Ocmulgee Old Fields Historic District; Determination of Eligibility for the National Register of Historic Places

ACTION: Request for comments.

On August 14, 1997, the National Register of Historic Places determined that the Ocmulgee Old Fields Historic District, near Macon, in Bibb County, Georgia, was eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places. The district was determined to meet National Register Criterion A (associated with important events) in the area of Ethnic Heritage: Native American, because of the cultural and historical significance of this area to the Muscogean peoples who were forced to abandon it in the early 19th century and who still revere it as their ancestral homeland. The district also was determined to meet National Register Criterion D (likely to yield important information), because it has provided and can be expected to continue to provide important information on the long history of the Macon Plateau and the Ocmulgee River valley. The finding of eligibility was based on a request from the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and included a review of extensive documentation submitted by the Advisory Council, the Federal Highway Administration, the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, representatives of a number of Muscogean Indian tribes, and other interested parties. A copy of the determination of eligibility is available from the National Register of Historic Places, National Park Service, 1849 C Street, NW, Room NC400, Washington, DC 20240.

To establish precise boundaries for the eligible district, the Keeper requested additional documentation. On July 23, 1999, the National Register completed the determination of eligibility for this property based on additional material provided by the Federal Highway Administration, Indian tribal representatives, and others. Boundaries were established based on the extent of the historically significant area that still retains the imprint of traditional Muscogean culture, excluding those areas which have lost their ability to testify to their cultural or archeological significance because of non-historic residential, commercial, or industrial development. A copy of the determination and a map showing the boundaries are also available from the National Register of Historic Places.

Since the determination of eligibility was made, the Keeper of the National Register has received written comments from a property owner within the boundary of the determined eligible area and from other interested parties questioning the boundaries established for the district. In order to accommodate those who wish to provide new information to define the scope of the area that meets the National Register Criteria for Evaluation, the National Park Service is providing a 60-day comment period on this issue. The National Register Criteria for Evaluation are set forth below.

Anyone wishing to submit additional information bearing on the scope of the area of the Ocmulgee Old Fields Historic District that meets the National Register Criteria for Evaluation should do so within 60 days of the date of this notice. A written statement on the determination of eligibility will be issued by the National Park Service within 30 days of the close of the comment period.

The determination of eligibility remains in effect pending review of responses submitted during the comment period. In order to revise the boundary the National Park Service must receive authoritative information, which, evaluated in conjunction with documentation already on file, results in a finding that the boundary for the determined eligible district does not
