management on six fields in the watershed area. On September 26, 1994 the watershed was approved for planning. A meeting was held in December 1994 with field and area staffs, the State Water Resources Planning staff, and sponsors to review the Plan of Work and develop assignments to complete the watershed plan. A scoping meeting and environmental assessment meeting was held at this time.

The Watershed Plan was developed and reviewed with the sponsors at their board meetings in May, 1995. They requested that NRCS have a public meeting to present the plan to all interested publics. On June 1, 1995, a public meeting was held in Lamar, Colorado. It was the consensus of those present to move forward into interagency review.

Specific consultation was conducted with the State Historic Preservation Officer concerning cultural resources in the watershed.

Public meetings were held throughout the planning process to keep all interested parties informed of the study progress and to obtain public input to the plan and environmental evaluation. Agency consultation and public participation to date has shown no unresolved conflicts related to the project plan.

Conclusion

The Environmental Assessment summarized above indicates that this federal action will not cause significant local, regional, or national impact on the environment. Therefore, based on the above findings, I have determined that an environmental impact statement for the Limestone-Graveyard Creeks Watershed Plan is not required.

Dated: August 19, 1996.

Stuart N. Simpson,
Assistant State Conservationist.

Needs and Uses: The economic census is the major source of data about the structure and functioning of a large segment of the United States’ economy and features unique industry and geographic detail. It provides essential information for many users, including the government, industry, business and the general public. The Census of Construction (CCI) collects information from contractors of all types of construction—more than 2.3 million establishments classified in the North American Industry Classification System (NAICS). The construction industry sector of the economic census comprises establishments primarily engaged in the construction of buildings and other structures, additions, alterations, reconstruction, installation, and maintenance and repairs.

The economic census will produce basis statistics by industry for number of establishments, value of construction work done, payroll, employment, selected costs, depreciable assets, and capital expenditures. It also will yield a variety of subject statistics, including estimates of type of construction work done, kind of business activity and other industry-specific measures.

Among the important statistics produced by the CCI are estimates of the value of construction work done during the covered year. The Federal Government uses the information from the economic censuses as an important part of the framework for the national accounts, input–output measures, key economic indexes, and other estimates that serve as the factual basis for economic policy making, planning and administration. State governments rely on the economic censuses for comprehensive economic data on geographical areas in order to make decisions concerning policy making, planning and administration. Finally, industry, business and the general public use data from the economic censuses for economic forecasts, market research, benchmarks for their own sample-based surveys, and business and financial decision making.

Affected Public: Businesses or other for-profit institutions.

Frequency: One time.
