Alaska: Partial Program Adequacy Final Determination of State Class I and II Municipal Solid Waste Landfill Permit Program—and Partial Program Adequacy Tentative Determination of State Class III Municipal Solid Waste Landfill Permit Program

AGENCY: Environmental Protection Agency.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA), as amended by the Hazardous and Solid Waste Amendments of 1984, requires States to develop and implement permit programs to ensure that municipal solid waste landfills which may receive hazardous household waste or small quantity generator waste will comply with the revised Federal landfill criteria. RCRA also requires the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to determine whether States have adequate “permit” programs for municipal landfills.

The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation (ADEC) and its Division of Environmental Health (DEH) applied on February 12, 1996 for a partial determination of adequacy under RCRA. EPA reviewed Alaska’s application and subsequent supplemental information provided during March through October 1996. In the Federal Register on November 25, 1996, EPA published its tentative determination of adequacy for those portions of ADEC’s Municipal Solid Waste landfill (MSWLF) permit program that were adequate to assure compliance with the federal MSWLF criteria. Alaska’s application for partial program adequacy determination was made available for public review during EPA’s public comment period which ended on January 23, 1997.

During the period that EPA was evaluating the public comments, proposals were initiated by the Alaska Legislature that included eliminating the solid waste program or reducing ADEC’s Solid Waste staff to less than half. The final budget reductions established in late May 1997, for the 1998 fiscal year (FY–98), were significant but not as severe as originally proposed. (Alaska’s Fiscal years begin on July 1.) In its letter of May 30, 1997, ADEC states that the final dollar budget for FY–98 was set at 13% lower than for the FY–97 solid waste program. In particular, the State’s program for its Class III municipal landfills has been significantly changed. Details on the budget reductions are discussed in Section B (State of Alaska) of this document. EPA believes that an additional EPA public comment period on the Class III program should be provided. Consequently, the agency is not including in today’s final-partial approval the elements of its tentative determination of November 25, 1996, that applied to the State’s Class III landfill program.

On August 9, 1997, the State of Alaska enacted its Environmental Audit Privilege and Immunity Law. Based on the information provided by the State on this law, and the State’s application for program approval, EPA believes that Alaska has the authority necessary to administer a partially approved RCRA subtitle D permit program for municipal solid waste landfills. Today’s partial approval does not reflect a position by the agency regarding the state’s authority to administer any other federally authorized, delegated, or approved environmental program.
