I. SUMMARY AND BACKGROUND

A. PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H. Res. 1018 requests that the President transmit to the House of Representatives certain documents in the possession of the President relating to the determination to impose certain tariffs and to the strategy of the United States with respect to China.

B. BACKGROUND

The Committee notes that there is strong bipartisan agreement in Congress that China's unfair trade practices significantly harm U.S. farmers, workers, and businesses, and that strong action is needed to hold China accountable and level the playing field. USTR's Section 301 Report earlier this year compiled compelling evidence of China's unfair practices, inequitable treatment of U.S. companies, outright theft related to intellectual property, forced technology transfers, and unfair licensing policies. President Trump is right to insist that these abuses must stop.

China cheats on trade, and there is a real cost in terms of U.S. jobs. The necessary resolution is long-term, enduring reform to China's trade and investment policies, including changes to Chinese subsidies, tariffs, other trade barriers, and predatory intellectual property policies. Timely and astute negotiations under President Trump's leadership and his personal engagement with President Xi are essential to achieving a negotiated solution that leads to a strong, ambitious, and enforceable outcome for the United States.

As the United States works toward this outcome, it is important to target any response to China to minimize unintended consequences to local U.S. businesses. Broad tariffs can severely harm American companies, farmers, workers, and consumers.

The Committee notes that Article I, Section 8 of the United States Constitution gives Congress the authority over international trade. Based on this Constitutional authority and the partnership that has developed over time between Congress and the President through legislation, the Committee's expectation continues to be that all Administrations will engage in intensive consultation with Congress before taking action on any aspects of trade policy. This includes any actions taken with respect to tariffs, non-tariff barriers, trade negotiations (whether or not conducted under the framework set forth in the Bipartisan Congressional Trade Priorities and Accountability Act of 2015), dispute settlement, and any other trade enforcement initiatives.
