ought to strengthen the Proliferation Security Initiative of the President, that we ought to support and strengthen the cooperative Threat Reduction Program, as well as other non-proliferation assistance efforts.

It calls for a report to Congress, no later than 180 days after the enactment of this act, on whether we can more effectively address the global threat of nuclear proliferation by establishing a coordinator for programs of cooperative threat reduction, by eliminating the ceiling on how much the President can spend annually on cooperative threat reduction programs and other nonproliferation assistance carried out outside the former Soviet Union——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. We'll be happy to accept this amendment.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I thank you again and would yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments?

The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. NADLER. Amendment 113.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Amendment 113.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Nadler.

After Section 2187 of subtitle G of title II of the bill, insert the following and redesignate section 2188 as section 2189 and conform the table of contents of the bill accordingly.

Section 2188——

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Nadler follows:]

5 any action under paragraph (2)(A) shall be en-
6 titled to all relief necessary to make the person
7 whole.

8 (B) COMPENSATORY DAMAGES.—Relief for 9 any action under subparagraph (A) shall 10 include—

11 (i) reinstatement with the same se-
12 niority status that the person would have 13 had, but for the discrimination;

14 (ii) the amount of any back pay, with 15 interest; and

16 (iii) compensation for any special
17 damages sustained as a result of the dis-
18 crimination, including litigation costs, ex-
19 pert witness fees, and reasonable attorney
20 fees.

21 (4) RIGHTS RETAINED BY PERSON.—Nothing
22 in this subsection shall be deemed to diminish the 23 rights, privileges, or remedies of any person under 24 any Federal or State law, or under any collective 25 bargaining agreement.

1 (e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following defi-
2 nitions apply:

3 (1) EXTREMELY HAZARDOUS MATERIAL.—The
4 term “extremely hazardous material” means—

5 (A) a material that is toxic by inhalation;

6 (B) a material that is extremely flam-
7 mable;

8 (C) a material that is highly explosive; and

9 (D) any other material designated by the 10 Secretary to be extremely hazardous.

11 (2) AREA OF CONCERN.—The term “area of 12 concern” means an area that the Secretary deter-
13 mines could pose a particular interest to terrorists.

At the end of subtitle H of title II, insert the following new section:

14 SEC. 2194. NUCLEAR FACILITY THREATS.

15 (a) STUDY.—The President, in consultation with the 16 Nuclear Regulatory Commission and other appropriate
17 Federal, State, and local agencies and private entities,
18 shall conduct a study to identify the types of threats that 19 pose an appreciable risk to the security of the various 20 classes of facilities licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory 21 Commission under the Atomic Energy Act of 1954. Such 22 study shall take into account, but not be limited to—

23 (1) the events of September 11, 2001;

1 (2) an assessment of physical, cyber, bio-
2 chemical, and other terrorist threats;

3 (3) the potential for attack on facilities by mul-
4 tiple coordinated teams of a large number of individ-
5 uals;

6 (4) the potential for assistance in an attack
7 from several persons employed at the facility;

8 (5) the potential for suicide attacks;

9 (6) the potential for water-based and air-based 10 threats;

11 (7) the potential use of explosive devices of con-
12 siderable size and other modern weaponry;

13 (8) the potential for attacks by persons with a
14 sophisticated knowledge of facility operations;

15 (9) the potential for fires, especially fires of 16 long duration; and

17 (10) the potential for attacks on spent fuel
18 shipments by multiple coordinated teams of a large
19 number of individuals.

20 (b) SUMMARY AND CLASSIFICATION REPORT.—Not 21 later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of 22 this Act, the President shall transmit to the Congress and 23 the Nuclear Regulatory Commission a report—

24 (1) summarizing the types of threats identified
25 under subsection (a); and

1 (2) classifying each type of threat identified
2 under subsection (a), in accordance with existing
3 laws and regulations, as either—

4 (A) involving attacks and destructive acts,
5 including sabotage, directed against the facility
6 by an enemy of the United States, whether a
7 foreign government or other person, or other-
8 wise falling under the responsibilities of the 9 Federal Government; or

10 (B) involving the type of risks that Nu-
11 clear Regulatory Commission licensees should 12 be responsible for guarding against.

13 (c) FEDERAL ACTION REPORT.—Not later than 90
14 days after the date on which a report is transmitted under 15 subsection (b), the President shall transmit to the Con-
16 gress a report on actions taken, or to be taken, to address
17 the types of threats identified under subsection (b)(2)(A).
18 Such report may include a classified annex as appropriate.

19 (d) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 270 days after 20 the date on which a report is transmitted under subsection
21 (b), the Nuclear Regulatory Commission shall issue regu-
22 lations, including changes to the design basis threat, to 23 ensure that licensees address the threats identified under 24 subsection (b)(2)(B).

1 (e) PHYSICAL SECURITY PROGRAM.—The Nuclear
2 Regulatory Commission shall establish an operational
3 safeguards response evaluation program that ensures that
4 the physical protection capability and operational safe-
5 guards response for sensitive nuclear facilities, as deter-
6 mined by the Commission consistent with the protection
7 of public health and the common defense and security,
8 shall be tested periodically through Commission designed,
9 observed, and evaluated force-on-force exercises to deter-
10 mine whether the ability to defeat the design basis threat
11 is being maintained. The exercises shall be conducted by 12 a mock terrorist team consisting of Commission personnel
13 with advanced knowledge of special weapons and tactics
14 comparable to special operations forces of the Armed 15 Forces. For purposes of this subsection, the term “sen-
16 sitive nuclear facilities” includes at a minimum commer-
17 cial nuclear power plants, including associated spent fuel
18 storage facilities, spent fuel storage pools and dry cask
19 storage at closed reactors, independent spent fuel storage
20 facilities and geologic repository operations areas, category
21 I fuel cycle facilities, and gaseous diffusion plants. There
22 are authorized to be appropriated to the Nuclear Regu-
23 latory Commission $3,000,000 for the purposes of car-
24 rying out this subsection.

1 (f) CONTROL OF INFORMATION.—In carrying out this
2 section, the President and the Nuclear Regulatory Com-
3 mission shall control the dissemination of restricted data,
4 safeguards information, and other classified national secu-
5 rity information in a manner so as to ensure the common
6 defense and security, consistent with chapter 12 of the 7 Atomic Energy Act of 1954.

Amend the table of contents accordingly.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This amendment is taken from amendments that Mr. Markey has introduced in the past to improve our national security by strengthening the protection of the transportation of hazardous materials and securing nuclear facilities.

The 9/11 Commission recommends that we do more to secure our country from terrorist attacks, and I am concerned that this Administration and this Congress have not done enough to make our country safe. For more than 2 years I have been advocating that we should secure the loose weapons-grade nuclear material, that we should insist that every shipping container entering the United States be inspected, that we should protect our airlines from shoulder-fired missiles; but this has not been done. For more than a year I have been told by every security expert in the field that we must also harden our nuclear and chemical plants so they are not prime targets of terrorists.

This amendment is a very modest step in the right direction, but it is very modest in its aims, and I hope that today, at least, we can come together and agree that more must be done to protect our nuclear facilities and to assure safer transportation of certain extremely hazardous materials that can have deadly effects should they become the target of terrorist attack.

The section of this amendment on nuclear security simply directs DHS to assess the threat nuclear reactors face in light of the events of September 11, something that the critical infrastructure protection part of DHS should be doing anyway, and then inform both Congress and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission what the Federal Government role should be in protecting these plants.

According to Mr. Markey's office, who drafted a very similar amendment, the House has voted on this portion of the amendment at least twice before. It was contained—it was inserted, I should say, by vote of the House, into H.R. 60 energy bill and also was included in Mr. Markey's successful motion to instruct conferees on the energy bill last fall. It is bipartisan consensus language that has been approved twice by the House, that represents a common-sense approach to the Homeland Security Department's role in ensuring the security of nuclear reactors. Since the energy bill does not seem to be going anywhere at the moment, it makes sense to adopt these important provisions here to make sure that we do what is right to protect our nuclear facilities from attack.

Secondly, the amendment calls for physical security measures surrounding shipments of extremely hazardous materials, including extra security guards and surveillance technologies, prenotification of extremely hazardous materials shipments to local law enforcement authorities, coordination between Federal, State, and local authorities to create a response plan for a terrorist attack on an extremely hazardous materials shipment, the use of currently available technologies to ensure effective and immediate communication between shippers of extremely hazardous materials, law enforcement authorities and first responders, and rerouting of shipments of extremely hazardous materials that currently travel through areas of concern, as defined by the Secretary.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is very important. Enough chlorine gas is contained in rail tankers that are traveling a few blocks away from this building that we are sitting in right now as well, as through all of our districts, that would kill 100,000 people in half an hour if one of them was punctured. That's a staggering thought, and I hope there will be no dissent about this amendment as a result of that remarkable fact. This was featured on an ABC News documentary showing these cars passing on a rail line, with the Capitol Dome in the background, about 2 weeks ago.

The Department of Transportation has historically had jurisdiction over the transportation of hazardous materials. However, after September 11, Congress agreed the Department of Homeland Security had a role to play as well. That is why we set up at TSA to handle aviation security. That is why DHS is conducting a security assessment for DC area rail shipments. DHS is expected to draw from the extensive work already done by the Department of Transportation in the area of classifying hazardous materials.

This amendment applies only to extremely hazardous materials, those that are toxic by inhalation, that are highly explosive, and are highly flammable. It would impact an extremely small percentage of hazardous shipments. It does not single out any mode of transportation. It applies to all shipments of extremely hazardous materials by rail, truck, or other mode.

The rulemaking DHS is required to undertake explicitly calls for the input of all stakeholders, including other Federal, State, and local agencies, the industry, unions, and members of the public. Re-routing of shipments is required only when they go through areas of concern as designated by the Secretary, and only then when DHS finds that there is a safer route available.

I urge the adoption of this amendment in order to make sure that DHS properly hardens our nuclear facilities—properly conducts a survey, I should say, of our nuclear facilities to harden them against terrorist attack and does the same with respect to shipments of extremely hazardous materials—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. NADLER.—these extremely hazardous materials.

I think the chairman and yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Smith, seek recognition?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I have a couple of questions for the gentleman from New York if he would like to respond.

On page 1 of your amendment under Section 2188, page 1—

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I can't hear the gentleman.

Mr. SMITH. I'm sorry. I'll talk more slowly as well.

On the first page of your amendment, under Rulemaking (1) In General, you mention heads of other appropriate Federal, State, and local government entities. Would that include the Attorney General?

Mr. NADLER. I believe it would.

Mr. SMITH. I assume it would.

Mr. NADLER. It would.

Mr. SMITH. Okay. Okay, I'm being advised to ask you if you would be willing to specifically designate the Attorney General.

Mr. NADLER. Sure.

Mr. SMITH. Okay, second question—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is so modified.

Mr. SMITH. On page 5—

Mr. NADLER. With the proviso that doing that doesn't imply that other people are not included.

Mr. SMITH. Correct. Correct.

On page 5 of the amendment, under (d) Whistleblower Protection, I have a couple of questions there as well.

First of all, would this in any way alter the current whistleblower statute?

Mr. NADLER. It's not my intention to alter the current whistleblower statute, and I believe that when this was passed by the House in the energy bill, no one thought that it would do so.

Mr. SMITH. Okay. Do you happen to know, and I don't—do you happen to know if the original whistleblower statute includes such words as you've used here, such as "harassed"? I'm not aware—

Mr. NADLER. I can't hear you. Such as what?

Mr. SMITH. "Harassed." I'm not aware of where that word has been defined, and it could be fairly general and vague, and I'm not sure that's in the original whistleblower statute. I'm wondering if you know whether it is or not.

Mr. NADLER. We believe—I'm advised by staff, by Committee minority staff, that that word is in the original statute.

Mr. SMITH. Okay. And once again, you believe that you are not in any way altering the current whistleblower statute?

Mr. NADLER. I believe we're not. That's not the intent.

Mr. SMITH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. My questions have been answered.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Texas will yield before yielding back.

Mr. SMITH. I will yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. With those answers I think we're prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. NADLER. Okay. As modified.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler, as modified.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The amendment is modified as agreed to.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan seek recognition?

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the chair. I commend the Committee on the dispatch with which they are taking up the amendments and merely take this opportunity to point out that in the Judiciary hearing room today are Mrs. Carrie Lemack [ph] of Cambridge, Massachusetts, who lost her mother in the American Airlines Flight 11, and Mrs. Mary Fetchitt [ph], who lost her 24-year-old son. They are very deeply concerned about this bill. I'd just like them to stand up before I yield back the balance of my time.

Thank you, ladies, for being with us. [Applause.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair joins the gentleman from Michigan in welcoming you both to the Committee.

Are there further amendments?

The gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Berman of California and Mr. Delahunt of Massachusetts.

Page 211, after line 13, insert the following, and amend the table of contents accordingly.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read and the gentleman from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Messrs. Berman and Delahunt follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H. R. 10
OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN OF CALIFORNIA AND MR. DELAHUNT OF MASSACHUSETTS

Page 211, after line 13, insert the following (and amend the table of contents accordingly):

SEC. 3010. LIMITATION ON CLOSED IMMIGRATION HEARINGS.

(a) In General- Section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1229a) is amended--

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

(e) Standards for Closing Removal Hearings-

(1) IN GENERAL- Subject to paragraph (2), a removal proceeding held pursuant to this section shall be open to the public.

(2) EXCEPTIONS- Portions of a removal proceeding held pursuant to this section may be closed to the public by an immigration judge on a case by case basis, when necessary--

(A) to preserve the confidentiality of applications for asylum, withholding of removal, relief under the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 1902), or the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Prevention Act of 2000 (Public Law 106-386; 114 Stat. 1464), or other applications for relief involving confidential personal information or where portions of the removal hearing involve minors or issues relating to domestic violence, all with the consent of the alien;

(B) to prevent the disclosure of classified information that threatens the national security of the United States and the safety of the American people; or

(C) to prevent the disclosure of the identity of a confidential informant.

(3) COMPELLING GOVERNMENT INTEREST- In order for portions of removal proceedings to be closed to the public in accordance with this subsection, the government must show that such closing of the proceedings is necessitated by a compelling governmental interest and is narrowly tailored to serve that interest.

(b) Technical and Conforming Amendments- Section 240(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1229a(b)) is amended—

- (1) in paragraph (5)(C)(i), by striking 'subsection (e)(1)' and inserting 'subsection (f)(1)'; and
- (2) in paragraph (7), by striking 'subsection (e)(1)' and inserting 'subsection (f)(1)'.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment, again, not to make a point but to hope that, after consideration of the discussion, the majority might find this amendment to be acceptable.

After September 11, the chief immigration judge issued a directive that closed all immigration hearings involving special interest detainees or cases alleging links to terrorism, just a blanket closure. The state goal of this policy was to protect the privacy of the detainees and prevent information about our intelligence-gathering methods from getting out. I share those goals, but I think the chief immigration judge, Creppy—this is known as the Creppy directive—overreached in trying to achieve those goals.

The amendment I offer simply would permit the Government to request hearings be closed on a case-by-case basis to achieve the same goals that the Creppy memo laid out. Hearings under my amendment with Mr. Delahunt could be closed for preserving the confidentiality of the immigrant, to prevent disclosure of classified information that threatens national security or public safety, or prevent the disclosure of the identity of a confidential informant. In any of those situations, the Government simply has to ask the immigration judge to close the hearing.

I would argue that in America, the assumption should not be that everything needs to be closed. Where the case is made that the hearing should be closed, the Government should have the authority to make that case and closure should follow if the case is made. But this blanket closure has created all kinds of problems not simply in the context of First Amendment interests of the press in covering such hearings, even where there is no national security confidentiality, public safety, or the confidentiality of the immigrant or concern of the immigrant who is being—they're seeking deportation for, but there's—so there's a public interest in terms of press coverage. And there is a family interest. In so many cases, these families have no idea what has happened. They have no ability to go to the hearing of their family member, who could be deported as a result of the hearing.

A lot of unfairness and damage is done to all kinds of interests for no particular purpose. Where there is a purpose, we have to reach that balance and sometimes do something which the families of the detainee don't like or that even the press finds irritating.

So I just substitute in this amendment the case-by-case, giving all the possible reasons that public interest would justify closing the hearing, for the Government to seek that closure, but get rid of the blanket closure of every single hearing that has existed since the 9/11 directive came out.

That's the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Hostettler.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I thank the chairman and—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOSTETTLER.—move to strike the last word.

I must strongly oppose this amendment, Mr. Chairman, for several reasons. The amendment would tie the court's and the Government's hands in closing removal hearings to protect national security.

The main problem with this provision is that it too strictly limits the instances in which a hearing may be closed without the alien's permission. The bill only allows the Government to seek closure to protect against disclosure of classified information and the identity of a confidential informant. It is questionable but doubtful that a government attorney by law could disclose the identity of a confidential informant. It is clear, however, that Government officials are barred from disclosing classified information in a public removal proceeding. That information cannot even be disclosed to the alien respondents themselves. Thus, what would seem to be an exception to this amendment that the Government could use to protect the American people really gives no more protection than current law.

By setting such a high standard for Government closure of a removal proceeding, this amendment fails to protect the interests that are at stake when the Government closes a removal hearing. One, to protect the alien from retribution in his home country following the U.S. Government's claim that the alien is a terrorist. Two, to protect the alien in his home country after the alien makes an asylum claim against that country. Three, to protect Government witnesses from abuse after testifying publicly against a possible alien terrorist or persecutor. And four, to protect Government investigations of suspected terrorists or persecutors.

Instead, this amendment will endanger the American people by placing Government officials in the untenable position of having to decide between the protection of sensitive investigations or the removal of dangerous aliens. This is unfair to those who protect us daily.

This amendment could also allow aliens to exploit the immigration system. Among other likely scenarios, this would allow an alien to create an asylum claim for himself as follows: The alien could refuse to request closure of the asylum case, which would then be open to the public. If the Government were to allege that the alien was a terrorist, the alien could allege that he, one, had been falsely accused and two, would be persecuted if returned because our Government had accused him in an open forum of being a terrorist. An alien in York, Pennsylvania, recently raised a similar claim.

Even if the Government didn't allege that the alien was a terrorist, the alien could allege that he would be persecuted because his home government now knows that he applied for asylum. Such claims are not uncommon. Even if this claim were denied, the alien could appeal, lengthening his unlawful presence in the United States.

For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I would urge my colleagues to oppose the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time still belongs to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I'll be happy to yield a moment to Mr. Berman, and I'd like to use my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the gentlewoman strike the last word?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is now recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I yield to—

Mr. BERMAN. Well, I listened, I heard, but I did not understand. There are three provisions here which allow—which give the Government the authority to close the hearing. One is to preserve the confidentiality of applications for asylum, which is, of course, the hypothetical that you seem to be so interested in. The terrorist claims he's an asylee, thereby getting the Government he would be sent to mad at him for alleging he has a fear of persecution, and thereby persecuting him. I think, by and large, an asylee is somebody who we protect from deportation back to the country where he will be persecuted. So I don't quite understand the argument.

We allow three provisions—preventing the disclosure of the identity of a confidential informant. At every one of these hearings, an immigration judge is going to want to know what the informant was. The gentleman is making a case here that in immigration cases we should close everything because somebody who's a witness might be intimidated later, but in murder cases, rape cases, and every other case in the criminal justice system, where witnesses are always having to come forward and testify in open court about things that could be very damaging to them—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Reclaiming my time.

Mr. BERMAN.—in their own communities that none of this is of concern. There's no proportionality in the gentleman's arguments. The logic he makes is for closing every single case where anybody could be subject to any kind of shame, embarrassment, anger by people because that person chose to testify.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Reclaiming my time. And I will be happy to yield in just a moment. I want to add the fact that I think Congress has an obligation on this to make it clear that immigration courts should be open and the hearings should be open unless there is a strong justification for there not to be open hearings.

I want to again remind my colleagues that none of these amendments take away the ability for us to secure America. And I am frightened to death that we are willing to scare Americans to the point that we are prepared to give up civil liberties and the rights that we have cherished and loved and the rights that Americans are known to pride themselves in, out of security. That's what's happened in America. We have gotten Americans so frightened that the minimal of opening immigration hearings, which, as we all know, immigrants do not equate to terrorism. And for what reason, I don't know why we would be saying that to allow open hearings is going to jeopardize the safety of Americans.

And I believe that this amendment is a very positive amendment, because it has no opposition in the 9/11 Commission report, as I understand it. The criterion for the openness of an immigration hearing should be set by Congress, not by the chief immigration judge. So what the gentlemen, Mr. Berman and Mr. Delahunt, are attempting to do is just restore the fairness in the system, which has nothing to do with undermining security and finding terrorists.

We went through this before some years ago, the whole question of secret evidence. Every Muslim then was being subjected to hearings on the basis of secret evidence. I don't know how many terrorists we caught with the rule of secret evidence, but I would venture to say there was limited success denying people's rights and utilizing secret evidence.

This amendment simply allows for those in custody, already in custody, to have open hearings. Why we would discern that this is not something to do, I don't know, and I would simply ask my colleagues to support the idea of fairness in our system which allows us to represent ourselves as the defenders of the Constitution, or at least recognize that even in spite of or despite the fact that we are living in a different world, that we can have the kind of fairness that we need to have.

So I would rise to support this amendment. And I'm not sure, Mr. Berman, are you seeking to have time?

Mr. BERMAN. If you have the time.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I would yield to the distinguished gentleman from California. I ask my colleagues to support it.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Delahunt.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Yes, and I thank the chair.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DELAHUNT. You know, there was a Frenchman who in the—I think it was the mid-1800's, that traveled extensively throughout the United States and made the observation that America is great because America is good. And I would suggest that he reached that conclusion because throughout our history the concept of fairness, the concept of openness, the concept of justice and fair play and transparency has characterized us as a nation. And I'm concerned at a different level in terms of the direction that we are now finding ourselves taking.

You know, there was a recent newspaper report that during the course of an interview with the individual who is at the National Archives indicated that he is responsible for ascertaining the number of classified information, the pieces of classified information that now are withheld from the American people. The numbers were staggering. The numbers were truly staggering. I'm profoundly concerned about the issue of secrecy in this Government today, because I think we're losing something.

There have been a number of cases, I don't have them at my fingertips, in the aftermath of 9/11—individuals held in detention and then released and it was subsequently revealed that they were held improperly, that the evidence wasn't there, that it was a mistake. That's really what we're talking about. This week we heard from the Secretary of State, Colin Powell, that anti-Americanism is increasing in this country, particularly in the Islamic world. The numbers are shocking in terms of attitudes about America all over the world.

I think it's time we went back to being America, where we reinvigorate those concepts of fairness and transparency and justice. Because we're losing something. And we're losing our claim, I would suggest to my colleagues, to a certain moral authority that we have justifiably earned during the course of our history, by virtue of becoming a Government that is obsessed with secrecy.

That's why I join in this amendment with Mr. Berman. The mechanisms are there to address national security, confidentiality, all of the concerns that I think we all share on both sides of the aisle. I mean, I think that there ought to be some discretion other than just simply a blanket prohibition. It just doesn't make any sense.

You know, as a nation, we can stand up and do the right thing, do the American thing, and still protect ourselves. As someone once said, you know, the Constitution is not a suicide pact. But the amendment put forth by the gentleman from California and myself creates the mechanisms to achieve those goals and at the same time restore those values that I think are especially American in terms of their genesis, in terms of our history.

With that, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. After that, I—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. And the gentleman's time has expired.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Smith, seek recognition?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I am not sure that an unvetted amendment is the best vehicle to use to tell immigration judges how to run their court rooms.

Having said that, I'll yield to the gentleman from Indiana, the chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, Mr. Hostettler.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I would like to bring us back to the substance of the amendment. The amendment does not deal with Americans, as was earlier suggested. The amendment deals with immigration cases. And it is common today for immigration cases to be closed. In fact, all asylum proceedings and proceedings regarding inadmissibility of a particular applicant are closed today.

In fact, the amendment seeks to—wittingly or not—

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentleman yield on that, on the question of that point? Will the gentleman just yield? On what basis do you say that all immigration—

Mr. HOSTETTLER. No, all asylum cases and all cases regarding inadmissibility are closed. Asylum cases. Not all immigration cases.

Mr. BERMAN. Inadmissibility or asylum and inadmissibility?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Asylum and inadmissibility.

Mr. BERMAN. All inadmissibility cases—

Mr. HOSTETTLER. It's hard for me to say, too.

Mr. BERMAN.—are now closed?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Yes. Yes.

Mr. BERMAN. At the request of?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. No, no, no, no. At the request of the Government, excuse me.

And that's one thing that your amendment—reclaiming our time—the fact is that with regard to the confidentiality, is you add that it must be done with the consent of the alien. One of the points that the 9/11 Commission made is that this would allow the gaming of the immigration process. Because by opening up—an alien consenting or an alien requiring, essentially, as a result of your amendment, an alien requiring the open proceeding that is now closed, and an alien could make a case that they would be persecuted once they returned to the country that they—

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I don't have the time. But your amendment asks to preserve the confidentiality of applications for asylum, withholding of removal, relief under the Convention Against Torture, all—and it names several others—with the consent of the alien. And the alien can in fact not allow the proceedings to be closed, and as a result of the open proceedings and all the microphones and pens and pads of the press published across the world, the alien could then make a very logical case that they would obtain persecution in the country which we are attempting to remove them to.

Mr. BERMAN. Would the gentleman now yield for questions?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I don't have the time. But that is some of several reasons why I oppose the amendment.

I yield back the gentleman's time.

Mr. SMITH. And I yield the balance of my time, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question—

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Conyers.

Mr. CONYERS. I rise to strike the last word—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS.—and yield 1 minute to Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. I'm advised—thank you for yielding, Mr. Ranking Member.

I'm advised that the gentleman is simply inaccurate in saying those hearings are all now closed. The only blanket closure is as a result of the Creppy directive after 9/11, which closed all cases involving special circumstances. You've made an argument that some witness in an open hearing may not—I mean, say a powerful figure gets arrested in this country and an American witness to the alleged crime. The powerful figure thinks he's innocent. And the witness says, God, I don't want to testify against that powerful figure, that congressman. I could be subject to retaliation. Let's make this a secret trial.

We don't do that in this country. Even when powerful people could retaliate against potential witnesses. And the notion that that's an argument against this amendment really boggles my mind. We have very limited cases—B and C involving confidential informants and involving disclosure of classified information. The Government, not the alien, has the right to get the closed hearing. And in the case which can involve—where it's in the asylee's interest or the victim of torture's interest to have it closed, they can get it closed or they can waive that and take the consequences of it not having closed.

That's an appropriate delineation of logical reasons to overcome what should be the presumption, that our hearings in this country are generally open to the press, to the family, to interested parties. That's the way the country runs.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERMAN. For a question.

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the gentleman. It's my time. And the reason I'm returning it is that before we go to lunch I want to introduce an amendment in the nature of a substitute. So I return the balance of my time, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Berman, and the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Delahunt.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it.

Mr. BERMAN. A record vote, please?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. A record vote is ordered. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)1, further proceedings on this amendment will be postponed.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Conyers, seek recognition?

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment in the nature of a substitute that I'd like to have reported.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment in the nature of a substitute to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Conyers.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment in the nature of a substitute of Mr. Conyers follows:]

3 SEC. 163. REFORM OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.

4 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
5 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
6 States, Congress makes the following findings:

7 (1) Covert operations tend to be highly tactical
8 and require close attention. The Central Intelligence
9 Agency should retain responsibility for the direction
10 and execution of clandestine and covert operations.
11 The Central Intelligence Agency should also con-
12 centrate on building capabilities to carry out such 13 operations and on providing personnel who will be 14 directing and executing such operations in the field.

15 (2) The reconstitution of the analytic and 16 human intelligence collection capabilities of the Cen-
17 tral Intelligence Agency requires the undiverted at-18 tention of the head of the Central Intelligence Agen-
19 cy.

20 (b) TRANSFORMATION OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE
21 AGENCY.—The Director of the Central Intelligence Agen-
22 cy shall transform the intelligence and intelligence-related 23 capabilities of the Central Intelligence Agency by—

24 (1) building the human intelligence capabilities
25 of the clandestine service;

- 1 (2) building the analytic capabilities of the 2 Agency;
- 3 (3) developing a stronger language program;
- 4 (4) renewing emphasis on the recruitment of 5 operations officers of diverse background who can 6 blend in more easily in foreign cities;
- 7 (5) ensuring a seamless relationship between 8 human source collection and signals collection at the 9 operational level; and
- 10 (6) providing for a better balance between uni-
11 lateral operations and liaison operations.

12 (c) RETENTION OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR CLANDES-
13 TINE AND COVERT OPERATIONS.—The Central Intel-
14 ligence Agency shall retain responsibility for the direction
15 and execution of clandestine and covert operations as au-
16 thorized by the President or the National Intelligence Di-
17 rector and assigned by a national intelligence center.

18 SEC. 164. PARAMILITARY OPERATIONS.

19 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
20 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
21 States, Congress makes the following findings:

- 22 (1) Prior to September 11, 2001, the Central 23 Intelligence Agency relied on proxies to conduct
24 paramilitary operations, with unsatisfactory results.

1 (2) The United States cannot afford to build
2 two separate capabilities for carrying out para-
3 military operations, and therefore should concentrate 4 responsibility and necessary legal authority for such 5 operations in one entity.

6 (3) In conducting future paramilitary oper-
7 ations, Central Intelligence Agency experts should be
8 integrated into military training, exercises, and plan-
9 ning, and lead responsibility for directing and exe-
10 cuting paramilitary operations should rest with the 11 Department of Defense.

12 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON LEAD RESPONSIBILITY
13 FOR PARAMILITARY OPERATIONS.—The Secretary of De-
14 fense should have lead responsibility for directing and exe-
15 cuting paramilitary operations, whether clandestine or 16 covert.

17 (c) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DISCHARGE THROUGH 18 SPECIAL OPERATIONS COMMAND.—In carrying out the 19 responsibility under subsection (b) the Secretary of De-20 fense should—

21 (1) assign the Special Operations Command
22 lead responsibility within the Department of Defense
23 for paramilitary operations; and

1 (2) consolidate responsibility for such oper-
2 ations with the capabilities for training, direction,
3 and execution of such operations.

4 (d) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON JOINT PLANNING.—
5 The Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Central
6 Intelligence Agency should work jointly to plan para-
7 military operations.

8 (e) PARAMILITARY OPERATIONS DEFINED.—In this
9 section, the term “paramilitary operations” means oper-
10 ations that, by their tactics and requirements in military-
11 type personnel, equipment, and training, approximate con-
12 ventional military operations, but that are distinguished 13 from conventional military operations through reliance on 14 light infantry, less capability to carry out sustained com-
15 bat operations involving heavy weapons and less capability
16 of sustaining long-term logistical support.

17 SEC. 165. IMPROVEMENT OF INTELLIGENCE CAPABILITIES
18 OF THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGA-
19 TION.

20 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-

14 integrated national security workforce consisting of 15 agents, analysts, linguists, and surveillance specialists who 16 are recruited, trained, and rewarded in a manner which

21 (2) Each agent employed by the Bureau after the 22 date of the enactment of this Act shall receive basic train-

6 tional security matters.

7 (4) The Director shall—

8 (A) require agents and analysts of the Bureau
9 to specialize in either criminal justice matters or na-

15 agents and analysts over their entire career with the 16 Bureau.

17 (5) The Director shall carry out a program to en-
18 hance the capacity of the Bureau to recruit and retain 19 individuals with backgrounds in intelligence, international
20 relations, language, technology, and other skills relevant 21 to the intelligence and national security missions of the 22 Bureau.

23 (6) The Director shall, to the maximum extent prae-
24 ticable, afford the analysts of the Bureau training and ca-
25 reer opportunities commensurate with the training and ca-

1 reer opportunities afforded analysts in other elements of 2 the intelligence community.

3 (7) Commencing as soon as practicable after the date
4 of the enactment of this Act, each senior manager of the 5 Bureau shall be a certified intelligence officer.

6 (8) The Director shall, to the maximum extent prac-
7 ticable, ensure that the successful completion of advanced 8 training courses, and of one or more assignments to an-
9 other element of the intelligence community, is a pre-
10 condition to advancement to higher level national security
11 assignments within the Bureau.

12 (d) FIELD OFFICE MATTERS.—(1) In improving the 13 intelligence capabilities of the Federal Bureau of Inves-
14 tigation under subsection (b), the Director of the Federal 17 with responsibility for national security matters.

18 (2) The Director shall provide for such expansion of 18 the expansion of secure facilities to carry out the national

20 of Investigation.

21 (2) The Director shall include in each semiannual
22 program review of the Bureau that is submitted to Con-
23 gress a report on the progress made by each field office

1 TITLE II—INFORMATION
2 SHARING

3 SEC. 201. INFORMATION SHARING.

4 (a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

5 (1) NETWORK.—The term “Network” means
6 the Information Sharing Network described in sub-
7 section (c).

8 (2) TERRORISM INFORMATION.—The term “ter-9 rorism information” means all information, whether 10 collected, produced, or distributed by intelligence,
11 law enforcement, military, homeland security, or 12 other activities, relating to—

13 (A) the existence, organization, capabili-
14 ties, plans, intentions, vulnerabilities, means of 15 finance or material support, or activities of for-
16 eign or international terrorist groups or individ-
17 uals, or of domestic groups or individuals in-18 volved in transnational terrorism;

19 (B) threats posed by such groups or indi-
20 viduals to the United States, United States per-21 sons, or United States interests, or to those of 22 other nations;

23 (C) communications of or by such groups
24 or individuals; or

1 (D) information relating to groups or indi-
2 viduals reasonably believed to be assisting or 3 associated with such groups or individuals.

4 (b) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
5 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
6 States, Congress makes the following findings:

7 (1) The effective use of information, from all
8 available sources, is essential to the fight against 9 terror and the protection of our homeland. The big-
10 gest impediment to all-source analysis, and to a
11 greater likelihood of “connecting the dots”, is resist-
12 ance to sharing information.

13 (2) The United States Government has access
14 to a vast amount of information, including not only
15 traditional intelligence but also other government
16 databases, such as those containing customs or im-
17 migration information. But the United States Gov-18 ernment has a weak system for processing and using 19 the information it has.

20 (3) In the period leading up to September 11, 21 2001, there were instances of potentially helpful in-
22 formation that was available but that no person
23 knew to ask for; information that was distributed
24 only in compartmented channels; and information
25 that was requested but could not be shared.

1 (4) Current security requirements nurture over-
2 classification and excessive compartmentalization of 3 information among agencies. Each agency’s incentive
4 structure opposes sharing, with risks, including
5 criminal, civil, and administrative sanctions, but few
6 rewards for sharing information.

7 (5) The current system, in which each intel-
8 ligence agency has its own security practices, re-
9 quires a demonstrated “need to know” before shar-
10 ing. This approach assumes that it is possible to 11 know, in advance, who will need to use the informa-
12 tion. An outgrowth of the cold war, such a system
13 implicitly assumes that the risk of inadvertent dis-
14 closure outweighs the benefits of wider sharing.
15 Such assumptions are no longer appropriate. Al-
16 though counterintelligence concerns are still real, the 17 costs of not sharing information are also substantial.
18 The current “need-to-know” culture of information 19 protection needs to be replaced with a “need-to-20 share” culture of integration.

21 (6) A new approach to the sharing of terrorism
22 information is urgently needed. An important con-
23 ceptual model for a new “trusted information net-24 work” is the Systemwide Homeland Analysis and 25 Resource Exchange (SHARE) Network proposed by

1 a task force of leading professionals assembled by
2 the Markle Foundation and described in reports
3 issued in October 2002 and December 2003.

4 (7) No single agency can create a meaningful
5 information sharing system on its own. Alone, each
6 agency can only modernize stovepipes, not replace
7 them. Presidential leadership is required to bring 8 about governmentwide change.

9 (c) INFORMATION SHARING NETWORK.—

10 (1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The President shall es-
11 tablish an information sharing network to promote 12 the sharing of terrorism information, in a manner
13 consistent with national security and the protection
14 of privacy and civil liberties.

15 (2) ATTRIBUTES.—The Network shall promote 16 coordination, communication and collaboration of 17 people and information among all relevant Federal 18 departments and agencies, State, tribal, and local 19 authorities, and relevant private sector entities, in-
20 cluding owners and operators of critical infrastruc-
21 ture, by using policy guidelines and technologies that
22 support—

23 (A) a decentralized, distributed, and co-
24 ordinated environment that connects existing 25 systems where appropriate and allows users to

1 share information horizontally across agencies,
2 vertically between levels of government, and, as
3 appropriate, with the private sector;

4 (B) building on existing systems capabili-
5 ties at relevant agencies;

6 (C) utilizing industry best practices, in-
7 cluding minimizing the centralization of data
8 and seeking to use common tools and capabili-
9 ties whenever possible;

10 (D) employing an information rights man-
11 agement approach that controls access to data
12 rather than to whole networks;

13 (E) facilitating the sharing of information
14 at and across all levels of security by using pol-
15 icy guidelines and technologies that support
16 writing information that can be broadly shared;

17 (F) providing directory services for locat-
18 ing people and information;

19 (G) incorporating protections for individ-
20 uals' privacy and civil liberties;

21 (H) incorporating mechanisms for informa-
22 tion security; and

23 (I) access controls, authentication and au-
24 thorization, audits, and other strong mecha-
25 nisms for information security and privacy

1 guideline enforcement across all levels of secu-
2 rity, in order to enhance accountability and fa-
3 cilitate oversight.

4 (d) IMMEDIATE STEPS.—Not later than 90 days after 5 the date of enactment of this Act, the President, through
6 the Director of Management and Budget and in consulta-
7 tion with the National Intelligence Director, the Attorney
8 General, the Secretary of Homeland Security, the Sec-
9 retary of Defense, the Secretary of State, the Director of 10 the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Director of the 11 Central Intelligence Agency, and such other Federal offi-
12 cials as the President shall designate, shall—

13 (1) establish electronic directory services to as-
14 sist in locating in the Federal Government terrorism
15 information and people with relevant knowledge
16 about terrorism information; and

17 (2) conduct a review of relevant current Federal 18 agency capabilities, including a baseline inventory of 19 current Federal systems that contain terrorism in-20 formation, the money currently spent to maintain
21 those systems, and identification of other informa-
22 tion that should be included in the Network.

23 (e) GUIDELINES.—As soon as possible, but in no
24 event later than 180 days after the date of enactment of 25 this Act, the President shall—

1 (1) in consultation with the National Intel-
2 ligence Director and the Advisory Council on Infor-
3 mation Sharing established in subsection (g), issue
4 guidelines for acquiring, accessing, sharing, and 5 using terrorism information, including guidelines to 6 ensure such information is provided in its most 7 shareable form, such as by separating out data from 8 the sources and methods by which they are obtained;

9 (2) in consultation with the Privacy and Civil 10 Liberties Oversight Board established under section
11 901, issue guidelines that—

12 (A) protect privacy and civil liberties in the 13 development and use of the Network; and

14 (B) shall be made public, unless, and only
15 to the extent that, nondisclosure is clearly nec-
16 essary to protect national security;

17 (3) establish objective, systemwide performance
18 measures to enable the assessment of progress to-19 ward achieving full implementation of the Network;
20 and

21 (4) require Federal departments and agencies
22 to promote a culture of information sharing by—

23 (A) reducing disincentives to information
24 sharing, including overclassification of informa-

1 tion and unnecessary requirements for origi-
2 nator approval; and

3 (B) providing affirmative incentives for in-
4 formation sharing, such as the incorporation of 5 information sharing performance measures into 6 agency and managerial evaluations, and em-
7 ployee awards for promoting innovative infor-
8 mation sharing practices.

9 (f) SYSTEM DESIGN AND IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—

10 Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of 11 this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a system
12 design and implementation plan for the Network. The plan
13 shall be prepared by the President through the Director
14 of Management and Budget and in consultation with the 15 National Intelligence Director, the Attorney General, the 16 Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of Defense,
17 the Secretary of State, the Director of the Federal Bureau
18 of Investigation, the Director of the Central Intelligence
19 Agency, and such other Federal officials as the President
20 shall designate, and shall include—

22 posed Network, including functions, capabilities, and 23 resources;

25 policy issues presented by the creation of the Net-

1 work described in subsection (e), and the ways in
2 which these issues will be addressed;

4 departments and agencies that will participate in the 5 development of the Network, including—

6 (i) identification of any agency that will 7 build the infrastructure needed to operate and 8 manage the Network (as distinct from the indi-
9 vidual agency components that are to be part of 10 the Network); and

11 (ii) identification of any agency that will 12 operate and manage the Network (as distinct 13 from the individual agency components that are 14 to be part of the Network);

15 (B) a provision that the delineation of roles
16 under subparagraph (A) shall—

17 (i) be consistent with the authority of the 18 National Intelligence Director, under this Act,
19 to set standards for information sharing and in-
20 formation technology throughout the intel-
21 ligence community; and

22 (ii) recognize the role of the Department of 23 Homeland Security in coordinating with State,
24 tribal, and local officials and the private sector;

1 (4) a description of the technological require-
2 ments to appropriately link and enhance existing 3 networks and a description of the system design that 4 will meet these requirements;

5 (5) a plan, including a time line, for the devel-
6 opment and phased implementation of the Network;

7 (6) total budget requirements to develop and 8 implement the Network, including the estimated an-
9 nual cost for each of the 5 years following the date
10 of enactment of this Act; and

12 dent believes necessary to implement the Network.

1 TITLE V—THE ROLE OF DIPLO-
2 MACY, FOREIGN AID, AND
3 THE MILITARY IN THE WAR
4 ON TERRORISM

5 SEC. 501. REPORT ON TERRORIST SANCTUARIES.

6 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
7 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
8 States, Congress makes the following findings:

9 (1) Complex terrorist operations require loca-
10 tions that provide such operations sanctuary from 11 interference by government or law enforcement per-12 sonnel.

13 (2) A terrorist sanctuary existed in Afghanistan
14 before September 11, 2001.

15 (3) The terrorist sanctuary in Afghanistan pro-
16 vided direct and indirect value to members of al
17 Qaeda who participated in the terrorist attacks on 18 the United States on September 11, 2001 and in 19 other terrorist operations.

20 (4) Terrorist organizations have fled to some of 21 the least governed and most lawless places in the 22 world to find sanctuary.

23 (5) During the twenty-first century, terrorists
24 are focusing on remote regions and failing states as 25 locations to seek sanctuary.

1 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
2 gress that—

3 (1) the United States Government should iden-
4 tify and prioritize locations that are or that could be
5 used as terrorist sanctuaries;

6 (2) the United States Government should have
7 a realistic strategy that includes the use of all ele-
8 ments of national power to keep possible terrorists
9 from using a location as a sanctuary; and

10 (3) the United States Government should reach
11 out, listen to, and work with countries in bilateral 12 and multilateral fora to prevent locations from be-13 coming sanctuaries and to prevent terrorists from 14 using locations as sanctuaries.

15 (c) STRATEGY ON TERRORIST SANCTUARIES.—

16 (1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180
17 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 18 President shall submit to Congress a report that de-
19 scribes a strategy for addressing and, where pos-
20 sible, eliminating terrorist sanctuaries.

21 (2) CONTENT.—The report required under this
22 section shall include the following:

23 (A) A description of actual and potential
24 terrorist sanctuaries, together with an assess-

1 ment of the priorities of addressing and elimi-
2 nating such sanctuaries.

3 (B) An outline of strategies for disrupting
4 or eliminating the security provided to terrorists
5 by such sanctuaries.

6 (C) A description of efforts by the United
7 States Government to work with other countries
8 in bilateral and multilateral fora to address or 9 eliminate actual or potential terrorist sanc-
10 tuaries and disrupt or eliminate the security
11 provided to terrorists by such sanctuaries.

12 (D) A description of long-term goals and 13 actions designed to reduce the conditions that 14 allow the formation of terrorist sanctuaries,
15 such as supporting and strengthening host gov-
16 ernments, reducing poverty, increasing eco-
17 nomic development, strengthening civil society,
18 securing borders, strengthening internal secu-
19 rity forces, and disrupting logistics and commu-
20 nications networks of terrorist groups.

21 SEC. 502. ROLE OF PAKISTAN IN COUNTERING TERRORISM.

22 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
23 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
24 States, Congress makes the following findings:

1 (1) The Government of Pakistan has a critical
2 role to perform in the struggle against Islamist ter-
3 rorism.

4 (2) The endemic poverty, widespread corrup-
5 tion, and frequent ineffectiveness of government in 6 Pakistan create opportunities for Islamist recruit-
7 ment.

8 (3) The poor quality of education in Pakistan
9 is particularly worrying, as millions of families send 10 their children to madrassahs, some of which have 11 been used as incubators for violent extremism.

12 (4) The vast unpoliced regions in Pakistan
13 make the country attractive to extremists seeking 14 refuge and recruits and also provide a base for oper-
15 ations against coalition forces in Afghanistan.

16 (5) A stable Pakistan, with a government advo-
17 cating “enlightened moderation” in the Muslim
18 world, is critical to stability in the region.

19 (6) There is a widespread belief among the peo-
20 ple of Pakistan that the United States has long
21 treated them as allies of convenience.

22 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
23 gress that—

24 (1) the United States should make a long-term
25 commitment to assisting in ensuring a promising,

1 stable, and secure future in Pakistan, as long as its
2 leaders remain committed to combatting extremists
3 and implementing a strategy of “enlightened mod-
4 eration”;

5 (2) the United States aid to Pakistan should be 6 fulsome and, at a minimum, sustained at the fiscal 7 year 2004 levels;

8 (3) the United States should support the Gov-
9 ernment of Pakistan with a comprehensive effort
10 that extends from military aid to support for better
11 education; and

12 (4) the United States Government should de-
13 vote particular attention and resources to assisting 14 in the improvement of the quality of education in 15 Pakistan.

16 (c) REPORT ON SUPPORT FOR PAKISTAN.—

17 (1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180
18 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 19 President shall submit to Congress a report on the 20 efforts of the United States Government to support
21 Pakistan and encourage moderation in that country.

22 (2) CONTENT.—The report required under this
23 section shall include the following:

24 (A) An examination of the desirability of 25 establishing a Pakistan Education Fund to di-

1 rect resources toward improving the quality of
2 secondary schools in Pakistan.

3 (B) Recommendations on the funding nec-
4 essary to provide various levels of educational
5 support.

6 (C) An examination of the current com-
7 position and levels of United States military aid
8 to Pakistan, together with any recommenda-
9 tions for changes in such levels and composition
10 that the President considers appropriate.

11 (D) An examination of other major types
12 of United States financial support to Pakistan,
13 together with any recommendations for changes
14 in the levels and composition of such support
15 that the President considers appropriate.

16 SEC. 503. AID TO AFGHANISTAN.

17 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
18 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
19 States, Congress makes the following findings:

20 (1) The United States and its allies in the 21 international community have made progress in pro-
22 moting economic and political reform within Afghan-
23 istan, including the establishment of a central gov-
24 ernment with a democratic constitution, a new cur-
25 rency, and a new army, the increase of personal

1 freedom, and the elevation of the standard of living
2 of many Afghans.

3 (2) A number of significant obstacles must be 4 overcome if Afghanistan is to become a secure and 5 prosperous democracy, and such a transition de-
6 pends in particular upon—

7 (A) improving security throughout the 8 country;

9 (B) disarming and demobilizing militias;

10 (C) curtailing the rule of the warlords;

11 (D) promoting equitable economic develop-
12 ment;

13 (E) protecting the human rights of the 14 people of Afghanistan;

15 (F) holding elections for public office; and 16 (G) ending the cultivation and trafficking

17 of narcotics.

18 (3) The United States and the international 19 community must make a long-term commitment to 20 addressing the deteriorating security situation in Af-
21 ghanistan and the burgeoning narcotics trade, en-
22 demic poverty, and other serious problems in Af-
23 ghanistan in order to prevent that country from re-
24 lapsing into a sanctuary for international terrorism.

1 (b) POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United
2 States to take the following actions with respect to Af-
3 ghanistan:

4 (1) Working with other nations to obtain long-
5 term security, political, and financial commitments
6 and fulfillment of pledges to the Government of Af-
7 ghanistan to accomplish the objectives of the Af-
8 ghanistan Freedom Support Act of 2002 (22 U.S.C.
9 7501 et seq.), especially to ensure a secure, demo-
10 cratic, and prosperous Afghanistan that respects the 11 rights of its citizens and is free of international ter-
12 rorist organizations.

13 (2) Using the voice and vote of the United 14 States in relevant international organizations, in-15 cluding the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and 16 the United Nations Security Council, to strengthen
17 international commitments to assist the Government
18 of Afghanistan in enhancing security, building na-
19 tional police and military forces, increasing counter-
20 narcotics efforts, and expanding infrastructure and 21 public services throughout the country.

22 (3) Taking appropriate steps to increase the as-
23 sistance provided under programs of the Department
24 of State and the United States Agency for Inter-
25 national Development throughout Afghanistan and

1 to increase the number of personnel of those agen-
2 cies in Afghanistan as necessary to support the in-
3 creased assistance.

4 (c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

5 (1) FISCAL YEAR 2005.—There are authorized
6 to be appropriated to the President for fiscal year

20 SEC. 504. THE UNITED STATES-SAUDI ARABIA RELATION-
21 SHIP.

22 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
23 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
24 States, Congress makes the following findings:

1 (1) Despite a long history of friendly relations
2 with the United States, Saudi Arabia has been a
3 problematic ally in combating Islamic extremism.

4 (2) Cooperation between the Governments of 5 the United States and Saudi Arabia has traditionally 6 been carried out in private.

7 (3) The Government of Saudi Arabia has not
8 always responded promptly and fully to United 9 States requests for assistance in the global war on 10 Islamist terrorism.

11 (4) Counterterrorism cooperation between the 12 Governments of the United States and Saudi Arabia
13 has improved significantly since the terrorist bomb-
14 ing attacks in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, on May 12, 15 2003.

16 (5) The Government of Saudi Arabia is now ag-
17 gressively pursuing al Qaeda and appears to be act-18 ing to build a domestic consensus for some internal 19 reforms.

20 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
21 gress that—

22 (1) the problems in the relationship between the 23 United States and Saudi Arabia must be confronted 24 openly, and the opportunities for cooperation be-

1 tween the countries must be pursued openly by those
2 governments;

3 (2) both governments must build a relationship
4 that they can publicly defend and that is based on 5 other national interests in addition to their national 6 interests in oil;

7 (3) this relationship should include a shared
8 commitment to political and economic reform in 9 Saudi Arabia; and

10 (4) this relationship should also include a 11 shared interest in greater tolerance and respect for 12 other cultures in Saudi Arabia and a commitment to 13 fight the violent extremists who foment hatred in the 14 Middle East.

15 (c) REPORT.—

16 (1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180
17 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 18 President shall submit to Congress a strategy for ex-
19 panding collaboration with the Government of Saudi
20 Arabia on subjects of mutual interest and of impor-
21 tance to the United States.

22 (2) SCOPE.—As part of this strategy, the Presi-
23 dent shall consider the utility of undertaking a peri-
24 odic, formal, and visible high-level dialogue between 25 senior United States Government officials of cabinet

1 level or higher rank and their counterparts in the 2 Government of Saudi Arabia to address challenges
3 in the relationship between the 2 governments and 4 to identify areas and mechanisms for cooperation.

5 (3) CONTENT.—The strategy under this sub-
6 section shall encompass—

7 (A) intelligence and security cooperation in 8 the fight against Islamist terrorism;

16 SEC. 505. EFFORTS TO COMBAT ISLAMIC TERRORISM BY 17 ENGAGING IN THE STRUGGLE OF IDEAS IN 18 THE ISLAMIC WORLD.

19 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
20 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
21 States, Congress makes the following findings:

22 (1) While support for the United States has 23 plummeted in the Islamic world, many negative
24 views are uninformed, at best, and, at worst, are in-25 formed by coarse stereotypes and caricatures.

1 (2) Local newspapers in Islamic countries and
2 influential broadcasters who reach Islamic audiences
3 through satellite television often reinforce the idea
4 that the people and Government of the United 5 States are anti-Muslim.

6 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
7 gress that—

8 (1) the Government of the United States should 9 offer an example of moral leadership in the world
10 that includes a commitment to treat all people hu-
11 manely, abide by the rule of law, and be generous
12 and caring to the people and governments of other
13 countries;

14 (2) the United States should cooperate with 15 governments of Islamic countries to foster agree-
16 ment on respect for human dignity and opportunity,
17 and to offer a vision of a better future that includes 18 stressing life over death, individual educational and 19 economic opportunity, widespread political participa-
20 tion, contempt for indiscriminate violence, respect
21 for the rule of law, openness in discussing dif-
22 ferences, and tolerance for opposing points of view;

23 (3) the United States should encourage reform,
24 freedom, democracy, and opportunity for Arabs and

1 Muslims and promote moderation in the Islamic 2 world; and

3 (4) the United States should work to defeat ex-
4 tremist ideology in the Islamic world by providing

6 bat extremist ideas.

15 priority of the United States and that the 16 United States intends to make a substantial
17 and sustained commitment toward winning this 18 struggle.

19 SEC. 506. UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD DICTATOR-
20 SHIPS.

21 (a) FINDING.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
22 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
23 States, Congress finds that short-term gains enjoyed by 24 the United States through cooperation with the world's 25 most repressive and brutal governments are too often out-

1 weighed by long-term setbacks for the stature and inter-
2 ests of the United States.

3 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
4 gress that—

5 (1) United States foreign policy should promote 6 the value of life and the importance of individual
7 educational and economic opportunity, encourage 8 widespread political participation, condemn indis-
9 criminate violence, and promote respect for the rule
10 of law, openness in discussing differences among 11 people, and tolerance for opposing points of view;
12 and

13 (2) the United States Government must prevail
14 upon the governments of all predominantly Muslim
15 countries, including those that are friends and allies
16 of the United States, to condemn indiscriminate vio-
17 lence, promote the value of life, respect and promote 18 the principles of individual education and economic 19 opportunity, encourage widespread political partici-
20 pation, and promote the rule of law, openness in dis-
21 cussing differences among people, and tolerance for 22 opposing points of view.

1 SEC. 507. PROMOTION OF UNITED STATES VALUES
2 THROUGH BROADCAST MEDIA.

3 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
4 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
5 States, Congress makes the following findings:

6 (1) Although the United States has dem-
7 onstrated and promoted its values in defending Mus-
8 lims against tyrants and criminals in Somalia, Bos-
9 nia, Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq, this message is 10 not always clearly presented in the Islamic world.

11 (2) If the United States does not act to vigor-
12 ously define its message in the Islamic world, the 13 image of the United States will be defined by Is-14 lamic extremists who seek to demonize the United 15 States.

16 (3) Recognizing that many Arab and Muslim
17 audiences rely on satellite television and radio, the 18 United States Government has launched promising
19 initiatives in television and radio broadcasting to the 20 Arab world, Iran, and Afghanistan.

21 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
22 gress that—

23 (1) the United States must do more to defend 24 and promote its values and ideals to the broadest
25 possible audience in the Islamic world;

1 (2) United States efforts to defend and promote
2 these values and ideals are beginning to ensure that
3 accurate expressions of these values reach large au-
4 diences in the Islamic world and should be robustly
5 supported;

6 (3) the United States Government could and 7 should do more to engage the Muslim world in the 8 struggle of ideas; and

9 (4) the United States Government should more
10 intensively employ existing broadcast media in the 11 Islamic world as part of this engagement.

12 (c) REPORT ON OUTREACH STRATEGY.—

13 (1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 180
14 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the
15 President shall submit to Congress a report on the 16 strategy of the United States Government for ex-
17 panding its outreach to foreign Muslim audiences
18 through broadcast media.

19 (2) CONTENT.—The report shall include the 20 following:

21 (A) The initiatives of the Broadcasting
22 Board of Governors and the public diplomacy
23 activities of the Department of State with re-
24 spect to outreach to foreign Muslim audiences.

1 (B) An outline of recommended actions
2 that the United States Government should take
3 to more regularly and comprehensively present
4 a United States point of view through indige-
5 nous broadcast media in countries with sizable
6 Muslim populations, including increasing ap-
7 pearances by United States Government offi-
8 cials, experts, and citizens.

9 (C) An assessment of potential incentives
10 for, and costs associated with, encouraging
11 United States broadcasters to dub or subtitle
12 into Arabic and other relevant languages their 13 news and public affairs programs broadcast in 14 the Muslim world in order to present those pro-
15 grams to a much broader Muslim audience than 16 is currently reached.

17 (D) Any recommendations the President
18 may have for additional funding and legislation
19 necessary to achieve the objectives of the strat-
20 egy.

22 are authorized to be appropriated to the President to carry
23 out United States Government broadcasting activities
24 under the United States Information and Educational Ex-25 change Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1431 et seq.), the United

1 States International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (22 U.S.C.
2 6201 et seq.), and the Foreign Affairs Reform and Re-

5 the purposes of such Acts, the following amounts:

17 SEC. 508. USE OF UNITED STATES SCHOLARSHIP AND EX-
18 CHANGE PROGRAMS IN THE ISLAMIC WORLD.

19 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
20 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
21 States, Congress makes the following findings:

22 (1) Exchange, scholarship, and library pro-
23 grams are effective ways for the United States Gov-
24 ernment to promote internationally the values and 25 ideals of the United States.

1 (2) Exchange, scholarship, and library pro-
2 grams can expose young people from other countries
3 to United States values and offer them knowledge
4 and hope.

5 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
6 gress that the United States should expand its exchange,

5 SEC. 509. INTERNATIONAL YOUTH OPPORTUNITY FUND.

6 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
7 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
8 States, Congress makes the following findings:

9 (1) Education that teaches tolerance, the dig-
10 nity and value of each individual, and respect for 11 different beliefs is a key element in any global strat-
12 egy to eliminate Islamist terrorism.

13 (2) Education in the Middle East about the 14 world outside that region is weak.

15 (3) The United Nations has rightly equated lit-
16 eracy with freedom.

17 (4) The international community is moving to-18 ward setting a concrete goal of reducing by half the 19 illiteracy rate in the Middle East by 2010, through 20 the implementation of education programs targeting 21 women and girls and programs for adult literacy,
22 and by other means.

23 (5) To be effective, the effort to improve edu-
24 cation in the Middle East must also include—

1 (A) support for the provision of basic edu-
2 cation tools, such as textbooks that translate
3 more of the world's knowledge into local lan-
4 guages and local libraries to house such mate-
5 rials; and

6 (B) more vocational education in trades
7 and business skills.

8 (6) The Middle East can benefit from some of 9 the same programs to bridge the digital divide that 10 already have been developed for other regions of the 11 world.

12 (b) INTERNATIONAL YOUTH OPPORTUNITY FUND.—

13 (1) ESTABLISHMENT.—

14 (A) IN GENERAL.—The President shall es-
15 tablish an International Youth Opportunity 16 Fund (hereafter in this section referred to as 17 the “Fund”).

18 (B) INTERNATIONAL PARTICIPATION.—

19 The President shall seek the cooperation of the 20 international community in establishing and 21 generously supporting the Fund.

22 (2) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the Fund shall 23 be to provide financial assistance for the improve-
24 ment of public education in the Middle East, includ-
25 ing assistance for the construction and operation of

1 primary and secondary schools in countries that
2 have a sizable Muslim population and that commit
3 to sensibly investing their own financial resources in 4 public education.

5 (3) ELIGIBILITY FOR ASSISTANCE.—

6 (A) DETERMINATION.—The Secretary of 7 State, in coordination with the Administrator of 8 the United States Agency for International De-9 velopment, shall determine which countries are 10 eligible for assistance through the Fund.

11 (B) CRITERIA.—In determining whether a
12 country is eligible for assistance, the Secretary
13 shall consider whether the government of that 14 country is sensibly investing financial resources
15 in public education and is committed to pro-
16 moting a system of education that teaches toler-
17 ance, the dignity and value of each individual,
18 and respect for different beliefs.

19 (4) USE OF FUNDS.—Financial assistance pro-
20 vided through the Fund shall be used for expanding 21 literacy programs, providing textbooks, reducing the 22 digital divide, expanding vocational and business
23 education, constructing and operating public schools,
24 establishing local libraries, training teachers in mod-
25 ern education techniques, and promoting public edu-

1 cation that teaches tolerance, the dignity and value
2 of each individual, and respect for different beliefs.

3 (c) REPORT.—

4 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days
5 after the date of the enactment of this Act, and an-
6 nually thereafter, the Secretary of State and the Ad-
7 ministrator of the United States Agency for Inter-
8 national Development shall jointly prepare and sub-
9 mit to Congress a report on the improvement of edu-
10 cation in the Middle East.

11 (2) CONTENT.—Reports submitted under this 12 subsection shall include the following:

13 (A) A general strategy for working with el-
14 igible host governments in the Middle East to-15 ward establishing the International Youth Op-
16 portunity Fund and related programs.

17 (B) A listing of countries that are eligible
18 for assistance under such programs.

19 (C) A description of the specific programs
20 initiated in each eligible country and the 21 amount expended in support of such programs.

22 (D) A description of activities undertaken
23 to close the digital divide and expand vocational 24 and business skills in eligible countries.

1 (2) Policies that support economic development
2 and reform also have political implications, as eco-
3 nomic and political liberties are often linked.

4 (3) The United States is working toward cre-
5 ating a Middle East Free Trade Area by 2013 and 6 implementing a free trade agreement with Bahrain,
7 and free trade agreements exist between the United
8 States and Israel and the United States and Jordan.

9 (4) Existing and proposed free trade agree-
10 ments between the United States and Islamic coun-
11 tries are drawing interest from other countries in 12 the Middle East region, and Islamic countries can 13 become full participants in the rules-based global 14 trading system, as the United States considers low-15 ering its barriers to trade with the poorest Arab 16 countries.

17 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
18 gress that—

19 (1) a comprehensive United States strategy to 20 counter terrorism should include economic policies
21 that encourage development, open societies, and op-
22 portunities for people to improve the lives of their 23 families and to enhance prospects for their children's 24 future;

1 (2) 1 element of such a strategy should encom-
2 pass the lowering of trade barriers with the poorest
3 countries that have a significant population of Arab
4 or Muslim individuals;

5 (3) another element of such a strategy should
6 encompass United States efforts to promote eco-
7 nomic reform in countries that have a significant
8 population of Arab or Muslim individuals, including 9 efforts to integrate such countries into the global 10 trading system; and

11 (4) given the importance of the rule of law in 12 promoting economic development and attracting in-13 vestment, the United States should devote an in-14 creased proportion of its assistance to countries in 15 the Middle East to the promotion of the rule of law.

16 (c) REPORT.—

17 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days
18 after the date of the enactment of this Act, the
19 President shall submit to Congress a report on the 20 efforts of the United States Government to encour-
21 age development and promote economic reform in 22 countries that have a significant population of Arab
23 or Muslim individuals.

24 (2) CONTENT.—The report required under this
25 subsection shall describe—

1 (A) efforts to integrate countries with sig-
2 nificant populations of Arab or Muslim individ-
3 uals into the global trading system; and

4 (B) actions that the United States Govern-
5 ment, acting alone and in partnership with 6 other governments in the Middle East, can take 7 to promote intra-regional trade and the rule of 8 law in the region.

9 SEC. 511. MIDDLE EAST PARTNERSHIP INITIATIVE.

10 (a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is 11 authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2005
12 $200,000,000 for the Middle East Partnership Initiative.

13 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
14 gress that, given the importance of the rule of law and 15 economic reform to development in the Middle East, a sig-
16 nificant portion of the funds authorized to be appropriated 17 under subsection (a) should be made available to promote 18 the rule of law in the Middle East.

19 SEC. 512. COMPREHENSIVE COALITION STRATEGY FOR 20 FIGHTING TERRORISM.

21 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
22 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
23 States, Congress makes the following findings:

1 (1) Almost every aspect of the counterterrorism
2 strategy of the United States relies on international
3 cooperation.

4 (2) Since September 11, 2001, the number and 5 scope of United States Government contacts with 6 foreign governments concerning counterterrorism
7 have expanded significantly, but such contacts have 8 often been ad hoc and not integrated as a com-
9 prehensive and unified approach.

10 (b) INTERNATIONAL CONTACT GROUP ON 11 COUNTERTERRORISM.—

12 (1) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of 13 Congress that the President—

14 (A) should seek to engage the leaders of 15 the governments of other countries in a process
16 of advancing beyond separate and uncoordi-
17 nated national counterterrorism strategies to 18 develop with those other governments a com-
19 prehensive coalition strategy to fight Islamist
20 terrorism; and

21 (B) to that end, should seek to establish
22 an international counterterrorism policy contact
23 group with the leaders of governments pro-
24 viding leadership in global counterterrorism ef-
25 forts and governments of countries with sizable

1 Muslim populations, to be used as a ready and 2 flexible international means for discussing and
3 coordinating the development of important
4 counterterrorism policies by the participating
5 governments.

6 (2) AUTHORITY.—The President is authorized
7 to establish an international counterterrorism policy
8 contact group with the leaders of governments re-
9 ferred to in paragraph (1) for purposes as follows:

10 (A) To develop in common with such other 11 countries important policies and a strategy that 12 address the various components of international 13 prosecution of the war on terrorism, including 14 policies and a strategy that address military
15 issues, law enforcement, the collection, analysis,
16 and dissemination of intelligence, issues relating 17 to interdiction of travel by terrorists,
18 counterterrorism-related customs issues, finan-
19 cial issues, and issues relating to terrorist sanc-
20 tuaries.

21 (B) To address, to the extent (if any) that 22 the President and leaders of other participating
23 governments determine appropriate, such long-
24 term issues as economic and political reforms

1 that can contribute to strengthening stability
2 and security in the Middle East.

3 SEC. 513. DETENTION AND HUMANE TREATMENT OF CAP-
4 TURED TERRORISTS.

5 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
6 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
7 States, Congress makes the following findings:

8 (1) Carrying out the global war on terrorism re-
9 quires the development of policies with respect to the 10 detention and treatment of captured international
11 terrorists that is adhered to by all coalition forces.

12 (2) Article 3 of the Convention Relative to the 13 Treatment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva Au-
14 gust 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316) was specifically de-
15 signed for cases in which the usual rules of war do
16 not apply, and the minimum standards of treatment
17 pursuant to such Article are generally accepted
18 throughout the world as customary international
19 law.

20 (b) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

21 (1) CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREAT-
22 MENT OR PUNISHMENT.—The term “cruel, inhuman, 23 or degrading treatment or punishment” means the 24 cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punish-

1 ment prohibited by the 5th amendment, 8th amend-
2 ment, or 14th amendment to the Constitution.

3 (2) GENEVA CONVENTIONS.—The term “Gene-
4 va Conventions” means—

5 (A) the Convention for the Amelioration of 6 the Condition of the Wounded and Sick in 7 Armed Forces in the Field, done at Geneva Au-
8 gust 12, 1949 (6 UST 3114);

9 (B) the Convention for the Amelioration of 10 the Condition of the Wounded, Sick, and Ship-
11 wrecked Members of Armed Forces at Sea,
12 done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST
13 3217);

14 (C) the Convention Relative to the Treat-
15 ment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva Au-
16 gust 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316); and

17 (D) the Convention Relative to the Protec-
18 tion of Civilian Persons in Time of War, done
19 at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3516).

20 (3) PRISONER.—The term “prisoner” means a 21 foreign individual captured, detained, interned, or 22 otherwise held in the custody of the United States.

23 (4) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means
24 the Secretary of Defense.

1 (5) TORTURE.—The term “torture” has the
2 meaning given that term in section 2340 of title 18,
3 United States Code.

4 (c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
5 gress that—

6 (1) the United States should engage countries
7 that are participating in the coalition to fight ter-
8 rorism to develop a common approach toward the 9 detention and humane treatment of captured inter-
10 national terrorists; and

11 (2) an approach toward the detention and hu-
12 mane treatment of captured international terrorists
13 developed by the countries participating in the coali-
14 tion to fight terrorism could draw upon Article 3 of 15 the Convention Relative to the Treatment of Pris-
16 oners of War, the principles of which are commonly 17 accepted as minimum basic standards for humane 18 treatment of captured individuals.

19 (d) POLICY.—It is the policy of the United States—

20 (1) to treat any prisoner humanely and in ac-
21 cordance with standards that the Government of the 22 United States would determine to be consistent with 23 international law if such standards were applied to 24 personnel of the United States captured by an 25 enemy in the war on terrorism;

1 (2) if there is any doubt as to whether a pris-
2 oner is entitled to the protections afforded by the 3 Geneva Conventions, to provide the prisoner such 4 protections until the status of the prisoner is deter-
5 mined under the procedures authorized by para-
6 graph 1–6 of Army Regulation 190–8 (1997); and

7 (3) to expeditiously prosecute cases of terrorism
8 or other criminal acts alleged to have been com-
9 mitted by prisoners in the custody of the United 10 States Armed Forces at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in 11 order to avoid the indefinite detention of such pris-
12 oners.

13 (e) PROHIBITION ON TORTURE OR CRUEL, INHUMAN, 14 OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT.—

15 (1) IN GENERAL.—No prisoner shall be subject
16 to torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment
17 or punishment that is prohibited by the Constitu-
18 tion, laws, or treaties of the United States.

19 (2) RELATIONSHIP TO GENEVA CONVEN-
20 TIONS.—Nothing in this section shall affect the sta-
21 tus of any person under the Geneva Conventions or 22 whether any person is entitled to the protections of 23 the Geneva Conventions.

24 (f) RULES, REGULATIONS, AND GUIDELINES.—

1 (1) REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 180 days
2 after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Sec-
3 retary shall prescribe the rules, regulations, or 4 guidelines necessary to ensure compliance with the 5 prohibition in subsection (e)(1) by the members of 6 the Armed Forces of the United States and by any 7 person providing services to the Department of De-
8 fense on a contract basis.

9 (2) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary
10 shall submit to Congress the rules, regulations, or 11 guidelines prescribed under paragraph (1), and any 12 modifications to such rules, regulations, or 13 guidelines—

14 (A) not later than 30 days after the effec-
15 tive date of such rules, regulations, guidelines,
16 or modifications; and

17 (B) in a manner and form that will protect 18 the national security interests of the United 19 States.

20 (g) REPORT ON POSSIBLE VIOLATIONS.—

21 (1) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall sub-
22 mit, on a timely basis and not less than twice each
23 year, a report to Congress on the circumstances sur-
24 rounding any investigation of a possible violation of 25 the prohibition in subsection (e)(1) by a member of

1 the Armed Forces of the United States or by a per-
2 son providing services to the Department of Defense
3 on a contract basis.

4 (2) FORM OF REPORT.—A report required
5 under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in a manner
6 and form that—

7 (A) will protect the national security inter-
8 ests of the United States; and

9 (B) will not prejudice any prosecution of 10 an individual involved in, or responsible for, a
11 violation of the prohibition in subsection (e)(1).

12 (h) REPORT ON A COALITION APPROACH TOWARD
13 THE DETENTION AND HUMANE TREATMENT OF CAP-
14 TURED TERRORISTS.—Not later than 180 days after the 15 date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall sub-16 mit to Congress a report describing the efforts of the 17 United States Government to develop an approach toward 18 the detention and humane treatment of captured inter-
19 national terrorists that will be adhered to by all countries
20 that are members of the coalition against terrorism.

21 SEC. 514. PROLIFERATION OF WEAPONS OF MASS DE-
22 STRUCTION.

23 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
24 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
25 States, Congress makes the following findings:

1 (1) Al Qaeda has tried to acquire or make
2 weapons of mass destruction since 1994 or earlier.

3 (2) The United States doubtless would be a
4 prime target for use of any such weapon by al
5 Qaeda.

6 (3) Although the United States Government has 7 redoubled its international commitments to sup-
8 porting the programs for Cooperative Threat Reduc-
9 tion and other nonproliferation assistance programs,
10 nonproliferation experts continue to express deep
11 concern about the United States Government's com-
12 mitment and approach to securing the weapons of 13 mass destruction and related highly dangerous mate-
14 rials that are still scattered among Russia and other
15 countries of the former Soviet Union.

16 (4) The cost of increased investment in the pre-
17 vention of proliferation of weapons of mass destruc-
18 tion and related dangerous materials is greatly out-
19 weighed by the potentially catastrophic cost to the 20 United States of use of weapons of mass destruction
21 or related dangerous materials by the terrorists who 22 are so eager to acquire them.

23 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
24 gress that—

1 (1) maximum effort to prevent the proliferation
2 of weapons of mass destruction, wherever such pro-
3 liferation may occur, is warranted; and

4 (2) the programs of the United States Govern-
5 ment to prevent or counter the proliferation of weap-
6 ons of mass destruction, including the Proliferation
7 Security Initiative, the programs for Cooperative
8 Threat Reduction, and other nonproliferation assist-
9 ance programs, should be expanded, improved, and 10 better funded to address the global dimensions of 11 the proliferation threat.

12 (c) REQUIREMENT FOR STRATEGY.—Not later than
13 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 14 President shall submit to Congress—

15 (1) a strategy for expanding and strengthening 16 the Proliferation Security Initiative, the programs
17 for Cooperative Threat Reduction, and other non-18 proliferation assistance programs; and

19 (2) an estimate of the funding necessary to exe-
20 cute that strategy.

21 (d) REPORT ON REFORMING THE COOPERATIVE
22 THREAT REDUCTION PROGRAM AND OTHER NON-PRO-
23 LIFERATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.—Not later than 24 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 25 President shall submit to Congress a report evaluating

1 whether the United States could more effectively address
2 the global threat of nuclear proliferation by—

3 (1) establishing a central coordinator for the 4 programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction;

5 (2) eliminating the requirement that the Presi-
6 dent spend no more than $50,000,000 annually on 7 programs for Cooperative Threat Reduction and 8 other non-proliferation assistance programs carried 9 out outside the former Soviet Union; or

10 (3) repealing the provisions of the Soviet Nu-
11 clear Threat Reduction Act of 1991 (22 U.S.C.
12 2551 note) that place conditions on assistance to the 13 former Soviet Union unrelated to bilateral coopera-
14 tion on weapons dismantlement.

15 SEC. 515. FINANCING OF TERRORISM.

16 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
17 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
18 States, Congress makes the following findings:

19 (1) While efforts to designate and freeze the as-
20 sets of terrorist financiers have been relatively un-
21 successful, efforts to target the relatively small num-
22 ber of al Qaeda financial facilitators have been valu-
23 able and successful.

24 (2) The death or capture of several important
25 financial facilitators has decreased the amount of

1 money available to al Qaeda, and has made it more
2 difficult for al Qaeda to raise and move money.

3 (3) The capture of al Qaeda financial
4 facilitators has provided a windfall of intelligence
5 that can be used to continue the cycle of disruption.

6 (4) The United States Government has rightly
7 recognized that information about terrorist money
8 helps in understanding terror networks, searching
9 them out, and disrupting their operations.

10 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
11 gress that—

12 (1) the primary weapon in the effort to stop
13 terrorist financing should be the targeting of ter-
14 rorist financial facilitators by intelligence and law
15 enforcement agencies; and

16 (2) efforts to track terrorist financing must be 17 paramount in United States counter-terrorism ef-
18 forts.

19 (c) REPORT ON TERRORIST FINANCING.—

20 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days
21 after the date of the enactment of this Act, the 22 President shall submit to Congress a report evalu-23 ating the effectiveness of United States efforts to 24 curtail the international financing of terrorism.

1 (2) CONTENTS.—The report required by para-
2 graph (1) shall evaluate and make recommendations
3 on—

4 (A) the effectiveness of efforts and meth-
5 ods to track terrorist financing;

6 (B) ways to improve international govern-
7 mental cooperation in this effort;

8 (C) ways to improve performance of finan-
9 cial institutions in this effort;

10 (D) the adequacy of agency coordination in 11 this effort and ways to improve that coordina-
12 tion; and

13 (E) recommendations for changes in law
14 and additional resources required to improve
15 this effort.

16 TITLE VI—TERRORIST TRAVEL
17 AND EFFECTIVE SCREENING

18 SEC. 601. COUNTERTERRORIST TRAVEL INTELLIGENCE.

19 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
20 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
21 States, Congress makes the following findings:

22 (1) Travel documents are as important to ter-
23 rorists as weapons since terrorists must travel clan-
24 destinely to meet, train, plan, case targets, and gain
25 access to attack sites.

1 (2) International travel is dangerous for terror-
2 ists because they must surface to pass through regu-
3 lated channels, present themselves to border security
4 officials, or attempt to circumvent inspection points.

5 (3) Terrorists use evasive, but detectable, meth-
6 ods to travel, such as altered and counterfeit pass-
7 ports and visas, specific travel methods and routes,
8 liaisons with corrupt government officials, human 9 smuggling networks, supportive travel agencies, and 10 immigration and identity fraud.

11 (4) Before September 11, 2001, no Federal 12 agency systematically analyzed terrorist travel strat-
13 egies. If an agency had done so, the agency could 14 have discovered the ways in which the terrorist pred-
15 ecessors to al Qaeda had been systematically, but 16 detectably, exploiting weaknesses in our border secu-
17 rity since the early 1990s.

18 (5) Many of the hijackers were potentially vul-
19 nerable to interception by border authorities. Ana-
20 lyzing their characteristic travel documents and trav-
21 el patterns could have allowed authorities to inter-
22 cept some of the hijackers and a more effective use
23 of information available in Government databases
24 could have identified some of the hijackers.

1 (6) The routine operations of our immigration
2 laws and the aspects of those laws not specifically
3 aimed at protecting against terrorism inevitably
4 shaped al Qaeda's planning and opportunities.

5 (7) New insights into terrorist travel gained
6 since September 11, 2001, have not been adequately
7 integrated into the front lines of border security.

8 (8) The small classified terrorist travel intel-
9 ligence collection and analysis program currently in 10 place has produced useful results and should be ex-
11 panded.

12 (b) STRATEGY.—

13 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after 14 the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of 15 Homeland Security shall submit to Congress unclas-
16 sified and classified versions of a strategy for com-
17 bining terrorist travel intelligence, operations, and 18 law enforcement into a cohesive effort to intercept
19 terrorists, find terrorist travel facilitators, and con-
20 strain terrorist mobility domestically and inter-
21 nationally. The report to Congress should include a 22 description of the actions taken to implement the 23 strategy.

24 (2) ACCOUNTABILITY.—The strategy submitted
25 under paragraph (1) shall—

1 (A) describe a program for collecting, ana-
2 lyzing, disseminating, and utilizing information
3 and intelligence regarding terrorist travel tac-
4 tics and methods; and

5 (B) outline which Federal intelligence, dip-
6 lomatic, and law enforcement agencies will be 7 held accountable for implementing each element
8 of the strategy.

9 (3) COORDINATION.—The strategy shall be de-
10 veloped in coordination with all relevant Federal 11 agencies, including—

12 (A) the National Counterterrorism Center;

13 (B) the Department of Transportation;

14 (C) the Department of State;

15 (D) the Department of the Treasury;

16 (E) the Department of Justice;

17 (F) the Department of Defense;

18 (G) the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

19 (H) the Drug Enforcement Agency; and 20 (I) the agencies that comprise the intel-

21 ligence community.

22 (4) CONTENTS.—The strategy shall address—

23 (A) the intelligence and law enforcement
24 collection, analysis, operations, and reporting
25 required to identify and disrupt terrorist travel

1 practices and trends, and the terrorist travel
2 facilitators, document forgers, human smug-
3 glers, travel agencies, and corrupt border and 4 transportation officials who assist terrorists;

5 (B) the initial and ongoing training and
6 training materials required by consular, border,
7 and immigration officials to effectively detect
8 and disrupt terrorist travel described under 9 subsection (c)(3);

10 (C) the new procedures required and ac-
11 tions to be taken to integrate existing 12 counterterrorist travel and mobility intelligence
13 into border security processes, including con-
14 sular, port of entry, border patrol, maritime,
15 immigration benefits, and related law enforce-
16 ment activities;

17 (D) the actions required to integrate cur-
18 rent terrorist mobility intelligence into military
19 force protection measures;

20 (E) the additional assistance to be given to 21 the interagency Human Smuggling and Traf-
22 ficking Center for purposes of combatting ter-
23 rorist travel, including further developing and 24 expanding enforcement and operational capa-
25 bilities that address terrorist travel;

1 (F) the additional resources to be given to
2 the Directorate of Information and Analysis
3 and Infrastructure Protection to aid in the 4 sharing of information between the frontline
5 border agencies of the Department of Home-
6 land Security and classified and unclassified
7 sources of counterterrorist travel intelligence
8 and information elsewhere in the Federal Gov-
9 ernment, including the Human Smuggling and 10 Trafficking Center;

11 (G) the development and implementation
12 of procedures to enable the Human Smuggling
13 and Trafficking Center to timely receive ter-
14 rorist travel intelligence and documentation ob-
15 tained at consulates and ports of entry, and by 16 law enforcement officers and military personnel;

17 (H) the use of foreign and technical assist-18 ance to advance border security measures and 19 law enforcement operations against terrorist
20 travel facilitators;

21 (I) the development of a program to pro-
22 vide each consular, port of entry, and immigra-
23 tion benefits office with a counterterrorist travel
24 expert trained and authorized to use the rel-
25 evant authentication technologies and cleared to

1 access all appropriate immigration, law enforce-
2 ment, and intelligence databases;

3 (J) the feasibility of digitally transmitting
4 passport information to a central cadre of spe-
5 cialists until such time as experts described
6 under subparagraph (I) are available at con-
7 sular, port of entry, and immigration benefits
8 offices; and

9 (K) granting consular officers the security
10 clearances necessary to access law enforcement
11 sensitive databases.

12 (c) FRONTLINE COUNTERTERRORIST TRAVEL TECH-
13 NOLOGY AND TRAINING.—

14 (1) TECHNOLOGY ACQUISITION AND DISSEMI-
15 NATION PLAN.—Not later than 180 days after the 16 date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of 17 Homeland Security, in conjunction with the Sec-
18 retary of State, shall submit to Congress a plan de-
19 scribing how the Department of Homeland Security
20 and the Department of State can acquire and de-
21 ploy, to all consulates, ports of entry, and immigra-
22 tion benefits offices, technologies that facilitate doc-
23 ument authentication and the detection of potential
24 terrorist indicators on travel documents.

1 (2) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The plan submitted
2 under paragraph (1) shall—

3 (A) outline the timetable needed to acquire
4 and deploy the authentication technologies;

5 (B) identify the resources required to—

6 (i) fully disseminate these tech-
7 nologies; and

8 (ii) train personnel on use of these
9 technologies; and

10 (C) address the feasibility of using these 11 technologies to screen every passport submitted
12 for identification purposes to a United States
13 consular, border, or immigration official.

14 (3) TRAINING PROGRAM.—

15 (A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of 16 Homeland Security and the Secretary of State
17 shall develop and implement an initial and an-18 nual training program for consular, border, and 19 immigration officials to teach such officials how 20 to effectively detect and disrupt terrorist travel.
21 The Secretary may assist State, local, and trib-
22 al governments, and private industry, in estab-
23 lishing training programs related to terrorist
24 travel intelligence.

1 (B) TRAINING TOPICS.—The training de-
2 veloped under this paragraph shall include
3 training in—

4 (i) methods for identifying fraudulent
5 documents;

6 (ii) detecting terrorist indicators on
7 travel documents;

8 (iii) recognizing travel patterns, tac-
9 tics, and behaviors exhibited by terrorists;

10 (iv) the use of information contained
11 in available databases and data systems
12 and procedures to maintain the accuracy
13 and integrity of such systems; and

14 (v) other topics determined necessary
15 by the Secretary of Homeland Security and 16 the Secretary of State.

17 (C) CERTIFICATION.—Not later than 1
18 year after the date of enactment of this Act—

19 (i) the Secretary of Homeland Secu-
20 rity shall certify to Congress that all bor-
21 der and immigration officials have received
22 training under this paragraph; and

23 (ii) the Secretary of State shall certify
24 to Congress that all consular officers have 25 received training under this paragraph.

1 (4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

2 There are authorized to be appropriated to the Sec-
3 retary for each of the fiscal years 2005 through 4 2009 such sums as may be necessary to carry out
5 the provisions of this subsection.

6 (d) ENHANCING CLASSIFIED COUNTERTERRORIST
7 TRAVEL EFFORTS.—

8 (1) IN GENERAL.—The National Intelligence
9 Director shall significantly increase resources and 10 personnel to the small classified program that col-
11 lects and analyzes intelligence on terrorist travel.

12 (2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—
13 There are authorized to be appropriated for each of 14 the fiscal years 2005 through 2009 such sums as 15 may be necessary to carry out this subsection.

16 SEC. 602. INTEGRATED SCREENING SYSTEM.

17 (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Homeland Secu-
18 rity shall develop a plan for a comprehensive integrated 19 screening system.

20 (b) DESIGN.—The system planned under subsection
21 (a) shall be designed to—

22 (1) encompass an integrated network of screen-
23 ing points that includes the Nation's border security
24 system, transportation system, and critical infra-

1 structure or facilities that the Secretary determines
2 need to be protected against terrorist attack;

3 (2) build upon existing border enforcement and
4 security activities, and to the extent practicable, pri-
5 vate sector security initiatives, in a manner that will
6 enable the utilization of a range of security check
7 points in a continuous and consistent manner
8 throughout the Nation's screening system;

9 (3) allow access to government databases to de-
10 tect terrorists; and

11 (4) utilize biometric identifiers that the Sec-
12 retary determines to be appropriate and feasible.

13 (c) STANDARDS FOR SCREENING PROCEDURES.—

14 (1) AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary may pro-
15 mulgate standards for screening procedures for—

16 (A) entering and leaving the United
17 States;

18 (B) accessing Federal facilities that the 19 Secretary determines need to be protected
20 against terrorist attack;

21 (C) accessing critical infrastructure that
22 the Secretary determines need to be protected
23 against terrorist attack; and

1 (D) accessing modes of transportation that
2 the Secretary determines need to be protected
3 against terrorist attack.

4 (2) SCOPE.—Standards prescribed under this
5 subsection may address a range of factors, including
6 technologies required to be used in screening and re-
7 quirements for secure identification.

8 (3) REQUIREMENTS.—In promulgating stand-
9 ards for screening procedures, the Secretary shall—

10 (A) consider and incorporate appropriate
11 civil liberties and privacy protections;

12 (B) comply with the Administrative Proce-
13 dure Act; and

14 (C) consult with other Federal, State,
15 local, and tribal governments, and other inter-
16 ested parties, as appropriate.

17 (4) LIMITATION.—This section does not confer
18 to the Secretary new statutory authority, or alter ex-
19 isting authorities, over systems, critical infrastruc-
20 ture, and facilities.

21 (5) NOTIFICATION.—If the Secretary deter-
22 mines that additional regulatory authority is needed
23 to fully implement the plan for an integrated screen-
24 ing system, the Secretary shall immediately notify 25 Congress.

1 (d) COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary may issue regula-
2 tions to ensure compliance with the standards promul-
3 gated under this section.

4 (e) CONSULTATION.—For those systems, critical in-
5 frastructure, and facilities that the Secretary determines
6 need to be protected against terrorist attack, the Secretary
7 shall consult with other Federal agencies, State, local, and 8 tribal governments, and the private sector to ensure the 9 development of consistent standards and consistent imple-
10 mentation of the integrated screening system.

11 (f) BIOMETRIC IDENTIFIERS.—In carrying out this
12 section, the Secretary shall continue to review biometric
13 technologies and existing Federal and State programs
14 using biometric identifiers. Such review shall consider the 15 accuracy rate of available technologies.

16 (g) IMPLEMENTATION.—

17 (1) PHASE I.—The Secretary shall—

18 (A) issue standards for driver's licenses,
19 personal identification cards, and birth certifi-
20 cates, as required under section 606;

21 (B) develop plans for, and begin implemen-
22 tation of, a single program for registered trav-
23 elers to expedite travel across the border, as re-
24 quired under section 603(e);

1 (C) continue the implementation of a bio-
2 metric exit and entry data system that links to 3 relevant databases and data systems, as re-
4 quired by subsections (b) and (c) of section 603
5 and other existing authorities;

6 (D) centralize the “no-fly” and “auto-
7 matic-selectee” lists, making use of improved
8 terrorists watch lists, as required by section
9 703;

10 (E) develop plans, in consultation with 11 other relevant agencies, for the sharing of ter-12 rorist information with trusted governments, as 13 required by section 605;

14 (F) initiate any other action determined

1 SEC. 603. BIOMETRIC ENTRY AND EXIT DATA SYSTEM.

2 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
3 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
4 States, Congress finds that completing a biometric entry
5 and exit data system as expeditiously as possible is an es-
6 sential investment in efforts to protect the United States
7 by preventing the entry of terrorists.

8 (b) PLAN AND REPORT.—

9 (1) DEVELOPMENT OF PLAN.—The Secretary
10 of Homeland Security shall develop a plan to accel-
11 erate the full implementation of an automated bio-
12 metric entry and exit data system required by appli-
13 cable sections of—

14 (A) the Illegal Immigration Reform and 15 Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (Public
16 Law 104–208);

17 (B) the Immigration and Naturalization

4 (2) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after
5 the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary
6 shall submit a report to Congress on the plan devel-

8 (A) a description of the current
9 functionality of the entry and exit data system,
10 including—

11 (i) a listing of ports of entry with bio-
12 metric entry data systems in use and 13 whether such screening systems are located
14 at primary or secondary inspection areas;

15 (ii) a listing of ports of entry with bio-
16 metric exit data systems in use;

17 (iii) a listing of databases and data
18 systems with which the automated entry
19 and exit data system are interoperable;

21 (I) identified deficiencies con-
22 cerning the accuracy or integrity of 23 the information contained in the entry
24 and exit data system;

3 processing individuals through the 4 system; and

5 (III) programs or policies
6 planned or implemented to correct
7 problems identified in subclause (I) or

15 accelerated implementation of the biometric
16 entry and exit system, including—

18 retary estimates that full implementation
19 of the biometric entry and exit data system
20 can be completed;

21 (ii) the actions the Secretary will take 22 to accelerate the full implementation of the 23 biometric entry and exit data system at all
24 ports of entry through which all aliens

1 must pass that are legally required to do
2 so; and

3 (iii) the resources and authorities re-
4 quired to enable the Secretary to meet the 5 implementation date described in clause
6 (i);

7 (C) a description of any improvements
8 needed in the information technology employed
9 for the entry and exit data system; and

10 (D) a description of plans for improved or 11 added interoperability with any other databases
12 or data systems.

13 (c) INTEGRATION REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 2
14 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Sec-
15 retary shall integrate the biometric entry and exit data
16 system with all databases and data systems maintained
17 by the United States Citizenship and Immigration Serv-
18 ices that process or contain information on aliens.

19 (d) MAINTAINING ACCURACY AND INTEGRITY OF 20 ENTRY AND EXIT DATA SYSTEM.—

21 (1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in consulta-
22 tion with other appropriate agencies, shall establish 23 rules, guidelines, policies, and operating and audit-
24 ing procedures for collecting, removing, and updat-
25 ing data maintained in, and adding information to,

1 the entry and exit data system, and databases and
2 data systems linked to the entry and exit data sys-
3 tem, that ensure the accuracy and integrity of the 4 data.

5 (2) REQUIREMENTS.—The rules, guidelines,
6 policies, and procedures established under paragraph 7 (1) shall—

8 (A) incorporate a simple and timely meth-
9 od for—

10 (i) correcting errors; and

11 (ii) clarifying information known to 12 cause false hits or misidentification errors;
13 and

14 (B) include procedures for individuals to 15 seek corrections of data contained in the data
16 systems.

17 (e) EXPEDITING REGISTERED TRAVELERS ACROSS
18 INTERNATIONAL BORDERS.—

19 (1) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of 20 the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon 21 the United States, Congress finds that—

22 (A) expediting the travel of previously
23 screened and known travelers across the bor-
24 ders of the United States should be a high pri-
25 ority; and

1 (B) the process of expediting known trav-
2 elers across the border can permit inspectors to 3 better focus on identifying terrorists attempting
4 to enter the United States.

5 (2) DEFINITION.—The term “registered trav-
6 eler program” means any program designed to expe-
7 dite the travel of previously screened and known
8 travelers across the borders of the United States.

9 (3) REGISTERED TRAVEL PLAN.—

10 (A) IN GENERAL.—As soon as is prac-
11 ticable, the Secretary shall develop and imple-
12 ment a plan to expedite the processing of reg-
13 istered travelers who enter and exit the United 14 States through a single registered traveler pro-
15 gram.

16 (B) INTEGRATION.—The registered trav-
17 eler program developed under this paragraph
18 shall be integrated into the automated biometric
19 entry and exit data system described in this 20 section.

21 (C) REVIEW AND EVALUATION.—In devel-
22 oping the program under this paragraph, the 23 Secretary shall—

24 (i) review existing programs or pilot
25 projects designed to expedite the travel of

1 registered travelers across the borders of 2 the United States;

4 programs described in clause (i), the costs
5 associated with such programs, and the 6 costs to travelers to join such programs;
7 and

8 (iii) increase research and develop-
9 ment efforts to accelerate the development
10 and implementation of a single registered
11 traveler program.

12 (4) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the 13 date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall 14 submit to Congress a report describing the Depart-
15 ment's progress on the development and implemen-
16 tation of the plan required by this subsection.

17 (e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There
18 are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary, for 19 each of the fiscal years 2005 through 2009, such sums
20 as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this
21 section.

22 SEC. 604. TRAVEL DOCUMENTS.

23 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
24 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
25 States, Congress finds that—

1 (1) existing procedures allow many individuals
2 to enter the United States by showing minimal iden-
3 tification or without showing any identification;

4 (2) the planning for the terrorist attacks of 5 September 11, 2001, demonstrates that terrorists
6 study and exploit United States vulnerabilities; and

7 (3) additional safeguards are needed to ensure
8 that terrorists cannot enter the United States.

9 (b) BIOMETRIC PASSPORTS.—

10 (1) DEVELOPMENT OF PLAN.—The Secretary
11 of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Sec-
12 retary of State, shall develop and implement a plan
13 as expeditiously as possible to require biometric
14 passports or other identification deemed by the Sec-
15 retary to be at least as secure as a biometric pass-
16 port, for all travel into the United States by United 17 States citizens and by categories of individuals for 18 whom documentation requirements have previously
19 been waived under section 212(d)(4)(B) of the Im-
20 migration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C.
21 1182(d)(4)(B)).

22 (2) REQUIREMENT TO PRODUCE DOCUMENTA-
23 TION.—The plan developed under paragraph (1)
24 shall require all United States citizens, and cat-
25 egories of individuals for whom documentation re-

1 requirements have previously been waived under see-
2 tion 212(d)(4)(B) of such Act, to carry and produce
3 the documentation described in paragraph (1) when 4 traveling from foreign countries into the United
5 States.

6 (c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—
7 After the complete implementation of the plan described
8 in subsection (b)—

9 (1) the Secretary of State and the Attorney
10 General may no longer exercise discretion under sec-
11 tion 212(d)(4)(B) of such Act to waive documentary
12 requirements for travel into the United States; and 13 (2) the President may no longer exercise discre-

14 tion under section 215(b) of such Act to waive docu-
15 mentary requirements for United States citizens de-
16 parting from or entering, or attempting to depart
17 from or enter, the United States, unless the Sec-
18 retary of State determines that the alternative docu-
19 mentation that is the basis for the waiver of the docu-
20 mentary requirement is at least as secure as a bio-
21 metric passport.

22 (d) TRANSIT WITHOUT VISA PROGRAM.—The Sec-
23 retary of State shall not use any authorities granted under 24 section 212(d)(4)(C) of such Act until the Secretary, in 25 conjunction with the Secretary of Homeland Security,

1 completely implements a security plan to fully ensure se-
2 cure transit passage areas to prevent aliens proceeding in 3 immediate and continuous transit through the United
4 States from illegally entering the United States.

5 SEC. 605. EXCHANGE OF TERRORIST INFORMATION.

6 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
7 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
8 States, Congress finds that—

9 (1) the exchange of terrorist information with 10 other countries, consistent with privacy require-
11 ments, along with listings of lost and stolen pass-
12 ports, will have immediate security benefits; and

13 (2) the further away from the borders of the 14 United States that screening occurs, the more secu-
15 rity benefits the United States will gain.

16 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
17 gress that—

18 (1) the United States Government should ex-
19 change terrorist information with trusted allies;

20 (2) the United States Government should move 21 toward real-time verification of passports with 22 issuing authorities;

23 (3) where practicable the United States Govern-
24 ment should conduct screening before a passenger
25 departs on a flight destined for the United States;

1 (4) the United States Government should work
2 with other countries to ensure effective inspection
3 regimes at all airports;

4 (5) the United States Government should work
5 with other countries to improve passport standards
6 and provide foreign assistance to countries that need
7 help making the transition to the global standard for 8 identification; and

9 (6) the Department of Homeland Security, in 10 coordination with the Department of State and other 11 agencies, should implement the initiatives called for 12 in this subsection.

13 (c) REPORT REGARDING THE EXCHANGE OF TER-
14 RORIST INFORMATION.—

15 (1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days
16 after the date of enactment of this Act, the Sec-
17 retary of State and the Secretary of Homeland Secu-
18 rity, working with other agencies, shall submit to the 19 appropriate committees of Congress a report on 20 Federal efforts to collaborate with allies of the 21 United States in the exchange of terrorist informa-
22 tion.

23 (2) CONTENTS.—The report shall outline—

24 (A) strategies for increasing such collabo-
25 ration and cooperation;

1 (B) progress made in screening passengers
2 before their departure to the United States; and

3 (C) efforts to work with other countries to 4 accomplish the goals described under this sec-
5 tion.

18 “(A) at a minimum, shall require certifi-
19 cation of the birth certificate by the State or

21 issued the certificate, and shall require the use

20 1934 (47 U.S.C. 309(j)(14)) is amended by adding at the 21 end the following:

22 “(E) EXTENSIONS NOT PERMITTED FOR
23 CHANNELS (63, 64, 68 AND 69) REASSIGNED
24 FOR PUBLIC SAFETY SERVICES.—Notwith-
25 standing subparagraph (B), the Commission

1 shall not grant any extension under such sub-
2 paragraph from the limitation of subparagraph
3 (A) with respect to the frequencies assigned,
4 under section 337(a)(1), for public safety serv-
5 ices. The Commission shall take all actions nec-
6 essary to complete assignment of the electro-
7 magnetic spectrum between 764 and 776 mega-
8 hertz, inclusive, and between 794 and 806
9 megahertz, inclusive, for public safety services
10 and to permit operations by public safety serv-
11 ices on those frequencies commencing not later
12 than January 1, 2007.”.

13 SEC. 805. URBAN AREA COMMUNICATIONS CAPABILITIES.

14 (a) IN GENERAL.—Title V of the Homeland Security
15 Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 311 et seq.) is amended by adding 16 at the end the following:

17 “SEC. 510. HIGH RISK URBAN AREA COMMUNICATIONS CA-
18 PABILITIES.

19 “The Secretary, in consultation with the Federal 20 Communications Commission and the Secretary of De-
21 fense, and with appropriate governors, mayors, and other 22 State and local government officials, shall encourage and 23 support the establishment of consistent and effective com-
24 munications capabilities in the event of an emergency in 25 urban areas determined by the Secretary to be at consist-

1 ently high levels of risk from terrorist attack. Such com-
2 munications capabilities shall ensure the ability of all lev-
3 els of government agencies, including military authorities,
4 and of first responders, hospitals, and other organizations
5 with emergency response capabilities to communicate with 6 each other in the event of an emergency. Additionally, the 7 Secretary, in conjunction with the Secretary of Defense,
8 shall develop plans to provide back-up and additional com-
9 munications support in the event of an emergency.”.

10 (b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—
11 Section 1(b) of that Act is amended by inserting after the 12 item relating to section 509 the following:

“Sec. 510. High risk urban area communications capabilities.”.

13 SEC. 806. PRIVATE SECTOR PREPAREDNESS.

14 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
15 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
16 States, Congress makes the following findings:

17 (1) Private sector organizations own 85 percent
18 of the Nation’s critical infrastructure and employ
19 the vast majority of the Nation’s workers.

20 (2) Unless a terrorist attack targets a military
21 or other secure government facility, the first people
22 called upon to respond will likely be civilians.

23 (3) Despite the exemplary efforts of some pri-
24 vate entities, the private sector remains largely un-
25 prepared for a terrorist attack, due in part to the

1 lack of a widely accepted standard for private sector
2 preparedness.

3 (4) Preparedness in the private sector and pub-
4 lic sector for rescue, restart and recovery of oper-
5 ations should include—

6 (A) a plan for evacuation;

7 (B) adequate communications capabilities;

8 and

9 (C) a plan for continuity of operations.

10 (5) The American National Standards Institute
11 recommends a voluntary national preparedness
12 standard for the private sector based on the existing 13 American National Standard on Disaster/Emergency
14 Management and Business Continuity Programs
15 (NFPA 1600), with appropriate modifications. This 16 standard would establish a common set of criteria
17 and terminology for preparedness, disaster manage-
18 ment, emergency management, and business con-
19 tinuity programs.

20 (6) The mandate of the Department of Home-
21 land Security extends to working with the private 22 sector, as well as government entities.

23 (b) PRIVATE SECTOR PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM.—

24 (1) IN GENERAL.—Title V of the Homeland Se-
25 curity Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. 311 et seq.), as amend-

1 ed by section 805, is amended by adding at the end
2 the following:

3 “SEC. 511. PRIVATE SECTOR PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM.

4 “The Secretary shall establish a program to promote
5 private sector preparedness for terrorism and other emer-
6 gencies, including promoting the adoption of a voluntary
7 national preparedness standard such as the private sector
8 preparedness standard developed by the American Na-
9 tional Standards Institute and based on the National Fire
10 Protection Association 1600 Standard on Disaster/Emer-
11 gency Management and Business Continuity Programs.”.

12 (2) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMEND-
13 MENT.—Section 1(b) of that Act, as amended by 14 section 805, is amended by inserting after the item
15 relating to section 510 the following:

“Sec. 511. Private sector preparedness program.”.

16 (c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
17 gress that insurance and credit-rating industries should 18 consider compliance with the voluntary national prepared-19 ness standard, the adoption of which is promoted by the 20 Secretary of Homeland Security under section 511 of the 21 Homeland Security Act of 2002, as added by subsection
22 (b), in assessing insurability and credit worthiness.

23 SEC. 807. CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE AND READINESS AS-
24 SESSMENTS.

25 (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

1 (1) Under section 201 of the Homeland Security
2 Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C 121), the Department of
3 Homeland Security, through the Under Secretary
4 for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection,
5 has the responsibility—

6 (A) to carry out comprehensive assessments
7 of the vulnerabilities of the key resources
8 and critical infrastructure of the United States,
9 including the performance of risk assessments
10 to determine the risks posed by particular types
11 of terrorist attacks within the United States;

12 (B) to identify priorities for protective and 13 supportive measures; and

14 (C) to develop a comprehensive national 15 plan for securing the key resources and critical
16 infrastructure of the United States.

17 (2) Under Homeland Security Presidential Di-
18 rective 7, issued on December 17, 2003, the Sec-
19 retary of Homeland Security was given 1 year to de-
20 velop a comprehensive plan to identify, prioritize,
21 and coordinate the protection of critical infrastruc-
22 ture and key resources.

23 (3) Consistent with the report of the National 24 Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United

1 States, the Secretary of Homeland Security
2 should—

3 (A) identify those elements of the United
4 States' transportation, energy, communications,
5 financial, and other institutions that need to be 6 protected;

7 (B) develop plans to protect that infra-
8 structure; and

9 (C) exercise mechanisms to enhance pre-
10 paredness.

11 (b) REPORTS ON RISK ASSESSMENT AND READI-
12 NESS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enact-
13 ment of this Act and annually thereafter, the Secretary
14 of Homeland Security shall submit a report to Congress
15 on—

16 (1) the Department of Homeland Security's
17 progress in completing vulnerability and risk assess-
18 ments of the Nation's critical infrastructure;

19 (2) the adequacy of the Government's plans to 20 protect such infrastructure; and

21 (3) the readiness of the Government to respond
22 to threats against the United States.

1 SEC. 808. REPORT ON NORTHERN COMMAND AND DEFENSE
2 OF THE UNITED STATES HOMELAND.

3 (a) FINDINGS.—Consistent with the report of the Na-
4 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United
5 States, Congress makes the following findings:

6 (1) The primary responsibility for national de-
7 fense is with the Department of Defense and the 8 secondary responsibility for national defense is with 9 the Department of Homeland Security, and the 2
10 departments must have clear delineations of respon-
11 sibility.

12 (2) Before September 11, 2001, the North
13 American Aerospace Defense Command (hereafter in 14 this section referred to as “NORAD”), which had 15 responsibility for defending United States airspace
16 on September 11, 2001—

17 (A) focused on threats coming from out-
18 side the borders of the United States; and

19 (B) had not increased its focus on ter-
20 rorism within the United States, even though
21 the intelligence community had gathered intel-
22 ligence on the possibility that terrorists might 23 turn to hijacking and even the use of airplanes
24 as missiles within the United States.

1 (3) The United States Northern Command has
2 been established to assume responsibility for defense
3 within the United States.

4 (b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Con-
5 gress that—

6 (1) the Secretary of Defense should regularly
7 assess the adequacy of United States Northern Com-
8 mand’s plans and strategies with a view to ensuring 9 that the United States Northern Command is pre-
10 pared to respond effectively to all military and para-
11 military threats within the United States; and

12 (2) the Committee on Armed Services of the 13 Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the 14 House of Representatives should periodically review
15 and assess the adequacy of such plans and strate-
16 gies.

17 (c) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date
18 of the enactment of this Act, and every 180 days there-
19 after, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Com-
20 mittee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Com-
21 mittee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives
22 a report describing the United States Northern Com-
23 mand’s plans and strategies to defend the United States
24 against military and paramilitary threats within the 25 United States.

5 (a) IN GENERAL.—There is established within the 6 Executive Office of the President a Privacy and Civil Lib-

10 tional Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United

20 utive departments and agencies to ensure that

24 guidelines; and

1 (D) in providing advice on proposals to re-
2 tain or enhance a particular governmental
3 power, consider whether the executive depart-
4 ment or agency has explained—

5 (i) that the power actually materially

8 of the executive's use of the power to en-
9 sure protection of civil liberties.

10 (2) OVERSIGHT.—The Board shall continually
11 review—

12 (A) the regulations, policies, and proce-

15 Federal executive departments and agencies to 16 ensure that privacy and civil liberties are pro-
17 tected;

18 (B) the information sharing practices of 19 Federal executive departments and agencies to 20 determine whether they appropriately protect 21 privacy and civil liberties and adhere to the in-

7 laws, regulations, and policies regarding 8 privacy and civil liberties.

9 (3) RELATIONSHIP WITH PRIVACY AND CIVIL

15 (b) EXCEPTION TO DESIGNATION AUTHORITY.—

Mr. CONYERS. Ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, I offer this amendment in the name of myself, Jerry Nadler, Robert Scott, Sheila Jackson Lee, William Delahunt, and Adam Schiff. And what it is, simply, is the same measures, bipartisan measures, S. 2774, introduced by Senators McCain and Lieberman in the Senate, and H.R. 5040, introduced by members Shays and Maloney in the House. There are more than 40 bipartisan sponsors in the House and the same measures have been reported by the Senate Intelligence Committee on a unanimous basis.

Our substitute represents a truly comprehensive 9/11 reform bill. The approach outlined in this substitute has been endorsed by members of the 9/11 Commission and family members of the 9/11 victims.

The substitute includes strong budgetary authority for the newly created National Intelligence Director, it protects civil liberties through the creation of a Civil Liberties Board, it targets terrorists traveling, and addresses the need for congressional reform as recommended by the 9/11 Commission.

But most important, it's what is not in the substitute, namely, none of the extraneous law enforcement provisions, nothing that would call for the establishment of unfettered and unrestricted background checks on employees, nothing to punish innocent immigrant and asylum victims, nothing to involve new restrictions on legal liability, and no new national ID cards.

All these provisions fall way outside the scope of the recommendations of the 9/11, and that's why we've left them out of the substitute.

By adopting the substitute text for the markup we can basically guarantee the reform of the law enforcement, the intelligence community, and our Nation's needs which would become so important.

Ladies and gentlemen, this, to me, is the heart of our debate today. I urge you to give this your careful consideration. I return any unused time, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The base bill provides clear legislative implementation of the 9/11 Commission recommendations. The Senate bill and the substitute do not. In the interest of being expeditiously considered in the other body, the Senate bill abdicates too much of the legislative branch's responsibility to the executive branch. The people's elected representatives should not punt to the bureaucracy on so many important issues.

The base bill better protects Americans against future terrorist threats by incorporating several provisions to better secure America's borders against terrorist infiltration. The Senate bill and the substitute do not. Why the Senate bill and the substitute choose to ignore some of the most important findings of the 9/11 Commission and their staff about vulnerabilities in our immigration system exploited by terrorists, I can't say. And I remind everybody that at least 15 of the 19 9/11 hijackers were illegally in the United States on September 11.

The bill that is being considered by this Committee does something about these identified weaknesses and for that reason alone the bill we're considering today is superior to the Senate product and the substitute, and the amendment should be defeated.

The base bill has integrated structural civil liberties protections, including a privacy officer to ensure that the National Intelligence Director adequately weighs the privacy implications of intelligence activities, and government-wide changes to Administrative Procedures Act to require the consideration of the privacy impact on all rulemaking and regulations. The Senate bill and the substitute have none of these provisions.

H.R. 10 also creates privacy officers and other Federal law enforcement and antiterrorism agencies. The Senate bill and the substitute do not.

The Senate bill and the substitute lack meaningful litigation management provisions to protect first responders against lawsuit abuse, particularly in the area of granting mutual aid.

The Senate bill did not receive the consideration and deliberation that is being accorded to the base bill. It's largely the product of one Committee over there rather than the integrated product of several Committees with years of expertise in certain subject areas. In the House these standing Committees are being allowed to mark the bill up and make amendments to the bill, which we're doing today. The Senate is not allowing multiple Committees to even consider the bill. And the regular legislative process always results in a better product than something that does not go through the process that we're doing today.

Furthermore, the Senate bill and the substitute is undergoing potential changes on the floor of the other body even as we speak. So this amendment is a snapshot in time of a bill. As introduced, it may be significantly different in the important respects from ultimately what is passed.

I think that what we are doing is better in immigration, better in law enforcement, better in privacy protections, better in civil liberties protections than the Senate bill and the substitute, and thus I would urge the rejection of the substitute amendment.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Coble.

Mr. COBLE. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. COBLE. I will not require 5 minutes.

I believe that if we lump homeland security and intelligence under one Committee, I have the fear that it may result in Judiciary not having jurisdiction. That's the fear I have. And of course we're famous for jealously protecting turf on this Hill, and I may be guilty of doing that in speaking in opposition. But that's the fear I have.

I yield back.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in support of this amendment offered by Mr. Conyers and myself and a number of others.

We should be enacting and passing, as I said before, the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. There are many other provisions in this bill which have no relations, and some a tangential relation, to the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. And some of those provisions—and frankly this is a massive bill; I'm still trying to assimilate some of these provisions and their implications—may be worthwhile, and some raise very serious civil liberties concerns.

We should separate it out, enact the substitute that Mr. Conyers and others have just put before us, and separately hold hearings and properly vet and study, and perhaps enact, the other recommendations in this bill.

As we learned or should have learned with the PATRIOT Act, many of whose provisions are fine and unexceptionable, some of whose provisions I think many people who voted for that bill now realize they wouldn't have had they really understood the implications, when you're dealing with civil liberties there's a sensible—sensitive, I should say, balancing test between national security and personal liberty. And it's the kind of balancing that we have to do carefully.

And these provisions—this bill was first introduced on September 24th, which is to say 5 days ago. And we've been trying to scramble and understand them. These provisions, just as the provisions of the PATRIOT Act, should be published and disseminated to the law schools, to the civil liberties unions, to the district attorneys, to the friends of law enforcement, to all people who are interested across the country. We should get their comments. We should hold hearings. We should understand the implications. We should mark them up properly, not in haste, so that we do an intelligent job. And we should pass them in time, those that we chose to pass.

To rush them through as part of the 9/11 bill so that if anybody decides that some of these provisions are obnoxious or are too destructive of civil liberties or aren't properly balanced, they must vote against the bill that will be painted as embodying the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission is wrong. You shouldn't put a Member of Congress in that position. You shouldn't put his constituents in that position.

So, Mr. Conyers's amendment, which would say let's take the 9/11 Commission recommendations and enact them and let's separately consider all these other things and separately consider them in a way that is deliberative, makes eminent sense, is in the best interests of both the national security of this country and the civil liberties of people of this country, which is what makes this country great. I urge the adoption of this substitute.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana seek recognition?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I yield to the chair.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

When the 9/11 Commission delivered its recommendations at the end of July, we heard a hue and cry saying that Congress should skip the August recess, that we should pass the 9/11 Commission recommendations right away. During the August recess, this Committee had two hearings on 9/11 Commission recommendations. Granted, it did not relate to the actual text of legislation, but it did relate to the recommendations that were contained in the Commission's report. And there were other Committees that also considered various parts of the 9/11 Commission's report within their respective jurisdiction.

Now, after being told we ought to hurry up, we're being told we ought to slow matters down. Now, one of the things that I've been really insistent on in major legislation like this is using the regular Committee process. And that is what we're doing now. And there have been a number of amendments that have been adopted that have been offered by my friends on the other side of the aisle, and they were good amendments. That's how the process works.

Should we adopt this amendment in the nature of a substitute, all that good work would be wiped out because I don't think that the text of those amendments are in the substitute that has been offered by the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Conyers.

I think that it is incumbent upon us to deal with as many of the 9/11 Commission recommendations as we possibly can before this Congress's life goes out of business and hopefully before we adjourn. What we're doing here today, I think, is reflective of the process that has worked so well for this country. When the time comes for us to make decisions, we're making decisions today in Committee; hopefully next week we'll make decisions on the floor; and if there is a conference Committee, that we can reconcile the differences between our passed bill and the Senate bill relatively promptly.

But to say that we're rushing into this, I think, is really a misrepresentation because we have been working on this ever since the 9/11 Commission made its recommendations about 2 months ago.

I yield back to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I thank the chairman. And just speaking on the issues of immigration and border security, the substitute has virtually no provisions to ensure that terrorists do not enter the United States. The substitute displays a total lack of understanding of our immigration law and the ways in which the 9/11 hijackers and other alien terrorists have abused our immigration system to gain access to our country. But thankfully, the families of the victims of September 11, 2001, in a letter from 9/11 Families for a Secure America, understand the importance of reforming our immigration law when they said, "We are heartened by the inclusion in the bill of provisions that increase the numbers of Border Patrol and ICE"—or Immigration and Customs Enforcement—"agents."

They do that because they recognize that three of the 19 hijackers were residing in the country illegally and that if we had had the resources in the former Immigration and Naturalization Service, INS, to find out why individuals had overstayed their visas, that in fact we might have been able to disrupt or completely foil September 11—

Mr. DELAHUNT. Would the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOSTETTLER.—taking place there.

If I have time.

The 9/11 Commission stated further, on page 390 of its report, that “today more than nine million people are in the United States outside the legal immigration system. We must be able to monitor and respond to entrances by illegal aliens between our ports of entry.”

As it is easy for aliens to illegally cross our borders, it would also be relatively easy for foreign terrorists to enter or stay in the United States as a result of overstaying legally obtained visas. Periodic reports of large numbers of nations from terrorist-supporting countries crossing the southern border were verified by the recent release of Border Patrol data showing that in just the period from last October through this June, 44,614 non-Mexican aliens were caught trying to cross the northern or southern borders, including many from the Middle East.

Yet the substitute ignores this recommendation. The substitute doesn’t provide vitally needed additional funding for Border Patrol agents. And they don’t require expedited removal procedures against aliens caught trying to sneak into the U.S.

The 9/11 Commission, in another location, stated on page 388 of its report that, “Americans should not be exempt from carrying biometric passports or otherwise enabling their identities to be securely verified when they enter the United States. Currently U.S. persons are exempt from carrying passports when returning from Canada, Mexico, and the Caribbean.” Otherwise known as the Western Hemisphere exemption.

D.C. sniper John Mohammad made a living by exploiting this exception and smuggling aliens pretending to be——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Delahunt.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I was really taken aback——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Move to strike the last word?

Mr. DELAHUNT. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And I will yield to the gentlelady. But before I do, I’m listening to the gentleman from Indiana and I guess my question is what have we been doing since 2001? What have we been doing?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Will the gentleman yield for an answer to his question?

Mr. DELAHUNT. Yes, I will.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Since early 2003, as chairman of the Immigration, Border Security, and Claims Subcommittee, we have been holding hearings on the impact of illegal and legal——

Mr. DELAHUNT. Reclaiming my time. We’ve been holding hearings. That’s what we’ve been doing. We’ve been holding hearings since 2003. The gentleman speaks to the lack of resources. But I remind the gentleman that it’s the majority party that controls the House and the Senate and the White House. I guess the bottom line is we’ve done nothing, according to the gentleman from Indiana, since 2001 about closing our porous borders.

With that, I will yield to the gentlelady from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the distinguished gentleman for his yielding. Might I join in supporting the amendment offered by our Ranking Member, myself, and a number of my colleagues.

Let me just offer a point that has not been said again in this august room, and that is the fact this month, on September 11, represents 3 years that the families of those who lost their lives or those who were injured have had to live with this tragedy and no action. I think it is appropriate to view this 9/11 Commission report as a large apology to the families that has not often been said for the failures of this Government. That is why this particular amendment is the amendment that should be passed. This Commission report responds to the failures of our Government.

Let us be very honest about that. We failed. And everybody can talk about who was inside the Government or inside the United States or who was outside. The systems broke down. And the legislation that is offered by the underlying bill offered by the Republican chairs, full of extraneous issues dealing with immigration and law enforcement, they're important, but they're not important to deal with the parameters of our concern.

One, this bill does not give budgetary authority to the intelligence director. It has a bunch of overlapping, I think, distractions and inability to get the job done. This bill does not deal with border security as we would like it, as 9/11 suggested, and incorporate the US-VISIT program at all of the borders. It doesn't do that in the Republican bill. And it is that, because it doesn't have any input from anyone else.

And so this bill clearly does not respond to the hard work that was done not only by the Commission but legislators. This bill—or the amendment of John Conyers has been legislated. It has brought in the ideas of individuals that understand civil liberties, that understand the importance of intelligence. The reason why those 9/11 terrorists were here is because our intelligence system broke down or somebody didn't listen to it. Because out in the West, the FBI had on their desks information regarding individuals going to pilot schools learning to take off and not land. That was in the United States of America. That's intelligence.

And our counselor officers did not have the ability to deal with individuals that they were giving visas. We are fixing that. You're wasting time talking about this bill represents collective thought. It does not. The Commission report represents collective thought and it represents the thought of the 9/11 families who have generated America's views as to how we need to do this.

And we are wasting time. You can put this bill at the desk of the House right now and pass it. This is a waste of time.

And the only thing I would say is we will continue today with amendments when we can go forward and work forward-thinking people and use the 9/11 Commission report as the basis. All of us have met with the 9/11 commissioners. All of us have. We have deliberated, we've analyzed, we've thought about it. The bill that's underlying is missing in elements that are crucial to the success of security for America.

And I would suggest that out of an apology comes action and a commitment not to do it again. The 9/11 Commission report gives us the roadmap, and we legislatively can adopt that. Mr. Chairman, we can always go back to delayed hearings and markups for these extraneous ideas that are in this underlying bill dealing with immigration law enforcement. Right now, the apology should turn into——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I ask my colleagues to support it. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question——

Mr. KING. Mr. Chairman? Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Iowa, Mr. King, is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KING. I thank the chairman.

I'd like to point out to this Committee that we have 9/11 Commission recommendations. This is a commission, by my count, of 10 people. These 10 people did their best to sort this information out and make a recommendation to this Nation. We are not bound by any of those recommendations. The Commission are independent 10 minds, just like we are on this Committee here and all of us in the Congress, in the House and in the Senate.

Yet those Commission reports do call for action. And we have been seeking to listen to the recommendations. The Conyers amendment in the nature of a substitute fails to provide specific implementation direction. The 9/11 Commission report calls for action. The chairman's called for action. We're here to provide action. We're not limited to the scope of the 9/11 Commission. In fact, they had a responsibility to look at the entire security apparatus in the United States of America. That's what this bill seeks to do.

I would yield to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Hostettler.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I'd just like to add—I thank the gentleman for yielding—just to add a hearty amen to the notion that none of the members of the 9/11 Commission were elected from the 8th District of Indiana to determine what is necessary to keep the United States secure. We appreciate their work and their long hours and their recommendations, and we think that it's a natural base for legislation to make America more safe and more secure.

And in fact, since September 11, 2001, there have been numerous hearings to determine what took place on September 11 and to try to fix the problems. And we are going to take action. And when the Republican-controlled majority of the House of Representatives puts a bill forward that doubles the number of Border Patrol agents and triples the number of immigration special agents in order to keep America safe and secure, all of us will be more than happy to go to the people who elected us—once again, not the 9/11 Commission—to place into law the important policy as well as resources necessary to keep us secure.

So, we have been deliberating. We apologize to the minority for deliberating on these very important issues. But as a result of those deliberations over the last 3 years, we have come to a conclusion that we need to enhance the policy and greatly increase the resources, especially the personnel resources——

Mr. KING. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER.—necessary to keep this Nation safe so that 9/11 does not repeat itself.

Mr. KING. Would the gentleman yield?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. And with that, Mr. Chairman, I ask for unanimous consent to insert into the record a letter from the 9/11 Families for a Secure America that supports the base bill and, if I may, jealously once again add that calls for and says they are heartened by the inclusion in the bill of an increase in the number of Border Patrol and ICE agents to keep—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the letter will be—

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman? Would the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. KING. I'll yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Reserve the right to object on that add to—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia reserves the right to object to putting the letter in the record.

Mr. SCOTT. And I would just ask him to restate who the letter was from.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. If the gentleman will yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. The letter is from an organization called 9/11 Families for a Secure America. And it has the name of the boards of directors of the 9/11 Families for a Secure America as—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Is there objection to including the letter in the record?

Hearing none, so ordered.

The Honorable James Sensenbrenner
Chairman, Judiciary Committee
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515
Fax: 202-225-3190

Dear Chairman Sensenbrenner:

We are writing to express the support and thanks of 9/11 Families for a Secure America for the provisions in Title III of H.R. 10, the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act. These provisions would go a long way toward closing the loopholes that allowed 19 terrorists -- all of whom had violated our immigration laws in one way or another -- to enter and move freely around our country while they honed their plot to murder our loved ones.

We strongly urge the Members of the Judiciary Committee to retain the immigration provisions included in H.R. 10. We believe that implementation of Title III would improve homeland security dramatically and help to ensure that no other American families have to experience the devastating grief, the debilitating loss, and the overwhelming rage that we have known every day for more than three years now.

We are heartened by the inclusion in the bill of provisions that: require both U.S. citizens and aliens to prove their identity upon entry with secure, verifiable documents; preclude acceptance by Federal employees of consular ID cards; insist that DHS expand its use of expedited removal and prevent illegal aliens from abusing our judicial process to delay deportation; and increase the numbers of Border Patrol and ICE agents.

All of these provisions fall well within the scope of the 9/11 Commission's recommendations, and so should be enacted and implemented as quickly as possible. Our efforts over the past three years to get elected officials to recognize and address the current immigration crisis have taught us that even the most reasonable and sensible immigration reform proposals languish in Congress because our elected leaders are either blinded by special interests or afraid of being vilified by them. We commend you and the House Republican Leadership for your willingness to address immigration reform in H.R. 10, while the sponsors of every other so-called "9/11 bill" completely ignored it. It is incomprehensible to us that any reasonable person could believe that immigration reform plays no legitimate role in our response to the attacks.

We are outraged that terrorists and murderers are able to frustrate efforts to deport them by claiming that they will be tortured upon being returned home. Even worse, when they have committed their heinous crimes overseas and are thus not easily prosecutable here in America, their use of the Convention Against Torture allows them to escape justice. We are strongly supportive of sections 3031 and sections 3032 of H.R. 10, which would end this intolerable abuse of our immigration laws.

There is, however, one glaring omission in H.R. 10. The 9/11 Commission specifically recommended enhanced cooperation with and training of state and local law enforcement officers on immigration law, yet H.R. 10 includes no mention of this recommendation. We hope you will bring up the CLEAR Act, H.R. 2671, for a full committee markup as soon as possible in order to complete the 9/11 Commission's work.

Members of Congress have promised us repeatedly over the last three years that they would honor our loved ones who were murdered three years ago by enacting reforms to ensure that Americans will never again face the same horror. We hope you will honor those promises by supporting the immigration provisions already in the bill and by opposing any effort to protect a status quo that aided the murderers who tore apart our families on September 11, 2001.

Sincerely,
Board of Directors 9/11 Families for a Secure America

Mr. SCOTT. Will the gentleman from Iowa yield?
Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Iowa has yielded back.

The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WEINER. The gentleman from Indiana gave the best explanation about why we should pass the base core 9/11 principles as articulated in the amendment by the gentleman from Michigan. And that is that they were not elected. They were not setting out a political agenda one way or the other. They engaged in far better hearings than any Committee of this Congress did. They put together a far better report than ours. They looked at this thing from beginning to end. They had consensus support of this country. They had consensus report from the 9/11 families in their pursuit.

Many people were very much opposed to that Commission being created. One of them is in the White House. Even the President came around and said this was a good thing. When it was done, it was uniformly praised. Anyone who reads that 9/11 Commission report sees how thorough it was, sees how balanced it was, sees how it spread blame where blame needed to be and put in a level of thoughtfulness to this that transcended politics. That's why it has the support in the country that it has.

We are here in the waning moments of our session. A lot of the things that are in, Mr. Sensenbrenner, Mr. Cox, and amendments that we're offering today, have a great deal of value. But if we want to live up to the work of the 9/11 Commission, we mustn't let another anniversary go by without acting on some of them.

We're not saying you can't do things beyond it, but right now, right here, on the eve of our election, are we really going to go back to our constituents and say that because of legislative gridlock and election year, whatever, we're not going to take the recommendations in this report and implement them?

Why don't we get what we can get now? It's something that has broad support in the Senate, something that I believe many of the recommendations that are in the report and in the language of Mr. Conyers's bill you would vote for almost all of them. All I heard you articulate was that there are other things that we can do. You bet there are, and I hope that we do them when President Kerry takes office.

But the point that I'm making today is that we have a moment—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEINER. Certainly, sir. [Laughter.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will that be in 2009 or 2013? [Laughter.]

Mr. WEINER. Point taken.

But let us say this. I was one that was of the belief that when this report came out we should have returned from the Democratic convention, that we should have suspended our recess. We should have walked down here and said up or down. Some of us would vote no, some of us would vote yes, some of us would have caveats, but vote on them. Say that finally we have a package that has unified at least this bipartisan Commission.

And what you say is the reason you oppose it, that they're not representing, they don't represent any element of the political spectrum, is exactly why we should try to do this. We are in a moment of extraordinarily fractured electorate with all kinds of different views about different issues. We have a 50-50 country, a 50-50 Congress. But if there was consensus about anything in the last year, it was about the thoroughness of this report and about the wisdom of their recommendations.

Can we not put aside political jousting for the moment? Can we not put aside our other things that we all think are great ideas, whether it be to keep things open or closed or have more cops or less cops, and pursue what's in this proposal? That's what Mr. Conyers is arguing. Let's try to get this done. President Bush stood up and said he thought the report was excellent. Members of both parties did. Well, now let's do it.

How do we explain to the victims of September 11 that they have this gut-wrenching story that's been told to Congress with a whole section of what to do, and we not doing it because we want to add something else that we like or because they're not elected? I don't care who elected them. This is a work that provides for us the most thorough foundation for legislation you're going to find anywhere.

And now Mr. Conyers is giving us a chance to vote on it up or down, the Senate's going to have a chance to vote on it up or down, and maybe lightning will strike. And in the moment of this political debate, when the country is saying, please, can't you guys get together on anything, we can use the searing memory of September 11, as articulated in this gut-wrenching report, as a basis for legislation.

If we're able to do that, that will be a blessed day. And you say it will be a nonpartisan day and that none of the people who were elected, so be it. I will gladly say that this is a nonpartisan proposal, and that's a virtue, not a vice.

Mr. SMITH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEINER. I'll be glad to yield whatever time I have left. [Applause.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Texas, Mr. Smith.

Mr. SMITH. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I would like to refocus our attention on the text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute at hand. We have been discussing many important subjects here for the last few minutes, but sometimes I wonder if they're really relevant to what the debate should be on, and that is the underlying amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Let's look, for example, at section 302, titled Reorganization of congressional jurisdiction. That section alone gives us three good reasons to oppose the underlying amendment.

First of all, as the title suggests, this is really telling Congress, many in the majority party, how to organization Congress. That should be opposed because of that.

Number two, it takes away the law enforcement jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, which we should all have an interest in, and gives it to a new Homeland Security and Intelligence Committee. We should oppose it for that reason as well.

Thirdly, it tries to micromanage the Intelligence Committee by limiting both the membership and the ratio between the majority and the minority. That is a decision that should be left to the majority party and the majority party's leadership. We should not try to micromanage the membership of a specific Committee.

So for those three reasons, Mr. Chairman, all of which deal with specific language in the underlying amendment, I would urge my colleagues to oppose the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

I'll yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair intends to keep the Committee in session until such time as we are able to vote on the substitute.

For what purpose does the gentlewoman from California seek recognition?

Ms. WATERS. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman and Members. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WATERS. I had not intended to enter the debate because I think basically my colleagues on the opposite side of the aisle perhaps do not have the courage to defy the White House on this issue. As we know and we cannot forget, the President of the United States never wanted this 9/11 Commission. And he only supported the 9/11 Commission after it became very clear that there was a lot of support for it and he was being embarrassed in resisting it.

This is the same commission where we had Condoleezza Rice discover or tell the world for the first time that she'd received a memorandum some days prior to, that pretty much described Osama bin Laden and his intentions. This is the same commission that the President was even reluctant to appear before and only did it if in fact he could be accompanied by Mr. Chaney.

So we've had resistance about 9/11 from this Administration from day one. And it just pains me that my colleagues worked so hard and are working so hard today to try and convince the members on the opposite side of the aisle just to do the right thing, just to do the honorable thing, just to do the decent thing. Well, it's obvious that's not going to happen.

So I think the record should be clear that this resistance didn't just start today. And you could take the 9/11 Commission report and you can tear it apart. And you can say things like my colleague just said, well, they're trying to tell Congress how to organize itself.

I want to tell you, it doesn't hurt to get some recommendations from our citizens when you can't decide which Committee has jurisdiction over the subject matter and it's spread out all over this place and people can't even keep up with the various Committees and what they're saying and what they're doing. I don't think it's any kind of insult to have a suggestion by the citizens, the Commission members, that perhaps we should be organized in a different fashion.

So I guess my word to Mr. Conyers is that this is a valiant attempt to bring before this Committee an opportunity for all of us just to do the decent thing and just support the 9/11 Commission report. And again, they're not going to do it because I don't think they have the independence to do it. I don't think that there will be any members on the opposite side of the aisle that will have the courage to step up to the plate and defy what I think is a White House direction.

So let the record reflect that this is a continuation of the same kind of resistance that we have seen from the beginning. And I commend you, Mr. Conyers, for making one more attempt to convince our colleagues on the opposite side of the aisle that we ought to adopt this Commission report, because so much work went into it, so much time went into it. And the effort was so good that it has been published in a way that all of America can share in the information.

And I want you to know that even during the time of the Democratic convention, I went to Cambridge and joined with the mayor and we had a public reading of that report. We had a member of the legislature, we had some community groups and organizations, and we had the city council that was full of citizens who came to share with us in a public reading. And of course we wanted to encourage, and we will continue to encourage America to get together in our libraries, in our schools, in our social clubs, in our fraternities and sororities, and have public readings so that no matter what happens, no matter those in control of this Government, of the House and the Senate and the White House, even if they resist this, we want everyone to know what was in that report. And I will continue to encourage groups to get together and have public readings of the report.

I yield back the balance of my time before my chairman tells me my time is up.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. It's up now. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Conyers.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

Mr. CONYERS. May I ask for a record vote?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The noes appear to have it. A record vote is ordered. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)1, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

This looks like a good time to break. The Committee will be in recess until 15 minutes after the end of the next series of rollcalls on the House floor. The Committee will vote on the postponed questions at either 2:30 p.m. or 30 minutes after the last rollcall has occurred, whichever is later.

The Committee stands in recess.

[Recess.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Committee will be in order. A working quorum is present.

When the Committee recessed several hours ago, a motion was pending to report the bill H.R. 10 favorably. And the bill was by unanimous consent considered as read and open for amendment at any point. There were a number of amendments that were offered and disposed of. There were four amendments where votes were postponed.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk, 158a.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Schiff.

Page 137, line 10, strike (b), insert the following, and renumber.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I request unanimous consent that the amendment be deemed as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.
 [The amendment of Mr. Schiff follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY MR. SCHIFF

Page 137, line 10, strike (b) insert the following and renumber:

(b) Whoever without lawful authority develops, possesses, or attempts or conspires to develop or possess a radiological weapon, or threatens to use or uses a radiological weapon against any person within the United States, or a national of the United States while such national is outside the United States or against any property that is owned, leased, funded or used by the United States, whether that property is within or outside the United States, shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, and if death results, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, existing law prohibits the theft of nuclear material or nuclear byproduct material or the threatened use of such material under 18 U.S.C. Section 831. Existing law also prohibits the use of a radiological weapon under 18 U.S.C. Section 2332a.

The current bill in new section 832 prohibits assisting a foreign terrorist power with the use of a radiological weapon or a nuclear weapon or the development of such. But none of the existing law nor the present bill deals with the scenario where someone develops or possesses or attempts to do so a radiological weapon in this country or elsewhere, but doesn't go on to use the weapon or doesn't assist it with respect to a foreign terrorist power.

I think it should be prohibited for someone to develop or possess or attempt to develop or possess a radiological weapon regardless with whether they actually go through and use it. We shouldn't require prosecutors to have to prove that the weapon was ultimately used or ultimately developed for a foreign power. The mere possession and development or conspiracy to do so should be enough.

So this amendment would prohibit the development, possession, or attempted development or possession of a radiological weapon or the use of such a weapon, and provides appropriate penalties. And this will address a situation where you either have a Timothy McVeigh situation, where you have domestic terrorists at work, or you have a terrorist cell at work in this country or overseas that is—or in this country that is not affiliated necessarily with a foreign terrorist power and—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I notice in your amendment that you strike the clause, There is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section, which is entitled, Participation in Nuclear and Weapons of Mass Destruction Threats to the United States.

Is it the intention of your amendment to narrow the scope of the section in the existing bill, or not?

Mr. SCHIFF. No, Mr. Chairman, and I would be more than willing to accept language to make that clear.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman be willing to accept a reinstatement of the statement that there is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction?

Mr. SCHIFF. Absolutely, Mr. Chairman. The design is to make jurisdiction as large and as long as we possibly can, not to limit—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, without objection and with the permission of the gentleman from California, the amendment will be modified to reinstate (b) There is extraterritorial Federal jurisdiction over an offense under this section. His section would be re-numbered (c)—re-lettered (c), and the subsequent sections would be re-lettered accordingly. Is that okay?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection the amendment is modified—

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection the amendment is modified.

Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. With these modifications, the chair is prepared to accept the amendment.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time is controlled by the gentleman from California.

Mr. SCHIFF. I'd be delighted to yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I might be confused. Does this incorporate a mandatory death penalty sentence?

Mr. SCHIFF. This provides that if death results from the use of the radiological weapon, that it shall be punished by death or imprisonment for a term of years or for life. So it provides that full range of penalties.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it and the amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments?

The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, at this time I would like to offer Weiner 150.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Mr.—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk doesn't have Weiner 150? Okay.

Just by way of note, the chair intends to put the question on the four amendments that votes were postponed on at 3:20.

Mr. WEINER. You don't have the badges? 150 I called it. Is it not there?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Are there further amendments?

Mr. WEINER. Am I—I can't proceed?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk said that she—

Mr. WEINER. We had sent it to the desk a couple of hours ago. Do you have another copy you can offer just for reading purposes?

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Weiner of New York.

At the end of title II, add the following:

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, request unanimous consent to be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, it would be helpful if the members could see the amendment.

Mr. WEINER. Oh, yeah, yeah. That's true. Fire away.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will continue to read.

The CLERK. Subtitle I—Police Badges.

Section 2201, short title.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Badge Security Enhancement Act of 2004”.

Section 2202. Police Badges.

(B) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2); and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(d)(1) Whoever receives, in interstate or foreign commerce, a genuine police badge shall provide a certification of the intended use of that badge to the person or entity from which the badge is received.”

“(2) Whoever knowingly transfers or transports in interstate or foreign commerce, a genuine police badge shall notify the agency represented on the badge before doing so, if the agency represented on the badge continues to exist.”

“(5) This section shall not apply to the use of a genuine or counterfeit badge in the fictitious or historical visual depiction of either a public officer or employee.”

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10
OFFERED BY MR. WEINER OF NEW YORK

At the end of title II, add the following:

1 Subtitle I—Police Badges

2 SEC. 2201. SHORT TITLE.

3 This subtitle may be cited as the “Badge Security
4 Enhancement Act of 2004” .

5 SEC. 2202. POLICE BADGES.

6 Section 716 of title 18, United States Code, is 7 amended—

8 (1) in subsection (b)—

9 (A) by striking paragraphs (2) and (4);

10 and

11 (B) by redesignating paragraph (3) as 12 paragraph (2); and

13 (2) by adding at the end the following:

14 “(d)(1) Whoever receives, in interstate or foreign

17 entity from which the badge is received.

18 “(2) Whoever knowingly transfers or transports in 19 interstate or foreign commerce, a genuine police badge

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment that would close a loophole that was identified shortly after we in Congress tried to close the loophole that allowed essentially for the sale of counterfeit badges, very realistic looking counterfeit badges, in 2000.

In 2000, a law made it a Federal crime to transfer or transport or receive a counterfeit police badge. But it left four exemptions. One was as a memento in a collection or exhibit; two was for decorative purposes; three was for dramatic presentations, such as a film; and four—and this is the problem—for any other recreational purpose.

Well, the effect of that law was, according to the GAO, to leave gaping holes in our security. In 2000, obviously before September 11, undercover agents were 100 percent successful, reading from a GAO report in 2000, 100 percent successful in penetrating 19 Federal sites and two commercial airports on the first attempt.

The reason that we found that, you can now, on the Internet, very easily go onto a Web site and purchase an NYPD lieutenant's badge, a captain's badge, a sergeant badge, an FBI agent's badge. These are counterfeit inasmuch as they are real badges but they are made a millimeter or even less smaller than the actual one. You can do this right now if you want to go into our cloak room and try to do it.

So what my bill does is it closes the loophole. It says if you're a collector you can still buy these badges, but they have to be encased in Lucite or some other protective thing so that you can't simply wear it. If you're going to buy it and say that you're just putting on a film or a production, you have to let the locality where you're doing the filming say, okay, this is a legitimate purpose for you to get these badges.

And you have to affirmatively say these things. Right now, if you go onto a Web site that sells counterfeit badges, all you have to do is, when you click to order, the fine print says you certify you're not going to use this for any unlawful purpose. We, frankly, have found dozens of Web sites that you can go to to buy these badges.

Nowadays, after this 2000 audit, obviously security has been enhanced a great deal. In more and more places you need forms of identification to gain access to sensitive locations. The time has never been more pressing for us to close these gaps in this law.

Furthermore, local law enforcement is very supportive. There's an exemption in here—very often police officers, particularly in cities like mine, there's a very strong penalty if you lose your badge, so some of them go out and affirmatively get a counterfeit version of their own badge and carry that around with them. This clearly says that if you're a law enforcement agent, you're allowed to get, obviously, a badge because you're using it for law enforcement purposes.

This is in keeping with the GAO recommendations on closing a loophole, the loopholes in legislation that we here wrote. If you consider it for a moment, making it illegal to possess a fake badge, but if there's an exemption if you have it "for any other recreational purpose," the law is effectively meaningless.

For those of you who are concerned about the effect on the collector's business, you'll still be able to get them and collect them, but you have to have them encased in some way for display so that they can't be easily worn or flashed at an airport.

For those of you who are concerned that you might be somehow putting a crimp in LAPD and NYPD Blue or some other program, you're still going to be able to apply and get these badges so long as the local law enforcement agent knows that there are a bunch of fake badges out and around and they're being used for legitimate purposes.

This closes a loophole that clearly exists in the law, and I would urge us to consider it favorably, particularly in the context of this bill where so many of the things we're doing to enhance security would be severely undermined if anyone can go out and buy an NYPD sergeant's badge at a moment's notice.

I yield back my time and ask for a yes vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I strike the last word.

Part of this amendment is good and part of this amendment is unworkable. And I'd be happy to accept that part of the amendment that goes up through page 1, line 13, which would strike the argument as a defense to a prosecution that the badge is used for decorative purposes or any other recreational purpose—thus keeping in memento, collection, or exhibit and for dramatic presentations such as a theatrical film or television production. I think that striking the two things that I mentioned would tighten up this law. Remember, this is an affirmative defense to a prosecution.

The other provisions, I think, are unworkable in that it requires the Attorney General by rule to establish some kind of a genuine authenticity of a badge—I think the AG has got better things to do than that; as well as having some type of a chain of title that, when there's a transfer of a badge, there is a statement that is made by the buyer that the badge will be used for a lawful purpose. Now, who's going to say that they're planning and using the badge for an unlawful purpose? A lot of these statements that would be made would end up being false on their face if somebody was attempting to use the badge for a criminal purpose.

If the gentleman from New York is willing to modify his amendment, to strike out all of the material beginning on line 14, page 1—beginning on line 14, page 1, ending at the end of the amendment, we'd be happy to accept it. But otherwise, I think we're making a promise that we're not going to be able to deliver on.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The other gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler. For what purpose do you seek recognition?

Mr. NADLER. I was just wondering, and I would yield to the gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. NADLER.—to—oh, thank you. I strike the last word and I'm recognized for 5 minutes.

I would yield to Mr. Weiner to—I was wondering if he was taking the chairman's suggestion on the amendment or not.

Mr. WEINER. Well, I didn't have time or the ability to gain time. If you'll yield to me—

Mr. NADLER. I yield to you.

Mr. WEINER. I think that it is not really that difficult to work out the problems that you articulated. And I think the Attorney General should be aware, and there should be some certification when someone sells a badge on the Internet, as to its lawful use.

However, in keeping with the chairman's kind offer, I will, if there's an opportune time, accept his suggestion that we amend this by simply striking the provisions that permitted—just to make sure I understand this, and I don't know if I have this right—that permit this to be collected for a decorative purpose or any recreational purpose? Is that what (2) and (4) are?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Yes.

Mr. WEINER. And leave the rest for another time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is modified by striking all of the material after page 1, line 13 in the amendment.

Hearing no objection, so ordered.

Will the gentleman yield back?

Mr. NADLER. Yes, I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner, as modified.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it and the amendment as modified is agreed to.

Are there further amendments that we can deal with in 10 minutes before rollcall?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have an amendment at the desk designated—designated, let's see—MR.002.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Nadler.

Add at the end of title II the following:

Subtitle I—Whistleblower Protection

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Nadler follows:]

11 of sections 1214 and 1221, and in accordance with the 12 procedures set forth in sections 554 through 557 and 701
13 through 706.”.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This amendment would provide an insurance policy to the American people that any problems or wrongdoing at the FBI will come to light and that Congress, whose job it is to conduct oversight, will have all relevant information it needs to do its job.

The amendment provides explicit whistleblower protections for employees of the FBI. In the other body, Senators Grassley and Leahy have been working on the same effort.

Under current law, FBI employees have a separate but supposedly equal system in which the Agency itself reviews whistleblower reprisal claims internally. Not surprisingly, the Bureau has never found in one single occasion that it has engaged in illegal retaliation. That's quite a system. It's good to be the king.

We do not allow people to sit as judges in their own cases in this country. We should not allow it what the security of our Nation is at stake.

Why is this a national security issue? Because courageous whistleblowers, like FBI Agent Colleen Rowley, risk their careers and perhaps much more if they come forward to report problems at the Bureau.

Everyone remembers Agent Rowley. She is the one who came forward with a 13-page memo to the Director detailing failings at the Bureau leading up to the catastrophe of 9/11. These revelations were the subject of numerous hearings and have informed the work of Congress ever since.

As Agent Rowley said in her memo, the FBI operates in "a climate of fear which has chilled aggressive law enforcement action." For example, when agents in the FBI's Minneapolis field office became frustrated with repeated foot-dragging at headquarters and turned to the CIA for help, they received reprimands from Bureau supervisors. We should reward that kind of courage. We need people to come forward with important information that could improve our law enforcement work.

As the members of this Committee know all too well, we cannot always rely on the people at the top to be as candid about failings in their own agency as they should be. Whistleblowers sometimes are the only way we have to get the truth.

If people do not believe that the law is on their side and if people reasonably believe they will have no protection if they tell the truth, then we will not be able to get the truth. In the face of the terrorist threat, we must have all the information that can possibly obtain and we must not let threats and intimidation of FBI employees prevent them from getting at the truth.

And again, if Agent Rowley had been listened to—she was the one, remember, who came forward with the information about people taking flying—about people from other countries taking flying lessons. No one listened to her. She was the one that Senator Grassley had to specifically say to the Attorney General that he expected—he would be keeping an eye and wanted to make sure that there was no retaliation taken against Agent Rowley.

Now, we have a whistleblower protection statute on the books. This amendment would simply extend that statute to cover the FBI. The FBI is the only Government agency exempt from the regular whistleblower statute. They have their own internal statute, which has never, ever operated because the FBI Director has to decide if he is or is not the villain in persecuting some whistleblower. And surprise—the FBI Director has never found himself to be the villain.

We cannot allow this. If we want to make sure that if something—if there is incompetence, if there are terrible mistakes that endanger our security at the FBI, we depend on whistleblowers to come forward to the Attorney General, to the Special Counsel, to Congress and tell us what's going on.

So what this amendment does is to increase the security of the American people, as Senator Grassley and Senator Leahy are urging in the other body, by making the FBI subject to the same whistleblower law, the same whistleblower protection law as every other agency and dispense with its own internal system that simply hasn't worked on one single occasion.

So, Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of this amendment and I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

The amendment changes the existing whistleblower protection law that places the FBI under the Merit Systems Protection Board. The MSPB is an independent, quasi-judicial agency in the executive branch to hear and decide appeals for Federal employees under the Competitive Services regarding personnel action. The FBI as well as other intelligence agencies are not covered by the MSPB.

The amendment should be opposed, as Congress has specifically excluded the FBI, the CIA, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Central Imagery Office, and the NSA from this Board due to the classified and sensitive nature of their work and the fact that any employee may have access to such information.

Furthermore, the existing statutory structure protects FBI employees without compromising sensitive law enforcement information or national security as it directs the President to provide protections for the FBI whistleblowers in a manner consistent with the applicable provisions of sections 1214 and 1221 of this title.

Furthermore, President Clinton delegated to the Attorney General his authority under section 2303(c) and the Attorney General subsequently issued regulations under which employees of the FBI could make protective disclosures under section 2303, as well as a mechanism for the investigation of allegations of retaliation and for corrective action where warranted.

The regulation and law provides balance between the protection of FBI employees and the protection of information that is law enforcement-sensitive or that is classified in the interests of national security.

The events of September 11, as well as the FBI's central role in foreign counterintelligence and in investigating and disrupting domestic and international terrorism threats, has increased the FBI's intelligence functions dramatically. Accordingly, the rationale for the FBI's exclusion from the government-wide whistleblower statute has been strengthened and not diminished.

The amendment should be opposed, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Those in favor will say aye?

Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The noes have it and the amendment—

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER.—the amendment is not agreed to.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Consideration will now—does the gentleman from New York want a rollcall on this amendment?

Mr. NADLER. Yeah.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay. [Laughter.]

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The consideration will now resume of the five amendments for which votes have been postponed. Because the chair did not postpone the instant amendment by Mr. Nadler, the question first is on the Nadler amendment relative—

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair is putting the question, explaining what your voting on.

The question is on agreement to the Nadler amendment relative to FBI whistleblower procedures.

Those in favor of this Nadler amendment will, as your names are called, answer aye—

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, point of order.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER.—opposed, no, and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, point of order.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, given the previous announcements on the timing of the bill, could I ask unanimous consent that we withhold for 5 minutes to allow us to call three members who are not here, who were given reason to believe that at 3:05 the vote would be cast, just to make sure that they didn't see what was going on. I think—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the chair announced that it would be at—the rolled votes would be at 3:20, which was 30 minutes after the end of the last 5-minute rollcall. This vote is not a rolled vote. By the time we finish this rollcall, it will be 3:20.

Mr. WEINER. Well, but Mr. Chairman, we were led to believe that there would be no votes until such time as the rolled votes were called. So just give us a few minutes to call our remaining members. There are only three members who are missing.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. What does the gentleman propose to do in the 3 minutes remaining?

Mr. WEINER. Are there other amendments we can offer? We can have—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay, well, pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and pursuant to Committee Rule 2(h)1, the vote on the instant Nadler amendment will be postponed.

For what purpose does the gentleman from California, Mr. Berman, seek recognition?

Mr. BERMAN. Move to strike the last word, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. In the debate earlier on the Berman-Delahunt amendment, which seeks to substitute for the blanket closure of asylum hearings in special cases a case-by-case adjudication of whether or not classified information, confidential sources, or the needs of the applicant require a closed hearing, the gentleman from Indiana, the chairman of the Subcommittee, asserted twice that at the present time all asylum hearings—way beyond the Creppy directive—all asylum hearings, all hearings on admissibility are closed and so why open these?

I am sure inadvertently and unintentionally the chairman was completely wrong about that, and I just think the Committee members should know that in fact INS regulations, now Homeland Security regulations, specify that except in select cases all such hearings are open. And I thought that the Committee should have the correct information in front of them before going to a vote.

The amendment that we have offered, Mr. Delahunt and I, simply substitutes for the blanket closure of special-cases asylum hearings a case-by-case decision where the Government can say there is classified information that needs to be used, there are confidential informants that need to be used, or, in the case of the asylees, interest that torture or other kinds of things could come up if it's an open hearing.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman yields back .

It is now 3:20. Consideration will now resume on the five amendments that votes were postponed earlier in the day. The votes will be taken in the following order:

First, the Nadler amendment striking State minimums for first responders grants.

Second, the Jackson Lee amendment on verification of identification documents.

Third, the Berman-Delahunt amendment on closed immigration hearings.

Fourth, the Conyers substitute amendment, which is the text of the Senate bill.

And fifth, the Nadler amendment on FBI whistleblower procedures.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler, relating to striking State minimums for first responder grants.

Those in favor will, as your names are called, answer aye; those opposed, no. The clerk will call the roll.

The CLERK. Mr. Chairman, there are 15 ayes and 20 noes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. And the amendment is not agreed to.

Before going to further amendments, let me state that it is the Chair's hope that we will be able to finish this bill today, and that will allow us time in the markup tomorrow to deal with the other bills on the markup schedule. And for tomorrow, should we finish the bill today, there are five relatively noncontroversial bills that the Chair would like to take up first and have the three controversial bills remaining on the markup be later on because I know many of the members wish to go to the floor to debate the marriage amendment.

There will be two votes in about 5 to 15 minutes: a motion to recommit, which will be a 15-minute vote on the floor; and then a passage vote on the continuing resolution, which will be a 5-minute vote. I would like to ask the members to come back immediately after the second vote so that we can continue considering amendments and disposing of this bill. And the Chair will announce that, pursuant to the authority that he has under Committee Rule 2(h)(1), he will postpone votes on amendments until 5 o'clock. We do need to have a working quorum here to debate the amendments. The votes will come at 5 o'clock, and hopefully there will not be that many amendments left after 5 o'clock. And I'd like to ask the members to stay around so that we can vote on reporting this bill once all of the amendments are disposed of. So that's—

Mr. BERMAN. Would the chairman yield?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I'm happy to yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. I wonder if the Chair—and I should preface it by saying my respect both for his intellect and his fairness in presiding over this Committee is deep and serious. But I'm wondering if he'd give us a little more to work with. As I understand it, the major reason for trying to finish this markup today is so that members of the Judiciary can be on the floor to participate in a constitutional amendment on same-sex marriage, an amendment which has already been defeated in the Senate and which every member of this Committee on the Democratic side is—or almost everyone is going to oppose. What's our motivation here?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The motivation to finish today or what?

Mr. BERMAN. The motivation to finish today.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the Chair would like to give the members time to go over to the floor tomorrow without being dragged back here to deal with the finishing up of this bill. And the Chair also would like at least to be able to deal with the five non-controversial bills that are also on today's markup calendar so we can get Committee reports filed on those bills and hopefully get them on the suspension calendar next week.

Mr. BERMAN. Well, if the Chair—I mean, if the Chair would continue to yield, I'd just say that the importance of what we're doing here and this bill and the importance of—and I don't think any of us are trying to be dilatory, and I think the amendments all raise issues. But it so far exceeds in importance the idea of taking up a constitutional amendment—a constitutional amendment which is destined to fail and that everyone knows it's destined fail for no point other than a political point, to me the question of priorities is clearly in favor of doing this bill right.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the answer to the question is that the decision having the marriage amendment being taken directly to the floor was not made by the chairman of this Committee, and the gentleman from California knows that. The Chair is trying to figure out a way to accommodate as many members as possible who wish to debate the marriage amendment, both pro and con, as well as to get our work done either today or tomorrow on the 9/11 Commission bill. And the Chair desires to do this right, and I think the Chair has run this markup in a way where we have not been partisan in many respects, and a number of amendments that have been offered by the minority party have been accepted.

So we can only be in one place at one time. You know, if we don't get this bill done today, we're going to have to be here tomorrow because the chances of us having votes on Friday, I'm told, are less than 50/50. And if we're here tomorrow on the 9/11 bill, then at least the five noncontroversial bills that are also on the markup calendar end up getting killed for this session.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Massachusetts seek recognition?

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

While the clerk is doing that, I am told that the Intelligence Committee has also rolled its vote to 5 o'clock, so what I guess I'll say is that because there are some members of this Committee that also serve on the intelligence Committee, the Chair will amend his prior statement, and the votes on amendments will now be rolled until 5:30.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Delahunt of Massachusetts. At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section: Section. Data Mining Report——

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill——

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

21 (B) updated once a year and include any
22 new data-mining technologies.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment, with whom I'm joined by my colleague from California, Mr. Berman, would achieve one of the clear recommendations of the September 11 Commission. It's meant to restore a better balance between security and shared knowledge and to maintain critical safeguards on the privacy of the information shared. It would require that the Federal Government report back to Congress on the use of electric databases to share personal data regarding U.S. citizens. And hopefully this is an amendment which will be accepted. I have reviewed language that's been proffered to me by staff that I think makes it—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELAHUNT. I yield. Since this amendment proposes a study on data mining and it is a matter of concern, we're prepared to accept this amendment.

Mr. DELAHUNT. With that, I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Delahunt. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk, 722.xml.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report Nadler-Sanchez 722.xml.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Nadler and Ms. Sanchez. Strike Section 3009 and amend the table of contents accordingly.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Nadler and Ms. Sanchez follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY Nadler Sanchez

Strike section 3009 (and amend the table of contents accordingly):

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, Section 3009 of this bill, which I would—which this amendment would eliminate, would do several things, all of them unfair. First, it would eliminate stays of removal pending judicial review, allowing refugees who are claiming asylum to be returned to the persecution they fear while their cases are pending in Federal court. This provision has nothing to do with terrorism. It would be applicable to all immigration cases. It would have a particularly devastating impact on refugees and persons facing torture if they are deported.

Under current law, anyone who needs a stay of deportation while he appeals his case to the Federal courts is already required to make a showing as to why he should get the stay of deportation, and he must include convincing the appeals court that there is merit to his appeal. Most courts that have considered this have held that a standard—that the standard for a temporary stay of removal after the 1996 Immigration Act should be the normal standard that courts apply for such stays in other kinds of cases based on some balance of the petitioner's likelihood of success on the merits, the irreparable injury he would suffer if denied a stay, whether the Government would suffer substantial injury from the granting of a stay, and public interest considerations.

Under this bill, temporary stays of removal would be eliminated. The only remaining avenue for a Federal court to block a removal order would be through an injunction under Section 242(f) of the Act, requiring the petitioner to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the execution of the removal order would be prohibited as a matter of law. This is a higher standard than what most applicants are required or would be required to show in order to win the actual case. It would not protect refugees from deportation while they wait for a judicial review of their claims.

In other words, a refugee who claims political asylum because of an actual and legitimate fear of persecution by reason of race, color, creed, national origin, political opinion, what have you, is deported, if he lost in front of the immigration officer, he's entitled to appeal to the courts. But this would say—and if he wants a stay of the deportation order while he appeals to the court, under current law he has to convince the court why a balance of the equities say he should get the stay. Under this bill, he could never get the stay. So first he gets deported, then he gets murdered, and then he can conduct his case in court to show why he should be un-murdered and brought back to this country. That does not make any sense, and it basically says that the immigration officer has final say and that the courts have no review.

The second provision of this bill—of this provision that I would eliminate would bar several categories of appellants from review by the court of appeals altogether. It would preclude any Federal court review of any applicant—for any applicant for protection under the Convention Against Torture, to which this Government is a signatory, would be denied any Federal court appeal. Many of those affected by this measure would also be made ineligible for protection by Section 3302—3032, which is the next provision here. In other words, all these provisions in this section essentially say that once the department has determined, the administrative department has determined that they don't want to grant asylum, you can still appeal to court. But you cannot get a stay of the deportation order no matter how good your case, even if the case—even if the court thinks that they should grant a stay.

It used to be you got an automatic stay pending judicial review. In 1996, we said you have to convince the court that there's a likelihood you'll succeed on the merits, that you'd be irreparably harmed if you were deported without waiting for the judicial review, that the Government probably was going to lose, and so forth.

Now this would say you can never get the stay, and, frankly, that's unreasonable. And this has nothing to do with terrorism. This is all cases where people say—where people are claiming political asylum in refugee cases. And, again, it should not be in this 9/11 bill. And if we're going to make this drastic change so that people lose essentially all their rights to court review, we should do it after due consideration—and, frankly, we shouldn't do it. So I urge the adoption of the amendment and I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time of the gentleman has expired. We now have two votes. The Committee will be recessed. Members should come back immediately after voting the second time to continue debate on the amendments, and votes on the amendments will be rolled until 5:30.

The Committee stands recessed.

[Recess.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Committee will be in order.

When the Committee recessed, pending was an amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler, to strike Section 3009 relating to judicial review of orders of removal.

For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Hostettler, seek recognition?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I want to rise in opposition to the amendment to strike Section 3009. Section 3009 clarifies limitations on injunctive relief that Congress included in the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act passed in 1996. In that Act, we limited the authority of reviewing courts to enjoin removal. That limitation prohibited courts from enjoining removal unless the alien "showed by clear and convincing evidence that the entry or execution of the removal order is prohibited as a matter of law."

In the Act, we also struck the provision that terminated judicial review once an alien departed the United States. Read together, these provisions make it clear that aliens must meet a high burden to receive injunctive relief, but if they fail to do so, they could continue their appeals from outside the United States.

Reviewing courts, however, have circumvented the limitations on injunctions by granting instead stays. Section 3009 of the underlying bill clarifies the limitations on injunctive relief by including stays in the consideration. It should be noted that this section does not eliminate stays. It simply sets the standards that an alien must meet to obtain a stay. Therefore, an asylum applicant can still enjoin removal by satisfying the injunctive standard we set in 1996, once again, clear and convincing evidence.

It should also be remembered that all asylum applicants have at least two layers of review at the immigration court and board level even before they could seek judicial review. In summary, Section 3009 restores order to the judicial review of immigrant—immigration decisions to the benefit of the alien petitioners, the courts, and the fair and efficient administration and enforcement of our immigration laws. These reforms will ensure that aliens will have a day in court but that criminals will not be able to delay their lawful removal from the United States. These provisions are fully consistent with both the Supreme Court's decision and settled jurisprudence regarding the availability of habeas corpus. Accordingly, Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment to Strike Section 3009, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from California, Ms. Sanchez.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. SANCHEZ. I am opposed to this amendment that's been offered jointly with Mr. Nadler, and I wish to associate myself with his remarks. But I wish to point out that under—under the current H.R. 10 as currently written without the amendment, the removal order, the standard that would be required for the removal order which in most instances be a higher standard than what applicants would be required to show in order to win their actual immigration cases. And for folks that are seeking asylum or who are political refugees, the fact that they would be deported and sent back to their country of origin and not subject to judicial review means that the people who most—would stand most to benefit from a stay pending their day in court would actually be sent back to conditions under which they were fleeing in the first place.

So under—although we do need to revise our immigration laws and make sure that they are efficient, we shouldn't be undermining the very reasons for which they were written in the first place. And so as a result, I urge my colleagues to support the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The noes have it, and the amendment is not agreed to.

The gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk numbered 160.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Mr. Schiff. At the appropriate place in subtitle D of Title II, insert the following new section—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Schiff follows:]

Schiff 160

Amendment to HR 10

Offered by Mr. Schiff

At the appropriate place in subtitle D of title II, insert the following new section:

SEC. _____. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING INTERNATIONAL COUNTERPROLIFERATION EFFORTS.

- (a) it is the sense of Congress that the United States should work with the international community to develop laws and an international legal regime with universal jurisdiction to enable the interdiction of nuclear material and technology, and the capture, interdiction, and prosecution of individuals or entities involved in the smuggling or transfer of nuclear material or technology to any state in the world where they do not fully disclose the nature of their nuclear program.

Mr. SCHIFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On page 380 of the 9/11 Commission Report, the Commission writes, in its section to strengthen counterproliferation efforts, that while efforts to shut down Libya's illegal nuclear program have been generally successful, Pakistan's illicit trade in the nuclear smuggling networks of Pakistani scientist A.Q. Khan have revealed that the spread of nuclear weapons is a problem of global dimensions. Attempts to deal with Iran's nuclear program—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I believe this amendment is a constructive addition to the bill and am prepared to support it.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I won't talk you out of it, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is very wise.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I have an amendment that is 274xml.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas. Strike Section 3032 and conform provisions and amend the table of contents accordingly.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H. R. 10OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE OF TEXAS

Strike section 3032 (and conform provisions and amend the table of contents accordingly).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the chairman.

I believe one of the issues that again points to the structure in which this bill was brought to this Committee, and as well presented to all of our Committees, was the fact that a lot of what was contained in the 9/11 Commission Report and ultimately the McCain-Lieberman bill and the Shays-Maloney bill was completely ignored. And a lot of the principles of the United States as well was completely ignored, and I would hope my colleagues would not equate the idea of the fairness of our original rules and our treaties and our Constitution as undermining, if you will, the idea of security.

I heard recently from a reporter that works a lot on intelligence issues with one of our major newspapers, and, unfortunately, America has been frightened into giving up civil liberties and the respect for such on the basis of security. I would hope that we would be able to turn ourselves away to a more effective approach.

Presently, Section 3032 of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act would retroactively exclude classes of aliens from protection under the United Nations Convention Against Torture. It also would make it harder to establish eligibility for CAT relief. Instead of being able to make the present burden of proof, which is more likely than not, it would require applicants to prove by clear and convincing evidence that they would be tortured if they're deported to the country from which they are seeking.

That section also would prohibit the Federal court challenges to a decision removing CAT protection under the new law, except as part of a review of a final order of removal.

I believe we are better than that, and I believe that we can adhere to the Convention dealing with terror, the Convention Against terror—Torture, rather, and as well be safe. That Convention is a fundamental pillar of our human rights and national interest policy, and it prohibits our removal and extradition from processes from returning aliens to countries where they probably would be tortured. It is one of the four primary international human rights documents. It does not release those individuals, however, and allows them in essence to do a refiling, if you will, and as well to be detained here in the United States. It stands along with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the Genocide Convention as the cornerstone of our country's efforts to stop the most heinous forms of governmental oppression and abuse.

Let me remind my colleagues that those who may be subject to this particular provision that is in the underlying bill may not have perpetrated any actual acts of terror. They may be claimed as terrorists for words that they have said, for those they have associated with, for maybe even their intention. So the idea that someone would have that they deserve whatever they get, they should be tortured because they perpetrated heinous acts, may not be true. They may only be detainees. They may only be under suspicion and then be suspected—or be subjected, rather, to the idea of returning to a place that would torture them.

The Section 3032 exception would violate U.S. treaty obligations under the convention. Article III of the Convention forbids a state party from forcibly returning a person to a country when there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger being subjected to torture. In ratifying the treaty, the U.S. Senate did not express any reservation, understanding a proviso that might exclude a person from the Article III prohibition. So why we are now engaging in that activity when, in fact, I believe we have other alternatives other than suggesting that these individuals would absolutely be sent to places where they might be tortured.

I support this absolute prohibition on moral as well as legal grounds. We all know what torture can result in. It is horrendous and contrary to our ethical, spiritual, and democratic beliefs. It does not necessitate further safety of the American people, and that should be made very clear. We're all operating under this aura, this umbrella, this fear that we must do everything short of eliminating, I guess, the Constitution as it stands to provide for our security. No, I would argue vigorously that we need to improve our intelligence, the interoperability of our intelligence, the leadership of our intelligence, the investment in our intelligence. We must secure the borders, as we are attempting to do. We must provide enhanced authority—resources, rather, to Border Patrol agents and training. But I don't believe that we have to cut away at conventions that we've signed or the Constitution that we have signed.

In the Davis case, 533 U.S. 678, the United States Supreme Court held that the detention provisions in the INA read in light of the Constitution's demands limit an alien's post-removal period detention to a period reasonably necessary to bring about that alien's removal from the United States.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman's time—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I would ask my colleagues to support this amendment in the idea of fairness and that we're able to balance security and safety.

I yield back my time.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE SHEILA JACKSON LEE, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS, AND RANKING MEMBER, SUBCOMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION, BORDER SECURITY, AND CLAIMS

Section 3032 of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act would retroactively exclude classes of aliens from protection under the United Nations Convention Against Torture (CAT). It also would make it harder to establish eligibility for CAT relief. Instead of being able to meet the present burden of proof, which is "more likely than not," it would require applicants to prove by "clear and convincing evidence" that they would be tortured if they are deported to the country from which they are seeking relief. Section 3032 also would prohibit federal court challenges to a decision removing CAT protection under the new law except as part of the review of a final order of removal.

The Convention Against Torture is a fundamental pillar of our human rights and national interest policy. It prohibits our removal and extradition processes from returning aliens to countries where they probably would be tortured. It is one of the four primary international human rights documents. It stands, along with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the Genocide Convention, as the cornerstone of our country's efforts to stop the most heinous forms of governmental oppression and abuse.

The section 3032 exceptions would violate U.S. treaty obligations under the Convention. Article 3 of the Convention forbids a State Party from forcibly returning a person to a country when there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture. In ratifying the treaty, the U.S. Senate did not express any reservation, understanding, or proviso that might exclude a person from the Article 3 prohibition.

I support this absolute prohibition on moral as well as legal grounds. Torture is so horrendous and so contrary to our ethical, spiritual, and democratic beliefs that it must absolutely be condemned and prohibited. Passing the section 3032 provisions would amount to legalizing the outsourcing of torture by the United States government. Even the most abhorrent individuals are entitled to invoke CAT protection to prevent being returned to torture in their home countries. Returning someone to a place where he or she would be tortured would sustain the kind of system in which violent authoritarian regimes exist. Such regimes feed on continued torture.

In Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U. S. 678 (2001), the United States Supreme Court held that the detention provisions in the Immigration and Nationality Act, read in light of the Constitution's demands, limit an alien's post-removal-period detention to a period reasonably necessary to bring about that alien's removal from the United States. The Supreme Court found further that once removal is no longer reasonably foreseeable, continued detention is no longer authorized by statute—except where special circumstances justify continued detention, such as when continued detention is necessary to protect the public.

In response to that Supreme Court decision, the former Immigration and Naturalization Service promulgated regulations for determining the circumstances under which an alien may be held in custody beyond the statutory removal period. These regulations authorized the government to continue to detain aliens who present foreign policy concerns or national security and terrorism concerns, as well as individuals who are specially dangerous due to a mental condition or personality disorder, even though their removal is not likely in the reasonably foreseeable future.

I want to emphasize that while the Convention prohibits sending them back to their home countries, the prohibition is country specific. It does not bar sending them to other countries. Also, although the grant of CAT protection is absolute, it is not permanent relief. It can be removed when the conditions in the home country change so as to eliminate the risk of torture.

I also object to the change in the burden of proof that would require the applicant to prove by "clear and convincing evidence" that he will be tortured. This is an unrealistic requirement. The simple truth is that raising the standard to this level of certainty would result in sending people to countries where they will be tortured. Moreover, it would violate Article 3 of the Convention, which forbids a State Party from forcibly returning a person to a country where there are "substantial grounds" for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture.

Finally, I object to making such changes retroactively and prohibiting federal court review of CAT decisions unless it is part of the review of a final order of removal. Petitions for review of a removal order must be filed within 30 days. Changing the standards and applying the changes retroactively puts individuals who have already won CAT relief in the position of re-proving their cases with evidence that may no longer exist. These same individuals are likely to find themselves with no opportunity for federal court review of adverse decisions, which would eliminate the checks and balances that are the fundamental component of our democracy. This cannot be justified where the consequence of a mistake could be subjecting a person to torture.

I urge you to vote for my amendment to remove section 3032 from the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act. Thank you.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Hostettler.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly oppose the amendment. The Senate passed legislation implementing the Convention Against Torture in 1998. The Convention is aimed at ensuring that human rights violators and others engaged in torture are brought to justice and details the process for extradition, detention, criminal prosecution, and victim compensation. The Convention also prohibits the return of an alien to a country where there are substantial grounds for believing that he or she would be in danger of being tortured.

When the Senate passed the implementing legislation, it stated that, "To the maximum extent consistent with the obligations of the United States under the Convention, the INS regulations shall exclude from the protection of such regulations aliens described in Section 241(b)(3)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act."

What kinds of aliens are so described? Aliens who have engaged in Nazi persecution or genocide; aliens who have engaged in terrorist activity; aliens who have been convicted of particularly serious crimes and are thus a danger to the community of the United States; aliens who committed serious crimes outside the U.S.; and aliens where there are reasonable grounds to believe are a danger to the security of the United States.

This makes perfect sense. After all, the very same aliens are barred under the Immigration and Nationality Act from receiving asylum. But the Reno Justice Department clearly disobeyed the Senate's instructions in writing the regulations creating relief from deportation under the Convention. The regulations, amazingly, did not exclude such dangerous individuals from relief from deportation, ignoring the instructions of the Senate.

The Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims conducted a hearing in July of last year on the effect of the INS regulations. From March 1999 through August 2002, immigration judges granted hundreds of criminal aliens relief from deportation under the Convention. This included two murderers that we know of—one who killed a spectator at a Gambian soccer game, and one who was implicated in a Mob-related quintuple homicide in Uzbekistan.

I might note for the record as well that the gentleman from Gambia who originally requested relief from the Convention Against Torture got homesick and went back voluntarily to Gambia.

But it is not bad enough that murderers and other criminal aliens cannot be deported. In the 2001 decision of Zadvydas v. Davis, the Supreme Court ruled that except for in the most narrow of circumstances, it is unconstitutional for INS to indefinitely detain aliens with deportation orders whose countries will not take them back. Based on this decision, the Justice Department decided that no choice but to release back into the streets those criminals, criminal aliens who had received protection under the Convention. By the time of the hearing in July 2003, approximately 500 criminal aliens who had received relief under the Convention had been released into American communities, including the murderer from Uzbekistan. The Gambian murderer might have also been released, but as I said earlier, he went home voluntarily.

In the ensuing year, who knows how many more criminal aliens have been released? We discovered at the hearing that even a Nazi war criminal was seeking to avoid deportation through the Convention. Who knows when the first terrorist alien will be released?

Days ago, a suspected al Qaeda operative made claim under the Convention to forestall his deportation. Osama bin Laden himself could probably frustrate deportation by making a claim on the Convention since the more heinous a person's actions, the more likely that he or she might be subject to torture in their home country.

The Hastert bill would simply force the Convention regulations to adhere to the intent originally espoused by the Senate. Aliens who have engaged in Nazi persecution or genocide, terrorist aliens, aliens who have been convicted of particularly serious crimes and are thus a danger to the community of the United States, aliens who have committed serious crimes outside our country, and aliens that are reasonable grounds to believe are a danger to the security of the U.S. will not be allowed to frustrate their deportations and be released onto the streets of our communities as a result of the baseline bill.

I yield back the balance of my time and ask my colleagues to oppose the amendment.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from California, Ms. Lofgren.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I think the chairman of the Subcommittee has a serious misunderstanding of the amendment, and I would yield to the Ranking Member to further clarify.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the distinguished lady for her kindness, and I would say that there is a misunderstanding.

First of all, my amendment is country specific and it allows for a refilement so that the individual could be deported to an alternative location. I've said often that this is a Nation of laws and immigrants, and immigration does not equate to terrorism. Many times the individuals detained have not perpetrated any act of violence, but they are detained on legitimate grounds. You are then going to violate the Convention Against Torture by sending these individuals off to a nation that perpetrates torture.

We're not suggesting that these persons that may be under suspicion or may be here held for legitimate reasons should not then have the ability to be, if you will, subject to our laws that would provide them the punishment necessary to what they have done. But torture does not equate necessarily to that particular act. And, therefore, this is only saying that we should adhere to the Convention. This was not in the 9/11 Commission Report and/or the legislation that really focuses on our safety and security. These are extraneous immigration provisions without any hearings or any vetting to know that this is necessary.

I might also ask unanimous consent to put a letter submitted by Amnesty International, Human Rights First, and Human Rights Watch dated September 29, 2004, into the record. I ask unanimous consent for that.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection.

[The letter follows:]

September 29, 2004

Dear Representative:

We strongly oppose a provision in H.R. 10 that would authorize the outsourcing of torture to brutal dictatorships like Syria, Saudi Arabia, and China.

Section 3032 of H.R. 10, the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act of 2004, would make it official U.S. policy to send or return individuals to countries where they would be at grave risk of torture. This provision would violate U.S. law and policy, and it is completely inconsistent with decades of efforts by Republicans and Democrats alike to make America a world leader in the fight against torture and for human rights. Far from implementing the 9/11 Commission's recommendations, it directly contradicts the Commission's counsel that the United States should "offer an example of moral leadership in the world, committed to treat people humanely, [and] abide by the rule of law."

The legal prohibition on torture is absolute. Along with 135 other countries that have ratified the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the United States has committed itself to upholding this fundamental principle of human dignity. Just as governments cannot engage in torture directly, they cannot send people to places where they risk being tortured. The Convention against Torture states that "no State Party shall expel, return ('refouler') or extradite a person to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture."

Congress reiterated its commitment to upholding this obligation in 1998 when it passed section 2242 of the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act, stating that "[i]t shall be the policy of the United States not to expel, extradite, or otherwise effect the involuntary return of any person to a country in which there are substantial grounds for believing the person would be in danger of being subjected to torture, regardless of whether the person is physically present in the United States." Section 3032 of H.R. 10 would violate that legal and moral obligation by permitting the U.S. government to turn over people to other countries even if it is 100 percent certain they will be tortured. This will have immediate and damaging consequences.

For example, the government of China has been demanding that the United States turn over to it a number of ethnic Uighur detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Because it believes the detainees would likely be tortured, the Bush Administration has rightly refused and is instead seeking other countries to accept them. If Congress were to approve this provision, there would be no legal bar to sending these detainees back to torture.

By contrast, in 2002 the U.S. government sent a transiting Canadian-Syrian national, Maher Arar, to Syria despite its systematic use of torture. Now safely back in Canada, Arar alleges he was severely tortured, including beatings with electrical cords, during his ten months in a Syrian prison. Such incidents undermine the credibility of U.S. efforts to promote human rights and democracy in the Arab world, which President Bush has identified as a key element in the Administration's long-term strategy to combat terrorism. If this provision is passed, such incidents will become more common, dealing a profound blow to America's moral authority in pursuing a vital goal.

In the wake of the Abu Ghraib scandal, President Bush and the Congress have gone to great pains to persuade the world that U.S. policy does not condone torture. If Congress enacts this legislation, it would make tolerance of torture official U.S. policy. We urge you to strike this provision from the bill and to reaffirm America's commitment to a world without torture.

Sincerely,

William Schulz

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I'd simply ask my colleagues to recognize what our responsibilities are. They're adding provisions both in terms of this provision and the one previously not accepted by this Committee, that was the Nadler-Sanchez provision, that simply asked for judicial review. We're trying to put in line some provisions of this legislation that came strictly from the Republican majority to put in line with really securing America, not, if you will, browbeating and—browbeating those individuals who may be simply under suspicion seems to be stretching it, and not providing any extra security and safety to those who are now frightened beyond speech. What we're doing is adding to the confusion. We're also undermining treaties and agreements that we've agreed to, and I'd ask my colleagues to support this amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. LOFGREN. I'd yield back, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker—Mr. Speaker? Mr. Chairman. I simply have two comments.

Number one, the gentleman from Indiana gave us a long list of people who committed horrible crimes. I would simply point out that we're not talking about people who we know committed crimes. We're talking about people who are accused of having committed crimes, and maybe they did and maybe they didn't. And what we're seeking to do here is to say that while that is being determined, while it is determined if they're entitled to asylum, while it's determined if they're ineligible because they committed a crime or because they pose a risk to this country, or whatever, they shouldn't automatically be deported before that determination is made. It's a simple question of due process. You can't assume that everybody is guilty just because someone accused them of it. That should be elementary, and I regret that in this Congress it isn't.

Secondly—secondly, what this provision that's sought to be repealed, this provision in this bill say is that—among other things, it says, "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no court shall have jurisdiction to review the regulations adopted to implement this section." What this is saying is that the administrative officer has carte blanche, can ignore the United States Constitution, can ignore the law, can adopt any regulation he or she wants, and no one can challenge it in court.

Now, I understand that the members of the majority don't trust the courts, even though most of the judges are now appointed by Republican Presidents, but you don't trust the courts. But do you trust any future bureaucrat in INS, or whatever we call INS these days? It seems to me that there ought to be some avenue for judicial review of bureaucratic decisions. And if you read Section 3033—32, which begins on page 213 of the bill, removals as such. And what this—what this amendment, as the Nadler-Sanchez amendment previously, seeks to do is to say, now, wait a minute—I don't think if anybody really read and looked at all these things carefully you'd have a lot of support for some of these provisions. I don't think most of the members of the majority here want to give carte blanche to any bureaucrat, who may be a Democrat in the future. You don't know. And he may want to ignore the law and may want to ignore the congressional intent, may want to ignore the Constitution. How can you say that no regulations that the bureaucrat puts out shall be reviewable in court by anybody?

I think we should pass this amendment, and I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. rollcall.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. rollcall is ordered. Pursuant to the Chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)(1), further proceedings on the amendment will be postponed.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment 2—excuse me. Amendment 278.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will read the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas. Page 62, after line 20 insert the following—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I ask the amendment be considered as read, ask unanimous consent.

Beginning on page 162, strike line 3 and all that follows through page 168, line 11 (and redesignate any subsequent sections accordingly).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the chairman very much. Again, I would hope that—I would have hoped that as we proceed, that we would certainly look to some of the provisions of the 9/11 Commission and the emphasis that they put on balancing security with civil liberties. This amendment that I have would make the next generation airline passenger prescreening provision more effective while taking active measures to protect individual rights and liberties. The existing language in Subsection I of Section 2173 assigns a task of testing the next generation passenger prescreening system against automatic selectee and no-fly lists and records in the Consolidated and Integrated Terrorist Watch List maintained by the Federal Government through the Assistant Secretary designee. This is a very loose assignment of a very important task. Moreover, the duties of the Assistant Secretary would hardly allow for the time and effort that is necessary to perform the functions of this provision to address the needs of the American public.

My amendment would assign this task rather to the Civil Liberties Protection Officer or designee thereof in consultation with the Assistant Secretary. Therefore, this amendment adds teeth to the existing provision in the area of personnel assignment. The Civil Liberties Protection Officer is the most appropriate personnel to perform this function, and its duties have been enumerated in Section 1022(b).

Under the Jackson Lee amendment, under my amendment the civil liberties officer would assume performance of the passenger prescreening function of comparing passenger name records to the automatic selectee and no-fly list, and utilize all appropriate records and resources in the Consolidate and Integrated Terrorist Watch List maintained by the Federal Government.

We have already seen a series of hearings that highlighted some of the ludicrousness of what has happened with these watch lists. We have heard representation by Senator Edward Kennedy in a hearing not long ago, and of course, John Lewis, known to many of us as a civil rights icon, likewise faced the brunt of this screening situation.

We also note the 9/11 Commission, to its credit, was not unmindful of the importance of individual liberties and privacy and the necessity of respecting that on behalf of the values of the American people and our system of Government.

This amendment is only a task assignment. It only allows us to be more efficient and more effective. It does not undermine any aspects of any of the underlying bills, including the amendment that was offered by John Conyers that did not pass, but was undermined by—that was submitted by John Conyers, does not undermine that particular focus either.

This amendment simply gives a task to someone who I believe can do it much better, and that is the individual designated as the Civil Liberties Officer. I would ask my colleagues to support this because simply it represents tasks to do the job better and to comport with not only security but also civil liberties.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

The current bill as written has adequate protections to protect civil liberties, and what the bill as it stands does is allows for a process for an individual to be removed from the no-fly list when the applicant has demonstrated that he or she is not a terrorist.

What the Jackson Lee amendment does is allow a terrorist to institute a civil action against the Government when the agency makes a determination not to amend that individual's record, meaning the applicant asked the agency to review the record. If the agency reviews the record and says no, we've got to keep you on the no-fly list, then what the Jackson Lee amendment does is allow a suit against the Government, and the Government has to defend itself in court and probably have to disclose the reasons why someone was put on the no-fly list. Now, that's something that should not be made a matter of public record because it compromises intelligence sources. And this makes no difference if the terrorist or is innocent.

Now, secondly, the amendment does thing that I think is not a good idea, and that is, is that it transfers this function from the Department of Homeland Security, which has jurisdiction over the Transportation Security Administration, to the National Intelligence Director Civil Liberties Office. The NID is supposed to be dealing with intelligence, and how it is collected and how it is implemented and who the intelligence is distributed to so that it can be effectively used. The NID's job is not to actually do the administration of the screening of who gets on an airplane and who does not get on the airplane.

The Department of Homeland Security has a statutorily appointed privacy officer responsible for monitoring privacy ramifications of airline screening system. This officer is accountable to Congress. The amendment would require the NID Civil Liberties Officer to perform responsibilities that are not inherent to NID but to the Department of Homeland Security.

And finally, the amendment strikes Section 2173, which includes more comprehensive protections to individuals than itemized in the amendment.

For all these reasons, I believe that this amendment should be defeated, and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WATT. I yield to the gentlelady from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the distinguished gentlemen. If we are really in the business of working a compromise, Mr. Chairman, the core provision we're willing to concede in order for this amendment to go forward. I would beg to differ as to whether or not we have placed this responsibility in an appropriate location. The transportation department deals with the issues of aviation and aviation security, as Homeland Security does. This person would be better tasked, having full information, in working closely on this no-fly list so that we can avoid violating the civil liberties and the civil rights of many of our traveling public who are within the United States.

How would we like to have a complete logjam of the traveling public going to the counter and consistently being denied access to board because they have the wrong information. It is very difficult for the traveling public to access Government, or the public period. This particular officer and his staff or his staff and/or designees would provide that kind of safety net, if you will, and have the better skills to do so, and to move it more expeditiously, while being of course, paying a great deal of attention to detail.

So I would argue that it is in the right place. It is an appropriate vehicle. It is certainly not in the Homeland Security Department for the very reason that we wanted to enhance the expertise of this civil liberties officer, and we wanted to make sure that their duties, or that their—that they had enough time and resources to be tasked to do this.

I think that it makes for a better legislative initiative, and if we are here working to add substance to the underlying bill, then I think we can find ways to compromise. If that is not our intent, and to cast this bill as a single focus of one school of thought as opposed to being open-minded, then obviously we have no means of negotiation or compromise. But if we eliminated the core provision and allowed this officer to look at these aspects, I don't think that this would in any way undermine what we're trying to do in providing security and safety to the American public.

And I yield back, yield back to the gentleman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WATT. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I was intrigued by what you sort of said about people on the no-fly list. I've not really studied this amendment, but I gathered from what you said that you don't think that someone who says, gee, you know, goes to the airport, finds that he's on a no-fly list, appeals to the Government, the Government says no, we're right, you're wrong, we're going to keep you there. He shouldn't have any right to challenge the Government in court because maybe he really is a terrorist?

What recourse does someone who is on the—or should someone who's on the no-fly list, who may need to fly for reasons of personal reasons or for business reasons, and the bureaucracy tells him, no, you're going to stay on the no-fly list. We're not going to tell you why you're on the no-fly list because that's secret information. What recourse does he have? And I'll yield. And what recourse should he have, or should that be a secret bureaucratic determination and he's helpless, he can never fly? Let's assume he's an American citizen. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman will yield?

Mr. NADLER. Yes, I will.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If a person's already been tried and convicted as a terrorist, he still has standing to sue under this amendment. And I guess my concern is, is that somebody's accused—

Mr. NADLER.—that someone is tried and convicted?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Time belongs to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. Well, I thought we weren't talking only about people who were already tried and convicted. If we were, that's different.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. NADLER. Yes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I just point out that there's a great danger involved in the public disclosure of records. I understand that in the trial of the people who bombed the World Trade Center in 1993, the architect of the World Trade Center was required by the Government to testify in court that the twin towers were designed to withstand a direct hit by a 707 aircraft. Well, guess what? That information ended up getting in the wrong hands, and there were two bigger aircraft with bigger fuel capacities that were ending up used in 9/11, and we saw the results of that. So there isn't a right to fly on a plane if someone is deemed to be a threat to the plane. They can ask to have the matter reviewed, but I don't think that the information that the Government used to make the determination that the person was a threat to the plane should have to come out and be on the public record, because believe me, it's going to be used against the security of everybody in this country who gets on a plane.

Mr. NADLER. Reclaiming my time, the fact is obviously there's an interest in keeping material secret, but on the other hand what you're really saying is that again, a Government bureaucrat can bar anybody, not just someone convicted of a crime or a terrorist, anybody, because his name is similar to somebody else or whatever, from flying permanently, and there's no recourse at all.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman will yield?

Mr. NADLER. Yes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. the Department of Homeland Security has got an ombudsman to deal with these problems, and I think that within the DHS they have got adequate ways of reviewing issues such as whether Senator Kennedy or Representative Lewis ended up being erroneously put on a no-fly list.

Mr. NADLER. Well, reclaiming my time, Senator Kennedy and Representative Lewis are rather well-known individuals and they're not going to have too much trouble showing the mistaken nature they're begin put on the fly list. I'm more concerned about John Q. Public, whom no one ever heard of, who's going to have a considerably harder time. And I've been fascinated by the fact—and I want to put terrorists away forever—but I'm fascinated by the fact that of 5,000 people who were arrested 3 years ago, not one has been convicted of a crime yet, and Yaser Hamdi, whom the Justice Department of the United States said was such a threat that he couldn't get a trial, and he couldn't have the normal process of justice, when the Supreme Court said he had to have some rights, instead of giving him a trial or keeping him in jail, they suddenly discovered it wasn't so important and they said, go home to Saudi Arabia. Goodbye. Who needs you?

So I lack such confidence in the department that I'm willing to surrender the normal due process protections that any American should have. I yield back.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. NADLER. Yes, I yield to the gentlelady.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Quickly. You are right. First of all this is not a pool of convicted terrorists. This is American citizens and many others. And we're not publishing any list. I don't know what the chairman is saying. People are finding out that their names are on there, and as with Senator Kennedy, there was a confusion as to who he should even call to be able to lift himself off of the list so he could proceed in the normal business of representing his constituents.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. That's what we're asking for—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER.—of the gentleman has expired.

Ms. JACKSON LEE.—a designated person to be able—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the Jackson Lee amendment. Those in favor will say aye—the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. Yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you. I'll just take a moment. I find it disturbing that in this bill, in many different provisions of this bill and many different—the debate over many of the amendments, and generally on many other bills, what we're finding is that the majority seems to have complete and utter faith in the bureaucratic agencies of Government and no faith in the courts, and that they are willing, indeed, eager, to let the rights of Americans be totally determined by bureaucrats who may be prosecutors or members of the Department of Homeland Security or whoever, and restrict rights of appeal to the courts, that we can't trust the courts but we can trust our liberty and our freedom and our rights to fly and do a lot of other things, completely to the Executive Branch of Government. The Executive Branch, it seems to me the philosophy is should be a dictator. We don't want it to be overseen by the courts, and it seems to me that that's a very wrong path to travel down.

And this bill, the way it's drafted, is traveling down that path in about a half a dozen different ways, and I think it's the wrong path. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. NADLER. I yield back to him.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. Yield to the gentlelady.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Simply in closing, the point that I think has been made by Mr. Nadler is quite accurate, and in the spirit of compromise I was hoping that we could at least get a civil liberties officer designated to be able to be the point person or reviewing some of the grievances of innocent travelers. I'm disappointed if we cannot at least get that compromise because again I refer back to two well-known personalities, but they are not—as I say, they should not be the crux of the problem. There are thousands of others who have no recourse other than to find out that their names are on a list. They have no designated person that can quickly review the documentation that may suggest that there is a problem. Why can't we, in the safety and security of this Nation, provide both a fairness system as well as the ability to secure Americans and those that travel within the United States?

This is unfair. This legislation unnecessarily ignores many of the civil liberties and civil rights aspects of security, and I would hope my colleagues would see the value in supporting just an officer that clarifies the list and assist travelers, American citizens who have been caught up in this web of discrepancy? I yield back to the gentleman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. SCOTT. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. rollcall.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. rollcall is ordered. Pursuant to the provisions of Committee Rule 2(h)1 and the chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this amendment will be postponed.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that's being prepared.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the clerk have the amendment? The chair not following, the rules will—if there are no other amendments—

Mr. NADLER. Well, we have—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. WATT. It is the—that's not the one. It's the longer amendment. It's the Watt/Nadler/Schiff amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the clerk have that amendment?

The CLERK. Yes, sir.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Watt, Mr. Nadler and Mr. Schiff. At the appropriate place in Subtitle H of Title V insert the following new section. Section, Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board. A. In general there is established within the Executive Branch an independent Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read, and the gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

(n) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS- There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

Mr. WATT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. This is the same amendment that 5½ hours ago I think I was offering. During that 5 hours I have been engaged in a process of negotiation. Unfortunately, I found at the end of the negotiation process, the only person that I was negotiating with was myself. While all the years I practiced law I found that the definition of a good compromise is one that nobody was happy with. When you're negotiating with your self and you get to a product that you are not happy with, that's a terrible condition to be in. So having made concessions in one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, every area in which I was asked to make a concession with the exception of one, having conceded to the request of the people who said that they were trying to work out an agreement with me, and thinking that I had a compromise, I arrived at a point where I didn't have a compromise, so I went back to the original amendment that I started off with because all of the concessions that I had made were concessions that were painful to me. I didn't want to make them. I was making them in the interest of trying to reach some kind of conciliatory agreement and move the process forward. But I ain't much on negotiating with myself and then starting with the place that at the end of the negotiation, if I'm going to go down, I'd rather go down with my own amendment.

And so here we are back where we were 5 hours ago with an amendment that we believe fairly represents what the 9/11 Commission said we should have, which is a Civil Liberties Review Board within the Executive Branch to oversee adherence to the guidelines recommended, and to make sure that the Government also defends civil liberties, and I think this is close to, or a logical companion to what the President himself said he was doing, although I think this does it a lot more effectively, in an Executive Order, as I said this morning. Maybe I should read the same statement I read this morning to reemphasize the futility of the last 5 hours.

My amendment would establish an independent watchdog envisioned by the 9/11 Commission to oversee all Executive Branch policies taken in the name of security and ensure that civil liberties and privacy interests of American citizens are protected. The key features of this board include a bipartisan staggered membership of 5 members, ensuring balance of political affiliation will ensure that partisanship not influence the important work of the board. In addition, staggered fixed terms further ensure that the board members have security and comfort in the knowledge that they will not be fired with a change in Administrations. I think that is the kind of independence we need. It is the kind of independence that the 9/11 Commission recommended.

And I ask my colleagues on the Committee who say that they believe in having this board to agree to the amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I have a second-degree amendment to the amendment at the desk, and the clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. WATT. I reserve the right to object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Gentleman reserves the right to object.

Mr. WATT. Perhaps if the chairman would explain—if I had been given the courtesy of a copy of the amendment, which we asked for prior to introducing our amendment, perhaps it wouldn't be necessary to go through this.

But perhaps if the chairman could explain to us how this is different we could dispense with the reading, but otherwise, I mean I don't have any—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Under the rules the chair can recognize nobody including himself until the amendment is either completely read or the reading of the remainder of the amendment is waived.

Mr. WATT. I'm operating under my reservation of right. I yield to the chairman if he wishes to explain. Otherwise, I object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will continue to read.

Mr. NADLER. Would the gentleman yield? Would the gentleman yield?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Objection is heard—for what purpose does the gentleman from New York seek recognition?

Mr. NADLER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Virginia be permitted to ask the chairman a question, that the chairman be permitted to answer the question—I'm sorry—that the gentleman from North Carolina be permitted to ask the question, that the chairman be permitted to answer the question without reading the entire amendment and before the gentleman exercises his right to object to dispensing the reading of the amendment.

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object.

Mr. NADLER. I ask unanimous consent that we be able to get—

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina reserves the right to object.

Mr. WATT. And I'll yield to the chairman if he wishes to explain how this differs from the underlying amendment which is what I did originally. If we wish to expedite—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATT. I have yielded to the chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay. First, there were 8 items in the gentleman's amendment that we agreed to before the negotiations fell apart. Those 8 items are contained in my amendment to your amendment. I do have concerns that the board that the amendment creates would exist in addition to a similar board established by Executive Order last month. And also a civil liberties protection officer with the NID established by the base bill.

As introduced, H.R. 10 also requires the appointment of privacy officers at other Federal agencies that perform law enforcement or antiterrorism functions, and the base bill requires Federal agencies to prepare privacy impact analyses of rules noticed for comment under the Administrative Procedure Act. The amendment gets rid of a couple of these redundancies. While I'm sympathetic to the goals of the amendment, I'm very strongly opposed to the provisions that give broad administrative—

Mr. WATT. Is the chairman explaining the differences or is he—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Yes, I am.

Mr. WATT. Or is he making a statement in support of—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, I'm trying to explain the differences. I have resisted efforts to provide broad administrative subpoena powers, and this amendment strikes the administrative subpoena powers that are contained in the gentleman's amendment.

Basically, what I am attempting to do is to conform the gentleman's amendment to the provisions that are being adopted by the Intelligence Committee which does have significant Democratic support in that Committee, in order to minimize the differences relative to the Privacy and Civil Liberties Board—

Mr. WATT. Are these differences, Mr. Chairman, or is this in support of your amendment?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Is there objection to waiving the reading?

Mr. WATT. I object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will continue to read.

The CLERK.—the Nation from terrorism as such actions pertain to privacy of civil liberties; and

(2) ensure that privacy and civil liberties concerns are appropriately considered in the development and implementation of laws, regulations and policies related to efforts to protect the Nation against terrorism.

(d) Functions.

(1) Advice and counsel on policy development and implementation. The Board shall:

(a) review the privacy and civil liberties implications of proposed legislation, regulations and policies related to efforts to protect the Nation from terrorism, including the development and adoption of information sharing guidelines under Section 892 of the Homeland Security Act;

(b) review the privacy and civil liberties implications of the implementation of new and existing legislation, regulations and policies related to efforts to protect the Nation from terrorism, including the implementation of information sharing guidelines under Section 892 of the Homeland Security Act;

(c) advise the President and Federal executive departments and agencies to ensure that privacy and civil liberties are appropriately considered in the development and implementation of such legislation, regulation, policies and guidelines; and

(d) in providing advice on proposals to retain or enhance particular governmental power, consider whether the executive department or agency has explained—

(i) the power actually materially enhances security

(ii) that there is adequate supervision of the executive's use of the power to ensure protection of privacy and civil liberties.

(2) Oversight—The Board shall continually review—

(A) the regulations, policies and procedures and the implementation of the regulations, policies, procedures and related laws of Federal executive departments and agencies to ensure that privacy and civil liberties are protected—

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection.

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina reserves the right to object.

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to yield to the chairman to explain the differences. Between the underlying amendment and this amendment by Mr. Sensenbrenner to Mr. Watt's amendment

Mr. NADLER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to yield to anybody who can do that.

Mr. NADLER. I would ask the chairman if the basic difference between the chairman's second degree amendment and the underlying amendment is that the chairman's amendment would not grant the Civil Liberties Board administrative subpoena power while Mr. Watt's amendment would? Is that the basic difference?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman from North Carolina would yield, yes, and I can—

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to yield to the chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The answer to the gentleman from New York's question is yes. I also can state that there have been several additions to the text of the gentleman's amendment which I can enumerate. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WATT. I'm happy to yield to the chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. First of all, on the first page relative to Subsection C, Purpose, C(1), my amendment adds "as such actions pertain to privacy and civil liberties." In Subsection D(1)(a) we add the language, "review of the privacy and civil liberties implications of proposed legislation." And Section E—excuse me—Section F, Informing the Public, we add at the end the words "and national security." In Section G(2)(b) we add "if the National Intelligence Director, in consultation with the Attorney General, determines that it's necessary to withhold information from disclosure." So the AG is—or the NID is required to consult with the AG on this subject.

And it strikes the administrative subpoena provisions, and those are the basic differences.

Mr. WATT. Reclaiming my time under my reservation, would it be fair to say that you have taken all of the things that I reluctantly agreed to in our negotiation and then started from there and added the one thing on which we disagree?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman—

Mr. WATT. I withdraw my reservation and I withdraw my objection.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Is there objection? Okay. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes, and everything has been explained, and yields back the balance of his time.

The question is on the second degree amendment offered by the chair to the Watt amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it—

Mr. WATT. Recorded vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Recorded vote is ordered. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and the provisions of Committee Rule 2(h)(1), further proceedings will be postponed.

Are there further amendments? The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, Weiner 154, Weiner 154.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report—the chair also announces that the vote on the underlying Watt amendment will also be postponed.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, a point of information.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Yes?

Mr. NADLER. I'm confused. I thought we were about to take a vote on the chairman's second degree amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Yes, but we can't proceed on further debate on the Watt amendment until we dispose of the chairman's second degree amendment.

Mr. NADLER. And after we have a vote on the chairman's second degree amendment, we will return to debate on the Watt amendment?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Yes, that is the case.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report Weiner 154.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr Weiner. At the appropriate place in the bill insert the following new section: Section——

Mr. WEINER. Request unanimous consent it be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, what I propose to do here is something very similar that the Committee did with the DNA legislation last week. It is to take the language that has been reported out of this Committee on COPs almost as is as we've all reported it and attaching it to this legislation. Hopefully, it will pressure the other body to finally act on the legislation that we've considered here, that Mr. Keller and others and yourself have crafted.

The only change is in the bill we also explicitly say what is probably true of the bill even unamended, and that is that the COPs program here would allow local law enforcement to pay for the hiring of antiterrorism officials and it would also—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEINER. Certainly.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair is prepared to accept the gentleman's amendment, and the Committee has already approved this amendment as a part of the DOJ reauthorization bill which seems to have fallen in the black hole about 3 blocks north of where we speak. So I would hope the Committee would approve this amendment.

Mr. WEINER. I yield back my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question's on the Weiner amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the Weiner amendment is adopted.

Are there further amendments?

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. I have an amendment at the desk designated 725XML.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Nadler. Strike Section 3007 and conform provisions and amend the table of contents accordingly.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Nadler follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY ~~MR. FEINER~~ Nadler

Strike section 3007 (and conform provisions and amend the table of contents accordingly).

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker—Mr. Chairman. I keep doing that.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment would strike Section 3007, which is deceptively entitled Preventing Terrorists from Obtaining Asylum. In fact, terrorists, if we know they're terrorists, are already not entitled to asylum. What this section would do is to make it much harder for people facing real persecution in their home countries from having a fair opportunity to make their cases to claim asylum. This amendment has nothing to do with terrorism. It was not among the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission, and it will result in our Nation sending victims of persecution back to their oppressors to be further persecuted.

This section would require an asylum applicant to prove that his or her persecutor's central motive in persecuting her was or would be her race, religion, political opinion, nationality or membership in a particular social group. Under current law, if you want the asylum you have to prove that you're going to be persecuted or were persecuted because of race, religion, et cetera. But now you have to prove that the central motive in the persecution were one of these factors.

The persecutor's main concern in most cases is harming the applicant, not explaining the reasons for their actions, and the applicant's main concern is and should be escaping this harm, not documenting the persecutor's psychological motive for it. This section would place an enormous and unnecessary burden on asylum seekers by requiring them to prove with unrealistic precision what is going on in the persecutor's mind.

The standard also does not reflect the definition of refugee in the Immigration and Nationality Act. The authors of this section have conspicuously omitted from the right to asylum a person who has been or who may be subject to coercive family planning policies, for example, forced abortions. Since when did my friends on the other side of the aisle support forced abortions or we should send people back to undergo forced abortions? I'm pro-choice, so I am strongly opposed to forced abortions. Does anybody, whether they're pro-choice or not, disagree with that?

This provision permits adjudicators to deny its applicants asylum because the applicants are unable to provide corroborating evidence of certain alleged facts pertaining to the specifics of their claim.

Right now, under current law, the adjudicators and the courts that review it have the ability, when they judge it necessary or appropriate, to require corroborating evidence. But this makes it much harder to get asylum without the corroborating evidence, that this proportionally harms applicants who are detained and therefore unable to do what has to be done to get corroborating evidence, and who—or lack counsel.

In addition, this provision seeks to constrain judicial review of a denial of asylum. They send applicants not having provided corroborating evidence. What are we expecting these people to do, get a note from Saddam Hussein's secret police?

It also gives adjudicators broader leeway to deny applicants asylum based on factors such as their perceived demeanor and inconsistencies between, for example, their testimony before an immigration judge and their quote, "written and oral statements whether or not under oath made at any time to any officer, agent or employee of the United States," unquote. Now, asylum applicants, particularly survivors of torture such as rape or forced abortion or sterilization may not be comfortable telling this information to a uniformed male inspection officer in a secondary inspection area at the airport. Asylum applicants, in that setting, may not be provided with appropriate interpreters, and may understandably fear discussing their problems in their home countries in any detail until later in the process when it is made clear to them that they are not going to be sent back to their home countries without their claims being adequately heard.

Several courts of appeal have emphasized that statements taken under such conditions are unreliable. This provision also limits judicial review to an extent—as do several other provisions of this bill—that virtually nullifies any judicial oversight over the actions of agency bureaucrats. It would be on this unreviewable basis that we would again send people to their deaths to forced abortions or forced sterilizations, to religious persecution, to gulags and to torture chambers.

Is this someone's idea of victory in the war on terrorism, or is this simply a war on the victims of state terrorism?

Mr. Chairman, in summary, people come here who are victims of some secret police, Saddam Hussein's secret police, the Shah's secret police, the Gestapo, the KGB, whatever it may be, and we are denying them, we are making it harder by this amendment for them to establish their case. They still have the burden of proof to establish it. We made it harder in the Immigration Act a few years ago but they still have the burden of proof to establish it. Now we're making it even harder to establish it, and we're saying that if the adjudicator, that is, the bureaucrat says no, it's almost impossible for a court to review that case. Why would we want to do this? This has no business in a bill on terrorism. This does not apply only to terrorists. It does not apply—it applies to anybody seeking asylum, and it is wrong and ought to be considered separately from this bill, and again, it was not one of the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. NADLER. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of this amendment. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

The chair would like to quote from the staff report of the 9/11 Commission, which related to limit asylum abuse by terrorists. Once terrorists had entered the United States, their next challenge was to find a way to remain here. Their primary method was immigration fraud. For example, Yousef and Ajaj concocted bogus political asylum stories when they arrived. The asylum system did not protect or—excuse me—the asylum system did not detect or deter fraudulent applicants. Terrorists in the 1990's, as well as the September 11 hijackers, needed to find a way to stay. This could be accomplished legally by applying for asylum. A number of terrorists abused the asylum system. Thus Ajaj was able to file a political asylum claim after his arrest for involvement in the bombing of the World Trade Center. Rahman avoided being removed by filing an application for asylum the night after the attack on the World Trade Center. This was in the staff report at pages 47, 48, 49, 51, 86, 98 and 99.

Now, the response to this in the staff report is Section 3007, which the gentleman's amendment proposes to strike. This section provides a non-exhaustive list of factors that an immigration judge can consider in assessing the credibility of the applicant or a witness in an asylum case, such as demeanor, candor, responsiveness and consistency. The section would also require that an asylum applicant show that race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political opinion was or will be the central motive for persecuting the applicant in their country of origin.

It seems to me that Section 3007 responds to the abuses that were cited in staff report by the 9/11 Commission, and that's why it should be kept in this bill and the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York should be defeated.

I yield back to balance of my time.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, asylum requests may indeed be abused. Our entire judicial system may indeed be abused. But we still maintain the theory at least of due process. How is it going to restrict—first of all, it was in the staff report. The staff report, I would also observe, said that the Bush administration could have prevented 9/11. Not everybody believes that. The staff report is not completely infallible. The 9/11 Commission, upon weighing the staff report and other competing considerations, did not recommend anything like this. How does saying that—the current law says that you have to establish that you're being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, et cetera? This says you have to establish that those reasons are the central motive. You're just making it harder to establish that the persecution for which you're claiming asylum is based on that. How that has anything to do with terrorism or preventing terrorism, I don't know.

It also says that no court shall reverse a determination made by an adjudicator unless the court finds that a reasonable adjudicator is compelled to conclude. So in other words, the adjudicator has final say unless the court finds that no rational adjudicator could say this. What you're doing again is raising the bureaucrat's judgment above the court's judgment and restricting the court. Again, how does that protect us against a fraudulent claim of asylum unless you assume that bureaucrats are always right and courts are always wrong?

Thirdly, the fact that terrorists may seek to abuse asylum to get into the country, the fact is that today when someone claims asylum, they're almost invariably kept in jail pending the adjudication of that asylum claim. Certainly, anybody suspected of terrorism or of being a terrorist, of wanting to come into the country for terrorist purposes is not going to be let out before his asylum claim is completely adjudicated. He's going to be in jail before he's found not to be a terrorist. [Technical problem with microphone]—in any event, and they're going to deport him, but until either he's found to be innocent and entitled to asylum or he's deported, he's going to be in jail. So how does this further protect us?

What this provision really does is, using the concern about terrorism, further victimize real victims of terrorists abroad, of state terrorism, and send them back to their persecutors. Unless we think again that bureaucrats are always right and courts are always wrong, and anybody who is fleeing to the United States because they believe our offer of liberty should be treated improperly and just sent back in most cases, we should not be doing this, and certainly we should not be doing this in the 9/11 bill, when this wasn't part of their recommendation. We should be giving it a separate consideration where we can give it appropriate hearings and testimony and so forth.

What's the rationale for leaving out, for example, where we said the applicant must establish race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, political opinion, why leave out gender? Why leave out the forced abortion or forced sterilization? Those are motives that the courts have recognized for asylum also. So I don't see this as a well-considered provision. We ought not to rush it through as part of the 9/11 bill.

It does not protect us because these people, anybody suspected of terrorism is going to remain in jail while this is being adjudicated, and we should not use the concern over terrorism to perpetrate or to enable to perpetrators of state terrorism abroad to have more victims.

I thank the gentleman and I yield back to him.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The time belongs to the gentleman from California.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The noes have it. The amendment is not agreed to.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The hour of 5:30 having arrived and pursuant to the chair's prior announcement, we will do the roll votes. If I can get a list of which one in which order I will announce which votes we will be taking.

The unfinished business is the amendment by the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee, on which the noes prevailed by a voice vote, and which further proceedings were postponed.

This is the amendment that relates to the airline screening. Those in favor of the Jackson Lee amendment relating to airline screening, will as your names are called, answer aye; those opposed, no. And the clerk will call the roll.

 The CLERK. Mr. Chairman, there are 19 ayes and 15 noes.
 Chairman SENSENBRENNER. And the second degree amendment to the Watt amendment is agreed to.
 The question now——

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from North Carolina seek recognition?

Mr. WATT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The motion to strike the last word is not in order because the second degree amendment was a complete substitute, and consequently the question arises on the Watt amendment as amended by the second degree amendment.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from North Carolina seek recognition?

Mr. WATT. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I am told by the parliamentarian that that motion is not in order because the substitute was adopted.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from New York seek recognition?

Mr. NADLER. Maybe this is a parliamentary inquiry. I'm not sure.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. NADLER. I was under the impression that when there's a second degree amendment, if that is adopted, then debate is in order on the amendment as amended.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. When the second degree amendment is an amendment in the nature of a substitute of the first degree amendment, once the second degree amendment is agreed to, then the vote occurs on the base amendment as amended by the amendment in the nature of a substitute. The same is true will bills.

Mr. NADLER. But Mr. Chairman—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. When a substitute is adopted, then there's no further debate.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I would point out in that case that the amendment by Mr. Sensenbrenner to Mr. Watt's amendment does not state that it is a substitute amendment in the nature of a substitute. It simply says amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The text of the amendment says, "Strike at the appropriate place and all that follows and replace with the following," so that is an amendment in the nature of a substitute because the second degree amendment which has been agreed to by the Committee completely replaces the text of the Watt amendment as originally offered.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, that being the case, it should be made clear that this is in the nature of a substitute so that people who desire to speak on the main amendment would have known that they should speak on the—at that point.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well—

Mr. NADLER. It was not clear, and I withheld comment on that at that point.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the chair would respond by saying that the rules on what happens after complete substitutions have been taken, whether it's an amendment to a bill or whether it is an amendment in the nature of a substitute to an amendment, are quite clear, and that is, is that the only way to get further debate is by voting down whether it's a second degree amendment or an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. WATT. Parliamentary inquiry.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WATT. I just want to point out to the chairman that the chairman may be technically right, the parliamentarian may be technically right, but Mr. Nadler specifically asked the chairman whether we would return to the Watt amendment after the vote, and the chairman specifically told Mr. Nadler that it would be in order to return.

So if that's the way we are going play this game, we are going to be in for a long, long evening, and tomorrow.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Chair will respond to the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry. Since I have become the chairman of this Committee, I have strictly enforced the rules, no matter which way they cut. And when the Chair made the statement that we would return to the Watt amendment after the second-degree amendment was voted upon, what the Chair would have done is if the second-degree amendment were rejected, then the original Watt amendment would be open to debate.

With the second-degree amendment being adopted, there is a second question that is put on the adoption of the Watt amendment, as amended by the second-degree amendment, and that is the question that the Chair is attempting to put and that is done pursuant to the rules.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. So the question is—

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler, for what purpose do you seek recognition?

Mr. NADLER. I would ask, in light of the fact that I specifically asked that—and maybe I misunderstood the chairman because I thought he meant we would come back to debate, that I withheld comment on it. I'd ask unanimous consent to make a brief comment on the amendment at this point.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. How long does the gentleman wish to be recognized for?

Mr. NADLER. Less than a minute.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection—

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the gentleman will be recognized—

Mr. CHABOT. Reserving the right to object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. CHABOT. I have an inquiry, a parliamentary inquiry. If we allow 1 minute, does that open up the entire side to do that or are we talking about—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The only request that is pending is unanimous consent for the gentleman from New York to speak for 1 minute.

Does the gentleman withdraw his reservation?

Without objection, the gentleman is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. NADLER. I thank the chairman for his consideration.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment seeks to implement one of the key recommendations of the 9/11 Commission, which recognized that with the greater powers to fight terrorism, there would be a need to take greater care to protect our fundamental liberties and the privacy of all Americans, and therefore recommended that we set up this Civil Liberties Board.

Unfortunately, the bill as presented to us didn't have this, which is why Mr. Watt and Mr. Schiff offered this amendment. I regret that we have taken away the subpoena power that would have been in the amendment, had it gone forward as it is—I mean, as offered. But it is still a great improvement to the bill and therefore I support the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Does the gentleman from North Carolina wish to ask unanimous consent to—

Mr. WATT. No, I don't wish to ask unanimous consent to do anything, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay. the question is on the Watt amendment, as amended by the second-degree amendment of the Chair. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed no.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it and the Watt amendment, as amended by the second-degree amendment, is agreed to.

The Chair now announces that we will continue on. Votes will be rolled until 7:30 tonight, so Members should make their plans accordingly.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have an amendment at the desk, UR 003.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Mr. Scott: Strike Section 1078 on page 110 and insert the following—

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection.

[The amendment of Mr. Scott follows:]

25 to any materials under subparagraph (B).

1 (D) Failure on the part of any employee or contractor
2 of the National Intelligence Authority to cooperate with
3 the Inspector General shall be grounds for appropriate ad-

7 (3) The Inspector General is authorized to receive
8 and investigate complaints or information from any person

Mr. WEINER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This bill seeks to remedy something that the Speaker acknowledged was a problem, the 9/11 Commission acknowledged was a problem, many of those who visited New York for the Republican National Convention acknowledged as a problem. It is that New York, perhaps the highest of high-threat areas, has seen actually a diminishing amount of Homeland Security funds because of a mistake in the way that it is allocated.

In 2003, New York City wound up getting about 5 percent of the Homeland Security pot. It wasn't enough. It was about $200 million less than the city needed. In 2004, we in this Congress increased the amount of Homeland Security funds. New York actually got a smaller amount. How did that happen?

It happened because the system of allocating funds allowed more and more and more cities to be eligible for the high-threat, high-density urban area grants. The result was that while more money was being allocated, less was finding its way to the truly high-threat areas.

Recently, we had a discussion in this Committee, and we've had it in other Committees, about whether the way to solve that problem is to eliminate the minimum guarantees for lower-threat states. We decided in this Committee by a vote not to do that, to keep a minimum guarantee of .25 percent for states, .45 percent for border states.

But it does not address the fundamental problem with the way Cox conceives his bill, and that is under the new way of doing it, it will not be a bifurcated system of formula money and high-threat money. All money would essentially be high-threat money. So when all of the applications are submitted, they are going to be ranked.

The problem that is endemic to the new bill is that you could conceivably have 300, 400, 500, 1,000 grants that are approved and those at the top get diluted to such a point that you are worse off than if you had just considered region or just considered minimum guarantees in and of themselves.

This amendment seeks to protect New York. It seeks to take funds for New York, and it also addresses the needs of other localities that either are the subject—according to the bill, are consistently referenced in intelligence information as terrorism targets or have previously been the site of one terrorist attack. I realize in that construction, also, Virginia would get a minimum guarantee under this bill.

The number that we've chosen is roughly—is 75 percent of what the Commissioner of New York City said that he needed in Federal aid. It's not all of it, and based on last year's number that would be 8.5 percent. This does not do anything to diminish the funds under the minimum guarantee. The minimum guarantee would still be protected.

What this would do is provide funds for New York. It provides funds for the Washington-Virginia area. I think it actually, under the bill the way it has been conceived, will go to the state, so it would be the state of Virginia. And what it would do is address the problem without taking money out of anyone else's pot.

There wasn't anyone who came to New York for the convention that didn't notice and didn't comment upon the phalanx of security that was there. And that hasn't changed all that much since the convention has ended. We recently had the United Nations General Assembly. Again, similar type of a ramp-up had to happen. We have Wall Street which has to be protected around the clock. And the idea that we have a diminishing amount of Homeland Security funds to protect New York is a serious, serious problem.

On behalf of the Mayor of the City of New York, someone with whom I frequently disagree and will probably disagree with much more next year, this is—I make this appeal that this is a way to solve the problem that so many people have demonstrated the desire to solve without taking money out of anyone else's pot. And I would urge my colleagues in favor of it, and I yield back my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Earlier today, we heard an eloquent plea by the other Member from New York, who said either we ought to get rid of minimum guarantees at all and have all of the money be distributed according to some bureaucratic criteria. This amendment proposes to reinstate a minimum guarantee that definitely applies only to one city and might apply to two more metropolitan areas.

The fact of the matter remains is that changing the current formula, which most people agree needs to be changed, is a very delicate issue because some states will lose and other states potentially gain. And if the object is to pass a bill that changes the formula, then we have to go along with the compromises that have been reached to get any formula change passed through both Houses and signed by the President.

I certainly am sympathetic to the problems that New York City faces. I can say that I think this Congress has generously responded to the aftermath of 9/11 through specific appropriations that the Congress has made, as well as specific appropriations to New York City and Boston for the threat that was caused by the two conventions being held there and the like.

This amendment, while very well-intentioned, in my opinion, goes too far. It undoes the very delicate agreement that has been reached and is going to end up, in my opinion, sinking any change in the formula. And the result will be that New York City will probably end up getting less money under the existing formula than under the compromise that is contained in the bill.

I would urge a no vote on the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, although the original amendment to focus the funds where they're most needed was defeated, I think this makes the same point that we need to focus the funds where they're needed, which is exactly what the amendment does. And I support the amendment and yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WEINER. I appreciate it, and I would say to the chairman what I'm trying to do is address exactly the point you yourself made during the debate on the minimum guarantee that the reason the minimum guarantee striking it is that you say to too many states we're taking away from your constituents. We don't seek to do that. We take the reasoning behind the minimum guarantee and simply extend it to the states that everyone agrees should have some base level of support.

And I would say, with all deference to my good friend, the people of the state of New York and the city of New York are very grateful for the funds that were provided in the aftermath of September 11. But make no mistake, we have an ongoing security problem that exists, an ongoing homeland security problem that exists, and I haven't heard anyone dispute that. I mean, Mr. Hastert, when he was in New York promoting his book, acknowledged it. Chairman Cox acknowledged it. The only question was how you solve it.

As far as the delicate balance that has been struck to make this happen, this amendment was not considered in the homeland security—this was the subject of negotiations going on with the Mayor and Mr. Cox, and the clock ticked and it expired. I think it is very important that we acknowledge that if we don't adjust the homeland security problems of the city that has Ground Zero, we can't call this bill a success. The present bill doesn't do it.

And one further thing, Mr. Cox's formulation of saying let's rank things according to threat is going to make New York No. 1, no doubt about it. I think it's correct that this bill is going to have New York No. 1. It's going to have the Pentagon and Washington and LA near the top of the list. What difference does it make if you have 2,000 localities getting grants? What difference does it—it doesn't make all that much difference. If you wind up taking a larger and larger group of grantees, you wind up diminishing the amount that they get. That's why New York's share has been going down. Has our threat gone down? Certainly not. Have we gotten any assistance subsidizing this beyond this that has helped us somehow bridge the gap? Sure, we got some extra money for the conventions. Is it that much easier to protect the dignitaries of every country? President Bush was there for 3 days. It's always a constant problem in New York.

And very honestly, I would say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, you saw the challenge that New York faced. You saw Mayor Bloomberg say to you that you don't have—I mean certainly even if you don't pass this for me, you've got to have some sense of empathy for your Republican colleagues in New York who are telling you that you're shortchanging them. This is a way to fix it without taking any from your own constituents, and I see no reason why you wouldn't take—seize that opportunity. If you want to talk about how to do it, but there's nothing in the Cox bill, in this delicate balance that's been struck, under any version, that gives New York what it needs, and this is an opportunity to do it.

Our desire not to upset the apple cart, Mr. Chairman, shouldn't stop us from doing good law here. We should try to address an outstanding problem that the base bill does not address. There is no consensus on how to deal with New York's problems. This is a novel way to do it. It's the first time it's been offered in Committee. It's the first time—Cox never considered it. Cox's own Committee isn't even considering his bill, if you can believe that, so it's not going to be offered there. This is our opportunity.

So I would encourage my colleagues to vote on this based on the merits of it, not based on this sense of balance.

Let me make a final point. You know what? I will eat this rostrum if our bill becomes the bill that we vote on on the floor. We are all in a process of laying down a series of markers, of protecting jurisdiction, of making sure that the bill that we report out reflects what we want it to do.

If we're going to do that, we have two chances to do it. We can have one consistent bill, the base 9/11 bill. We've decided not to do that. The other thing to do is to take this bill and perfect it, and I think we should do that by voting yes on this amendment.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The other gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I commend the other gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner, for this amendment. Clearly, everything we know, every bit of intelligence we get from the 9/11 Commission, from everywhere, from the chatter, the briefing we had downstairs a week ago, is that all the information we have is that the No. 1 target of the terrorists in New York is New York. I'm sorry. The No. 1 target of the terrorists in the United States is New York, and clearly, if we want to protect the American people, we have to protect—we have to have the money go where the threat is to some extent.

Now, you talk about the politics of it. The politics of it, we've surrendered in this Committee. We've surrendered by having the State minimums. That should be enough of a surrender to the politics. But the fact is, we ought to at least have this amendment so the minimum percent goes to where the real threat is, not on the basis of geography but on the basis of where it is needed. No one disputes that that is where the No. 1 threat is. There may be some very weird terrorist out there who really wants to destroy a cornfield in some midwestern State, but that's not the real threat. The real threat is New York. The real threat is Chicago, Washington, Los Angeles, but primarily New York. That's what the FBI is afraid of. That's what the CIA is afraid of. That's what the Homeland Security Department is afraid of, and that's where we ought to devote some of our resources.

So this amendment, which takes 8½ percent for the most threatened jurisdictions is common sense and doesn't take away from the politics. We've conceded the politics by putting in all those State minimums, which have no justification other than the politics.

So I urge the adoption of this amendment and I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question—

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from California,

Ms. LOFGREN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. LOFGREN. I want to speak in favor of this amendment, and I listened carefully to the Chairman's comments and concern that we might not be able to achieve this beyond what is in the bill itself, and certainly we are both members of the Homeland Security Committee, and we have not had tremendous progress on that Committee, as the chairman knows. But I think we ought to stretch ourselves and adopt this amendment because certainly it would not necessarily be of benefit to my particular district, I think, in California, but it's what we should do as a country. We ought to direct our resources to the threats, and I think we all know that, and we know that New York is our prime target. There may be—Washington also. This is not an area, in my judgment, where we ought to allow political pragmatism, as valuable as that is, to get in the way of doing the right thing for our country and for the safety of our Nation.

Therefore, I think that the gentleman from New York's amendment needs to be approved. Each one of us who has districts that will not receive funds, should be able to go home and look our constituent in the eye and say we did this because it's not pork, it's for the country, it's for the safety of the country, and I think that the citizens of America and our constituents will understand that that's the right thing. Not a single member of this Committee would be punished politically for doing that right thing.

And so I would hope—I understand the chairman's savvy political advice, but I really think we need to move beyond that. I think we're better than that as a Committee, as a Congress and as a country, and I strongly urge that we support this amendment. It's the right thing to do, and I appreciate the gentleman allowing me to speak, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentlewoman from Texas, Mr. Jackson Lee, seek recognition?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. To strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Let me first of all thank Mr. Weiner for really defining the issue and narrowing the issue to I think the sensitivities that were reflected in the 9/11 Commission report.

In the number of meetings that we had with the commissioners, individual commissioners from different cities, different regions of the Nation, they really focused on this question of vulnerabilities and the threat question, and they really, really, really insisted that we give some order to the resources being utilized or being put forward on behalf of this Government to secure America.

The threat vulnerability question is a key element to its security. This one helps to narrow—this amendment, excuse me—helps to narrow the determination even more. When I spoke earlier on the Nadler amendment I indicated for some reason we think that the Homeland Security resources are, if you will, safety resources, are the only safety resources that this Government has a responsibility of generating throughout the Nation. That is not the case. The Department of Justice has oversight over the DEA, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the U.S. Marshal Service, Federal Protective Service, Capitol Police, FBI, any number of law—Secret Service—law enforcement entities besides funding that's possible for local law enforcement authority.

This funneling of dollars to where the threat is will not undermine general safety in our cities. I do think not funding cops on the beat will undermine it, but this will not do it. So I would hope the gentleman's amendment would be passed just for the very fact that it is really complicit with the research and the testimony that was gathered by the 9/11 Commission, makes it a far better offering, if you will, to ensuring that we are safe and ensuring that those highly-targeted areas can be truly made safe by the resources that are generated for that very purpose.

With that, I yield back to the gentleman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The—

Mr. WEINER. rollcall.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. A rollcall vote is ordered. Pursuant to the Chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)(1), further proceedings on this amendment will be postponed.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman?

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Mr. BERMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. Actually, I have an amendment at the desk, and I would like to offer it.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Be recognized to speak on my amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Berman: Strike Section 3006 and amend the table of contents accordingly.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Berman follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

Strike section 3006 (and amend the table of contents accordingly).

Mr. BERMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This amendment strikes Section 3006 and amends the table of contents accordingly. 3006 drastically expands the use of expedited removal. Expedited removal came into play in the 1996 legislation that this Congress passed with people—for people who are entering the U.S. without inspection. Because this process represents a drastic limitation on due process, we built in some protections for special cases, like asylees, to avoid making irreversible and serious mistakes.

This section presents many problems, but it has two major flaws. First, it ignores those careful exceptions for those who have legitimate claims to asylum. Second, it really has no logical place in this bill. This bill would deny the most basic simple protection for those with legitimate claims to asylum, the credible fear interview, and here, remember, I'm not talking about the long protracted asylum process. That interview which is used in expedited removal cases, which usually occurs within 24 hours after the person is picked up without appropriate documents, and where that employee of the agency determines whether, in fact, the gentleman has a credible fear and, therefore, should move into the asylum process. If the person making the claim has been in the U.S. for more than a year, then he no longer can even get that credible fear interview.

In other words, if an inspector finds that someone has been here for more than a year and they claim that they have a credible fear of persecution that will come to them if they are sent home, this bill would allow that claim to be ignored and to avoid the credible fear interview.

I assume that the basis for this provision is the 1-year filing section—deadline in Section 208(a)(2)(C). The problem is that there are exceptions to this deadline that are not accommodated in this bill. Circumstances change in countries in a year, and there are exceptional circumstances in which an individual could still be granted asylum, or other relief for that matter, for instance, withholding of removal or relief under the Convention Against Torture.

But this raises a broader question for this section. What's it doing in this bill? I find it hard to believe that the people who drafted this legislation really think that by expanding expedited removal we will catch more terrorists trying to enter our country. Expedited removal is the last thing we want for terrorists trying to gain entry because essentially what it does is sends them out only to try to enter again somewhere else to engage in the act of terrorism that they are planning or have already engaged in somewhere else.

This section is not about that. It's about wanting to broaden general immigration enforcement without due process. That may be the goal—that may be the goal for some, but I don't believe this is—this is clearly not a goal of the 9/11 Commission, and this bill does not implement any of the 9/11 Commission recommendations, this section. The danger of relying on expedited removal to catch terrorists is that it is about removal. We don't want to remove terrorists. We want to detain them. We want to interrogate them. We want to charge them, and we want to put them away. Expedited removal sends them home. If we want to step outside the Commission's recommendations, we should try to do so in a way that doesn't harm legitimate asylum seekers, many of whom are escaping the oppression of governments that sponsor the terrorists we're trying to stop. Section 3006 would allow genuine refugees who qualify for a statutory exception to the 1-year deadline to file for asylum, it would allow those refugees to be summarily deported without even the credible fear interview.

I'm very sensitive to the notion of frivolous asylum applications. This was the whole logic behind setting up the credible fear interview. Have a quick 1-day interview with an officer of the Bureau where the individual can determine whether—can persuade that person that his claim is, in fact, based on a credible fear. And that interview is eliminated by virtue of this provision, a carefully crafted exception that was maintained by the majority in the 1996 law. This would allow—if we adopt 3006, it would allow refugees who are eligible for withholding of removal to be summarily deported with no opportunity to claim that protection in violation of our obligations under Article 33 of the Refugee Convention.

I think we should strike this section, and I would urge the Committee to support the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired. The Chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

By the mid-1990's, tens of thousands of aliens were arriving at U.S. airports each year without valid documents and making meritless asylum claims, knowing that they would be released into the community pending asylum hearings because of a lack of detention space. Few were ever heard from again.

In response, the '96 law created a mechanism of expedited removal. Under expedited removal, a DHS officer at a port of entry can immediately return an alien lacking proper documents to his or her country of origin unless the alien asks for asylum and can establish at that time a credible fear of persecution. By fiscal year 2003, the INS was making over 43,000 expedited removals per year, and our airports were no longer being deluged.

The '96 Act provided the Administration with authority to utilize expedited removal in the case of any alien who had entered the U.S. illegally and had not been present here for 2 years. Until recently, INS and DHS never made use of this power, which was a fact that amazed the staff of the 9/11 Commission. Let me quote 9/11 and terrorist travel. "Despite the success of expedited removal at our airports, the INS never expanded expedited removal to include persons attempting to enter illegally across the expansive physical borders between ports of entry. As a result, it was not being used against Ghazi Ibrahim Abul Mizir who was able to stay in the U.S. despite being apprehended three times for illegal entries along the Canadian border. He later became known as the Brooklyn Bomber for his plan to blow up the Atlantic Avenue subway in Brooklyn."

Recently, the Administration has taken a tentative step toward using expedited removal along the Southern border because of large numbers of non-Mexicans being caught by the Border Patrol and then released into the United States because of a lack of detention space. The recent release of Border Patrol data showed that just in the period from last October through this June, 44,614 non-Mexican aliens were caught trying to cross the Northern or Southern borders, including eight from Afghanistan, six from Algeria, 13 from Egypt, 20 from Indonesia, 10 from Iran, 55 from Israel, 122 from Pakistan, six from Saudi Arabia, six from Syria, 22 from Turkey, and two from Yemen.

There is no good reason not to subject illegal aliens who have crossed the border illegally to expedited exclusion. These aliens, if they had been in the U.S. less than 10 years, have no right to seek cancellation of removal. Unless they are making a claim of asylum and can show a credible fear of persecution, there is no reason not to subject them to expedited removal. Otherwise, the present revolving door will continue to spin.

We will catch illegal aliens and promptly release them, hoping that they'll appear for their immigration court hearing months hence. The Department of Justice's Office of Inspector General found last year that the INS was only able to remove 13 percent of non-detained aliens with final orders of removal and only 6 percent of non-detained aliens from countries who are state sponsors of terrorism who had final removal orders. Our choices are stark: either to vastly increase immigration detention space and detain all illegal aliens that are apprehended, utilize expedited removal, or continue the present charade of catch and release. Our borders are leaky as sieve. When we do catch people who are illegally in the United States, there is no reason to expect them to show up in court when they are released into our society. And what this section does is to provide the means to provide expedited removal for those who are caught.

I urge opposition to the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the amendment—

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. NADLER. I think the last word is being awfully painful these days since we are striking it so often. But with that, I'll yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BERMAN. I'd like to just react to the chairman's comments and throw out a possibility of an adjustment here. I'm not talking here against expedited removal. I am aware of the problems of the revolving door. I'm aware of the problem of frivolous asylum claims. And part of the whole process that we dealt with in 1996 was to set up this credible fear interview that's, as I understand it, held within around 24 hours to 48 hours of the inspector's apprehension of the individual at a point of entry. And what I'm concerned most about is you've eliminated the exception, and we could adjust that with two amendments to strike existing provisions, if I could just turn your attention to page 203 of the bill, line 17.

If you remove "and the officer determined that the alien has been physically present in the United States for less than 1 year," if you eliminate that, then at least that person gets the credible fear interview. If he hasn't made a case that he has a credible fear of persecution, he then goes into expedited removal and he is removed, and we are talking about a day or two.

If you made the same change in 204, that same change repeats itself on page 204, lines 12 through 14. So at the very least, you would maintain the exceptions crafted in the original expedited removal statute with respect to asylees, so there is some screen that says that in a few of these cases there may be a true asylee who under our laws we're not supposed to be turning away. And we at least go through that credible interview process, not the long, exhaustive process where the person is released and never shows up for the hearing that's 8 months or a year later, or whenever the hearing is, and disappears into society but is held, and within 24 to 48 hours gets that interview where he can try to make his case that he has a credible fear of persecution if returned to the foreign country.

In other words, a little—just a little bit of balance here, a little safety valve. So I would ask, if the chairman were amenable, I would withdraw my amendment to strike this provision, and just get rid of those three lines, allowing that part of the process to continue.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman will yield, the Chair believes that the provisions in the base bill are good.

Mr. BERMAN. In that case, the Chair does not—in that case, the gentleman doesn't agree to change his amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the gentleman yield back, the gentleman from New York?

Mr. NADLER. I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Berman. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The noes have it, and the amendment is not agreed to.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from California, Ms. Lofgren, seek recognition?

Ms. LOFGREN. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Ms. Lofgren: Insert the following at the end of Section 3090: "Section 3090. Biometric Entry-Exit Screening System"——

Ms. LOFGREN. I would ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be waived.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Lofgren follows:]

(1) Any information placed in the entry/exit database shall be entered by authorized officers in compliance with established procedures, as set forth in Section 407 of this Act, that guarantee the identification of the person making the database entry.

(2) The Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney General, after consultation with directors of the relevant intelligence agencies, shall standardize the information and data collected from foreign nationals as well as the procedures utilized to collect such data to ensure that the information is consistent and of value to officials accessing that data across multiple agencies.

(e) Accessibility-The Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, and the head of any other department or agency that possesses authority to enter data related to the immigration status of foreign nationals, including lawful permanent resident aliens, or where such information could serve to impede lawful admission of U.S. citizens to the U.S., shall each establish guidelines related to data entry procedures. Such guidelines shall:

(1) strictly limit the agency personnel authorized to enter data into the system;

(2) identify classes of information to be designated as temporary or permanent entries, with corresponding expiration dates for temporary entries; and

(3) identify classes of prejudicial information requiring additional authority of supervisory personnel prior to entry;

(f) System Adaptability-

(1) Each agency authorized to enter data related to the immigration status of any persons identified in subsection (b) above shall develop and implement system protocols to:

(A) correct erroneous data entries in a timely and effective manner;

(B) clarify information known to cause false hits or misidentification errors;

and

(C) update all relevant information that is dispositive to the adjudicatory or admission process.

(2) The President or agency director so designated by the President shall establish a clearinghouse bureau as part of the Department of Homeland Security to centralize and streamline the process through which members of the public can seek corrections to erroneous or inaccurate information related to immigration status, or which otherwise impedes lawful admission to the U.S. contained in agency databases. Such process shall include specific time schedules for reviewing data correction requests, rendering decisions on such requests, and implementing appropriate corrective action in a timely manner.

(g) Training-Agency personnel authorized to enter data pursuant to subsection (b)(1) shall undergo extensive training in immigration law and procedure.

(h) Implementation Audit. The Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security shall issue a report to Congress within six months of enactment of this Act that details activities undertaken to date to develop an entry-exit system, areas in which the system currently does not achieve the mandates set forth by this section, and the funding, infrastructure, technology and other factors needed to complete the system, as well as a detailed time frame in which the completion of the system will be achieved.

(i) Reports.

(1) The Secretaries of the Departments of State and Homeland Security jointly shall report bi-annually to Congress on: Current infrastructure and staffing at each port of entry and each consular post, numbers of immigrant and nonimmigrant visas issued, specify the numbers of individuals subject to expedited removal at the ports of entry as well as within 100 miles of the U.S. border, the plan for enhanced database review at entry, the number of suspected terrorists and criminals intercepted utilizing the entry/exit system and the monies spent in the preceding fiscal year to achieve the mandates of this section, areas in which they failed to achieve these mandates, and the steps they are taking to address these deficiencies. For ports of entry, similar information shall be provided including the number of I-94s issued, immigrant visa admissions made, and nonimmigrant admissions.

(2) No later than 120 days after enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Secretary of State, after consultation with the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology and the Commission on Interoperable Data Sharing, shall issue a report addressing the following areas:

(J) Authorization of Appropriations

(1) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, in the 9/11 Commission Report, the following recommendation was made: "The Department of Homeland Security, properly supported by the Congress, should complete as quickly as possible a biometric entry-exit screening system, including a single system for speeding qualified travelers. It should be integrated with the system that provides benefits to foreigners seeking to say in the United States. Linking biometric passports to good data systems and decisionmaking is a fundamental goal."

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I certainly will.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I believe the gentlewoman has a very important and very constructive amendment, and it dovetails exactly with the biometric provisions that were contained in the Enhanced Visa and Border Security Act of 2002. The best way to prevent document fraud is through biometric identifiers, and the best way to make sure that those biometric identifiers are integrated with databases and watch lists is to have a statutory requirement of coordination, which the gentlewoman's amendment provides.

This is a very good amendment, and I am happy to agree to it.

Ms. LOFGREN. With that, then I would thank the chairman and say that I think this fully implements the recommendation of the Commission, and I appreciate the chairman's support and yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California, Ms. Lofgren. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Are there further amendments? The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. WATT. The last letters are XML.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Mr. Watt: Section 5103(b), strike paragraph (3), Section 5103—

Mr. WATT. I ask unanimous consent the amendment be considered as read, unless somebody objects.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Watt follows:]

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10
OFFERED BY MR. WATT

Section 5103(b), strike paragraph (3).

Section 5103(b)(4), strike “or” at the end of subparagraph (A), strike the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and insert “; or”, and add at the end the following new subparagraph:

1 (C) engages in intentional misconduct arising out of, relating to, or resulting from an act
 2 of terrorism.

Mr. WATT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This Section 5103 of the bill contains provisions that would be—that would allow States and localities to enter into litigation management agreements to handle all claims arising out of, relating to, or resulting from an act of terrorism. The problem with the provision is that it does not include an exemption for intentional misconduct, and the purpose of this amendment would be to correct what I believe and hope is an oversight by inserting a subsection (C) on page 531 of the bill that would cover intentional misconduct. Surely we are not trying to protect against intentional misconduct, and I would hope that that was not our intention. Hopefully it was just an oversight.

So with that, I would ask my colleagues to support the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

First, the provisions of this amendment would strike a direct response to the 9/11 Commission recommendation that states, “Congress should pass legislation to remedy the longstanding liability impediments to the provision of public safety, mutual aid where applicable throughout the Nation.”

Allowing punitive damages to be paid from State treasuries in cases in which first responders are sued by personal injury attorneys would set an offensive precedent of punishing State taxpayers for injuries caused by terrorists. To require State taxpayers to pay punitive damages for injuries caused by terrorists would be an obscene exercise in which American taxpayers are punished for the evil acts of foreign enemies.

The Federal Tort Claims Act has long banned punitive damages against—

Mr. WATT. Would the chairman yield briefly?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER.—the United States. I yield.

Mr. WATT. I actually intended to strike that provision. Could I ask unanimous consent to take out the first part?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is modified.

Mr. WATT. And leave the intentional part, which I hope the chairman won't object to.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is modified to delete that part that strikes paragraph (3) of Section 5103(b). But I still oppose the remaining part of the amendment because the intentional torts exception that the amendment would insert would give the keys to the State treasury on intentional torts to the personal injury bar, and I think that this would insert a loophole in these essential provisions large enough to drive a fire truck through.

Here is the bottom line. The exception provision in the base bill is the same exception provision that was included both in the Airline Safety and Systems Stabilization Act, which passed the House by a vote of 356-54 and the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act, which passed the House 373-0. Anyone who votes for this amendment is voting to deviate from an overwhelming bipartisan policy in these two other areas.

Let's get something straight. Our Nation's responders aren't the enemy. Vicious terrorists bent on killing as many innocent Americans as possible are the enemy. So I would hope that the amendment would be defeated. I don't think we want to deviate from the precedent in the two previous bills that have been passed, and I would strongly urge a no vote on the Watt amendment. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, the problem with not accepting—I didn't like the idea that you struck the first part of the amendment, but if the patron of the amendment wanted it that way, that's fine. But the problem with this situation is it covers more than the terrorist acts. You can have—this covers all claims, so if you have a terrorist attack, any health care provision or anything that happens after that would be as a result, and you could have some intentional misconduct that just happened to be—had just happened to occur on September 11. You could have some of the most outrageous conduct. You could have some first—some hospital saying, well, we'll take white people first, black people get behind. They have adverse consequences. No punitive damages. You could have people just intentionally misconduct—it's intentional misconduct. Any claim. And I don't think we ought to—I mean, we're not talking about the terrorists. We're talking about health care provisions, intentional torts, no—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The problem is that this section of the bill relates to State neutral aid agreements. Now, if something happens again in New York City, God forbid, and firefighters from New Jersey and Connecticut run across the bridge to help the New York Fire Department deal with the emergency, they're subject to New York law on their liability because any tortious act would occur in New York.

Now, the thing is that unless you can have these agreements where the two States agree to what type of litigation management provisions are, one of the reactions when there is an emergency may be we cannot send our firefighters into New York State because New York law applies, and if they get sued for an action, whether it's intentional or otherwise, then the New Jersey State Treasury or the Connecticut State of Treasury or the City of Newark Treasury, and on and on, would end up being on the hook. You know, it ends up being in derogation of a mutual aid agreement which may very well be vital to make sure that there are proper personnel that would go across State lines or jurisdictional lines to be able to deal with an emergency.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, we have never given immunity to intentional misconduct, reckless disregard—criminal conduct I guess would be immune unless this amendment passes. I yield.

Mr. WATT. I appreciate the gentleman yielding. It's not the agreements that we're objecting to. It is the waiving of immunity—providing immunity for intentional misconduct. And Mr. Scott is absolutely right. But let me postulate another example to you. Somebody—we get attacked, terrorist-attacked by what appears to be Muslims. Somebody is in an ambulance being taken to the hospital, one of us, the good people, who happens to be wearing a turban. And somebody says, you know, "I'm taking this out on every Muslim that I see tonight." That's exactly what we've been trying to discourage from happening.

I don't have any problem with taking it out on the terrorists themselves, but somebody engaging in internal misconduct such as that would be covered by this provision. That is obscene and that's can be what the chairman is intending to have happen. We've never protected people against intentional misconduct. This is—somebody takes the—says, hey, this person has suffered too much, I'm just going to shoot him in the head, you know, I don't want him to suffer anymore. You know, that's—we can't condone that kind of conduct. That's intentional wrongdoing, and this bill would sanction that.

So I just can't even imagine—I mean, I can understand why you want to do tort law. You want to do tort law on everything. That's why I took out the first provision, which Mr. Scott objected to. But I can't imagine that you're sitting here telling this Committee that you intend to protect people who have engaged in intentional criminal misconduct that—I can't believe that's what you intend.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The noes appear to have it. The——

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I—you must have a hearing impairment. [Laughter.]

Mr. WATT. I didn't hear anybody say no.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The Chair will——

Mr. WATT. I request a recorded vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Pursuant to the Chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)(1), further proceedings will be postponed.

Are there further amendments?

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. SCHIFF. 154.

The CLERK. Mr. Chairman, I have two 154s.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman from California specify which 154 he wants?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes. It would be the briefer of the two 154s.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Mr. Schiff: Page 138, after line 7, insert the following: "Section 2054, Removal of potential nuclear weapons—weapons materials from vulnerable sites worldwide"——

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I request that the amendment be deemed as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Schiff follows:]

SCHIFF.154

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10OFFERED BY MR. SCHIFF

Page 138, after line 7, insert the following:

SEC. 2054. REMOVAL OF POTENTIAL NUCLEAR WEAPONS MATERIALS FROM VULNERABLE SITES WORLDWIDE.

(a) Sense of Congress- It is the sense of Congress that removing potential nuclear weapons materials from vulnerable sites around the world would reduce the possibility that such materials could fall into the hands of al Qaeda or other groups and states hostile to the United States, and should be a top priority for achieving the national security of the United States. Several actions may be taken to reduce the risk that nuclear weapons materials may end up in terrorist hands, including--

- (1) transporting such materials from such sites to secure facilities;
- (2) providing interim security upgrades for such materials pending their removal from their current sites;
- (3) managing such materials after their arrival at secure facilities;
- (4) purchasing such materials;
- (5) converting such sites to the use of low-enriched uranium fuels;
- (6) assisting in the closure and decommissioning of such sites; and
- (7) providing incentives to facilitate the removal of such materials from vulnerable facilities;
- (8) arranging for the shipment of potential nuclear weapons materials to the United States, or to other countries willing to accept such materials and able to provide high levels of security for such materials, and dispose of such materials, in order to ensure that United States national security objectives are accomplished as quickly and effectively as possible; and
- (9) providing funds to upgrade security and accounting at sites where potential nuclear weapons materials will remain for an extended period in order to ensure that such materials are secure against plausible potential threats, and will remain so in the future.

(b) Report-

(1) Not later than 30 days after the submittal to Congress of the budget of the President for fiscal year 2006 pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, the administration shall submit to Congress a report that includes the following:

- (A) A list of the sites determined to be of the highest priorities for removal of potential nuclear weapons materials, based on the quantity and attractiveness of such materials at such sites and the risk of theft or diversion of such materials for weapons purposes.

(B) An inventory of all sites worldwide where highly-enriched uranium or separated plutonium is located, including, to the extent practicable, a prioritized assessment of the terrorism and proliferation risk posed by such materials at each such site, based on the quantity of such materials, the attractiveness of such materials for use in nuclear weapons, the current level of security and accounting for such materials, and the level of threat (including the effects of terrorist or criminal activity and the pay and morale of personnel and guards) in the country or region where such sites are located.

(C) A strategic plan, including measurable milestones and metrics.

(D) An estimate of the funds required to secure these materials.

(E) The recommendations of the Administration on whether any further legislative actions or international agreements are necessary to facilitate the accomplishment of the objective.

(2) The report shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(c) Potential Nuclear Weapons Material Defined- In this section, the term 'potential nuclear weapons material' means plutonium, highly-enriched uranium, or other material capable of sustaining an explosive nuclear chain reaction, including irradiated materials if the radiation field from such materials is not sufficient to prevent the theft and use of such materials for an explosive nuclear chain reaction.

Mr. SCHIFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Probably the most chilling part of the 9/11 Commission Report dealt with the potential that terrorists would get a hold of nuclear weapons. In the report, the Commissioners wrote, "The greatest danger of another catastrophic attack in the United States will material if the world's most dangerous terrorists acquire the world's most dangerous weapons. As we note in Chapter 2, al Qaeda has tried to acquire or make nuclear weapons for at least 10 years."

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHIFF. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I am happy to accept this amendment. I think it hits on a very valuable and vital point. I would make the observation that in the minds of the ever expanding jurisdiction of the Energy and Commerce Committee, they may have an objection to this. But if they want to object, they can object, and I think we should put this in the bill.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Chairman, I very much appreciate that, and the Energy and Commerce Committee declined to take up a hearing on the bill, and I appreciate the chairman's willingness to allow me to offer it. And with that, I will yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Schiff. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments? The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you. I have what I believe is my last amendment of the day at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the last amendment.

Mr. NADLER. At least my last amendment. I hope it's last amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Nadler—

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment—

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object.

Mr. NADLER.—be considered as read.

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object. I just want to see it.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman reserves the right to object, and this relates to authority to enter into contracts and issue Federal loan guarantees. These are high-risk nonprofits. The Chair is prepared to accept this amendment if we are able to get to that point.

Mr. NADLER. Well, in light of that, and since we have adopted this amendment on the 3266 earlier, I am—I applaud the Chair's comment, and I have no further comments.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the gentleman from North Carolina withdraw his reservation?

Mr. WATT. I withdraw my reservation, but I wanted to be—Mr. Scott wants to be recognized.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. And the gentleman from Virginia is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment follows:]

17 international terrorist attack based on criteria under sec-
18 tion 1903.

19 “(b) SECURITY ENHANCEMENTS AND TECHNICAL 20 ASSISTANCE; FOLLOWED BY LOAN GUARANTEES.—The 21 Secretary shall execute security enhancement and tech-
22 nical assistance contracts for the highest priority appli-
23 cants until available funds are expended, after which loan
24 guarantees shall be made available for additional appli-

1 amount of loan guarantees. The Secretary may provide
2 with respect to a single application a combination of such
3 contracts and loan guarantees.

4 “(c) JOINT APPLICATIONS.—Special preference shall
5 be given to joint applications submitted on behalf of mul-
6 tiple nonprofit organizations located in contiguous set-
7 tings.

8 “(d) MAXIMIZING AVAILABLE FUNDS.—Subject to 9 subsection (b), the Secretary shall execute security en-

1 to the Secretary for the Secretary's review. If the Sec-
2 retary does not include the submitted contractor on the
3 list of certified contractors within 60 days after the sub-
4 mission and does not place an alternative contractor on 5 the list within the same time period (who would be avail-
6 able to begin the specified work within that 60-day pe-
7 riod), the Secretary shall immediately place the submitted
8 contractor on the list of certified contractors and such con-
9 tractor shall remain on such list until—

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, parliamentary inquiry.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. NADLER. If there's going to be discussion on this bill, by not speaking at this point have I surrendered my ability to speak—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. No, the gentleman has not been recognized in support of his amendment.

Mr. NADLER. Thank you.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. SCOTT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'd just point out that as I read the amendment, it has constitutional problems because it appears to have direct funding to religious organizations.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler?

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, as the bill is—as the amendment, I should say, is written, it is designed to avoid that. There is no direct funding to pervasively sectarian institutions. The money is given to law enforcement for the purpose of securing the sites, and I urge the Committee to adopt the amendment, as it has done previously.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the gentleman yield back?

Mr. NADLER. I yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, Mr. Nadler. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it; the amendment is agreed to.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the chairman, and I have two amendments. I will offer the first one at this time, which is listed as Jackson Lee Amendment, and it says "Strike Section 2142." That's the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee: Strike Section 2142(a).

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

Amendment to HR 10
Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee

Strike Section 2142(a).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the chairman.

I don't know where to start, Mr. Chairman, on this amendment because I'm sure that this has overwhelming support. But it also points to the issues that many of us have been raising about the straying away from the underpinnings of the 9/11 Commission Report and really the intent of the 9/11 Commission and the legislation offered by Lieberman and McCain and Shays and Maloney.

This is Subtitle F, Criminal History Background Checks, really unrelated per se to the idea of securing America. None of us are here to open the doors to criminals fleeing from justice or to have those who would do harm in jobs where they would do harm by their criminal history. I think many of us are interested in the rehabilitation of those who have done a crime and paid the time. And so we look to having an opportunity after people have done their time to really rehabilitate them.

This goes specifically to the idea of allowing employers to seek the criminal history background checks of individuals who they seek to employ. In particular, the language says that the Attorney General shall establish and maintain a system for providing to an employer criminal history information that is requested by an employer as part of an employee criminal history investigation that has been authorized by the State where the employee works or where the employer has their principal place of business.

Mr. Chairman, and to the colleagues on this, this is not a terrorist provision. This is a matter that can really have an opportunity for us to be heard as to whether or not this is invasive and that this is overreach.

I might also say that this smacks of—even though it is framed in the criminal context, I began to draw upon the kind of background checks and intimidation through the McCarthyism era, through the era of the black student movement, through the civil rights era when many of our civil rights leaders were intimidated by FBI checks and wiretapping.

The question is: Is this a necessary component to secure America? I frankly believe it is not. My amendment would simply strike the language dealing with the pilot program and ask the GAO to study whether or not this is the appropriate vehicle by which we should proceed.

Clearly, there are suggestions by this kind of pilot program, or inferences of civil liberties violations, civil rights violations, and the abuse by inviting the Attorney General into routine criminal history background checks. It does not say the person is a terrorist. It doesn't say the person is suspicious of terrorist activities. It's just simply someone coming to seek employment and, lo and behold, the heavy hand of the Federal Government begins to investigate and to provide information which might be provided on the State level in any manner.

So I would simply ask my colleagues to be reminded that we have an obligation under the Constitution to be fair here. We have an obligation not to draw back on times when activists were intimidated, when people who were against wars were intimidated, when people who were charged with being communist who simply had a different view from this Government were being charged with communism and denied work, blackballed all over America. This is what this smacks of, and I would simply ask for a fairness vote. And I've heard my Republican friends talk about the overreach of the PATRIOT Act, the overreach of trying to find out what library books we're trying to read. Well, I believe that this is an overreach, and I would simply ask that in its overreach that my colleagues allow this provision of the pilot program to be stricken. It leaves the aspect of the report and it, I believe, answers the question of whether or not we're securing America.

Let me conclude by saying that the 9/11 Commission did not recommend any aspect of this particular provision. The 9/11 Commission was focused on what I believe we should be focused on: securing America, not overreaching and violating, I think, the rights of many citizens. There are no safeguards to protect the information that employers collect, and once biometric information is given to the Justice Department, what becomes of it? And this provision also has no safeguard for accuracy, and we have just seen with the Brandon Mayfield fiasco how easy it is to misidentify someone even though our criminal—even through our criminal databases. We've had to bring in DNA to eliminate those who were innocent, who claimed innocence—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman's time has expired.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman?

Ms. JACKSON LEE.—but yet they were not—they were to given that right. So I would ask my colleagues to support this on behalf of fairness.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Chabot.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I yield back.

Mr. CHABOT. Move to strike the last word, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHABOT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I won't take the whole 5 minutes, but I would urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment because it strikes out this whole section, the section that recognizes the unique role that the security guard industry plays in critical infrastructure protection and the urgency of their need—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would the gentleman yield? This does not take away the—

Mr. CHABOT. I didn't yield. If I have sufficient time, I'll yield, but let me finish my statement, please. And the urgency of the need for those that are hiring these folks to know who it is that they're hiring. The vast majority of the Nation's critical infrastructure, including power plants and telecommunications facilities, are guarded by private security companies. Knowing whether they have a disqualifying background is critical to homeland security objectives.

This section as introduced, and then amended by Mrs. Blackburn, was the result of a bipartisan cooperation and input from the private industry. It is a pilot program to examine how a system for facilitating criminal history record checks of the integrated—Automated Fingerprint Identification System could be implemented.

The purpose of this is to proactively eliminate the need for groups or industries to have to seek legislation unique to their industry. In the case of security guards, it's taken over almost 7 years—or, excuse me, 11 years now. A hearing on this issue was held in March of this year, and the consistent theme from the witnesses was that the current piecemeal system is inefficient. The access to these records with sufficient safeguards should be broader. Companies, especially those in critical infrastructures, should know who they are hiring.

So I would urge my colleagues to—and I will yield to the gentlelady.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. And I thank the gentleman very much. I appreciate what the gentleman has said, and I want to make it very clear. I agree with you. And we did not take out Mrs. Blackburn's provisions dealing with security guards. That remains. This is a section that is a pilot program, and Mrs. Blackburn's program of background checks for security guards remains. We are just very concerned in the language that we struck not to open the doors randomly, but the Blackburn security guard program is safe and secure. And I'd ask my colleague to consider the wiseness of this amendment and language to strike this random check on individuals that cannot be secured and cannot be checked.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. WATT. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHABOT. I yield back the balance—oh, excuse me. I'll yield.

Mr. WATT. I'm just trying to find the provision that you are talking about that relates to security guards. This section that the amendment seems to be striking doesn't seem to me to make any reference to security guards. It's all about any employer, and it seems to be very, very broad and vague. So, new section—where is that? I'm just trying to figure out where.

Mr. CHABOT. This time I'll yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, if the gentleman from Ohio will yield, the language that the gentleman from North Carolina is referring to I believe was added by the Blackburn amendment that was agreed to earlier today.

Mr. WATT. But this is—she's strike 2142(a). Wasn't the Blackburn amendment to 2142(c)?

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, could I suggest, if the gentleman and the gentlelady would agree, that we withhold this until we have a chance to get the staffs together and determine exactly what the changes have been made and—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the way to do it is to withdraw the amendment without prejudice, and without objection, the amendment is withdrawn without prejudice to deal with this matter.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, I'd be happy to do it if we do it within the time frame to be able to submit it again before we close. Thank you.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The amendment is withdrawn without prejudice.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the distinguished chairman. Let me just quickly—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Does the gentlewoman have an amendment?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman. I'm moving on because of the time. Yes, I do, and the amendment is 277.XML.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10, offered by Ms. Jackson Lee of Texas: Page 217, after line 5—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, so ordered.

And the gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

One of the tasks that we have in this Committee, again, is to deal directly with the concept of terrorists and the penetration of such terrorists into the homeland. This amendment deals with the crisis that has appeared at our borders, a lot at the Southern border, but also at the Northern border, and that is alien smuggling. It provides for provisions that create penalties for those who would engage in alien smuggling and human trafficking, particularly in light of some of the new information that we've discovered about individuals penetrating our borders to the South who are coming through South America and may have some affiliations with terrorist organizations.

This is to ensure that that does not happen by an outreach program. It is also a program that deals with incentives and rewards so that it is clear that we have the kind of support system for law enforcement to catch these smugglers.

And I think the other important aspect is that this saves lives. We in Texas know very well what it is to lose 19 and 20 people in a heated large 18-wheeler who were trying to come to this country, in this instance for economic opportunity. But the very vulnerabilities of utilizing massive interstate trucks to smuggle individuals into the country leaves us vulnerable to the idea of terrorists being smuggled over into the United States by land. And this deals specifically with that question by providing a number of incentives. I would ask my colleagues to support this amendment on the grounds that it saves lives and as well that it protects—or provides enhanced protection for those who would try to smuggle in individuals who would come here who are affiliated with terrorist activities and organizations.

With that, I yield back my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana seek recognition?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I have a second degree amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the second degree amendment.

The CLERK. Hostettler amendment to the Jackson Lee Amendment to H.R. 10: Strike line 3, page 1—

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

Mr. WATT. Reserving the right to object.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. On the gentleman's reservation. This is not a long amendment, by the way.

Mr. WATT. Is it a substitute?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. It is not a substitute.

Mr. WATT. I'll withdraw.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read.

The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Hostettler to Ms. Jackson Lee amendment follows:]

Hostettler Amendment to Jackson Lee Amendment

Strike line 3, Page 1, after the period after the number 3041 through line 5, page 5 after the period after the number 3043.

And further striking line 21, page 5 through line 18, page 9.

And further striking line 4, page 10 after the word "section" through the end of the amendment and inserting a period.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I agree with my colleague from Texas that commercial smuggling is among the most heinous of offenses. Smugglers exploit human hope and deal in human misery. The Immigration Subcommittee has been examining efforts to combat human smuggling along our Southwest border throughout this Congress. In the past 2 years, the Subcommittee has held two separate hearings on those efforts, and staff has met several times with officials from DHS and the Justice and State Departments to craft a response to those crimes. Our work on this subject is ongoing.

While I applaud my colleague's efforts to provide tools to address this problem, I'm concerned that this amendment may do in balance more harm than good. This amendment would provide immigration benefits and rewards up to $100,000 to those who provide information about criminal alien smuggling enterprises. Most of the people who would have such information would fall into one or two categories: other alien smugglers or smuggled aliens. Providing benefits to either of those groups for information about smuggling may raise more issues than they resolve.

Immigration benefits may assist an alien smuggler in carrying out the smuggler's own criminal enterprise. Money may be plowed back into the smuggler's business. Additionally, making money and immigration benefits available to smuggled aliens may actually encourage smuggling by creating a win-win situation for smuggled aliens. If they enter the country without detection, they are home free. If they are caught, they can apply for the benefits provided herein.

Further, I'm not convinced that the availability of such benefits will not encourage aliens to demand those benefits in support for this testimony. Nor am I convinced that in providing such benefits the government would not diminish the value of the testimony as defense counsel argues that the alien witness has been paid for the witness' testimony. And that was pointed out in one of our hearings.

Finally, I'm not sure that these additional authorities are needed. Aliens with information can be given advance parole, a legal status that will ensure that the alien is available to testify. Other benefits are available depending on the specifics of the alien's case.

In summary, while law enforcement agents are always enthusiastic to receive additional tools, we need to make sure that the tools we provide are the right ones. One of those right tools, Mr. Chairman, is included in my colleague's amendment, and it is that tool that is the subject of my second degree amendment. The second degree amendment retains the portions of Ms. Jackson Lee's amendment that would enhance penalties for alien smuggling and create an outreach program to inform those who would seek material gain from alien smuggling that they would be serving a much longer time in Federal prison as a result of the efforts of my colleague from Texas.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for my colleagues to support the second degree amendment and yield back the balance of—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I yield to the gentlelady from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank the gentleman very much for yielding.

It is clear that we have at least common ground to the extent that we know that alien smuggling kills and it threatens the safety of the United States. I happen to believe very strongly that the idea of incentives as documented by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, meaning the incentives of providing people with legal status who give information to inhibit this heinous act, as well as the reward system that has been documented by a number of Federal law enforcement agencies as having worked, makes this a stronger amendment. I am willing at this time to concede a portion of the amendment that I have and to accept the gentleman's second amendment on the basis that I will continue to offer the CASE Act, which is comprehensive and really speaks to the sincerity and the reality of making this work.

In its limited fashion, it will serve minimally, I believe, but it will not draw the informants and others who can help us actually solve this heinous act of alien smuggling.

In Texas, in Arizona, in other places along the border, we live with this on a daily basis. We need more than what the gentleman has offered, but I believe in the spirit of cooperation and the need to do something and give relief to the people who are suffering with the alien smuggling potential in that region, it is important to move forward, and I accept the gentleman's amendment.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Jackson Lee follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE SHEILA JACKSON LEE, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS, AND RANKING MEMBER, SUBCOMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION, BORDER SECURITY, AND CLAIMS

This amendment would add the provisions of my Commercial Alien Smuggling Elimination Act of 2003 (the CASE Act), H.R. 2630, to Title III of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act.

Last year, 340 people died trying to cross the border. This must stop. The most effective way to stop large scale illegal immigration would be to establish a sensible immigration program. Several bills have been introduced that would make the necessary changes in our immigration laws, such as my Comprehensive Immigration Fairness Reform Act of 2004, H.R. 3918, but we cannot wait for major immigration reform to address this problem. We must act now to reduce the deaths. The CASE Act would do this by establishing a three-point program which was designed to facilitate the investigation and prosecution, or disruption, of commercial alien smuggling operations.

The first point would be to provide incentives to encourage informants to step forward and assist the federal authorities who investigate alien smuggling operations. The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) presently provides a nonimmigrant classification for aliens who assist the United States government with the investigation and prosecution of a criminal organization or a terrorist organization. My bill would establish a new, third category for aliens who assist the United States government with the investigation, disruption, or prosecution of commercial alien smuggling operations.

S visas are not controversial. Senator Edward Kennedy introduced legislation (S. 1424) to establish permanent authority for the S visa program on September 13, 2001, two days after the 9/11 terrorist attacks. The Senate passed S. 1424 by unanimous consent that same day. The House passed S. 1424 by unanimous consent on September 15, 2001. On October 1, 2001, President Bush signed the bill into law as P.L. 107-45.

The S visa is a useful tool when it is needed, but it is not needed frequently. In FY 2002, only 42 S visas were issued to informants and 37 to their family members. In FY 2003, only 30 S visas were issued to informants and 28 to their family members. In FY 2004, through May 13, 2004, only 30 S visas have been issued to informants and 22 to their family members. This is not an immigration program. It is an accommodation to make it possible for the government to get information from informants.

The new S visa classification in my bill would be offered to potential informants by the State Department and the Justice Department, in addition to the Homeland Security Department. Alien smuggling operates cross international lines. No single federal agency can deal with it.

The bill also would establish a rewards program to assist in the elimination or disruption of commercial alien smuggling operations in which aliens are transported in groups of 10 or more, and where either the aliens are transported in a manner that endangers their lives or the smuggled aliens present a life-threatening health risk to people in the United States.

This is not a controversial provision either. The rewards program in my bill is virtually the same as the one the State Department presently uses to obtain informants in cases involving terrorists. The State Department rewards program has been very successful. Perhaps the most famous example is the case in which a $30 million reward was given to individuals who had provided critical information which led to the location of Uday and Qusay Hussein. Rewards under the CASE Act provisions, however, would be much lower than $30 million. The Secretary of Homeland Security would have to personally approve any award exceeding $50,000.

I am concerned about the safety of the people who become informants, so my bill also would establish a protection program that would be available to investigators and prosecutors using informants in connection with investigating, disrupting, or prosecuting commercial alien smuggling operations.

The second point would be a penalty enhancement provision. In the case of a person who has been convicted of smuggling aliens into the United States, the sentencing judge would be able to increase the sentence by up to 10 years. This only would apply to cases in which the offense was part of ongoing commercial smuggling operations, the operations involved the transportation of aliens in groups of 10 or more, and either the aliens were transported in a manner that endangered their lives or the smuggled aliens presented a life-threatening health risk to people in the United States.

The third point would require the Secretary of Homeland Security to develop and implement a program to educate the public here and abroad about the penalties for smuggling aliens. The program also would distribute information about the financial rewards and the immigration benefits that would be available for assisting in the investigation, disruption, or prosecution of commercial alien smuggling operations.

I urge you to vote for this amendment to add the provisions of the CASE Act to Title III of the 9/11 Recommendations Implementation Act. Thank you.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I thank the gentlelady for her cooperation and acceptance and once again commend her for the important work that she has done on this issue of alien smuggling and yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on agreeing to the Hostettler second degree amendment to the Jackson Lee amendment. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the second degree amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

The question now is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee, as amended by the Hostettler amendment. Those in favor will say aye? Opposed, no?

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the amendment as amended is agreed to.

Are there further amendments? The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Scott: Strike Section 2191 pertaining to grand jury—

Mr. SCOTT. Wait a minute. That's not the right one. It's the one to Section 5103(b).

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Scott of Virginia. Section 5103(b), strike paragraph (3). Page—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read and the gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Scott follows:]

Amendment to H.R. 10
Offered by Mr. Scott of Virginia

Section 5103(b), strike paragraph (3).

Page 533, line 24, strike "emergency response," and all that follows through the period at the end and insert "emergency response, and any other State or local entity charged with responding to an emergency."

Mr. SCOTT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, this attempts to strike the part that the gentleman from North Carolina withdrew for his amendment. It would strike three special rules, punitive damages and collateral sources. Punitive damages should be available to people who are not involved in—even if they weren't involved in the original terrorism, for the same normal rules of punitive damages, intentional, reckless disregard, I mean people ought to have the same rights as they've always had.

The collateral source, deleting that provision would be a benefit to small businesses. Some small businesses or self-insured businesses would find themselves in the incredible situation that they've got to pay for the damages first as a collateral source, and then someone who intentionally injured somebody gets the credit for that payment. It is just incredible that a small business that has agreed to pay the health benefits of somebody has got to pay for that before the insurance or anything else kicks in, and if somebody's put in a coma, they'll be paying for the rest of their life potentially, when there's insurance sitting up there, malpractice insurance or otherwise, and that just seems to me to be a ridiculous situation to put small businesses in.

The other part of it, on page 533, line 24, we've immunized not only the public officials, but also hospitals and everybody else related. One reason to give the immunity for these Government agencies is to allow them to get into these agreements. There's no need to immunize private entities, and it's also, if you're going to immunize the State actors, the private sector people are not supervised by the State entity, so there's no case for the private ambulance and private hospitals to enjoy the immunity of the Government entities that you perhaps need. New Jersey won't help New York unless you give them immunity. Well, there's no need to immunize all the hospitals in the area in order to get that agreement. So there's no purpose to immunize them, so I would hope that we would maintain normal law as it is, and also I hope we'd get back the punitive damages and the collateral source as it traditionally has been.

And I would yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair recognizes himself for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

We plowed this a little bit earlier with the earlier amendment. What I can say is that I don't think that there is any reason to state that in a mutual aid agreement between States or communities that privately contracted ambulance services that have been contracted for pursuant to the municipality or the State should be exempt—or should not be exempt, but that the Government sponsored ambulance services should be exempt.

The other point that I would make on punitive damages is that this provision is enabling legislation. It allows the States to make an agreement that immunizes the parties from punitive damages. It does not mandate an immunization by Federal law. So basically what it does do is that it allows the States to decide whether or not the punitive damages are relevant, and I think that this is something we ought to allow the States to do.

Urge defeat of the amendment and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WATT. I won't take 5 minutes. I just want to make it clear that by striking this provision from my earlier amendment didn't—I didn't want to leave the impression that I don't Mr. Scott's amendment. I do. I was seeking to preserve in my amendment the absolutely most outrageous provision that would give immunity to people who intentionally engaged in torts. This is the second absolutely most outrageous.

So I wanted to separate those two things so that it was clear that I was talking about the intentional misconduct, but I feel equally as strongly about this provision. There's no reason to put it in this bill. Nowhere is any of this stuff asked for by the 9/11 Commission report. And it just seems to me that at this point we're here piling on, putting all of our favorite tort reform, doing away with punitive damages, everything we can think of into a bill on the theory that people will vote for anything that sounds like it's resulted from the 9/11 Commission report.

I just think that is a terrible thing for us to be doing rather than cutting to the heart of what the 9/11 Commission report was about, and I encourage my colleagues to support the Scott amendment, and yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it. The noes—

Mr. WATT. Recorded vote, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Recorded vote is requested. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)(1), further proceedings will be postponed.

Are there further amendments? The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have two, and hopefully they will be brief. The first one I would like to pursue is 149, Weiner No. 149.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr. Weiner. Page 398—

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, request unanimous consent that this be considered as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection and the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Mr. Weiner follows:]

H.L.C.

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 10

OFFERED BY MR. WEINER

Page 398, strike "and" after the semicolon at line 18, and after line 18 insert the following (and redesignated the subsequent paragraph accordingly):

1 “(14) reimbursement for overtime and other
2 fixed costs incurred for homeland security purposes
3 after September 11, 2001; and

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, included in the base bill is a list of things you're allowed to apply for funding for. It doesn't say you get funding for them, but they're things that you can put in your application that goes to this multi-person board. They're all ranked, and the top ones get reimbursement.

What it does fail to do though is address the fact that in many of our districts there are antiterrorism things that are kind of under way now that started before the enactment of this bill that may have been fully funded before the enactment of this bill, in some cases represent the totality of the Homeland Security funds that are going to be needed. What this allows is that those expenditures also be permitted to be submitted.

We heard testimony I think in the full Committee from a EMS— from a hospital emergency room director, who was talking about how Idaho had great demands. They had to have a special antiterrorism tent set up at their hospital. That expenditure is now done. According to this bill, they can't now take that program and ask for it to be reimbursed under this bill, even though it clearly would be eligible in every other case, and there are also some instances where there are projects that are going on that are ongoing. It is unclear under the bill whether they would be permitted as well.

So this amendment allows States and regions to apply for things that have gone on in the antiterrorism, homeland security purposes after September 11 but before the enactment of this bill. I would say to stress to the chairman and to my colleagues this doesn't mean that you get the funding for it, and it doesn't mean the Department of Homeland Security or this panel might say we don't think this is a legitimate purpose, but it does allow you to go in and put the application in.

It's important to New York, but I would argue that it's actually probably going to be far more important for areas that have fixed relatively knowable homeland security needs that they went in and filled. This gives them an opportunity to go do it. For example, if you're a small town that had one regional airport that they had to bolster, they would be now allowed—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEINER. Yes, sir.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I'm happy to accept the amendment. The gentleman's hit the nail on the head. You can always ask and you can always be told no, and this is permissive. So I guess getting back to a famous Supreme Court decision on another issue, there's no harm in asking.

Mr. WEINER. I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the Weiner amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it. The amendment is agreed to.

Further amendments? The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, the second one—I'm sorry, it's 153.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Mr Weiner. Page 397, strike "and." After the semicolon at line 5—

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the amendment is considered as read. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Amendment to HR 10
Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee

Strike Section 2142(a).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Thank you. It will be abbreviated. Just start out by making it very clear that my language does not interfere with the legitimate basis of, or premise that certainly security officers in various businesses should be secure, and certainly should have some background checks that ensure that. This is a totally separate amendment that calls for the study by the GAO of a pilot program rather than implementing in a random manner a pilot program that allows employers from around the Nation, without any legitimate basis, to seek a criminal history background check, when that could be done on a local basis or in some other forum.

Again, I remind my colleagues that we're stepping very close to the atmosphere or the, if you will, the trend to violate the rights of individuals, innocent and others, and I would hope that they would consider this far-reaching, and having nothing to do with securing the homeland, and I'd ask my colleagues to support the simple striking of language that creates a pilot program with no basis, and really adhere to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights that gives us individual rights in the protection of that.

I yield back.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Chabot.

Mr. CHABOT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHABOT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'll be brief as well. I continue to oppose this particular amendment. The pilot program that's referred to is to standardize the current system of Federal background checks. The Federal Government is currently conducting background checks for dozens of different private industries, from mentors to those who work in banks and on and on. There are different standards and different definitions, and different fee structures without any inconsideration to the FBI's resources or to civil liberties concerns.

This pilot addresses that particular problem, and we should not strike the pilot program which is what this amendment does.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHABOT. Be happy to yield.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. I would refer the membership to the description of what the criminal history background checks information consists of, which is on the bottom of page 152 of the bill. It says: Criminal history information and criminal history records includes an identifying description of the individual to whom it pertains. Notations of arrests, detentions, indictment or other formal criminal charges pertaining to such individual, and any disposition to a notation received of this list, including acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision, or release.

Now, what we're talking about here is giving public record information to a perspective employer who needs to do a criminal background check pursuant to State law. So if State law requires a criminal background check, for example, of hiring somebody at a day care of a preschool facility, to make sure that they don't have any child abuse records, the Attorney General would be able to give that information because State law requires the prospective employer to do.

So I don't have much of a privacy concern when you're dealing with public records, and that's what is being listed here.

And I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding.

Mr. CHABOT. I yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, the—I want to inquire, is the language that you just cited still in the bill after the amendment we adopted?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. If the gentleman will yield, yes.

Mr. SCOTT. And it was my impression that we have significantly improved this section already by an amendment. I don't have that amendment before me. But we've already gone over that section once, is that right?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. That is correct.

Mr. SCOTT. Yield back.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Would you yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I'll yield to the gentlelady from Texas.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Let me—I think that we're not answering the question of concern. First of all, there's no guarantee for accuracy in this program. We have no information as to what happens to the thousands upon thousands of fingerprints of individuals taken and how they will be protected. And if the FBI needs more money, let's appropriate more money to do this right. Let's not recreate the FBI database program that already exists. Again, even with the program that they already have, we know that it is not sufficiently accurate.

I just would remind individuals that we do have individual rights. We still have civil liberties. And whenever you broaden something and elevate it to a Federal Governmental stance, pilot program or not, you become an intruder. We want to be safe, but this criminal history has nothing to do with securing America. It has nothing to do with the 9/11 Commission report. What scares me is that it again becomes a whole wide can of worms, racial profiling, stigmatizing people who have already done their time inside, paid their time. So there seems to be no order to this, and I would just ask my colleagues to narrow it to the background checks that Mrs. Blackburn has offered with respect to security personnel. It does not need to be a general program, and if it does need to be fixed, then utilize it through the FBI program that's already not working as well.

What happens to the fingerprints? If I could yield to the gentleman to ask that question, because it wasn't answered, yield to Mr. Chabot. Do you know what happens to the fingerprints?

Mr. CHABOT. I didn't hear the question. I'm sorry.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Do you know what happens to the fingerprints that will be collected and stored? Do the individuals who—

Mr. CHABOT. Will the gentlelady yield?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I will. Do the individuals who sent them forth, will they be able to get them back?

Mr. CHABOT. Does the gentlelady yield?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. CHABOT. There are a number of programs that are already doing this right now. That's the whole purpose of the pilot program, is to coordinate them so it's done in a standard manner. And I think the gentlelady raises some legitimate concerns and that's why it's a pilot program, so that we can ultimately determine the best way to do this as oppose do the haphazard way that it's being done right now.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I yield to the—let me reclaim my time—well, it's your time, Mr. Scott's time. If I can, I ask do you know, under the pilot program, what would happen to those fingerprints of all of these individuals who would be subjected to the criminal history background check?

Mr. CHABOT. If the gentleman will yield, it's not been set up yet, so the details of this ultimately will be determined.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Let me just finish this sentence. There lies my angst and my concern, and that's why I am offering this amendment to strike the section, because we don't have any understanding of what's going to happen, and this is clearly an invasion of privacy and a disrespect of individual rights.

I yield back to the gentleman.

Mr. SCOTT. I yield back my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the Jackson Lee amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it. [Laughter.]

Ms. JACKSON LEE. That's the spirit of bipartisanship, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The noes have it, and the amendment—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I ask for a rollcall vote.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Okay. Pursuant to the chair's prior announcement and Committee Rule 2(h)(1).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman, can I ask how it was recorded?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The chair's left ear is getting deaf, so I didn't note how you were recorded. [Laughter.]

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. This vote will be postponed.

Are there further amendments? The gentlewoman from California, Ms. Sanchez,

Ms. SANCHEZ. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have an amendment at the desk.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CLERK. Amendment to H.R. 10 offered by Ms. Sanchez.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill as—I mean the amendment as read.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Without objection, the gentlewoman is recognized for 5 minutes.

[The amendment of Ms. Sanchez follows:]

SEC. 3057. NO NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION CARD.

Nothing in this Chapter shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the establishment, issuance, or use of a national identification card.

SEC. 3058. TRAFFICKING IN AUTHENTICATION FEATURES FOR USE IN FALSE IDENTIFICATION DOCUMENTS

Section 1028(a)(8) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "false authentication features" and inserting "false or actual authentication features".

Ms. SANCHEZ. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I submitted this amendment, after a long day, because I think it comes dangerously close to creating a national identification card. While the September 11 Commission recommended that standards be set for driver's licenses, this bill goes far beyond that. It pushes unfunded mandates on the States by requiring a federally prescribed overhaul of State procedures for issuing driver's licenses and identification cards.

As written, this bill would require State Departments of Motor Vehicles to verify the validity and completeness of each and every identification document used to prove identity. It also requires States to digitally store personally sensitive data without limiting how it will be used or by even providing guidance for its security.

This bill even goes so far as to make the appearance of IDs uniform, a step that is eerily close to a national ID card.

The States have a right to participate in determining how features for licenses and ID cards should be changed. Despite their expertise, however, they have not had input in the requirements of H.R. 10. My proposal would bring those who have a serious interest in implementation of uniform standards together. It would create a working group that would actually consult those who will have to live with the decisions that it makes. What a novel concept.

That group, including Federal and State experts from the Department of Transportation, the Department of Homeland Security and State Motor Vehicle Departments, would carefully determine how best to undertake these major revisions. Once this group has put together recommendations, they will come back to Congress, and we then will be able to make a more reasoned decision.

I urge my colleagues to vote yes on this amendment. It's important that our State IDs are reliable, but creating a national ID is not the answer. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Texas, Mr. Smith.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I oppose the amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman, the amendment effectively dumbs down the requirements in H.R. 10 for the definitive identification of driver's license applicants, the most important element in the driver's license reforms included in H.R. 10. Language in the amendment clearly intends to strike the balance of the bill by adding general language that negates the ability of the States to actually implement common standards as well as to effectively neuter the standards setting provisions directed to the States. It has language to grandfather in many of the loose practices that led to the granting of driver's licenses to the 9/11 terrorists. In fact, among the 19 who flew into the World Trade Center Towers, they held more than 60 separate driver's licenses issued by States around the country.

Under this amendment, it will be virtually impossible to verify that the holder of a driver's license is the same individual to whom the card was issued, whether data in the holder's records actually belongs to that individual or to someone else. So for the sake of our Nation's security, for the sake of a program that helps protect Americans, I would urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

I'll yield back the balance of my time.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by—

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from New York, Mr. Weiner.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, I would just, in considering this, let us remember that there's another imperative here as well, and that is the imperative to protect people who are not immigrants, who do have legal driver's licenses, who have insurance, who are operating in their daily lives, but are endangered by the fact that too many people operate in this gray area of the law, and with that, I would yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. SANCHEZ. I would like to thank the gentleman for yielding. I think the bulk of this amendment basically says, let's bring in the stakeholders and let's let them have input on what should be the standards, the minimal standards for driver's licenses. Then with that information, it's brought back to Congress, and we're talking about people who have knowledge and who have to deal and live with the consequences of the ultimate decision making. So Congress ultimately will make the standards, but after appropriate and valid input from the people who have to live with those decisions and who work with driver's licenses on a day to day basis. So I don't see the harm in trying to bring in the actual people who have expertise in that area instead of Congress just blatantly adopting random minimum requirements. Let's get the people who use them and deal with them in to get their suggestions and recommendations so that we have valid minimal standards for all of the States in a uniform way.

With that, I'll yield back to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WEINER. I yield back my time.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Watt.

Mr. WATT. Move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WATT. I won't take 5 minutes. I just wanted to point out that we had a hearing in the Commercial and Administrative Law Subcommittee on this whole national identification process. And uniformly—and I wish my chairman, Mr. Cannon, was here to express this—but uniformly the people on the—members on that Subcommittee were extremely concerned about how this new identification system got implemented. And I think the underlying bill is well beyond what any of those people would have thought would have been a desirable place to be, and I think Ms. Sanchez's amendment gets us much, much closer to the appropriate balance. So I would certainly encourage my colleagues to support the amendment.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Hostettler.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, just in brief, I must admit that in the Subcommittee on Immigration, Border Security, and Claims, we had held hearings where we have heard of the problems of the acceptance of documentation that has actually been issued by a foreign agent in the United States, namely, consular identification cards. We on the floor of the House of Representatives considered an amendment that would essentially disallow the acceptance of such documentation provided by a foreign agent—an agent of a foreign government in the United States to an alien. And the amendment was defeated that would disallow the use of that card issued by a foreign government as valid identification for, in this particular case, opening up a bank account.

Now we are suggesting through this bill—and this is what troubles me—that while we can't stop foreign agents or their citizens of foreign countries from opening bank accounts with ID that is not safe and secure, according to testimony by folks such as the FBI, we are going to require that American citizens essentially come under the notion of an identification card that is uniform and requires certain information to be readily available to the United States Government on this.

I am afraid that while, on one hand, we are saying as a body that we are going to allow foreign agents—we are going to allow citizens of foreign countries to use documentation given to them by a foreign agent, we are going to require citizens to come under a uniform identification process.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I will yield to the gentlelady from California

Ms. SANCHEZ. I must admit I'm a little perplexed where consular ID cards fits into the debate on this amendment, because potentially the working group could come up with the recommendation that consular ID cards are not a valid underlying form of ID for receiving a driver's license. What does—

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Reclaiming my time, reclaiming my time. I'm probably not making my point very clearly, but what I am saying is that on one hand we are allowing a document that has been testified time and time again, at least in our Subcommittee, as being not secure, we are allowing that from foreign nationals for valid identification, but we are going to require citizens of our individual States to come under a uniform—

Mr. WEINER. Would the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOSTETTLER. I'm probably not making myself clear to the gentleman from New York either.

Mr. WEINER. No. I just think—because either I'm misunderstanding your objection or I'm misunderstanding the gentlelady's—I don't believe that her amendment requires any form of identification to be the foundation for a driver's license.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. And reclaiming my time—

Mr. WEINER. So you can pluck any one out of the air and critique it, but I don't think that's what she's suggesting.

Mr. HOSTETTLER. No. My concern is with the underlying bill, and I'm trying to make that point. Like I said, I'm not making a point necessarily about her amendment as much as I am making a point about the underlying bill to which her amendment speaks. So I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentleman's recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT. And I yield reluctantly to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WATT. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I appreciate it.

I was trying to do an adequate job of summarizing what Representative Cannon's concerns were about this whole national ID card, and I couldn't do it in his—you know, Chris has been out and he's my chairman. So I wanted to make sure that we got in the record what he would probably say if he were here, so I want to read into the record what he said at the Subcommittee about this whole thing. I'm quoting directly from the transcript.

He says, "And I suspect that this Subcommittee, perhaps the Constitution Subcommittee in addition, is going to have a lot to say about how we at least approach that problem." He's talking about the national ID card problem. "And I think that means a commission where people who are very thoughtful, who have significant background, and who are"—"people who are willing to say we don't necessarily need to federalize this process. And if we do federalize this process, it shouldn't just be the damn feds sucking information out of the local folks. It ought to be the local folks who get something back, and to do that, you ought to have some kind of protection, maybe an anonymizer. It may be a culture that existed at one time in the Federal Government. I am not sure that it is. It is vital to America and it is, I think, the cornerstone of what our grandchildren are going to enjoy or suffer in the future."

I am just making you all aware of what Mr. Cannon would say, my chairman of my Subcommittee would say if he were here.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Mr. WATT. I yield back to Mr. Scott.

Mr. SCOTT. I yield back.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Chairman?

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The gentlewoman from Texas has already spoken. The question—

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Not on this—on her amendment. I haven't spoken on her amendment. No, I have spoken on my amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Didn't the gentlewoman from Texas speak after the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized?

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Not to my knowledge, Mr. Chairman. I was on my previous amendment.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Well, the Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson Lee, for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. I thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, and I want to say that the gentlelady's amendment is very well thought out. If my colleagues would read it clearly, she's asking for a thoughtful working group to really discern what might be the most effective vehicle. The point that I—more effective vehicle for securing any kind of documentation, but particularly she relates to State-issued driver's license.

But the one thing that I wanted to emphasize, whether it's the consulate identification cards—and before I left Texas this week, I visited with the consulate from Mexico in Texas in my congressional district and had an understanding of the curricular cards—the matricular cards, rather, that are utilized. These are not immigration documents that we have. These are documents that people can utilize to secure themselves, to make sure that they're not taken advantage of by being able to deposit funds in banks and to make sure that they are driving at least with a driver's license that suggests they have a minimal understanding of the rules of the road.

So we are mixing apples and oranges, and I think the gentlelady is suggesting that let us find out how we can secure those documents, but she's also suggesting that we should be very careful of opening the door for a national ID card because the national ID card does not necessarily go only to immigrants. It will be going to those here in the United States who are citizens and, therefore, be another undermining of individual rights.

I think we do need to study it more. Yes, we did have a commission some years ago. My predecessor was on that commission. We did not act quickly on those provisions at that time, and I think it is worthy of additional study. So I would hope that we would pass the gentlelady's amendment and be careful to suggest that any of these documents are immigration documents. They are not. They're only identification documents.

I yield back.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. Jackson—or, excuse me, the gentlewoman from California, Ms. Sanchez. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The noes appear to have it. A rollcall is ordered, and we'll vote on this one right away. Those in favor of the Sanchez amendment will as your names are called answer aye, those opposed no, and the clerk will call the roll. Immediately after this rollcall, we will vote on the postponed amendments.

The CLERK. Mr. Chairman, there are 19 ayes and 12 noes.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER. The ayes have it. The motion to report favorably is adopted. Without objection, the bill will be reported favorably to the House in the form of a single amendment in the nature of a substitute incorporating the amendments adopted here today. Without objection, the chairman is authorized to move to go to conference pursuant to House rules. Without objection, the staff is directed to make any technical and conforming changes, and all members will be given 2 days, as provided by the House rules, in which to submit additional, dissenting, supplemental, or minority views.

The Chair would like to thank the members, the staff, the court reporter, and the spectators for their patience in sitting through this marathon markup. Before adjourning the Committee, let me say we will be back at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. There are other bills that are on the agenda, and what the Chair proposes to do is to work for a couple of hours and we'll adjust the agenda so that five noncontroversial bills will be at the top of the agenda, which are H.R. 4306, which provides for electronic verification of an individual's eligibility for employment; S. 1194, the Mentally Ill Offender Treatment and Crime Reduction Act; H.R. 3143, the International Consumer Protection Act; H.R. 4264, the Animal Fighting Prohibition Enforcement Act; and H.R. 4453, the Access to Rural Physicians Improvement Act.

If we get done with these before the debate on the rule on the marriage amendment comes up, we will do the other three bills. If not, the Committee will be adjourned subject to the call of the Chair, and everybody will get plenty of notice if we can get to the other bills before the Congress adjourns.

Thank you all for your patience. The Committee stands adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 7:59 p.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

DISSENTING VIEWS

While we support implementation of the recommendations of the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks Upon the United States (“9/11 Commission”), we dissent from H.R. 10 because it does not accomplish that goal. The 9/11 Commission reached across the partisan divide and arrived at unanimous recommendations to improve the security of the United States. Ten members, five Democrats and five Republicans, held countless hearings and issued a well-written report with well-reasoned recommendations.¹ The Senate, almost evenly split between Republicans and Democrats, has taken up bipartisan legislation to implement those recommendations.

We had hoped the House would follow the example set by the Commission and by the Senate; instead, the Republican leadership has put before us this bill drafted only with Republican input and sponsored only by Republicans. Unfortunately, when Ranking Member John Conyers (D–MI) along with Reps. Jerrold Nadler (D–NY), Bobby Scott (D–VA), Sheila Jackson Lee (D–TX), William D. Delahunt (D–MA), and Adam Schiff (D–CA) reached across the aisle to offer the bipartisan Senate bill at the markup, it was rejected on a party-line basis.²

Because of the political nature by which it was drafted, it is no surprise that H.R. 10 is deeply flawed. First of all, it fails to incorporate numerous recommendations of the 9/11 Commission that would significantly advance our national security. For instance, H.R. 10 does not include Commission recommendations to provide strong budgetary authority for the newly-created National Intelligence Director, protect civil liberties through the creation of an effective civil liberties board, or address the need for congressional reform. As a matter of fact, in its present form, H.R. 10 fails to implement the vast majority of the 9/11 Commission recommendations—of the Commission’s forty-one recommendations only eleven are fully implemented, sixteen are not implemented at all and fourteen are incomplete.³

At the same time, the legislation contains provisions not recommended by the Commission that would do little, if anything, to protect our homeland. Most notably, the legislation makes massive, anti-immigrant changes to our immigration laws (based in most cases on thin and tangential references in a Commission staff report that were not even included in the final report of the 9/11 Commission), and creates major new law enforcement and data programs that significantly impairs our civil rights and civil liberties.

It is these very provisions that the 9/11 Commission has urged the House Republicans to drop from their legislative effort. The 9/11 Chairman stated recently that “We’re very respectfully suggesting that provisions which are controversial and are not part of our recommendations to make the American people safer perhaps ought to be part of another bill at another time.”⁴ Vice Chairman Lee Hamilton specifically criticized the extraneous immigration provisions and stated, “we respectfully submit that consideration of controversial provisions at this late hour can harm our shared purpose of getting a good bill to the President before the 108th Congress adjourns.”⁵

That is why H.R. 10, or provisions within it, are opposed not only by 9/11 Commission leaders⁶ and the White House⁷ but also organizations concerned with:

(4) adherence to international law (Amnesty International, Human Rights First, Human Rights Watch,¹⁴ and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees¹⁵).

I. THE IMMIGRATION AND RELATED CHANGES ARE UNFAIR, UNFOUNDED, AND UNNECESSARY

A. THE LEGISLATION WOULD AUTHORIZE DEPORTATION TO COUNTRIES
WHERE TORTURE IS LIKELY TO OCCUR

A primary concern with this legislation is that it would require our government to outsource torture, make it difficult for aliens to seek refuge from torture, and violate our international obligations. Section 3032, which was not recommended by the 9/11 Commission and is not supported by the President,¹⁶ would retroactively exclude classes of aliens from protection under the United Nations Convention Against Torture (“CAT”) by permitting the Department of Homeland Security to remove to state sponsors of torture any alien it reasonably believes may be a danger to the United States. The Association of the Bar of the City of New York notes that this provision “would * * * mandate the deportation of * * * an individual to a country even if it is certain that the individual would be tortured there.”¹⁷

This provision also would make it more difficult to establish eligibility for CAT relief. Instead of being able to meet the present burden of proof, which is “more likely than not,” the bill would require applicants to prove by “clear and convincing evidence” that they would be tortured if they are deported to the country from which they are seeking relief. Section 3032 also would prohibit federal court challenges to a decision removing CAT protection under the new law except as part of the review of a final order of removal.

The section 3032 exceptions permitting “extraordinary rendition” are in clear violation of our obligations under the Convention. Article 3 of the Convention absolutely forbids a State Party from forcibly returning any person to a country when there are substantial grounds for believing that the person would be in danger of being subjected to torture.¹⁸ In fact, no less an authority than the United ¹⁵ Letter from Kolude Doherty, Regional Representative, U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, to the Honorable John Conyers, Jr., Ranking Member, U.S. House Comm. on the Judiciary (Sept. 29, 2004) [hereinafter UNHCR Letter].

¹⁶ White House Letter:

Yesterday’s Washington Post inaccurately reported that the Bush Administration supports a provision in the House intelligence reform bill that would permit the deportation of certain foreign nationals to countries where they are likely to be tortured.

The President did not propose and does not support this provision. He has made clear that the United States stands against and will not tolerate torture, and that the United States remains committed to complying with its obligations under the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. Consistent with that treaty, the United States does not expel, return, or extradite individuals to other countries where the United States believes it is likely they will be tortured. Id. (emphasis in original).

¹⁷ ABCNY Statement at 1–2.

¹⁸ It is worth noting that, in ratifying the treaty, the U.S. Senate did not express any reservation, understanding, or proviso that might exclude a person from the Article 3 prohibition. Moreover, while the Convention prohibits sending them back to their home countries, the prohibition is country specific. It does not bar sending them to other countries. Also, although the grant of CAT protection is absolute, it is not permanent relief. It can be removed when the conditions in the home country change so as to eliminate the risk of torture.

Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has written of its concern that “the proposed exception to protection under the [CAT] will authorize the return of individuals to countries where they may suffer torture and will place the U.S. in violation of its international obligations.”¹⁹

Regardless of the applicability of the CAT, we believe an absolute prohibition on removal to torture-practicing nations is necessary on moral grounds, as well. Torture is so horrendous and so contrary to our ethical, spiritual, and democratic beliefs that it must be condemned and prohibited. Returning someone to a place where he or she would be tortured would sustain the kind of system in which violent authoritarian regimes exist. Passing the section 3032 provisions would amount to legalizing the outsourcing of torture by the United States government. The President of the American Bar Association further indicated that extraordinary rendition may endanger “American troops who may be detained by adversaries who may be disinclined to honor international obligations in light of the U.S. government’s failure to honor its own.”²⁰

We also object to the change in the burden of proof that would require the applicant to prove by “clear and convincing evidence” that he will be tortured. This is an unrealistic and unfair requirement. Raising the standard to this level of certainty would undoubtedly result in sending people to countries where they will be tortured. Moreover, it would violate Article 3 of the Convention, which forbids a State Party from forcibly returning a person to a country where there are “substantial grounds” for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture.

Finally, we object to making such changes retroactive and prohibiting federal court review of CAT decisions unless it is part of the review of a final order of removal. Current law requires that petitions for review of a removal order be filed within 30 days.²¹ Changing the standards and applying the changes retroactively puts individuals who have already won CAT relief in the position of reproving their cases with evidence that may no longer exist. These same individuals are likely to find themselves with no opportunity for federal court review of adverse decisions, which would eliminate the checks and balances that are the fundamental component of our democracy. This cannot be justified where the consequence of a mistake could be subjecting a person to torture.

These concerns are not merely hypothetical. In 2002, the United States deported Mr. Maher Arar, a Canadian-Syrian national, to Syria, a known state sponsor of torture.²² Mr. Arar, now in Canada, was apparently tortured during his ten months in Syria. In another instance, a Virginia couple is suing the United States seeking to have their son, Ahmed Abu Ali, returned to the United States from Saudi Arabia, where he was arrested in June 2003; in their petition, the couple argue that their son’s situation is an example of extraordinary rendition.²³

²³ Id.

It is important to note that prohibiting the removal of someone to state sponsors of torture does not mean that they must be released. The Supreme Court has held that people who receive CAT protection can be held in detention if they pose a danger to the United States.²⁴ In response to the Court, the former Immigration and Naturalization Service promulgated regulations for determining the circumstances under which an alien may be held in custody beyond the statutory removal period.²⁵ Pursuant to the Court's decision and the INS regulations, it is clear that removal to state sponsors of torture is not necessary to fight terrorism.

The Convention Against Torture is a fundamental pillar of our human rights and national interest policy. It prohibits the government from establishing removal and extradition processes that would return aliens to countries where they would be tortured. It is one of the four primary international human rights documents. It stands, along with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and the Genocide Convention, as one of the cornerstones of our country's efforts to stop the most heinous forms of oppression and abuse. That is why we, and the leaders of the 9/11 Commission,²⁶ oppose this egregious proposal to weaken our enforcement of it.²⁷

B. THE LEGISLATION WOULD HINDER EFFORTS TO GRANT ASYLUM TO VICTIMS OF TORTURE

We oppose inclusion of section 3006 in H.R. 10 because it is not a part of the 9/11 Commission recommendations, and it would eviscerate protections built into the asylum process to ensure that the United States does not return genuine refugees to countries where they would face persecution and violate both the Refugee Convention and the Convention Against Torture. Section 3006 significantly expands the policy of expedited removal—a process that allows low-level immigration officials to remove undocumented foreigners without a hearing before an immigration judge. Before Congress has held hearings to assess the impact of this expansion of expedited removal, section 3006 would push the Department of Homeland Security to expand expedited removal to apply to all undocumented foreigners anywhere in the country unless they have been present in the United States for more than five years.

Under current law, expedited removal applies to non-citizens arriving at an airport or land border with invalid travel documents, and allows an immigration officer to order them removed without ²⁴ In Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001), the Supreme Court held that the detention provisions in the Immigration and Nationality Act, read in light of the Constitution's demands, limit an alien's post-removal period detention to a period reasonably necessary to bring about the alien's removal from the United States. The Court found further that once removal is no longer reasonably foreseeable, continued detention is no longer authorized by statute except where special circumstances justify continued detention.

²⁵ 8 C.F.R. §§ 208.16–208.18. These regulations authorized the government to continue to detain aliens who present foreign policy concerns or national security and terrorism concerns, as well as individuals who are specially dangerous due to a mental condition or personality disorder, even though their removal is not likely in the reasonably foreseeable future.

²⁶ Carl Hulse, 9/11 Commissioners Say Bill's Added Provisions are Harmful, N.Y. Times, Oct. 1, 2004, at A13 (“Commission leaders did not specify all of the House provisions that they considered problematic, though they singled out a proposal to allow suspected terrorists to be deported to nations where they could be tortured.”)

²⁷ The Majority rejected by a vote of 12–19 an amendment offered by Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee to strike section 3032.

further review unless they express a fear of persecution or torture. People who express a fear of persecution or torture are to be referred to an asylum officer for a “credible fear” interview, and must pass this interview in order to be eligible for asylum in the United States. The current statute also allows expedited removal to be applied to non-citizens who are found inside the United States without having been admitted or paroled and who cannot show that they have been here for more than two years. The current statute does not require such persons to be subjected to expedited removal, however, and gives the Secretary of Homeland Security the power to apply expedited removal to that group or to any sub-group of people within it. These existing provisions already place significant power in the hands of immigration officers whose decisions are not subject to formal administrative or judicial review.

Section 3006 goes much further and would allow DHS to summarily deport genuine refugees who have been in the United States for over a year, even if they qualify for a statutory exception to the one-year deadline to file for asylum without having their cases heard.²⁸ The expansion of expedited removal powers in section 3006 allows for summary deportation of immigrants who express a fear of persecution or an intent to apply for asylum but appear ineligible for asylum based on the one-year deadline. This bill ignores the fact that such applicants may fall under a statutory exception to the one-year deadline based on extraordinary circumstances or changed circumstances.²⁹

Under section 3006, DHS would also summarily deport genuine refugees who are ineligible for asylum based on the one-year deadline but are eligible for withholding of removal under INA section 241(b)(3). Stripping refugees of the opportunity to claim that protection violates our obligations under Article 33 of the Refugee Convention. This is because even asylum applicants who file more than one-year after arrival and cannot qualify for an exception to the one-year deadlines should remain eligible for withholding of removal if they can show that they are refugees and would face a probability of persecution if deported. Withholding of removal is the basic minimum form of protection through which the United States ensures its compliance with its obligation under international law not to return refugees to countries where their lives or freedom would be threatened. If an immigration officer thinks an intending asylum-seeker has been here for more than one year but less than five, section 3006 does not provide for any investigation or review of the person’s eligibility for withholding.

In addition to being a threat to relief for genuine refugees under asylum and withholding of removal, section 3006 would allow the return under expedited removal of non-citizens determined to have been in the United States for less than five years who would face torture when deported. This section provides no means for persons

²⁸ Section 208 of the Immigration and Nationality Act allows refugees present in the United States to file for asylum, but provides that they must do so within one year of their last arrival in the United States.

²⁹ A classic example of the latter would be where a person came to the United States as an economic migrant two years ago, but learned last month that following a coup in his country all his family had been killed due to their allegiance with the prior regime. This person’s eligibility for an exception to the filing deadline needs to be considered by a trained asylum officer or an immigration judge. Under section 3006, it would never be considered at all.

subject to expedited removal who fear they will be tortured if they are deported to make an application for protection under the Convention Against Torture. The bill provides for referral to an asylum officer only for those who express an intention to apply for asylum or a fear of persecution. This omission sets the stage for very serious violations of the U.S.'s obligation under the CAT not to return people to countries where they would be tortured.

This massive expansion of expedited removal would also be likely to affect even more people than it seeks to target, because it is difficult for a person who has just been arrested by an immigration officer unexpectedly to prove that he or she has been in the United States for more than five years, or for less than one year so as to qualify for referral to an asylum officer. Most people who are present in the U.S. without admission do not walk around with five years' worth of rent receipts in their pockets. In the asylum context, proving one's date of entry typically takes some time and effort, and involves gathering documentation and witnesses—none of which can be accomplished in an expedited removal proceeding.

Finally, we do not believe that expanding the use of expedited removal in this way is the most efficient way to stop more terrorists trying to enter the United States. Expedited removal would not have stopped the terrorists who executed the 9/11 attacks. Moreover, expedited removal is the last option we ought to want as a defense against terrorists trying to gain entry, because essentially what it does is sends them out only to try to enter again somewhere else. The danger of relying on expedited removal to catch terrorists is that its focus is removal. Suspected terrorists should not be removed; they should be interrogated and charged.

Section 3007 is equally problematic. While current law already bars terrorists from seeking asylum, this section would allow genuine refugees to be denied asylum if they were unable to document relevant conditions in their countries through State Department reports, could not prove their persecutor's central motive for harming them, or had any inconsistencies between statements made to any U.S. government employees, whether written or oral and whether or not under oath, and their testimony before an immigration judge. There are key changes in this section that create insurmountable hurdles for individuals seeking safe haven in the United States.

Section 3007 would require an asylum applicant to prove that her persecutor's central motive in persecuting her was or would be her race, religion, political opinion, nationality or membership in a particular social group. While committing torture, rape, beatings, and other abuses, persecutors do not always explain themselves clearly to their victims. This is why the Board of Immigration Appeals has ruled that asylum applicants are not required to show conclusively why persecution has or will occur.³⁰ This bill would reverse that decision and place an enormous and unnecessary burden on asylum seekers by requiring them to prove with unrealistic precision what is going on in their persecutor's mind.

³⁰In Matter of S-P-, 21 I&N Dec. 486 (BIA 1996). The case involved a Sri Lankan who was tortured by his government purportedly to ascertain information about the identities of guerrillas and the location of camps, but also because of an unstated assumption by his torturers that his political views were antithetical to the government.

This section would permit adjudicators to deny asylum because the applicant is unable to provide corroborating evidence of “certain alleged facts pertaining to the specifics of their claim.” This disproportionately harms applicants who are detained and/or lack counsel. In addition, section 3007 would bar judicial review of a denial of asylum based on an applicant’s failure to provide corroborating evidence.

Section 3007 also introduces new credibility grounds for denying asylum, saying that the applicant’s “demeanor” and other highly subjective factors may be determining factors in assessing credibility. Demeanor is highly cultural and should not be relied on as heavily as evidence.³¹ Moreover, torture victims often have what mental health professionals call a “blank affect” when recounting their experiences, a demeanor that an adjudicator might misinterpret as demonstrating lack of credibility.

Additionally, it may be difficult for asylum applicants to recount their experiences, and even more troubling based upon the situation. Survivors of torture, such as rape, or forced abortion or sterilization may not be comfortable telling this information to a uniformed male inspection officer in an airport. Also, applicants in that setting may not be provided with appropriate interpreters. They may understandably fear discussing problems in their home countries in any detail until later in the process when it is made clear to them that they are not going to be sent back to their home countries without their claims being heard. Several courts of appeals even have emphasized that statements taken under such conditions are unreliable.³²

Section 3007 also allows asylum to be denied for lack of consistency, including with any statement the applicant made at any time to any U.S. official. In order to escape persecution and flee to safety, refugees sometimes need to misrepresent why they are leaving one country and entering another. For reasons of fear, desperation, confusion and trauma they often do not tell the full story or, necessarily, the accurate story. To use an applicant’s first statement to any U.S. official to impeach his or her sworn testimony, no matter how well supported, is unreasonable and unfair.

Furthermore, the Refugee Convention definition of a refugee, and its definitive interpretation in the United Nations High Commissioner For Refugees Handbook on Procedures and Criteria for Determining Refugee Status under the 1951 Convention and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees, do not require and in fact acknowledge that a person seeking refuge “may not be aware of the reasons for the persecution feared.” To meet the test that persecution be “on account of” one of the prohibited grounds, it is sufficient to show persecution is motivated in part by one of those grounds. Asking a refugee or asylum applicant to parse his persecutor’s motivations so finely as to distill the central motive is asking asylum seekers to read the minds of their persecutors. Moreover, current Supreme Court case law interpreting the “on account of” requirement is already the strictest in the world without section 3007.

³¹In one culture, looking a judge in the eye would be interpreted as candor, while in another it would be interpreted as contempt; downcast eyes might be interpreted as respect for authority in one culture and evasiveness in another.

³²Fauyiza Kassindja, the young Togolese woman who fled female genital mutilation (FGM), would have been denied asylum under this standard with little chance of getting that determination reversed on appeal. Under current law, the Board of Immigration Appeals Appeals rightly reversed the Immigration Judge’s credibility finding in her case, and that decision has helped protect other women fleeing FGM.

Finally, section 3007 calls for consistency between the applicant’s claim and country conditions in the country from which the applicant claims asylum “as presented by the Department of State.” This provision could be interpreted to exclude country conditions information from human rights organizations, journalists, and myriad other sources of relevant and reliable information that are not necessarily included in State Department country reports. Although the State Department country reports are usually well researched, they are not an exhaustive and unfailingly accurate source of documentation of all of the wide range of human rights violations around the world that can give rise to valid asylum claims. In addition, since these reports come out annually, they can not be relied upon for documentation of more recent events.

The President has made many strong statements about his concern for the persecuted and America’s role in creating a safe haven. On United Nations International Day in Support of Victims of Torture, he said:

The United States reaffirms its commitment to the world-wide elimination of torture. * * * The United States will continue to take seriously the need to question terrorists who have information that can save lives. But we will not compromise the rule of law or the values and principles that make us strong. Torture is wrong no matter where it occurs, and the United States will continue to lead the fight to eliminate it everywhere.³³

In no uncertain terms, sections 3006 and 3007 are inconsistent with the Bush Administration’s statements on persecution and torture and will lead to obvious and clear hardship on innocent and deserving immigrants.³⁴

³³The President, Statement on U.N. International Day in Support of Victims of Torture (June 26, 2004).

³⁴The effect of sections 3006, 3007, and 3009 are best illustrated through an actual asylum petition that would have turned out quite differently had sections 3006, 3007, and 3009 been in place. The findings of fact by the appellate court recount that Olimpia Lazo-Majano, a young Salvadoran mother of three, was 29, in 1981, when her husband fled El Salvador for political reasons. Ms. Lazo-Majano remained in El Salvador, working as a domestic. In mid-1982, Ms. Lazo-Majano was hired by a sergeant in the Salvadoran armed forces named Rene Zuniga. After Ms. Lazo-Majano had been working for him for several weeks, Zuniga raped her at gun point. This began a period of abuse during which Zuniga beat Ms. Lazo-Majano, threatened her, tore up her identity card and forced her to eat it, dragged her by the hair in public, held hand grenades against her head, and threatened to bomb her. Ms. Lazo-Majano felt trapped and powerless to resist Zuniga, because he accused her of being a subversive and threatened that if she reported him or tried to resist him, he would denounce her or kill her as a subversive. Ms. Lazo-Majano believed him: she knew a teen-age boy who was believed to have been tortured and killed by the army, the husband of a neighbor had been taken away at night together with a group of other men and killed the preceding year, and numerous young girls who had been raped with impunity.

In late 1982, Ms. Lazo-Majano escaped and fled to the United States, entering the country without inspection. Neither the Immigration Judge who heard her request for asylum nor the Board of Immigration Appeals doubted her credibility. But the Immigration Judge ordered her deported to El Salvador, and the BIA upheld that decision in 1985, on the grounds that “such strictly personal actions do not constitute persecution within the meaning of the Act.” Ms. Lazo-Majano appealed to the federal court of appeals. The court of appeals reversed the BIA, holding that Zuniga “had his gun, his grenades, his bombs, his authority and his hold over Olimpia because he was a member” of an army unrestrained by civilian control, that his cynical imputation

C. THE LEGISLATION UNFAIRLY AND UNCONSTITUTIONALLY LIMITS
JUDICIAL REVIEW OF EXECUTIVE ACTIONS

Section 3009 would eliminate virtually all federal court review of orders of deportation, including claims arising under the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. Review of such orders would be limited to “circuit courts of appeals of constitutional claims or pure questions of law raised upon petitions for review filed in accordance with this section.”

The bill not only forecloses habeas corpus review in those cases where a “petition for review” is barred under section 242(a)(2) of the Immigration and Nationality Act—it goes much further by redefining “judicial review” and “jurisdiction to review” throughout the INA to include review by habeas corpus. This is a radical departure in immigration law because it changes the longstanding, historical meaning of “jurisdiction to review” and “judicial review”—“terms of art” that have been long interpreted in immigration matters as distinct from review by writ of habeas corpus.³⁵ to her of subversive political opinions, and the danger that he would kill her or have her killed on this basis, qualified her for asylum.

In its decision, the court of appeals in this case noted reports that people being denied asylum and deported from the United States to El Salvador had been tortured and killed. Fortunately for Ms. Lazo-Majano, her deportation was stayed pending the federal court’s review. Under section 3009 of H.R. 10, however, the court could not have stayed Ms. Lazo-Majano’s deportation unless she were able to show by “clear and convincing evidence”—before briefing or argument in this legally complex asylum case—that execution of the deportation order would be “clearly contrary to law.” This is a higher standard than she was required to meet to actually win her asylum case before the court of appeals. Under H.R. 10, Ms. Lazo-Majano would have been deported to El Salvador. The federal court’s decision in her favor two years later would do nothing to protect her there.

If section 3007 of H.R. 10 had been law, this case would almost certainly not have been decided in Ms. Lazo-Majano’s favor. Section 3007 would require her to establish that she was the wife of someone who fled the country for political reasons, that her persecutor attributed “subversive” political opinions to her, and that his desire to stamp out any resistance to his dominance over her as a man and an officer in the ruling army, were not only the motives of Zuniga’s persecution, but that her political opinion was “the central motive” for the persecution. A dissenting judge on the court of appeals in this case took the view that Ms. Lazo-Majano was “abused * * * purely for sexual, and clearly ego reasons” and was therefore not eligible for asylum. If this case were decided under the rule of section 3007, that view would have prevailed.

In fact, if H.R. 10 had been the law, Ms. Lazo-Majano would have been unlikely to have had her asylum claim heard at all—by anyone. Section 3006 expands expedited removal procedures to require the summary deportation, without hearing or review, of anyone who has not been admitted or paroled into the United States and (in the judgment of an immigration officer) has not been physically present in the United States continuously for the past five years. Ms. Lazo-Majano was present in the United States without admission when she was stopped by an immigration officer. Section 3006 provides that a person in this situation who indicates an intention to apply for asylum or a fear of persecution shall be referred to an asylum officer for a credible fear interview. Ms. Lazo-Majano would be allowed to apply for asylum if she was able to tell a uniformed Border Patrol officer (an uniformed and likely male officer) about her fears, but even if she felt safe enough to do that she would only be granted a credible fear interview if the officer determined that she had been present in the United States at that point for less than a year.

In fact, Ms. Lazo-Majano had only been in the United States for a few months when she was stopped. But could she have proved that? She was an undocumented immigrant with no proof of her date of entry and probably very limited documentation of her life in this country. If she had in fact been in the U.S. for over a year, she might have been eligible for an exception to the one-year filing deadline for asylum claims—many refugees who have been through the kind of shattering, traumatic experiences she suffered arrive in the U.S. suffering from psychological and/or physical ills that make it impossible for them to file their claims timely. For many victims of rape and other forms of torture, the continuing feeling of shame and fear are so overwhelming that they may not be able to bring themselves to tell their stories to any other person—much less a U.S. government official—until they have gained some sense of security. People in this situation are often eligible for an exception to the filing deadline under INA section 208(a)(2)(D). Section 3006 would prevent their claims from being heard. Regardless of her date of filing, Ms. Lazo-Majano would be eligible for withholding of removal under section 241(b)(3) of the INA, but section 3006 makes no provision for application for withholding of removal.

This section would redefine the meaning of these terms to explicitly forbid access to the “Great Writ” for all claims where “judicial review” or “jurisdiction to review” is barred, dramatically altering at least thirteen separate provisions of the Immigration Act that affect agricultural workers, asylum petitioners, non-immigrants and others. In these cases, habeas review must be available as a safety valve. The Constitution demands court review for all actions that affect the liberty of persons detained by the government.

After barring these claims, the legislation explicitly bars the federal courthouse doors to any alternative appeal through the “Great Writ” of liberty. In so doing, the bill violates the Constitution, which provides that “the Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall not be suspended” except in cases of “Rebellion or Invasion.”³⁶ The Supreme Court has held that the Constitution requires any substitute remedy for habeas corpus to be “neither inadequate nor ineffective to test the legality of a person’s detention.”³⁷

This proposal ignores many of the other systemic problems that have led to necessary habeas litigation. The current system makes it very hard for many people to get any review, even if they have a strong claim. Factors negating meaningful review include the lack of access to counsel, detentions in remote areas, lack of notice on how to have a claim heard in court, exceedingly short time limitations to file petitions for review, no protection against deportation during the short time to file for review, and the government’s use of hypertechnical arguments to defeat jurisdiction. These factors, plus the 1996 legislation’s effective elimination of discretionary relief by the agency, have forced people into habeas litigation. The Majority rejected an amendment offered by Rep. Nadler and Rep. Linda Sanchez (D–CA) to strike this objectionable proposal.

D. THE LEGISLATION WOULD REGULATE FORMS OF IDENTIFICATION CONTRARY TO CONGRESSIONAL AND PRIVATE SECTOR VIEWS

The legislation contains problematic provisions that would make it difficult for immigrants to carry identification and open bank accounts, and for states to regulate drivers. Considering that these measures would not help in the war on terror, it is not surprising that they were not recommended by the 9/11 Commission.

First, section 3005 would prohibit federal employees from accepting any foreign identity document other than a passport.³⁸ The underlying objective is to prevent Mexican immigrants from using Matricula Consular cards for identification. The Government of Mexico has been issuing Matriculas at their consulates around the world for more than 130 years. The consulates do this to create an official record of its citizens in other countries. The Matricula is legal proof of registration with a consulate. This registration facilitates access to protection and consular services because the certificate is evidence of Mexican nationality. Last year alone, more than a million of these cards were issued to Mexican citizens living in the United States. It does not provide immigrant status of any kind, and it cannot be used for travel, employment, or driving in the United States or in Mexico. The Matricula only attests that a Mexican consulate has verified the individual's identity.

³⁶U.S. CONST. art. I § 9.

³⁷*Swain v. Pressley*, 430 U.S. 372, 381 (1977).

³⁸The identity document issue would come up when aliens are required to present a foreign identity document to enter a federal building or to board an airplane at a United States airport. In addition, the Transportation Security Administration requires passengers to show an identification card before being admitted to the secured areas of an airport.

The Matricula also has some non-consular uses. For instance, because it is an identification card, it provides Mexican nationals in the United States with access to banking services. Without an acceptable identification card, many Mexican nationals in this country cannot open checking or savings accounts or use any other banking services. The significance of this cannot be overstated; in 2003, Latino immigrants sent $38 billion to Latin America.³⁹ Moreover, the U.S. banking industry has been supportive of the Matricula, planning to spend at least $8.5 billion through 2005 to attract Hispanic customers.⁴⁰

The availability of banking services is a safety issue, as well. Because of perceptions that Latinos do not have bank accounts and thus carry large amounts of cash, Latinos are more likely to be victims of violent crime than any other racial or ethnic group. As a result of this problem, mayors across the country support the use of the Matricula to enable Latinos to use mainstream financial institutions and thus reduce crime and violence.⁴¹

Finally, the use of the Matricula for establishing bank accounts has been approved by our government. The USA PATRIOT Act requires regulations setting forth minimum standards for financial institutions that relate to the identification and verification of any person who applies to open an account.⁴² These regulations, promulgated by the U.S. Department of Treasury, permit banks to accept identification cards issued by foreign governments from customers opening new accounts, including the Matricula.⁴³ Additionally, the House recently defeated another attempt to ban the use of the Matricula.⁴⁴ Despite this clear support for the Matricula, opponents of the identification card are trying to achieve their objective indirectly by limiting which foreign documents can be accepted.

Section 3052 of the legislation is another thinly-veiled attempt to limit forms of acceptable identification. Subsection 3052(c)(2)(B) would prohibit states from accepting any foreign document, other than an official passport, to meet the documentary identification ³⁹Dr. Manuel Orozco, Institute for the Study of International Migration, Georgetown Univ., Pew Hispanic Center Report: The Remittance Marketplace-Prices, Policy and Financial Institutions 15 (June 2004).

⁴⁰Holders of the Matricula are more likely to use regulated financial institutions, such as banks or credit unions, than a money transmitting business such as Western Union or MoneyGram because the cost of making such transfers is much higher for the latter category.

⁴¹See Rachel L. Swarns, Old ID Card Gives New Status to Mexicans in U.S., N.Y. Times, Aug. 25, 2003, at A1 ("In June, the mayors of the Indian cities of Fort Wayne, East Chicago, Columbus and Indianapolis announced they would accept the Matricula card. In July the State of Indiana and the cities of Madison, Ind., and Cleveland and Columbus in Ohio recognized it. This month, Cincinnati followed suit. Officials say the move would be a boon to local economies, encouraging Mexican immigrants to pour money into banks and businesses. They also say immigrants with bank accounts will be less vulnerable to criminals who prey on people who carry cash or keep money at home.") requirements for a state-issued identification card (including a driver's license).

While proponents of this measure have linked driver's licenses to security concerns by pointing out that many of the 9/11 hijackers were able to obtain licenses, we would note that making it more difficult to obtain a driver's license will not deter terrorism. Even requiring passports to obtain driver's licenses would not have prevented the 9/11 hijackers from getting driver's licenses; they all had passports.

Beyond the ineffectiveness of the proposal, it also would serve to exclude millions of people from American society and hinder state efforts to regulate drivers. Recent estimates indicate that we have between eight and fourteen million undocumented aliens in the United States, many of whom may not have passports and would be prevented from obtaining licenses under the legislation. The reality is that in many parts of the country it is virtually impossible to survive in our society without a car, and it is unlikely that undocumented aliens will simply give up and leave the country when they learn they cannot obtain licenses.

Moreover, a license is not just a privilege for the driver's benefit but also serves state purposes. By licensing drivers, the state can ensure that the drivers who receive licenses have acceptable driving skills, know traffic laws, and have liability insurance. In addition, registering and photographing all drivers helps the state to monitor driving records.

Finally, denying access to licenses could pose a safety risk. Traffic accidents are the leading cause of death, with forty-four thousand traffic fatalities in 2002.⁴⁵ According to a study conducted for the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, unlicensed drivers are five times more likely to be in fatal crashes than drivers with valid licenses.⁴⁶

E. THE LEGISLATION CONTAINS OTHER OBJECTIONABLE PROVISIONS THAT WOULD NOT ENHANCE SECURITY AND WERE NOT RECOMMENDED BY THE 9/11 COMMISSION

1. The legislation increases criminal penalties for false claims to citizenship without any nexus to national security goals

We object to section 3086, which imposes five years imprisonment for making false claims to citizenship for the purpose of entering or remaining in the United States. This is yet another example of the mean-spirited, anti-immigrant sentiment that pervades this bill. Many immigrants, both legal and undocumented, may make such a claim upon an encounter with a law enforcement or immigration official. We believe that a five year jail term for such a statement is unnecessary and very counterproductive. Federal law already exacts severe consequences on immigrants who make false claims to citizenship. There is no valid policy reason for making taxpayers bear the high cost of jailing an immigrant for five years for such a minor non-violent offense.

Making a false claim to citizenship is already punishable under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). Section 212 makes an alien who falsely represents himself as a citizen inadmissible, and there is no waiver of the consequences of this offense.⁴⁷ In addition, this offense constitutes a crime of moral turpitude and triggers removability from the country under section 237 of the INA.⁴⁸ The INA makes a person who has committed a crime of moral turpitude subject to mandatory detention in jail, if they are convicted of a sentence of more than 1 year in prison.⁴⁹ This immigration detention, which can last for years, normally follows the service of a criminal sentence in prison.

Section 3086 needlessly piles on additional jail time to an immigrant who already faces removal, with mandatory detention in many cases. Upon deportation, the immigrant would be barred from the United States for life.⁵⁰ The consequences of one false statement, both to the immigrant and to their family, community and employer, are already severe. Adding a five year jail term to someone who is already subject to deportation, without possibility of return under our federal laws, is grossly excessive to the crime.

Furthermore, the 9/11 Commission did not recommend the enhancement of this penalty, nor did it recommend anything remotely related to this policy. The Majority on this Committee justifies the inclusion of this policy⁵¹ in this bill by the Commission's recommendation that "The Department of Homeland Security, properly supported by Congress, should complete, as quickly as possible, a biometric entry-exit screening system, including a single system for speeding qualified travelers."⁵²

Jailing people for five years for claiming that they are U.S. citizens has nothing to do with a biometric entry-exit system, nor with speeding the transit of qualified travelers. There is no indication that a policy like this would catch terrorists trying to enter the country, or prevent a terrorist attack. In fact, none of the September 11th terrorists claimed U.S. citizenship to enter this country.

This policy is simply an anti-immigrant provision designed to punish, jail and deport immigrants, especially those who are undocumented. It has no nexus to national security and is most likely to result in years of imprisonment followed by the eventual deportation of random immigrant workers. We object to this penalty, and certainly oppose its inclusion in this bill, which is supposed to be responding to the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission.

2. The legislation would hinder business and tourism travel throughout the western hemisphere

Another provision of the bill would hamper travel throughout the western hemisphere and cause chaos for businesses and national economies. Section 215(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act states that, unless otherwise provided, it is unlawful for U.S. citizens to depart from or enter the United States unless they bear a valid U.S. passport. By regulation, the Secretary of State has provided that U.S. citizens are exempted from this requirement when traveling directly between parts of the United States, and when traveling between the United States and any territory in North, South or Central America (i.e., the western hemisphere).⁵³

Section 3001 of H.R. 10 would amend section 215(b) to invalidate the western hemisphere exception, thus requiring a passport to travel to and from currently exempted countries. It would permit the President to waive the passport requirement for travel to Canada and Mexico, but it would require such travelers to carry documents that the Secretary of Health and Human Services has designated as establishing U.S. citizenship for the travel purposes.⁵⁴

As it is has been proposed, the measure would overburden passport processing operations and slow business and tourism travel to a halt. First, though it essentially would require the issuance of new passports for travelers to currently exempted countries, the legislation provides no funding to increase passport application processing. As such, the need for so many passports could result in severe backlogs and prevent people from taking needed trips. Further, it would have a particularly negative impact on the tourism industry of the Caribbean, which relies on U.S. travel of those without passports. For this reason, the provision would raise the ire of the travel industry and many businesses who would miss opportunities because they could not engage in last minute travel.⁵⁵

⁵⁴ The Secretary would have 60 days to pass an interim rule and publish a list of qualifying documents in the Federal Register. As of 90 days after that publication, the President would not be authorized to permit citizen arrivals or departures without the designated document or documents.

⁵⁵ Another concern we expressed during the markup is that it does not limit the use of secret immigration proceedings. During the Committee markup, Reps. Howard Berman (D–CA) and Delahunt (D–MA) offered an amendment to set out guidelines for government closure of hearings in immigration court in response to the blanket closure of these hearings by the Chief Immigration Judge in the weeks following the September 11th attacks. We feel that this amendment falls squarely within the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. Specifically, the Commission recommended that: “The burden of proof for retaining a particular governmental power should be on the executive, to explain (a) that the power actually materially enhances security and (b) that there is adequate supervision of the executive’s use of the powers to ensure protection of civil liberties. If the power is granted, there must be adequate guidelines and oversight to properly confine its use.” The amendment offered by Rep. Berman would have created guidelines for the use of the government’s power to close hearings.

On September 21, 2001, Chief Immigration Judge Michael J. Creppy issued a memorandum (“Creppy Directive”) implementing an order from the Attorney General to close certain immigration hearings. These cases were to be conducted completely in secret with “no visitors, no family and no press.” The mandate for secrecy even prohibited “confirming or denying whether such a case is on the docket or scheduled for hearing.”

It has been reported that the INS did not use classified information in any of these hearings. Instead the government has asserted that all purported terrorism-related proceedings need to remain closed in order to protect the privacy of the detainees and prevent information about government intelligence-gathering methods from reaching al Qaeda.

The U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan found that the order closing immigration hearings was unconstitutionally broad (Detroit Free Press v. Ashcroft, 195 F. Supp. 2d 937 (E.D. Mich. 2002), and the Federal Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed. Detroit Free Press v. Ashcroft, 303 F.3d 681 (6th Cir. 2002). In a separate case the U.S. District Court for New Jersey found the closures unconstitutional (New Jersey Media Group v. Ashcroft, 205 F. Supp. 2d 288 (D.N.J. 2002), but the Third Circuit reversed (New Jersey Media Group v. Ashcroft, 308 F.3d 198 (3rd Cir. 2002). The Supreme Court declined to hear the cases, effectively allowing the government to continue the process, at least within the geographic confines of the Third Circuit.

Open proceedings, in judicial and quasi-judicial settings, protect individuals from arbitrary action and the public from sloppy decision-making. Transparent proceedings are also important in maintaining public confidence in the fairness of government activities. There are clearly individual cases where proceedings should be closed to protect the safety of participants or national

II. THE LEGISLATION WOULD AUTHORIZE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE EMPLOYERS TO INTRUDE INTO THE EVERYDAY LIVES OF AMERICANS

A. THE LEGISLATION VIOLATES PRIVACY RIGHTS AND FEDERALISM BY STANDARDIZING DRIVER'S LICENSES TO CREATE A NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION CARD.

We object to Title III, Subtitle B, Chapter 1, which provides new standards for drivers' licenses and identification cards.⁵⁶ This provision goes far beyond the Commission's recommendations. It comes dangerously close to creating a national identification card system. It threatens American citizen's rights to privacy. It violates the tenets of federalism and forces unfunded mandates on the states. It excludes important stakeholders from the policy-making process and ignores state policy needs. It marginalizes immigrants in America, and ignores more reasonable alternatives for securing personal identification documents.

In its final report, the 9/11 Commission issued the following recommendation:

Secure identification should begin in the United States. The federal government should set standards for the issuance of birth certificates and sources of identification, such as drivers [sic] licenses. Fraud in identification documents is no longer just a problem of theft. At many entry points to vulnerable facilities, including gates for boarding aircraft, sources of identification are the last opportunity security. But the Creppy Directive allows the partial closing of proceedings based on the government's prerogative, without any showing of legitimate security needs.

As of May 29, 2002, 611 individuals have been subject to one or more secret hearings. As noted, there is a split in the circuit that have considered the legality of these proceedings, and, in opposing review by the Supreme Court, the Justice Department announced it was reconsidering its policy. Brief for the Respondents in Opposition at 13, North Jersey Media Group (No. 02-1289). But, in the absence of legislative action, there is nothing to prevent the Justice Department from conducting more secret immigration hearings in the future.

The amendment offered by Mr. Berman responds to the Administration's decision to require blanket closure of immigration proceedings without any showing of legitimate security needs by the government. The amendment would have established a statutory presumption of openness for removal hearings while preserving the possibility that a hearing may be closed upon a specific showing of need. Namely, the amendment would create an exception that on a case-by-case basis, hearings may be closed to preserve confidentiality of the immigrant (as in asylum adjudications or cases involving minors), to protect national security if classified information is involved, or to protect the identity of a confidential informant.

During the markup, the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Immigration opposed the Democratic amendment claiming that "it is common today for immigration cases to be closed. In fact, all asylum proceedings and proceedings regarding inadmissibility of a particular applicant are closed today." This statement is false. In making this argument, the Subcommittee Chairman's staff pointed to two sections of the Code of Federal Regulations stating that "All hearings, other than exclusion hearings, shall be open to the public * * *" (8 C.F.R. § 1003.27) and "Exclusion hearings shall be closed to the public." 8 C.F.R. § 1240.32. These provisions apply only to exclusion hearings—proceedings that commenced prior to April 1, 1997. They do not apply to all inadmissibility hearings, as the Subcommittee Chairman claimed. To the contrary, all asylum and removal proceedings are presumptively open to the public. There are limited exceptions. For example, hearings can be closed by the court when the proceeding involves an abused alien spouse or child or if information presented in the hearing is subject to a protective order.

It is unfortunate that the Majority members of the Committee were misinformed by their Subcommittee Chairman. We would hope that without this misinformation, our colleagues would have joined us in reinstating a transparent and open system for our immigration hearings that provides safeguards to protect privacy, classified information, national security, and confidential informants.

⁵⁶Specifically, this language is found in Sections 3051 through 3056. Although we oppose Chapter 1 of this Subtitle, we do not object to Section 3054, which makes it illegal to traffic actual document authentication features, in addition to false authentication features.

to ensure that people are who they say they are and to check whether they are terrorists.⁵⁷

After discussing the importance of continuing to welcome immigrants and keeping track of who enters the country, the Report also noted, “All but one of the 9/11 hijackers acquired some form of U.S. identification document, some by fraud.”⁵⁸ The hijackers used licenses and IDs to rent cars, conduct other activities to enact their plan, and eventually board aircraft for the 9/11 attacks. Clearly, the Commission recommended the establishment of identification standards to ensure that terrorists could not traverse the country and conduct business transactions in furtherance of future domestic attack plans.⁵⁹

The 9/11 Commission’s recommendation is broad and gives Congress room to work with federal agencies and states to develop standards that can be applied nationwide. Yet this Chapter goes far beyond the Commission’s recommendation that the federal government set standards for identification. It requires the states to overhaul their procedures for issuing driver’s licenses and identification cards to meet Federally-proscribed standards. It requires that states establish a database system for sharing all of the personal information and driving histories on license and ID card holders, though the Commission did not recommend any type of unified database for this data. The Commission did not suggest that the Federal government should interfere with states’ prerogatives or the privacy rights of individuals.⁶⁰ Nor was there a suggestion that Federal grants to the states should hinge on a shared database agreement as proposed in H.R. 10. This Chapter also forces states to bear all of the financial costs of these new standards by failing to fund these mandates. The proposal in H.R. 10 goes well beyond the Commission’s recommendation and unnecessarily violates the privacy rights of citizens and residents.

Section 3052 establishes minimum standards for Federal recognition of state-issued driver’s licenses or identification cards. It requires, at a minimum, that the following information be included on the identity documents: full legal name; date of birth; gender; license or ID card number; photo; residential address; signature; security features to prevent fraudulent use or tampering; and a common machine-readable technology with defined minimum data elements.

Section 3052 also spells out what forms of information and proof a state must require before issuing a license or ID: a photo identity document or alternative with legal name and date of birth; a document with date of birth; proof of social security account number; and a document with name and address of principal residence. The states must verify each document with the original issuing agency, and they are prohibited from accepting any foreign documents, except an official passport, for these purposes.

Furthermore, section 3052 requires states to use digital technology, retain copies or images of documents; require facial image capture for driver's license issuance; establish a procedure to verify information for renewals; confirm the accuracy of social security numbers and take action if one is registered to another person; refuse to issue licenses without confirmation that the applicant has terminated their license from another state; secure licensing facilities and employees authorized to manufacture or produce them; and establish fraudulent document recognition training.

The National Governors Association "strongly opposes" these provisions in H.R. 10.⁶¹ They note that the bill was "drafted without any input from Governors" and "exclude[s] states from the standard-setting process despite states' historic roles as issuers of driver's licenses and other identification data."⁶² In their opinion, the bill "would impose unworkable technological standards and verification procedures on states, many of which are well beyond the current capacity of even the federal government." They oppose the requirement that they share their state information with the federal government. In their view, this proposal would "create financial, administrative and implementation problems by requiring state compliance with these unprecedented, federally-imposed standards within a short timeframe." In addition, "the cost of implementing such standards for the 220 million driver's licenses issued by states represents a massive unfunded federal mandate."⁶³ We agree with their assessment and share their concerns.

As written, this Chapter would require state departments of motor vehicles to verify each and every identification document used to prove identity, by confirming the document with the government agency or company that issued it. Without a well-developed cooperative approach, this will become a bureaucratic nightmare that will be costly to the states and will cause substantial delays for citizens and residents. H.R. 10 also fails to provide any protections for the digital data it requires states to store digitally. There are no limits on how it may be used, nor is there any guidance for maintaining data security. This bill even goes as far to make the appearance of the IDs uniform—a step that is eerily close to a national ID card.

The states have a right to participate in determining how features for licenses and ID cards should be changed. Despite their expertise, they had no role in developing the requirements in H.R. 10. In effect, this Chapter empowers the Federal government to usurp state control over licensing and identification and establishes the equivalent of a national identity card with different state names on them.

Drivers' licenses are not simply identification documents. Their purpose is to ensure that people are safe drivers, who know the traffic laws and have defensive driving skills, before they drive on our roads and highways. Licensing also makes it possible for drivers to have liability insurance to protect other drivers on the road. The states should maintain their critical role in the issuance of licenses. Their obligation to ensure safety on their roads to protect their residents and visitors should not be ignored.

Perhaps the objections raised by the National Conference of State Legislatures ("NCSL") best enunciate the concerns we share with the states about the imposition of these standards and the obligation to share the data of state residents:

These provisions show no respect for federalism. They constitute egregious unfunded mandates dealing with drivers' licenses, birth certificates, personal identification cards and use of social security numbers that are likely to impose billions in costs on states. They preempt and undercut state legislative authority through a federally-contrived rulemaking process. They set a prescriptive framework for a national identification card. They ignore efforts made in every state to strengthen the integrity of drivers' licenses issuance and verification. They surrender legislative prerogative to federal agencies and bureaucrats without the benefit of congressional oversight. They constitute the groundwork for potentially compromising civil liberties and individual privacy. They compel state participation in compacts that are not recognized by state lawmakers and elected officials. They reference a federal grant process and funding of 'sums as may be necessary,' all in an environment of bulging federal deficits and constraints on domestic discretionary spending.⁶⁴

Title III of H.R. 10 proposes a computerized national database of every American driver's license and state identification card under the guise of strengthening our homeland security. Section 3053 requires that states must agree to participate in an interstate compact for the electronic sharing of driver license data, known as the "Driver License Agreement," in order to receive any grants or assistance under the bill. It requires state motor vehicle databases contain (1) all data fields printed on driver's licenses and identification cards issued by the state, and (2) motor vehicle drivers' histories, including motor vehicle violations, suspension, and points on licenses. A mega-database such as this one represents a perilous threat to our Constitutional rights. By forcing state governments to maintain and share files on almost every adult in the state, H.R. 10 will truly usher in the era of a "Big Brother" government.

Past efforts to establish a national ID card to identify and track U.S. residents have failed, due to the threats they pose to our liberty.⁶⁵ H.R. 10 seeks to achieve that same purpose through the ⁶⁴NCSL Letter. In addition to the provision on driver's licenses and state identification cards, the letter referred to provisions on birth certificates and social security data in Title III, Subtitle B, Chapters 1, 2, and Section 3071 of Chapter 3 from H.R. 10.

⁶⁵See Alison M. Smith, Congressional Research Service, National Identification Cards: Legal Issues, n. 1-3 (Jan. 3, 2003). Examples include the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1976, back door. Instead of creating a new national ID card, whose data would be held and monitored by the Federal government, this proposal standardizes state ID cards so that they achieve the same purpose. In this proposal, the states maintain the data, but they are forced to create a mega-database whose data must be shared by all 50 states and the U.S. territories.

There are no privacy limitations on the use of this data.⁶⁶ The bill does not prevent the sharing of this information with other people, companies, Federal government agencies or foreign governments that may make inquiries. There are no systems for maintaining the datashare systems, ensuring the accuracy of the data, preventing fraud and tampering, making corrections, or filing complaints for inaccuracy or misuse of the data. Currently, some states do not even have accurate or complete databases. Not all states can verify whether or not a certain person has a valid driver's license from their state. Certainly the Federal government should not mandate linking up state databases when some states cannot provide reliable information about their license and ID holders.

The lack of data safeguards ensures that the data will often be inaccurate and misused. There will be serious consequences for untold numbers of people who may miss flights, land in jail, fail to get benefits or be denied other opportunities due to database errors.

As noted above, the system proposed in this Chapter will dangerously increase the Federal government's ability to monitor individuals. The data-sharing system is bound to be subject to unauthorized disclosures and leaks. During World War II, for example, supposedly sacrosanct census data was used to identify Japanese-Americans for internment.⁶⁷ This mega-database will be a tempting target for future legislation and policies. The FBI could use this database to identify certain immigrants or members of an ethnic group for "voluntary interviews".⁶⁸ Collection agencies and states could erroneously identify people as unpaid debtors or child support evaders. People might be identified through the database because they criticized the President for U.S. involvement in a war or protested an international organization for the ills of globalization. The system is ripe for abuse and misuse that will violate people's rights to privacy, speech, and civil rights.⁶⁹

Similar interviews of Iraqi residents in the U.S. were conducted prior to the initiation of the war in Iraq in 2003.

Combined with other sections of H.R. 10 that prevent or limit the use of other forms of identification,⁷⁰ track the movement of Americans in and out of the country,⁷¹ standardize state records for birth certificates, and set up computerized systems for state and federal sharing of birth and death records,⁷² the impact of this proposal for driver's licenses and state-issued ID cards is truly frightening.⁷³ America would become a place where a person's every move, every encounter with state or federal governments from birth to death, would be tracked and monitored by those governments. H.R. 10 is a major leap forward in creating an all-intrusive "Big Brother" government.

Section 3055 empowers the Secretary of Homeland Security to make grants to the states to assist their efforts to conform to the minimum standards in this chapter. It authorizes such sums as may be necessary to carry out the Chapter from fiscal years 2005 through 2009. However, there is no guarantee that these grants will be made to all states and territories, or that sufficient funds will be provided to cover the massive expenses of these reforms. Furthermore, the demand for state compliance is not contingent upon the provision of federal funding to meet the costs of these reforms. The result will likely be a large unfunded mandate upon the states.⁷⁴ Yet many states continue to struggle financially as a result of other federal budget cuts in recent years. How will they pay for this plan? If these measures are needed for our national security, they should be paid for with federal funds. The burden of imposing and sharing these mandatory standards should not rest with the states.

Section 3056 gives the Secretary of Homeland Security the authority to make regulations, certify standards and issue grants under this title, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and the States. This gives ultimate authority to DHS, all but removing the Department of Transportation from the process, despite their authority over federal highways, their impact over State road and highway policy, and their experience working with states on road safety and licensing policies. At a minimum, the Secretary of Transportation should share the authority to implement this Chapter by making regulations, certifying standards and issuing grants in conjunction with the Secretary of Homeland Security. As discussed below, Rep. Linda Sanchez (D-CA) offered a substitute that would have achieved this balance. Under her proposal, the Secretaries of Transportation and Homeland Security would have joint authority to ensure that road safety policy was considered along with homeland security needs in creating and implementing these new standards.

to strengthen our security but that may impinge on individual rights. The test is a simple but important one: The burden of proof should be on the proponents of the measure to establish that the power or authority being sought would in fact materially enhance national security, and that there will be adequate supervision of the exercise of that power or authority top [sic] ensure protection of civil liberties. We would also note that this policy would leave citizens vulnerable to immigrant drivers on the roads without licenses. Many undocumented aliens who do not have passports are going to drive whether they have driver's licenses or not. Preventing the states from issuing driver's licenses to these aliens will result in a lot of untested, uninsured drivers on the roads. As a number of immigration organizations noted, "Not only would these requirements grind to a halt the issuance of driver's licenses throughout the country, they also would lead to a de facto immigration status requirement. Such a result would severely undermine the law enforcement utility of the Department of Motor Vehicle databases by discouraging individuals from applying for licenses."⁷⁵

Rep. Sanchez did offer a Democratic substitute to this Chapter at the Full Committee mark-up that Republicans defeated in a 19 to 12 vote.⁷⁶ Her proposal would have satisfied the recommendation of the 9–11 Commission, while bringing all those who have a serious interest in the implementation of standards together. She proposed creating a working group of federal and state experts who would carefully determine standards that would both ensure the security of driver's licenses and state identification cards and meet the policy needs of the States. This working group would include officials from the Department of Transportation, the Department of Homeland Security, and State motor vehicle departments. The working group would have reported their findings to Congress, allowing us to make a more reasoned decision that met the objectives of all stakeholders.

Although the substitute amendment failed, Rep. Melvin L. Watt (D–NC) expressed bi-partisan concerns about how to improve driver's license security and the risks of imposing a national identification card:

Mr. Watt: "I just wanted to point out that we had a hearing in the Commercial and Administrative Law Subcommittee on this whole national identification process. And uniformly—and I wish my Chairman Mr. Cannon, was here to express this—but uniformly the people on the—members on that subcommittee were extremely concerned about how this new identification system got implemented. And I think the underlying bill is well beyond what any of those people would have thought would have been a desirable place to be, and I think Ms. Sanchez's amendment gets us much, much closer to the appropriate balance."⁷⁷

Mr. Watt: Quoting Mr. Cannon from the subcommittee transcript: "And I suspect that this subcommittee, perhaps the Constitution subcommittee in addition, is going to have a lot to say about how we at least approach that problem.' He's talking about the national ID card problem. 'And I think that means a commission where people who are very thoughtful, who have significant background, and who are'—'people who are willing to say we don't necessarily need to federalize this process. And if we do federalize this process, it shouldn't just be by the damn feds sucking information out of local folks, It ought to be the local folks who get something back, and to do that, you ought to have some kind of protection, maybe an anonymizer. * * * It is vital to America and it is, I think, the cornerstone of what our grandchildren are going to enjoy or suffer in the future.”⁷⁸

We agree with the 9/11 Commission that drivers’ licenses and identification cards should be secure and should not be easily obtainable by terrorists, as was the case before September 11, 2001. However, creating a national ID is not the answer. All of the States and relevant federal agencies should have a role in carefully constructing appropriate national standards. A rigid, federal mandate is unwise and places unreasonable expectations on the states. This is especially true when the federal mandate is not funded, as in this case.

Most importantly, this proposal does not strike an appropriate balance between our rights to individual privacy and the federal government’s responsibilities to enhance our national security. We can improve the screening of card applicants, enhance the security of the identification cards, and ensure that driver’s meet safety tests. This can be done without violating individual privacy, creating a database with information on almost every U.S. resident, and increasing the number of dangerous, uninsured drivers on American roads and highways. It is our obligation to find the right balance. Rushing into a bad policy that establishes a “Big Brother” government database that will soon move beyond our control is not the answer. There is no evidence that the 9/11 Commission ever suggested or contemplated such a sweeping, overbroad policy to achieve the objective of securing domestic identification. Individual privacy must and can be protected while we improve our national security. Alternative reforms could successfully achieve this balance.

B. THE LEGISLATION WOULD PROVIDE UNFETTERED ACCESS TO INACCURATE AND INCOMPLETE CRIMINAL BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON EMPLOYEES

The bill also would subject private citizens to widespread dissemination of any criminal history information, regardless of accuracy. As reported from the Committee, section 2142 authorizes private employers to obtain background information, however inaccurate, on potential employees from the Attorney General. This program would undo the careful balance that exists between security needs and privacy interests and could lead to the dissemination of incorrect and private information.

Under current law, the Attorney General is authorized to acquire, collect and classify information for the purpose of criminal identification and records, the identification of deceased individuals and the location of missing persons.⁷⁹ This information may only be exchanged with federal government, the states, cities, and penal and other similar institutions.⁸⁰

Section 2142 would expand this authority significantly. It would create a pilot program that would empower private employers to access federal databases when such a search would be legal under state law. It requires the Attorney General to set up a system by which this information can be reliably accessed by fingerprint or other biometric identifiers. The search requester will be provided with an identifying description of the individual, and all available history on arrests, detentions, indictments or other formal charges. The requester also would receive any available dispositional information on the aforementioned, such as acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision and release information. The Attorney General would then be required to submit a report regarding how a background program might be applied to the general public. Section 2142 also creates a program by which security guard companies may check potential employees' backgrounds.

⁷⁹ 28 U.S.C. § 534.

⁸⁰ Id. § 534(a)(4).

While we understand the need for ensuring the integrity of, this measure would not be of benefit in that regard. We believe that a study must proceed a actual program, not follow it. In the four months of its operation, the pilot program envisioned by the bill's proponents could collect information on countless innocent Americans. We cannot support such a program for many reasons.

First, the program exceeds the scope of the 9/11 Commission report. It is unclear how this provision even relates to terrorism at all that it is not limited to those who work in national security-related positions or even those who work for the government. Plainly, there is no justification for allowing waitresses, accountants, cooks, and construction workers to be subjected to a federal background check through this bill. That is precisely why states that allow discrimination based on criminal history require some nexus between the position and the relevance of one's criminal past. For example, many states regulate the employment only of those who work in law enforcement, or with the children or the elderly.⁸¹ To create a blanket check for people regardless of the sensitivity of their jobs muddies what this bill intends to do—prevent future terrorist attacks—and jeopardizes our privacy.

Second, there are not safeguards to protect the information that employers collect and submit. The legislation contains no guidelines for what to do with information one it has been given to the Justice Department. It does not regulate what officials, public or private, would have access to it. Further, it does not provide whether the information is destroyed after the criminal history check or whether it remains in some new database of average Americans who have done nothing more than apply for a job. During the markup, the majority was forced to acknowledge that the legislation does not address these issues.⁸²

Beyond our concerns about what the Justice Department would do with its new boon of personally-identifiable data, there are concerns about the lack of regulations for employers. Section 2142 is silent about what employers are required to do to protect their employees' and applicants' sensitive information. There also are no provisions for ensuring that the background checks are actually being requested by bona fide employers instead of merely persons seeking private information on relatives or business competitors.

Third, the provision has no safeguards for accuracy. The Brandon Mayfield fiasco⁸³ demonstrates how easy it is to misidentify someone, even through our criminal and fingerprint databases. Despite this fact, the legislation does not require the database to have any level of accuracy before allowing information to be shared so that Mr. Mayfield's ordeal is not repeated. Beyond misidentification, it is possible that the files may be incomplete because they may not hold all of the dispositional information of how an arrest or charge was resolved. For this reason, the Justice Department should not disseminate arrest records until it can demonstrate that it also will disseminate acquittals, mistrials and those situations where charges were dropped.

This provision invites unwarranted discrimination against those with criminal pasts. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has found that discrimination on the basis of criminal history can very well be a violation of Title VII under a disparate impact theory, and should only be allowed when proven that it is a business necessity.⁸⁴ It has further stated that arrest records can be particularly troublesome, and that an arrest absent a conviction should very rarely ever be a justification for not hiring an applicant.⁸⁵ Finally, even the President has admitted the importance of integrating past offenders into our society, such as to reduce recidivism.⁸⁶ The legislation's new criminal history checks will just invite more discrimination against those who have reformed their lives, those whose convictions are far in the past, even those who were arrested, but never convicted, of a crime, and make it harder for them to reintegrate into society.

Finally, we would note there are no meaningful limitations whatsoever on the scope or duration of the pilot program. Ordinarily, when a pilot program of this magnitude is created, Congress will limit the program's geographic or other scope or duration. No such limitations are set forth in this legislation, effectively giving the Attorney General carte blanche authority to develop a program that could intrude on our civil liberties and privacy.

While we support background checks for security guards we cannot support background checks for the myriad of other positions that have no security or terror relation whatsoever. To include such a measure in an anti-terrorism bill is misleading and jeopardizes

So tonight, I propose a four-year, $300 million prisoner re-entry initiative to expand job training and placement services, to provide transitional housing, and to help newly released prisoners get mentoring, including from faith-based groups. America is the land of second chance, and when the gates of the prison open, the path ahead should lead to a better life.").

what the 9/11 Commission recommended as real fixes for the terrorist threat. Unfortunately, the majority rejected an effort to limit the scope of the checks to security employees and to study the possibility of further expansion.⁸⁷

C. THE LEGISLATION WOULD AUTHORIZE THE GENERATION OF TRAVEL DATABASES AND SCREENING PROGRAMS WITHOUT REGARD TO ACCURACY

Another concern with the legislation is that it would permit the development of travel databases and screening programs but would not ensure the integrity of those records. Section 2173 directs the Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security to begin testing a next generation passenger prescreening program, and directs the Secretary to establish procedures by which a person can appeal their position on a no-fly list.

While few can dispute the need for passenger screening, such measures must be done properly. At least hundreds, if not thousands, of airline passengers have complained to the Transportation Security Administration that their names incorrectly appear on TSA no-fly lists; in July 2004 alone, two-hundred and fifty people sought to have their names removed from such lists.⁸⁸ We believe the ability to remove oneself from a no-fly list is such a basic right for every American that it should receive the government's highest attention.

Unfortunately, the Department of Homeland Security has been operating the no-fly list for over two years since the attacks and has not seen fit to implement a process by which a passenger may remove his or her name.⁸⁹ Two persons who have appeared on the list, Rep. John Lewis (D-GA) and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-MA) attempted in vain to correct the problem; Rep. Lewis was able to avoid being flagged by adding his middle initial to travel bookings while Sen. Kennedy spent three weeks getting TSA officials to remove his name.⁹⁰ This lack of commitment to civil liberties by the government begs the intervention of an independent body that is focused on more than just security.

It also is important that there be judicial review of the no-fly process, such that the public would have a means of challenging any unfavorable rulings by the government. H.R. 10 however, does not permit review and leaves any challenges to be decided by the very organization that categorized the individual as a security risk in the first place. It has taken far too long for such a process to be implemented.

To that end, Rep. Jackson Lee offered an amendment at the Committee markup that would have put the onus on the legislation's newly-created Civil Liberties Protection Officer to create this program.⁹¹ The amendment also would have ensured that no-fly list criteria would be based on reliable evidence that an individual is a known or suspected terrorist instead of on constitutionally-protected activity. Finally, the amendment would have provided a civil remedy to enforce the removal process in court. Unfortunately, the Majority rejected these widespread concerns and defeated the amendment.⁹²

Another provision in the bill, section 3081, contains shortcomings similar to those in section 2173. It directs the Secretary of State to study the feasibility of creating a database recording the lifetime travel history of U.S. citizens and foreign nationals. This provision goes far beyond the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and unnecessarily intrudes on the privacy of Americans.

In its final report, the 9/11 Commission wrote, “Targeting travel is at least as powerful as a weapon against terrorists as targeting their money. The United States should combine terrorist travel intelligence, operations, and law enforcement in a strategy to intercept terrorists, find terrorist travel facilitators, and constrain terrorist mobility.⁹³ Note that the Commission recommended targeting terrorist travel—not creating a master database of the travel history of innocent Americans. Contrary to this recommendation, the program in H.R. 10 would generate a history of even non-terrorist travel.

We have two primary concerns, and the first is for the privacy of all who use our commercial air space. The Majority has not explained how having a record of every flight that every American has ever taken will reduce the terrorist threat.

Our second concern is that the program would collect information on everyone, regardless of whether they are a threat, or even suspicious, and the vast amount of data reflecting innocent behavior will obscure the truly threatening activity. As many advocacy groups have noted, refining the tracking process—not expanding it—will make preventing terrorist entry into the United States more efficient.⁹⁴

D. THE LEGISLATION FAILS TO ADEQUATELY CREATE A BOARD TO PROTECT CIVIL LIBERTIES

We also believe the legislation fails to establish a civil liberties board that could adequately protect our rights. Chief among the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission was the establishment of a government wide watchdog to safeguard civil liberties. The Commission found that currently “there is no office within the government whose job it is to look across the government at the actions we are taking to protect ourselves to ensure that liberty concerns are appropriately considered.”⁹⁵ The Commission recognized, however, that both “the substantial new powers [vested] in the investigative agencies of the government”⁹⁶ by the USA PATRIOT Act, as well as its own recommendations calling “for the government to increase its presence in our lives,”⁹⁷ require that “should be a voice within the executive branch”⁹⁸ to address civil liberties concerns.

Surprisingly, H.R. 10 as introduced did not create a government wide civil liberties board. Instead, the bill only designated a single civil liberties officer for the intelligence community. To remedy this flagrant omission, Rep. Watt, along with Reps. Nadler and Schiff, offered an amendment that would have established a strong, independent, bipartisan agency within the executive branch.⁹⁹ After hours of negotiation, the Chairman introduced a substitute amendment that represents the product of bipartisan compromise in all save one respect. The Chairman’s amendment stripped the proposed board of administrative subpoena power.¹⁰⁰

Although we believe that H.R. 10 as amended is improved by the establishment of a Civil Liberties Board, we are deeply concerned that without the necessary authority to receive and evaluate relevant data concerning the privacy and civil liberties implications of anti-terrorism efforts the Board will be nothing more than a toothless tiger. Even worse, we run the risk of not only creating a Board that is useless and ineffective, but one whose uninformed findings will nevertheless put forward the illusion of civil liberties oversight.

The need to ensure that a Civil Liberties Board possesses adequate authority to perform its duties is reflected in each major bill introduced to implement the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission. For example, the McCain/Lieberman bill, S. 2774, establishes a five-member Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight board within the Executive Office of the President (EOP).¹⁰¹ Similarly, S. 2845, the Collins/Lieberman bill also provides for the establishment of a five-member Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight board within the EOP. Both bills contain a provision authorizing the Board to issue a subpoena when necessary to carry out its duties.

The duties of a civil liberties board, as contemplated by the 9/11 Commission, makes access to information critical to its success. The civil liberties board is established to safeguard our constitutional freedoms as we develop new tools for gathering and sharing information to prevent and combat terrorism. In introducing S. 2774, Sen. McCain said:

All of us who are concerned with threats to this Nation’s security also wish to ensure that our efforts to protect Americans do not infringe on our civil liberties. After all, giving up the way of life we have fought so hard to defend ⁹⁷Id. at 393.

⁹⁸Id. at 395.

⁹⁹At the request of Chairman Sensenbrenner, Rep. Watt withdrew the amendment to negotiate the scope of the proposed Board’s powers and the parameters of its access to relevant information.

¹⁰⁰The authority to issue a subpoena in the Watt-Nadler-Schiff amendment is identical to that in S. 2774. The provision reads in pertinent part:

(g) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—

(1) AUTHORIZATION.—If determined by the Board to be necessary to carry out its responsibilities under this section, the Board may—

(D) require, by subpoena, persons other than Federal executive departments and agencies to produce any relevant information, documents, reports, answers, records, accounts, papers, and other documentary or testimonial evidence.

The Watt/Nadler/Schiff amendment imposed the additional requirement that subpoenas be issued only with the approval of a majority of the Board. A separate provision required voluntary compliance by Federal agencies with requests for information from the Board.

¹⁰¹The Shays/Maloney companion bill, H.R. 5040 was introduced in the House and referred to 10 committees.

is not an acceptable price for greater security. We must find a way to balance the two, and this is what this bill proposes to do. It creates a Privacy and Civil Liberties Board * * * to analyze * * * the enhanced security measures taken by our government and to ensure that civil liberties are appropriately considered as these policies are developed.¹⁰²

The enhanced security authority vested in our government in the aftermath of 9/11 is unprecedented and necessarily broad. Virtually every postmortem evaluation of the incidents leading up to the terrorists attacks on September 11, 2001 has identified improvement in the government's ability to share information as the most urgent task to combat and prevent acts of terrorism in the future.¹⁰³ As a result, key changes have been proposed and/or implemented to ease the flow of information among government entities at every level within the United States, the private sector, and certain foreign governments.¹⁰⁴ In addition, the 9/11 Commission also made recommendations that would expand collaboration with and among government and the private sector.

Interestingly, almost simultaneously with the markup of H.R. 10, a U.S. District Court judge found the FBI's use of a "national security letter" unconstitutional because it allows the FBI to demand customer information from Internet service providers without judicial oversight or public review. In the course of analyzing the constitutionality of the FBI's use of a national security letter ("NSL"), the court distinguished between NSL's and administrative subpoenas. "Ordinary administrative subpoenas," the court observed, "may be issued by most federal agencies, as authorized by the hundreds of applicable statutes in federal law."¹⁰⁵ But, "[u]nlike the NSL statutes, most administrative subpoena laws either contain no ¹⁰⁴ Several of the provisions in the USA PATRIOT Act that are set to expire next year implicate privacy interests and civil liberties. For example, subsection 203(b) grants law enforcement officials authority to share electronic, wire, and oral interception information with intelligence, protective, immigration, national defense and national security officials. Subsection 203(d) allows the sharing of foreign intelligence and counterintelligence information as well. Others ease the burden on government to acquire personal information in the first instance. For example, section 209 relaxes the standard required by some courts prior to 9/11 for seizing voice mail messages. By treating voice mail like e-mail, section 209 permits its seizure by search warrant as opposed to the more demanding wiretap order previously held to apply. Similarly, sections 212 and 217 permit easier government access to electronic communications with the assistance of service providers.

For example, existing programs designed in whole or in part to target terrorist travel include the Terrorism Information Awareness (TIA), the Computer Assisted Passenger Prescreening System (CAPPs), the Multi-State Anti-Terrorism Information Exchange (MATRIX) Pilot Project, and the United States Visitor and Immigrant Status Indicator Technology program (US-VISIT). A recent Congressional Research Service report notes that "[t]hese programs necessarily require enhanced information sharing by government agencies and the private sector, and are designed to assist the information needs of intelligence and national security. * * * [Nevertheless, while the benefits from the use of advanced technologies for antiterrorism efforts are clear, the risks to individual privacy and the potential for abuse and harm to individual liberty by Government officials and employees deploying such technologies are equally established." ¹⁰⁵ Doe v. Ashcroft, 2004 WL 2185571 (S.D.N.Y.) (Sept. 28, 2004), at 8. "For example, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) may issue subpoenas to investigate possible violations of the tax code, and the Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) may issue subpoenas to investigate possible violations of the securities laws. More obscure examples include the Secretary of Commerce power to issue subpoenas in investigating and enforcing halibut fishing laws." Id. (citations omitted).

provision requiring secrecy, or allow only limited secrecy in special cases.”¹⁰⁶

Thus, at the same time a court determined that the government’s use of information gathering tools unconstitutionally encroaches on the Bill of Rights, this Committee denies the civil liberties watchdog authority to obtain relevant information from those to whom such substantial power has been vested. This approach is flawed for several reasons. First and most important, one need only look to the experience of the very Commission from which the recommendation to establish a civil liberties board emanates; simply put, without its subpoena powers, which extended to the federal government, the 9/11 Commission could not have accomplished its charge.¹⁰⁷

Second, on August 27, 2004, the President issued Executive Order 13353, establishing the “President’s Board on Safeguarding Americans’ Civil Liberties.” The E.O. 13353 board clearly is an advisory board designed to assist the President and his Administration in developing and implementing homeland security functions that may have an impact on civil liberties. The board consists exclusively of Administration insiders and, while admirable, cannot perform the vitally important task of the government wide civil liberties board as conceived by the 9/11 Commission. Yet, the Executive Order authorizes the President’s board to “obtain information and advice relating to the Policy from representatives of entities or individuals outside the executive branch of the Federal Government.” Moreover, the Executive Order expressly authorizes the Board to “establish one or more committees that include individuals from outside the executive branch of the Federal Government * * * to advise the Board on specific issues * * * [and] carry out its functions separately from the Board.” Ironically, H.R. 10 as amended establishes a civil liberties board that has no designated authority to obtain any information from any person or entity outside the federal government. As such, the President’s advisory board has broader authority to obtain information from the private sector than the civil liberties board.

Finally, while Congress must ensure that the executive branch has the tools and resources necessary to protect the American people from further terrorists attacks, we must also ensure that the constitutional rights and liberties of all persons in the United States are not violated. The creation of a strong, oversight board consistent with that proposed by the 9/11 Commission will go a long way in safeguarding those liberties. The new relationships that will be and have been forged between government and the private sector require parallel oversight authority to ensure that those relationships are properly tailored to reconcile the security of our nation and the liberty of our citizens. We believe that there must be a mechanism in place that permits the civil liberties board to exist as an effective check and balance. The administrative subpoena is essential to fulfill this objective.

III. THE LEGISLATION CONTAINS CIVIL LIABILITY PROVISIONS THAT WOULD HARM TERROR VICTIMS AND FAIL TO ENHANCE SECURITY

We also are concerned that the legislation contains numerous civil liability measures that would do little, if anything, to enhance our security; their only effect would be to diminish the rights of terror victims. Section 5103 allows states and localities to enter into litigation management agreements to handle all claims arising out of, relating to, or resulting from an act of terrorism. These agreements provide for a federal cause of action for claims against emergency response providers, and the federal court is to apply the law, including the choice of law principles, of the state in which the terrorist act occurred. This would be an acceptable response to terrorism-related injuries if the drafters had stopped there. Unfortunately, section 5103 overreaches by going outside the scope of the 9/11 Commission report to protect bad actors.

First, section 5103, contrary to other immunity protections given to volunteers, protects emergency responders for intentional bad acts. Although language in this section specifically states that it does not apply to any person or government entity that knowingly commits either an act of terrorism or a criminal act related to or resulting from an act of terrorism, the bill's liability restrictions would apply to persons who commit intentional torts. For example, a nurse who decides that a victim's injuries are so serious that the patient would be better off dead than alive would be immune from liability if she deliberately administered a drug into an intravenous line that killed the victim. Similarly, an emergency responder who commits a hate crime or crime of violence in the immediate aftermath of a terrorist attack would face no accountability for her actions. Finally, if a firefighter or police officer responding to an emergency while intoxicated strikes and kills a pedestrian en route, this bill would insulate him from liability.

The House consistently has rejected giving protections to intentional bad actors¹⁰⁸ and that policy should not be abdicated just because an act of terrorism is involved. Most, if not all, intentional misconduct is criminal. To exempt criminal misconduct caused by terrorism from the scope of the bill's protection, but not other criminal misconduct, such as assault, battery, or vehicular homicide, is unprecedented and simply bad policy.

For example, just because a terrorist act occurred does not mean that responders should get away with reckless or intentional misconduct that causes injury, such as if a paramedic responding to a terrorism emergency recklessly gives a patient a drug to which the patient is allergic even though the patient is wearing a medical alert bracelet stating the allergy. In the case of an emergency room physician treating the pelvic injuries of a pregnant woman injured during a terrorist attack, the physician could sterilize her without her permission and be immune from punitive damages. The mere fact that an emergency worker is responding to an act of terrorism does not mean that the responder is entitled to commit criminal acts that jeopardize public safety and health.¹⁰⁹

The legislation aggravates this problem by reducing the compensation victims could recover. It first eliminates punitive damages. Although rarely awarded, punitive damages punish the wrongdoer for conscious, flagrant disregard for the health and safety of others and deter other bad actors from committing future bad acts. In the area of emergency medicine, emergency response personnel could be subject to punitive damages for intentionally failing to respond to an emergency, assaulting or sexually abusing a victim, or other criminal acts, including civil rights violations. It is very important to hold wrongdoers who act with the intention to harm accountable for the injuries that they cause. By both including intentional torts in the scope of these litigation management agreements and simultaneously eliminating the possibility of punitive damages, section 5103 delivers a one-two punch that makes it difficult, if not impossible, to deter criminal misconduct and ensure public safety.

The bill further contains a collateral source provision also designed to reduce compensation.¹¹⁰ Essentially, this language would allow the wrongdoers to benefit from a victim's prudent investment of insurance. Why should a victim's health or life insurer pay for the victim's injuries before the wrongdoer pays even a dime? And, is it fair for the victim's employer to pay unemployment or disability benefits before the wrongdoer is held accountable? Wrongdoers should not profit from a victim's preparedness in planning for the unforeseen, and the wrongdoer should not be the last to be held responsible for a victim's injuries.

Indeed, it is somewhat shocking that this bill would require everyone other than the wrongdoer to pay for a victim's injuries. Under this language, one could even have the preposterous result of having the collateral sources—such as the victim's health insurer and the victim's employer—paying the entire amount of damages owed while the wrongdoer pays nothing. Similarly, this provision would shift the burden from the wrongdoer to the government if the victim receives Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security disability or retirement benefits, or any other type of government support. The Majority rejected Minority efforts to protect the rights of victims to be fully compensated for their injuries.¹¹¹

The bill would appear to unconstitutionally extend tort immunity to non-governmental entities, giving private emergency response personnel, including private hospitals and their employees, liability protections.¹¹² Interpreting the Eleventh Amendment to the Con-

¹⁰⁹ During the markup, Rep. Watt (D-NC) offered an amendment to remove intentional torts from the scope of section 5103 in order to keep this bill consistent with other measure providing liability protections. The Majority rejected the amendment by a vote of 12-19.

¹¹⁰ Section 5103 states that "any recovery by a plaintiff * * * shall be reduced by the amount of collateral source compensation * * * that a plaintiff has received or its entitled to receive as a result of * * * [an] act[] of terrorism.

¹¹¹ An amendment by Rep. Bobby Scott (D-VA) to strike the punitive damage exception and the collateral source rule was defeated by a vote of 12-19.

¹¹² Under section 5104, the definition of "emergency response provider" permits private, non-governmental entities to be parties to a litigation management agreement and thus receive the same liability protections as state or local government actors.

stitution, the Supreme Court has consistently held that the immunity given to federal and state governments cannot be easily transferred to private, non-governmental actors. Extending such protection is subject to the principle of the Court's "state-action doctrine" (as well as the collateral doctrine of "federal action").¹¹³ Under the state-action doctrine, private entities must be actively supervised by the "state" in order for sovereign immunity to attach; it is not enough for a private actor, such as a private hospital or emergency room employee, to be certified or licensed by the state. In this case, the bill fails to ensure that only adequately supervised private entities receive immunity. Even though the immunity protection provided in H.R. 10 to private actors are thus unconstitutional, the Majority defeated an attempt to strike it.¹¹⁴

Unfortunately, the Majority rejected every attempt to correct the flaws in the litigation reform provisions of H.R. 10. Taken together, these provisions will have no effect in reducing the Nation's susceptibility to terrorism; they do not secure our ports or make it easier to detain terrorists. These tort reform measures illustrate clearly the overreach of the Majority's so-called "9/11 Commission Recommendations Implementation Act;" the 9/11 Commission did not call for tort reform and neither should we.

CONCLUSION

The attacks of September 11 were tragic events that brought the Nation together. Members of Congress stood shoulder to shoulder on the steps on the Capitol singing "God Bless America." Democrats in Congress united behind the President's efforts in the war on terror. This Committee worked together to craft a version of the USA PATRIOT Act that passed unanimously.

Unfortunately, where some saw an opportunity for national unity, others saw the opportunity for partisan political gain. Despite widespread public and congressional support for the unanimous and bipartisan recommendations of the 9/11 Commission, the Republican leadership authored legislation that would subject persons to torture, eliminate the judicial review of executive branch actions, permit government intrusion into our daily lives, and divert compensation away from terror victims. Congress owes the American people better than this. For these reasons, we dissent.

These cases illustrated the point in the context of Sherman Act antitrust suits. The Court examined whether private actors were acting as "the state" to a point sufficient to make their anti-competitive conduct immune from the Sherman Act. Applying the above test, the Court determined that because the State was not actively involved in closely supervising the activities of the private actor, that actor could not be immune from federal law.

ADDITIONAL DISSENTING VIEWS

We dissent from H.R. 10 because we also believe the legislation demonstrably fails to provide the needed resources to combat and respond to terrorism.

The 9/11 Commission could not have been any more clear about how homeland security assistance should be allocated: “Federal homeland security assistance should not remain a program for general revenue sharing. It should supplement state and local resources based on the risks or vulnerabilities that merit additional support. Congress should not use this money as a pork barrel.”

After September 11th, the Bush administration set up two major programs to provide funding for local law enforcement agencies working to provide homeland security. The first of these programs, established for fiscal year 2003, is the State Homeland Security Grant program. In direct contradiction of the 9/11 Commission’s recommendation, 40% of these funds are distributed to states as “minimum guarantees.” The remainder is distributed not on the basis of threat, as recommended by the Commission, but rather on the basis of population. And just as the Commission complained, the result is that funding is not targeted to places like New York, Washington, Los Angeles, and other areas desperate for assistance.

Because the State Homeland Security Grant Program does not distribute money on the basis of threat, Congress set up a separate stream of homeland security funding for local law enforcement targeted directly for urban areas. Originally called the “high threat, high density” program, and later entitled, the “Urban Area Security Initiative,” UASI provides funding based on a formula kept largely secret by the Department of Homeland Security. But because the Department of Homeland Security has decided to open up the program to more and more localities—initially only seven cities were eligible; at last count 80 cities and transportation agencies were receiving UASI funds—allocations for jurisdictions at the greatest risk have been shortchanged again.

H.R. 3266, the bill written by the Select Committee on Homeland Security, took important strides in implementing the 9/11 Commission’s recommendations. It combined the two existing programs, eliminated the minimum guarantee, and ensured that funding would be distributed exclusively on the basis of threat. Incorporated as a part of the Republican 9/11 bill, H.R. 10, the Judiciary Committee veered away from the Commission’s recommendations, even as Democrats made substantive improvements to the bill.

Committee Democrats made the following improvements:

Terrorism Cops eligible for funds. Under an amendment crafted by Rep. Anthony Weiner, Rep. Jerrold Nadler, and Rep. Nita Lowey, jurisdictions will be eligible to apply for federal funds to cover the salaries of police officers whose work is devoted exclusively to counterterrorism and intelligence.

Past expenditures eligible for funds. Under an amendment authored by Rep. Anthony Weiner and Rep. Jerrold Nadler, jurisdictions will be eligible to apply for federal funds to recoup past homeland security expenditures not already covered by the federal government.

Threat funding follows the threat. Under an amendment offered previously by Rep. Weiner and Rep. Nadler and included in the bill, the Department of Homeland Security will place the greatest emphasis on threat when disbursing homeland security funds. The current formula weighs population and infrastructure more heavily than threat, helping places like Wyoming, but hurting New York City.

Fake police badges loophole closed. An amendment offered by Rep. Weiner closed a loophole in the law that bans the use and sale of fake police badges. Previous law allowed exceptions for people who used badges for “decorative” or “recreational” purposes. Rep. Weiner’s amendment will strip those loopholes from the law.

Additionally, Democrats were able to include language that authorizes the C.O.P.S. program. Like legislation included in this year’s Department of Justice Reauthorization Bill, an amendment by Rep. Weiner reauthorizes the C.O.P.S. program through 2007, including language that would allow COPS funding to be used to pay for officers involved in religious, anti terror, or homeland security duties.

Unfortunately, committee Republicans insisted on deviating from the 9/11 Commission’s recommendation. Despite Chairman Cox’s best efforts to reign in his colleagues, Republicans have boosted the minimum guarantee states receive to .25 for all states, and .45 for all states with an international border. Committee Republicans defeated an amendment by Rep. Nadler to return to the Commission’s recommendation by striking the minimum. And then, in an effort simply to guarantee that high risk areas getting the funding they need, Rep. Weiner offered an amendment to add a minimum guarantee of 8.5%—as much as $289 million under the authorization included in the original Cox bill—for jurisdictions like New York that “are consistently referenced in intelligence information as a terrorism target, or have previously been the site of more than one terrorism attack.” That too was defeated by the committee Republicans.
