

depositors; or (ii) whether the affiliation, ownership, control, or participation may threaten to impair public confidence in the insured institution.

Important considerations in determining the risk to the insured institution are the following factors: (i) The conviction or program entry for a covered criminal offense and the specific nature of the offense involved and the circumstances surrounding it; (ii) the evidence of rehabilitation since the date of the conviction, parole, or suspension of sentence, including the reputation of the person since the conviction, the age of the person at the time of the conviction, and the time elapsed since the conviction; (iii) the position to be held by the person in the insured institution and/or the type of participation to be engaged in directly or indirectly in the conduct of the affairs of the insured institution by the person; (iv) the amount of influence and control the person will be able to exercise over the affairs and operations of the insured institution; (v) the ability of management at the insured institution to supervise and control the activities of the person; (vi) the level of ownership which the person will have at the insured institution; (vii) the applicability of the insured institution's fidelity bond coverage to the person; (viii) the opinion or position of the primary Federal and/or state regulatory agency; and (ix) any additional factors in the specific case that appear relevant.

These criteria will also be applied by the FDIC to determine whether the interests of justice are served in seeking an exception in the appropriate court when an application is made to terminate the ten-year ban prior to the expiration date for a person convicted for the commission of, or the conspiracy to commit, one of the enumerated violations of Title 18 set forth in section 19.

Approval orders in section 19 cases will generally be subject to the condition that the person shall be bonded to the same extent as others in similar positions. When deemed appropriate, approval orders may also be made subject to the condition that the prior consent of the FDIC shall be required for any proposed significant changes in the duties and/or responsibilities of the person. Such proposed changes may in the discretion of the Regional Director require a new application. In situations where a person has been approved under a section 19 action for participation in one insured institution and subsequently seeks to participate in another insured institution, approval does not automatically follow. In such cases, another application must be submitted to the FDIC to determine whether approval should be granted.

By order of the Board of Directors.

Dated at Washington, DC, this 24th day of June 1997.

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.
