Title: Family Involvement in Elementary and Middle School.

Abstract: Research shows that family involvement in education is key to children learning to challenging standards. However, certain important questions could not be answered with extant data. Accordingly, this data is relevant to ED's current initiative on family involvement in education and to the efforts of the 2500 grassroots organizations that are members of the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education. They include schools, education, parent, and community groups and employers. Survey results are intended for presentation first by the Vice President at the 1997 annual Family Reunion VI themed, "Family, School, and Community".

Additional Information: Emergency clearance is urgently requested for the survey so that results can first be announced at the Vice President's Family Reunion VI themed, "Family, School, and Community." This conference is scheduled for late June and media interest is anticipated. Approval is requested by April 15, 1997. If approval is not received by that date, the latest information on family involvement in education will not be available for the Vice President's conference at which issues addressed in the survey will be discussed.

Frequency: One Time.
