

including EPA's Science Advisory Board and blue ribbon panels convened by the National Academy of Public Administration and the National Research Council, have made many excellent suggestions for improving science at EPA. ORD's Strategic Plan incorporates and builds on these ideas to provide the course for strong, credible science at EPA into the next century.

This plan is the culmination of a number of strategic changes to institute a more effective, risk-based research program at ORD. For example, ORD reorganized its nationwide system of laboratories to conform to the fundamental components of widely used risk assessment and risk management processes. With this Strategic Plan, ORD has instituted a new system for determining research priorities based on risk assessment and risk management principles. This system will be used to sharpen the focus of research by directing resources where they will contribute most effectively to understanding and solving environmental problems, while supporting EPA in fulfilling its mandates. The Plan served as the blueprint for the FY '97 budget planning process and will provide the basis for building the FY '98 budget.

The goal of ORD's research program is to assure that EPA's environmental decisions are based on high quality science, and that science is provided in a timely and useful format to users. The Plan also lays the foundation for more clearly defining the next generation of environmental problems and the research to address those problems.
