

EPA expects that development and implementation of this strategy will require a significant Agency investment in research, planning, and outreach. EPA's goal is to publish this draft strategy later this year, and the Agency will seek to engage a broad range of interested parties in a discussion on the draft strategy. EPA intends to use the process described in the strategy to identify additional effluent guidelines to address in the future.

B. Solicitation of Stakeholder Recommendations

Several commenters on the proposed plan suggested specific existing guidelines that the Agency consider as candidates for revision, and suggested that the Agency consider specific industrial categories which may not have effluent guidelines as candidates for guideline development. Several commenters proposed criteria that EPA could use in deciding whether to revise an existing effluent guideline or to develop a new guideline, including consideration of specific pollutants of concern. A few commenters also suggested that the Agency consider alternate approaches to guideline development, such as assisting in the development of local limits to control pollutant discharges, and shifting its approach to address violations of water quality standards. EPA will consider these suggestions as input to the first step in the planning process for the Effluent Guidelines Program Plan for 2003/2004.

As recommended by the Effluent Guidelines Task Force, the Agency believes that an important first step in the planning process is to consult with NPDES-authorized states, pretreatment control authorities, and professional associations to obtain their recommendations pertaining to revising existing effluent guidelines and targeting industries for new guidelines. These stakeholders can help to identify water quality concerns related to industrial categories as well as changes in industries which affect the administration and effectiveness of existing regulations. EPA recognizes that there are other stakeholders who may have concerns or data indicating the need for new or revised regulations. Therefore, to prepare for the Effluent Guidelines Program Plan to be published in 2004 (for years 2004/2005), the Agency invites the public to identify and provide supporting data and/or rationales on existing effluent guidelines that EPA should consider revising, or on any industrial categories for which the Agency should consider developing new effluent guidelines.

VI. Public Comments

EPA accepted public comments on the Proposed Effluent Guidelines Program Plan for 2002/2003 through July 18, 2002. The Agency received nine comments from a variety of commenters including industry, metropolitan sewerage agencies, a trade association, environmental groups, and a federal agency. Many of the comments received have been discussed in the text of today's notice. The administrative record for today's notice includes a complete set of all of the comments submitted, as well as the Agency's responses.

permit them to manufacture or import new chemical substances for test marketing purposes, if the Agency finds that the manufacture, processing, distribution in commerce, use, and disposal of the substances for test marketing purposes will not present an unreasonable risk of injury to health or the environment. EPA may impose restrictions on test marketing activities and may modify or revoke a test marketing exemption upon receipt of new information which casts significant doubt on its finding that the test marketing activity will not present an unreasonable risk of injury.

IV. What Action is the Agency Taking?

EPA approves the above-referenced TME. EPA has determined that test marketing the new chemical substance, under the conditions set out in the TME application and in this notice, will not present any unreasonable risk of injury to health or the environment.

V. What Restrictions Apply to this TME?

The test market time period, production volume, number of customers, and use must not exceed specifications in the application and this notice. All other conditions and restrictions described in the application and in this notice must also be met.
