Proposed Project

1. Childhood Lead Poisoning Prevention Program Quarterly Report (0902-0282)—Extension—Lead poisoning is the most common and societal devastating environmental disease of young children in the United States. Severe lead exposure can cause coma, convulsions, and even death. Lower levels of lead, which rarely cause symptoms, can result in decreased intelligence, developmental disabilities, and behavioral disturbances. State and community health agencies are the principal delivery points for childhood lead screening and related medical and environmental management activities. In FY 1996, CDC awarded 40 grants to fund childhood lead poisoning prevention programs. The primary purpose of these grants is for the initiation or expansion of state- and community-based childhood lead poisoning prevention programs that do the following: (1) Screen infants and children for elevated blood lead levels, (2) assure referral for treatment of, and environmental intervention for, infants and children with elevated blood lead levels, and (3) to provide education about childhood lead poisoning. The purpose of the quarterly report is to report data collected by CDC's grantees. The report consists of narrative and data sections. The purpose of the narrative section is to provide the following: (1) Highlights of quarterly activities, (2) discuss issues and activities that have significant impact on the program, (3) list objectives and discuss progress towards meeting those objectives. The purpose of the data section is to provide the following: (1) Screening and case confirmation activities, (2) environmental inspection and hazard remediation activities, and (3) medical case management activities. The total annual burden hours are 320.
