Substance Abuse and Mental Health Service Administration

Changes to the National Registry of Evidence-Based Programs and Practices (NREPP)

AGENCY: Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, HHS.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) is committed to preventing the onset and reducing the progression of mental illness, substance abuse, and substance-related problems among all individuals, including youth. As part of this effort, SAMHSA has expanded and refined the agency's National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices (NREPP) based on a systematic analysis and consideration of public comments received in response to a previous Federal Register notice (70 FR 50381, Aug. 26, 2005).

This Federal Register notice summarizes SAMHSA's redesign of NREPP as a decision support tool for promoting a greater adoption of evidence-based interventions within typical community-based settings, and provides an opportunity for interested parties to become familiar with the new system.

Advancing Evidence-Based Practice Through Improved Decision Support Tools: Reconceptualizing NREPP

Introduction

The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) strives to provide communities with effective, high-quality, and cost-efficient prevention and treatment services for mental and substance use disorders. To meet this goal, SAMHSA recognizes the needs of a wide range of decisionmakers at the local, state, and national levels to have readily available and timely information about scientifically established interventions to prevent and/or treat these disorders.

SAMHSA, through its Science to Service Initiative, actively seeks to promote Federal collaboration (e.g., with the National Institutes of Health [NIH]) in translating research into practice. The ideal outcome of this Initiative is that individuals at risk for or directly experiencing mental and substance abuse use disorders will be more likely to receive appropriate preventive or treatment services, and that these services will be the most effective and the highest quality that the field has to offer.

This report provides a summary of activities conducted during the past year to critically evaluate SAMHSA's recent activities and future plans for the National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices (NREPP). It outlines the major themes that emerged from a formal public comment process and links this feedback to new review procedures and Web-based decision support tools that will enhance access to evidence-based knowledge for multiple audiences.

The report is presented in four sections:

- Section I briefly states the background of NREPP and SAMHSA's recent request for public comments.
- Section II discusses the analysis of comments that was conducted and presents the key recommendations for NREPP based on this analysis.
- Section III describes the new approach that SAMHSA is advancing for NREPP.
- Section IV presents the specific dimensions of the NREPP system in its new framework as a decision support tool.
