

3. National Childhood Blood Lead Surveillance System—(0920–0337)—Reinstatement—Lead poisoning is a common and societally devastating environmental disease of young children in the United States. In response to the call for a national surveillance program of lead levels made in the HHS publication, Strategic Plan for the Elimination of Childhood Lead Poisoning (February 1991), CDC established the National Childhood Blood Lead Surveillance System. In

FY92, CDC awarded funds to eight states to assist them in developing a complete childhood lead surveillance activity. In FY96, CDC provided funding for childhood blood lead surveillance activity in 31 states and the District of Columbia. Sixteen of these states submitted 1995 (calendar year) data to the national database. Information from this national surveillance system may be used by Federal and state agencies to (1) more accurately estimate the number of children with elevated lead levels; (2) monitor short-term trends; (3) identify clusters of cases; (4) determine geographic distribution of cases; (5) examine risk factors among children with elevated lead levels; (6) identify risk factors for elevated lead levels among specific population groups; (7) target intervention programs to groups at risk for elevated lead levels; and (8) track national progress in eliminating childhood lead poisoning. The total cost to respondents is $8,208.
