DISSENTING VIEWS

[To accompany H.R. 5025]

The Committee on Natural Resources, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 5025) to amend the Western and Central Pacific Fisheries Convention Implementation Act to limit the imposition of penalties against a person fishing on a United States flag fishing vessel in certain areas of the Pacific Ocean based on a report by an observer on such a vessel, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

The purpose of H.R. 5025 is to amend the Western and Central Pacific Fisheries Convention Implementation Act to limit the imposition of penalties against a person fishing on the United States flag fishing vessel in certain areas of the Pacific Ocean based on a report by an observer on such a vessel.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

The coordinated management of shared fishery stocks in international waters (201 or more miles from U.S. shores) is accomplished by nations participating in Regional Fisheries Management Organizations (RFMOs). These international commissions guide and coordinate the fisheries management activities of multiple nations in a specific region.\textsuperscript{1} There are a number of RFMOs that the U.S. is party to, with the five major RFMOs being the Commission for the Conservation of Southern Bluefin Tuna (CCSBT), the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission (IATTC), the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tuna (ICCAT), the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission (IOTC), and the Western and Central Pacific Fisheries Commission (WCPFC).\textsuperscript{2}

In each case, an RFMO comprised of designees from each participating country and territory fosters cooperative management of these shared resources.\textsuperscript{3} Cooperation under such a convention allows the U.S. to address fisheries resources not covered under pre-existing fisheries management instruments and helps to prevent destructive fishing practices by other participating nations that may hurt domestic fisheries.\textsuperscript{4}

The Western and Central Pacific Fisheries Convention Implementation Act (Public Law 109–479)\textsuperscript{5} was signed into law in January 2007 to codify the United States participation in the Convention and Management of Highly Migratory Fish Stocks in the Western and Central Pacific Ocean.\textsuperscript{6} The Convention established the WCPFC which, according to its website, is responsible for overseeing the compliance of the Convention by signatory nations, as well as supporting three subsidiary committees: Scientific, Technical and Compliance, and Northern Committees.\textsuperscript{7}

To ensure fair, consistent implementation and enforcement of the Convention, H.R. 5025 simply states that any U.S. flagged vessel that is accused of violating the Convention be afforded the opportunity to see the on-board observer’s report citing the violation within 60 days of the alleged violation taking place. The legislation also simply states that any enforcement action taken against a U.S. flagged vessel for a violation under the Convention be convened within one year of the violation occurring.

\textbf{COMMITTEE ACTION}

H.R. 5025 was introduced on February 14, 2018, Congresswoman Aumua Amata Coleman Radewagen (R–AS). On November 15, 2018, the Natural Resources Committee met to consider the bill. The Subcommittee was discharged by unanimous consent. No amendments were offered, and the bill was ordered favorably reported to the House of Representatives by a voice vote.

DISSENTING VIEWS

H.R. 5025 amends the Western and Central Pacific Fisheries Convention Implementation Act to make it more difficult to penalize a person for violating the Act. Specifically, H.R. 5025 limits the ability of NOAA law enforcement to bring charges against a person fishing on a United States flagged fishing vessel in the Convention area based on a report by a fisheries observer.

Fishery observers play an integral role in managing our nation’s robust fisheries. They are highly trained biological scientists who gather data to support fishery conservation, management, and ensure compliance with fishing and safety regulations.

H.R. 5025 would only allow a penalty to apply if the observer report is provided to the captain and the owner of the vessel within 60 days after the end of the fishing trip and any enforcement action based on the report is brought within one year after the end of the fishing trip.

This bill is problematic because it often takes more than a year to bring enforcement action due to the lack of resources and the amount of time it takes to conduct a thorough investigation considering the international and transnational nature of the fleet. In addition, the information provided by the observer could not be used for a repeat offender if violations occur more than a year apart making it more difficult to go after the worst offenders. For these reasons, we oppose the bill as reported.
