I. Background

The Form EIA-867, "Annual Nonutility Power Producer Report" was used to collect data from the nonutility electricity generator sector from 1989 through 1997. The data collected on the survey form included plant-level electric power production and consumption data. The survey also collected ownership statistics such as, company name, number of electric generating facilities owned, and contact person name, title, and telephone number. From 1989 through 1997, EIA collected some information as public and non-confidential and other data such as fuels consumed, generation, purchases of electricity, sales, electricity used at the facility, number and type of customers, maximum contract amount by customer, deliveries by customer, environmental information, and electric generator information as confidential. EIA stated in its survey instructions that it would protect the information to the extent that it satisfied the criteria for exemption under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. 552, the Department of Energy (DOE) regulations, 10 CFR 1004.11 implementing the FOIA, and the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. 1905.

After 1997, the industry became deregulated and many plants previously categorized as "utility plants" were divested by utilities, and moved into the "nonutility" sector as independent power producers. Those facilities were accustomed to EIA's publicly disclosing information that was collected on Form EIA-867. On January 13, 1998, EIA published a Federal Register Notice (Volume 63, Number 8) to solicit comments on what electric power data should be treated as non-confidential and be available for dissemination in company-specific form and what electric power data should be treated as confidential by EIA and not disclosed in identifiable form. Based on the comments received from the electric power producers and data users, EIA made the decision to treat the information collected on Form EIA-867 as public information and began releasing plant-level electric power production and consumption data from its Web site beginning with data collected from January 1, 1998.

II. Current Actions

The Form EIA-867 survey was discontinued December 31, 1998, and the data elements were merged into Form EIA-860. Beginning with the collection of 1998 data on January 1, 1999, these data elements are treated as public information. EIA now proposes to treat all data submitted on Form EIA-867 from 1989 through 1997 data as public information and release it on EIA's Web site.

III. Request for Comments

Past respondents to Form EIA-867 and other interested parties should comment on the actions discussed in item II. Comments submitted in response to this notice will be considered before EIA changes the disclosure status.

July 19, 2010.

On July 9, 2010, 5440 Hydro Inc. filed an application, pursuant to section 4(f) of the Federal Power Act, proposing to study the feasibility of the Brooklyn Dam Hydroelectric Project (Brooklyn Dam), to be located on the Ammonoosuc River near the Town of Groveton, Coos County, New Hampshire.

The proposed project would consist of: (1) An existing approximately 15-foot-high, 90-foot-long crib dam with a 30-foot-long spillway; (2) an existing 18-acre reservoir; (3) an existing 50-foot × 50-foot concrete powerhouse and outlet structure; (4) two new turbine generator units with a total installed capacity of 600 kilowatts (kW); (5) a 50-foot-long transmission line connecting to an existing Public Service of New Hampshire distribution line located adjacent to the powerhouse; and (6) appurtenant facilities. The project would produce an estimated average annual generation of about 3,000 megawatt-hours, which would be sold directly to a local utility.
