SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Summary of Information Collection

Health care in the United States now exceeds 14% of the gross national product and for the society at large, health care has become too expensive. Managed health care is increasingly the norm and is expected to be operational nation-wide by the year 2000. Managed care consists of factors relating to cost containment, cost efficiency and management accountability outside and within health maintenance organizations and government organizations. Civilian managed care is based on market forces, is profit-driven and responds to shareholder demands. Professional nursing is impacted by the economic changes in the health care system. Decisions are being made by outside forces other than professional nurses about the nature and management of patient care. Increasingly, lower salaried, non-professional assistive personnel are being used in hospitals to care for patients. The quality of patient care is seriously affected.

Registered Nurses are committed to continue to provide direct, quality care to patients. Health outcomes, such as, improved physical and emotional well-being are affected by direct, knowledgeable caring of the nurses. Overall, with the continuation of the use of Registered Nurses in direct care to patients, costs will decrease and the economic status of both for profit and not-for-profit hospitals in communities throughout the United States will improve. This survey will attain results to determine degree to which the nurse-patient relationship as an economic resource can be assessed in the contemporary managed health care system.

Type of Review: Emergency.

Title: Technology Innovation Challenge Grant Program: Professional Development.

Abstract: The FY 1998 Technology Innovation Challenge Grant competition will focus on professional development by providing support to consortia that are developing, adapting, or expanding applications of technology training for teachers and other educators to improve instruction.

Additional Information: The Department is requesting the emergency clearance because of an unanticipated change in program direction. The new direction, received in October 1997 through Conference Report language accompanying the FY 1998 appropriation, substantially changed the focus of the program. Since that time, Department staff have been conferring both internally and with congressional staff on how best to move the direction of the program from one in which there is a broad perspective on supporting the best innovative approaches to integrating technology in the schools to
