Mr. EHLERS, from the Committee on House Administration, submitted the following

R E P O R T

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COMMITTEE

The Committee was created on January 2, 1947 as part of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946. This Act combined the Committee on Accounts, Enrolled Bills, Disposition of Executive Papers, Printing, Elections, Election of the President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress, and Memorials. Between January 2, 1947 and January 4, 1995, the jurisdiction of the Committee was amended to include the House Restaurant System, parking facilities, House Beauty Shop, campaign contributions to candidates for the House, resolutions authorizing committees to employ additional professional and clerical personnel, and the Committee's shared jurisdiction with the Post Office and Civil Service Committee on matters relating to compensation, retirement and other benefits of Members, officers and employees of Congress.

The Rules of the House of Representatives for the 104th Congress expanded the Committee responsibility for authorizing payment of expenses including all staff salaries for any committee, commission, or other entity (except the Committee on Appropriations) for each Congress. The Committee's jurisdiction was also broadened to include the Franking Commission. Responsibility for erection of monuments to the memory of individuals was transferred to the Committee on Resources.

In addition, a provision was added which requires joint approval by the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Committee concerning the amount of funds to be paid before a House employing office may enter a settlement of a complaint under the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (CAA) that provides for such a payment. The CAA assigns to the Committee responsibility for oversight of the Office of Compliance and the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance (section 301(i) of Public Law 104–1; 2 U.S.C. 1381(i)).

COMMITTEE JURISDICTION

The Committee on House Administration is a standing committee of the House of Representatives. The powers and duties of the Committee include the statutory responsibilities as determined primarily by the Legislative Reorganization Acts of 1946 (Public Law 79–601) and 1970 (Public Law 91–510); the House of Representatives Administrative Reform Technical Corrections Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–186); and the Rules of the House of Representatives adopted on January 4, 2005. The Committee on House Administration, which consists of 9 members, has jurisdiction and related functions assigned by clauses 1, 2, and 4 of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives; and all bills, resolutions, and other matters relating to the following subjects shall be referred to the Committee:

1. Appropriations from accounts for committee salaries and expenses (except for the Committee on Appropriations), House Information Resources, and allowances and expenses of Members, House Officers and administrative offices of the House.
2. Auditing and settling of all accounts described in subparagraph (1).
3. Employment of persons by the House, including clerks for Members and committees, and recorders.
4. Except as provided in Rule X, clause 1(q)(11), matters relating to the Library of Congress and the House Library; statuary and pictures; acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol; the Botanic Gardens; management of the Library of Congress; purchase of books and manuscripts.
5. Except as provided in Rule X, clause 1(q)(11), matters relating to the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions.
6. Expenditures of accounts described in subparagraph (1).
7. Franking Commission.
8. Matters relating to printing and correction of the Congressional Record.
9. Measures relating to accounts of the House generally.
10. Measures relating to assignment of office space for Members and committees.
11. Measures relating to the disposition of useless executive papers.
12. Measures relating to the election of the President, Vice President, or Members of Congress; corrupt practices; contested elections; credentials and qualifications; and Federal elections generally.
13. Measures relating to services to the House, including the House Restaurant, parking facilities and administration of the House Office Buildings and the House wing of the Capitol.
14. Measures relating to the travel of Members of the House.
15. Measures relating to the raising, reporting and use of campaign contributions for candidates for office of Representative in the House of Representatives, or Delegate, and of Resident Commissioner to the United States from Puerto Rico.

16. Measures relating to the compensation, retirement and other benefits of the Members, officers, and employees of the Congress.

In addition to its legislative jurisdiction under the preceding provisions (and its general oversight function) the Committee has the function of:

1. Rule X, clause 4(d) (1)—Providing oversight of the Clerk, Sergeant-at-Arms, Chief Administrative Officer, and oversight and policy direction for the Inspector General.

Finally, the Committee has privilege to report at any time on contested elections and all matters referred to it of printing for the use of the House or the two Houses, and on all matters of expenditure of the applicable accounts of the House and on all matters relating to preservation and availability of non-current records of the House.

INTRODUCTION

COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION

BRIEF HISTORY

The Committee on House Administration is distinguished by its exercise not only of legislative and oversight functions, but also of extensive responsibility to regulate the day-to-day management of internal support and operations of the House. The vital character of the Committee's activities is reflected in the broad scope of its authorities, which give it responsibility for most internal fiscal and administrative functions of the chamber.

In the elections of 1994, Republicans took majority control of the House for the first time since 1955, and instituted a sharp break with past House administrative practices. Signaling recognition of the Committee's important role, the new majority party placed authority to name Members of the committee in the hands of its leadership rather than election by the party conference.

Upon the transfer to Republican leadership in 1995, the Committee also conducted an exhaustive survey of public laws applicable to itself, House officers, and administrative functions. This effort culminated in the August 1996 enactment of the House of Representatives Administrative Reform Technical Corrections Act, which clarified, changed, or repealed more than 250 ambiguous or unnecessary statutes.

Additionally, the Committee commissioned an independent audit of all House accounts by Price Waterhouse Coopers (PWC) in 1995. The audit revealed deficiencies in House financial management including disorganized record keeping and inadequate attention to costs. A series of more limited audits of House accounts was carried out over the next six years and continues to this day by the House Inspector General.

On the basis of the findings of those audits, the Committee developed policies implementing extensive financial and accounting management systems. A follow-up audit by PWC in 1999 found significant improvements in House accounts record keeping, and the company pronounced the new financial management practices instituted under the Committee's oversight in keeping with standard accounting practices.

The Committee has also made great strides in making Congress more accessible to the American people. By working with Speaker Hastert, the Senate, and the Congressional Research Service, the Committee has instituted a variety of internal reforms that have ushered the digital age into the House. These measures have proven to be vital resources for Members, staff and the American people.

After providing indispensable leadership in crafting and securing the enactment of the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA) during the 107th Congress, Chairman Ney continued to focus on important election reform matters during the 108th Congress, especially in his efforts to ensure that HAVA was properly implemented and adequately funded. The Chairman's tireless efforts resulted in over $3 billion in election reform funds being appropriated during the most recent Congress. The Chairman also conducted numerous oversight hearings on election-related matters, including the issue of electronic voting system security and the operation of the Election Assistance Commission, to make sure that Congress remained informed about how HAVA was working on the state and local levels.

The Committee on House Administration's oversight role includes physical security, information security, and emergency preparedness for the House and Capitol complex, as well as oversight of the House Officers as they perform their duties related to these issues. The events of September 11, 2001 brought about a renewed focus and emphasis on issues of security. The actions of the Committee on House Administration after September 11th have emphasized life safety and the protection of the House of Representatives as an institution. The Committee has been actively and consistently engaged in new security measures in the Capitol building and the surrounding House Office Buildings. The Committee's efforts have focused attention on both preparedness and security. As part of these efforts, the Committee has overseen the deployment and exploration of new technologies, and has accelerated efforts to ensure the continuity of legislative and constituent service operations. In its oversight capacity, the Committee on House Administration has worked closely with the Sergeant at Arms, Chief Administrative Officer, the Inspector General and the Clerk of the House on issues of emergency preparedness, business continuity, and security.

The Committee has overseen the continuing efforts of the United States Capitol Police to secure the Capitol complex, while working to maintain open access to the Capitol and House Office Buildings for all citizens and visitors. The committee has focused its oversight on the mitigation of threats from terrorist organizations and has approved the installation of security technologies to extend the law enforcement and threat deterrent capabilities of the Capitol Police. Additionally, the Committee has monitored efforts to attract and retain highly qualified police personnel and has worked to insure that all Capitol Police officers are properly trained.

109TH CONGRESS OVERSIGHT PLAN
