nature, a later-developed merchandise anti-circumvention inquiry examines merchandise that is either excluded from, or has been designed to elude, an order. Thus, later-developed merchandise cannot pose a threat of injury to the domestic industry at the time of the order, because it either does not exist or is not commercially available.

We also disagree with Commercial Packaging’s argument that information supporting the existence of sacks printed with two colors in register prior to the investigation demonstrates that the sacks at issue here are not later-developed merchandise. We find the fact that sacks printed with two colors in register alone existed prior to the investigation is not relevant to our inquiry because the issue presented by this inquiry is whether sacks that are printed with two colors in register and with the use of a screen process constitute later-developed merchandise within the meaning of 781(d) of the Act. Commercial Packaging does not provide evidence that the screening process used in the production of laminated woven sacks was commercially available during or before the investigation.

Initiation of Later-Developed Merchandise Anti-Circumvention Inquiry

Based on the information provided by Petitioners, the Department finds that there is sufficient basis to initiate an antidumping and countervailing duty anti-circumvention inquiry pursuant to section 781(d) of the Act to determine whether laminated woven sacks produced using two ink colors printed in register and a screening process are later-developed products that can be considered subject to the Orders under the later-developed merchandise provision. As a result, we are initiating this inquiry under section 781(d) of the Act.

The Department will not order the suspension of liquidation of entries of any additional merchandise at this time.

AGENCY: National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), Commerce.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: This action serves as a notice that NMFS, on behalf of the Secretary of Commerce (Secretary), has determined that overfishing is occurring on an Atlantic highly migratory species (HMS) scalloped hammerhead shark, and the stock is overfished.
