II. Did EPA Approve the Application?

The Agency approved the applications after considering all required data on risks associated with the proposed use of “dipotassium phosphate,” “dipotassium phosphonate,” “sucrose octanoate esters [(α -D-glucopyranosyl, β -D-fructofuranosyl-octanoate), mono-, di- and triesters of sucrose octanoate],” “sodium carbonate peroxyhydrate,” and “rust Puccinia thlaspeos strain woad,” and information on social, economic, and environmental benefits to be derived from use. Specifically, the Agency has considered the nature of the chemical and its pattern of use, application methods and rates, and level and extent of potential exposure. Based on these reviews, the Agency was able to make basic health and safety determinations which show that use of “dipotassium phosphate,” “dipotassium phosphonate,” “sucrose octanoate esters [(α -D-glucopyranosyl, β -D-fructofuranosyl-octanoate), mono-, di- and triesters of sucrose octanoate],” “sodium carbonate peroxyhydrate,” and “rust Puccinia thlaspeos strain woad” when used in accordance with widespread and commonly recognized practice, will not generally cause unreasonable adverse effects to the environment.

II. Background

Ecological risk assessment is a process for evaluating the likelihood that adverse ecological effects may occur or are occurring as a result of exposure to one or more stressors. A critical early step in conducting an ecological risk assessment is to select assessment endpoints. Assessment endpoints represent valued ecological entities, and their attributes, upon which risk-management actions are focused. Selecting assessment endpoints is often challenging because of the diversity of species, ecological communities, and ecological functions from which those involved in risk assessment can choose and because of statutory ambiguity regarding what is to be protected. The purpose of the RAF document is to assist EPA risk assessors by providing a set of generic ecological assessment endpoints that can be considered and adapted for use in specific ecological risk assessments, building on existing EPA guidance and experience. The document is not prescriptive, but rather is intended to be a useful starting point that is flexible enough to be applied to many different types of ecological risk assessments. The document is undergoing peer review concurrent with the public comment period described in this notice.
