

Michigan and Goldsboro, North Carolina. The shift in production is attributed to domestic excess capacity and the company's need to cut costs to stay competitive in the market place. No production performed at the subject firm was shifted to any foreign location to serve the company's domestic market. The equipment at the plant was shipped to whichever plants of the company had a need for additional machinery that could be used in the company's extrusion process. Except for the shipment of certain machinery to Gaylord and Goldsboro for the express purpose of serving the enhanced production at those facilities, no machinery was shipped to any location to support the production of parts that had previously been made in Lexington. Some equipment was shipped to Georgetown, Canada, to support existing production at that plant, but no production moved from Lexington to Georgetown, Canada or is being imported back to the United States.

The company recently opened a plant in Mexico. At present the plant has received two contracts, one from a Japanese manufacturer, and one from an American manufacturer. Production under these contracts will not begin before 1999. The Company's Mexican production will supply those automakers in Mexican plants only.

Conclusion

After review of the application and investigative findings, I conclude that there has been no error or misinterpretation of the law or of the facts which would justify reconsideration of the Department of Labor's prior decision. Accordingly, the application is denied.

Signed at Washington, D.C. this 28th day of November 1997.

Grant D. Beale,

Acting Director, Office of Trade Adjustment Assistance.
