SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: In the event of an accident at a commercial nuclear power plant, the public may be exposed to airborne or deposited radioactive material if significant amounts of radioactive particulate materials are released to the atmosphere. The Standard sets the level for detection by a portal monitor of radioactive contamination that, if detected, would warrant decontamination measures. The objective is to minimize the risk of health effects to an individual from external radioactive contamination on the skin and clothing. The background document provides a detailed discussion of the scientific basis and rationale supporting selection of the numerical value of this Standard.

The portal monitor must have the capability to detect at least one microcurie ( $\mu\text{Ci}$ ) of radionuclides that emit beta and gamma radiation, in the form of surface contamination with a widespread nonuniform distribution over an individual. One or more cesium-137 ( $\text{Cs-137}$ ) sealed source(s) with a total activity not exceeding one microcurie ( $\mu\text{Ci}$ ) shall be used for determining compliance with the Standard. Detectability of this amount of radioactivity shall be demonstrated by the manufacturer to cognizant State or local government officials with the  $\text{Cs-137}$  source(s) located at several points along a vertical line centered between the two side columns of the unit between 0.5 feet and 5.5 feet above the base upon which the individual stands when being monitored. It is the responsibility of cognizant State or local government officials (not FEMA or other Federal agencies) to determine and assure that portal monitors intended for use for commercial nuclear power plant accidents meet this Standard. Such officials should document the intended use of portal monitors in their emergency plans. State and local governments that use or intend to use portal monitors should assure compliance with this Standard by April 30, 1996.

Since the issuance of this Standard constitutes guidance for State and local governments, alternative approaches for meeting the intent of this Standard may be proposed by State and local governments for review, evaluation, and approval by FEMA. Such alternative approaches should be submitted to the applicable FEMA Regional Director for review, recommendation, and forwarding to FEMA Headquarters for disposition.

This Standard will be incorporated in the "Radiological Emergency Preparedness (REP) Exercise Manual" (FEMA-REP-14).
