

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS EXAMINATION FAIRNESS AND REFORM ACT

DECEMBER 12, 2016.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. HENSARLING, from the Committee on Financial Services, submitted the following

R E P O R T

[To accompany H.R. 1941]

[Including cost estimate of the Congressional Budget Office]

The Committee on Financial Services, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 1941) to improve the examination of depository institutions, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 1941 amends the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council Act of 1978 to establish deadlines within which regulatory agencies must hold exit interviews and issue final examination reports to financial institutions. The bill would also provide supervised financial institutions the right to have material supervisory determinations reviewed by a newly created Independent Examination Review Director within the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC).

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

Section 309 of the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 directed the federal regulators of financial institutions to establish an “independent intra-agency appellate process” by which an institution could seek review of certain regulatory determinations, including (1) examination ratings, (2) adequacy of loan loss reserves, and (3) classifications of loans significant to the institution. Collectively, these determinations are known as “material supervisory determinations.” Each federal regulator has instituted its own unique process for appeals of material supervisory determinations.

The Committee has heard testimony that the intra-agency review for appealing material supervisory determinations provides financial institutions with limited opportunities to challenge, that the appeals process is not impartial, and that appealing or opposing exam findings incurs retaliation from regulators.

In testimony before the committee on June 11, 2015, Mercatus Center Senior Research Fellow Hester Peirce stated:

A robust, objective process for raising concerns about low-quality exams is one way to increase exam quality. H.R. 1941 would establish a new interagency mechanism for examination oversight, including a new appeals process.

An intra-agency appeals process already exists at some financial regulators, but examination concerns remain. In the words of University of Alabama School of Law professor Julie Hill, who extensively researched the appeals processes of four financial regulators, the appeals process is “a dysfunctional and seldom used system.” The existing appeals mechanisms do not provide an effective check on bank examiners. As Professor Hill notes, both financial institutions and regulators have an interest in a good examination process:

“Pursuing unnecessary enforcement actions diverts regulatory attention from pressing problems. If a financial institution expends significant time and effort addressing an erroneous determination, it may prevent the institution from addressing other important matters. Moreover, allowing erroneous [Material Supervisory Determinations] to persist undermines the credibility of the supervisory process.”

Professor Hill’s finding that appeals are rare is consistent with the strong incentives for financial institutions to defer to the regulators that exercise continuing power over their businesses. Even with anti-retaliation measures in place, it is very difficult to second-guess a regulator. Financial institutions would be more likely to avail themselves of an external, third-party appeals process such as the one set forth in H.R. 1941. Clarifying the interaction between the intra-agency and interagency appeals process would help to ensure that the new process has its desired effect.

HEARINGS

The Committee on Financial Services’ Subcommittee on Financial Institutions held a hearing examining matters relating to H.R. 1941 on June 11, 2015.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

The Committee on Financial Services met in open session on July 28, 2015 and July 29, 2015 and considered the bill. An amendment offered by Ms. Maloney was withdrawn. The Committee ordered H.R. 1941 to be reported favorably to the House without amendment by a recorded vote of 45 yeas to 13 nays (recorded vote no. FC-46), a quorum being present.

COMMITTEE VOTES

Clause 3(b) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives requires the Committee to list the record votes on the motion to report legislation and amendments thereto. The sole recorded vote was on a motion by Chairman Hensarling to report the bill favorably to the House without amendment. The motion was agreed to by a recorded vote of 45 yeas to 13 nays (Record vote no. FC-46), a quorum being present.

COMMITTEE OVERSIGHT FINDINGS

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the findings and recommendations of the Committee based on oversight activities under clause 2(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, are incorporated in the descriptive portions of this report.

PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

Pursuant to clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee states that H.R. 1941 will reduce regulatory burden and increase agency accountability by, among other things, establishing stricter deadlines and examination standards for agencies issuing final examination reports.

EXPENDITURES

In compliance with clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee adopts as its own the estimate of new budget authority, entitlement authority, or tax expenditures or revenues contained in the cost estimate prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office pursuant to section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

COMMITTEE COST ESTIMATE

The Committee adopts as its own the cost estimate prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office pursuant to section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE ESTIMATES

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, February 11, 2016.

Hon. JEB HENSARLING,
*Chairman, Committee on Financial Services,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 1941, the Financial Institutions Examination Fairness and Reform Act.

Sincerely,

KEITH HALL.

Enclosure.

H.R. 1941—Financial Institutions Examination Fairness and Reform Act

Summary: H.R. 1941 would establish the Office of Independent Examination Review within the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (FFIEC). The council would investigate complaints from financial institutions about examinations, conduct regular reviews of the quality of examinations, and adjudicate appeals of determinations made as part of an examination. The bill also would prohibit financial regulators from classifying certain commercial loans as non-performing and from requiring certain banks to raise more capital to cover the potential losses from those loans.

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 1941 would increase net direct spending by $192 million and reduce revenues by $40 million over the 2016–2026 period; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures apply. In total, CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 1941 would increase budget deficits by $232 million over the 2016–2026 period. Implementing H.R. 1941 would not affect spending subject to appropriation.

CBO estimates that enacting the legislation would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits by more than $5 billion in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2027.

H.R. 1941 contains no intergovernmental mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA).

H.R. 1941 could increase the cost of an existing mandate on private entities required to pay fees. Based on information from the affected agencies, CBO estimates that the incremental cost of the mandate would fall well below the annual threshold for private-sector mandates established in UMRA ($154 million in 2016, adjusted annually for inflation).

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary effects of H.R. 1941 are shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 370 (commerce and housing credit).

Basis of estimate: For this estimate, CBO assumes that the bill will be enacted near the end of fiscal year 2016 and that spending will follow historical patterns for similar regulatory activities.

H.R. 1941 would establish a new office, the Office of Independent Examination Review, at FFIEC to investigate complaints from financial institutions related to examinations, to review examination standards to ensure consistency across the agencies, to adjudicate appeals of determinations made as part of an examination, and to conduct a continuing program of quality control and assurance.

FFIEC was established to promote uniformity in supervision of financial institutions; generally, its operating costs are borne by four financial regulatory agencies—the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA), and the Federal Reserve System. Under H.R. 1941, a portion of the costs of the office also would be covered by the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB).

Three of those regulators—the OCC, the FDIC, and the NCUA—collect fees to offset operating costs. Because of lags between the time costs are incurred by some of the financial regulators and when additional fees would be imposed, not all additional costs resulting from the bill could be recovered within the next 10 years. Costs borne by the CFPB are recorded in the budget as direct spending because the agency has permanent authority to spend amounts transferred from the Federal Reserve System. Finally, costs incurred by the Federal Reserve System to implement the bill would reduce remittances to the Treasury (which are recorded as revenues) and would therefore affect the federal budget by reducing revenues.

Currently, the FFIEC is supported by 15 staff who are employed by the regulatory agencies but assigned to the council.

Direct spending

Office of Independent Examination Review. CBO expects that establishing the Office of Independent Examination Review would require a significant increase in the council's staff. Based on information from FFIEC, CBO estimates that an additional 50 staff positions would be needed to meet the bill's requirements to investigate and resolve appeals and to review examination procedures. CBO expects that it would take several years to reach that new staffing level and that the costs would be spread evenly among the five regulatory agencies.

Based on information from the affected agencies, CBO estimates that establishing the office would cost $202 million over the 2016–2026 period to supply the FFIEC with additional staff and to cover other operating expenses. That amount reflects some savings to the regulators because a portion of the complaints they receive under current law would be handled by FFIEC under the bill. We expect that 80 percent of the net cost, or $162 million, would be spread equally among four financial regulators—the FDIC, OCC, NCUA and CFPB—increasing gross direct spending by that amount.

As noted above, three of those regulators collect fees to offset operating costs, but because there is a lag in the timing of collections, not all costs would be offset over the 2016–2026 period. CBO estimates that over the ten-year period additional fees collected from financial institutions would total about $70 million. On net, CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 1941 would increase direct spending by $92 million over the 2016–2026 period.

The remaining 20 percent would be charged to the Federal Reserve System; those effects are discussed below under the heading “Revenues.”

Other Administrative Costs. The bill also would establish deadlines for the federal banking regulators to complete examination reports. Based on information from those agencies, CBO estimates that they would need to hire additional staff to meet the deadlines established in the bill, at an estimated net cost of about $10 million over the 2016–2026 period.

Prohibitions on Regulatory Action. The bill would prohibit financial regulators from classifying certain commercial loans as nonperforming and from requiring certain banks to raise more capital to cover the potential losses that could stem from those loans. CBO expects that those prohibitions would primarily affect loans for commercial real estate. For institutions with limited or moderate exposure to such loans that otherwise have diversified loan portfolios, such limitations would be unlikely to result in a bank failure where the federal government incurs any costs. However, some banks with holdings that are primarily concentrated in the commercial real estate sector could experience a reduction in their capital reserves, which would lead to a higher probability of a bank failure and would increase the probability of additional federal costs to resolve the liabilities of failed institutions.

Based on a review of information contained in bank reports and on criteria established by federal financial regulations, CBO estimates about 450 federally insured financial institutions have portfolios that are concentrated in commercial real estate. The assets of those banks account for about 40 percent of all bank assets. Any significant downturn in the commercial real estate market could cause instability and losses for the portfolios of those institutions. CBO’s baseline for deposit insurance programs includes the probability that some banks will fail in any given year. Although the likelihood of deterioration in the market for commercial real estate is uncertain, the prohibitions in H.R. 1941 on regulation of commercial real estate loans would probably lead to a small increase in the number of banks that fail and require resolution through the FDIC’s Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF).

Based on the historical components of bank failures, CBO estimates that there would be about a 10 percent increase in failures for banks with portfolios that hold significant amounts of commercial real estate. Using CBO’s baseline projections of losses from the DIF, we estimate that a 10 percent increase in the rate of failure for those banks would cost about $90 million over the 2016–2026 period.

Revenues

The Federal Reserve System remits its profits to the Treasury, and those payments are recorded as revenues in the federal budget. Increasing the costs of operating the Federal Reserve System reduces federal revenues. CBO estimates that the portion of the costs to establish the Office of Independent Examination Review that would be allocated to the Federal Reserve would average about $4 million per year; over the 2016–2026 period, revenues would decline by $40 million.

Pay-As-You-Go Considerations: The Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010 establishes budget-reporting and enforcement procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or revenues. The net changes in outlays and revenues that are subject to those pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in the following table.

^a Negative numbers denote decreases in revenues.

Increase in long-term direct spending: CBO estimates that enacting the legislation would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits by more than $5 billion in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2027.

Estimated impact on state, local, and tribal governments: H.R. 1941 contains no intergovernmental mandates as defined in UMRA and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimated impact on the private sector: If financial regulators increase fees to offset some of the costs of implementing the new activities of the FFIEC, the bill would increase the cost of an existing mandate on private entities required to pay those fees. Based on information from the affected agencies, CBO estimates that the incremental cost of the mandate would amount to no more than about $25 million over the 2016–2021 period and would fall well below the annual threshold for private-sector mandates established in UMRA ($154 million in 2016, adjusted annually for inflation).

Previous CBO cost estimate: On July 29, 2015, CBO transmitted a cost estimate for S. 1484, the Financial Regulatory Improvement Act of 2015, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs on June 2, 2015. Section 104 of S. 1484 would establish the Office of Independent Examination Review. H.R. 1941 contains a provision that would direct the office to adjudicate appeals of determinations made as part of an examination; that provision is not included in Section 104 of S. 1484. CBO’s estimate of the cost to establish the office in each bill reflects that difference.

Estimate prepared by: Federal costs: Kim Cawley and Sarah Puro; Impact on state, local, and tribal governments: J’nell Blanco Suchy; Impact on the private sector: Logan Smith.

Estimate approved by: H. Samuel Papenfuss, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

FEDERAL MANDATES STATEMENT

The Committee adopts as its own the estimate of Federal mandates prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office pursuant to section 423 of the Unfunded Mandates reform Act.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE STATEMENT

No advisory committees within the meaning of section 5(b) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act were created by this legislation.

APPLICABILITY TO LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

The Committee finds that the legislation does not relate to the terms and conditions of employment or access to public services or accommodations within the meaning of the section 102(b)(3) of the Congressional Accountability Act.

EARMARK IDENTIFICATION

H.R. 1941 does not contain any congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits as defined in clause 9 of rule XXI.

DUPLICATION OF FEDERAL PROGRAMS

Pursuant to section 3(g) of H. Res. 5, 114th Cong. (2015), the Committee states that no provision of H.R. 1941 establishes or reauthorizes a program of the Federal Government known to be duplicative of another Federal program, a program that was included in any report from the Government Accountability Office to Congress pursuant to section 21 of Public Law 111–139, or a program related to a program identified in the most recent Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

DISCLOSURE OF DIRECTED RULEMAKING

Pursuant to section 3(i) of H. Res. 5, 114th Cong. (2015), the Committee states that H.R. 1941 contains no directed rulemaking.

Section 3. Examination standards

The section prescribes examination standards for financial institutions that: prescribe requirements and prohibitions for the treatment of certain commercial loans, prohibit a federal financial institution regulatory agency from requiring a well-capitalized financial

Lastly, this section prohibits a federal financial institutions regulatory agency from retaliating against a financial institution or delaying or denying any agency action that would be benefit a financial institution.

Section 6. Additional amendments

This section amends the Riegle Community Development and Regulatory Improvement Act of 1994 to require the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to establish an independent intra-agency appellate process in connection with the regulatory appeals process, and safeguards to protect an insured depository institution or insured credit union from retaliation by any federal banking agency for exercising its rights.
