

See notice at 63 FR 27562, May 19, 1998.

Comments: None received. Decision: Approved. No instrument of equivalent scientific value to the foreign instrument, for such purposes as it is intended to be used, is being manufactured in the United States. Reasons: The foreign instrument provides long and short range infrared sensors, a control algorithm and a driver interface for an "intelligent" cruise control system for automobiles. A private highway safety research organization advised August 1, 1996 that (1) these capabilities are pertinent to the applicant's intended purpose and (2) it knows of no domestic instrument or apparatus of equivalent scientific value to the foreign instrument for the applicant's intended use (comparable case).

We know of no other instrument or apparatus of equivalent scientific value to the foreign instrument which is being manufactured in the United States.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

Under the provisions of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (16 U.S.C. 1801 et. seq.) NOAA is responsible for management of the Nation's marine fisheries. As part of its efforts to enforce fishery regulations, NOAA has included in some of those regulations requirements for monitoring shrimp vessels in the Gulf of Mexico. The ability to monitor shrimping effort is necessary for the protection of red snapper in the Gulf of Mexico. The shrimp trawl fishery has a bycatch of juvenile red snapper and is a source of mortality of red snapper. Monitoring the shrimp fishery is necessary to determine management measures to reduce overfishing of red snapper. NOAA has previously received emergency Paperwork Reduction Act clearance for this collection under the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) control number, 0648-0343.

II. Method of Collection

The owner or operator of a vessel in the shrimp fishery in the Gulf of Mexico, if selected, must notify NMFS in advance of each trip so that a NMFS-approved observer may be embarked or have a Vessel Monitoring Device installed and in use when at sea.
