

demographically-oriented surveys such as the CPS.

The basic CPS also are used as an important platform on which to base the data derived from the various supplemental questions which are administered in conjunction with the survey. By coupling the basic data from the monthly survey with the special data from the supplements, one can get valuable insights on the behavior of American workers and on the social and economic health of their families.

II. Current Actions

There is wide interest in the monthly CPS data among Government policymakers, legislators, outside economists, the media, and the general public. While the data from the CPS are used in conjunction with data from other surveys in assessing the economic health of the Nation, they are unique in various ways. They provide a measurement of total employment, including self-employment and unpaid family work, while the other surveys are generally restricted to the nonagricultural sector. The CPS provides data on all jobseekers, and on all persons outside the labor force, while payroll-based surveys cannot, by definition, cover these sectors of the population. Finally, the CPS data on employment, unemployment, and on persons not in the labor force can be linked to the demographic characteristics of the many groups which make up the Nation's population, while the data from other surveys are usually devoid of demographic information.
