Federal Register / Vol. 73, No. 84 / Wednesday, April 30, 2008 / Notices records is a group of any records under the control of any agency, from which information is retrieved by the name of an individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to an individual.

In order to ensure that animals and plants and their products do not introduce pests or diseases when imported into the United States, APHIS may perform inspections and provide other services to cooperators who have signed trust fund agreements with APHIS. Cooperators may be foreign associations and shippers and U.S. companies. APHIS incurs costs associated with such inspections and services, such as the costs of inspectors’ salaries, supplies, overtime, travel, and other miscellaneous expenses. Cooperators are required to pay for these expenses from a trust fund established in their name that holds monies collected in advance of services.

The ATF database is an accounting system that uses financial data extracted directly from the USDA Financial Data Warehouse (FDW) to generate monthly cooperator account statements. Data in the FDW is derived solely from USDA sources. APHIS reviews each statement to ensure that APHIS has collected the correct amount of money for the services performed. These statements contain the status of expenditures and collections transactions, to ensure that APHIS has collected the correct amount of money for the services performed. These statements are distributed to APHIS field offices to address cooperator queries and provide status of trust fund accounts. An individual statement is also mailed to each cooperator. Information in the ATF is used to update the Foundation Financial Information System (FFIS), the official APHIS financial system.

The system extracts information such as name of inspector, overtime paid, and travel dates with the corresponding charges.

Routine Uses of Records Maintained in the System, Including Categories of Users and the Purposes of Such Uses

Routine uses of information in the ATF database include releases related to investigations pertaining to violations of law or related to litigation. A complete listing of the routine uses for this system is included in the accompanying description of the system of records that is published along with this notice.

There are no information collection requests associated with the ATF system. Data contained in the system is extracted directly from the FDW.

POLICIES AND PRACTICES FOR STORING, RETRIEVING, ACCESSING, RETAINING, AND DISPOSING OF RECORDS IN THE SYSTEM:

The APHIS Records Management Handbook contains the mandatory policy and official guidelines for establishing, maintaining, using, retaining, and disposing of records.

STORAGE:

Downloaded files are stored in portable document format (PDF) and stored on a network file server.

RETRIEVABILITY:

Data will be retrieved by making a query for a batch of statements for a given month. Retrieval is performed once a month. Queries can be made based on trust fund identification numbers or trust fund names. Some queries can be performed on fields such as address, city, state, zip code, or country. Fields such as the address section may be personally identifiable to an individual.

SAFEGUARDS:

Numerous inherent safeguards exist to protect the data in the ATF database. These safeguards include required login and authentication for network access, domain access enforced at login by the Microsoft Windows 2003 Server, and by role-based access given on a need-to-know basis. System access is limited to four general users within the APHIS MRPBS Financial Management Division, including the system manager and system administrators. Only one user can access the system at any given time. Financial Management Division positions have been identified as public trust positions and require an extensive background investigation.

RETENTION AND DISPOSAL:

Online data is indefinitely maintained in the database and on the file server. This is in accordance with the National Archives and Record Administration (NARA) guidelines.
