DATES: Information packages describing requirements for participation in this initiative will be available upon request until December 13, 1996.

ADDRESSES: Parties interested in this program should request an information package from: Species at Risk Program, 12201 Sunrise Valley Drive, M.S. 300, Reston, VA 20192 ATTN. Mr. John Mosesso or Ms. Wendy Kuhne.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

A. Purpose

Species at Risk (SAR) is a program that develops scientific information on the status and trends of sensitive species, particularly with respect to the relationship of species abundance and distribution to habitat conditions and stresses. The basic purpose of SAR is to generate information that allows development of conservation agreements, action plans and management alternatives that provide for the protection of species and their habitats and thereby reduce the need for listing species as threatened or endangered. The program provides an opportunity for investigators to participate through survey, monitoring and research activities. Projects are specifically intended to be of short duration and should seek to optimize partnerships with Federal agencies, states, universities and others in the private sector. Successful SAR projects are often conducted by investigators who have identified key small but critical gaps in our biological knowledge. Projects then fill these gaps and provide resource managers, regulators and private landowners useable information from which prudent resource management decisions can be made. As in previous years, SAR will focus on species for which there is concern but limited information on their abundance, distribution and/or status. Projects should identify or develop new information that will reduce the need
