II. Self-Regulatory Organization's Statement of the Purpose of, and Statutory Basis for, the Proposed Rule Change

In its filing with the Commission, Nasdaq included statements concerning the purpose of and basis for the proposed rule change and discussed any comments it received on the proposed rule change. The text of these statements may be examined at the places specified in Item IV below. Nasdaq has prepared summaries, set forth in Sections A, B, and C below, of the most significant aspects of such statements.

A. Self-Regulatory Organization's Statement of the Purpose of, and Statutory Basis for, the Proposed Rule Change

1. Purpose

Nasdaq is proposing to modify certain of the listing rules that provide the compliance periods associated with Nasdaq's continued listing rules to make them more consistent and, in some cases, to provide additional time to companies to regain compliance. In addition, Nasdaq is proposing to modify the time available to a company to provide a plan to regain compliance with certain listing requirements and the length of the extension that Nasdaq staff can allow a company to regain compliance.⁴

Price Related Criteria

Under Nasdaq rules, if a company's security has a closing bid price below $1 for 30 consecutive trading days, it no longer meets the bid price requirement and is automatically provided 180 calendar days to regain compliance.⁵ However, under other requirements that are derived, in part, from the company's price, the company may be found non-compliant based on fewer days below the applicable threshold or have less time to regain compliance. Specifically, under the current rules related to market value of listed securities, a company is non-compliant after being below the standard for 10 consecutive trading days and, thereafter, is provided only 90 calendar days to regain compliance.⁶ Similarly, while the rules for market value of publicly held shares provide that a company is not deficient until it is below the standard for 30 consecutive trading days, the company is only provided with 90 calendar days to regain compliance.⁷ Because ⁴ Nasdaq is also proposing to eliminate certain abbreviations that are used inconsistently and utilize defined terms, as appropriate, in Rules 5810 and 5840, and to remove authority in Rule 5810(c)(2)(C) that is duplicated in Rule 5810(c)(2)(B).

⁵ Rule 5810(b)(3)(A).

⁶ Rule 5810(b)(3)(C). NASDAQ recently changed the period to regain compliance with the market value of listed securities requirement from 30 to 90 days. Securities Exchange Act Release No. 59291 (January 23, 2009), 74 FR 5197 (January 29, 2009) (SR-NASDAQ-2009-002).

⁷ Rule 5810(b)(3)(D).

compliance with each of these rules is directly related to the price of an issuer's security, Nasdaq believes that the length of time to trigger non-compliance, and the amount of time afforded as a compliance period, should be consistent with each other and with the periods applicable under the bid price rules. Therefore Nasdaq proposes to extend the period that a company would need to be below the minimum market value of listed securities requirement before being considered non-compliant from 10 to 30 consecutive trading days. In addition to providing consistency among the price-related tests, Nasdaq believes that this longer period will prevent a short-term market-wide decline from causing a company to become non-compliant. Nasdaq also proposes to extend from 90 to 180 days the compliance period in which companies that are non-compliant with the market value of listed securities and market value of publicly held shares requirements can regain compliance.⁸ Nasdaq believes that the existing 90-day time frames do not provide sufficient time for a company to regain compliance. For example, if a company chooses to issue additional shares to evidence compliance, 90 calendar days is often an insufficient time to allow a company to obtain any necessary shareholder approval, register the shares, and demonstrate compliance for 10 business days.

As revised, the maximum amount of time that could be afforded to a company that failed to meet the market value of listed securities or market value of publicly held shares requirements would be 18 months. A company could only receive an extension up to this 18-month maximum length if: (i) It failed to comply during the automatic 180-day compliance period;⁹ (ii) the company appealed to a Hearings Panel;¹⁰ and (iii) the Nasdaq Listing and Hearing Review Council determined to call the matter for review, stay the company's ⁸ Nasdaq could apply its authority described in Rule 5100 to delist a security during a compliance period if the market value of listed securities or market value of publicly held shares was so low that delisting is necessary to maintain the quality of and public confidence in the market, to prevent fraudulent and manipulative acts and practices, and to protect investors and the public interest.

⁹ Proposed Rules 5810(c)(3)(C) and 5810(c)(3)(D).

¹⁰ An appeal to the Hearings Panel stays the securities delisting. Rule 5815(a)(1). The company can submit a plan to regain compliance and request that the Hearings Panel grant an exception to the listing standards for a limited time period. Rule 5815(a)(5). Based on its review of that plan, the Hearings Panel can grant the company a maximum of 180 days from the date of the staff's delisting determination to regain compliance. Rule 5815(c)(1)(A).

delisting,¹¹ and, after reviewing the company's compliance plan,¹² provide the company with the maximum 360-day period from the date of the Staff Delisting Determination to regain compliance.¹³

Requirements with Respect to Compliance Plans

Nasdaq also proposes to modify the periods applicable in cases where a company can provide staff with a plan to regain compliance, such as when a company fails to meet the minimum requirements for stockholders' equity, the number of publicly held shares, or the number of shareholders.¹⁴ Currently, companies are provided 15 calendar days to submit a plan to regain compliance and, following a review of the plan, staff can grant the company a period of up to 105 calendar days from the initial notification of non-compliance for the company to regain compliance. Nasdaq's experience has been that 15 days is often insufficient for a company to formulate a meaningful plan, especially given current market and economic conditions, and accordingly proposes to increase from 15 to 45 the number of calendar days a company has to present its plan. Staff would be permitted to grant up to a 5-day extension of this period upon good cause shown.¹⁵ Further, Nasdaq proposes to increase from 105 to 180 the number of calendar days for which staff can grant an extension of time from its initial notification of non-compliance.¹⁶ Nasdaq believes that this additional ¹¹ Rule 5820(a) provides that an appeal to the Nasdaq Listing and Hearings Review Council does not operate to stay a Hearings Panel's decision to delist a company. In order for a Panel decision to be stayed, the Listing Council must call the matter for review pursuant to Rule 5820(b) and affirmatively determine to stay the Panel's decision.

¹² When the Listing Council calls a matter for review it provides the company with a deadline to submit a written submission. Rule 5820(b). The Listing Council's review is based on the written record, including that submission. Rule 5820(e)(1).

¹³ Rule 5820(d)(1).

¹⁴ Rule 5810(c)(2) and IM-5810-2 provide the procedures governing deficiencies for which a company may submit a plan of compliance to Nasdaq staff. Nasdaq has posted frequently asked questions at <http://www.nasdaq.com/about/faqs-listing-information-questions.stm#continued>, which discuss the information a company should consider in preparing its plan of compliance.

¹⁵ It is anticipated that this authority would be used to address cases where the company could not timely submit its plan due to events outside the control of the company, such as when severe weather interferes with the company's ability to provide the necessary information before the deadline.

¹⁶ Nasdaq staff will determine whether to allow the company additional time, and if so how much time to allow, based on a review of the company's plan of compliance.

time will better allow companies to implement a plan to regain compliance.

As revised, the maximum amount of time that could be afforded to a company that failed to meet a listing requirement that allows the submission of a plan to regain compliance would be 18 months. A company could only receive an extension up to this 18-month maximum length if: (i) After reviewing the company's compliance plan, Nasdaq staff granted the company the maximum 180-day period to regain compliance;¹⁷ (ii) the company failed to comply within the time allowed by staff and appealed to a Hearings Panel;¹⁸ and (iii) the Nasdaq Listing and Hearing Review Council determined to call the matter for review, stay the company's delisting, and, after reviewing the company's compliance plan, provide the company with the maximum 360-day period from the date of the Staff Delisting Determination to regain compliance.¹⁹

Implementation

Any company that had not yet been notified that it was non-compliant with the market value of listed securities requirement upon Commission approval of the proposed rule change would not be notified until they were below the requirement for 30 consecutive trading days.²⁰ Any company that had already been notified that it was non-compliant with either the market value of listed securities requirement or the market value of publicly held shares requirement and that was still in the 90 calendar day compliance period for such failure would have their compliance period extended until 180 calendar days from the date they were originally notified of the deficiency.²¹ No additional time would be provided to a company that has received a Staff Delisting Determination for failure to ¹⁷ Proposed Rule 5810(c)(2)(B)(i).

¹⁸ See footnote 10, supra.

¹⁹ See footnotes 11-13, supra.

²⁰ For example, if a security is below the market value of listed securities requirement for 7 consecutive trading days when the proposed rule is approved, the company would not be notified that it is deficient unless and until the security remains below the requirement for another 23 consecutive trading days, such that it remained below for a total of 30 consecutive trading days.

²¹ For example, if a company had been notified that its security was below either the market value of listed securities or market value of publicly held shares requirement 30 days before the proposed rule is approved, such that it had 60 days remaining in its compliance period, that compliance period would be extended by 90 days so that the company would have 150 days remaining in the compliance period.

meet either of those requirements before the proposed rule change is approved.²²

With respect to the proposed changes to the compliance plan process, if a company has not yet submitted its plan of compliance when the proposed rule change is approved, the deadline to submit that plan would be extended until 45 days from the date of staff's notification of the deficiency. If the company had submitted its plan of compliance when the proposed rule change is approved, but staff has not yet made a determination with respect to whether to grant additional time, staff would be permitted to grant the company up to 180 days from staff's notification of the deficiency to regain compliance. If the company has already received an extension of time to regain compliance from staff when the proposed rule change is approved,²³ at the end of that exception staff could, based on a review of the company at the time, grant additional time for the company to regain compliance, up to 180 days from staff's original notification of the deficiency.²⁴ No additional time would be provided to a company that had already received a Staff Delisting Determination at the time the proposed rule change is approved.²⁵

2. Statutory Basis

Nasdaq believes that the proposed rule change is consistent with the provisions of Section 6 of the Act,²⁶ in general and with Sections 6(b)(5) of the Act,²⁷ in particular, which requires, among other things, that a national securities exchange's rules must be designed to prevent fraudulent and manipulative acts and practices, to promote just and equitable principles of trade, and, in general, to protect investors and the public interest. Nasdaq believes that the proposed rule change is consistent with these ²² For example, if a company had been notified that its security was below either the market value of listed securities or market value of publicly held shares requirement 95 days before the proposed rule is approved, the company would not receive any additional time as a result of the proposed rule change. Such companies would continue through the Hearings and Appeals process, however, and could receive additional time as provided for in Rules 5815(c)(1)(A) and 5820(d)(1).

²³ Rule 5810(c)(2)(B)(i).

²⁴ The proposal to allow a company additional time at the end of its extension based on staff's further review of the company is consistent with Nasdaq's current practice of potentially allowing a company additional time if it was not initially granted the full 105 days allowed by current Rule 5810(c)(2)(B)(i).

²⁵ Such companies would continue through the Hearings and Appeals process, however, and could receive additional time as provided for in Rules 5815(c)(1)(A) and 5820(d)(1).

requirements in that it would enhance consistency within Nasdaq's rules and between Nasdaq and other markets, thereby reducing investor confusion and facilitating capital formation, while permitting reasonable periods of time for companies to address instances of non-compliance with Nasdaq rules.

B. Self-Regulatory Organization's Statement on Burden on Competition

Nasdaq does not believe that the proposed rule change will result in any burden on competition that is not necessary or appropriate in furtherance of the purposes of the Act, as amended.

C. Self-Regulatory Organization's Statement on Comments on the Proposed Rule Change Received From Members, Participants or Others

Written comments were neither solicited nor received.

III. Date of Effectiveness of the Proposed Rule Change and Timing for Commission Action

Within 35 days of the date of publication of this notice in the Federal Register or within such longer period (i) as the Commission may designate up to 90 days of such date if it finds such longer period to be appropriate and publishes its reasons for so finding or (ii) as to which the self-regulatory organization consents, the Commission will:

A. By order approve such proposed rule change, or

B. Institute proceedings to determine whether the proposed rule change should be disapproved.
