

that the part 70 major source definition must encompass the established NSR collocation provisions. In particular, the petitioners asserted that the Agency's interpretation of its part 70 collocation provisions would have the effect of subjecting unlisted sources of fugitive emissions to part 70 without undertaking a section 302(j) rulemaking. While not conceding the merits of the petitioners' arguments, EPA sought and received from the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit a voluntary remand in early 1995 to allow the Agency to reconsider its interpretation.<sup>1</sup> The Agency concluded that one aspect of that reconsideration should include review of whether application of the NSR approach to unlisted sources of fugitive emissions is appropriate for title V purposes.

Prior to the voluntary remand, EPA had clarified its decision to apply the NSR approach to major source determinations for purposes of title V in its August 1994 notice of proposed rulemaking revising the part 70 regulations. Specifically, EPA proposed to amend the definition of major source to make clear that the support facility test applied in NSR also applied in determining the scope of a source for title V. Several industry commenters expressed opposition to including the support facility concept in part 70 source determinations, while several State and local governments generally supported the clarification of the major source definition.

In responding to comments regarding the support facility test, it became apparent to EPA that the issue of whether the NSR approach should be applied to unlisted sources of fugitive emissions is closely connected with the more fundamental question of whether it is appropriate to apply the NSR approach (including the support facility concept) in part 70 source determinations generally. The Agency accordingly has reviewed the questions raised in the petitioners' challenge of the original part 70 regulations of whether the support facility test should be applied to unlisted sources of fugitive emissions or whether such sources constitute a special case requiring a 302(j) rulemaking. The EPA has also reviewed the broader question of whether EPA's approach to the collocation issues as applied to unlisted sources of fugitive emissions should be consistent with the Agency's approach in NSR. As explained in the draft part 70 preamble referenced herein, the Agency has determined at this time that in making major source determinations under title V, it is appropriate to apply the NSR approach and that there is no basis for excluding unlisted sources of fugitive emissions from this general approach.

<sup>1</sup> At the time of the remand, EPA anticipated that the relevant issues would be addressed in a new rulemaking. However, in comments submitted with respect to the supplemental proposal to amend the part 70 regulations (60 FR 45530, August 31, 1995), the National Mining Association requested that EPA clarify in the preamble to the final regulations the terms of the voluntary remand. The EPA now has determined that the current part 70 rulemaking is an appropriate vehicle for addressing all collocation issues that were the subject of the litigation.

AGENCY: Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

ACTION: Proposed rule.

SUMMARY: In this action, EPA is proposing to approve a State

Implementation Plan (SIP) revision request submitted by Indiana on August 26, 1996, which requires oxides of nitrogen (NO<sub>x</sub>) Reasonably Available Control Technology (RACT) for portland cement kilns, electric utility boilers, and industrial, commercial, or institutional (ICI) boilers in Clark and Floyd Counties. In addition, EPA is proposing to approve on April 30, 1997, negative declaration from Indiana certifying that, to the best of the State's knowledge, there are no remaining major sources of NO<sub>x</sub> in Clark and Floyd Counties which need RACT rules.
