Message on Susan B. Anthony Day, 2025

February 15, 2025

Today we celebrate the birthday of Susan B. Anthony, a warrior for women and hero of equality, justice, and the constitutional rule of law.

For her entire life, Susan B. Anthony was fiercely devoted to the principle that every American, regardless of race or sex, is born with the God-given right to enjoy the blessings of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Years later, her fearless crusade for equality culminated in the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment of the Constitution, which blocked States from denying citizens the right to vote on the basis of sex. Throughout her storied life, she also emerged as a champion of the abolitionist movement and a tireless advocate for the sanctity of life.

As President, I have already taken historic action to advance the sacred causes that Susan B. Anthony cherished so deeply. I was honored to sign an Executive order safeguarding women's sports, ensuring the survival of free and competitive spaces for female athletes. Additionally, I was proud to order the end of taxpayer-funded abortion, a big win for the most vulnerable among us.

While my administration continues to honor the legacy of Susan B. Anthony and promote our shared cause of liberty and Justice for all, I also want to thank our Nation's First Lady, Melania Trump, for previously hosting a White House celebration with America's youth to honor the centennial anniversary of the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment. I know she looks forward to continuing to help empower and support girls and women in the United States and around the globe.

Today Melania joins me in paying tribute to Susan B. Anthony's perseverance, leadership, and monumental achievements. Let us continue her life's work of creating a culture that celebrates the enduring triumph of freedom, the dignity of life, and the full glory of the American promise.

NOTE: The message referred to Executive Order 14201.
