I. PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 5373, the “United States Anti-Doping Agency Reauthorization Act of 2020”, was introduced by Representatives Mike Thompson (D–CA), Bill Johnson (R–OH), and Diana DeGette (D–CO) on December 9, 2019. This legislation reauthorizes the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency (USADA), the entity charged with administering anti-doping programs for certain sports in the United States. In anticipation of hosting the 2028 Olympics in Los Angeles, this bill steadily increases the authorization past the Olympic year through fiscal year (FY) 2029. The bill would direct USADA to promote positive youth sports experiences by using a portion of its funding to provide educational materials on sportsmanship, character building, and healthy performance for those participating in youth sports. It would also direct the Department of Justice, the Department of Homeland Security, and the Food and Drug Administration to coordinate with USADA on efforts to prevent the use of performance-enhancing drugs or prohibit performance-enhancing methods by sharing all information in their possession that may be relevant to preventing the use of such drugs or prohibiting such methods.

II. BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

USADA is the national anti-doping organization in the United States for Olympic, Paralympic, Pan American, and Parapan American sports.¹ USADA was established as an independent body in 2000 and given authority by Congress to manage a comprehensive anti-doping program.² The agency’s programming includes in-competition and out-of-competition testing, results management processes, drug reference resources, and athlete education for all United States Olympic and Paralympic Committee recognized sport national governing bodies, their athletes, and events.³ Since 2000, USADA has conducted approximately 175,000 drug tests on athletes.⁴ Four time Olympian Lowell Bailey emphasized the importance of antidoping policies, saying, “if you take away the fairness and it becomes a rigged game, you lose the integrity of the sport . . . you lost the trust of the fans, and in the end, everyone loses, including athletes who cheated.”⁵

Through the agency’s TrueSport program, USADA works to educate young athletes and promote positive youth sport experiences.⁶ Dr. Deborah Gilboa, an expert in the TrueSport program, said the program, “[enables] generations of young athletes to grow their resilience and life skills by learning to use every experience—including stress and failure—as a path to success.”⁷ Another expert, Dr. Kevin Chapman, said, “[a]s a former collegiate athlete and psychologist who works with athletes, teaching families the importance of regulating strong emotions and how to compete with integrity is paramount.”⁸ He also said USADA’s TrueSport program is “helping young athletes navigate the psychosocial challenges that come with competition.”⁹ According to USADA, the TrueSport Partner program has reached more than 13 million individuals since its inception in 2017.¹⁰ The organization also engages with other national anti-doping organizations globally to advocate for integrity in sport on behalf of clean athletes. USADA’s authorization expires at the end of FY 2020.

H.R. 5373 would extend USADA’s authorization to continue this work and would direct the agency to promote positive youth sports experiences through educational materials for athletes, parents, and coaches on sportsmanship, character building, and healthy performance. The bill would also enable USADA to work with other partner agencies in the United States to prevent the use of performance-enhancing drugs or prohibit performance-enhancing methods.
