Subtitle A—Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2008

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.
This subtitle may be cited as the “Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2008”.

SEC. 102. FINDINGS.
Congress finds the following:

(1) In a time of international terrorist threats and a dynamic global economic and security environment, United States policy with regard to export controls is in urgent need of a comprehensive review in order to ensure such controls are protecting the national security and foreign policy interests of the United States.

(2) In January 2007, the Government Accountability Office designated the effective identification and protection of critical technologies as a government-wide, high-risk area, warranting a strategic reexamination of existing programs, including programs relating to arms export controls.

(3) Federal Government agencies must review licenses for export of munitions in a thorough and timely manner to ensure that the United States is able to assist United States allies and to prevent nuclear and conventional weapons from getting into the hands of enemies of the United States.

(4) Both staffing and funding that relate to the Department of State’s arms export control responsibilities have not kept pace with the increased workload relating to such responsibilities, especially over the last five years.

(5) Outsourcing and off-shoring of defense production and the policy of many United States trading partners to require offsets for major sales of defense and aerospace articles present a potential threat to United States national security and economic well-being and serve to weaken the defense industrial base.

(6) Export control policies can have a negative impact on United States employment, nonproliferation goals, and the health of the defense industrial base, particularly when facilitating the overseas transfer of technology or production and other forms of outsourcing, such as offsets (direct and indirect), co-production, subcontracts, overseas investment and joint ventures in defense and commercial industries. Federal Government agencies must develop new and effective procedures for ensuring that export control systems address these problems and the threat they pose to national security.

(7) In the report to Congress required by the Conference Report (Report 109–272) accompanying the bill, H.R. 2862 (the Science, State, Justice, Commerce and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2006; Public Law 109–108), the Department of State concluded that—

(A) defense trade licensing has become much more complex in recent years as a consequence of the increasing globalization of the defense industry;

(B) the most important challenge to the Department of State’s licensing process has been the sheer growth in volume of applicants for licenses and agreements, without the corresponding increase in licensing officers;

(C) fiscal year 2005 marked the third straight year of roughly 8 percent annual increases in licensing volume;

(D) although an 8 percent increase in workload equates to a requirement for three additional licensing officers per year, there has been no increase in licensing officers during this period; and

(E) the increase in licensing volume without a corresponding increase in trained and experienced personnel has resulted in delays and increased processing times.

(8) In 2006, the Department of State processed over three times as many licensing applications as the Department of Commerce with about a fifth of the staff of the Department of Commerce.

(9) On July 27, 2007, in testimony delivered to the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Nonproliferation and Trade of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs to examine the effectiveness of the United States export control regime, the Government Accountability Office found that—
(A) the United States Government needs to conduct assessments to determine its overall effectiveness in the area of arms export control; and
(B) the processing times of the Department of State doubled over the period from 2002 to 2006.
(10) Although the current number of unprocessed applications for licenses to export defense items is less than 3,800 applications, due to the extraordinary efforts of the personnel and management of the Department of State’s Directorate of Defense Trade Controls, at the end of 2006, the Department of State’s backlog of such unprocessed applications reached its highest level at more than 10,000 unprocessed applications. This resulted in major management and personnel challenges for the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls.
(11)(A) Allowing a continuation of the status quo in resources for defense trade licensing could ultimately harm the United States defense industrial base. The 2007 Institute for Defense Analysis report entitled “Export Controls and the U.S. Defense Industrial Base” found that the large backlog and long processing times by the Department of State for applications for licenses to export defense items led to an impairment of United States firms in some sectors to conduct global business relative to foreign competitors.
(B) Additionally, the report found that United States commercial firms have been reluctant to engage in research and development activities for the Department of Defense because this raises the future prospects that the products based on this research and development, even if intrinsically commercial, will be saddled by Department of State munitions controls due to the link to that research.
(12) According to the Department of State’s fiscal year 2008 budget justification to Congress, commercial exports licensed or approved under the Arms Export Control Act exceeded $30,000,000,000, with nearly eighty percent of these items exported to United States NATO allies and other major non-NATO allies.
(13) A Government Accountability Office report of October 9, 2001 (GAO–02–120), documented ambiguous export control jurisdiction affecting 25 percent of the items that the United States Government agreed to control as part of its commitments to the Missile Technology Control Regime. The United States Government has not clearly determined which department has jurisdiction over these items, which increases the risk that these items will fall into the wrong hands. During both the 108th and 109th Congresses, the House of Representatives passed legislation mandating that the Administration clarify this issue.
SEC. 103. STRATEGIC REVIEW AND ASSESSMENT OF THE UNITED STATES EXPORT CONTROLS SYSTEM.
(a) REVIEW AND ASSESSMENT.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2009, the President shall conduct a comprehensive and systematic review and assessment of the United States arms export controls system in the context of the national security interests and strategic foreign policy objectives of the United States.
(2) ELEMENTS.—The review and assessment required under paragraph (1) shall—
(A) determine the overall effectiveness of the United States arms export controls system in order to, where appropriate, strengthen controls, improve efficiency, and reduce unnecessary redundancies across Federal Government agencies, through administrative actions, including regulations, and to formulate legislative proposals for new authorities that are needed;
(B) develop processes to ensure better coordination of arms export control activities of the Department of State with activities of other departments and agencies of the United States that are responsible for enforcing United States arms export control laws;
(C) ensure that all items on the Missile Technology Control Regime Annex are subject to stringent control by the United States Government;
(D) determine the overall effect of arms export controls on counterterrorism, law enforcement, and infrastructure protection missions of the Department of Homeland Security;
(E) contain a detailed summary of known attempts by unauthorized end-users (such as international arms traffickers, foreign intelligence agencies, and foreign terrorist organizations) to acquire items on the United States Munitions List, including—
(i) data on—
(I) commodities sought, such as M–4 rifles, night vision devices, F–14 spare parts;
(II) parties involved, such as the intended end-users, brokers, consignees, and shippers;
(III) destination countries and transit countries;
modes of transport;
(V) trafficking methods, such as use of false documentation and front companies registered under flags of convenience;
(VI) whether the attempted illicit transfer was successful; and
(VII) any administrative or criminal enforcement actions taken by the United States and any other government in relation to the attempted illicit transfer;
(ii) a thorough evaluation of the Blue Lantern Program, including the adequacy of current staffing and funding levels;
(iii) a detailed analysis of licensing exemptions and their successful exploitation by unauthorized end-users; and (iv) an examination of the extent to which the increased tendency toward outsourcing and off-shoring of defense production harm United States national security and weaken the defense industrial base, including direct and indirect impact on employment, and formulate policies to address these trends as well as the policy of some United States trading partners to require offsets for major sales of defense articles; and
(F) assess the extent to which export control policies and practices under the Arms Export Control Act promote the protection of basic human rights.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL BRIEFINGS.—The President shall provide periodic briefings to the appropriate congressional committees on the progress of the review and assessment conducted under subsection (a). The requirement to provide congressional briefings under this subsection shall terminate on the date on which the President transmits to the appropriate congressional committees the report required under subsection (c).

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains the results of the review and assessment conducted under subsection (a). The report required by this subsection shall contain a certification that the requirement of subsection (a)(2)(C) has been met, or if the requirement has not been met, the reasons therefor. The report required by this subsection shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may contain a classified annex, if necessary.

SEC. 104. PERFORMANCE GOALS FOR PROCESSING OF APPLICATIONS FOR LICENSES TO EX-PORT ITEMS ON USML.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of State, acting through the head of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State, shall establish the following goals:

1. The processing time for review of each application for a license to export items on the United States Munitions List (other than applications for approval of agreements under part 124 of title 22, Code of Federal Regulations (or successor regulations)) shall be not more than 60 days from the date of receipt of the application.
2. The processing time for review of each application for a commodity jurisdiction determination shall be not more than 60 days from the date of receipt of the application.
3. The total number of applications described in paragraph (1) that are unprocessed shall be not more than 7 percent of the total number of such applications submitted in the preceding calendar year.

(b) ADDITIONAL REVIEW.—(1) If an application described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) is not processed within the time period described in the respective paragraph of such subsection, then the Managing Director of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls or the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Defense Trade and Regeonial Security of the Department of State, as appropriate, shall review the status of the application to determine if further action is required to process the application.

2. If an application described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a) is not proc-gessed within 90 days from the date of receipt of the application, then the Assistant Secretary for Political-Military Affairs of the Department of State shall—
A. review the status of the application to determine if further action is required to process the application; and
B. submit to the appropriate congressional committees a notification of the review conducted under subparagraph (A), including a description of the application, the reason for delay in processing the application, and a proposal for further action to process the application.

3. For each calendar year, the Managing Director of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls shall review not less than 2 percent of the total number of applications described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) to ensure that the processing of such applications, including decisions to approve, deny, or return without action, is consistent with both policy and regulatory requirements of the Department of State.

(c) UNITED STATES ALLIES.—Congress states that—

(1) it shall be the policy of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls of the Department of State to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, the processing time for review of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to export items that are not subject to the requirements of section 36(b) or (c) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2776(b) or (c)) to United States allies in direct support of combat operations or peacekeeping or humanitarian operations with United States Armed Forces is not more than 7 days from the date of receipt of the application; and

(2) it shall be the goal, as appropriate, of the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls to ensure that, to the maximum extent practicable, the processing time for review of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to export items that are not subject to the requirements of section 36(b) or (c) of the Arms Export Control Act to government security agencies of United States NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, Israel, and, as appropriate, other major non-NATO allies for any purpose other than the purpose described in paragraph (1) is not more than 30 days from the date of receipt of the application.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2010, and December 31, 2011, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report that contains a detailed description of—

(1)(A) the average processing time for and number of applications described in subsection (a)(1) to—

(i) United States NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, and Israel;

(e) CONGRESSIONAL BRIEFINGS.—If, at the end of any month beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act, the total number of applications described in subsection (a)(1) that are unprocessed is more than 7 percent of the total number of such applications submitted in the preceding calendar year, then the Secretary of State, acting through the Under Secretary for Arms Control and International Security, the Assistant Secretary for Political-Military Affairs, or the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Defense Trade and Regional Security of the Department of State, as appropriate, shall brief the appropriate congressional committees on such matters and the corrective measures that the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls will take to comply with the requirements of subsection (a).

(f) TRANSPARENCY OF COMMODITY JURISDICTION DETERMINATIONS.—

(1) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—Congress declares that the complete confidentiality surrounding several hundred commodity jurisdiction determinations made each year by the Department of State pursuant to the International Traffic in Arms Regulations is not necessary to protect legitimate proprietary interests of persons or their prices and customers, is not in the best security and foreign policy interests of the United States, is inconsistent with the need to ensure a level playing field for United States exporters, and detracts from United States efforts to promote greater transparency and responsibility by other countries in their export control systems.

(2) PUBLICATION ON INTERNET WEBSITE.—The Secretary of State shall—

(A) upon making a commodity jurisdiction determination referred to in paragraph (1) publish on the Internet website of the Department of State not later than 30 days after the date of the determination—

(ii) a brief general description of the item; and

(iii) the model or part number of the item; and

(II) the names of the customers, the price of the item, and any proprietary information relating to the item indicated by the person or business organization that sought the commodity jurisdiction determination shall not be published; and

(B) maintain on the Internet website of the Department of State an archive, that is accessible to the general public and other departments and agencies of the United States, of the information published under subparagraph (A).

(g) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the President or Congress from undertaking a thorough review of the national security and foreign policy implications of a proposed export of items on the United States Munitions List.

A special licensing authorization issued pursuant to this clause shall be effective for a period not to exceed 5 years.

“(B) An authorization may be issued under subparagraph (A) only if the applicable government of the country described in subparagraph (A), acting through the applicant for the authorization, certifies that—“(i) the export of spare and replacement parts or components supports a defense item previously lawfully exported;

“(ii) the spare and replacement parts or components will be transferred to a defense agency of a country described in subparagraph (A) that is a previously approved end-user of the defense items and not to a distributor or a foreign consignee of such defense items;

SEC. 111. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(A) the advice provided to the Secretary of State by the Defense Trade Advisory Group (DTAG) supports the regulation of defense trade and helps ensure that United States national security and foreign policy interests continue to be protected and advanced while helping to reduce unnecessary impediments to legitimate exports in order to support the defense requirements of United States friends and allies; and

(B) therefore, the Secretary of State should share significant planned rules and policy shifts with DTAG for comment; and recognizing the constraints imposed on the Department of State by the nature of a voluntary organization such as DTAG, the Secretary of State is encouraged to ensure that members of DTAG are drawn from a representative cross-section of subject matter experts from the United States defense industry, relevant trade and labor associations, academic, and foundation personnel.

(b) TYPES OF CAPACITY-BUILDING.—The program authorized under subsection (a) may include the provision of equipment, supplies, and training.

(c) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) ANNUAL FUNDING LIMITATION.—The Secretary of State may use up to $25,000,000 of funds available under the Foreign Military Financing program for each of the fiscal years 2009 and 2010 to conduct the program authorized under subsection (a).

(2) SPECIFIED CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—The congressional committees specified in this paragraph are the following:

(A) The Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(B) The Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

SEC. 402. MAINTENANCE OF EUROPEAN UNION ARMS EMBARGO AGAINST CHINA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Congress has previously expressed its strong concerns in House Resolution 57 of February 2, 2005, and Senate Resolution 91 of March 17, 2005, with the transfer of armaments and related technology to the People’s Republic of China by member states of the European Union, which increased eightfold from 2001 to 2003, and with plans to terminate in the near future the arms embargo they imposed in 1989 following the Tiananmen Square massacre.

(2) The deferral of a decision by the European Council to terminate its arms embargo following adoption of the resolutions specified in paragraph (1), the visit by the President of the United States to Europe, and growing concern among countries in the regions and the general public on both sides of the Atlantic, was welcomed by the Congress.

(3) The decision by the European Parliament on April 14, 2005, by a vote of 421 to 85, to oppose the lifting of the European Union’s arms embargo on the People’s Republic of China, and resolutions issued by a number of elected parliamentary bodies in Europe also opposing the lifting of the arms embargo, was also welcomed by the Congress as a reassurance that its European friends and allies understood the gravity of prematurely lifting the embargo.

(4) The onset of a strategic dialogue between the European Commission and the Government of the United States on the security situation in East Asia holds out the hope that a greater understanding will emerge of the consequences of European assistance to the military buildup of the People’s Republic of China for peace and stability in that region, to the security interests of the United States and its friends and allies in the region, and, in particular, to the safety of United States Armed Forces whose presence in the region has been a decisive factor in ensuring peace and prosperity since the end of World War II.

(5) A more intensive dialogue with Europe on this matter will clarify for United States’ friends and allies in Europe how their “non-lethal” arms transfers improve the force projection of the People’s Republic of China, are far from benign, and enhance the prospects for the threat or use of force in resolving the status of Taiwan.

(6) This dialogue may result in an important new consensus between the United States and its European partners on the need for coordinated policies that encourage the development of democracy in the People’s Republic of China and which discourage, not assist, China’s unjustified military buildup and pursuit of weapons that threaten its neighbors.

(7) However, the statement by the President of France in Beijing in November 2007 that the European Union arms embargo should be lifted is troubling, especially since France will assume the six-month presidency of the European Union in July 2008.

(8) There continues to be wide-spread concerns regarding the lack of any significant progress by the Government of the People’s Republic of China in respecting the civil and political rights of the Chinese people.
(b) STATEMENT OF POLICY.—It shall be the policy of the United States Government to oppose any diminution or termination of the arms embargo that was established by the Declaration of the European Council of June 26, 1989, and to take whatever diplomatic and other measures that are appropriate to convince the Member States of the European Union, individually and collectively, to continue to observe this embargo in principle and in practice. Appropriate measures should include prohibitions on entering into defense procurement contracts or defense-related research and development arrangements with European Union Member States that do not observe such an embargo in practice.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every six months thereafter until December 31, 2010, the President shall transmit to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate a report on all efforts and activities of the United States Government to ensure the success of the policy declared in subsection (b).

SUMMARY

H.R. 5916, the Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Reform Act of 2008 makes various reforms to streamline and increase Congressional oversight over the U.S. arms export licensing process and adds South Korea and Israel to countries receiving expedited Congressional review for arms exports. It also makes a number of reforms to U.S. security assistance programs, including requiring objective analysis of Israel’s military capability vis-à-vis conventional and unconventional threats, increasing oversight over the U.S.-Israeli security relationship and authorizing the first year of the U.S.-Israel Memorandum of Understanding regarding security assistance. The bill grants a limited waiver to the Arms Export Control Act (AECA) to facilitate U.S. denuclearization activities in North Korea; requires the President to certify that North Korea has met certain conditions for the President to exercise this waiver, and requires a report on verification of North Korea’s nuclear declaration.

BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE FOR THE LEGISLATION

This bill provides for a number of important measures to strengthen and reform the U.S. security assistance and defense trade licensing and review process, a principal area of jurisdiction for the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The Department of State, through the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls (DDTC), has primary responsibility to ensure that arms exports fully comport with U.S. foreign policy and security objectives. That process has been in disarray for at least a decade, with the system in recent years verging on becoming dysfunctional. The Department of State had so badly managed the process that in November 2006 there was an extraordinary backlog of some 10,000 unprocessed and unreviewed applications to export defense items or services. Multiple reports by the Government Accountability Office (GAO), and the long-standing experience of this Committee, confirm that DDTC was significantly mismanaged and overwhelmed by the demands placed upon it. At the same time, DDTC was also not accorded the necessary resources by the Department of State to administer the licensing process in a timely manner while appropriately safeguarding U.S. national security. The concern with management shortcomings extend beyond the challenge of expeditious processing of license applications; process breakdowns can also threaten U.S. security by diverting attention from careful consideration of the national security risk in approving a license to the urgent need to clear massive backlogs of applications. Severe stress in the licensing system can also fundamentally undermine support within the Administration, Congress and Industry for a robust export control system.

This legislation builds on recent management reforms initiated by new leadership at the DDTC to begin the process of reforming U.S. defense trade policies and practices, in particular by ensuring a more effective arms export licensing process. In particular, H.R. 5916 incorporates the bipartisan work of the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade, and the Ranking Member of the Subcommittee on Asia, the Pacific, and the Global Environment, by incorporating the “Defense Trade Controls Performance Improvement Act of 2008”.

This bill also strengthens the vital security relationship with our close friends and allies, South Korea and Israel. It includes provisions of H.R. 5443, introduced by the Ranking Member of the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade, adding South Korea to the list of countries in the AECA that receive expedited Congressional review of 15 instead of 30 days, along with NATO, Australia, New Zealand and Japan. This is a significant symbolic recognition of the critical importance of South Korea to U.S. national security and to peace and stability throughout East Asia.

H.R. 5916 also grants Israel the same recognition, for the same reasons. This bill authorizes the initial phase-in of the Foreign Military Financing (FMF) formula that was recently agreed to by the United States and Israel under the Memorandum of Understanding signed on August 16, 2007.

In addition, H.R. 5916 increases Congressional oversight over the security assurances and guarantees given Israel by the United States since 1975, as well as to the revisions that are sometimes made to those assurances. Finally, it requires the Administration to empirically assess on an ongoing basis the state of Israel’s “Qualitative Military Edge” (QME) against conventional or non-conventional security threats, to report that assessment to Congress every 4 years, and to use that assessment when reviewing arms exports to other countries in the Middle East.

This Act also grants the Administration’s request for a waiver from current restrictions limiting the expenditure of U.S. funds in North Korea that is needed to enhance its ability to carry out activities to disable and dismantle North Korea’s nuclear programs, including facilities, as provided for in agreements reached in the Six-Party Talks. With this waiver, the Administration will be able to use Department of Energy funds for these activities instead of having to rely on the limited resources of the State Department’s Nonproliferation and Disarmament Fund, thereby allowing the latter to focus on other high-priority demands.

This waiver narrows the Administration’s proposal for the removal of virtually all existing statutory restrictions on the use of funds and resources regarding North Korea. Instead it provides sufficient authority to the Administration to carry out its current activities in North Korea more effectively, as well as to prepare for and implement more extensive programs that are contemplated under the phased approach of the Six-Party Talks. Sufficient authority is also provided to implement effective verification measures to ensure that North Korea is adhering to its denuclearization commitments.

The legislation also specifies that the statutory restrictions regarding North Korea resulting from its designation by the State Department as a state sponsor of terrorism may not be lifted until the President certifies that North Korea is not proliferating nuclear-related technology or materials to other countries, especially to other state sponsors of terrorism; has provided a complete and correct declaration of all of its nuclear programs and that there are means to effectively verify this declaration; and has agreed to participation by the International Atomic Energy Agency in the disabling of the Yongbyon nuclear facility.

The legislation requires the Secretary of State to submit a report on verification measures that specifies the methods to be used, the actions to be taken, any formal or informal agreement with North Korea on this subject, and any significant disagreement expressed by North Korea regarding the verification measures. The report is unclassified but may include a classified annex.

This Act also grants to the Secretary of State the authority to train and equip foreign military forces to better cooperate with our forces and engage in counter-terrorism operations, using unobligated FMF funds.

Finally, this Act declares it to be U.S. policy to oppose the lifting of the E.U. arms embargo on China and to take whatever diplomatic and economic steps to convince E.U. Member States from taking that step. It requires the President to report to the Congress on all efforts the U.S. is taking to accomplish this goal.

SUMMARY

H.R. 5916 would authorize security assistance for Israel and other countries, and assistance to North Korea in dismantling its nuclear facilities. In addition, the bill would require the Department of State to improve the review and processing of export licenses for defense articles, and would authorize the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary in 2009 and future years for that purpose. CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 5916 would increase discretionary spending by $3.2 billion over the 2009–2013 period, assuming appropriation of the estimated amounts. Implementing the bill would increase direct spending by $500 million over the 2009–2018 period, primarily by allowing a Department of Defense (DoD) revolving fund to spend balances without appropriations action. Implementing the bill would not affect revenues.

H.R. 5916 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

ESTIMATED COST TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 5916 is shown in Table 1. The costs of this legislation fall within budget functions 050 (national defense) and 150 (international affairs).

BASIS OF ESTIMATE

For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 5916 will be enacted before the end of fiscal year 2008, that the estimated authorization amounts will be appropriated near the start of each fiscal year, and that outlays will follow historical spending patterns for similar programs.

Spending Subject to Appropriation

H.R. 5916 would authorize the Department of State to provide security assistance to Israel and other foreign countries. Title III would authorize the President to lift certain sanctions against North Korea, thereby enabling the Department of Energy (DOE) to assist the government of North Korea in disabling and dismantling its nuclear facilities. Finally, title I would require the Department of State to improve the review and processing of export licenses for defense goods. In total, CBO estimates that implementing those provisions would cost $3.2 billion over the 2009–2013 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts.

Foreign Military Financing Program. Section 204 would authorize the State Department to provide security assistance in the form of a grant to Israel in 2009, and specifies that the amount provided should be an increase of $150 million over the level of assistance specified for the Foreign Military Financing Program for Israel in the 2008 appropriations act. CBO estimates that the grant would total $2.55 billion in 2009, assuming appropriation of the estimated amount. Section 401 would authorize the appropriation of up to $25 million a year in 2009 and 2010 for security assistance to foreign countries. Those funds would be used for training, procurement, and building the capacity of their military forces. CBO estimates that implementing both sections would cost almost $2.6 billion over the 2009–2013 period, assuming appropriation of the estimated amounts.

Assistance to Dismantle Nuclear Facilities in North Korea. Title III of H.R. 5916 would authorize the President to waive certain sanctions that were imposed against North Korea after it tested a nuclear device in 2006. Specifically, the bill would allow the United States to assist North Korea over the 2009–2012 period to dismantle three nuclear facilities at Yongbyon: the reactor, the nearby plant that fabricates natural uranium into fuel for the reactor core, and the chemical reprocessing plant where plutonium is separated from the spent fuel rods.

Under an agreement with the United States, South Korea, Japan, China, and Russia, North Korea has started to disable the Yongbyon facilities. All three facilities are scheduled to be disabled by the end of 2008, allowing the process of dismantling the facilities and removing the control rods from North Korea to begin in 2009. Based on information from the State Department and DOE, CBO estimates that the costs of dismantling the nuclear reactor and the nearby fabrication and reprocessing plants, as well as the costs for transporting and reprocessing the spent fuel outside of North Korea, would total about $570 million over the 2009–2013 period, assuming appropriation of the estimated amounts, and contingent on North Korea allowing the facilities to be dismantled.
Export Licenses for Defense Articles. Title I would require the Department of State to institute specified performance goals at its Directorate of Defense Trade Controls to improve the review and processing of applications for export licenses (particularly for major allies such as Israel, South Korea, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, and members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and would authorize such sums as may be necessary in 2009 and future years for staffing and resources to meet that objective.

In 2007, the directorate processed approximately 85,000 applications for export licenses and 400 requests on commodity jurisdiction (some items for export fall within the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce), with a staff of about 47 people. The bill would require the directorate to have three staff members dedicated to requests on commodity jurisdiction and one licensing officer for every 1,250 license applications. Title I also would require expedited reviews for exports to major allies, increased review and enforcement of federal laws and regulations governing arms exports, and increased oversight and management of the licensing process.

Based on information from the Department of State, CBO expects the department would need an additional 55 employees to meet the requirements of the bill: 35 licensing officers, five staff members to review commodity jurisdiction, four staff members to oversee and review processing goals, one person to review regulations and the U.S. Munitions List, and 10 staff members for compliance and enforcement of export controls. CBO estimates that hiring those personnel would cost an average of $110,000 per person and that the department would require additional appropriations of $6 million in 2009 and $31 million over the 2009–2013 period, after adjusting for inflation.

In addition, section 103 would require the President to conduct a thorough review and assessment of the nation’s arms export controls. Based on information from the Department of State, CBO estimates this provision would cost $1 million in 2009, assuming appropriation of the estimated amounts.

Finally, other sections of title I would require the Department of State to review and assess current programs, make periodic reports to the Congress, and strengthen diplomatic efforts to improve controls on the international arms trade; CBO estimates the department would require additional appropriations of $1 million a year to implement those provisions. In total, after adjusting for inflation, CBO estimates that implementing title I would cost $36 million over the 2009–2013 period, assuming appropriation of the estimated amounts.

Reimbursement for Salaries of Reservists. Section 403 would allow the Department of State to reimburse DoD for the salaries of members of the reserves who participate in international peacekeeping missions or other programs of the Department of State. Under current law, those costs are borne by DoD. While CBO expects that this provision could increase the number of reservists who are called up to active duty, we estimate those numbers would be small, and this provision would have an insignificant effect on spending subject to appropriation.
Direct Spending

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 5916 would increase direct spending by $500 million over the 2009–2018 period (see table 2), by allowing amounts in a DoD revolving fund to be available for spending without prior appropriation and by authorizing the Department of State to spend certain civil penalties.

Foreign Military Sales Stockpile Fund. Section 404 would rename the Special Defense Acquisition Fund, allow the deposit of certain lease payments into the fund, and delete a requirement under current law that restricts spending of fund balances to only those amounts provided in advance in appropriations acts. Under current law, DoD may deposit into the fund the proceeds from selling military equipment not intended to be replaced and other defense articles from the fund’s inventory. The Defense Security Cooperation Agency (DSCA) has indicated that the fund is moribund and has no balances left, but that it would use the authorities provided under the bill to replenish the fund with sales proceeds and lease payments, and use the fund to purchase defense articles for use by U.S. allies.

Based on sales proceeds from recent years and information from DSCA, CBO estimates that deposits into the fund would begin in 2009 with sales proceeds and lease payments worth about $45 million a year, and that the agency would spend roughly the same amount each year over the 2009–2018 period.

Civil Penalties and Fees. Section 107 would authorize the Department of State to spend up to $10 million in civil penalties collected each year over the 2008–2012 period for the expenses of its Directorate of Defense Trade Controls. Under current law, the department enforces certain laws and regulations governing exports of defense articles and has the authority to assess civil penalties of up to $500,000 for each noncriminal violation. Civil penalties are deposited into the Treasury as revenues. Collections from civil penalties assessed by the department totaled $23 million in 2007. CBO estimates that collections would become available in the year after they were collected and that implementing this provision would increase direct spending by $50 million over the 2009–2018 period.

The section also would allow registration fees collected by the directorate to be used for new expenses that are prohibited under current law. Recent data for collections and spending indicate that the directorate collects and spends about $8 million in any given year; thus, CBO estimates that this provision would have no significant effect.

Transfer of Defense Articles in the U.S. War Reserve Stockpile for Allies (USWRSA). Section 203 would amend the President’s authority to transfer to Israel obsolete or surplus defense articles in the USWRSA in Israel in return for concessions to be negotiated by the Secretary of Defense. The bill would raise the cap on the maximum amount that could be transferred from $100 million to $200 million in 2009 and 2010. Under current law, the authority to make transfers to Israel expires in August 2008; therefore this section would have no effect.

Even if the transfer authority were extended, CBO estimates this provision would not affect direct spending. The concessions negotiated by DoD may include cash, services, waiver of charges otherwise payable by the United States, or other items of value. Although the authority provided by section 203 could be used to negotiate noncash concessions instead of selling the articles, DSCA has indicated that the existing authority has not been used for Israel in the past, and CBO expects it is unlikely to be used in the next few years.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL AND PRIVATE–SECTOR IMPACT

PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

This Act seeks to significantly improve the performance of the U.S. defense trade exports licensing system through setting performance goals for licensing processes, increasing Congressional oversight of the export process and expediting Congressional license review periods, all in the interest of improving the U.S. defense industry’s global competitiveness while safeguarding U.S. national security. This Act also supports the U.S.-South Korea and Israel relationship by expediting defense export licensing review for these countries, and also mandates the U.S. create an objective measure of Israel’s military capabilities relative to those of its neighbors to better inform U.S. licensing decisions for future arms sales to other countries in the Middle East.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Pursuant to clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee finds the authority for this legislation in article I, section 8 of the Constitution.

NEW ADVISORY COMMITTEES

H.R. 5916 does not establish or authorize any new advisory committees.

CONGRESSIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY ACT

H.R. 5916 in general does not apply to the legislative branch, except in Sec. 124, which increases the value threshold for the Congressional review period for proposed arms sales.

EARMARK IDENTIFICATION

H.R. 5916 does not contain any congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits as defined in clause 9(d), 9(e), or 9(f) of rule XXI.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

Sec. 1. Short Title and Table of Contents.

Subsection (a) provides that this Act may be cited as the “Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Reform Act of 2008.” Subsection (b) provides for a table of contents.

TITLE I: REFORM OF ARMS EXPORT CONTROL PROCEDURES

SUBTITLE A: DEFENSE TRADE CONTROLS PERFORMANCE IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2008

Sec. 101. Short Title.

Section 101 provides the short title for Title I, Subtitle A, the Defense Trade Controls Improvement Act of 2008. This subtitle was originally introduced by Reps. Brad Sherman and Don Manzullo as H.R. 4246.
Sec. 102. Findings.

Section 102 contains various findings that detail past performance problems and staffing shortfalls at the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls (DDTC), the State Department agency responsible for adjudicating licenses for commercial arms sales; notes the importance of this function to national security; describes the growth in the volume and complexity of licensing applications; notes with concern the increased tendency toward offshoring and outsourcing in the defense industry; and notes the need to update export control policies to address these trends.

Sec. 103. Strategic review and assessment of the United States export controls system.

Section 103 requires that the President conduct an 18-month strategic review of defense trade controls beginning in 2009 to determine the effectiveness of the current export control regime, and make improvements where necessary. The review would also seek to identify ways to make the system more efficient and seek to improve coordination across government agencies responsible for export controls and enforcement. The President will be required to review known attempts to circumvent export controls with a view to improving enforcement. The review will also examine offshoring and outsourcing in the defense industry as well as the policy of U.S. trade partners to require "offsets" for arms sales. The section requires that the President report on the results of the review.

The Committee requires this review in response to the January 2007 decision by the GAO to designate the protection of high technology critical to U.S. national security as a "high risk" area. GAO found that export control policies and procedures were in need of assessment for both effectiveness and efficiency. Given the changing nature of the security threats facing the United States from terrorism and nuclear proliferation, rapid advances in defense technology, and the continued efforts by state and non-state actors to evade U.S. export controls, the Committee believes that a high-level government-wide review of arms export control and enforcement policies is necessary.

GAO also found that coordination between the various agencies involved in export control and enforcement policies is lacking. Therefore, the strategic review should focus on ways that inter-agency cooperation and coordination can be improved. This is intended to be a government-wide review, and should not be limited to the DDTC’s policies and procedures.

The review should thoroughly examine all known attempts—successful and unsuccessful—to circumvent U.S. export controls and enforcement mechanisms. The United States, as the leader in defense technology development and defense production, is a target for criminal proliferation rings and foreign security and intelligence agencies. The damage done when a group or state agent is able to circumvent export controls is not limited to the potential use of U.S. hardware by an adversary. Ineffective export controls and enforcement policies can seriously erode U.S. supremacy in critical military technologies and lead to the development of technology that can defeat U.S. defense systems.

In conducting this review, the Administration should also devote significant attention to how export control policy facilitates the movement of technology and defense production overseas, and the national security implications of off-shoring and outsourcing in defense production. Defense cooperation with allies is essential; however, the Committee is concerned that the defense industrial base has been harmed by the growing trend to offshore defense production, and that the spread of defense technology and production capacity to foreign countries, especially those with inadequate export controls, may harm American security. Protecting the defense industrial base and American technological supremacy need to be top priorities for arms export control policy.

Section 103 requires that the Administration periodically brief relevant Congressional committees on the progress of the review. This requirement is included to ensure Congressional oversight over the conduct of the strategic review while it is ongoing and to help ensure that the final product is fully responsive to Congressional concerns.

Sec. 104. Performance goals for processing of applications for licenses to export items on USML.

Section 104 sets a goal of 60 days for the DDTC to process licenses to export defense hardware to U.S. friends and allies. It also sets the goal at 30 days for applications to export defense hardware to NATO and major non-NATO allies. It further sets a goal of 7 days in cases where the hardware is to be supplied to an ally operating with the United States in a combat, peacekeeping or humanitarian deployment. It requires that applications which have not been processed within 60 days be reviewed by the top political or civil servants at DDTC; applications older than 90 days would require review by the relevant Assistant Secretary. It requires reporting on the average processing times for various categories of license. Section 104 also sets a goal for processing commodity jurisdiction (CJ) requests in 60 days, and requires increased transparency of those decisions (exporters seek CJ's to determine if an item is on the U.S. Munitions List and thus subject to State Department licensing requirements).

Section 104 essentially codifies Presidential Directives issued in January 2008 that set a “soft” deadline of 60 days for the processing of applications for licenses to export items on the U.S. Munitions List. Nothing in this section or in the Presidential Directives requires that a decision on any specific application be made within 60 days. The Committee recognizes that additional time may be needed to review an application to ensure that the export is consistent with U.S. national security. The presidential directives identify five factors that would require more than 60 days to adjudicate a license application. Section 104 does not alter the Administration policy.

Nevertheless, U.S. exporters should have reasonable assurance that their licenses will be adjudicated in a fairly predictable timeframe. Unnecessary delays in adjudication can cause U.S. suppliers to be viewed as unreliable, and U.S. firms are made less competitive. Defense trade business may increasingly go to foreign competitors if there are long delays in licensing decisions. In late 2006, the DDTC was found to have a backlog of some 10,000 open applications. As a result, applications were left to languish, sometimes for months. While the current management of DDTC has eliminated a number of the factors that led to that backlog and the resulting processing delays, the Committee believes that codified goals for processing times are essential to ensure predictability for U.S. exporters, and for internal resource planning at the DDTC. Section 104 also requires that DDTC management brief relevant congressional committees on the steps they will implement to address any significant backlog that arises in the future to ensure that growing backlogs and proposed remedial measures come to the attention of Congress in a timely fashion.

The goals for license processing times contained in Section 104 do not cover agreements under Part 124 of the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR) for defense services. These include technical assistance agreements and manufacturing agreements, which are needed to convey technical know-how and permission to produce USML items overseas. These agreements are often of greater complexity and have potentially greater impacts on national security, including by weakening the defense industrial base. As noted, the Committee is concerned about the increased tendency to offshore production of defense items. DDTC should place the highest priority on processing license applications that provide for the export of U.S. hardware to allies, and should generally give manufacturing and technical assistance agreements a significantly higher level of scrutiny. Furthermore, consistent with U.S. national security, licensing resources should be allocated first and foremost to ensuring that the processing goals of section 104 are generally being met.

The Committee believes that the goals established by this section reflect the priority that the Department should be giving to the respective categories. The Committee believes that DDTC should therefore give the highest priority to processing of applications that are in direct support of combat operations or peacekeeping or humanitarian operations with United States Armed Forces; followed by giving the next highest priority to processing of applications to government security agencies of United States NATO allies, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea, Israel, and as appropriate, other major non-NATO allies; and other applications will be prioritized in addition in a manner determined by the Director.

Section 104 also includes a requirement that the managing director of the DDTC review a small percentage of the applications received by the agency to ensure that the decisions in those cases were consistent with applicable statute, regulations and DDTC policies. This requirement will serve to ensure that senior management determine whether the decisions of licensing officers are being made consistent with U.S. export control policy and practice. It will also allow for the identification and rectification of common mistakes, and to ensure that the “return-without-action” device is not used excessively to clear or effectively restart the clock on difficult cases.

Section 104 also requires that the Secretary submit a report to Congress in 2010 and 2011 on average processing times for various categories of license across different categories of allied or friendly country, and any management decisions taken to address trends in the data. This reporting requirement responds to GAO criticism of DDTC for not seeking to analyze trends in licensing data when setting policies and allocating the resources of the agency.
Section 104 requires the Secretary to make the results of commodity jurisdiction (CJ) decisions public via the Internet. This requirement responds to concerns raised by U.S. manufacturers and NGOs that the lack of transparency in the CJ process has led to a lack of consistency in CJ decisions, is unfair to some exporters, and does not provide for meaningful criticism of CJ decisions, which are essentially secret. This provision is tailored to ensure that only the minimum amount of information necessary to provide meaningful disclosure is released; to the greatest extent possible, the proprietary information of the CJ applicant is protected.

Sec. 105. Requirement to ensure adequate staff and resources for DDTC of the Department of State.

Section 105 requires that the Secretary ensure adequate staffing of the DDTC and mandates that there be one licensing officer on staff for every 1250 applications that the agency is estimated to receive in a given year. DDTC currently has only roughly 40 licensing officers to process approximately 85,000 applications per year. The Committee believes that many of the past performance problems at DDTC relate to understaffing. As noted, while the licensing caseload has increased significantly, the number of licensing personnel at DDTC has not. The requirement that DDTC have at least one licensing officer for every 1,250 applications expected for a given fiscal year does not place a limit on the number of cases any one licensing officer may handle in a given year. Not all applications require the same level of staff attention, and officers who handle relatively uncomplicated applications will presumably handle more than those handling more complicated cases.

The State Department will have until the third quarter of 2010 to comply with this increased staffing requirement to allow for recruitment and training of additional licensing officers. Rather than prescribe a specific number of officers, the Committee decided to mandate a staff-to-application ratio to ensure that staffing increases are made if applications continue to increase over successive years.

Section 105's staffing mandates are necessary not only to provide for the efficiency of the agency, but to ensure its national security function is met. Applications are not only increasing in number, they are becoming more complicated. Leaving aside efficiency and processing speed, a staffing increase is necessary to ensure that DDTC's licensing decisions are consistent with American national security and foreign policy goals.

Section 105 requires that the Secretary maintain staffing levels in other areas of DDTC responsibility, especially including policy and enforcement. In order to meet the mandates of Section 105, the DDTC has to hire more people and sustain adequate staff in all of its functions throughout any given year. The requirement for licensing officers should not be met by merely pulling personnel off other functions and making them licensing officers. Nor should DDTC use temporary assignments or other schemes to merely move personnel around the DDTC to fulfill the licensing officer mandate.
Sec. 106. Audit by Inspector General of the Department of State.

Section 106 requires that State’s IG conduct an audit in 2010 and 2011 to determine whether DDTC is meeting the goals set out in sections 104 and 105.

Sec. 107. Increased flexibility for use of defense trade controls registration fees.

Section 107 provides DDTC with the ability to use the fees that it collects from arms manufacturers and exporters for all expenses associated with the agency. Provides that no more than $10 million in enforcement fines collected for violations of the Arms Export Control Act may be made available to pay for the expenses of the agency.

The committee recognizes that allowing an agency to in effect keep enforcement penalties can be a perverse incentive, leading to overzealous enforcement. The DDTC has collected $20 million or more in fines over the last several years. By capping the amount available to the agency at an amount well below anticipated collections, there should be no incentive for improper and overzealous enforcement actions against exporters. Also, assuming that the State Department would like to see this authority subsequently extended beyond the 5 years provided in this legislation, the expiration of the provision in 2012 should also deter such improper enforcement actions. Nonetheless, the committee intends to conduct vigorous oversight over the Department’s exercise of this authority.

Sec. 108. Review of ITAR and USML.

Section 108 requires that the Secretary review 20 percent of the USML every year, with input from U.S. defense manufacturers, NGOs, and labor and small business organizations, to determine if controls on various items should be relaxed or strengthened. This section will also ensure that the entire USML is reviewed every 5 years.

Section 108 provides that the USML and the wider ITAR should be reviewed in their entirety every 5 years to ensure that export controls keep up with advances in defense technology. The Commerce Department generally conducts a similar 5-year review of its Control List. The 20-percent-per-year review requirement should be a floor, not a ceiling for the Administration, however. The Secretary also should not wait to place a section of the USML under review where technological advances warrant an immediate review simply because it is not yet that section’s “turn” in the 5-year rotation. In coordination with other relevant government agencies that review the USML, including the Department of Defense, the Secretary should ensure that a broad cross-section of the defense industry is represented in the conduct of the review, including small- and medium-size domestic enterprises that serve as suppliers for the large defense companies. The committee believes that it is critical to include labor and arms control groups in these consultations in order to ensure a balanced review.

Sec. 109. Special licensing authorization for Certain Exports to NATO Member States, Australia, Japan, and New Zealand.

Section 109 provides for a special, 5-year blanket license for the export of spare parts and components for specific USML items previously exported to U.S. allies. The previously-exported equipment would have to be in inventory of a security agency of a close U.S. ally and the spare parts and components would be limited to relatively non-sensitive items (no Significant Military Equipment). The spare parts and components would have to be made in the US in order to qualify for licensing under this special type of license.

Exporters have expressed concern about the need to obtain multiple licenses for spare parts and components for defense systems that have been previously exported. Section 109 provides for a special licensing procedure for spare parts and components that meet the criteria set out in the section. The special licensing authorization provided for by this section is in effect a blanket license for the export of multiple spare parts and components for defense items in the inventory of an allied country. Section 109 sets out a number of limitations and conditions on the use of this special license, including: The spare parts and components must be shipped to and used by a security agency of the allied country for an item in its inventory; they may not be used to enhance the performance of the previously exported defense items; and the freight forwarder utilized for shipment must be the one designated by the recipient country for the Foreign Military Sales program. These conditions are designed to ensure maximum security against misuse and diversion.

The licensing procedure provided for by section 109 does not replace, amend or eliminate any other license or exemption provided for by current law or regulations, including the exemption for the temporary import and subsequent export of defense items serviced or repaired in the United States provided for in Section 123.4 of the ITAR.

The provision is limited to parts and components with a high U.S. content that have been manufactured in the United States. A part or component must include 85 percent American content on a total content basis—inclusive of all costs, including raw materials, but exclusive of costs associated with research and development, intellectual property and legal services. Eighty-five percent of the costs associated with the manufacturing of a spare part or component must also be attributable to work done in the United States in order for a part or component to qualify for licensing under this provision. The requirement that the last substantial modification be done in the United States is designed to exclude from this licensing procedure any part or component whose final assembly is done abroad. The requirement that any foreign content value be calculated based on the final price or final cost paid of the foreign item or service precludes an applicant from calculating foreign content using a price paid for that foreign content by an agent or middleman that is not reflective of the actual, final cost to the applicant. Foreign content, if any, is limited, content from countries that are eligible to receive exports of USML items, save for de minimis amounts. The Committee appreciates that it may be impossible for an applicant to trace the origin of every screw, washer and nut. However, all significant parts and processing that go into the product must be of U.S. or eligible foreign origin.
Sec. 110. Availability of information on the Status of License Applications Under Chapter 3 of the Arms Export Control Act.

Section 110 requires that information on the status of applications be made available electronically to the applicant and relevant Congressional committees.

Sec. 111. Sense of Congress.

The Defense Trade Advisory Group (DTAG) is an advisory committee that consults with the State Department on export control issues. Section 111 calls on the State Department to make its membership more diverse by including labor, NGOs, and academics, in addition to the defense industry itself.

Sec. 112. Definitions.

Section 112 provides various definitions that are necessary for the Act.

Sec. 113. Authorization of Appropriations.

Section 113 provides “such sums” authorization for FY2009 and every subsequent fiscal year.

SUBTITLE B: MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Sec. 121. Report on Self-Financing Options for Export Licensing Functions of DDTC of the Department of State.

Section 121 requires the Secretary of State to report 90 days after enactment of this Act to the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations on possible mechanisms to place the Department of State defense trade licensing functions on a 100% self-financing basis.

Currently, the licensing agency that processes Foreign Military Sales operates on a 100% self-financing basis, and is able to adapt to its changing needs without the need for annual appropriations. It would be useful to have State’s licensing functions on a similar basis, for similar reasons. This report will force the Department of State to seriously consider this possibility and inform the oversight committees as we legislate on these issues in the future.

Sec. 122. Expediting Congressional Defense Export Review Period for South Korea and Israel.

This section adds South Korea and Israel to the “NATO+3” (NATO countries plus Australia, Japan, New Zealand) list in various Arms Export Control Act provisions for special treatment regarding the export of U.S. defense items and services, including a 15-day Congressional review instead of 30 days.

Sec. 122 strengthens the vital security relationship with our close friends and allies, South Korea and Israel. It adds South Korea and Israel to the list of countries in the AECA that receive expedited Congressional review of 15 instead of 30 days, along with NATO, Australia, New Zealand and Japan, as well as other similar privileges. This is a significant and symbolic recognition of the critical importance of South Korea and Israel to U.S. national security and to peace and stability throughout East Asia and the Middle East.

Section 123 requires the President to make all Presidential Directives regarding U.S. export policies available to the Congressional Committees on Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations, the committees of jurisdiction over arms exports. Ideally, the President should provide copies of such directives to the Committees.

In January 2008, the President issued two "directives" with specific changes and taskings relating to our export control system. Unfortunately, the Administration has refused to allow representatives from the House Committee on Foreign Affairs or the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to even read these directives, much less provide copies. This provision is to ensure that the Committees of jurisdiction and oversight over arms export control policies are able to see the content of U.S. arms export policies.

Sec. 124. Increase in Congressional Notification Thresholds and Expediting Congressional Review for South Korea and Israel.

Section 124 increases monetary thresholds for Congressional review periods of FMS and commercial arms sales:

- For NATO+5—from $25 to $75 million for Significant Military Equipment (SME), $100 million to $200 million for total contract value.
- For all other countries—from $15 to $50 Million for SME, $50 to $100 Million for total contract value.

This provision increases the threshold level for the Congressional 15/30-day resolution-of-disapproval review period. However, it also retains existing statutory threshold levels for notification of the export to Congress.

The result is that the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations, the committees of jurisdiction over U.S. arms exports, will still see and evaluate arms exports to all parties at existing levels, thereby ensuring that Congressional oversight is retained. This occurs through a longstanding, informal "preconsultation" process that this and previous Administrations engage in with the Committee, through which questions and concerns are addressed, and alterations made. This preconsultation process will continue at the current threshold notification levels.

For defense exports below the new, higher formal 15/30-day Congressional review threshold that this bill will establish, export licenses can be awarded 2–4 weeks faster, thereby increasing U.S. defense exports' competitiveness. As such, this is a "win-win" outcome: Congressional oversight for national security is preserved, but defense exporters are able to be more competitive.

Sec. 125. Diplomatic Efforts to Strengthen National and International Arms Export Controls.

Section 125 states the Sense of Congress that the President should increase efforts to strengthen multilateral export control regimes, with a 5-year annual report on U.S. efforts to do so.
Sec. 126. Reporting Requirement for Unlicensed Exports.

Section 126 adds a requirement to report on exempted commercial arms sales to an existing annual report. This provision was previously approved by the House in the 109th Congress.

Section 127 requires an annual listing of the value of actual arms deliveries by country as part of the annual Congressional Budget Justification to improve the transparency of the U.S. arms export process and facilitate Congressional oversight.

Sec. 128. Report on Satellite Export Controls.

Section 128 requires a report 180 days after enactment on the efficacy of current satellite export controls, especially regarding China, and whether any changes need to be made.

It has been 9 years since the Congress, in reaction to the revelations of the Cox Commission on U.S. companies sharing sensitive space technology with China during an investigation over a Chinese launch failure, mandated that the licensing of all satellites and related components be moved from the Commerce Control List at the Department of Commerce to the U.S. Munitions List at the Department of State. It is appropriate at this point that the record of bringing U.S. satellite exports under the more rigorous USML licensing system be reviewed.

The Committee is especially concerned over reports that a subsidiary of a European defense company, Thales/Alenia, is actively engaged in selling satellites that are allegedly free of any U.S.-origin or U.S.-derived component to China and others. The sales to China directly undermine U.S. export controls on China. Sales of such satellites to other recipients would allow those recipients to utilize the cut-rate Chinese “Long March” space launch vehicle; buyers of satellites with U.S. components cannot do likewise, since any such launch can only occur with the consent of the United States Government.

Utilization of Chinese launchers also undermine U.S. export controls in that greater commercial use garners China greater experience and therefore greater expertise in space launch operations and technology, which is directly applicable to its military ballistic missile program.

The Committee requests that the President devote particular attention to this troubling development by Thales/Alenia in the report required by this section, and report on what actions the United States will take to address and rectify this matter.

Sec. 129. Definition.

Section 129 defines “appropriate congressional committees” as used in this subtitle to mean the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations.
TITLE II: SECURITY ASSISTANCE AND RELATED SUPPORT FOR ISRAEL

Sec. 201. Assessment of Israel’s Qualitative Military Edge over Military Threats.

Section 201 requires the President to create a mechanism to empirically evaluate on an ongoing basis the extent to which Israel has a qualitative military edge (hereinafter referred to as “QME”) over all possible military threats from any national source, both individually or collectively, and to use such mechanism when reviewing arms sales to the Middle East.

It has become clear to the Committee that the Administration uses a subjective judgment when evaluating Israel’s QME. State and Defense officials have admitted that there is no objective, empirical method of evaluating this critical measure of whether Israel maintains a qualitative superiority over potential threats to its security.

It is also clear that such subjective evaluations are performed sale-by-sale, country-by-country, without clear overall consideration of the balance of capabilities possessed throughout the region that could conceivably affect Israel’s security.

This provision would remedy this glaring lack of a robust mechanism to make critical security and export decisions that could undermine the security of one of the most important friends and ally that we have in the Middle East.

Section 201 also requires an initial report no later than 180 days after enactment, and quadrennially thereafter. It also requires that any arms sale to a Middle Eastern country that must be notified to Congress for review include a determination that such sale will not materially affect Israel’s QME.

Section 202 requires the President to provide copies of all U.S. assurances made to Israel regarding its security since 1975 and on an ongoing basis, including revisions of past assurances, to the Committees on Foreign Affairs and Foreign Relations, to enable Congressional oversight over the U.S.-Israel security relationship.

The United States has made numerous assurances to Israel over the years regarding its security, especially regarding conditions under which the U.S. would sell arms to Israel’s neighbors. There have been subsequent revisions and revocations of these assurances.

The Congress does not have access to these assurances and revisions, and is therefore limited in its ability to conduct real oversight over this critical U.S. security relationship, and in its ability to judge for itself the extent to which such assurances are being fulfilled.

Sec. 203. War Reserves Stockpile.

This provision extends the dates and amounts of U.S. excess equipment that can be transferred to Israel from regional stockpiles.
Sec. 204. Implementation of Memorandum of Understanding with Israel.

This section authorizes for Fiscal Year 2009 Foreign Military Financing (FMF) assistance for Israel pursuant to the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the United States and Israel. In August, 2007, the United States and Israel entered into a memorandum of understanding “reflecting the unshakeable commitment of the United States to Israel’s security.” Under the MOU, the United States agreed to increase levels of U.S. FMF to Israel over a 10-year period beginning in Fiscal Year 2009, with an initial increase of $150 million for that fiscal year, and additional increases through Fiscal Year 2013, leveling off at $3.1 billion per year from Fiscal Year 2013 to Fiscal Year 2018. The MOU also provides that Offshore Procurement should be maintained at 26.3 percent of the yearly FMF grant. The Committee strongly supports the full and complete implementation of the MOU through Fiscal Year 2018, and section 204 represents an authorization of the first year of the MOU.

The Committee notes that the formula contained in section 204 starts from the baseline of $2,400,000,000 specified under the heading “Foreign Military Financing” in the Department of State, Foreign Operations and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 2008, adds $150,000,000 for a total of $2,550,000,000.

Sec. 205. Definitions.

This provision defines “Qualitative Military Edge” as used in this Title, and that the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

TITLE III: WAIVER OF CERTAIN SANCTIONS TO FACILITATE DENUCLEARIZATION ACTIVITIES IN NORTH KOREA

Sec. 301. Waiver Authority and Exceptions.

This section provides the President the authority to waive four sanctions under Sec. 102 of the Arms Export Control Act (the “Glenn Amendment”) to provide “material, direct, and necessary assistance” to nuclear disablement or dismantlement activities in North Korea, including verification of denuclearization and removal of nuclear equipment and material from North Korea. Financial assistance that may be directly necessary, such as payment for North Korean workers who are currently dismantling the Yongbyon reactor, is permitted, as are non-lethal items that are controlled on the U.S. Munitions List and Commerce Control (dual-use) List. It limits the export of any equipment or services that are controlled on the U.S. Munitions List that may be necessary to non-lethal equipment and services only, so as not to benefit North Korean military capabilities, and prevents any credit or credit guarantees from being provided.

Because of AECA restrictions triggered by North Korea’s nuclear test of October 9, 2006, the United States has had to fund disablement activities through the use of the Nonproliferation and Disarmament Fund (NDF), which has the statutory authority to conduct nonproliferation activities in countries that may nevertheless be subject to U.S. sanctions and restrictions on U.S. assistance. The NDF is a relatively small fund, which is already stressed by the Department of Energy’s disablement activities in North Korea; it would be incapable of funding the larger “Phase III” dismantlement and removal programs that are contemplated, and worthy urgent nonproliferation opportunities in other countries could be missed if the NDF is depleted. It is therefore necessary to waive the AECA restrictions so that the United States can fully fund its obligations under the Six-Party Talks and proceed with the disablement, dismantlement and removal of North Korea’s nuclear capabilities, and verification of its denuclearization, which is manifestly in the vital U.S. national interest.

Sec. 302. Certification Regarding Waiver of Certain Sanctions.

The President must certify to the Congress that, before any non-lethal exports of articles or services on the U.S. Munitions List or Commerce Control List can occur, that all necessary steps will be taken to ensure that such exports will not improve the military capabilities of North Korea’s armed forces, and that such exports are in the national security interests of the United States. Section 302 does not allow the export of any item described in Section 301(b).

Sec. 303. Congressional Notification and Report.

The President must notify the foreign affairs and appropriations committees 15 days in advance of using the waiver authority, and must report annually on the progress, or lack thereof, in the verifiable denuclearization activities in North Korea.

Sec. 304. Termination of Waiver Authority.

The waiver authority in Sec. 401 terminates if North Korea conducts another nuclear test after October 10, 2006 (the day after North Korea’s last nuclear test) or transfers to or receives from another state a nuclear explosive device after September 19, 2005 (the date after North Korea agreed to denuclearization). If North Korea transfers nuclear weapon-related design information or component, according to the standards of the Glenn Amendment, or sought or received same, after September 19, 2005, the waiver authority in Sec. 401 terminates unless the President certifies to the Congress that the continuation of such waiver is vital to the national security interests of the United States.

Sec. 305. Expiration of Waiver Authority.

This authority will terminate 4 years from enactment.

Sec. 306. Continuation of Restrictions against the Government of North Korea.

Section 306 provides that restrictions against the Government of North Korea because of its designation as a state sponsor of terrorism shall remain in effect, and shall not be lifted pursuant to the provisions of law under which the determination was made, unless the President certifies to the appropriate congressional committees that (1) the Government of North Korea is no longer engaged in the transfer of technology related to the acquisition or development of nuclear weapons, particularly to the Governments of Iran, Syria, or any other country that is a state sponsor of terrorism; (2) in accordance with the Six-Party Talks Agreement of February 13, 2007, the Government of North Korea has ‘provided a complete and correct declaration of all its nuclear programs,’ and there are measures to effectively verify this declaration by the United States which, ‘[a]t the request of the other Parties,’ is leading ‘disablement activities’ and ‘[p]rovid[ing] the funding for those activities;’ and (3) the Government of North Korea has agreed to the participation of the International Atomic Energy Agency in the monitoring and verification of the shutdown and sealing of the Yongbyon nuclear facility.

The Committee believes that these requirements are fully consistent with the agreements of February and October, 2007, related to the Six-Party Talks and how the President’s representatives have explained these agreements will be implemented.

Subsection (a) of this section provides that not later than 15 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report on verification measures relating to North Korea’s nuclear programs under the Six-Party Talks Agreement of February 13, 2007, with specific focus on how such verification measures are defined under the Six-Party Talks Agreement and understood by the United States Government.

Subsection (b) provides that the report required under subsection (a) shall include, among other elements, a detailed description of: (1) the methods to be utilized to confirm that North Korea has ‘provided a complete and correct declaration of all of its nuclear programs’; (2) the specific actions to be taken in North Korea and elsewhere to ensure a high and ongoing level of confidence that North Korea has fully met the terms of the Six-Party Talks Agreement relating to its nuclear programs; (3) any formal or informal agreement with North Korea regarding verification measures relating to North Korea’s nuclear programs under the Six-Party Talks Agreement; and (4) any disagreement expressed by North Korea regarding verification measures relating to North Korea’s nuclear programs under the Six-Party Talks Agreement.

Subsection (c) provides that the report required under subsection (a) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

Sec. 308. Definitions.

This provision contains definitions applicable to this title.

TITLE IV: MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Sec. 401. Authority to Build the Capacity of Foreign Military Forces.

This section grants the Secretary of State train-and-equip authority, authorized up to $25,000,000 in unobligated FMF funds for the Fiscal Years 2009 and 2010, to respond to contingencies in foreign countries or regions with training, procurement and capacity-building of a foreign country’s national military forces.

This authority is necessary for the Department of State to directly provide assistance to train and equip foreign military forces to support U.S. security operations and to better engage in counter-terrorism operations.

The National Defense Authorization Act of 2006 authorized the use of DoD funds to build the capacity of a foreign country’s national military forces in order for that country to conduct counterterrorist operations or participate in or support military or stability operations in which U.S. Armed Forces are a participant. Since FY 2006, the State Department and Defense Department have been working to jointly develop and implement programs under 1206 authority. The Department of State maintains that longstanding security assistance authorities and resources should be supplemented to be capable of meeting today’s U.S. strategic requirements. Existing authorities exercised by the Department of State for the provision of security assistance include the Foreign Military Financing (FMF), International Military Education and Training (IMET), and Peacekeeping Operations (PKO) accounts authorized by the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended (FAA), and the Arms Export Control Act (AECA). While the committee concurs with the Administration that new security assistance tools need to be developed in order to meet the security challenges of the 21st century, we are also concerned by the apparent migration of security assistance authorities from the Department of State to the Department of Defense. This provision intends to address that trend by designating certain funds for the Secretary of State to use the full flexibility under existing law to provide training and equipment for foreign militaries when such assistance meets U.S. foreign policy objectives. It draws on unobligated FMF balances for funding. During the last fiscal year, the Department of State had almost $4 million in unobligated funds, which could be useful for financing this program authority. The Committee intends to review the management of U.S. security assistance during the remainder of this Congress and the next.

Sec. 402. Maintenance of European Union Arms Embargo against China.

Sec. 402 states U.S. policy to oppose the lifting of the E.U. arms embargo and to take whatever diplomatic and economic steps necessary to convince E.U. Member States from taking that step. This section also requires the President to report to the Congress on all efforts the U.S. is taking to accomplish this goal.

Last November, President Sarkozy of France declared during his visit to Beijing that he wanted to lift this embargo. France will assume the Presidency of the EU in July, and would presumably broach this issue with the other Member States of the EU. It is important for the Congress to again send a clear message of opposition to lifting the embargo.

Sec. 403. Reimbursement of Salaries of Members of the Reserve Components in Support of Security Cooperation Missions.

This section provides an authority for the costs of certain transfers to include the certain personnel costs involved in the transfers.

In general, the salaries of members of the National Guard and Reserve who are performing security cooperation missions outside the U.S. cannot be reimbursed as part of an FMS contract for security cooperation, such as training. This section would allow the Department of Defense to use other funds to pay Reserve members to perform missions that build global partnerships and help win the war on terror.

Sec. 404. Foreign Military Sales Stockpile Fund.

This section responds to a DoD request to update the moribund “Special Defense Acquisition Fund” in Sec. 51 of the AECA by adding “building partner capacity” as a purpose of the Fund, allowing proceeds from the lease of defense items under Sec. 61 of the AECA to go to the Fund, and allowing amounts in the Fund to remain available until expended.

Sec. 405. Congressional Notification Requirements Under the Arms Export Control Act.

This provision replaces “the Speaker” with the “Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs” or the “Committee on Foreign Affairs,” as appropriate, throughout the AECA, to match the reporting requirements to the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate.

Sec. 406. Sense of Congress.

Sec. 406 states the sense of Congress that the United States should not provide security assistance or export arms to nations contributing to massive, widespread, and systematic violations of human rights or acts of genocide, particularly with respect to Darfur, Sudan.

TITLE V: AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER NAVAL VESSELS

Sec. 501. Authority to Transfer of Naval Vessels to Certain Foreign Recipients.

This section authorizes the grant of surplus U.S. naval vessels to Peru, Chile, Greece and Pakistan. Transfers of naval vessels must satisfy certain statutory requirements, which stipulate that naval vessels larger than 3,000 tons or less than 20 years old may not be transferred to another nation unless approved by law.

According to the Secretary of the Navy, these proposed transfers would improve U.S. political and military relationships with close allies. They would support strategic engagement goals and regional security cooperation objectives. The U.S. would incur no costs in transferring these naval vessels. The recipients would be responsible for all costs associated with the transfers, including maintenance, repairs, training, and fleet turnover costs.

(2) The letter of offer shall not be issued—

(A) with respect to a proposed sale of any defense articles or defense services under this Act for $200,000,000 or more, any design and construction services for $300,000,000 or more, or any major defense equipment for $75,000,000 or more, to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), any member country of NATO, Japan, Australia, the Republic of Korea, Israel, or New Zealand, if Congress, within 15 calendar days after receiving such certification, or country or organization, if Congress, within 30 calendar days after receiving such certification, enacts a joint resolution prohibiting the proposed sale, unless the President states in his certification that an emergency exists which requires such sale in the national security interests of the United States. If the President states in his certification that an emergency exists which requires the proposed sale in the national security interest of the United States, thus waiving the congressional review requirements of this subsection, he shall set forth in the certification a detailed justification for his determination, including a description of the emergency circumstances which necessitate the immediate issuance of the letter of offer and a discussion of the national security interests involved.

(2) Any such joint resolution shall be considered in the Senate in accordance with the provisions of section 601(b) of the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act of 1976, except that for purposes of consideration of any joint resolution with respect to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, any member country of such Organization, Japan, Australia, the Republic of Korea, Israel, or New Zealand, it shall be in order in the Senate to move to discharge a committee to which such joint resolution was referred if such committee has not reported such joint resolution at the end of five calendar days after its introduction.

(5) Subject to paragraph (6), if the enhancement or upgrade in the sensitivity of technology or the capability of major defense equipment, defense articles, defense services, or design and construction services described in a numbered certification submitted under this subsection costs $14,000,000 or more in the case of any major defense equipment, $50,000,000 or more in the case of defense articles or defense services, or $200,000,000 or more in the case of design or construction services, then the President shall submit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate a new numbered certification which relates to such enhancement or upgrade and which shall be considered for purposes of this subsection as if it were a separate letter of offer to sell defense equipment, articles, or services, subject to all of the requirements, restrictions, and conditions set forth in this subsection. For purposes of this subparagraph, references in this subsection to sales shall be deemed to be references to enhancements or upgrades in the sensitivity of technology or the capability of major defense equipment, articles, or services, as the case may be.

(6) The limitation in paragraph (1) and the requirement in paragraph (5)(C) shall apply in the case of a letter of offer to sell to a member country of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) or Australia, Japan, or New Zealand that does not authorize a new sales territory that includes any country other than such countries only if the letter of offer involves—

(A) the sale of major defense equipment under this Act for, or the enhancement or upgrade of major defense equipment at a cost of, $25,000,000 or more, as the case may be; and

(B) the sale of defense articles or services for, or the enhancement or upgrade of defense articles or services at a cost of, $100,000,000 or more, as the case may be; or

Each such numbered certification shall also contain an item indicating whether any offset agreement is proposed to be entered into in connection with such export and a description of any such offset agreement. In addition, the President shall, upon the request of such committee or the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, transmit promptly to both such committees a statement setting forth, to the extent specified in such request a description of the capabilities of the items to be exported, an estimate of the total number of United States personnel expected to be needed in the foreign country concerned in connection with the items to be exported and an analysis of the arms control impact pertinent to such application, prepared in consultation with the Secretary of Defense. In a case in which such articles or services listed on the Missile Technology Control Regime Annex are intended to support the design, development, or production of a Category I space launch vehicle system (as defined in section 74), such report shall include a description of the proposed export and rationale for approving such export, including the consistency of such export with United States missile nonproliferation policy. A certification transmitted pursuant to this subsection shall be unclassified, except that the information specified in clause (B) and the details of the description specified in clause (C) may be classified if the public disclosure thereof would be clearly detrimental to the security of the United States, in which case the information shall be accompanied by a description of the damage to the national security that could be expected to result from public disclosure of the information.

(2) Unless the President states in his certification that an emergency exists which requires the proposed export in the national security interests of the United States, a license for export described in paragraph (1)—

(A) in the case of a license for an export of any major defense equipment sold under a contract in the amount of $75,000,000 or more or of defense articles or defense services sold under a contract in the amount of $200,000,000 or more, (or, in the case of a defense article that is a firearm controlled under category I of the United States Munitions List, $1,000,000 or more) to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), any member country of that Organization NATO or Australia, Japan, the Republic of Korea, Israel, or New Zealand, shall not be issued until at least 15 calendar days after the Congress receives such certification, and shall not be issued then if the Congress, within that 15-day period, enacts a joint resolution prohibiting the proposed export;

* * * * * * *

(4) The provisions of subsection (b)(5) shall apply to any equipment, article, or service for which a numbered certification has been transmitted to Congress pursuant to paragraph (1) in the same manner and to the same extent as that subsection applies to any equipment, article, or service for which a numbered certification has been transmitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (b)(1). For purposes of such application, any reference in subsection (b)(5) to “a letter of offer” or “an offer” shall be deemed to be a reference to “a contract”.

(5) In the case of an application by a person (other than with regard to a sale under section 21 or 22 of this Act) for a license for the export to a member country of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) or Australia, Japan, or New Zealand that does not authorize a new sales territory that includes any country other than such countries, the limitations on the issuance of the license set forth in paragraph (1) shall apply only if the license is for export of—
