In view of the market disruption caused by the attacks of September 11, 2001, and in response to requests from commenters for more time to address the issues raised in the concept release, the Commission believes that it is appropriate to extend the comment period to November 23, 2001.³

Tank Level or Pressure Monitoring Devices

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DOT.

² Securities Exchange Act Release No. 44568 (July 17, 2001), 66 FR 38390 (July 24, 2001).

³ Commenters may wish to review the reports on decimal implementation recently filed with the Commission by the Exchanges and the NASD, which provide some data and discussion of subpenny market activity. The reports are in File No. 4-430.

ACTION: Notice of proposed rulemaking.

SUMMARY: In December of 2000, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit ruled that the Coast Guard must promulgate a regulation for tank vessels to use tank level or pressure monitoring (TLPM) devices as mandated by the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (OPA 90). We are of the opinion that these regulations must apply in some manner to single-hull tank vessels. Within this notice of proposed rulemaking, we present eight proposed regulatory options and regulatory text for each option regarding minimum standards for the performance and use of these devices on single-hull tank ships and single-hull tank barges carrying oil as cargo. Due to the extreme variance in impact to the classes of tank vessels subject to this proposed rule, and, taking into account the cost-effectiveness ratio relative to the other significant OPA 90 regulations, we are also soliciting comments on financial, energy, safety, and environmental considerations. The Coast Guard is seeking information from commenters in order to select the best alternative for the final rule. In accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, once we receive and evaluate the public comments from this notice, we intend to implement this statutory mandate through some form of these proposed regulations as the final rule. However, in view of the cost-effectiveness ratios of the alternatives, as well as the numerous requirements throughout OPA 90 to report back to Congress on the impacts of this legislation, Coast Guard will share with Congress any information provided by the public that addresses the reasonableness of implementing the statute.
