SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:I. Abstract

The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) Biochemical Science Division announces its intent to identify by short tandem repeat (STR) profiling up to 1500 human cell line samples as part of the Identification of Human Cell Lines Project. All data and corresponding information will be posted in a publically held database at the National Center for Biotechnology Information (NCBI) and will be used to differentiate among cell lines, as described in Designation: ASN-0002 Authentication of Human Cell Lines: Standardization of STR Profiling by the ATCC Standards Development Organization Workgroup.

Human cell line samples are cells taken from a human being that can be grown in the laboratory and are considered immortal (alive and reproduce forever in a petri plate, given appropriate conditions). They can be used for scientific experiments, as examples of the tissue they're from. Once cells from a tissue have been grown in the lab they are called a cell line. There is a tremendous need for investigators to know with confidence that the cells they are using are of the desired species of origin.

This interactive database will be used by the research and development community to validate cell lines of interest. It will offer DNA profiles of commonly used standard cell lines, as donated by interested parties. The database will allow disparate
