SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The NIST Weights and Measures Division (WMD) is part of Technology Services in Gaithersburg, MD. The WMD is the national technical resource on U.S. weights and measures standards, practices, and test procedures. Weights and measures regulatory control of the commercial measurement system is performed at the state and local government level. The study is to document the changes that have occurred over the past 10 years in state and local weights and measures enforcement programs in terms of funding, administration, and allocation of resources to their different regulatory activities. Additionally, approximately fifteen weights and measures directors will be interviewed to obtain information as to how the regulatory environment and their operations have changed over 10 years to identify trends. Jurisdictions will be asked to identify what they see as their most critical needs under the current environment and operation conditions of their programs. The changes in the number of businesses and devices regulated by weights and measures will be examined to assess how the nature of the regulated businesses has changed. Approximately ten representatives of companies that manufacturer scales, load cells, and meter manufacturers will be interviewed to identify how their markets and customer needs have changed, and how this has affected their views on national and international standards. The responses will help state and local weights and measures offices evaluate their programs. This information will be used to assess the impact of weights and measures enforcement activities, and set program directions and priorities for the NIST Weights and Measures Division.

II. Method of Collection

Web forms will be the primary method to collect information on weights and measures resources, workloads, and distribution of resources. Paper forms as a backup data collection method for those who cannot access the web forms or prefer responding on paper. Interviews with selected weights and measures officials and industry representatives will result in the identification and assessment of national and international market trends, and trends in state and local budgets and program operations.

Arques Avenue, Sunnyvale, CA 94085. The grant of the license would be in the following fields of use: Semiconductor, Environmental, Pharmaceutical, Chemical and other related commercial applications.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: J. Terry Lynch, National Institute of Standards and Technology, Office of Technology Partnerships, 100 Bureau Drive, Stop 2200, Gaithersburg, MD 20899, Phone 301-975-2691.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The prospective exclusive license will be royalty bearing and will comply with the terms and conditions of 35 U.S.C. 209 and 37 CFR 404.7. The prospective exclusive license may be granted unless, within thirty days from the date of this published Notice, NIST receives written evidence and argument which establish that the grant of the license would not be consistent with the requirements of 35 U.S.C. 209 and 37 CFR 404.7. The availability of the invention for licensing was published in the Federal Register on November 23, 1992.

U.S. Patent No. 5,244,634 is jointly owned by the U.S. government, as represented by the Secretary of Commerce, and Dionex Corporation. The invention accurately detects transition and rare earth elements in environmental materials and natural waters, industrial waste, biological fluids, and other samples. The system is sensitive enough to detect these elements below the parts-per-billion level. Samples may contain 1,000 to 1 million times more alkali or alkaline earth metals than transition and rare earth elements. Ion-exchange detection methods are not specific enough to detect ions of interest in such samples.
