SUMMARY: The report entitled “The Murine Local Lymph Node Assay: A Test Method for Assessing the Allergic Contact Dermatitis Potential of Chemicals/Compounds,” NIH Publication 99-4949, is now available and may be obtained as described in this notice. The report describes the results of an independent peer review evaluation of the validation status of the Local Lymph Node Assay (LLNA) that was conducted on September 17, 1998 (Federal Register 63 FR 37405–6, July 10, 1998). The (LLNA) was proposed as an alternative toxicological test method for assessing the allergic contact dermatitis (contact hypersensitivity) potential of chemicals and products. The review was coordinated by the Interagency Coordinating Committee on the Validation of Alternative Methods (ICCVAM) and the National Toxicology Program (NTP) Interagency Center for the Evaluation of Alternative Toxicological Methods (NICEATM). The review was sponsored by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences and the NTP.

Background

Pub. L. 103-43 directed the NEIHS to develop and validate alternative methods that can reduce or eliminate the use of animals in acute or chronic toxicity testing, establish criteria for the validation and regulatory acceptance of alternative testing methods, and recommend a process through which scientifically validated alternative methods can be accepted for regulatory use. Criteria and processes for validation and regulatory acceptance were developed in conjunction with other Federal agencies and programs with broad input from the public. These are described in the document “Validation and Regulatory Acceptance of Toxicological Test Methods: A Report of the Ad Hoc Interagency Coordinating Committee on the Validation of Alternative Methods” NIH publication 97-3981, March 1997, which is available on the internet at http://ntp-server.niehs.nih.gov.htdocs/ICCVAM/iccvm.html. ICCVAM was subsequently established in a collaborative effort by NIEHS and other Federal regulatory and research agencies and programs. The Committee’s functions include the coordination of interagency reviews of toxicological test methods and communication with stakeholders throughout the process of test method development and validation. The following Federal regulatory and research agencies and organizations are participating in this effort:

- Consumer Product Safety Commission
- Department of Defense
- Department of Energy
- Department of Health and Human Services Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry
- Food and Drug Administration
- National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health/CDC
- National Institutes of Health
- National Cancer Institute
- National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences
- National Library of Medicine
- Department of the Interior
- Department of Labor
- Occupational Safety and Health Administration
- Department of Transportation
- Research and Special Programs Administration
- Environmental Protection Agency

The LLNA was proposed to ICCVAM for consideration as a stand-alone test to identify chemicals that have a potential to cause allergic contact dermatitis. The ICCVAM determined that there was sufficient information available to merit an independent scientific peer review evaluation of the LLNA test method. Peer review is an essential prerequisite...
