

impoundment and their vulnerability to nonpoint source pollution and other threats. The tulotoma snail was listed as endangered in 1991 due to the loss of more than 90 percent of its historic habitat, and the isolation and vulnerability of surviving populations.

The recovery objectives of the revised draft plan are to protect the Basin's native aquatic fauna and flora by achieving higher levels of innovative land and water stewardship; reclassify and delist the tulotoma snail; delist the goldline, Etowah, and Cherokee darters; and prevent the extinction of the eight endangered mussels and the continued decline of the three threatened mussels. Actions needed to achieve these objectives include protection of fluvial habitats and water quality, development of mitigation strategies for in stream habitats, community based watershed stewardship planning and action, concerted public education efforts, and basic research on freshwater species endemic to the basin.

This revised plan is being submitted for technical/agency review. After consideration of comments received during the review period, it will be submitted for final approval.
