COMMITTEE STATEMENT AND VIEWS

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 1234, the Electronic Message Preservation Act was introduced on March 18, 2013, by Ranking Minority Member Elijah E. Cummings (D-MD). As amended, this legislation would require federal agencies to preserve electronic messages that are determined to be records, require preservation and certification of electronic messages that are presidential records, and make additional changes to improve the Federal Government’s ability to capture and archive electronic federal records created or sent by personal electronic messaging accounts of federal employees.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

Congress first addressed federal recordkeeping in the 1930s, when the combination of growing public concern over poor agency recordkeeping practices and an expanding federal bureaucracy necessitated recordkeeping solutions for a larger volume of records. In 1934, Congress established the National Archives and the position of Archivist of the United States as the primary, central agent of records preservation for the Federal Government.¹ In 1950, Congress followed up the establishment of the National Archives with the Federal Records Act (FRA), which established basic records management authority for federal agencies and set basic records management standards, including standards for the disposal of records. The intent was that agencies would manage their own records internally, while the National Archives would filter and preserve those records that were transferred to the National Archives for posterity.

In 1978, in the wake of Watergate, Congress also passed the Presidential Records Act (PRA), intended to be a comprehensive answer to the general issue of presidential records preservation and maintenance. The PRA defined what did and did not qualify as a presidential record,² clarified the ownership of presidential records,³ detailed guidelines for the management and custody of presidential records,⁴ established procedures for restricting access to Presidential records under certain circumstances,⁵ and granted the Archivist the ability to promulgate regulations enforcing the PRA.⁶

Unfortunately, the rapid migration over the last several decades toward electronic communication and recordkeeping has rendered antiquated aspects of both the FRA and the PRA. This legislation will begin to address the deficiencies of current law in three ways. First, it will require the electronic capture, management, and preservation of electronic federal records by agencies. To ensure the success of this requirement, the National Archives will be required to establish mandatory minimum function requirements for electronic records management systems and to establish a process to certify that agencies' systems meet those requirements. Second, it will require the Archivist to issue regulations that establish standards necessary for the economical and efficient management of electronic Presidential records during the President's term of office. Similar to the standard for federal agencies, records management controls must be established and the Archivist will be required to annually certify whether the President's electronic records management controls meet the requirements of the Archivist. Finally, the legislation will also explicitly codify a requirement that federal employees who create or transmit a federal or presidential record through a non-governmental electronic messaging account file an electronic copy of that record with their agency.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

H.R. 1234, the Electronic Message Preservation Act, was introduced on March 18, 2013, and referred to the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. In the 112th Congress, the provisions contained within the introduced version were among a number of provisions included in H.R. 1144 and in the amended version of H.R. 3071, which was itself ordered favorably reported by the Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

At a business meeting on March 20, 2013, the Committee considered H.R. 1234 and, after the adoption by voice vote of an amendment offered by Chairman Issa (R-CA), H.R. 1234 was ordered to be favorably reported from the Committee, also by voice vote.

⁴ See id. at § 2203.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

On March 20, 2013, the Committee met in open session and ordered reported favorably the bill, H.R. 1234, as amended, by voice vote, a quorum being present.

APPLICATION OF LAW TO THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Section 102(b)(3) of Public Law 104–1 requires a description of the application of this bill to the legislative branch where the bill relates to the terms and conditions of employment or access to public services and accommodations. This bill requires federal agencies to preserve electronic messages that are determined to be records, requires preservation and certification of electronic messages that are presidential records, and makes additional changes to improve the Federal Government’s ability to capture and archive electronic federal records created or sent by personal electronic messaging accounts of federal employees. As such this bill does not relate to employment or access to public services and accommodations.

STATEMENT OF OVERSIGHT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII and clause (2)(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee’s oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

STATEMENT OF GENERAL PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

In accordance with clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee’s performance goals and objectives are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

DUPLICATION OF FEDERAL PROGRAMS

No provision of H.R. 1234 establishes or reauthorizes a program of the Federal Government known to be duplicative of another Federal program, a program that was included in any report from the Government Accountability Office to Congress pursuant to section 21 of Public Law 111–139, or a program related to a program identified in the most recent Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

DISCLOSURE OF DIRECTED RULE MAKINGS

H.R. 1234 requires the Archivist to develop and issue a number of regulations related to electronic messaging. With regard to federal records, the Archivist is required to issue regulations within 18 months of enactment of the legislation to: (1) require the electronic capture, management, and preservation of electronic records; (2) require that such electronic records are readily accessible for retrieval by elections searches; (3) establish mandatory minimum functional requirements for electronic records management systems; (4) establish a process to certify agency compliance with electronic records management system functional requirements; and (5) provide timelines for agency compliance with the aforementioned requirements, not to exceed four years from enactment. The Archivist is also directed to update these regulations as necessary. With regard to Presidential records, the Archivist is required to establish standards necessary for the economical and efficient management of electronic Presidential Records, including through a process to annually certify a President's compliance with such regulations.

FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT

The Committee finds that the legislation does not establish or authorize the establishment of an advisory committee within the definition of 5 U.S.C. App., Section 5(b).

UNFUNDED MANDATE STATEMENT

Section 423 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act (as amended by Section 101(a)(2) of the Unfunded Mandate Reform Act, P.L. 104-4) requires a statement as to whether the provisions of the reported include unfunded mandates. MAY 23, 2013.

Chairman, Committee on Oversight and Government Affairs,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 1234, the Electronic Message Preservation Act.

Enclosure.

H.R. 1234—Electronic Message Preservation Act

H.R. 1234 would amend federal law concerning the preservation, storage, and management of records by federal agencies. The legislation would direct the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) to issue regulations governing the preservation of e-mail and other electronic records in electronic format and establish procedures for using nonfederal e-mail services for official government business. Finally, H.R. 1234 would amend the Presidential Records Act to authorize NARA to manage the electronic records of the President.

Under the legislation, NARA would have 18 months to promulgate regulations on the preservation of electronic messages, and agencies would have four years to comply. Most of the provisions of H.R. 1234 would codify or expand current practices of the federal government. Under the Federal Records Act, each agency is required to make and preserve records of its activities. To accomplish this, agencies are required to have appropriate systems to manage and preserve their records. The act also gives NARA the responsibility to oversee and issue guidance on managing federal records, including e-mail messages. Although current NARA regulations require that government e-mail messages be stored electronically, NARA allows agencies to print and file paper copies of e-mail records. In addition, a 2012 Managing Government Records Directive (M-12-18) from the Office of Management and Budget requires that federal agencies manage all e-mail in an electronic format by 2016.

CBO expects that not all agencies will meet the timeline specified in the directive for using electronic systems to manage e-mail records. Some agencies will probably have to acquire additional computer hardware and software to meet the new requirements. Based on information from NARA and selected agencies, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 1234 would cost $15 million over the 2014–2018 period, assuming the availability of appropriated funds. CBO estimates that implementing other provisions of the bill regarding nonfederal e-mail and managing Presidential records would not have a significant impact on the federal budget. The legislation also could affect direct spending by agencies not funded through annual appropriations or by agencies considered to be off-budget. Therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures apply. CBO estimates, however, that any net increase in spending by those agencies would not be significant. Enacting the bill would not affect revenues.

Electronically archiving e-mail could reduce the administrative costs agencies incur to print and file paper copies and to perform other tasks, such as fulfilling Freedom of Information Act requests and retiring records for judicial proceedings. However, CBO expects that any such savings over the next five years would be small.

H.R. 1234 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Matthew Pickford. The estimate was approved by Theresa Gullo, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.
