COMMITTEE STATEMENT AND VIEWS

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 24 directs the Government Accountability Office (GAO) to conduct a full audit of the Federal Reserve within a year of enactment. GAO must also provide a report on this audit to Congress ninety days after the audit is complete.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

Congress delegated its power to regulate the supply and value of money to the Federal Reserve System (the Fed) under Article I, Section 8, of the Constitution. Compared to other government agencies, the Federal Reserve System enjoys a unique degree of independence from Congress and the President. Generally, economists consider this arrangement to lead to better policy outcomes.¹ Over the years, the Fed's quasi-public structure has created an inherent tension between the need for oversight and transparency and the need for the Fed to have operational independence to effectively deliberate on monetary policy.

As an instrument of monetary policy, the Fed was designed to be politically independent. However, this has created challenges in conducting congressional oversight. For example, unlike most other government agencies, the Fed is self-financing and its budget is not subject to the appropriations or authorization process.² There is no congressional budgetary oversight of the Fed and no regular process for Congress to ensure the Fed is properly utilizing its funds.³ Unlike other government agencies, under the current system Congress is unable to use control over the Fed's resources as leverage to achieve its goals.⁴

In 2007, the Fed took several steps in its aggressive response to the financial crisis that led it to impact more political policy areas. Specifically, the Fed took "a political strategy that emphasized direct involvement and commitment by the president to an early, large-scale, and preemptive recapitalization of the financial sector by using public funds."⁵ Further, the Fed provided hundreds of billions of dollars in loans to four select private entities through quantitative easing and the creation of dollar swap lines with the European Central Bank.⁶ In the process of doing so, the Fed expanded its balance sheet from $850 billion to over $4.4 trillion between September 2008 and September 2014.⁷ The Fed was able to undertake these measures by using the broad powers in section 13(3) of the Federal Reserve Act to take these steps without congressional input.⁸ These sweeping measures had a substantial impact on the economic and fiscal health of the United States and, as such, led to greater interest in empowering Congress to conduct more stringent oversight over the Federal Reserve System.

Prior to 1978, GAO only was permitted to audit the Fed's role as an agent of the Treasury, under their authorization to audit the Treasury. The GAO has conducted audits of the Fed since 1978 under the Federal Banking Agency Audit Act of 1978.⁹ Although this law expanded GAO's access to the Fed's role in banking regulations and payment systems, it specifically prohibited GAO from investigating the following four areas of the Fed's operations:¹⁰

1. Transactions for or with a foreign central bank, government of a foreign country, or non-private international financing organization;
2. Deliberations, decisions, or actions on monetary policy matters, including discount window operations, reserves of member banks, securities credit, interest on deposits, and open market operations;
3. Transactions made under the direction of the Federal Open Market Committee; [and]
4. A part of a discussion or communication among or between members of the [Federal Reserve Board of Governors] and officers and employees of the Federal Reserve System related to [the above three areas].¹¹

H.R. 24 authorizes GAO to audit several types of transactions that it is currently prohibited from investigating under current law. Specifically, GAO will be permitted to: investigate the Fed's transactions with foreign banks and countries; deliberations, decisions, or actions on monetary policy matters; transactions made under the direction of the Federal Open Market Committee; and discussions or communications among or between members of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve System. H.R. 24 will not negatively impact the Fed's independence because this GAO oversight will not "under current law, release any confidential information identifying institutions that have borrowed from the Fed or the details of other transactions."¹²

APPLICATION OF LAW TO THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Section 102(b)(3) of Public Law 104–1 requires a description of the application of this bill to the legislative branch where the bill relates to the terms and conditions of employment or access to public services and accommodations. This bill requires a full audit of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Reserve banks by the Comptroller General of the United States. As such, this bill does not relate to employment or access to public services and accommodations.

STATEMENT OF OVERSIGHT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with clause 3(c)(1) of rule XIII and clause (2)(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's oversight findings and recommendations are reflected in the descriptive portions of this report.

In accordance with clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee's performance goal or objective of this bill is to improve congressional oversight of the Federal Reserve System without impacting operational independence.

DUPLICATION OF FEDERAL PROGRAMS

No provision of this bill establishes or reauthorizes a program of the Federal Government known to be duplicative of another Federal program, a program that was included in any report from the Government Accountability Office to Congress pursuant to section 21 of Public Law 111–139, or a program related to a program identified in the most recent Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

DISCLOSURE OF DIRECTED RULE MAKINGS

The Committee estimates that enacting this bill does not direct the completion of any specific rule makings within the meaning of section 551 or title 5, United States Code.

COMMITTEE ESTIMATE

Clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives requires an estimate and a comparison by the Committee of the costs that would be incurred in carrying out this bill. However, clause 3(d)(2)(B) of that Rule provides that this requirement does not apply when the Committee has included in its report a timely submitted cost estimate of the bill prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, which the Committee has included below.

BUDGET AUTHORITY AND CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

With respect to the requirements of clause 3(c)(2) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and with respect to requirements of clause (3)(c)(3) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 402 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Committee has received the following cost estimate for this bill from the Director of the Congressional Budget Office:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, April 18, 2017.

Hon. JASON CHAFFETZ,
*Chairman, Committee on Oversight and Government Reform,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 24, the Federal Reserve Transparency Act of 2017.

Enclosure.

H.R. 24—Federal Reserve Transparency Act of 2017

H.R. 24 would amend federal law regarding audits of the Federal Reserve System. Specifically, the bill would direct the Government Accountability Office (GAO) to prepare, within 12 months of enactment, an audit of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Reserve banks. The bill would also repeal prohibitions under current law that prevent GAO from auditing the Federal Reserve's monetary policy and any of the Federal Reserve's transactions involving a foreign central bank, the government of a foreign country, or a nonprivate international financing organization. CBO expects that the removal of those prohibitions would result in future requests from Members of Congress for GAO to conduct additional oversight and analysis of the Federal Reserve System on a periodic basis.

Based on an analysis of information from GAO regarding the amount of effort required for its previous audit of the Federal Reserve, which was required by the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Public Law 111-203), CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 24 would cost $6 million over the 2018-2022 period; such spending would be subject to the availability of appropriated funds. That cost would cover full-time and part-time GAO employees plus administrative expenses necessary to prepare the audit required by the bill as well as additional oversight and analysis that CBO expects would result from implementing the bill.

In addition, based on information provided by the Federal Reserve and on information provided by GAO regarding the likely costs of similar proposals aimed at oversight of the Federal Reserve, CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 24 would increase costs of the Federal Reserve starting in 2018, and thus decrease federal revenues by $3 million over the 2018-2027 period. That estimate of revenue reductions reflects higher costs of the Federal Reserve System associated with coordination of the initial audit and future oversight and analysis by GAO. Because enacting H.R. 24 would affect revenues, pay-as-you-go procedures apply. CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 24 would not affect direct spending.

The Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Act of 2010 establishes budget-reporting and enforcement procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or revenues. The net changes in revenues that are subject to those pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in the following table.

CBO ESTIMATE OF PAY-AS-YOU-GO EFFECTS FOR H.R. 24, AS ORDERED REPORTED BY THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON OVERSIGHT AND GOVERNMENT REFORM ON MARCH 28, 2017

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—
	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2025	2026	2027	2017– 2022	2017– 2027
NET INCREASE IN THE DEFICIT
Statutory Pay-As-You-Go Impact	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	3

Note: Components may not sum to totals because of rounding.

CBO estimates that enacting the legislation would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits by more than $5 billion in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2028.

H.R. 24 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

The CBO staff contact for the estimate is Nathaniel Frentz. The estimate was approved by H. Samuel Papenfuss, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis, and John McClelland, Assistant Director for Tax Analysis.

SEC. 11. The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall be authorized and empowered:

(a)(1) To examine at its discretion the accounts, books and affairs of each Federal reserve bank and of each member bank and to require such statements and reports as it may deem necessary. The said board shall publish once each week a statement showing the condition of each Federal reserve bank and a consolidated statement for all Federal reserve banks. Such statements shall show in detail the assets and liabilities of the Federal reserve banks, single and combined, and shall furnish full information regarding the character of the money held as reserve and the amount, nature and maturities of the paper and other investments owned or held by Federal reserve banks.

(2) To require any depository institution specified in this paragraph to make, at such intervals as the Board may prescribe, such reports of its liabilities and assets as the Board may determine to be necessary or desirable to enable the Board to discharge its responsibility to monitor and control monetary and credit aggregates. Such reports shall be made (A) directly to the Board in the case of member banks and in the case of other depository institutions whose reserve requirements under section 19 of this Act exceed zero, and (B) for all other reports to the Board through the (i) Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the case of insured State savings associations that are insured depository institutions (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act), State non-member banks, savings banks, and mutual savings banks, (ii) National Credit Union Administration Board in the case of insured credit unions, (iii) the Comptroller of the Currency in the case of any Federal savings association which is an insured depository institution (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) or which is a member as defined in section 2 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, and (iv) such State officer or agency as the Board may designate in the case of any other type of bank, savings association, or credit union. The Board shall endeavor to avoid the imposition of unnecessary burdens on reporting institutions and the duplication of other reporting requirements. Except as otherwise required by law, any data provided to any department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States pursuant to other reporting requirements shall be made available to the Board. The Board may classify depository institutions for the purposes of this paragraph and may impose different requirements on each such class.

(b) To permit, or, on the affirmative vote of at least five members of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to require Federal reserve banks to rediscount the discounted paper of other Federal reserve banks at rates of interest to be fixed by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(c) To suspend for a period not exceeding thirty days, and from time to time to renew such suspension for periods not exceeding fifteen days, any reserve requirements specified in this Act.

(d) To supervise and regulate through the Secretary of the Treasury the issue and retirement of Federal reserve notes, except for the cancellation and destruction, and accounting with respect to such cancellation and destruction, of notes unfit for circulation, and to prescribe rules and regulations under which such notes may be delivered by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Federal reserve agents applying therefor.

(e) To add to the number of cities classified as Reserve cities under existing law in which national banking associations are subject to the Reserve requirements set forth in section twenty of this Act; or to reclassify existing Reserve cities or to terminate their designation as such.

(f) To suspend or remove any officer or director of any Federal reserve bank, the cause of such removal to be forthwith communicated in writing by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to the removed officer or director and to said bank.

(g) To require the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

(h) To suspend, for the violation of any of the provisions of this Act, the operations of any Federal reserve bank, to take possession thereof, administer the same during the period of suspension, and, when deemed advisable, to liquidate or reorganize such bank.

(i) To require bonds of Federal reserve agents, to make regulations for the safeguarding of all collateral, bonds, Federal reserve notes, money or property of any kind deposited in the hands of such agents, and said board shall perform the duties, functions, or services specified in this Act, and make all rules and regulations necessary to enable said board effectively to perform the same.

(j) To exercise general supervision over said Federal reserve banks.

(k) To delegate, by published order or rule and subject to the Administrative Procedure Act, any of its functions, other than those relating to rulemaking or pertaining principally to monetary and credit policies, to one or more administrative law judges, members or employees of the Board, or Federal Reserve banks. The assignment of responsibility for the performance of any function that the Board determines to delegate shall be a function of the Chairman. The Board shall, upon the vote of one member, review action taken at a delegated level within such time and in such manner as the Board shall by rule prescribe. The Board of Governors may not delegate to a Federal reserve bank its functions for the establishment of policies for the supervision and regulation of depository institution holding companies and other financial firms supervised by the Board of Governors.

(l) To employ such attorneys, experts, assistants, clerks, or other employees as may be deemed necessary to conduct the business of the board. MINORITY VIEWS

The United States Federal Reserve System is an independent central bank, and its monetary policy actions are not subject to approval by other entities. This independence is critical to the ability of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve to pursue monetary policies it considers most responsive to the nation's current economic conditions and most likely to fulfill its dual mandate of promoting maximum employment and stable prices.

The Federal Banking Agency Audit Act of 1978 established that the Federal Reserve System may be audited by the Government Accountability Office (GAO), and regular audits have been conducted since that date. However, that Act included protections now codified in 31 U.S.C. 714(b) to ensure that the Federal Reserve's monetary policymaking remains independent from outside political influence.

In 2010, the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act expanded the types of audits GAO may conduct of the Federal Reserve, as well as the data that regularly must be disclosed to the public by the Federal Reserve.

For example, the Dodd-Frank Act required GAO to audit the emergency financial assistance provided by the Federal Reserve during the financial crisis. The Act also added a new subsection (f) to 31 U.S.C. 714 which opens the transactions and discount window operations authorized under section 11(s) of the Federal Reserve Act to audit so GAO can assess their operational integrity and internal controls, the effectiveness of security and collateral policies, the fairness to all institutions of such transactions, and the policies governing the use of third-party contractors engaged to manage such transactions.

The Dodd-Frank Act required the Federal Reserve to post on its website all GAO reports, annual financial statements, reports to Congress, and any other information "necessary or helpful to the public in understanding the accounting, financial reporting and internal controls of the Board and Federal Reserve banks."

In addition, the Dodd-Frank Act required the Federal Reserve to release information regarding borrowers and counterparties participating in emergency credit facilities, discount lending programs, and open market operations, including the names of the parties, the amount borrowed by or transferred to the participant or counterparty, the interest rate or discount and the collateral pledged. The information must be released within one year of the termination of a credit facility, and within two years of a discount lending transaction or open market operation.

The Dodd-Frank Act was carefully crafted to expand transparency surrounding the Federal Reserve's operations without impeding its ability to carry out the critical responsibility of independently setting our nation's monetary policy.

H.R. 24 would significantly alter this balance by permanently repealing the provisions in 31 U.S.C. 714(b). GAO would be permitted to audit the Federal Reserve's transactions with foreign central banks and transactions conducted under the direction of the Federal Open Market Committee. GAO also would be able to audit the Federal Reserve's internal deliberations on monetary policy matters, as well as discussions or communications Members of the Board have with each other and with staff of the Federal Reserve System regarding monetary policy.

There is significant concern that opening the Federal Reserve's monetary policy deliberations to GAO audit in this way—including audits conducted without any significant elapse of time from the point of decision—could influence how such deliberations are conducted and potentially even the policies that are chosen, thus degrading the independence of the Federal Reserve.

If all restrictions on GAO's ability to audit the Federal Reserve's deliberative processes are removed, members of Congress could actively seek to influence the Federal Reserve's deliberations by the types and subjects of audits they request of GAO. Members of Congress could also seek to obtain the materials GAO accesses when performing its audits, including documents related to the Federal Reserve's deliberations.

The Committee passed similar legislation in the 112th, 113th, and 114th Congresses (H.R. 459, H.R. 24, and H.R. 24). In those four Congresses, the Committee held only one hearing to examine the consequences of this legislation. The Committee's March 23, 2017, hearing titled "Legislative Proposals for Fostering Transparency" examined transparency-related legislation, including a brief discussion of H.R. 24. The Committee has not heard from a single witness from the Federal Reserve about how the legislation would impact the agency's operations.

Moving forward on this bill without calling a single witness from the Federal Reserve may result in many unforeseen and potentially damaging consequences.

ELIJAH E. CUMMINGS,
Ranking Member.
