Background: National Skill Standards Board

The National Skill Standards Board was created by The National Skill Standards Act of 1994 (108 Stat 192,20 U.S.C. 5933), signed into law by President Clinton on March 31, 1994. The Board's purpose as stated in the Act is "to serve as a catalyst in stimulating the development and adoption of a voluntary national system of skill standards and of assessment and certification of attainment of skill standards: (1) that will serve as a cornerstone of the national strategy to enhance workforce skills; (2) that will result in increased productivity, economic growth, and American economic competitiveness; and (3) that can be used consistent with civil rights laws" by the stakeholders enumerated in the Act: the nation, industries, employers, labor organizations, workers, students, entry-level workers, training providers, educators and government.

This hearing is one in a series of activities conducted by the NSSB to engage in extensive public consultation as it deliberates the creation of a national voluntary skill standards system. At prior public hearings held in 1996 at numerous locations throughout the country, the Board gathered input from employers, professional associations, trade associations, unions, educators, parents, community organizations, state government agencies, and others. Their views provided a framework for the Board's development of a voluntary system of skill standards. The National Skill Standards Board will continue to develop its policies and approaches by sharing its preliminary thinking with the public before the Board's final adoption of policies.

The Board also published in the December 19, 1996 Federal Register its Proposal to Establish a Voluntary National Skill Standard System and requested comments from the public. The Proposal described the grouping of jobs for the purpose of creating skill standards, as required by the National Skill Standards Act, and the framework to guide the establishment of a skill standards system.

Background: Voluntary Partnerships

To create these skill standards, the enabling legislation charges the NSSB with the encouragement of the establishment of voluntary Partnerships within each cluster. These Voluntary Partnerships will establish the
