SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Some experts are predicting a possible marine threat, either as a means or as a target or both, if another terrorist attack were to occur against the U.S. In light of this and the September 11th events, the Maritime Administration (MARAD, we, our, or us) believes it should revisit the existing inland/Great Lakes war risk insurance waiver policy and requests public comment on whether we should change our current waiver policy. We have the authority to rescind or revise the existing waiver policy and to impose the full war risk cover on all Title XI vessels if we determine that it is now necessary.

Currently, we waive the Security Agreement requirement for commercial war risk hull and Protection and Indemnity insurance on Title XI mortgaged vessels, which are operated exclusively on the inland rivers and intercoastal waterways of the United States and on the Great Lakes. This policy was approved by the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Maritime Affairs on June 30, 1971, and has remained in effect ever since. Most Title XI companies operating exclusively inland or on the Great Lakes have taken advantage of this waiver. MARAD estimates that approximately 20 companies with over 500 vessels (including a large number of inland barges) are not insured for war risks.

The standard war risk insurance policy covers a number of non-marine perils risks, including warlike operations, strikes, civil unrest and acts of terrorism. The basic underlying assumption for the war risk waiver for inland/Great Lakes was that the threat of attack within the continental 48 states or Great Lakes was very slight. Events of September 11, 2001, have called this basic assumption into question.

As a consequence, we may begin to require that some or all of the inland Title XI vessels have war risk cover. We may not require war risk cover for all inland Title XI vessels because significant groups or fleets of inland barges are widely dispersed on the inland waters at any point in time. This wide distribution limits our inland/Great Lakes Title XI exposure. Therefore, the risk of a significant loss from any one event or target may be relatively small.

Dated: October 25, 2001.

By Order of the Acting Deputy Maritime Administrator.

Joel C. Richard,

Secretary, Maritime Administration.
