

that you have a medically determinable impairment. The documentation must include a clinical description of the abnormal physical findings and definitive laboratory tests, including chromosomal analysis, where appropriate.

2. What will we accept as medical evidence in lieu of the actual laboratory report? When the actual laboratory report is unavailable, we will accept medical evidence that is persuasive that a positive diagnosis has been confirmed by appropriate laboratory testing at some time prior to our evaluation. To be persuasive, a report from an acceptable medical source must state that appropriate testing was conducted and that the results confirmed the diagnosis. The report must be consistent with other evidence in your case record, for example, the description of abnormal physical findings, your educational history, or, if available, the results of psychological testing.

C. How Do We Evaluate Impairments That Affect Multiple Body Systems That Do Not Meet the Criteria of the Listings in This Body System?

1. These listings are examples of common impairments that affect multiple body systems that we consider severe enough to result in marked and severe functional limitations. If your severe impairment(s) does not meet the criteria of any of these listings, we must also consider whether you have an impairment(s) that meets the criteria of a listing in another body system.

2. There are many other impairments that cause deviation from, or interruption of, the normal function of the body, but the degree of deviation may vary widely from child to child. Therefore, the resulting functional limitations and the progression of those limitations are more variable than with catastrophic congenital abnormalities or diseases described in 110.00A5. For these reasons, we evaluate these impairments on an individual case basis under the listing criteria in any affected body system. Examples of such impairments include trisomy X syndrome, fragile X syndrome, phenylketonuria (PKU), caudal regression syndrome, and fetal alcohol syndrome.

3. If you have a severe medically determinable impairment(s) that does not meet a listing, we will consider whether your impairment(s) medically equals a listing, and, in the case of a claim for SSI payments, functionally equals the listings. (See §§ 404.1526, 416.926, and 416.926a.) If you are receiving SSI payments, when we decide whether you continue to be disabled, we use the rules in § 416.994a.
