INDIAN TRIBAL JUSTICE ACT TO SECURE URGENT RESOURCES VITAL TO INDIAN VICTIMS OF CRIME, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

DECEMBER 3, 2015.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. BARRASSO, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, submitted the following:

R E P O R T

[To accompany S. 1704]

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1704) to amend the Indian Tribal Justice Act to secure urgent resources vital to Indian victims of crime, and for other purposes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill, as amended, do pass.

PURPOSE

The purpose of S. 1704 is to create a dedicated funding stream from the Crime Victims Fund to administer a tribal grant program through the Department of the Interior for victims of crime. It would also increase Indian tribes' flexibility to use grants to build a baseline service delivery capacity and improve access to greatly needed, culturally appropriate, community-specific services.

BACKGROUND

In 1984, the Crime Victims Fund (CVF) was created by the Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) to support services for victims of crime.¹ The Office for Victims of Crime (OVC) was established within the Department of Justice (DOJ) to administer the CVF.² The CVF is budget neutral, and it is resourced by criminal fines, forfeited appearance bonds, penalties, special assessments, gifts, bequests, and donations.³

The OVC administers the CVF through formula and discretionary grants to state and local governments and other entities, as well as through specially designated programs.⁴ After specially designated programs are allocated, the remaining balance of the CVF is distributed through OVC discretionary grants, state victim compensation formula grants, and state victim assistance formula grants.⁵ Crime victim assistance and compensation grants may be used for three years once awarded. Any unspent amounts are retained in the CVF for future use.⁶

During the 98th Congress, Congress capped annual deposits to the CVF.⁷ These caps were eliminated in 1993, and from fiscal years 1985 to 1998, deposits collected in each fiscal year were distributed the following fiscal year for crime victim services.⁸ Congress established an annual obligation cap on the amount of the CVF funds that would be made available for distribution to support crime victim services in fiscal year 2000.⁹ Since then, Congress has established the annual obligation cap through appropriations law.¹⁰

Deposits to the CVF have grown dramatically over time.¹¹ Although the need for crime victim services also continues to grow, only a fraction of these dollars have actually been disbursed for the purpose of supporting crime victim services.¹²

In the 114th Congress, Senator Pat Toomey (R-PA) introduced S. 1495 to promote fairness for victims of crime and ensure the continued viability of the CVF.¹³ The Senate Committee on the Budget marked up the bill, which was placed on the Senate Legislative Calendar on July 21, 2015. An identical companion bill was introduced by Representative Joseph R. Pitts (R-PA).

NEED FOR LEGISLATION

The need for crime victim services is especially significant in Indian country for a number of reasons, including higher crime and victimization rates and systemic roadblocks that make it difficult, or in some cases impossible, for Indian tribes to secure resources for victims of crime.¹⁴

³Id.

⁴Id. “Specially designated programs” include the Children’s Justice Act Program, U.S. Attorneys’ Victim Witness Coordinator funding to support full time employees, FBI Victim Witness Specialist funding to support full time employees, and Federal Victim Notification System funding.

⁵Victim compensation formula grants may be used by states to reimburse crime victims for out-of-pocket expenses authorized in a state’s compensation statute, which are not covered by other resources. Victim assistance formula grants are directed by states to state and community-based victim service program operations to support direct services to victims of crime. States cannot use assistance grant funds in lieu of state and local dollars available for crime victim assistance and must prioritize distribution to certain types of victims according to VOCA guidelines. ¹⁴Addressing the Need for Victim Services in Indian Country: Hearing before the S. Comm. on Indian Affairs, 114th Cong. (2015).

Under the current system, despite disproportionately high rates of victimization among American Indians and Alaska Natives¹⁵ and significant increases in deposits to the CVF¹⁶, Indian tribes' ability to access the CVF to meet the needs of crime victims in Indian country is severely limited.¹⁷ These challenges are compounded by the lack of victim services infrastructure on tribal lands. Most Indian tribes lack not only the funding necessary to provide basic services to victims of crime, but also the infrastructure and capacity required to actually deliver these services.¹⁸

The manner in which the CVF has been allocated demonstrates that the current system is not sufficiently flexible to address the unique needs of Indian tribes. Indian tribes are required to apply to states for victim compensation and assistance funding, and significant restrictions on how the CVF funds may be used undermines Indian tribes' ability to provide services to victims of crime.¹⁹ Restrictions on the types of assistance that may be supported with CVF compensation and assistance dollars have also limited tribes' ability to provide greatly needed services to crime victims.²⁰

The need for reform is evidenced by the fact that over the past five fiscal years, despite rising crime and victimization rates, Indian tribes have never received more than 0.7% of the CVF crime victim assistance funding available.²¹ Over the same time period, only a fraction of the states with Indian tribes awarded subgrants to tribes for crime victim assistance.²²

S. 1704 would have a direct, positive impact on crime victims in Indian country by dramatically improving the process by which Indian tribes access grants to support greatly needed crime victim services and compensation. The bill would create a dedicated funding stream from the CVF to administer a tribal grant program through the Department of the Interior for victims of crime. It would also allow tribes to use grants to build a baseline service delivery capacity and otherwise improve access to culturally appropriate, community-specific services.

Without access to basic facilities, services and tools necessary for crime victims to recover and redress their injuries, the net result

According to the U.S. Department of Justice and the Indian Law and Order Commission, for instance, American Indian and Alaska Native (AIAN) youth experience reported violent crime rates up to 10 times the national rate, and approximately 22% of AIAN youth suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder. Native American women are 10 times as likely to be murdered as other U.S. citizens, and are sexually assaulted at 4 times the national average, and Alaska Native women are sexually assaulted at a rate of 12 times the national average. 96% of AIAN victims of rape or sexual assault have experienced other physical abuses.

is often re-victimization and re-criminalization.²³ These systemic failures can lead to increased recidivism, discourage reporting, prevent victims from seeking help, and can have life-long impacts on the mental and physical well-being of an individual or family.²⁴

Systemic failures can also have broader societal impacts and can engender distrust with the criminal justice system.²⁵ Moreover, the failure to help victims assert and defend their rights can allow cycles of violence to grow, and may ultimately lead to the loss of legal rights and protections.²⁶

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The Committee convened an oversight hearing on Addressing the Need for Victim Services in Indian Country on June 10, 2015. At this hearing, the administration, tribal and state officials, and a tribal court judge testified on the great need for victim services in Indian country. The Committee received testimony in the 114th Congress on juvenile justice, substance abuse and behavioral health, reentry and recidivism, and tribal courts, also underscoring the need to provide victim services in Indian country.²⁷

S. 1704 was introduced on July 7, 2015, by Chairman John Barrauso (R-WY) and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Co-sponsors include Vice Chairman Jon Tester (D-MT) and Senators Steve Daines (D-MT), Al Franken (D-MN), Heidi Heitkamp (D-ND), John Hoeven (R-ND), John McCain (R-AZ), Jerry Moran (R-KS), Lisa Murkowski (R-AK), Brian Schatz (D-HI), and Tom Udall (D-NM).

The Committee considered the bill at a business meeting on July 22, 2015. One amendment was offered and adopted. The bill, as amended, was ordered by voice vote to be favorably reported to the full Senate.

Although lawmakers and advocates have worked for some time to address the need for crime victim services, S. 1704 is novel legislation specifically focused on addressing the unique needs of crime victims in Indian country.

S. 1704 has received strong bipartisan support. Indian tribes, tribal associations, and crime victim advocates also strongly support this legislation.

SUMMARY OF AMENDMENT

Chairman Barrasso offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute at a business meeting held on July 22, 2015. The amendment was adopted, and no other amendments were considered.

The substitute amendment is based on substantial feedback from Indian tribes, Committee members, the administration, and subject-matter experts. It makes technical corrections; clarifies and extends crime victim confidentiality and privacy protections; allows the administering Office to provide training and technical assistance to Indian tribes; and adjusts the timeline for promulgating final regulations through negotiated rulemaking.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF BILL AS ORDERED REPORTED

Section 1—Short title

This section states that the Act may be cited as the “Securing Urgent Resources Vital to Indian Victim Empowerment Act” or the “SURVIVE Act.”

Section 2—Tribal Victims of Crime

Section 2(a) amends Section 3 of the Indian Tribal Justice Act (ITJA) (25 U.S.C. § 3602) by defining the terms “victim of crime”, “Indian”, and “Indian country”.

Section 2(b) amends Section 101 of the ITJA (25 U.S.C. § 3611) to change the name of the Office of Tribal Justice Support to the “Office of Tribal Justice Support and Victim Services” (the Office) and allow the Office to provide training and technical assistance to Indian tribes.

Section 2(c) amends the ITJA to create Section 105, a grant program for tribal crime victim services and compensation within the Office, and defines “immediate family member”, “Indian tribe”, and “personally identifying information”.

Section 2(c) directs the Office to make grants to Indian tribes on a competitive basis for a range of crime victim compensation and service activities. Funds obtained through this program may be expended over a period of five years, and shall not be subject to matching requirements. Any sums that are unobligated at the end of the five-year period must be returned to the Office and made available for Indian crime victim compensation or services in the following fiscal year.

Section 2(c) also specifies that in order to access grants under this program, an Indian tribe must submit in writing a detailed victim assistance proposal, according to listed parameters. Any Indian tribe that receives a grant through this program must also submit an annual report to the Office describing the purpose for which grant funds were used.

Section 2(c) provides explicit oversight and enforcement authorities and duties to the Office, including requiring the Office to engage in regular monitoring, reviews, investigations, and audits. The Office must also ensure that all grants are subject to performance measures and enforceable agreements that allow for thorough program oversight. The Secretary of the Interior (Secretary) must provide annual compliance reports on all grants awarded under this program to the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and the House Subcommittee on Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs. The annual reports shall protect the confidentiality and privacy of individuals receiving services from the grant recipient and omit personally identifying information.

Section 2(c) section specifies that grants awarded under this program and related administrative costs shall be supported with funds in the CVF, and amends Section 1402(d) of VOCA to require 5% of the CVF funds made available for obligation in a fiscal year to be available to the Secretary to execute the Indian tribal grant program. The Office may not use more than 4% of these funds for grant administration and technical assistance costs.

Section 2(c) specifies that the grant program will sunset after a period of ten years.

Section 3—Regulations regarding Indian tribes

Section 3(a) provides that any rule, regulation, or guidance promulgated before enactment shall have no force or effect with respect to the Indian tribal grant program established under this Act.

Section 3(b) requires the Secretary to issue implementing regulations through negotiated rulemaking, after consultation with Indian tribes.

Section 3(b) also requires the Secretary to consult with no less than two Indian tribes from each Bureau of Indian Affairs region, and that small, medium, and large land-based Indian tribes are represented during the negotiated rulemaking.

COST AND BUDGETARY CONSIDERATIONS

The following cost estimate, as provided by the Congressional Budget Office, dated September 3, 2015, was prepared for S. 1704:

SEPTEMBER 3, 2015.

Hon. JOHN BARRASSO,
Chairman, Committee on Indian Affairs,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for S. 1704, the Securing Urgent Resources Vital to Indian Victim Empowerment Act.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Martin von Gnechten.

Sincerely,

KEITH HALL.

Enclosure.

S. 1704—Securing Urgent Resources Vital to Indian Victim Empowerment Act

S. 1704 would expand the Office of Tribal Justice Support within the Bureau of Indian Affairs to provide services to victims of crimes in tribal areas. The legislation would establish a new grant program to provide services and compensation to those victims. S. 1704 would direct that 5 percent of the funds made available to the Crime Victims Fund (CVF) in each year for the next 10 years be used for that grant program.

Under current law, criminal fines are deposited in the CVF, and spent without further appropriation. The legislation would affect how and when those funds are distributed and spent but would not change the total amount spent. Because S. 1704 would affect direct spending, pay-as-you-go procedures apply. However, CBO estimates that the net effect on direct spending would be insignificant for each year. Enacting S. 1704 would not affect revenues.

CBO estimates that implementing the bill would have no significant effect on spending subject to appropriation.

S. 1704 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Martin von Gnechten. The estimate was approved by H. Samuel Papenfuss, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.
