Summary of Information Collection

Respondents are information technology professionals from approximately 300 companies within the U.S. The purpose of this study is to develop a quantitative and qualitative understanding of what successful IT teams "look like" in terms of personnel composition and structure, and to learn about how successful IT teams operate. The goal of this effort is to use this information to form a basis for new Software Best Management Practices, to be encapsulated into the DSMC curriculum, as well as that of the Defense University's Chief of Information Officers program and civilian programs. Teams will be selected using a variety of sources, including DSMC listings, organizational listings held by industry experts, and professional contacts within the industry. Participation by team members is fully voluntary; all participants will be asked to sign a Study Participation Agreement form, explaining that the study is fully voluntary and describing how the data will be used. Data will be collected by two methods: completion of self-report personality/behavioral instruments by the participants, and observations of team behavior during a workshop conducted by qualified researchers. Data generated for the study will be entered into a study database by the research team. Each individual and team will be assigned a participant and team code at the beginning of the effort. This code will be the primary identifier during data entry as well as analysis. Data that personally identify a participant may be stored in the master database for tracking purposes, but will not be reported or released without the specific consent of that individual. Aggregate data and resulting conclusions may be released in the form of summary reports, technical and academic papers, and formal briefings or presentations. The study team also plans to establish a public Internet site, where the IT Team members participating may go to learn about the study results and conclusions.
