Report No. MM 95-83

Released: August 23, 1995

On July 13, 1995, a request for declaratory ruling on the use of digital modulation by Multipoint Distribution Service (MDS) and Instructional Television Fixed Service (ITFS) stations was filed by a group of ninety-nine parties consisting of MDS and ITFS licensees, wireless cable operators, equipment manufacturers, industry engineers and associations (Petitioners).

Petitioners request that the Commission examine the current MDS and ITFS operational requirements that were adopted before digital compression technology was envisioned and reinterpret them appropriately for digital operations. According to Petitioners, testing conducted in support of this petition demonstrates that the Commission's current MDS and ITFS interference protection rules will safely ensure protection of analog and digital systems during an initial digital transition, with only minimal rule clarifications and waivers necessary. Specifically, Petitioners propose that the Commission apply its current co-channel and adjacent channel desired-to-undesired interference ratios, and for those utilizing digital transmissions, relax the limitations on out-of-band emissions and permit licensees to operate at less than authorized power for an interim period. See 47 CFR 21.902, 74.903, 21.908, 74.936(b), 21.107(c) and 74.951(f). Petitioners ask the Commission to clarify whether, under the minimum ITFS programming requirements, additional ITFS programming must be reserved by licensees who expand capacity of their spectrum by utilizing digital compression technology. See 47 CFR 74.931. In addition, Petitioners ask the Commission to reinterpret several other requirements that were adopted before digital compression technology was envisioned. For example, Petitioners ask that the Commission determine whether ITFS station identification through the periodic transmission of ITFS call signs must be made over one or all of the channels created through use of digital compression. See 47 CFR 74.982.

Petitioners contend that the rapid introduction of digital technology by wireless cable system operators is in the public interest because it will increase the competitive viability of the wireless cable industry and it will also permit educators to increase their transmission capacity. Thus, Petitioners ask the Commission to act promptly on the request in order to have a regulatory framework in place that will permit MDS and ITFS operators to quickly implement digital transmission as soon as equipment is commercially available. Finally, Petitioners suggest that although future testing and information may indicate that further rule changes
