I. PURPOSE

The purpose of S. 2020 is to protect and conserve the world’s tropical forests and coral reefs through debt swap mechanisms.

II. COMMITTEE ACTION

S. 2020 was introduced by Senators Lugar and Biden on September 6, 2007. It is cosponsored by Senators Hagel, Brownback, Leahy, Murray and Inouye. On September 11, 2007, the committee ordered the bill reported favorably by voice vote.

III. DISCUSSION

The Tropical Forest and Coral Conservation Act (TFCCA) of 2007 reauthorizes and revises the Tropical Forest Conservation Act of 1998 (P.L. 108-323), legislation to protect the world's most valuable tropical forests and coral reefs by forgiving debts owed the United States by developing countries in exchange for the preservation of significant tropical forests and coral reefs. This market-oriented conservation program is based on the Enterprise for the Americas Initiative (P.L. 102-532), which allowed the President to restructure debt in exchange for conservation efforts in Latin America.

TFCCA will help secure and protect endangered habitats and species faced with extinction due to climate change, deforestation, and other environmental and anthropogenic pressures. The initiative will directly sustain efforts to protect tropical forests, which harbor a major share of the Earth's biological and terrestrial resources and provide multiple ecological, economic and social benefits, including food, fuel, shelter, clean water, stable soils, medicines, livelihood and employment. It will help slow the extinction of animal and plant species by preserving rare and valuable tropical forest and coral reef habitats that house an estimated 10-30 million plant and animal species, including species essential to medicinal research and continued agricultural productivity in the United States and around the globe. The initiative is focused on developing countries, where economic pressure, poverty, food insecurity, energy needs and capital and investment priorities have contributed to rapid deforestation and forest degradation.

An additional benefit of the initiative is its role in mitigating climate change. Tropical forests act as "carbon sinks," absorbing an estimated 1 billion metric tons of carbon annually from the atmosphere. Conversely, the harvesting and burning of tropical forests adds an estimated 1.6 billion metric tons of carbons to the earth's atmosphere every year.

The legislation makes coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems, which face extreme vulnerability due to the effects of climate change, eligible for protection. Coral reefs provide a wide range of benefits to mankind; they harbor more species per unit area than any other marine habitat and provide the basis for developing pharmaceutical products and fostering a growing marine tourism sector. They are also a major source of food and jobs for hundreds of millions of coastal residents and serve as natural storm barriers, protecting vulnerable shorelines and communities from storm waves and erosion. Several countries may be well placed to pursue agreements to protect their coral reefs.

It is important to note that the legislation is meant to apply strictly to tropical forests, coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems. Eligible tropical forests should contain unique biodiversity, or should be representative of a larger tropical forest on a global, continental or regional scale. The legislation is not intended to include other non-tropical forest areas in temperate climates. Associated coastal marine ecosystems are understood to be those areas which surround or directly relate to a coral reef and are important to maintaining the ecological integrity of that coral reef. The committee does not intend for the legislation to be interpreted broadly, and TFCCA does not apply to coastal marine ecosystems that only have a tangential link to a nearby coral reef system.

The legislation achieves its objectives by authorizing the Secretary of State to negotiate agreements with eligible countries to redirect portions of their debt owed to the U.S. Government towards a fund that will provide grants to local organizations to undertake conservation activities in tropical forests and coral reefs. Funds generated from debt-for-nature transactions will be deposited in a tropical forest or coral reef fund for each country. The fund is overseen by an administrating body composed of one or more appointees chosen by the U.S. Government and the government of the beneficiary country, and individuals who represent a broad range of environmental, academic, and scientific organizations in the beneficiary country. Under one version of a debt-for-nature transaction authorized by this legislation, local currency payments of interest accrued on restructured loans are deposited into a tropical forest or coral fund and serve as the fund's principal. Interest earned from this principal balance and the principal itself is usually given in the form of grants to fund conservation projects. Participation of third parties (e.g., non-governmental organizations) under the debt-swap option can increase and leverage the amount of funds available to treat debt. In addition, the legislation is intended to build grass roots capacity and help promote and instill a culture of conservation through grants to community and other local non-governmental organizations.

The legislation includes authority for three types of debt mechanisms used to conduct debt-for-nature transactions: debt restructuring and reduction, three-party debt swaps, or debt buyback by the debtor country. In a three-party swap, a conservation group purchases a hard currency debt owed to commercial banks on the secondary market or an official debt owed to a creditor government at a discounted rate compared to the face value of the debt. The group then renegotiates the debt obligation with the debtor country. The debt is generally sold back to the debtor country for more than the NGO purchase price, but for less than its secondary market price. The proceeds generated from the renegotiated debt, to be repaid in local currency, are typically put into a fund that allocates grants to local environmental organizations for conservation projects. In these cases, the conservation organization, representatives from local environmental groups, and the debtor government administer the fund. Money to buy the debt initially may come from the NGO, governments, banks, or other private organizations.

In a debt-restructuring agreement, the original debt agreement is cancelled—a percentage of the face value of the debt is reduced—and a new agreement is created with a provision for an annual amount of money, in local currency, to be deposited into an environmental fund. This transaction can be bilateral or multilateral in nature and is conducted with official funds directly between one or more creditor countries and the debtor government. The creditor government(s) determine the criteria for eligibility, which usually involve the existence of certain financial and political conditions in the debtor country.

In a debt buyback agreement, the debt is bought back by the debtor country for a discounted price. Money for the environment is generated from a percentage of the buyback price.

The committee understands that oversight mechanisms developed to monitor the tropical forest component of this program will be extended to cover the coral reef component which is being authorized in this bill. The committee supports and encourages the use of financial audits to ensure that funds are appropriately utilized. Current oversight includes the following:

- Funds for this program are subject to periodic formal evaluations and annual fund evaluations recently required as part of OMB's Program Assessment Rating Tool (PART). A TFCA Evaluation Scorecard is completed each year on each TFCA Fund. The Evaluation Scorecard was developed to provide for consistent, on-going evaluation and reporting across local TFCA programs. Grant recipients sign agreements that establish the timeline, budget and reporting requirements for each grant. Grant proposals must meet criteria, including detailed budgets, established by the local board/oversight committee.
- A local board or oversight committee is required to monitor performance under each grant agreement to ensure that time schedules and other performance goals are being achieved. All grant agreements include provisions requiring periodic progress reports from the grantee to the board. These progress reports review all components of the grant which are essential to the successful achievement of the activity for which the grant was awarded. Boards and oversight committees also hold grantees accountable for both financial and programmatic aspects of their activities.
- Local TFCA activities are managed in-country primarily by local NGOs and community groups who live and work in the areas in which they are undertaking the activities. This enables a relatively continuous presence in the forest by those who are implementing approved activities. In addition, the TFCA secretariat coordinates the TFCA annual management budget Congress provides. Evaluations undertaken with these funds include local site visits to determine that activities are being carried out consistent with the terms of the TFCA agreement.

IV. COST ESTIMATE

In accordance with Rule XXVI, paragraph 11(a) of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the committee provides this estimate of the costs of this legislation prepared by the Congressional Budget Office.

UNITED STATES CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, September 18, 2007.

Hon. JOSEPH R. BIDEN, JR.,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for S. 2020, the Tropical Forest and Coral Conservative Reauthorization Act of 2007.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Sunita D'Monte.

Sincerely,

ROBERT A. SUNSHINE
(For Peter R. Orszag, Director).

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

September 18, 2007.

S. 2020 would authorize the appropriation of $20 million in 2008 and $75 million over the 2008–2010 period to restructure debt owed to the United States in exchange for agreements that the indebted countries would conserve tropical forests, coral reefs, and coastal marine ecosystems. CBO estimates that implementing the bill would cost $2 million in 2008 and $72 million over the 2008–2012 period, assuming that the authorized amounts are appropriated and that outlays will follow historical spending patterns for those programs.

Enacting the bill would not affect direct spending or revenues. S. 2020 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

S. 2020 would reauthorize the Tropical Forest Conservation Act of 1998 (TFCA) through 2010 and broaden its scope to include coral reefs and coastal marine ecosystems. Under current law, the act expires in 2007 and applies only to tropical forests. TFCA allows the United States to modify concessional debt held by eligible countries and redirect payments in local currency to support forest conservation programs. The debt modifications include authority to reduce and to restructure debt, to swap debt, or to sell debt back to an eligible country in ways that will generate income for conservation efforts. S. 2020 would authorize the appropriation of $20 million in 2008, $25 million in 2009, and $30 million in 2010 to cover the cost of loan modifications, as defined by the Federal Credit Reform Act.

The estimated budgetary impact of S. 2020 is shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 150 (international affairs).

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Sunita D'Monte. This estimate was approved by Peter H. Fontaine, Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

PART V—DEBT REDUCTION FOR DEVELOPING COUNTRIES WITH TROPICAL FORESTSSEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This part may be cited as the [“Tropical Forest Conservation Act of 1998”] “Tropical Forest and Coral Conservation Act of 2007”.

SEC. 802. [22 U.S.C. 2431] FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) It is the established policy of the United States to support and seek protection of [tropical forests] tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems around the world.

(2) Tropical forests provide a wide range of benefits to humankind by—

(A) harboring a major share of the Earth's biological and terrestrial resources, which are the basis for developing pharmaceutical products and revitalizing agricultural crops resources;

(B) playing a critical role as carbon sinks in reducing greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, thus moderating potential global climate change; and

(C) regulating hydrological cycles on which far-flung agricultural and coastal resources depend.

(3) International negotiations and assistance programs to conserve forest resources have proliferated over the past decade, but the rapid rate of tropical deforestation continues unabated.

(4) Developing countries with urgent needs for investment and capital for development have allocated a significant amount of their forests to logging concessions.

(5) Poverty and economic pressures on the populations of developing countries have, over time, resulted in clearing of vast areas of forest for conversion to agriculture, which is often unsustainable in the poor soils underlying tropical forests.

(6) Debt reduction can reduce economic pressures on developing countries and result in increased protection for tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems.

(7) Finding economic benefits to local communities from sustainable uses of tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems is critical to the protection of tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this part are—

(1) to recognize the values received by United States citizens from protection of tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems;

(2) to facilitate greater protection of tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems (and to give priority to protecting tropical forests areas with the highest levels of biodiversity and under the most severe threat) by providing for the alleviation of debt in countries where tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems are located, thus allowing the use of additional resources to protect these critical resources and reduce economic pressures that have led to deforestation on such countries;

(3) to ensure that resources freed from debt in such countries are targeted to protection of tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems; and

(4) to rechannel existing resources to facilitate the protection of tropical forests tropical forests and coral reefs and associated coastal marine ecosystems.
