DISSENTING VIEWS

Democrats opposed the revised allocations, which directed an additional $32 million to the Homeland Security bill. Even before this revision, the Homeland Security allocation was more than enough to adequately fund programs that address actual security threats.

While scoring changes from other bills may have yielded additional funds for the last bill the committee considered, Democrats would have preferred to find a way to restore funding to important programs such as job training in the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education bill or basic education in the State and Foreign Operations bill.

Funding levels are a direct reflection of our priorities. Investing in healthcare and education of the most vulnerable pays dividends for future generations. Building walls sets the world on a path of distrust.

Overall, the allocations from House Republicans shortchange the American people, waste taxpayer dollars on the President's disgraceful immigration policies, and fail to invest in economic growth and job creation. We can and must do better.

NITA M. LOWEY.
