Background

As a result of the events of September 11, 2001, Congress passed and the President signed the Aviation and Transportation Security Act (ATSA), a comprehensive measure designed to protect the security of the Nation's air transportation system. See Pub. L. 107-71, 115 Stat. 597, November 19, 2001. The Department of Transportation is this notice is seeking public comment to assist it in developing recommendations for possible future actions to implement the following three sections of ATSA.

Sec. 126 of ATSA amends section 44903 of Title 49 of the United States Code to provide in part that the Secretary of Transportation, after receiving recommendations from the National Institute of Justice, may authorize members of flight deck crews on aircraft providing air transportation or intrastate air transportation to carry a less-than-lethal weapon. If the Secretary grants authority to carry a less-than-lethal weapon, the Secretary must—

- Prescribe rules requiring that any such crew member be trained in the proper use of the weapon, and
- Prescribe guidelines setting forth the circumstances under which such weapons may be used.

Sec. 128 of ATSA provides that the pilot of a passenger aircraft operated by an air carrier in air transportation or intrastate air transportation is authorized to carry a firearm into the cockpit if—

- The Under Secretary for Transportation Security approves;
- The air carrier approves;
- The firearm is approved by the Under Secretary; and
- The pilot has received proper training for the use of the firearm, as determined by the Under Secretary.

Sec. 131 of ATSA, in part, provides that the Under Secretary for Transportation Security must carry out a program to permit law enforcement officers, firefighters, and emergency medical technicians to provide emergency services on commercial air flights during emergencies. To carry out the program, the Under Secretary for Transportation Security must establish requirements for qualifications and training of providers of emergency services. If one of these individuals meets such qualifications and training requirements, ATSA provides that he or she may not be held liable for damages.

As noted above, the FAA plans to develop a set of recommendations to the Department of Transportation for carrying out these portions of ATSA. As a preliminary step, we are asking for public comment on a number of issues that we have identified as potentially being addressed in the recommendations. We plan to consider any comments we receive in response to this request for comments in developing specific recommendations. If the Department of Transportation conducts rulemaking on these issues, there will be another round of public comment. We invite the public to send us information and comments relating to the following issues:

1. Whether pilots and other flight crew members should carry firearms of less-than-lethal weapons, and if so, whether it should be on a voluntary basis;
2. Whether and how the weapons should be stored on the aircraft or carried on board;
3. The types and numbers of less-than-lethal weapons that should be carried on aircraft for use by qualified flight deck crew members;
4. The types of restraining devices or other kinds of equipment that should be on aircraft;
5. The types and numbers of firearms that should be carried on aircraft for use by qualified pilots and the types of ammunition;
6. The amount and type of weapons training that we should require, including whether there should be initial and recurrent training.
7. How the less-than-lethal weapons and firearms should be carried, stored, maintained (if necessary), and accessed on the aircraft.
8. What types of aircraft modifications we should require when aircraft are equipped with less-than-lethal weapons or firearms, such as modifications to ventilation or avionics systems;
9. Whether the qualifications for using less-than-lethal weapons or firearms should be integrated into the existing systems for establishing and maintaining airman qualifications, such as pilot certificates and ratings;
10. The circumstances under which less-than-lethal weapons may be used;
11. How to identify individuals who are willing to provide emergency services on commercial flights;
12. Whether to maintain a registry of some or all of these individuals;
13. The minimum qualifications of those who would provide emergency services on commercial air flights; and
14. The type of training providers of emergency services on commercial air flights should have.

We invite the public to raise any additional issues or concerns related to these issues, including any other factors that we should consider addressing in our recommendations.

Issued in Washington, DC, on December 21, 2001.

James J. Ballough,

Director, Flight Standards Service.
